Verse 14. Order ye—Our translators render עֲרֹכּוּ, “Set yourselves in array,” as if the verb had been in Hithpahal ; but I think it rather means, “Order ye the bow,” or direct it. See chapter xli. 3.

Verse 15. She hath surrendered herself—Literally, “She hath given her hand,” no doubt, in token of subjection and homage. The phrase occurs in the same sense, 1 Chron. xxix. 24 ; Lam. v. 6. Some have thought it may be derived from the manner in which Abraham required his servant to engage to do what he required of him, by “putting his hand” under his thigh. (Genesis xxiv. 2.) And again, Jacob, in like manner, exacted the same of his son Joseph. (Genesis xlvii. 29.) But this seems to be rather a form of administering and taking an oath. Dare manus, in Latin, signifies “to yield :” and, most probably, alludes to the act of the vanquished,

- Her battlements are fallen,
 Her walls are thrown down ;
 Because it is the avenging of JEHOVAH,
 Take ye vengeance upon her ;
 As she hath done, do ye unto her.
- 16 Cut off the sower from Babylon,
 And him that handleth the sickle in harvest time ;
 Because of the sword of the destroyer,
 They shall turn every one to his own people,
 And they shall flee every one to his own land.
- 17 Lions have worried Israel, a scattered sheep ;
 First the king of Assyria devoured him ;
 And this latter hath picked him to the bone, Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon.

who, throwing down his arms, and stretching forth his defenceless hands, acknowledges himself to be in the victor's power.

Her battlements—The word in the text is אֲשִׁיּוֹתָהּ; but it is corrected by the Masora, which reads אֲשִׁיּוֹתֶיהָ, with the consent of twenty-four MSS. and five editions. The ancient Bodleian MS. reads אֲשִׁיּוֹתֶיהָ; two MSS., אֲשִׁיּוֹתֶיהָ; two, אֲשִׁיּוֹתֶיהָ; one, אֲשִׁיּוֹתֶיהָ; one, אֲשִׁיּוֹתֶיהָ. Amidst all this variety, it is not easy to determine which is right; and, no such word occurring elsewhere in Hebrew, the signification itself becomes uncertain. Our translators render, "her foundations;" but the falling of foundations, which are laid in the ground, is not very intelligible. The LXX. render παλῆεις, "the battlements;" and, indeed, it appears to me not improbable, from the apparent connexion of אֲשִׁיּוֹת with אִישׁ, that "the battlements" may be meant, where the men stood and fought in defence of the walls; or, perhaps, the turrets filled with men, which were constructed in the wall at due distances. And in this sense we may understand the words וַאֲשִׁיּוֹת יַחֲזִיקוּ, Ezra iv. 12, "They sewed together," or connected, "the turrets," by building the wall in the intervals. Now אֲשִׁיּוֹת differs from אֲשִׁיּוֹת only in its Chaldee termination.

Because it is the avenging of JEHOVAH—This I take to mean, that it was the cause or quarrel of JEHOVAH, which they were engaged in, the avenging him of his enemies; on which account they were not to be slack in their execution.

Verse 17. And this latter hath picked him to the bone—Our translators have rendered עֲצָמוֹ, "hath broken his bones;" because עֲצָם signifies "a bone." But the usual signification of the verb עֲצָם is, "to be strong" or "mighty" in doing any thing, or "to exceed" and "prevail" over another. The Syriac, accordingly, here renders, "hath been stronger than he;" as if עֲצָמוֹ was the same as עֲצָם מִמֶּנּוּ. But I think עֲצָמוֹ may be rendered, "hath picked him to the bone," or "made him a mere bone or skeleton;" the latter prince having gone greater lengths in oppression than his predecessor.

- 18 Therefore thus saith JEHOVAH of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold I will execute judgment upon the king of Babylon,
and upon his land,
Like as I have executed judgment upon the king of Assyria.
- 19 But I will bring back Israel to his own fold,
And he shall feed on Carmel and Bashan,
And upon mount Ephraim and Gilead
Shall his appetite be satisfied in those days.
- 20 And at that time, saith JEHOVAH, Shall inquiry be made after the iniquity of Israel, and there shall be none,
And after the sins of Judah, but they shall not be found ;
For I will pardon those whom I shall have reserved.
- 21 Against the land of bitternesses go up,
Upon it and upon its inhabitants visit, O sword,
And utterly destroy their posterity, saith JEHOVAH,
And perform according to all that I have charged thee.

Verse 19. And Gilead—The LXX. and Syriac seem to countenance רבגלעד instead of רהגלעד. But the article is sometimes used before גלעד, though it be a proper name; and we might here render, “in the mountain of Ephraim and of Gilead.” See Genesis xxxi. 21, 23, 25.

Verse 20. And at that time—See note on verse 4. The promise contained in this verse seems evidently to respect the gospel times, and “the remnant that shall be saved according to the election of grace.” Compare chapter xxxi. 34; xxxiii. 8; Isaiah lix. 20; Romans xi. 5, 26, 27.

Shall inquiry be made after the iniquity of Israel—Here we have the same construction as has been already taken notice of and accounted for in note on chapter xxxv. 14.

Verse 21. Of bitternesses—מרחים and פקר, in this verse, are both rendered by our translators as proper names. And the latter is so considered by the Chaldee paraphrast. But all the other ancient versions agree in representing מרחים as an appellative, and פקר as a verb. And as there is no certainty, and, indeed, little probability, that there were any places to which these belonged as proper names, I see no reason for understanding them so. מרחים is the dual number of מרה, which may signify either “bitterness,” or “rebellion;” and I am inclined to think that Babylon is called “the land of bitternesses,” or “of redoubled bitterness,” because it had proved such to the Jewish nation, whose country had been ruined, and the people held in slavery there. The LXX., Syriac, and Vulgate appear to have read יושבי for יושבי; which being admitted, the construction of פקר as an imperative verb, and as הרב as a noun in the vocative case, will perfectly suit the context both before and after.

Their posterity—אחריהם. So the word often signifies; see chapter xxxii. 40; Psalm xlix. 13, &c., &c.

- 22 There is a sound of war in the land,
Even great destruction.
- 23 How is the hammer of the whole earth cut off and broken !
How is Babylon become an astonishment among the nations !
- 24 I have laid a snare for thee, and thou hast also been caught,
O Babylon, when thou wast not aware ;
Thou hast been met with, and also taken by surprise,
Because thou hast contended against JEHOVAH.
- 25 JEHOVAH hath opened his arsenal,
And hath brought forth the weapons of his indignation ;
For this is the work of the Lord,
Of JEHOVAH of hosts in the land of Chaldea.
- 26 Come ye against her from end to end,
Open her fattening stalls,
Trample her like heaps, and utterly destroy her,
Let there be no remains of her.
- 27 Slay all her bullocks,
Let them go down to the slaughter ;
Wo unto them !
For their day is come,
The time of their visitation.
- 28 The voice of them that are fled and escaped out of the land of Babylon,
To declare in Sion the vengeance of JEHOVAH our God,
The vengeance of his temple.
- 29 Commanders have proclaimed concerning Babylon,

Verse 25. For this is the work of the Lord—For לאדני יהוה, one MS. reads ליהוה אדני; the ancient Bodleian MS., No. 1, ליהוה only; and two other MSS., one of them ancient, ליהוה אלהים. Upon these grounds, and for the same reasons as are assigned, chapter xlvi. 10, I have ventured here also to prefix the ל to the word יהוה.

Verse 26. From end to end—Or, “from one end to the other.” So מקץ and מקצה seem to signify. See chapter li. 16, 31; Gen. xix. 4; Isaiah xlii. 10.

Her fattening stalls—This is the proper sense of מאבסיה; and I conceive “her cities” to be meant; where the inhabitants were pampered like beasts fattened for the slaughter. See what follows in the next verse.

“cast her up” as heaps, in order to tread out the corn.”—SECKER.

Verse 29. Commanders have proclaimed concerning Babylon—Our translators have rendered רבים, “archers;” all the ancient versions have rendered it, “many,” and all make it the accusative following the imperative verb השמיעו; but I rather think רבים to signify, “the generals or commanders of the Medes and Persians;” who are reported, by those that brought the

All ye that bend the bow,
 Encamp against her round about,
 Let none of her escape ;
 Recompense her according to her work,
 According to all that she hath done, do unto her ;
 Because she hath acted proudly against JEHOVAH,
 Against the holy one of Israel.

30 Therefore shall her young men fall in her broad places,
 And all her men of war ;
 They shall be put to silence in that day, saith JEHOVAH.

31 Behold I am against thee, O proud one,
 Saith the Lord JEHOVAH of hosts ;
 Surely thy day is come,
 The time of thy visitation.

32 And the proud one shall stumble and fall,
 And there shall be none to raise him up ;
 And I will kindle a fire in his cities,
 And it shall consume all that are round about him.

33 Thus saith JEHOVAH of hosts,
 The children of Israel have been oppressed,
 And the children of Judah together ;
 And all they that carried them away captive held them fast,
 They refused to let them go.

news to Sion, to have given out public orders to their soldiers, to act against Babylon in the manner hereafter specified. That רב signifies, "a general," or "principal officer," appears frequently in this book, where רב-טבחים is constantly rendered, "captain of the guards," although, perhaps, it should be, "commander-in-chief of the army" or "soldiers;" for טבחים, "slaughter-men," denote those whose profession it is to slay. See note on chapter xxxix. 3.

Let none of her escape—Literally, "Let there not be one escaped of her." So the LXX. Μη εστω αυτης ανασωζομενος. Nor does there appear any deficiency in the text, although the Masoretes have supplied לה after יהי, and are countenanced by twenty mss. and five editions, besides four mss. which have פליטה, with two letters erased before it. But, against the insertion of לה, it must be observed, that it tends to produce an error in the syntax; for, in that case, פליטה must be a feminine noun, which could not properly agree with יהי, on account of the different gender.

Verse 31. O proud one—זרין is the abstract, "pride;" but is here used by metonymy for the concrete; and again in the next verse.

The time of thy visitation—All the ancient versions appear to have read, עת-פקדת; and so it actually stands in the first printed edition; and two mss. read פקודת. See note on chapter xlix. 8.

- 34 Their Redeemer is strong,
 JEHOVAH of hosts is his name :
 He will surely maintain their cause,
 So as to cause a commotion in the earth,
 And to make the inhabitants of Babylon to tremble.
- 35 A sword shall be upon the Chaldeans, saith JEHOVAH,
 And upon the inhabitants of Babylon,
 And upon the princes thereof,
 And upon the wise men thereof ;
- 36 A sword upon the impostors, and they shall be infatuated ;
 A sword upon her mighty men, and they shall be dismayed ;
- 37 A sword upon her horses, and upon her chariots,
 And upon all the mixed multitude which is in the midst of her,
 And they shall become like women ;
 A sword upon her treasures, and they shall be plundered ;
- 38 A sword upon her waters, and they shall be dried up :
 Because it is the land of graven images,
 And in idols do they glory.

Verse 34. So as to cause a commotion in the earth—This sense of הרגיע accords so well with the parallel hemistich, as to afford a fresh argument in favour of the explanation given of that verb in the notes on chapter vi. 16 ; xxxi. 35 ; xlix. 19.

Verse 35. The Chaldeans—For כשדים, the ancient Bodleian ms., N<sup>o</sup>. 1, and six more read הכשדים ; and one has a letter erased before כשדים כשדים signifies, “the province of Chaldea,” as מצרים does “Egypt;” and I think it may be observed, that whenever “the Chaldeans” are intended, we always find the article ה prefixed, unless excluded by some general rule.

Verse 36. The impostors—By הבדים are meant, “the pretenders to the knowledge of future events,” by astrology, or the arts of divination. See Isaiah xlv. 25. The Syriac, Chaldee, and Vulgate seem to have read בדיה, “her impostors;” which carries a face of probability. The LXX., according to the Roman edition, omit the four first words of this verse ; but in the Complutensian we find, Μαχαρπαι επι τους παντεις, και αφρονας εσονται.

Verse 37. Upon her horses, and upon her chariots—It is not easy to account why the masculine affix is found in כרכבו and כוסיה, nor to what antecedent they can be referred. It is obvious, therefore, that we should read כרכבה and כוסיה, in uniformity with the rest of the context. The ms. Pachom. of the LXX. renders, ιππους αυτης, and αρματα αυτης, and not αυτων, as in the printed editions.

Verse 38. A sword upon her waters—Our translators, after the example of the Vulgate and others, have rendered חרב in this place differently from the sense given to it in the preceding verses, as supposing that a sword has nothing to do with waters. But the “sword” is used metaphorically,

- 39 Therefore shall wild cats with jackals dwell,
The daughters of the ostrich also shall dwell in her ;
And she shall not be re-established any more for ever,
Neither shall she be inhabited from generation to generation.
- 40 According as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah,
And the neighbouring places thereof, saith JEHOVAH,
There shall not a man dwell there,
Neither shall a son of man sojourn in her.
- 41 Behold a people cometh from the north, even a great nation,
And many kings shall be roused from the extremities of the earth ;
- 42 The bow and the spear shall they take in hand ;
Cruel are they, and they will shew no mercy ;
Their voice shall roar as the sea ;
And upon horses shall they ride,
In orderly array, as men for battle,
Against thee, O daughter of Babylon.
- 43 The king of Babylon hath heard the rumour of them,
And his hands are waxed feeble ;
Distress hath taken hold on him,
Pain, as on a woman in travail.
- 44 Behold, as a lion cometh up,
A strong one from the swelling of Jordan against a fold,
When I throw her into disorder, I will cause them to run away from her ;
And him that is chosen will I commission against her :
For who is like me ? or who shall prescribe to me ?
Or who is that shepherd, that can stand before me ?

to denote either the instrument of divine vengeance generally, or the operations and effects of war in particular ; in either of which senses it may be applied to “ waters ” as well as to “ treasures.” And the allusion here is evidently to the stratagem of Cyrus, who drained off the waters of the Euphrates, which ran through the city of Babylon ; by means of which his troops, by night, marched along the bed of the river into the heart of the city, and surprised it.

Verse 39. Therefore shall wild cats with jackals dwell, &c.—What ground there is for rendering ציידים and יעושים by these names, may be seen at large by consulting BOCHART. De Sacr. Animal. par. i. lib. 3, cap. 12, 14. Compare with this passage the parallel one, Isaiah xiii. 19–22 ; and see Bishop Lowth’s notes there.

She shall not be re-established—See note on verse 13.

Verse 42. In orderly array—See note on chapter vi. 23.

Verse 44. Behold, as a lion, &c.—See the notes on chapter xlix. 19, from which this verse differs only in the word אריות ; for which the Masora

- 45 Therefore hear ye the counsel of JEHOVAH,
Which he hath taken against Babylon,
And his purposes which he hath purposed
Against the inhabitants of Chaldea :
Surely they shall be dragged away from the little ones of the flock ;
Surely he will make their habitation astonished at them.
At the voice, BABYLON IS TAKEN, the earth is moved ;
And the cry thereof is heard among the nations.

CHAPTER LI.

- 1 THUS saith JEHOVAH,
Behold, I will raise up against Babylon,
And against those that dwell in the heart of mine adversaries,
A destroying wind.

directs to read אֲרִיצִים, with the concurrence of fifteen mss. and three editions. In the parallel place we find אֲרִיצָנִי, and the singular affix is understood to refer to "the son of man," mentioned in the preceding verse. Here, where the affix is plural, both אִישׁ and בְּנֵי-אָדָם, in verse 40, must be considered as the antecedents ; both "inhabitants" and "sojourners" being caused to run away from Babylon on account of the commotions that were raised there.

Verse 45. Against the inhabitants of Chaldea—Four mss. for אֲרָץ, read יוֹשְׁבֵי; three mss. and one in the margin, יוֹשְׁבֵי; and the LXX. seem to have read thus, who render, ἐπὶ τοὺς κατοικοῦντας Χαλδαίους; or, according to ms. Pachom., ἐπὶ πάντας τοὺς κατοικοῦντας Χαλδαίαν. The Chaldee renders, אֲרַעָא כְּסָדָא, עַל-יִתְרֵי, expressing both words, יוֹשְׁבֵי and אֲרָץ. This agrees with one ms., which, with the first printed edition, reads יוֹשְׁבֵי אֲרָץ; and with two ancient editions, which read יוֹשְׁבֵי אֲרָץ. Compare the rest of the verse with the parallel place, chapter xlix. 20, and see the notes there.

"נִוְרָה—Sic LXX. Sed videtur legendum נִוְרָה cum reliquis versionibus, et cum cap. xlix. 20. Sequitur ב."—SECKER.

CHAP. LI. Verse 1. Against those that dwell in the heart of mine adversaries—Instead of לֵב קָמִי, the LXX. render as if they had read כְּשָׂדִים, "Chaldea;" and the other ancient versions seem greatly perplexed, and differ in their interpretation of this passage. But לֵב, "the heart," is used for the interior part or midst of any thing. See Deut. iv. 11; Psalm xli. 2, &c., &c. Accordingly, יוֹשְׁבֵי לֵב קָמִי may fairly be understood to signify, "those that dwell in the heart," that is, "the centre, of the country of mine adversaries, of those that rise up against me;" and is, by circumlocution, the same as Babylon itself.

"לֵב קָמִי and שֶׁשֶׁךְ are supposed, by Jarchius and Kimchi, to stand, by athbash, for כְּשָׂדִים and בָּבֶל."—SECKER. Athbash is a disguised manner of writing, by a substitution of one letter for another, in a contrary direction

- 2 And I will send against Babylon winnowers,
And they shall winnow her, and shall empty her land ;
For they shall be against her round about,
In the day of trouble by the way side.
- 3 Let the archer bend his bow,
And let him not lift himself up in his brigandine ;
And spare ye not her young men,
Destroy utterly her whole army ;
- 4 And they shall fall down slain in the land of Chaldea,
And thrust through in her streets.
- 5 For Israel is not forsaken, nor Judah,
Of his God, of JEHOVAH of hosts ;

of the alphabet ; as ח for א, ש for ב, and so on. By this artifice we shall find וששך will make בבל, and לב קמי will make כשדים. See Grotius.

Verse 2. For they shall be—It is probable that, instead of בייהיו, the original reading was בייהיו, the י having been lost in the concurrence with the same letter preceding ; a mistake of which the collated mss. afford many instances.

By the way side—The two first words of verse 3, as they stand in the present text, אליירך, have greatly perplexed all the commentators. The Masora admits ירך only once ; and it is not repeated in ninety-four, perhaps ninety-five, mss. and three editions. But this is not sufficient to clear away the difficulty ; for the context seems to require a command to the enemies of Babylon to use their bows, and not a prohibition, which the particle אל denotes when it precedes a verb. The LXX. begin the third verse with ירך הדרך קשתו, omitting אליירך entirely. It seems, however, better to read אליירך, and to join those words to the end of verse 2, which will both afford a good sense, and complete an hemistich ; for אלי, or אליירך, very properly signifies “in” or “by the way ;” and “to be” or “stand against one in the way,” is to be ready to use force and violent opposition against him. See Numb. xxii. 22, 23, 31, 34.

Verse 3. And let him not lift up himself in his brigandine—This is exactly parallel in sense to the preceding hemistich, if the posture of him that stoops to bend the bow be considered ; for in using the large and strong steel bows, which could not be bent by the force of the arms, they rested one end upon the ground, and pressing the other with the foot or knee, they drew back the arrow with their hands as far as ever they could, in order that it might fly with greater force. Hence the archer is called, הדרך קשת, “one that treadeth the bow.” And therefore, when he is bid not to lift himself up in his coat of mail, it is the same as bidding him not to desist from shooting with his bow.

Verse 5. For Israel is not forsaken, &c.—Dr. Durell supposes a transposition in the words, and that כאלהיו should have preceded ויהודה ; which indeed is a plausible conjecture ; and the hemistichs would run more completely thus :—

For Israel is not forsaken of his God,
Nor Judah of JEHOVAH of hosts.

- But their land is filled with a trespass offering
By the holy one of Israel.
- 6 Flee ye out of the midst of Babylon,
And save ye every man his life,
That ye be not cut off in her punishment :
For it is the time of JEHOVAH's vengeance ;
A recompence will he render unto her.
- 7 Babylon is a golden cup in the hand of JEHOVAH,
Intoxicating the whole earth ;
Of the wine thereof nations have drunken ;
Therefore shall nations glory, saying,
- 8 Babylon is suddenly fallen,
And broken ; howl ye over her ;
Take ye balm for her anguish,
If so be she may be healed.
- 9 We have applied remedies to Babylon, but she is not healed ;
Leave her, and let us go every one to his own country ;
For her judgment hath reached unto the heavens,
And is lifted up unto the skies.
- 10 JEHOVAH hath brought forth our deliverances ;

But their land is filled with a trespass offering—That זָשָׁח signifies, “a trespass-offering,” made for the atonement of sin, is evident from the common use of the word in Leviticus, and also from Isaiah liii. 10. Therefore, “the land being filled,” or “covered over, with a trespass-offering,” clearly denotes that the sin of it had been completely atoned for, and was, accordingly, pardoned.

Verse 6. That ye be not cut off in her punishment—Four MSS. read וְאֵל, and the LXX. also express the conjunction. That עֵינִי signifies “punishment” of iniquity, as well as “iniquity” itself, may be seen in many instances. See 1 Sam. xxviii. 10 ; Ezek. xiv. 10, &c.

Verse 7. Babylon is a golden cup in the hand of JEHOVAH—In what sense Babylon is called “a cup,” may be seen by comparing chapter xxv. 15. She was a splendid instrument of vengeance ordained by God against the neighbouring nations ; and as all these had suffered by her, all are represented as ready to glory over her, or to rejoice, when her turn of suffering came.

Verse 9. We have applied remedies to Babylon—The nations that had been subject to Babylon are evidently the speakers here ; they had endeavoured, they say, to support her sinking cause, but all in vain ; and therefore as the case was desperate, they advise every one to shift for himself. Five, perhaps six, MSS., and three editions, for נִרְפְּתָה, read נִרְפְּאָתָה ; one MS., a pretty ancient one, reads בִּרְפָּאָה, an evident mistake for נִרְפְּאָה ; which is doubtless the reading that might be expected.

Verse 10. Our deliverances—This is still spoken in the name of those

Come ye, and let us declare in Sion
The work of JEHOVAH our God.

- 11 Make bright the arrows, fill the quivers;
JEHOVAH hath roused up the spirit of the kings of Media;
For his purpose is against Babylon, to destroy it;
Surely it is the vengeance of JEHOVAH,
The vengeance of his temple.
- 12 Before the walls of Babylon set up a standard,
Keep a strong guard, place sentinels,
Prepare ye liers in ambush;
For as JEHOVAH hath purposed,
He hath also done that which he hath spoken,
Concerning the inhabitants of Babylon.

subdued nations, who, conscious of receiving from the interposition of JEHOVAH so mighty a deliverance from a state of servitude, propose going to Sion to make their due acknowledgments to him in the place appropriated to his worship, and own him for their God. For this scripture sense of צדקת, see TAYLOR's Key to the Apostolic Writings, chapter xvi.

Verse 11. Fill the quivers—So the LXX., Vulgate, Castalio, and others, interpret שלטים, both here and Ezek. xxvii. 11. And the word is generally so understood in the Syriac version.

“מלכי מדי”—‘Kings of Media.’ Here, and at verse 28, the LXX. express the singular number, and the Syriac is pointed so as to be singular. The Chaldee hath the same word as the Hebrew. In verse 28 the particle ‘his’ seems to require the singular. But מלכי is never singular with a genitive after it, unless in מלכי-יזרק. But I think there are instances of a paragogic י in that case in other words. VIGNOLES (vol. ii. page 556) thinks the plural may be put for the singular, as in other words of dominion; or, that Cyrus and Astyages may be meant. Tomyris in Herodotus calls Cyrus ‘king of the Medes;’ and Thucydides scarce ever calls the Persians any thing but Medes.”—SECKER. Supposing the kings of Media to mean the Persian monarchs, Cyrus and his successors may here be designed, who were all bent to oppress and humble Babylon.

Verse 12. Before the walls of Babylon—Our translators, with the generality of interpreters, seem to have understood this as an address to the inhabitants of Babylon, calling upon them to stand upon their own defence; but they have been obliged to suppose it ironical, as against the declared purpose of God their efforts could be of little avail. But I am persuaded that the address is rather directed to the enemies of Babylon, who are exhorted to encamp before the walls, setting up their standards, and to commence the siege by strengthening their posts around, so as to prevent succours from entering the city, or the effects of any sally of the garrison. See chap. iv. 16, 17. And by הארבים, are doubtless meant those who were to be in readiness, when occasion offered, to enter the city by stratagem, and surprise it, as Gobryas and Gadatas did. See XENOPHON. Cyropæd. lib. vii.; HERODOTUS, lib i. cap. 191.

- 13 O thou that dwellest by the side of many waters, that aboundest in treasures,
Thine end is come, O handmaid of thy covetousness.
- 14 JEHOVAH of hosts hath sworn by himself,
Surely I will fill thee with men, as with locusts,
And they shall send forth a shouting against thee.
- 15 He hath made the earth by his power,
Establishing the world by his wisdom ;
By his understanding also hath he spread out the heavens.
- 16 When he exerteth his voice, there is a tumult of waters in the heavens,
And he maketh clouds to rise from the extremity of the earth ;
He produceth lightnings with rain,
And bringeth the wind forth out of his magazines.
- 17 Every man becometh a brute by acknowledging,
Every goldsmith is put to shame by graving,
When they have set up false objects of worship,
And such as have no breath in them.
- 18 Vanity are these, the work of those that greatly err ;
In the time of their visitation they shall perish.
- 19 Not like these is the portion of Jacob ;
For he is the former of the universe,
And Israel is the rod of his inheritance ;
JEHOVAH of hosts is his name.

Verse 13. O thou that dwellest—For שִׁכְנָתִי, the Masora, three mss., and one edition read, שִׁכְנָה ; the Babylonish Talmud, שׁוֹכְנָת.

O handmaid of thy covetousness—That is, “Thou that hast devoted thyself, as a slave, to the gratification of thine inordinate desires, thy ambition and avarice.” This interpretation is perfectly easy and natural; although the generality of commentators have, by אֲמִתָּה, understood “the cubit,” or “measure of thy covetousness;” which is applying a measure to that which is represented as immeasurable. The sense, however, in which they wish it to be taken is, that God had set a limit or bound to her inordinate ambition, which had now run its full length. But this appears to be a very constrained use of the word “cubit.”

Verses 15–19. These verses are transcribed from chapter x. 12–16. See the notes there.

Verse 16. From the extremity of the earth—Thirteen, perhaps fourteen, mss. here read מִקְצֵה הָאָרֶץ ; which perhaps may signify, not “the horizon,” as suggested in note on chapter x. 13, but “from one end of the earth to the other.” See note on chapter l. 26.

Verse 19. And Israel is the rod of his inheritance—יִשְׂרָאֵל is not here in

- 20 O battle-ax, thou shalt be my weapon of war ;
And with thee will I break in pieces nations ;
And with thee will I destroy kingdoms ;
- 21 And with thee will I break in pieces the horse and his rider ;
And with thee will I break in pieces the chariot and its driver ;
- 22 And with thee will I break in pieces husband and wife ;
And with thee will I break in pieces old man and boy ;
And with thee will I break in pieces young man and maiden ;
- 23 And with thee will I break in pieces the shepherd and his flock ;
And with thee will I break in pieces the husbandman and his team ;
And with thee will I break in pieces magistrates and rulers.
- 24 And I will render unto Babylon,
And to all the inhabitants of Chaldea,
All their evil which they have done in Sion,
Before your eyes, saith JEHOVAH.
- 25 Behold, I am against thee, O destroying mountain,
Saith JEHOVAH, that destroyest the whole earth ;
And I will stretch out my hand over thee,
And I will roll thee down from the rocks,
And I will make thee a burning mountain :
- 26 And they shall not take of thee a stone for a corner,
Or a stone for foundations ;
But thou shalt be perpetual desolations, saith JEHOVAH.
- 27 Lift up a standard in the land,
Sound a trumpet among the nations, the present text, but is found in twenty-two mss., in the Chaldee and Vulgate, and in ms. Pachom. of the LXX., conformably with chapter x. 16.

Verse 20. O battle-ax—The army of the Medes and Persians is most probably here intended ; as elsewhere the instrument of God's vengeance is called "a sword, a rod, a scourge."

Verse 25. O destroying mountain—Any nation or prince that rises in power above others, may be called, metaphorically, "a mountain ;" and the Babylonish nation is accordingly here to be understood by "the destroying mountain." "The rocks," from whence it was to be rolled, were its strong holds. And in the next verse, where it is said, "They shall not take of thee a stone for a corner-stone, or for foundations," we may understand thereby, that they should no longer have kings and governors taken from among themselves, but should be under the dominion of foreigners.

- Enlist nations against her,
 Summon kingdoms against her,
 Ararat, Minni, and Ashkenaz ;
 Commission a commander against her,
 Cause cavalry to come up like the bristled locust.
- 28 Enlist nations against her,
 The king of Media, the captains thereof,
 And all the rulers thereof,
 And all the land under his dominion.
- 29 And let the land tremble, and be in pain ;
 For the purpose of JEHOVAH against Babylon standeth sure,
 To make the land of Babylon a desolation,
 Without an inhabitant.
- 30 The mighty men of Babylon have ceased to fight,
 They have remained in strong holds,
 Their strength hath failed,
 They are become like women ;
 Her habitations are burned,

Verse 27. Ararat, Minni, and Ashkenaz—The two former of these BOCHART reasonably concludes to be the greater and lesser Armenia ; and the latter to be a part of Phrygia near the Hellespont. (Phaleg, lib. i. cap. 3 ; and lib. iii. cap. 9.) Concerning the latter HOMER seems to speak, Iliad, β. 862.

Φορκυσ αυ φρυγας ηγε, και Ασκανιος θεοειδης, Τηλ' εξ Ασκανιης.

And that both the Armenians and Phrygians composed part of the army which Cyrus led against Babylon, may be seen in XENOPHON. Cyropæd. lib. iii. and lib. vii.

Commission a commander—Grotius supposes שפטר to be a transposition of the Persian “satrap.” See his note on the place.

Cavalry—like the bristled locust—Locusts are said to have the appearance of horses and horsemen, Joel ii. 4 ; Rev. ix. 7. BOCHART speaks of the head and face of the locust as resembling that of a horse. (De Sacr. Animal. par. ii. lib. iv. cap. 5.) Or they may be compared on account of multitude, as verse 14. The LXX. seem so to have understood it. See Nahum iii. 15. But the epithet, “hairy” or “bristled,” seems to indicate the former ground of similitude.

Verse 28. The king of Media, &c.—The LXX. appear to have read מלך, in the singular number ; and this accounts for the affix of ממשלתו, which has the king for its antecedent, whilst the feminine affixes of פחוריה and סגניה are to be referred to מדי, “Media.”

Verse 29. The purpose—Eight mss. read מחדשבת ; and all the ancient versions, except the Chaldee, express the noun in the singular number.

Verse 30. Her habitations are burned—So the LXX., Chaldee, and Vulgate render ; and one ms. reads נצתו. But such would the sense be also

Her bars are broken.

- 31 Courier shall run to meet courier,
And messenger to meet messenger,
To acquaint the king of Babylon,
That his city is taken from end to end ;
32 And the passages are surprised,
And the porches they have burned with fire,
And the men of war are stricken with terror.

were we to read הַצִּיְהוּ, "they have burned," the subject being indefinite. See verse 32.

Verse 31. Courier shall run to meet courier, &c.—That is, they shall run from different parts, and so fall in with one another, all carrying the same intelligence to the same person, that the city was taken on the side every one came from. This is a very natural description of what may be supposed to happen on a city being taken by surprise in the middle of the night ; for as fast as the a'arm spread, people would be posting away with the news from all parts to the head-quarters. And HERODOTUS tells us, that, on account of the greatness of the city, the extreme parts of it were taken some time before those who lived in the middle knew of the attack. (Lib. i. cap. 191.)

Verse 32. The passages—These were most probably the entrances into the city from the river-side, which were secured by gates, that ought, as Herodotus observes, to have been fast barred ; which, if it had been done, would have effectually frustrated the attempt of the enemy ; but being left open and unguarded on account of the public festivity, the assailants were in possession of those entrances, and in the heart of the city, before the besieged were aware of it. (HERODOTUS, lib. i. cap. 191.)

The porches—The word הַאֲגָמִים signifies "lakes," or "pools of standing water," which some understand to be the marshes or overflowed lands around Babylon ; but how these could be burned with fire, I cannot conceive. Our translators render הַאֲגָמִים, "the reeds ;" but what end could be answered by burning the reeds in the bed of the river as they went along ? This could only serve to defeat the purpose of those whose aim was to get into the city before the people within had received the least alarm. Others interpret it of burning the outworks belonging to the marshy grounds about the river. But we do not read of any such thing having been done or attempted, at least in the night that Babylon was taken ; the sudden occurrences of which night are the subject of the intelligence here said to have been hastily carried to the king. Under these circumstances of difficulty, I cannot help suspecting that הַאֲגָמִים has been written by mistake for some other word ; and would propose to read הַאֲלִמִּים, "the vestibules," or "porches" of the houses, upon the following grounds :—When Cyrus's troops were once in possession of the avenues or entrances from the river, their next care would, of course, be to provide for their passing along in safety. But in a speech which XENOPHON represents Cyrus to have made to his soldiers previous to their setting forth, he states, that "possibly some of them might be afraid of being annoyed, as they

- 33 For thus saith JEHOVAH of hosts, the God of Israel;
 The daughter of Babylon is as a threshing floor;
 The time of her threshing, yet a little while, and it shall come,
 The time of cutting short in her.
- 34 Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon hath devoured us, hath destroyed us;
 He hath made us vessels of emptiness;
 He hath swallowed us up like a dragon, he hath filled his maw;
 From the scene of our delight hath he cast us out.

passed along the streets, by weapons cast upon them from the tops of the houses; but for this, says he, we have a remedy at hand. For the vestibules or porches of their houses may easily be burned from the materials they are built of; so that by applying fire to them, we may soon force the citizens to quit their houses, or be consumed in them." (Cyropæd. lib. vii.) Now these harangues are never understood to be genuine, but to be of the historian's invention, the matter being suggested by the events which are known to have happened. So that we may fairly presume that this measure of firing the houses was actually taken by the soldiers who entered the city, both to secure themselves a safe passage, and to cause the greater confusion among the inhabitants. And thus the circumstances of the account will be found to follow in due order, the city taken, the avenues seized, the advanced buildings of the houses set on fire, and the defendants thrown into such consternation, as to be incapable of making any resistance.

Verse 33. The time of cutting short in her—That "the time of harvest" should be spoken of as subsequent to "the time of threshing," is not very natural. But הקציר seems rather to be the infinitive Hiphil of the verb קצר, and to allude to the manner of threshing with a drag or wain armed with iron teeth, or serrated wheels, which not only forced out the grain, but at the same time cut the straw in pieces for fodder; whereas הדריך denotes the treading out of the corn by oxen. See Bishop Lowth's note on Isaiah xxviii. 27, 28.

Verse 34. Hath devoured us, hath destroyed us, &c.—The Masoretes, with all the ancient versions, represent the five verbs in this verse as followed by the affix in the first person singular. Also for אכלנו four, perhaps seven, mss. and three editions, read אכלני; for הממנו, six, perhaps nine, mss. and three editions, read הממני; for הציגנו, four, perhaps six, mss. and three editions, read הציגני, and one, הצגני; for בלענו, six, perhaps ten, mss. and three editions, read בלעני; for הדיחנו, twelve, perhaps fifteen, mss. and three editions, הדיחני. But the commonly-received reading of the text seems at least as likely to be right, and is perhaps in itself preferable; Sion and Jerusalem, which are both expressed in the next verse, being speakers here. All the emendation necessary seems to be the reading of מערני for מערני, which is pointed out by the ancient Bodleian ms., N<sup>o</sup>. 1, and by three, perhaps six, more, which read מערני. An allusion is perhaps designed to

- 35 Let his violences done to my flesh be upon Babylon, Shall the inhabitress of Sion say ;
 And my blood upon the inhabitants of Chaldea, Shall Jerusalem say.
- 36 Therefore thus saith JEHOVAH,
 Behold, I will plead thy cause,
 And I will avenge thy wrongs ;
 And I will drain her sea,
 And I will make her spring dry.
- 37 And Babylon shall become heaps,
 An habitation of dragons,
 An object of astonishment and hissing,
 Without an inhabitant.
- 38 Together shall they roar like lions,
 They are roused like lions' whelps.
- 39 In their heat I will supply them with drink,
 And I will make them drunk, that they may exult,
 And may sleep an everlasting sleep,
 And not wake again, saith JEHOVAH.

the ejection of the first human pair out of paradise ; in which case we might render with great beauty, as well as precision, "From our Eden (or, paradise) hath he cast us out."

Verse 35. His violences done to my flesh—For חמסי ושארי I propose to read חמסי ושארי, "the injuries done by him to my flesh," that is, to my own person, or my nearest kindred.

Verse 38. They are roused—נערו is probably written by contraction for נעורו, and the LXX. countenance this by the word ἐξήγειρεθσαν, though improperly put in the place of ישאגו. The Syriac and Vulgate appear to have read ונעורו or ונערו; and the ו may possibly have been sunk 'in the same letter at the end of the preceding word. This and the two following verses seem to describe the carousing and jollity, in the midst of which Babylon was taken. See HEROD. lib. i. cap. 191. XENOPHON. Cyropæd. lib. vii. compared with Daniel v.

Verse 39. I will supply them with drink—Our translators render משתיהם, "their feasts;" but all the ancient versions render it in the sense I have given, "their drink;" which agrees with the use of the word, Daniel i. 5, 8, 10, 16.

That they may exult—"They drank wine," says the historian, "and praised the gods of gold," &c. whilst they triumphantly made use of the golden vessels that were taken out of the temple of God at Jerusalem. (Dan. v. 3, 4.)

"עלו—Καρωθωσι, LXX.; 'sopiantur,' Vulg. Putat Grotius hic legisse LXX., Vulg., Chald., יעלפו. Confer Isai. li. 20, ubi de Judæis tanquam inebriatis ab ira Dei dicitur, עלפו שכבו, החעלה 'deliquium' notat, Amos viii. 13; Jon. iv. 8. Idemque, ut videtur, עלפה, Ezek. xxxi. 15; nec alibi occurrit hæc radix."—SECKER.

- 40 I will bring them down like lambs to the slaughter,
Like rams with he-goats.
- 41 How is Sheshach taken !
And the praise of the whole earth surprised !
How is Babylon become an astonishment among the nations !
- 42 The sea is come up over Babylon,
With the multitude of its waves is she covered.
- 43 Her cities are become a desolation,
A land of drought, and a wilderness ;
No man shall dwell in them,
Neither shall a son of man pass through them.
- 44 And I will execute judgment upon Bel in Babylon,
And will bring forth out of his mouth that which he hath swallowed,
And nations shall not flock unto him any more ;
The wall also of Babylon is fallen.
- 45 Go ye forth out of the midst of her, O my people,
And save ye every one his own life,
Because of the fierce anger of JEHOVAH ;
- 46 And lest your heart faint,
And ye be afraid because of the rumour heard in the land.
For the rumour shall come in a year,
And in a year after that the rumour,

Verse 41. Sheshach—That Babylon is meant by Sheshach, is certain ; but why it is so called, is yet matter of doubt. See note on chapter xxv. 26.

Verse 42. The sea is come up over Babylon—By “the sea,” any large collection of waters is denoted, and in particular the river Euphrates, (verse 36,) so that the fate of Babylon is here alluded to ; concerning which see verse 64 ; Isaiah xiv. 23 ; and PRIDEAUX’s Connection, part i. book 2. Others, by “the sea,” understand, metaphorically, a numerous army ; and by “the overspreading of waters,” the invasion and conquest of the country.

Verse 43. And a wilderness—יערבה ארץ. Neither the LXX. nor Syriac acknowledge ארץ this second time, nor is it found in two mss. It could not well stand here, as represented in the Vulgate and our English translation, without changing יהן into בה twice in the following part of the verse. This is not done in any of the collated mss., except only that one ms. for יהן in the second instance reads בה. I conclude, therefore, either that ארץ has been repeated by the transcriber’s mistake, or that we should read by transposition, ארץ ערבה.

Verse 44. That which he hath swallowed—Meaning, no doubt, the offerings made him out of the spoils of the conquered countries, and more particularly the sacred vessels out of the temple of Jerusalem, which Nebuchadnezzar had placed in the temple of his god. (2 Chron. xxxvi. 7 ; Dan. i. 2 ; Ezra i. 7.)

Verse 46. For the rumour shall come in a year, &c.—This seems to be an

And violence in the land,
Ruler against Ruler.

- 47 After this, behold, the days come,
When I will execute judgment upon the graven images of Babylon ;
And her whole land shall be confounded,
And all her slain shall fall in the midst of her.
- 48 And the heavens and the earth shall shout over Babylon,
And all that is in them,
When from the north there shall come against her
The spoilers, saith JEHOVAH.
- 49 As Babylon hath caused the slain of Israel to fall,
So through Babylon have fallen slain of the whole earth.

idiomatic phrase, denoting that terrifying rumours should continue year after year.

And violence in the land, Ruler against Ruler—One ms. and two ancient editions read here, ישור וחוסס, “Devastation and violence;” and in the supplemental additions of Origen marked with asterisks in Grabe’s edition of the LXX. we find, ταλαιπωρία και αδικια επι της γης. It is possible that the consequences of the war between the two adverse powers of Babylon and Media, during which the dominions of the former were subjected to the miseries of foreign invasion, may alone be here intended. But Berosus the Chaldean historian, as cited by JOSEPHUS, Contra Apion. lib. i., gives an account of civil violences and disorders that were committed in the land after the death of Nebuchadnezzar, whose son Evilmerodach was after a short reign murdered, and his throne usurped by one of his subjects. The usurper’s son, who succeeded him, was also murdered in his turn, and the kingdom restored to the lawful heir; and all this happened in the course of a few years previous to the foreign invasion. These, therefore, I think, are more likely to be the violences in this passage alluded to, and introduced as the forerunners of still greater devastations.

Verse 47. After this—לכן. See note on chapter xvi. 14.

And all her slain shall fall in the midst of her—This phrase seems designed to intimate, that, after the disorders before-mentioned, the land of Babylon should itself become the seat of war, since those of her that were slain in battle were to fall in the bosom of their own country, בתיבה. See verse 4.

Verse 48. When from the north there shall come against her, εξ.—For יבוא there is no doubt but that the true reading is יבאו, by a transposition of letters. So it stands in four, perhaps five, mss. In two printed editions, יבוא. The Syriac, Chaldee, Vulgate, Arabic, and one of the Greek interpreters preserved in the Hexapla, represent also the verb in the plural.

Verse 49. So through Babylon have fallen slain of the whole earth—The reason is here assigned, why the heavens, and the earth, and all that were therein, should rejoice at the fall of Babylon, because not only the people of Israel, but of the whole earth likewise, had been greatly annoyed by the power of that ambitious nation.

- 50 Ye that are escaped from her sword, go,
Stand not still,
Call to mind JEHOVAH from afar,
And let Jerusalem gain possession of your heart.
- 51 We have been confounded, because we have heard reproach,
Shame hath covered our faces,
Because aliens have entered Into the sanctuaries of the house of JEHOVAH.
- 52 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith JEHOVAH,
That I will execute judgment upon her graven images,
And through all her land the wounded shall groan.
- 53 Though Babylon shall have mounted up to the heavens,
And though she shall have fenced high her strength,
From me shall spoilers come unto her, saith JEHOVAH.
- 54 The voice of a cry from Babylon,
And of great destruction from the land of Chaldea!
- 55 For JEHOVAH spoileth Babylon,
And destroyeth from out of her a great voice;
Their waves also roar like great waters,
Their sound hath caused a tumult.
- 56 Surely there is come against her,
Against Babylon a spoiler;
And her mighty men shall be taken,
And every one of her bows broken;

Verse 50. Ye that are escaped from her sword—Instead of מחרב הלכו, I propose to read מחרבה לכו; for לכו is the imperative, and not הלכו. “Her sword” means the sword which wasted Babylon.

Gain possession of your heart—Let it be a prime object of your affection and desire. See notes on chapter iii. 16; vii. 31; xlv. 21.

Verse 53. Shall have fenced high her strength—That is, “shall have carried up her strong walls to a great height.” That the walls of Babylon were of a prodigious height and thickness, HERODOTUS tells us, who says they were two hundred cubits high, and fifty cubits in breadth. (Lib. i., cap. 178.)

Verse 55. Destroyeth from out of her a great voice—When cities are populous, they are of course noisy. See Isaiah xxii. 2. Silence is therefore a mark of depopulation; and in this sense we are to understand God’s destroying or taking away out of Babylon the great noise, which during the time of her prosperity was constantly heard there; “the busy hum of men,” as the poet very expressively calls it. In this manner the mystical Babylon is threatened, Rev. xviii. 22, 23. Compare chapter vii. 34; xvi. 9; xxv. 10.

“Perhaps, ‘Because JEHOVAH hath spoiled and destroyed Babylon, there is a great voice out of her;’ and their waves,’ &c.”—SECKER.

Verse 56. And every one of her bows broken—The Syriac and Vulgate appear to have read וחתכה, with the conjunction.

For a God of retributions,
JEHOVAH, will surely requite.

57 And I will make drunk her princes, and her wise men,
Her captains, and her rulers, and her mighty men ;
And they shall sleep an everlasting sleep,
And not wake again, saith the King,
Whose name is JEHOVAH of hosts.

58 Thus saith JEHOVAH of hosts,
The wall of Babylon, the broad one, shall be utterly razed,
And her gates, the lofty ones, shall be burned with fire ;
And peoples shall labour to the utmost extent of annihilation,
And nations with all the power of fire, until they be weary.

59 THE word which Jeremiah the prophet commanded Seraiah the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, when he went on the behalf of Zedekiah king of Judah to Babylon in the fourth

“ Perhaps, for ‘ JEHOVAH is a God of recompense, he will surely requite.’ ”—SECKER.

Verse 58. The wall of Babylon, the broad one—For חמור, “ walls,” four MSS. read חומה, and seventeen MSS., with five editions, read חומת, which agrees with the LXX. and Vulgate, where “ the wall ” is expressed in the singular number. The adjective הרחבה seems to be added by way of marking it out as a ground of astonishment, that a wall of such a breadth, or “ broad as it was,” should, notwithstanding, be utterly razed. So המשגב also seems to be used, chapter xlviii. 1 : “ It is confounded, high fortress though it be.” Modern travellers assure us, that not the least vestiges of this immense wall are to be found ; and how this may be accounted for, see in Bishop Lowth’s note on Isaiah xiii. 19.

To the utmost extent of annihilation—בדיריק. We have before observed in note on chapter xxxvi. 18, that דיר signifies “ the full extent ” and “ measure ” of any thing. So that בדיריק signifies, literally, “ to the full extent,” or “ utmost degree, of emptiness ; ” and refers to the razing of the walls, on which it is said that peoples should labour, till they had left the spot quite void and bare, where they stood. In like manner בדיאש signifies, “ to the full extent, or ability, of fire,” and refers to the burning of the gates, which should be done as completely as it was in the power of fire to do it ; to which is added, ויעפו, implying that the persons concerned in executing this work of destruction should employ their whole strength in it, till they were quite exhausted with fatigue.

“ ויעפו וגו’—Extant eadem fere verba, Hab. ii. 13, nisi quod pro ibi scriptum sit אש, et vice versâ ; et ויעפו pro יעפו.”—SECKER.

Verses 59. On the behalf of Zedekiah—אֶת is rendered παρὰ by the LXX., and signifies, “ from him,” “ on his behalf,” or “ by virtue of his commission ; ” for we have no reason to suppose that Zedekiah went in person to Babylon at that time. See אֶת used much in the same sense, chapter xxxiii. 5, and the note there. See also Genesis xlix. 25.

60 year of his reign; for Seraiah carried a present. And Jeremiah wrote all the evil that was to come upon Babylon in one book, all these words that are written concerning Babylon.
 61 And Jeremiah said to Seraiah, When thou comest to Babylon, then thou shalt see, and read all these words: and thou shalt 62 say, O JEHOVAH, thou hast spoken concerning this place, of cutting it off, so that there shall not be in it an inhabitant, either man or beast; but there shall be perpetual desolation.
 63 And it shall be, when thou hast made an end of reading this book, thou shalt bind a stone to it, and shalt cast it into the 64 middle of Euphrates: and thou shalt say, Thus shall Babylon

For Seraiah carried a present—In these words is specified the business on which Seraiah was sent. He was employed to carry the present, or customary tribute, which Zedekiah was obliged to pay to the king of Babylon in acknowledgment of his subjection and vassalage. That this is the sense of מְנוּחָה cannot be doubted, if we compare Judges iii. 15; 1 Sam. x. 27; 2 Sam. viii. 2, 6; 1 Kings iv. 21; 2 Kings xvii. 3; 2 Chron. xvii. 5, 11; xxvi. 8; xxxii. 23; Psalm lxxii. 10, &c., &c. שָׂר is usually considered as a noun, and rendered, “a prince,” or “chief;” and, in this sense, might here be understood as the person who was chief of the embassy, or had the principal charge of the present. Καὶ Σεραίας ἀρχὸν ὁπάων.—LXX. But we find מְנוּחָה used, Isaiah lvii. 9, in the sense of “going to,” or “visiting, a person with a present.” See Bishop Lowth’s note on that verse, where he assigns the reason why שָׂר, “to visit,” is equivalent to “making a present.” We may, therefore, render שָׂר-מְנוּחָה, “carried, or was the bearer of, a present.”

Verse 62. But there shall be perpetual desolation—The ancient versions seem all to have read שְׂמִמָּה in the singular, instead of שְׂמִמֹּת in the plural, number; and the verb תְּהִיָּה requires it so; for it cannot have הִמָּקֹם for its subject, on account of the gender. שְׂמִמֹּת would require תְּהִינָה.

Verse 63. Thou shalt bind a stone to it, and shalt cast it into the middle of Euphrates—Compare Rev. xviii. 21. This may call to mind a similar action related by HERODOTUS of the Phocæans, who, having resolved to leave their country, plunged a mass of iron into the sea, and swore never to return thither, till that mass rose again from the bottom. (Lib. i. cap. 165.)

— Simul inis saxa renarint
 Fadis levata, ne redire sit nefas.

HOR. Epod. xvi. 25.

Verse 64. Which I bring upon her—After these words we read in the text, וַיַּעֲפֵר. But this is not to be met with in the translation of the LXX.; nor does it appear to me to be authentic, notwithstanding the concurrence of the later versions and mss. The sense is entire and complete without it; and the addition serves only to cause perplexity and confusion. The word seems to have been added by some transcriber, whose eye was caught by it at the close of the preceding paragraph, verse 58. The Vulgate seems to have read וַיַּעֲפֵר, which would be more tolerable, as it might then be sink, and not rise again, because of the evil which I bring upon her.

THUS FAR THE WORDS OF JEREMIAH.

CHAPTER LII.

1 ZEDEKIAH was twenty and one years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Hamital, the daughter of Jeremiah of referred to Babylon, and rendered, "for it shall be exhausted," or "wearied out."

ויעפר—Nec genere, nec numero, nec sensu, convenit ויעפר cum præcedentibus, et videtur post ætatem των LXX. ad oram libri ex fine ver. 58. scriptum, ut adjiceretur sequens notula.—SECKER. Perhaps we should here read ויגע from גע, and, connecting it with the following words, render, "And thus far reach the words of Jeremiah." It is possible the transcriber may have observed both ויעפר and ויגע in verse 58, and thence have been led to write the wrong word.

THUS FAR THE WORDS OF JEREMIAH—These words seem to notify that the following chapter is not to be attributed to Jeremiah. They are not found in the LXX., where, indeed, they could not have been introduced at the end of this chapter at least, because the chapters are ranged differently in that version, and this makes only the twenty-eighth of the collection. By whom, or when, the chapters were digested in the order we now find them in the Hebrew Bibles, is uncertain. The disposition, for any thing which appears, is arbitrary, and, on many accounts, unlikely to have been made under the direction of the prophet himself. But when, or by whomsoever, the disposition was made, it is most probable that the foregoing words were subjoined at the same time, and by the same person.

CHAP. LII. THIS chapter was confessedly added by some one after Jeremiah's time, probably by Ezra, or whoever he was that revised the sacred writings after the return of the Jews from Babylon, and collected them into one body. It contains a brief history of the captivity, nearly the same, word for word, as it is related in the second book of Kings, chapter xxiv. 18–20, and chapter xxv. together with some few additions. Some have supposed it placed here as a proper introduction to the book of Lamentations. But more probably the design was, by immediately subjoining this historical narrative of the desolations of the Jewish nation to the predictions of Jeremiah concerning them, to hold forth a nearer view of the exact accomplishment of the divine word of prophecy.

"This chapter is not Jeremiah's. For the same history hath been already related by him. And it is marked at the end of the last chapter, that his words extend only thus far. And, verse 31, that king of Judah is called 'Jehoiachin,' as in the books of Kings and Chronicles, whom Jeremiah always elsewhere calls 'Jeconiah,' or 'Coniah.'"—SECKER.

Verse 1. Hemital—The Masoretes, for חמיטל, both here and 2 Kings

- 2 Libnah. And he did that which was evil in the sight of 3 JEHOVAH, according to all that Jehoiakim had done. For it was so because of the anger of JEHOVAH against Judah and Jerusalem, until he had cast them out of his sight. Zedekiah also rebelled against the king of Babylon.
- 4 And it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, on the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came, he and all his forces, against Jerusalem, and encamped against it, and built forts against 5 it round about. And the city was besieged until the eleventh xxiv. 11, propose to read חִמּוּטָל, with the concurrence of the Chaldee paraphrast, twenty mss., and four editions. But the LXX., who certainly followed copies more ancient than were within the reach of those critics, or than any now extant, read Αμειταλ, and the Vulgate, "Amital." I see, therefore, no sufficient cause for altering the received reading of the text.

Verse 3. For it was so because of the anger of JEHOVAH against Judah and Jerusalem—The particle כִּי is here causal, and assigns a reason for what went before, namely, why Zedekiah succeeded Jehoiakim both in the throne and in wickedness. This happened, it is said, "because of the anger of JEHOVAH;" not that JEHOVAH instigated either them or any man else to do wickedly; but the thing was of his special order and appointment, for the punishment of a wicked people, that men of such perverse and evil dispositions were advanced to be their kings. For, having determined, as it is said, 2 Kings xxi. 11-16, to execute a signal vengeance upon Judah and Jerusalem for the very heinous provocations he had received during the reign of Manasseh, he first of all removed the good Josiah out of the way, out of respect to whose piety he would not bring the evil in his days; and thus opened the succession to his sons, the badness of whose principles favoured the designs of God's justice, and led them to pursue measures equally fatal to themselves and their country. For from hence it flowed, that to their other wicked and sinful actions they added one no less impolitic than profligate, that of rebelling against a prince, to whom they were engaged by all the ties of religion, honour, and gratitude; one who had power to crush them, and who exercised that power with the most unrelenting severity. Thus truly might it be said of the people of Judah, in the words of the prophet Hosea, xiii. 11, "God gave them kings in his anger, and took, or applied, them to the purposes of his indignation;" which, indeed, is but another way of expressing the sense here intended, namely, that it (Zedekiah's succession and wicked reign) was the consequence of the anger of JEHOVAH against Judah and Jerusalem, and designed finally to terminate in his removal of them out of his sight. Our translators have represented הִיָּחָה as used absolutely, making the words that follow dependent thereon, thus: "It came to pass—that Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon." But in this case the verb is always masculine. But where the verb is referred to an antecedent, and that antecedent not expressed by a particular noun, but virtually contained in the sense of a whole proposition or sentence that has preceded, which I

- 6 year of Zedekiah's reign, in the fourth month, the ninth day of the month; when the famine was sore in the city, 7 and there was no bread for the people of the land. And the city was broken into; and all the men of war fled, and went out of the city by night, by the way of the gate between the two walls, which is by the king's garden; (whilst the Chaldeans were before the city round about;) and they went toward the plain. But the forces of Chaldea pursued after the king, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho; and all 9 his troops were scattered from him. And they took the king, and brought him up to the king of Babylon at Riblah in the land of Hamath: and he proceeded judicially against him. 10 And the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes; and he slew also all the princes of Judah in Riblah. 11 And he put out the eyes of Zedekiah, and bound him with fetters of brass; and the king of Babylon carried him to Babylon, and put him in prison till the day of his death. 12 And in the fifth month, on the tenth day of the month, judge to be the case here, there the verb is used in the feminine. Of this there is a double instance, Isaiah xiv. 24, where not only the verbs היתה and תקום, but the pronoun היא, are feminine, in reference to such an implied antecedent; for no other can certainly be found. See also note on chapter xlii. 16; and compare Judges xiv. 4; 2 Kings xii. 15, 24; 2 Chron. x. 15; xxii. 7; xxv. 20.

Verse 6. In the fourth month—Here the text supplies בחדש הרביעי, which words are wanting in 2 Kings xxv. 3.

Verse 7. Fled, and went out of the city—Here we find יברחו ויצאו מהעיר, which words are not to be found in the text, 2 Kings xxv. 4. But there seems to be a mistake in יברחו, which either ought to have been ויברחו, as chapter xxxix. 4, or simply ברחו. In one ms. a letter is erased before יברחו.

The gate between the two walls—See note on chapter xxxix. 4.

Verse 9. And he proceeded judicially against him—See note on chapter xxxix. 5. One ms. reads וידיברו, as 2 Kings xxv. 6.

Verse 11. In prison—בבית הפקדת. The Masora and four mss. read here בית, instead of בבית. But no alteration seems needful; as it is observed by Houbigant, that the ב is not omitted after נתן, when the words נתן ביד occur.

Verse 12. On the tenth day of the month—In the parallel place, 2 Kings xxv. 8, we read, בשבעה, “on the seventh,” instead of בעשור, “on the tenth.” This difference some attempt to reconcile, by supposing that one may speak of the day Nebuzaradan set out from Riblah, and the other of the day that he arrived at Jerusalem; or else, that he came on the seventh, but did not set fire to the buildings till the tenth. But it is more likely to have arisen from some mistake of the transcriber, perhaps in setting down the numbers at length, which were expressed by numeral letters in the old

(it was the nineteenth year of the reign of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon,) came Nebuzaradan captain of the guards, one that stood in the presence of the king of Babylon, to 13 Jerusalem. And he burned the house of JEHOVAH, and the king's house, and all the houses of Jerusalem, even every 14 great house burned he with fire. And all the army of the Chaldeans, that was with the captain of the guards, brake 15 down all the walls of Jerusalem round about. And some of the poor of the people, and the rest of the people that were left in the city, and the deserters that had gone over to the king of Babylon, even the remains of the multitude, did copies. And in this instance such a mistake might easily happen between the י and the י', of which the first stands for "seven," the latter for "ten."

It was the nineteenth year, &c.—One MS. here, and two MSS. in 2 Kings xxv. 8, read הוּא for הִיא, as if to agree with הָרֶשֶׁת in gender; but הִיא is feminine, agreeing with שָׁנָה, as, chapter xxv. 1; xxxii. 1. The year had been before specified, according to Zedekiah's reign, verse 5; and this marks the corresponding year of Nebuchadrezzar's reign.

One that stood in the presence of the king of Babylon—In 2 Kings xxv. 8, for עֶבֶד לִפְנֵי we read עַבְדָּא לִפְנֵי, "a servant;" but the difference is in the words only, and not in the sense; for the first signifies "an attendant upon the king's person," one that stands ready to receive and obey his orders: So Gabriel says of himself, Luke i. 19, "I am Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God, and am sent to speak unto thee;" and, chapter xl. 10, Gedaliah professeth himself, in like terms, a servant of the Chaldeans, saying that he should dwell at Mizpeh, לַעֲמֹד לִפְנֵי הַכַּשְׂדִּים, "To stand before the face of the Chaldeans," that is, to receive and execute their commands.

Verse 13. Even every great house—So I think we should here translate; for, according to our present English translation, there is a tautology in saying, "All the houses of Jerusalem, and every great man's house." But the latter words seem to be added by way of correction or restriction of the former; as much as to say, "If not all the houses, literally, yet every great house, at least, that was in any respect considerable." And this is more likely than that he should put himself to the trouble of setting fire to all the little paltry dwellings of the poor. The LXX. and Vulgate render בֵּית הַגָּדוֹל as the adjective of בֵּית.

Verse 15. And some of the poor of the people—וּמְדוּלוֹת הָעָם. These words are not found in the parallel places, chapter xxxix. 9; 2 Kings xxv. 11; and are wanting in one MS. here.

Even the remains of the multitude—For הַרְבֵּה, three MSS. here read הַרְבֵּה, as in the parallel place, 2 Kings xxv. 11; and by הַרְבֵּה may be understood, "the great multitude that formerly inhabited Jerusalem," of whom a few only survived, called, "the remains of the multitude." These remains were before distinguished into "the people that were left in the

- 16 Nebuzaradan captain of the guards carry away captive. But some of the poor of the land did Nebuzaradan captain of 17 the guards leave for vinedressers and for husbandmen. And the pillars of brass that were in the house of JEHOVAH, and the bases, and the brasen sea that was in the house of JEHOVAH, the Chaldeans brake, and carried all the brass of 18 them to Babylon. The caldrons also, and the shovels, and the snuffers, and the bowls, and the spoons, and all the vessels of brass, which they used in ministering, did they take away.
 19 And the basons, and the censers, and the bowls, and the caldrons, and the candlesticks, and the spoons, and the cups, whatsoever was of gold, the gold, and whatsoever was of silver,
 20 the silver, did the captain of the guards take away. The two pillars, the one sea, and the twelve brasen oxen that were underneath, the bases which king Solomon had made for the house of JEHOVAH, the brass from all these vessels was with-21 out weight. For the pillars, eighteen cubits in height was the one pillar, and a line of twelve cubits measured it round; and city," or had continued there till the city was taken; and "the deserters," that had joined the Chaldeans during the siege; and are now concluded under one general name, "the remains of the multitude," or "populace." In chapter xxxix. 9, they are called, אֲחֵרֵי הָעָם הַנִּשְׁאָרִים, "the residue of the people, those that remained."

Verse 17. And the pillars, &c.—See chapter xxvii. 19, &c.

Verse 19. Whatsoever was of gold, the gold, and whatsoever was of silver, the silver—That is, the utensils above-mentioned, some of which were of gold, and some of silver, he took them away of both kinds.

Verse 20. And the twelve brasen oxen that were underneath—It is manifest that תַּחַת ought not to be considered as a preposition governing הַמִּכְנוֹת, "the bases;" for the twelve oxen were under the sea, and not under the bases. (1 Kings vii. 25.) Accordingly, the LXX. render, καὶ οἱ μωσχόδωδεκα χαλκοὶ υποκατω τῆς θαλάσσης. But תַּחַת is here to be taken adverbially, as Gen. xlix. 25. "The bases," הַמִּכְנוֹת, were entirely distinct pieces of furniture from the sea and the twelve oxen, being ten in number, made for the reception of ten brass lavers, that were set upon them by Solomon. (1 Kings vii. 38.) But king Ahaz, in after-time, removed the lavers from off the bases, and most probably converted the lavers to some other use, which the word יָסַר seems to imply, 2 Kings xvi. 17; for we find no mention here made of the lavers, but of the bases only.

The brass from all these vessels—Instead of לִנְחָשָׁתָם כָּל I read לִנְחָשָׁה כָּל, "the brass that came from all these vessels," after that the Chaldeans had broken them to pieces, as we are told they did, verse 17.

Verse 21. For the pillars, eighteen cubits in height was the one pillar—The dimensions of the pillars seem to be given in order to justify the assertion, that the weight of the brass was too great to be ascertained. For 22 the thickness of it was four fingers, being hollow. And the chapter upon it was of brass; and the height of the one chapter was five cubits; and there was wreathen work, and pomegranates upon the chapter all round, the whole of brass; and

 23 in like manner the other pillar had also pomegranates. And the pomegranates were ninety and six toward every wind; all the pomegranates an hundred upon the wreathen work round
 24 about. And the captain of the guards took Seraiah the chief priest, and Zephaniah the second priest, and the three keepers

קומה, the Masoretes, with sixteen, perhaps seventeen, mss. and two editions, read קומה, as, 1 Kings vii. 15; 2 Kings xxv. 17. But there seems to be no necessity for an alteration of the present reading, the construction being equally unexceptionable whether we choose to say, "Eighteen cubits was the height of one pillar," or, "The one pillar was eighteen cubits in height." But from hence we are led to consider the difference in height expressed, 2 Chronicles iii. 15, where we read that Solomon "made before the house two pillars of thirty and five cubits in length;" which must mean the length of both taken together; that is, each pillar was seventeen cubits and a half high: To reconcile which with what is said here and the other parallel places, some have supposed that each pillar had a base or pedestal of half a cubit, on which it stood, and which is not brought to account in the place now cited from the Chronicles: Others, that there were two sorts of cubits, of different lengths; which, however, I cannot admit, because we no where read of such diversity in the Hebrew measures; and if there had been such, it would have been always necessary to have specified the distinction, in order to keep clear of error. But most probably neither of the above solutions is necessary; but the truth may be, that the length of the two pillars taken together may have been set down at thirty-five cubits, as the nearest approach in whole numbers, although, in reality, somewhat more; in which case each of the two pillars would, for a like reason, be reckoned at eighteen cubits, there being no sort of occasion for greater accuracy.

Verse 23. And the pomegranates were ninety and six toward every wind, &c.—In 1 Kings vii. 42, and 2 Chronicles iv. 13, it is said, there were four hundred pomegranates for the two networks or wreaths, two rows of pomegranates for each network or wreath. The mode of expression here is different, but amounts to exactly the same: For, divide the two pillars into four quarters, according to the four winds; and let ninety-six pomegranates stand opposite to each of the four winds, upon the two pillars; the whole number in front of the four winds, taken together, will be three hundred and eighty-four. But they were in four rows, two on each pillar; and in each row must have been four angular pomegranates, that could not be said to be opposite to any one of the four winds, consequently, sixteen angular ones in the four rows; which sixteen, being added to three hundred and eighty-four, make up the number of pomegranates in all, four hundred; that is, an hundred in a row upon the wreathen work round about.

Verse 24. Zephaniah the second priest—See note on chapter xxix. 26.

- 25 of the door; and out of the city he took an eunuch, who had the charge over the men of war, and seven men of those that were near the king's person, who were found in the city, and the principal scribe of the host, who mustered the people of the land, and threescore men of the people of the land, 26 who were found in the midst of the city; even Nebuzaradan captain of the guards took them, and brought them to the 27 king of Babylon at Riblah. And the king of Babylon smote them, and put them to death in Riblah in the land of Hamath; and carried Judah away captive out of their own land. 28 This is the people, whom Nebuchadrezzar carried away captive in the seventh year, three thousand and twenty three

And the three keepers of the door—These were not the ordinary porters, who were taken from among the Levites; but were priests, who stood at the door to receive the offerings of the people, and thus were keepers of the sacred treasury; an office of high trust and consideration. See 2 Kings xii. 9; xxiii. 4.

Verse 25. And seven men of those that were near the king's person—Literally, "who saw the king's face." Five only are mentioned, 2 Kings xxv. 19; but the Arabic reads there "seven," as well as here; and JOSEPHUS says, they were seven. (Ant. lib. x. cap. 8, edit. Hudson.)

And the principal scribe of the host—In the margin of our Bibles the translation is, "The scribe of the captain of the host." It appears, however, that there were certain officers belonging to the Jewish armies called, ספרים, or "scribes," who were what we might call, "muster-masters" of the troops. See 1 Maccabees v. 42. And the person here spoken of was probably the muster-master, or intendant-general of the army, the secretary at war.

Verses 28–30. These verses are not inserted in 2 Kings xxv.; nor are they to be found here, according to the Roman and Alexandrian editions of the LXX.; but in the Complutensian they are, and in two mss. collated by Dr. Grabe, in the one marked with asterisks, in the other without; and also in Theodotion's version in the Hexapla. All the other ancient versions acknowledge them, and they are not omitted in any of the collated Hebrew mss.; so that there is no doubt of their being genuine. But are we to conclude from them, that the whole number of the Jews whom Nebuchadnezzar, in all his expeditions, carried into captivity was no more than four thousand six hundred? This cannot be true; for he carried away more than twice that number at one time; and this is expressly said to have been in the eighth year of his reign. (2 Kings xxiv. 12–16.) Before that time he had carried off a number of captives from Jerusalem, in the first year of his reign, among whom were Daniel and his companions. (Dan. i. 3–6.) And of these Berosus the Chaldean historian speaks, as cited by JOSEPHUS, Ant. lib. x. cap. 11, edit. Hudson. These are confessedly not taken notice of here. And as the taking and burning of Jerusalem is, in this very chapter, said to have been in the fourth and fifth months of the nineteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar, those who were carried into captivity at the date of those

29 Jews. In the eighteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar, he carried away captive from Jerusalem eight hundred and thirty two events cannot possibly be the same with those that are said to be carried away either in the eighteenth or the twenty-third year of that prince. Nor, indeed, is it credible, that the number carried away at the time the city was taken, and the whole country reduced, could be so few as eight hundred and thirty-two, supposing a mistake in the date of the year, which some are willing to do, though without sufficient grounds. Here, then, we have three deportations, and those the most considerable ones, in the first, the eighth, and the nineteenth years of Nebuchadnezzar, sufficiently distinguished from those in his seventh, eighteenth, and twenty-third years; so that it seems most reasonable to conclude, with Archbishop USHER, in his Chronologia Sacra, that, by the latter three, the historian meant to point out deportations of a lesser kind, not elsewhere noticed in direct terms in scripture. The first of these, said to have been in the seventh year of Nebuchadnezzar, was of those that had been picked up in several parts of Judah, by the bands of Chaldees, Syrians, and others whom the king of Babylon sent against the land previous to his own coming. (2 Kings xxiv. 2.) That in the eighteenth year corresponds with the time when the Chaldean army broke off the siege before Jerusalem, and marched to fight the Egyptian army; at which time they might think it proper to send off the prisoners that were in camp, under a guard, to Babylon. And the last, in the twenty-third year of Nebuchadnezzar, was, when that monarch, being engaged in the siege of Tyre, sent off Nebuzaradan against the Moabites, Ammonites, and other neighbouring nations; who, at the same time, carried away the last gleanings of Jews that remained in their own land, amounting, in all, to no more than seven hundred and forty-five. JOSEPHUS speaks of this expedition against the Moabites and Ammonites, which he places in the twenty-third year of Nebuchadnezzar, but mentions nothing done in the land of Israel at that time; only, he says, that, after the conquest of those nations, Nebuchadnezzar carried his victorious arms against Egypt, which he, in some measure reduced, and carried the Jews whom he found there captives to Babylon. (Ant. lib. x. cap. 9, edit. Hudson.) But the Egyptian expedition was not till the twenty-seventh year of Jehoiachin's captivity, that is, the thirty-fifth of Nebuchadnezzar, as may be collected from Ezekiel xxix. 17; so that those who were carried away in the twenty-third year were not from Egypt, but were, as before observed, the few Jews that remained in the land of Judah.
 30 persons. In the three and twentieth year of Nebuchadrezzar, Nebuzaradan captain of the guards carried away captive Jews, seven hundred forty and five persons. All the persons were four thousand and six hundred.

Verse 29. He carried away captive from Jerusalem—In the text of seven MSS., in the margin of another, and in one upon a rasure, also in seven editions, some of them the most ancient, and in the margin or notes of three other editions, the word דגלה is expressed before כירושלם, as also in the Syriac version.

31 And it came to pass in the thirty and seventh year of the captivity of Jehoiachin king of Judah, in the twelfth month, on the twenty-fifth day of the month, that Evil-merodach king of Babylon in the first year of his reign lifted up the head of Jehoiachin king of Judah, and brought him forth
 32 out of prison, and spake graciously unto him, and set his seat above the seat of the kings, that were with him in Baby-33 lon; so that he changed his prison garments, and did eat bread before him continually all the days of his life.

---

Verse 31. The twenty-fifth—In the parallel place (2 Kings xxv. 27) we read, “the twenty-seventh:” A mistake, no doubt, on which side soever it lies, as the passages are evidently transcribed the one from the other. The LXX. here render, τετραδι και εικαδι, except the Complutensian edition, which substitutes πεμπτη for τετραδι.

In the first year of his reign—בשנת מלכותו. Literally, “in the year of his reign, or kingdom;” that is, the year co-incident with the beginning of it, from whence the date is taken. So that the word “first” is virtually implied in the phrase. In like manner, במלכו, verse 1, signified, “when he reigned,” or, “began to reign.” For הכולי, the Masora, twelve mss., and two editions read הכולי; eleven mss. and three editions, הכול.

Verse 32. Set his seat above the seat of the kings—This may easily be understood to signify, that the king of Babylon showed him more respect and honour than he did to any of the other captive princes, by placing him nearest himself. See Esther iii. 1. It is probable the phrase may have proceeded from the custom of placing cushions for persons of more than ordinary distinction in the place allotted them to sit in. See HARMER’S Observations, chap. vi. obs. 26. The Masora, with seventeen, perhaps twenty-two, mss. and five editions, reads המלכים instead of מלכים.

Verse 33. So that he changed his prison garments—This has been considered by some as an act of generosity in Evil-merodach, giving the captive king new garments, more suitable to his royal dignity than those he wore in prison. But it was rather the act of Jehoiachin himself, who, out of respect to the king of Babylon’s presence, and to mark his just sense of the favour shown him, no longer neglected his person and dress, as when a prisoner, and in affliction, but put on new apparel more adapted to the change in his circumstances. So Joseph, when he was sent for out of prison to appear before Pharaoh, first shaved himself, and changed his raiment. (Genesis xli. 14.) David did the same after he had ceased mourning for his child, before he went into the house of God. (2 Samuel xii. 20.) And Mr. Harmer observes, both that to change the garments often is in the east a mark of respect in visiting; and also that the putting on of new clothes is thought by those people to be very requisite, and, indeed, almost necessary, for the due solemnization of a time of rejoicing. See HARMER’S Observations, chap. vi. obs. 44 and 45.

His life—For חי, thirty-six mss. and five editions read, with the Masora, חי, as at the end of the next verse.

34 And his allowance, a constant allowance, was given him by the king of Babylon's order, at a certain rate every day, until the day of his death, all the days of his life.

---

Verse 34. And his allowance, &c.—This may have been an allowance for the maintenance of his family, if by “eating bread continually before him,” as Jehoiachin is in the preceding verse said to have done, he meant sitting at the king of Babylon's own table. Compare 2 Sam. ix. 7, 10, 11.

END OF JEREMIAH.

LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAH.

---

 INTRODUCTION.

THE Lamentations of Jeremiah are very properly distributed into five chapters, each of them containing a distinct elegy, consisting of twenty-two periods, according to the number of letters in the Hebrew alphabet ; although it is in the four first chapters only that the several periods begin, acrostic-wise, with the different letters following each other in alphabetical order. By this contrivance the metre is more precisely marked and ascertained, particularly in the third chapter, where each period contains three verses, which have all the same initial letter. The two first chapters in like manner consist of triplets, excepting only the seventh period of the first, and the nineteenth of the second, which have each a supernumerary line. The fourth chapter resembles the three former in metre, but the periods are only couplets. In the fifth chapter the periods are couplets, but of a considerably shorter measure.

It has been surmised by some men of eminence in literature, both among the ancients and moderns,* that these were the funeral lamentations composed by Jeremiah on the death of the good king Josiah, which are mentioned, 2 Chron. xxxv. 25, and there said to have been perpetuated by an ordinance in Israel. But whatever is become of those lamentations, these cannot possibly be the same ; for their whole tenor from beginning to end plainly shows them not to have been composed till after the destruction of Jerusalem and its temple, and the depopulation of the country by the transmigration of all its inhabitants ; which events are described not at all in the style of prophetic prediction, but alluded to and bewailed as what had been already fully accomplished and brought to pass. And that this was the most ancient opinion held concerning them, appears from the introductory title prefixed to the Greek version of the LXX., and from thence probably transmitted to the Latin Vulgate ; but which, not being found in any of the Hebrew copies, I have inserted at the head of the first chapter between crotchets, as being somewhat doubtful of its original authority. The internal evidence is, however, sufficient to ascertain both the date and the occasion of these compositions ; nor can we admire too much the full and graceful flow of that pathetic eloquence, in which the author pours forth the effusions of a patriotic heart, and piously weeps over the ruins of his venerable country. “ Never,” says an unquestionable judge of these matters,* “ was there a more rich and elegant variety of beautiful images and adjuncts arranged together within so small a compass, nor more happily chosen and applied.” But it was before observed, that the prophet’s peculiar talent lay in working up and expressing the passions of grief and pity ; and unhappily for him, as a man and a citizen, he met with a subject but too well calculated to give his genius its full display.

* Josephus, Jerome, Archbishop Usher, &c.

* LOWTH De Sacra Poesi Hebræorum, Prælect. xxii.

LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAH.

CHAPTER I.

[AND IT CAME TO PASS AFTER THAT ISRAEL HAD BEEN CARRIED AWAY CAPTIVE, AND JERUSALEM WAS BECOME DESOLATE, THAT JEREMIAH SAT WEEPING, AND LAMENTED WITH THIS LAMENTATION OVER JERUSALEM, AND SAID,]

- 1      How doth she sit solitary, the city that was full of people !
       She is become as a widow, that was great among the nations !
       She that was sovereign over provinces is become tributary !
- 2      She weepeth sore in the night, and her tears are upon her cheeks ;
       She hath no comforter from among all her lovers ;

CHAP. I. JEREMIAH begins this his first elegy with mourning over the sad reverse of fortune which his country had experienced ; at the same time sorrowfully confessing that all her miseries were of her own seeking, the result of national wickedness and rebellion against God. In the midst of the discourse he on a sudden withdraws himself from view, and leaves Jerusalem to continue the complaint ; who humbly solicits from the divine compassion that comfort and redress, which she found it in vain to look for from any other quarter.

Verse 1. She that was sovereign over provinces—See what is said of David's conquests and sovereignty over the neighbouring states, 2 Sam. viii. 1-14 ; x. 6-19 ; of the extent of his son Solomon's dominions, 1 Kings iv. 21, 24 ; of the power of Judah in the reign of Jehoshaphat, 2 Chron. xvii. 10, 11 ; and also in that of Uzziah, 2 Chron. xxvi. 6-8.

Verse 2. She weepeth sore—Or, as it is expressed in our old English version, "She weepeth continually." In the Hebrew, according to the idiom of that language, it is, "Weeping she weepeth ;" בכו תבכה. Forty-eight, perhaps fifty-three, mss. and seven editions, for בכו read בכה. But no alteration seems necessary, for בכו is an usual form of the infinitive of verbs quiescent in כ. See Isaiah xxx. 19.

Her lovers—Those that courted her alliance in the time of her prosperity. Several of the neighbouring princes sent their ambassadors to Zedekiah, (Jer. xxvii. 3, &c.,) to engage him, as appears from the context, to join

All her associates have dealt perfidiously by her, they are become her enemies.

3      Judah is gone into exile because of affliction, and because of great servitude,

She hath dwelt among the nations, she hath found no rest ;
All her pursuers have overtaken her in the straits.

4      The ways of Sion do mourn, because none come to the solemn feast ;

All her gates are desolate ; her priests sigh ;
Her virgins are afflicted, and she herself is in bitterness.

them in a confederacy against the power of the king of Babylon. But they not only universally failed and deserted Judah in the time of need, but most of them turned against her, and took a malignant pleasure in aggravating her misfortunes. See Jer. xlvi. 27 ; Psalm cxxxvii. 7 ; Ezekiel xxv. 3, 6, 8, 12, 15 ; xxvi. 2 ; xxviii. 24 ; xxix. 6, 7. Obad. 10-14.

Verse 3. Judah is gone into exile because of affliction, and because of great servitude—Our translators, who have rendered, “Judah is gone into captivity,” &c., seem to have adopted the notion of the Chaldee paraphrast, who represents the Jews to have been carried into captivity in retaliation of their having oppressed the widow and the fatherless among them, and prolonged illegally the bondage of their brethren who had been sold them for slaves. But גלה does not necessarily signify, “to go into captivity,” but often to “remove,” or “go into exile,” whether voluntarily or by compulsion. And I am inclined to think that it was a voluntary migration of the Jews that is here intended ; many of whom, previous to the captivity, had left their country, and retired into Egypt and other parts, to avoid the oppressions and servitude which they had reason to apprehend from the Chaldeans, who had invaded, or were about to invade, their country. Thus the preposition מ may either be construed “from,” or “out of the way of” oppression and multiplied slavery ; or “because of, for fear of” those evils ; or like præ in Latin, “in preference to,” that is, they voluntarily exiled themselves rather than stay to be oppressed and compelled to serve. Either of these senses is competent ; and the interpretation according to them will be found to suit perfectly with the subsequent members of the period.

All her pursuers have overtaken her in the straits—By “the straits” are meant such narrow passages, where there is no room to turn, either to the right hand or to the left ; and the sense I conceive to be wholly metaphorical. Judah, it is said, had quitted her own country, in order to avoid the oppressions and servitude she had reason to expect at home. But in her foreign residence she found herself equally exposed to trouble and uneasiness. So that, like a person who was overtaken by an enemy in such a place as is before described, it was not possible for her to escape, but she was obliged to stand the brunt of all the evils she had in vain endeavoured to fly from.

- 5 Her adversaries are become the head, her enemies have prospered, Because JEHOVAH hath afflicted her for the multitude of her transgressions ;
Her children are gone into captivity before an adversary.
- 6 And from the daughter of Sion all her beauty is departed ;
Her princes are become like harts that find no pasture ;
And they are gone away without strength before a pursuer.
- 7 Jerusalem hath called to mind in the days of her affliction, and of her abasement,
All her desirable things which were in the days of old ;
When her people fell into the hand of an enemy, and she had no helper,
The adversaries saw, they laughed at her discontinuance.

Verse 5. The head—That is, her superiors. See Deut. xxviii. 13, 44.

Verse 6. From the daughter—For מִן־בִּתּוֹ, the Masora reads מִבֵּת, and so do ten mss. and the book called by the Jews “Rabboth.” See KENNICOTT. Diss. Gen. sec. 42.

That find no pasture—All the ancient versions seem to have read מִצְאִי ; but the ellipsis of the relative אֲשֶׁר is of frequent use, and will justify מִצְאוֹ.

Verse 7. In the days of her affliction, and of her abasement—Houbigant supposes that we ought to read יָמֵי בִימֵי ; but I am inclined [to think] that it is not the ב, but the י, which has been sunk before יָמֵי, by means of the preceding word having been terminated with the same letter : A mistake of which we find numberless instances originating from the same cause. מִימֵי signifies “during the days,” or “since they began,” as מִימֵי קָדֶם does presently after, “in,” or “during former days.” מֵרִיר comes from יָרַד, to “descend” from a higher to a lower condition. See chapter iii. 19. Nor can any thing be more natural, than for persons who have fallen into adversity to recollect the advantages they had formerly possessed, and to feel an aggravation of their sufferings in proportion to the greatness of the contrast.

Which were—One ancient ms. and the Chaldee represent לָהּ after הָיָה. But it is not necessary, and seems to overload the metre.

The adversaries saw—Instead of רָאוּ הָעֲרִירִים, I propose to read רָאוּ הָעֲרִירִים. Some persons have been willing to discard this line, as well as the fourth in chapter ii. 19, but for no better reason, than because all the other periods in the two chapters consist of three lines only. But I think this not a sufficient ground, in opposition to the authority of all the Hebrew copies and ancient versions.

Her discontinuance—מִשְׁבַּחַה. Houbigant justly observes that מִשְׁבַּחַה is no where used for “sabbath,” and that there is no apparent reason why the Chaldeans should particularly deride the Jewish sabbaths, nor any thing

- 8 Jerusalem hath sinned greatly ; therefore hath she been as one set apart for unclean ;
All that honoured her have despised her, because they have seen her nakedness ;
Even she herself sigheth, and turneth backward.
- 9 Though her uncleanness was in her skirts, she thought not of its latter end ;
Therefore is she wonderfully brought low ; she hath no comforter ;
Behold, O JEHOVAH, how an enemy hath aggravated mine affliction.
- 10 An adversary hath spread his hand over all her desirable things ;
Surely she hath seen nations enter into her sanctuary,
Concerning whom thou didst command, that they should not enter into thy congregation.
- 11 All her people sigh ; they seek bread ;
They have given their things of value for food to sustain life ;
Behold, O JEHOVAH, and consider, how I am become vile !
- 12 O that among you, all ye that pass by the way, ye would look and see, said before that leads to such meaning. But without taking the liberty, which he does, of substituting another word, מִשְׁבֶּרֶה, the use of the verb שָׁבַח will justify giving to מִשְׁבֶּרֶה a sense well-suited to the exigence of the passage, namely, “her discontinuance,” that is, the ceasing, or causing to cease, of her, or of her former prosperity. Sixty-five mss. and four editions, together with the Vulgate, read in the plural, מִשְׁבֶּרֶת.

Verse 8. Hath she been as one set apart for unclean—For לְנִידָה, which occurs no where else, nineteen mss. and the first edition of the Hagiographa read לְנִידָה, as at verse 17, and in various other places.

Verse 9. Her uncleanness was in her skirts—The plain meaning of this, taken out of metaphor, seems to be, that although evident marks of her pollution appeared about her, and the land was defiled by her sinfulness even to its utmost borders, she had no thought or consideration of what must be the consequence of all this at the last.

Verse 10. Concerning whom thou didst command—See Deut. xxiii. 3. In צִוִּיתָה the ה is paragogic. Eight mss. omit it.

Verse 11. Their things of value—For מַחֲמֹדֵיהֶם, fifty-five mss. and six editions read מַחֲמֹדֵיהֶם, without the ו, as at verses 7, 10.

Verse 12. O that among you—לֹא is undeniably used for לָּ, the particle

If there be a sorrow like unto my sorrow, which hath been caused to me,
Whom JEHOVAH hath afflicted in the day of his fierce anger !

13 From on high hath he sent fire, and hath caused it to penetrate into my bones ;
He hath spread a net for my feet ; he hath turned me back ;
He hath made me desolate, languishing all the day long.

14 My transgressions have been closely watched, that into his hand they might intangle themselves ;
His yoke upon my neck hath caused my strength to stumble ;
JEHOVAH hath cast me upon my hands, I am unable to rise up.

of wishing, Isaiah xlviii. 18 ; and if it be a mistake of the transcriber there, the like may fairly be admitted as highly probable here, considering that the next word begins with α. The LXX. render Οι προς υμας. Οι, the article, would be scarcely intelligible in this place ; but οι, the interjection, of wailing indeed, though not of wishing, gives room for the same construction in other respects, as is expressed in the version.

Verse 13. And hath caused it to penetrate into my bones—This is obviously the right construction, and it is that which is approved by the LXX.

Verse 14. My transgressions have been closely watched, שָׁקַד.—שָׁקַד properly signifies, “to lie on the watch,” so as to lay hold on every opportunity that offers ; and is followed by the preposition על. See Prov. viii. 34 ; Jer. xxxi. 28 ; Daniel ix. 14. נִשְׁקַד is the third person preter in Niphal, and used impersonally. So it is expressed in the LXX. ; Εγρηγορηθη επι τα ασεβηματα μου, “Watch hath been set upon my transgressions ;” and to what end, is declared in the words that follow : “That they might entangle themselves into his hand ;” that is, that they might not escape without being taken notice of and punished by him. The image is borrowed from a fowler, who watches the motions of a bird, in order to entangle him into his net.

His yoke—עולו is the noun עול or על with the affix ; “his yoke,” imposed by way of punishment.

JEHOVAH—For יְהוָה, thirty-seven mss. and three editions read יהוה. And in the verse that follows, twenty-one mss. and one edition in the first instance, and in the second, thirty-one mss. and three editions, for אֲדֹנִי also read יהוה ; the ancient versions all of them using the same word, by which they respectively translate יהוה at other times.

Hath cast me upon my hands—This is a literal translation of נִתְנִי בְיָדַי, and suits well with the context. The heavy burden that hung upon his neck, he says, made him stumble ; and, being thrown upon his hands, he was unable to rise, because of the weight that pressed upon him. But I ques-

- 15      JEHOVAH hath trodden down all my valiant ones in the midst of me ;
 He hath called an assembly against me, to crush my young men ;
 JEHOVAH hath trodden the wine-vat in the virgin daughter of Judah.
- 16      For these things do I weep, mine eye poureth down water,
 Because a comforter is far from me, a supporter of my life ;
 My children are become desolate, because an enemy hath prevailed.
- 17      Sion spreadeth forth her hands, she hath no comforter ;
 JEHOVAH hath commanded concerning Jacob, those that are round about him are his enemies ;
 Jerusalem is become as one set apart for unclean among them.
- 18      Righteous is he, JEHOVAH, for I have rebelled against his commandment :
 Hear, I pray you, all ye peoples, and consider my sorrow ;
 My virgins and my young men are gone into captivity.
- 19      I called upon my lovers, they have proved false to me ;
 My priests and mine elders in the city have given up the ghost,
 While they sought food for themselves to support their life.

tion if the words of the text will justify the sense in which they are rendered by the Syriac, Chaldee, Vulgate, and by our English translators.

Verse 15. Hath trodden the wine-vat in the virgin daughter of Judah—This metaphor is easily to be understood of causing such an effusion of blood in Jerusalem, as to resemble the treading of the juice out of the ripe grapes in vintage-time. See Isaiah lxiii. 2, 3 ; Rev. xiv. 20 ; xix. 15.

Verse 16. Mine eye—In the Hebrew text עֵינִי is repeated ; but in none of the ancient versions is it expressed more than once ; and four mss. omit it in the second instance. It seems also to encumber the metre. Perhaps אֲנִי may originally have followed בְּיָמֶיהָ, and been thus the ground of the transcriber's mistake.

Verse 17. Her hands—Five mss. read בִּידָהּ, and the Roman edition of the LXX. represents χείρα αὐτῆς, in the singular ; but the Alexandrian and Complutensian editions read χεῖρας.

JEHOVAH hath commanded concerning Jacob, &c.—That is, “by God’s command” it came to pass, that the surrounding nations were the adversaries of Jacob. This form of expression we meet with, Psalm lxviii. 11 : “The Lord gave the word, great was the company of those that published.”

Verse 19. While they sought food for themselves to support their life—The

- 20 Behold, O JEHOVAH, how I am distressed ; my bowels are troubled ;
My heart within me is turned upside down ; because I have greatly rebelled, Abroad a sword destroyeth, at home as it were death.
- 21 They heard how I sighed, there was none that comforted me ;
All mine enemies heard of my calamity, they rejoiced that thou hadst wrought it ;
Thou hast brought the day, thou hast pronounced, that they shall be even as I.
- 22 Let all their wickedness come before thee ; and deal thou with them,
As thou hast dealt with me for all my transgressions :
For my sighings are many, and my heart is faint.

LXX. and Syriac add, “and found none.” But no such words appear in the Hebrew copies, although the thing is implied ; for had they found what they sought, they would not have died.

Verse 20. As it were death—Meaning “the pestilence ;” see notes on Jer. xv. 2 ; xviii. 21. Death as it were acting in propria personâ ; and not by the instrumentality of another, as when a person is slain by the sword. So our great poet in his description of a lazear-house :—

Despair
Tended the sick busiest from couch to couch ;
And over them triumphant Death his dart Shook.

Paradise Lost, book xi., 489, &c.

Verse 21. They heard how I sighed, there was none that comforted me—שׁמַעו has no subject expressed ; but it is implied in the turn of the phrase, which seems to denote, that none of those who heard of his sighing came to bring him any comfort.

They rejoiced that thou hadst wrought it—See Jer. xlviii. 27 ; Ezek. xxv. 3, 6, &c. ; xxxv. 15 ; Obad. 12. Two MSS. for עשׂיהו read עשׂיהוה, supplying the affix ; but the ellipsis is quite conformable to the Hebrew idiom.

Thou hast brought the day, thou hast pronounced, &c.—We have here again the like turn of phrase as in the first line of this period ; for the meaning evidently is, that the enemies of Jerusalem would in the end find little cause for their triumph, since the same Almighty Being, who had caused her evil day to come, had declared that after a while they should also suffer the like fate : “Thou that hast brought the day (of adversity upon me) hast pronounced that they shall become even as I.”

CHAPTER II.

- 1 HOW doth JEHOVAH cloud with his anger the daughter of Sion !
He hath cast down from heaven to earth the glory of Israel ;
And hath not remembered his footstool in the day of his anger.
- 2 JEHOVAH hath swallowed up without pity all the pleasant places of Jacob ;
He hath thrown down in his wrath the strong holds of the daughter of Judah ;
He hath brought down to the ground, he hath profaned the kingdom and its princes.
- 3 He hath cut off in his fierce anger every horn of Israel ;
He hath turned back his right hand from the face of the enemy ;

CHAP. II.—THE prophet gives a melancholy detail of the dire effects of the divine anger in the subversion of both the civil and religious constitution of the Jews, and in that extreme wretchedness and distress to which individuals of every denomination were thereby reduced. He represents the misery of his country as without a parallel, and charges her prophets with having betrayed her into ruin by their false and flattering suggestions. He describes the astonishment of passengers on viewing the desolated condition of Jerusalem. They call out to her to implore God's compassion for the removal of those heavy judgments, which in the height of his displeasure he had brought upon her.

Verse 1. JEHOVAH—Twenty-four MSS. and two editions read יהוה here for אדני.

His footstool—The ark of the covenant is called "God's footstool," 1 Chron. xxviii. 2 ; Psalm xcix. 5 ; cxxxii. 7. And for this obvious reason, that when the glory of God appeared sitting as it were enthroned upon the mercy-seat between the cherubim, the ark below was as it were a base or footstool to the throne. See Exod. xxv. 21, 22 ; and Bishop Lowth's note on Isaiah lx. 13.

Verse 2. JEHOVAH—Sixteen MSS. and one edition here also read יהוה.

Without pity—לֹא חֶמֶל. The Masorettes, with thirty-three, perhaps thirty-six, MSS. and six editions, read וּלֹא. But the Asyndeton, we may observe, is much used in this species of verse at the half-pause, as BISHOP LOWTH styles it in his Preliminary Dissertation on Isaiah, p. xxxi. And the same in לֹא חֶמֶל occurs again, (verse 21,) where the Masorettes have made no correction, although the conjunction is expressed there also in several MSS. and editions.

The pleasant places—נְאוֹת, if derived from אוֹה, will signify either "places" or "things" that are the objects of desire.

Verse 3. He hath turned back his right hand—It is rather doubtful whose

And hath burned in Jacob like a flaming fire, which devoureth round about.

4 He hath bent his bow like an enemy, his right hand stood erect like an adversary,
And hath slain every youth, all that were desirable to the eye;
In the tent of the daughter of Sion hath he poured out his fury like fire.

5 JEHOVAH hath been as an enemy; he hath swallowed up Israel;
He hath swallowed up all his palaces, he hath destroyed his strong holds;
And hath multiplied in the daughter of Judah mourning and lamentation.

6 He hath also done violence to the garden of his own hedging; he hath destroyed his congregation; right hand is here intended; whether God's own right hand, his aid and assistance withheld from Israel; or the right hand of Israel himself, his exertions of strength rendered ineffectual by God, or turned away from obstructing or opposing the progress of the enemy. Both senses might be supported with authorities; and both would almost equally suit the context. But the latter, I think, rather preferable; just as God says, Jer. xxi. 4, that he would turn aside the weapons of war, which were in the hands of the Jews, so as to prevent their hindering the Chaldean army from entering the city.

Verse 4. And hath slain every youth, all that were desirable to the eye—The words כל-יָנוּעַר, “every youth,” are not found at present in the Hebrew text, but are necessary to the metre at least, and are supplied from the Chaldee Paraphrase, where they have been preserved. See BISHOP LOWTH'S Preliminary Dissertation on Isaiah, p. 31 in the note.

Verse 5. JEHOVAH—Eighteen MSS. and one edition here read יְהוָה.

Verse 6. As it were the garden of his own hedging—Though שָׂכָו has been generally supposed to be meant for סָכָו, and is so written in twenty-two MSS., and סִיכָו, in five others, and is also in all the ancient versions, as well as in our English Bibles, rendered, “his tabernacle,” or tent; it seems rather to be a verb of the infinitive mood with the pronoun affix, used as a noun. שִׂיךְ signifies to “hedge,” or “fence,” by way of security, Job i. 10. And the garden of God's own hedging answers to his vineyard which he had fenced and hedged about, Isaiah v. 2, 5. The LXX. instead of כִּנָּה, “as the garden,” seem to have read כִּנְפִין, ὡς ἀμπέλων, “as the vine.” Compare Psalm lxxx. 8, &c.

His congregation—For כְּעֶרֶךְ sixty MSS. and one edition read כְּעֶרְךָ, at large. I rather take the congregation of JEHOVAH to be intended, than the place of their assembly; in which latter sense כְּעֶרְךָ is seldom, if ever,

JEHOVAH hath forgotten in Sion the solemn feast and the sabbath ;

And hath treated with scorn in the indignation of his anger the king and the priest.

7 JEHOVAH hath rejected his altar, his sanctuary is accursed ;
He hath delivered up into the hand of the enemy the walls of its palaces ;

They have lifted up the voice in the house of JEHOVAH, as on a solemn feast day.

8 JEHOVAH hath purposed to destroy the wall of the daughter of Sion ;

He hath stretched out a line, he hath not withdrawn his hand from demolishing ; used. But the congregation of JEHOVAH was the people of Israel, the same garden, or vineyard, which he had heretofore kept under his special protection.

Hath forgotten—Our translators render, “hath caused to be forgotten,” as if they had read השכח. But שכח in Kal signifies simply, “hath forgotten ;” that is, “he holds those services no longer in esteem, but slight and disregards them.” Compare Isaiah i. 14, 15.

Verse 7. JEHOVAH—Here again, twenty-eight mss. and two editions read יהוה instead of אדני ; and one ms. reads both, יהוה אדני.

Is accursed—So נאָר signifies in Niphal from אָרר to “curse.” But the LXX. here render ἀπερρωξεν, which renders it not improbable, that the true reading may have been נער ; and we have often observed the א and ע to be interchangeably used by mistake. See נער, used, Neh. v. 13, in a sense which would not ill suit this place, and Psalm lxxxix. 40 ; the only places where נאָר occurs as a verb. It also deserves notice, that נער is used in Pihel, both Neh. v. 13, and also Exod. xiv. 27 ; Psalm cxxxvi. 15, and that in the latter of these texts nineteen mss. and one edition read וניער, the ו standing in the place of the vowel. And in like manner ניאָר is found in one ms. here, and in seven mss., ניאָר, Psalm lxxxix. 40. So that if this emendation of the text be admitted, we may render, “He hath shaken off his sanctuary.”

The walls—For חומת sixteen, perhaps seventeen, mss. and three editions read חומות, and nine mss. read חמות. The LXX. render in the singular number, τεῖχος.

They have lifted up the voice—That is, the enemies triumphed in the desolation of the temple with as loud a noise as the people were wont to make there in celebrating the praises of God on a solemn festival. Compare Psalm lxxiv. 4.

Verse 8. He hath stretched out a line—Called emphatically, קו־תהו, “the line of devastation,” Isaiah xxxiv. 11 ; being designed to mark out the extent of what was to be pulled down.

But he hath made the rampart and wall to mourn, they languished together.

- 9 Her gates are sunk into the earth ; he hath destroyed and broken her bars ;
Her king and her princes are among the heathen ; there is no law ;
Her prophets also have found no vision from JEHOVAH.
- 10 The elders of the daughter of Sion sit upon the ground, they keep silence ;
They have put dust upon their heads, they have girded on sackcloth ;
The virgins of Jerusalem hung down their heads to the ground.
- 11 Mine eyes are wasted in tears, my bowels are troubled ;
My liver is poured out upon the ground because of the breach of the daughter of my people,
While the young child and the suckling are overwhelmed in the broad places of the city.
- 12 To their mothers they say, Where is corn and wine ?
While they swoon as one wounded in the broad places of the city,
While their soul glideth away in their mothers' bosom.

Verse 9. Are sunk—Seventy-six MSS. and eight editions read שָׁבְעוּ ; which the Masoretic editors have written with a ש of a smaller size than the rest of the letters. The ש, it should seem, had by some accident been lost in the copies they revised ; and though both the sense and the alphabetical order of the initials required it, they were scrupulous of restoring it without some mark of their doubting concerning its authenticity.

Verse 10. They keep silence—The Syriac version favours וידמו ; the other ancient interpreters seem to have read דמו. I construe both ידמו and דמו in the present tense, as denoting the same posture and silence continued.

Verse 11. My liver is poured out upon the ground—That the mental passions have a considerable influence upon the habit of the body in various instances, is a fact not to be questioned. And experience daily shows, that a violent uneasiness of mind tends greatly to promote a redundancy and overflowing of vitiated bile. The liver is the proper seat of the bile, where its secretions are carried on. Hence the prophet's meaning in this place seems to be, that he felt as if his whole liver was dissolved, and carried off in bile, on account of the copious discharge brought on by continual vexation and fretting. Job expresses the same thing, when he says, xvi. 13, " He poureth out my gall upon the ground."

- 13      What shall I urge to thee? what shall I liken unto thee, O daughter of Jerusalem?
 Wherewith shall I compare thee, so as to comfort thee, O virgin daughter of Sion?
 Surely thy breach is wide like the sea; who can heal thee?
- 14      Thy prophets have prophesied to thee that which is vain and absurd;
 For they have not laid open to thee thine iniquity, to bring back thy captivity,
 But they have prophesied to thee burthens of vanity, even after they were cast out.

Verse 13. What shall I urge to thee?—Sixty-eight, perhaps seventy, MSS. and eight editions read, with the Masora, אַעוֹרֵךְ for אַעֲוִירֵךְ. It signifies making a solemn asseveration of what one knows to be true.

Thy breach is wide like the sea—For כַּיָּם, “like the sea,” the LXX. appear to have read כוֹס, ποτήριον, “the cup.” And as a cup is used to denote any allotment of divine providence, whether good or bad; so כוֹס שְׁבִירָךְ, “the cup of thy destruction,” would mean, “the destruction allotted thee.” But כַּיָּם is the more probable reading, being justified by all the Hebrew copies, and by the rest of the ancient versions; and שְׁבִירָךְ, signifying “the breach,” or wound, which Jerusalem had received, is by an Hyperbole said to be “great,” deep, or wide, “like the sea,” which is, as it were, a breach made in the earth.

Verse 14. For they have not laid open to thee—For עַל, the Syriac seems to have preserved the true reading, לֵךְ. And the last word in the next line, מְדוּחִים, I conceive not to be a noun, as it is generally represented by interpreters, but the participle preter in Pyhal from דָּחָה, to “thrust” or “cast out.” In the preceding verse the prophet condoled with his country on the breach made in her, asking, “Who shall heal thee?” In this verse he answers the question negatively, “Not thy prophets, who have taught thee nothing solid or to the purpose.” חֲפֵל is rendered, “untempered mortar,” Ezek. xiii. 10, 11; and both there and here denotes a teaching deficient in that due seasoning of truth and plain dealing, which alone could render it adequate to any useful or salutary purpose. For, continues the prophet, they have not laid open to thy view thy sinfulness, the true cause of the evil brought upon thee, as they ought to have done, in order to point out the proper cure by repentance and amendment; but they have amused thee with burdens of delusion, false and fallacious prophecies, and that even after, as well as before, their exile. See Jer. xxix. 8, &c. מִשָּׂא, “a burden,” usually signifies a prophecy of a calamitous import. See note on Jer. xxiii. 33. But in this place מִשָּׂא, immediately following וְהָיָה, seems rather to denote the contents of the burdens to be vanity and delusion.

- 15 All that passed by the way have smitten their hands together at thee,
They hissed and shook their head at the daughter of Jerusalem, saying,
Is this the city that they call Perfect in beauty, The delight of the whole earth?
- 16 All thine enemies have opened their mouths against thee;
They hissed and gnashed the teeth; they said, We have swallowed her up;

Verse 15. Perfect in beauty, the delight of the whole earth—See Psalm xlviii. 2; 1. 2. It was at least a pardonable partiality in the Jews, which led them to bestow these encomiums upon their capital, and to suppose that all strangers would be equally delighted with its beauty as they themselves were.

Verses 16, 17. In these verses the alphabetical order of the initials is inverted, א coming before ע; and the same occurs in the two following chapters. Grotius's conjecture on this head is not very satisfactory; namely, that the Chaldeans may possibly have ranged their letters differently from the Hebrews; and that in the first chapter Jeremiah wrote as an Hebrew, but in the three following as a subject of the Chaldeans, conforming himself to their usage. Now, admitting what I think is without proof, that the Chaldean alphabet was ranged differently from the Hebrew; and that Jeremiah was more of a Chaldean subject, when he wrote the second, third, and fourth chapters, than when he wrote the first, which also I very much doubt of; yet what a ridiculous obligation is he here supposed to lie under, of disposing the lines of his Hebrew elegies in a new order, in consequence of his living under a new government? On the other hand Houbigant is of opinion, that the order of the verses was originally the same in all the chapters, but disturbed by the subsequent mistake of the transcriber, proceeding from a cause which did not affect the first, but extended alike to the other three chapters in succession. Accordingly, in the Syriac version, the customary order of the alphabet takes place uniformly in all the chapters. And some few mss. affect the like transposition, not indeed with the same uniformity throughout all the chapters, but severally, some in one, and some in another. But the probability of such transposition must depend on the relation which the verses bear to each other, and to those which precede and follow, in point of sense and connexion. And, although in this present chapter the change might take place, perhaps without any apparent inconvenience, I question whether this would be altogether the case in the two following. It seems, therefore, most advisable not to introduce any alteration without better grounds, however unable we may be to discover the motives that led to the present arrangement.

Verse 16. We have swallowed her up—The LXX. and Syriac appear to have read בלענוה with the affix, instead of בלענו.

Surely this is the day which we looked for, we have found,
we have seen it.

- 17      JEHOVAH hath accomplished that which he had devised, he hath fulfilled his word ;
What he constituted in days of old, he hath destroyed,
         and not spared ;
But he hath caused an enemy to rejoice over thee, he hath exalted the horn of thine adversaries.

- 18      Their heart cried out, Before JEHOVAH with fervency, O daughter of Sion,
Let tears run down like a torrent day and night ;
Give thyself no rest, let not the daughter of thine eye stand still.

Which we looked for—For שקוינורו, nineteen mss. and one edition, the most ancient, read more perfectly, שקוינורו.

Verse 17. What he constituted in days of old, he hath destroyed—To this construction we are determined by the metre. The sense is good, and perfectly adapted to the place ; and corresponds nearly with what is expressed, Jer. xlv. 4.

Verse 18. Their heart cried out, Before JEHOVAH, &c.—The same are the speakers here, who are said to have made the foregoing remarks concerning the distressed condition of Jerusalem ; namely, the passengers, verse 15, whose heart, being deeply affected with what they saw, urged them to break forth into the following passionate exclamation addressed to the daughter of Sion. All the ancient versions, and most of the modern, our English ones in particular, have agreed in rendering חומה, “wall,” or “walls.” But give it this signification, and, as Houbigant justly observes, construct it afterwards in the sentence as you please, it will not be easy to make out any tolerable sense with it. But without changing the word, (which is what Houbigant proposes to do,) חומה (or חמת, as it is read in four mss., one a pretty ancient one) may be an adjective, or adverb, from חם, “to be warm,” and may denote that fervour of spirit, that warmth of feeling, with which the daughter of Sion is exhorted to shower down her tears before God, to move his compassion, and deprecate his severe judgments. For ארני, no less than forty-three mss. here read יחיה.

Let not the daughter of thine eye stand still—By “the daughter of thine eye,” I here understand “the tear,” and not “the pupil, or apple of the eye ;” although it is usually interpreted in the latter sense, because אישון, which, indeed, means “the pupil,” seems to be called “the daughter of the eye,” בת-עין, Psalm xvii. 8. But perhaps we ought there to read, as in one mss., בית-עין, “within the eye,” or in the socket of it. “Keep me as safe and secure, as the pupil in the socket of the eye.” But “the tear” may, with great propriety and elegance, be called, “the daughter of the eye,” from which it issues.

19 Arise, cry aloud in the night, at the beginning of the watches ;

Pour out thine heart like water before the face of JEHOVAH ;
Lift up thy hands unto him for the life of thy young children,

That faint for hunger at the head of all the streets, saying,

20 Behold, O JEHOVAH, and consider with whom thou hast dealt thus.

Shall women devour the fruit of the womb, little ones dandled on the hands ?

Verse 19. In the night—For בליל, forty-one, perhaps forty-five, MSS. and three editions read, with the Masora, בלילה.

Before the face of JEHOVAH—Thirty-nine MSS. and two editions, for פני יהוה, read פני אדני.

At the head of all the streets—This phrase occurs, chapter iv. 1 ; Isaiah li. 20 ; Nahum iii. 10 ; and perhaps signifies, “at the extremity of the streets” at either end. Here we have a supernumerary line, as before, chapter i. 7. See note there.

Verse 20. Shall women devour the fruit of the womb, little ones dandled on the hands ?—All the versions and interpreters in general understand this passage of the fulfilling of the curse denounced, Lev. xxvi. 29 ; Deut. xxviii. 53, 56, 57, by women eating their own children, through distress of famine, during the siege of Jerusalem. But, in that case, instead of פרים, we ought to read פריהן, as we do ילדיהן, chapter iv. 10. Houbigant, indeed, questions whether, in scripture language, it would be tolerable to use “the fruit of a woman,” for “the fruit of her womb.” But פריהן, “their fruit,” is used, Psalm xxi. 11, for “their children,” or “progeny,” without any other addition. The LXX., Chaldee, and Arabic, however, in this place, furnish a word expressive of “the womb,” and render, “the fruit of their womb ;” which induces me to think that, most probably, the true reading may have been פרי רחם, instead of פרים ; in which case we should render, “Shall women devour the fruit of the womb ?” טפח signifies, “the distended or open palm of the hand.” Hence, we have a verb טפחו, verse 22, which the Rabbins interpret of the women “stroking and smoothing the limbs of new-born children,” when they swaddle them ; but, I conceive, may as well denote “the carrying of them upon the open palms of their hands,” in nursing ; and, accordingly, עללי טפחים, “children of palms,” may signify, such as are of an age or size to be so carried about. Thirty-six, perhaps thirty-seven, MSS. and two editions read טפוחים ; which, however, would make no great difference ; for טפוח might signify the act of carrying the children in such a manner ; and so עללי טפוחים would be, “little ones accustomed to such sort of gestation.” But נשים does not always signify “women,” properly so called, but is sometimes used metaphorically for “weak and effeminate persons,” as Isaiah iii. 12 ; xix. 16 ; (I think, also, xxvii. 11 ; ) Jer. l. 37 ; li. 30 ; Nahum iii. 13. Jerusalem may, therefore, here be understood to expostulate, “Shall Shall the priest and the prophet be slain in the sanctuary of Jehovah?

- 21 The boy and the old man have lien on the ground in the streets ;
My virgins and my young men are fallen, with the sword
hast thou slain them ;
In the day of thine anger thou hast killed, thou hast shewed no mercy.
- 22 Thou hast convoked, as on a set day, such as were strangers to me round about,
So that there was not in the day of JEHOVAH's anger one that escaped and was left ;

the weakest and most dastardly of my enemies destroy the fruit of the womb, infants of the tenderest age?" Other ages and conditions are afterwards specified as involved in the general ruin; the priest and the prophet, the boy and the old man, the maidens and young men.

In the sanctuary of JEHOVAH—For אֲדֹנָי thirty-nine mss. and four editions read יהוה.

Verse 21. My virgins and my young men are fallen ; with the sword hast thou slain them—The metre evidently requires this division of the lines, supposing the text to be right as it stands at present. It deserves notice, however, that the LXX. (who have likewise construed הָרַגָה with בָּהָרַב) seem, in the place of נָפְלוּ, to have read הָלַכּוּ בַשִּׁבְיָ, επορευθησαν εν αιχμαλωσια. One ms. reads הָלַכּוּ בַשִּׁבְיָ נָפְלוּ. But if all these words are genuine, I conceive that the two former ought to come immediately after בָּחֻלֹתִי, and the latter, נָפְלוּ, after וּבָחֻרִי; thus distinguishing between the fate of the virgins who are said to be gone into captivity, and that of the young men of an age to bear arms, who fell by the sword in battle. In this case the lines would run thus :—

My virgins are gone into captivity, and my young men are fallen by the sword ;
Thou hast slain in the day of thine anger, thou hast killed without mercy.

Thou hast shewed no mercy—Thirty-nine mss. and four editions, with the Syriac, Chaldee, and Vulgate, read וְלֹא-חֲמִלָה, "And hast shewed no mercy." See note on verse 2.

Verse 22. Thou hast convoked—For תִּקְרָא the LXX. appear to have read קָרָא; but the Syriac, קָרָא, which latter must certainly be the true reading, as the sense and context require. It is probable that a transcriber, having repeated the ת which is at the end of the preceding word, found his mistake when he came to the end of this word, but chose rather to omit the ת there than deface his ms. with a blot; a niceness to which those professional writers have too often sacrificed the integrity of the text.

Such as were strangers to me—מִבְּגֵרִי properly signifies, "my sojournings;" people among whom I was a stranger and foreigner, when I came

Those whom I had fostered and made to grow were all of them mine enemies.

CHAPTER III.

- 1 I AM the man that hath seen affliction by the rod of his wrath ;
- 2 Me hath he led, and caused to go in darkness, and not light ;

into their country, as, of course, they were the like in respect to me. All these nations round about being assembled against Jerusalem at one time, as if a day had been fixed for the purpose, prevented, as it follows in the next line, the escape of almost a single individual.

Those whom I had fostered, &c.—אֲשֶׁר טִפַּחְתִּי. See note on verse 20. כָּלם, “Were all of them mine enemies.” Most of the ancient interpreters, as well as the modern, have rendered כָּלם as the verb with the affix plural, “have” or “bath consumed them ;” but כָּלם, I think, may better be understood of all those foreign nations who had risen and flourished, in a great measure, through the fostering care and protection of the kingdom of Judah, but who had ungratefully returned the kindness, by declaring against it in the time of its distress.

CHAP. III. IN this chapter the prophet seems to have had it in view to instruct his countrymen in the lesson of bearing themselves well under adversity. To this end he first of all sets himself forth as an example of the most severe and trying afflictions. He then points out the inexhaustible mercies of God as the never-failing source of his consolation and hope ; and exhorts others to patience and quiet resignation under the like circumstances ; showing that God is ever gracious to those that wait on him ; that he is prone to pardon and pity, and takes no delight in afflicting mankind ; but turns away with disgust from all acts of oppression and malignant cruelty. He asserts the divine supremacy in the dispensations of good and evil ; and argues, that no man has a right to complain when he is punished according to his deserts. He therefore recommends it to his fellow-sufferers, to examine themselves, and turn to God with contrite hearts, sincerely deploring the sinfulness of their conduct, which had provoked the divine justice to treat them with such extraordinary severity. He professeth himself deeply affected with the calamities of his country ; but, calling to mind the desperate circumstances from which he had heretofore been rescued by the divine aid, he declareth his hope that the same good providence will frustrate the malice of his present enemies, and turn the scornful reproach they had cast upon him to their own confusion.

Verse 1. That hath seen affliction—To “see” is often used by the Hebrew writers for to “feel,” “taste,” or “have experimental knowledge” of any thing. See Psalm xlix. 9 ; lxxxix. 48 ; xc. 15 ; Jer. xiv. 13 ; xvii. 6, 8 ; Luke ii. 26.

Verse 2. Caused to go in darkness—The LXX. express ב before אֲשֶׁךְ, as

- 3 Against me only hath he sitten, and turned again his hand all the day long.
- 4 He hath brought to decay my flesh and my skin, he hath broken my bones ;
- 5 He hath built upon me, and encompassed my head, so that it is weary ;
- 6 In the midst of darkness hath he caused me to dwell, as those that have been dead of long time.

if they had read בִּחְשֵׁךְ וּלְךָ, eis skotos ; but the ellipsis is elsewhere to be met with after יֵלֶךְ. See Prov. x. 9. Darkness is a common emblem of distress, as light is of prosperity.

Verse 3. Against me only hath he sitten, &c.—The generality of interpreters deduce יָשַׁב שׁוּב, and no less than sixty-three mss. and three editions read יֵשׁוּב; I conceive, notwithstanding, that יָשַׁב is right, and not יֵשׁוּב; and that it is the preter verb, “he hath sitten,” which denotes a continuance or perseverance in doing any thing. See Psalm l. 20 ; cxix. 23 : In which two cited places we may observe, that the verb which follows is without any copulative, in like manner as we find here. The Chaldee also renders יָתוּב. The particle אֵךְ seems to imply, as if the prophet represented God intent upon nothing so much as a continued repetition of the same harsh and afflictive treatment of him.

Verse 5. He hath built upon me, and encompassed my head, so that it is weary—The Syriac and Vulgate, and the generality of interpreters besides, ancient and modern, are inclined to render רָאשׁ, “gall,” or “hemlock,” a bitter weed sometimes used metaphorically to denote affliction and misery, as verse 19. But the coupling together of a metaphorical and a proper term is neither usual nor elegant; for which reason, though we find לַעֲנָה וְרָאשׁ, “wormwood and gall,” sometimes joined together, that will not justify the use of רָאשׁ וְתִלְאָה, “gall and travail,” The LXX. render, κεφαλὴν μου, by which it should seem they read רָאשׁ; and one ms. is found to have preserved the ’, though transposed, reading רֵאשׁ. I cannot help thinking that this reading of the LXX. is the true one; and not only so, but that they have rightly represented וְתִלְאָה as a verb, καὶ ἐμοχθησεν. The obvious objection to this is, that רָאשׁ generally occurs as a masculine noun, but תִּלְאָה is a verb in the feminine. But it may be answered, that the other members and parts of the animal body are of the common gender, so as to be found sometimes masculine and sometimes feminine; and why the same may not be the case with the head, I know not. Few instances occur in the Hebrew where the gender of רָאשׁ is discernible; but, in the present, there would be good reason for preferring the feminine gender, supposing the choice free, in order to obviate the ambiguity of the subject.

Verse 6. In the midst of darkness hath he caused me to dwell—See Psalm cxliii. 3. As darkness has before been observed to be an emblem of distress, verse 2, so the plural number seems to denote an intenseness of degree. See in like manner בְּמַרְוֵרִים, verse 15. The meaning here appears to be, that God had involved him in such a depth of distress, that he was

- 7 He hath hedged me round about, that I cannot get forth; he hath made my chain heavy;
- 8 Yea, when I cry and call aloud, he hath obstructed my prayer;
- 9 He hath blocked up my way with hewn stone; my paths hath he distorted.
- 10 A bear lying in wait hath he been to me, a lion in lurking places;
- 11 He hath turned full upon me, and hath torn me; he hath made me desolate;
- 12 He hath bent his bow, and set me up as it were a butt for the arrow.
- 13 He hath caused the issue of his quiver to enter into my reins;
- 14 I have been a laughing stock to all my people, their music all the day long;

as incapable of extricating himself, as those who had lain long in the dark mansions of the dead were of making their escape thence.

Verse 8. He hath obstructed—For שָׁתַם, eighteen mss. and the oldest edition read סָתַם. “He hath even barred my prayer from approaching him.”

Verse 9. He hath blocked up my way with hewn stone, my paths hath he distorted—That is, he hath put an insuperable obstacle in my way, as if he had built a stone wall across, so as to oblige me to turn aside from the direct road; by which means I am puzzled and at a loss how to proceed, like a man whose journey lies through crooked and intricate paths. Compare Job xix. 8.

Verse 10. A lion—For אַרִיָה, thirty mss. and two editions read, with the Masora, אַרִי.

Verse 11. He hath turned full upon me—סוּרָר or סוּרֵר is applied, Hosea iv. 16, to a refractory heifer, that turns aside, and will not go forward in the straight track, as she is directed. Here it is to be understood of a bear or lion turning aside toward a traveller, to fall upon him in his way.

Verse 13. The issue of his quiver—Literally, “the sons of his quiver,” his arrows. An Hebraism.

“Verse 14. עָמִי. Non loquitur propheta, sed Judæus quivis, vel, judice Lowthio, chorus Judæorum, quos non est verisimile derisos fuisse a popularibus suis. Legendum igitur עָמִים, vel intelligendum עָמִי poni pro עָמִים, ut Ps. cxliv. 2; Mic. vi. 16. Et sic quidem hic Syr. Nec obstat quod idem filiam populi sui plorat, ver. 48.”—SECKER. But see my opinion of the person that speaks, in the introductory note of this chapter.

Their music—נְגִינָתָם. This is commonly rendered “their song;” but I

- 15 He hath given me my fill of bitters, he hath made me drunk with wormwood.
- 16 He hath also broken my teeth with grit, he hath laid me low in ashes ;
- 17 And my soul was removed far from peace, I forgot prosperity ;
- 18 Then I said, JEHOVAH hath caused my strength and my hope to fail.
- 19 The remembrance of mine affliction and mine abasement is wormwood and gall ;
- 20 My soul cannot but remember, and sinketh within me.
- 21 This I revolve in my heart, therefore will I have hope ;
- 22 The mercies of JEHOVAH, that they are not exhausted, that they fail not ;

rather think it means a subject upon which they played, as upon a musical instrument, for their diversion. See verse 63 ; chapter v. 14 ; Job xxx. 9.

Verse 16. He hath laid me low in ashes—The verb כָּפַשׁ occurs nowhere else in the Hebrew, but all the ancient versions seem to have considered הִכְפִּישָׁנִי as the same with הִכְבִּישָׁנִי, which the LXX. and Vulgate render, “hath fed me,” ἐξέφαυσέ με, cibavit me ; as if from כָּבַשׁ came the Latin word cibus. But the usual signification of כָּבַשׁ is, to “reduce” or “bring down” a person to any low condition ; and, accordingly, as sitting or lying in ashes was customary in great affliction, so הִכְפִּישָׁנִי בָאֶפֶר may be understood, “he hath laid me low, or made me wallow, in ashes,” because of great sorrow and grief. In this condition the grit or ashes would naturally get between the teeth, and be offensive to them.

Verse 18. JEHOVAH hath caused my strength and my hope to fail—Literally, “My strength and my hope have failed through, or by means of, JEHOVAH.” נִצָּחִי, “my strength,” seems to imply whatever there is in me, by virtue of which I am in any degree of perfection and excellence. See TAYLOR’S Concordance. So that the prophet hereby means to say, that God had at once put an end to all his present good and future expectations.

Verse 19. Mine abasement—וּמְרוּדִי. See note on chapter i. 7.

Verse 20. My soul cannot but remember—Literally, “remembering it remembereth.”

Verse 21. This I revolve in my heart—Here the prophet begins to suggest the motives of patience and consolation.

Therefore will I have hope—One MS. reads אוֹחִיל לוֹ ; “I will hope in him ;” and another has two letters erased at the end of אוֹחִיל. The Syriac also countenances לוֹ. But no alteration seems necessary.

Verse 22. They are not exhausted—For תִּמְנוּ, one MS. reads תָּמְנוּ ; and all the ancient versions, except the Vulgate, render in the third person. Grotius supposes the ך may be epenthetically inserted.

- 23 New are his compassions every morning ; great is thy faithfulness ;
- 24 My portion is JEHOVAH, saith my soul, therefore will I hope in him.
- 25 JEHOVAH is gracious unto him that waiteth for him, to the soul that seeketh him ;
- 26 He is gracious, therefore let him wait with silent hope for the salvation of JEHOVAH ;
- 27 He is gracious unto a man, when he beareth the yoke in his youth.
- 28 Let him sit alone and be silent, when it is laid upon him ;
- 29 Let him lay his mouth in the dust, if peradventure there be hope ;
- 30 Let him present his cheek to the smiter, let him be filled full with reproach.
- 31 For JEHOVAH will not cast off for ever ;
- 32 But though he afflict, he will also pity according to the multitude of his mercies ;

Verse 23. New are his compassions—For רחמי, eighty-four mss. and seven editions read, with the Masora, רחמי, which is also confirmed by all the ancient versions. But the metre plainly shows רחמי to belong to this verse, which without it would be defective ; and the preceding verse would be produced by it to too great a length. It cannot, however, begin the verse, because of the initial letter ; we must, therefore, suppose a transposition, and that we ought to read רחמי רחמי.

Verse 25. Unto him that waiteth for him—Ten mss. and one edition read in the plural, לקוי, in conformity with the LXX., Chaldee, and Vulgate. Also four mss. and one edition read לקויי. But, with the Syriac, I prefer the present reading לקוי, in the singular number.

Verse 26. Let him wait with silent hope—Literally, “ Let him wait, or hope, and be silent.” For יחיל, thirteen mss. read יחל, which, I think, is right.

Verse 29. This verse is wanting in the LXX. version.

Verse 30. Let him be filled full with reproach—Fifteen mss. and one edition read יישבע, with the conjunction.

Verse 31. JEHOVAH—The ancient Bodleian ms., N<sup>o</sup>. 1, and one other ms., read יהוה אדני. Thirty-five mss. and two editions read only יהוה, which seems most conformable to the ancient versions. The Chaldee adds the word עבדי, “ his servants,” after יונה ; but is seconded by no other authority.

Verse 32. His mercies—Sixty-eight mss. and seven editions read, with the Masora, חסדי.

33 For he taketh no satisfaction in afflicting or grieving the sons of men.

34 To crush under his feet all the prisoners of the land,

35 To turn aside the judgment of a man before the face of a superior,

Verses 34–36. In these verses certain acts of tyranny, malice, and injustice are specified, which men often indulge themselves in the practice of one towards another; but which the divine goodness is far from countenancing or approving by any similar conduct.

Verse 34. To crush under his feet all the prisoners of the land—By “the prisoners of the land” I am persuaded are meant the poor insolvent debtors, whom their creditors among the Jews, as well as among other nations, were empowered to cast into prison, and oblige them to work out the debt; a power too often exerted with great rigour and inhumanity. See Matt. xviii. 30, 34. The sufferings of these persons seem to be alluded to, Isaiah lviii. 3, where the people asking with surprise, why their voluntary fastings and acts of self-mortification were so little noticed and regarded by God, receive for answer, that while they laid themselves under restraint in one point, they indulged their vicious passions and inclinations of different kinds, and showed not that forbearance in their treatment of others, which they hoped to experience at the hand of God. This is clearly the general scope of the reply, but the precise meaning of the terms, כל-עצביכם הנגשו, has not, I think, been sufficiently explained. Our old English version renders עצביכם, “your dettes;” our translation in present use, “your labours;” and Bishop Lowth, “your demands of labour.” But none of these, I think, reach the true and proper sense of עצבים, how near soever they approach to the general meaning of the passage. The LXX. render עצביכם, ἀποχευομενους υμῶν, “those who are subject to, or are in, your power;” Symmachus and Theodotion, ἀποχεως υμῶν, according to Jerome, who professes to follow them in rendering, et debitores vestros repetitis.

Grotius observes, that in Arabic عصب signifies ligare; and thence עצבים, obligati. Now from all this it may be concluded, that עצבים are no other than those who are called in the Roman jurisprudence nexi, that is, persons delivered up for insolvency to serve their creditors under confinement, till they had made full satisfaction by their labour for the debt, and, consequently, the same as אסירי ארץ. In this case הנגשו may most properly be rendered, “ye oppress;” for נגש signifies to “oppress,” particularly by compelling to hard labour. See TAYLOR’S Concordance. In exact correspondency with which it is required, as a means of rendering their fasts acceptable, that they should “take off the burdens of the yoke, and let the oppressed wretches, רצוצים, go free.” (Isaiah lviii. 6.)

Verse 35. To turn aside the judgment of a man before the face of a superior—עלין properly signifies “a superior,” one exalted above others. It is often put for God, “the Most High,” who is above all. But here it cannot be so. For though a person may be made to suffer greatly by having his judgment turned aside, that is, by being calumniated and misrepresented

- 36 To subvert a man in his cause, JEHOVAH seeth not.
- 37 Who is he that hath spoken, and it hath come to pass, when JEHOVAH commanded not?
- 38 Doth not good and evil proceed at the command of the most High?
- 39 Wherefore should a living man complain, a man on account of his suffering for sin?
- 40 Let us search and examine our ways, and let us return unto JEHOVAH;
- 41 Let us lift up our hearts with our hands unto God in the heavens, saying,

before an earthly superior, yet all such malicious attempts must fail and come to nothing, where God is the judge, who cannot be so deceived or imposed on. עלין must, therefore, be understood here of an earthly superior.

Verse 36. To subvert a man in his cause—That is, to prevent his having justice done him in a law-suit or controversy by any undue interference; as by bearing or suborning false witness, or exerting any kind of influence in opposition to truth and right.

JEHOVAH seeth not—For אדני, seventeen MSS. read יהוה. As “to see” often, in scripture, connotes approbation and complacency; so here, by “not seeing,” is meant that God disapproves and dislikes such conduct as is before specified, turning his face away as a mark of disgust and abhorrence, and refusing to have any thing to do with it. So it is said, Hab. i. 13, “Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil; and canst not look on iniquity.”

Verse 37. JEHOVAH—Twenty-two MSS. and one edition read יהוה instead of אדני.

Verse 39. Wherefore should a living man complain, a man, &c.—There seems to be a peculiar emphasis laid on the words חי and גבר in this passage. גבר is said to denote “a man,” because of his excellence and superiority over all other earthly beings. Whilst a man, therefore, lives, and is possessed of those privileges of his nature, whatever else he undergoes must be less than his sins have deserved, because death, which implies the loss of all those privileges, is the allotted wages of sin.

His suffering for sin—Forty MSS. and four editions read, with the Masora, חטאיו, “his sins.” But חטאו is unexceptionable, as the verb חטא signifies not only to “sin,” but to “suffer for it.” See Bishop Lowth on Isaiah xl. 2. Taken in this sense, חטאו is the infinitive mood used as a noun with the affix. The LXX. and Chaldee apparently read חטאו.

Verse 40. Unto JEHOVAH—For ער five MSS. read אל.

Verse 41. Our hearts—For לבבנו thirty-one MSS. and two editions read לבבני, which agrees with all the ancient versions.

- 42 We have transgressed and rebelled ; thou hast not pardoned ;
- 43 Thou hast fenced in with anger, and chased us ; thou hast killed, thou hast not spared ;
- 44 Thou hast fenced with a cloud round about thee, that prayer may not pass through ;
- 45 An offscouring and refuse hast thou made us in the midst of the peoples.
- 46 All our enemies have opened their mouths against us ;
- 47 The terror and the pit have been upon us, desolation and destruction.
- 48 Mine eye poureth down streams of water because of the destruction of the daughter of my people.
- 49 Mine eye trickleth down, and ceaseth not, so that it hath no intervals of rest,
- 50 Until JEHOVAH look down, and regard from heaven :
- 51 Mine eye worketh trouble to my soul because of all the daughters of my city.

Verse 42. Thou hast not pardoned—Four mss. read ואתה with the conjunction, which is also expressed in the LXX., Syriac, Vulgate, and Arabic.

Verse 43. Thou hast fenced about with anger—סביתה. The verb סנך appears to have this sense, Job iii. 23 ; x. 11 ; xxxviii. 8. There seems to be a manifest allusion to the manner of hunting wild beasts by surrounding at first a large tract of country with toils, which the beasts could not break through ; and these being drawn in by degrees, the beasts were driven into a narrower space, where they were massacred with darts and javelins at the will of the hunters. See Bishop Lowth's note on Isaiah xxiv. 17, 18.

————— Sic curva feras indugo latentes

Claudii, et admotis paulatim cassibus arcat.

STATIUS, Achill. l. 459.

Thou hast not spared—Thirty-five mss. and three editions read ולא with the conjunction. So the Alexandrian copy of the LXX., the Syriac, Chaldee, Arabic, and Vulgate. See note on chapter ii. 2.

Verses 46–48. According to alphabetical order these verses should follow verses 49–51, and they are so disposed in the Syriac version, and in two mss. But the 46th and 47th verses seem to have so natural a connection with those that now immediately precede them, as not to suffer a transposition. See what was before observed in note on chapter ii. 16, 17.

Verse 47. The terror and the pit—See Jer. xlviii. 43, and note there.

Verse 48. In this and the three following verses the prophet shows the misfortunes of his country to constitute no small part of his personal affliction.

Verse 51. The daughters of my city—Probably the lesser cities and towns dependent on the metropolis are hereby meant. See Jer. xlix. 2.

- 52 They that are mine enemies without cause hunted me down like a bird ;
- 53 They cut off my life in the pit, they lifted a stone upon me ;
- 54 Waters flowed over my head ; I said, I am cut off :
- 55 I called upon thy name, O JEHOVAH, out of the dungeon
beneath ;
- 56 Thou heardest my voice, which said, Hide not thine ear from my relief at my cry ;
- 57 Thou drewest near in the day I called upon thee, thou saidst, Fear not.
- 58 Thou didst plead, O JEHOVAH, the causes of my soul, thou redeemedst my life.
- 59 Thou hast seen, O JEHOVAH, the injustice done me ; assert thou my right :
- 60 Thou hast seen all their revenge, all their devices against me.
- 61 Thou hast heard their reproach, O JEHOVAH, all their devices against me,

Verse 52. They that are mine enemies without cause—אִיְבֵי חֵנֶם. Compare Psalm xxxv. 19 ; lxix. 5, and see BISHOP LOWTH'S Preliminary Observations on Isaiah, p. xl. Here the prophet begins to celebrate the deliverance he had experienced from former dangers and difficulties ; from whence he is led to trust, that the same good providence will again be his support, and avenge him of his present persecutors.

Verse 53. They cut off my life in the pit, &c.—See Jer. xxxviii. 6, &c.

Verse 54. Waters flowed over my head—A metaphor taken from a person ready to drown, to denote imminent danger and distress. See Psalm lxix. 1, 2 ; cxxiv. 4, 5.

56. Hide not thine ear from my relief at my cry—That is, “ Shut not thine ear, refuse not to attend, and grant me relief, when I cry unto thee.” From רוּחַ, “ air,” or “ wind,” רוּחָה derives the signification of “ refreshment ” or “ relief ; ” giving a person air, or fanning him, when he is fainting, being a ready means of refreshing and relieving him. Accordingly the LXX. render הַרוּחָה, Exod. viii. 15, ἀναψύξις.

Verse 58. O JEHOVAH—Thirty-one MSS., together with one in the margin, and one ancient edition, read here יְהוָה, instead of אֲדֹנָי.

Verse 59. Thou hast seen, &c.—Here the prophet adverts to his present sufferings and ill usage.

Verse 60. All their devices against me—Seven MSS. read in the plural מַחֲשָׁבוֹת, conformably with the LXX. and Vulgate. Fifteen MSS. read לִי instead of לִי ; and one has a letter erased before לִי.

Verse 61. All their devices—Here again eight MSS., with the LXX. and Vulgate, read מַחֲשָׁבוֹת.

- 62 The lips of mine adversaries, and their muttering against me
all the day long.
- 63 Behold their sitting down and their rising up, I am their music.
- 64 Thou wilt render unto them a recompence, O JEHOVAH, according to the work of their hands ;
- 65 Thou wilt give with a hearty accordance thy curse unto them ;
- 66 Thou wilt pursue with anger, and destroy them from under the heavens of JEHOVAH.

CHAPTER IV.

- 1 How is the gold tarnished ! the best massy gold changed !

Verse 62. Their muttering—הגה properly signifies “to speak in a low imperfect voice, uttering a confused sound.”

Verse 63. Behold their sitting down, &c.—That is, “Behold at all times, whether they sit down or rise up, I am made the object of their merriment.” See note on verse 14.

Verse 65. Thou wilt give with a hearty accordance—The LXX. render μαχηρὰ πύργον, and the Vulgate, scutum, from מגן, “a shield.” In the margin of our Bibles it is translated “obstinacy;” and TAYLOR, in his Concordance, explains לב מגנה, “a heart shielded or hardened against good impressions.” Others, who perhaps read מגנה, as it stands in twenty-two mss., render it “sorrow,” as from the verb הונה. But it seems most natural to derive it from the verb מנן, to “deliver” or “make over;” in which case לב מגנה means “a delivery of the heart,” that is, “a willing one, to which the heart consents.” It is further to be noted, that none of the ancient versions express להם more than once, and that one ms. omits it after חתן. Perhaps, therefore, we should read לב למגנה, “according to, or with, a delivery of the heart,” that is, “freely, and without the least reluctance.”

Verse 66. The heavens of JEHOVAH—So stands the text at present, שמי יהוה. But the LXX. and Vulgate seem to have read מתחת שמים יהוה, “from under heaven, O JEHOVAH.” And it is not unusual to find the final ם defective in the mss.; probably having been first expressed by a stroke over the ך, which afterwards was lost. See KENNICOTT’S Dissert. Gener. §. 26. According to the Syriac, it was שמיך יהוה, “thy heavens, O JEHOVAH.”

CHAP. IV. The prophet contrasts, in various affecting instances, the wretched and deplorable circumstances of the Jewish nation with the flourishing state of their affairs in former times; and ascribes the unhappy change principally to the profligacy of their priests and prophets, which had drawn upon them the universal abhorrence of God and man. The people proceed with lamenting their hopeless condition, and, in a particular manner, the captivity of their sovereign. The judgment of Edom is at length foretold, together with a final cessation of Sion’s calamities.

Verse 1. Changed—For ישנה twenty-five mss. and one edition read ישנה.

The hallowed stones scattered about at the top of every street !

2 The precious sons of Sion, of worth equal to the purest gold,
How are they esteemed as earthen pitchers, the manufacture of the potter !

3 The very dragons have drawn out the breast, they have suckled their young ones :
The daughter of my people in cruelty is like the ostriches in the desert.

4 The tongue of the sucking child clave to the roof of his mouth for thirst ;
The young children asked bread, there was none that brake unto them.

5 Those that fed upon dainties are forlorn in the streets,
Those that were brought up upon scarlet, have embraced dunghills.

6 The punishment also of the daughter of my people hath been greater than the punishment of Sodom,
Which was overthrown as it were in an instant, nor were hands weakened in her.

7 Her nobles were purer than snow, they were whiter than milk,

The hallowed stones—Literally, “the stones of holiness,” meaning, as is most probable, the men of Israel, who were the stones of which the church of God was built.

Verse 2. Of worth equal to—הַסִּלָּאִים—The verb סָלָא or סָלָה signifies “to weigh down,” against any thing put in an opposite scale.

Verse 3. In cruelty is like the ostriches in the desert—For בִּי עֲנִיִּים three mss. read בִּיעֲנִיִּים, and forty-three mss. and ten editions, with the Masora, בִּיעֲנִיִּים. See TAYLOR'S Concordance, at the word יַעַן, where an account of the ostrich is given from SHAW'S Travels, Supplement, p. 66. See also Job xxxix. 14–16.

Verse 5. Have embraced dunghills—That is, “they lie on them,” instead of the scarlet carpets or couches which they were bred to.

Verse 6. The punishment—See note on Jer. li. 6.

Nor were hands weakened in her—Sodom was destroyed by a sudden act of God, which the prophet thinks preferable to lingering and wasting away with disease or want, as was the case in Jerusalem during the long siege.

Verse 7. Her nobles—נָדָר signifies to “separate” or “distinguish,” from

They were ruddier on the bone than rubies, their veining was the sapphires :

- 8 Their appearance is become duskier than the dawn, they are not distinguished in the streets ;
Their skin is strait bound upon their bones, it is become dry like a stick.
- 9 Happier are the slain by the sword than the slain by famine,
In that those, being thrust through, pass away before the fruits of the field.
- 10 The hands of tenderhearted women have boiled their own children ;
They became food for them in the destruction of the daughter of my people.
- 11 JEHOVAH hath fully vented his fury, he hath poured out the fierceness of his anger,
And hath kindled a fire in Sion, so that it hath consumed the foundations thereof.

the vulgar. I therefore think, that we are here by נזירים not to understand those who are properly called "Nazarites," that is, "persons who had set themselves apart by a religious vow," but persons of rank and distinction above the common sort. נזיר is thus applied to Joseph, Genesis xlix. 26, as one "distinguished in eminence and dignity" above his brethren. See DR. DURELL'S note in Parallel Prophecies of Jacob and Moses, p. 100.

They were ruddier on the bone—In the preceding line, the whiteness of their skin is described ; in this, their flesh, which was red underneath towards the bone, marking their high health.

Their veining was the sapphires—נזר signifies to "divide" or "intersect," as the blue veins do on the surface of the body. These, therefore, are without doubt intended.

Verse 8. Duskier than the dawn—שחר signifies "the dawn of day," when it is neither light nor dark, but between both, at which time objects are not easily distinguished.

Their skin is strait bound upon their bones—صاغ in Arabic signifies "to bind ;" and to be "hide bound" is a common expression, and is what is here meant in opposition to the former juicy ruddiness of the flesh upon the bones, verse 7.

Verse 9. In that those, being thrust through, pass away before the fruits of the field—That is, they pass away at one stroke before the means of subsistence fail, and so experience not the misery of wanting them ; which is far preferable to the case of those who outlive the necessities of life, and pine away by slow degrees.

- 12 The kings of the earth believed not, nor all the inhabitants of the world,
That the adversary would enter, and the enemy, within the gates of Jerusalem,
- 13 Because of the sins of her prophets, the iniquities of her priests,
Who shed in the midst of her the blood of the righteous.
- 14 They ran frantic through the streets, they were stained with blood;
Such as they could not overpower, they touched their clothes :
- 15 Begone, unclean, men cried unto them, begone, begone, touch not ;
Because they were contentious, even when they were fugitives, men said among the nations, They shall sojourn no more ;
- 16 The countenance of JEHOVAH their portion will no more look upon them ;

Verse 12. Nor all the inhabitants—Ten mss. and two editions, with the Masora, read בל, without the ו. The LXX. also omit the conjunction ; but it is expressed in the Syriac, Chaldee, and Vulgate, and, I think, rightly.

Verse 14. Frantic—Our English translators have, with the Vulgate, rendered עורים, “blind ;” but the LXX. and Syriac interpret it otherwise. They seem, indeed, to have read it with the feminine affix עוריה ; but I conceive עורים to be the participle Pahul of the verb עור, “to rouse,” or “excite.”

Such as they could not overpower—בלא stands here, by ellipsis, for באשר בלא. See the like, Jeremiah ii. 8, 11. The meaning is, that if they could no otherwise harm those they met with in the streets, they defiled them by touching their garments.

Verse 15. Because they were contentious, even when they were fugitives—בסנועו, “whilst they wandered ;” see גם thus used, Psalm xciv. 9. בחנוני, גם-ראו פעלי, “they tempted me whilst they saw my work.” As their mischievous behaviour rendered them obnoxious at home, so, carrying with them abroad the same litigious and turbulent spirit, they made the nations unwilling to admit of their sojourning among them. Or the rendering might be, “When they wrangled, and were also fugitives ;” that is, when, in consequence of their intestine broils, they (namely, the weaker faction) became exiles, the neighbouring nations would have nothing to do with persons who, they said, (as it follows in the next verse,) were discarded of their God, and had shown no sort of respect where, on account of character and age, it was due.

Verse 16. Their portion—See note on Jer. x. 16.

They respected not the persons of priests, they shewed no favour to elders.

17 While yet we existed, our eyes failed with looking for our help ;

In vain on our watch-tower have we watched for a nation that cannot save.

18 They hunted our steps, that we could not pass along our streets ; our end drew near ;

Our days are accomplished, yea, our end is come.

19 Our pursuers were swifter than the eagles of heaven ;

Upon the mountains they chased us, in the wilderness they lay in ambush for us.

To elders—Twenty-three mss. and three editions read, with the Masora, עֲלֵיזָם.

Verse 17. While yet we existed—The prophet, after having digressed in the five last verses, to make observation on the wickedness of those who had been the principal cause of the national ruin, here returns again to his lamentable description of the particulars. עֲרִינָה cannot certainly be right. Twenty-one mss. read עֲרֻנָה, or עֲרֻנָה ; but the Masoretes read עֲרִינָה, as it is found in three mss. and one edition, in the margin of Felix Pratensis's Bible, and among the various readings in the London Polyglott, vol. vi. Three other mss. read עֲרִינָה, which is still more probable, as I find no other instance of the following עֲרִי. But this emendation is not of itself sufficient ; for the idiom of the language seems generally, at least, to require that the succeeding member of the sentence after עֲרִי should be connected with it by the particle ו, as may be seen in the following instances among many others : 1 Kings i. 14, 22 ; Esther vi. 14 ; Job i. 16–18 ; Psalm lxxviii. 30, 31, &c. From hence I am led to conjecture, that the ה in עֲרִינָה is a corruption, not of a single Vau, but of two Vaus ; the latter of which ought to be prefixed to הַכְּלִינָה, where, by its conversive force, it not only clears the passage from all difficulty, but brings the text into a perfect agreement with the LXX., Syriac, and Vulgate versions.

Verse 18. Our steps—The LXX., instead of צִעְרֵינוּ, seem to have read צִעְרֵינוּ, “our little ones ;” but the present text seems unexceptionable. It is probable that the engines of war are here alluded to, which, being played off from the enemies' mounts that overlooked the city, made it unsafe for the citizens to pass along the streets. See Jer. xxxii. 24. For קִצְנוּ, a number of mss., in both instances, read קִצְנוּ ; but the present text is preferable.

Verse 19. Our pursuers were swifter than the eagles—Compare Deut. xxviii. 49 ; Jer. iv. 13.

They chased us—Fifty-two mss. and one edition read דִּלְקָנוּ.

- 20 The breath of our nostrils, the anointed of JEHOVAH, was taken in their toils, Under whose shadow we said we should live among the nations.
- 21 Rejoice and be glad, O daughter of Edom, that dwellest in the land of Uz ;
Unto thee also shall the cup pass over ; thou shalt be intoxicated, and shalt expose thy nakedness.
- 22 Thy punishment is at an end, O daughter of Sion, it shall not cause thee any more to go into captivity :
Thy punishment cometh on, O daughter of Edom, about to go into captivity because of thy sins.

Verse 20. The breath of our nostrils, the anointed of JEHOVAH—Zedekiah's fate is, no doubt, here alluded to ; upon whose being taken prisoner, all the hopes which the people had entertained of living safe under his protection, fell, of course, to the ground. To "live among the nations," probably means, to exist in a national capacity, or as one among them.

"רוח אפינו—Ille (scil. princeps) est spiritus vitalis, quem hæc tot millia civium trahunt. (SENECA, De Clementia, lib. i. cap. 4.)"—SECKER.

Verse 21. Rejoice and be glad—An ironical mode of address, like that, Eccles. xi. 9. The Edomites, we find, had, with a malicious joy, exulted over the ruin of their brethren, the Jews. See Psalm cxxxvii. 7 ; Obadiah 10–12. Their turn of suffering the like calamities is foretold. See note on Jer. xlix. 7.

The cup—See note on Jer. xxv. 15. By "intoxication" is probably meant, that judicial infatuation of mind which leads men to commit such extravagant and indiscreet actions as unavoidably expose them to ruin. Quos Deus vult perdere, dementat prius.

Verse 22. Thy punishment is at an end—That עין signifies, "punishment," or "suffering for sin," see verse 6 ; chap. v. 7, and note on Jer. li. 6. The sense of this line is manifest ; the daughter of Sion is comforted with an assurance that she had already undergone her whole punishment, and, consequently, had nothing more to apprehend. This will, therefore, tend to explain the following line, where an opposition is clearly intended. To תם עונך, "thy punishment is completed," or "ended," is opposed פקד עונך, "thy punishment visiteth," or "is coming upon thee ;" and as it follows in the first line, לא יוסף להגלותך, "it," or "he," (meaning God,) "shall not cause thee any more to go into captivity ;" so גלה, in the second line, must also be understood of "going into captivity," that being the allotted punishment in one case as well as in the other.

CHAP. V. IN the Syriac, Vulgate, and Arabic versions, this chapter is intitled, "the prayer of Jeremiah ;" but no such title appears in the Hebrew copies, or in the LXX. It is rather a memorial, representing, in

CHAPTER V.

- 1 REMEMBER, O JEHOVAH, what hath befallen us !
Look down, and see our reproach.
- 2 Our inheritance is transferred to strangers,
Our houses to foreigners.
- 3 We are become orphans, and without father,
Our mothers as widows.
- 4 Our waters have we drunken for money,
Our wood cometh for a price.
- 5 With the yoke of our necks are we continually burthened,
We labour, and no rest is allowed us.
- 6 O Egypt, we have submitted ourselves,
O Assyria, in order to have our fill of bread.

the name of the whole body of Jewish exiles, the many and grievous hardships they groaned under, and humbly entreating God to commiserate their wretchedness, and to restore them once more to his favour, and to their ancient prosperity. The whole may be considered as an epilogue, or conclusion, well adapted to the contents of the preceding chapters.

Verse 1. Look down—Forty-one MSS. and four editions read, with the Masora, הַבִּיטָה, with the הַ paragogic.

Verse 3. And without father—Twenty-three MSS. and four editions read, with the Masora, וְאִין, and four MSS. have the rasure of a letter before אִין.

Verse 5. With the yoke of our necks are we continually burthened—Thirty-five MSS. and two editions read צוֹאֲרֵינוּ, “our necks,” instead of צוֹאֲרֵנוּ. Symmachus renders על “a yoke,” οὐζυγος. רָדָה signifies, “to follow” or “accompany a person wherever he goes;” so Deut. xxviii. 22, 45, the plagues and curses sent by God, it is said, should pursue, or continually attend upon, the disobedient, to their utter ruin.

And no rest—Thirty-seven MSS. and four editions, with the Masora, read וְלֹא.

Verse 6. O Egypt, we have submitted ourselves—Our translators have rendered, “We have given the hand to the Egyptians, and to the Assyrians;” but there is no preposition prefixed to מִצְרַיִם, or אַשּׁוּר, as there ought to be, in order to justify such a translation. But the proper translation I conceive to be as I have represented: The people,—having complained, in the last verse, of the hardships imposed on them,—here, by an apostrophe to Egypt and to Assyria, set forth the grounds of their submission. They did it, they said, merely because they saw no other way of getting the means of subsistence.

- 7 Our fathers have sinned, but they are no more ;
And we have undergone the punishment of their iniquities.
- 8 Servants have had dominion over us,
There is none that delivereth out of their hand.
- 9 At the hazard of our lives we get our bread,
Because of the sword of the wilderness.
- 10 Our skins are parched like an oven,
By means of the stormy blasts of hunger.

Verse 7. But they are no more—Twenty-six, perhaps twenty-seven, mss. and four editions, with the Masora, read וְאִינֶנּוּ ; so also the LXX., Alexandrian and Complutensian, the Syriac, Chaldee, Vulgate, and Arabic.

And we have undergone the punishment, &c.—This is said in conformity with 2 Kings xxi. 11–16 ; xxiii. 26, 27 ; xxiv. 3. Twenty-three mss., three editions, and the Masora, read וְאִנְחֵנוּ ; so likewise the Syriac, Chaldee, Vulgate, and Arabic express the conjunction.

Verse 8. Servants have had dominion—This, perhaps, alludes to the power exercised by Nebuzaradan.

Verse 9. At the hazard of our lives, &c.—I can no otherwise understand this, than that, on account of their weak and defenceless state, the people were continually exposed, whilst they followed their necessary business, to the incursions of the Arabian freebooters ; who might not improperly be styled, “the sword of the wilderness.” See HARMER’S Observations, chap. ii. obs. 5, 6.

Verse 10. Our skins—For עוֹרֵנוּ, twenty-three mss. and one edition read עוֹרֵנוּ.

The stormy blasts of hunger—To investigate the precise signification of זלעפּוֹת by etymology, is what I shall not pretend to. Both in this place and Psalm xi. 9, the ancient interpreters give it the sense of “storms and tempests.” In the latter of these passages it seems not improbable that, by זלעפּוֹת, the hot scorching wind may be alluded to, which produces such fatal effects in the desert. See note on Jer. iv. 11, 12. In the margin of our Bibles it is accordingly translated, “a burning tempest.” In this place the violent operations of hunger may be called its “stormy blasts,” from the effects thereby produced, in emaciating the body, and drying the skin, as if the blasts of a hot wind had passed over it. The word occurs but once more, and that in the singular number, זלעפּה, Psalm cxix. 53. It is there generally understood as if the psalmist had represented himself seized with horror, grief, or some other affection of mind, on account of the wicked that forsook God’s law : But I submit, whether זלעפּה may not here be construed, “a storm” or “blast of persecution,” which he had experienced from those wicked persons ; in defiance of which, he says, in the following verse, that he did not cease to make God’s statutes his songs ; that is, to celebrate the benefits resulting from an observance of them,

- 11 Matrons in Sion have they ravished,
Virgins in the cities of Judah.
- 12 Princes were hanged up by their hand,
The persons of elders were not honoured.
- 13 Young men were made to grind at the mill,
And boys fell under burdens of wood.
- 14 Elders have ceased from the gate,
Young men from their music.
- 15 The mirth of our heart is ceased,
Our dance is turned into mourning.
- 16 The crown of our head is fallen,
Wo unto us ! because we have sinned.
- 17 Because of this our heart is become faint,
Because of these things our eyes are dim ;
- 18 Because of mount Sion, which is desolate,
Foxes have walked in it.
- 19 But thou, O JEHOVAH, shalt be established for ever, amidst all the terrors that surrounded him : בבית מנוי, "in the house of my terrors." This perfectly agrees with the tenor of the context, and especially of the two preceding verses :—

- 51 The proud have mocked me exceedingly.
I have not declined from thy law :
52 I called to mind thy judgments of old,
O JEHOVAH, and comforted myself.
53 A stormy blast hath laid hold on me
From the wicked who forsake thy law :
54 Thy statutes have been my songs
In the house of my terrors.

Verse 11. Virgins—Fourteen mss. and one edition, for בתולות, read בתולות; twenty, perhaps twenty-two, mss., בתולות, and five mss., בתולות.

Verse 13. Were made to grind—Literally, " bore grinding," as a hardship or task imposed on them.

Verse 14. Elders have ceased from the gate—That is, they no longer sit there to administer justice.

Verse 15. Of our heart—Ten mss. read לבנו, "of our hearts;" but all the ancient versions express the singular number.

Verse 19. But thou—The LXX., Syriac, Vulgate, and Arabic all express

Thy throne from generation to generation.

- 20 Wherefore wilt thou totally forget us ?
Wherefore wilt thou abandon us for a length of days ?
- 21 Turn thou us unto thee, O JEHOVAH, so shall we return ;
 Renew our days as of old.
- 22 For surely thou hast cast us off altogether ;
 Thou hast been wroth with us exceedingly.

the conjunction at the beginning of this verse. Two mss. read וַאֲמַרָה, and so it is found in the notes of the celebrated printed Bible, N<sup>o</sup>. 300.

Verse 21. So shall we return—For נִשׁוּב, thirty-seven, perhaps forty-three, mss. and four editions read, with the Masora, נִשׁוּבָה.

Verse 22. For surely—Six mss. omit אֲנִי ought certainly to be rendered as causal; God's having rejected his people, and expressed great indignation against them, being the cause and ground of the preceding application, in which they pray to be restored to his favour, and the enjoyment of their ancient privileges.

INDEX OF TEXTS

REFERRED TO, AND OCCASIONALLY ILLUSTRATED.

GENESIS.		CHAP. xlvii. 29 . . . . .		Page 343
CHAP. i. 14 . . . . .	Page 92	xlix. 25 . . . . .	364, 369
16 . . . . .	72	26 . . . . .	404
iv. 5 . . . . .	37	EXODUS.
vii. 10 . . . . .	139	i. 16 . . . . .	150
ix. 4, 5 . . . . .	32	ii. 14 . . . . .	45
x. 6 . . . . .	304	16 . . . . .	121
10 . . . . .	55	iii. 16 . . . . .	39
13 . . . . .	304	viii. 15 . . . . .	401
14 . . . . .	312	ix. 19 . . . . .	43
18 . . . . .	335	32 . . . . .	31
26-30 . . . . .	336	xii. 15 . . . . .	190
xiii. 8 . . . . .	200	38 . . . . .	192
xiv. 1 . . . . .	337	xiii. 12 . . . . .	266
xv. 9, 10, 17, 18 . .	255	xiv. 2 . . . . .	295
xvii. 4 . . . . .	190	3 . . . . .	24
5 . . . . .	160	27 . . . . .	386
14 . . . . .	190	xv. 13 . . . . .	59
xix. 4 . . . . .	346	20 . . . . .	232, 234
xxii. 21 . . . . .	192, 193	xix. 1 . . . . .	129
xxiv. 2 . . . . .	343	xx. 24 . . . . .	284
13, 15 . . . . .	121	xxi. 2 . . . . .	253
xxv. 2, 6 . . . . .	193	xxiii. 16 . . . . .	315
3 . . . . .	193	xxv. 8 . . . . .	69
6 . . . . .	336	21, 22 . . . . .	384
13 . . . . .	336	xxviii. 36 . . . . .	243
15 . . . . .	193	xxix. 45 . . . . .	69
xxviii. 11, 18 . . .	116	xxxi. 16 . . . . .	39
16 . . . . .	44	xxxii. 19 . . . . .	234
xxix. 6-10 . . . . .	121	xxxiv. 6 . . . . .	131
xxxi. 21, 23, 25 . .	345	7 . . . . .	228
xxxv. 5 . . . . .	237	LEVITICUS.
xxxvii. 25 . . . . .	83	ii. 1, 2 . . . . .	273
27 . . . . .	122	vii. 20 . . . . .	190
xxxix. 20 . . . . .	258	xvii. 13 . . . . .	32
xli. 14 . . . . .	373
xlvi. 22 . . . . .	291

CHAP. xvii. 14.....	Page	31	CHAP. ii. 23.....	Page	312
xviii. 21 .....		266	iii. 23 .....		162
xix 13 .....		169	iv. 11 .....		350
23-25 .....		232	28 .....		139
27 .....		91	31 .....		309
28 .....	135,	136	vi. 13 .....		42
xxi. 1 .....		136	ix. 5, &c. ....		22
6 .....		136	x. 16.....		43
xxiii. 34 .....		209	20.....		42
xxv. 25.....		261	xi. 17 .....		121
39-41.....		254	18-20 .....		142
xxvi. 14, &c. ....		101	26-28 .....		101
19 .....		34	xii. 23 .....		32
21, 23, 24 ..		151	31 .....		76
29 .....	157,	391	xiv. 1.....	135,	136
33 .....		87	2 .....		136
44 .....		309	xv. 1, 9 .....		254
xxvii. 32 .....		271	9 .....		103
			12 .....		253
			xviii. 3 .....		261
			10.....		266
			xx. 6.....		232
			19 .....		60
			xxi. 17 .....		261
			xxiii. 3 .....		380
			xxiv. 1-4 .....		33
			xxv. 4 .....		342
			xxvii. ....		101
			xxviii. ....		101
			13, 44 ....		379
			22, 45 ....		408
			23 .....	34,	121
			25.....		127
			30.....		232
			32, 41 ....		55
			36, 64 ....		139
			48.....		30
			49.....	55, 324,	406
			53.....		157
			53, 56, 57..		391
			54, 56 ....		103
			65.....		63
			xxix. 18 .....		80
			xxx. 6 .....		43
			15.....		101
			xxxii. 13 .....		143
			34 .....		29
			38 .....		115
			39 .....		54
			xxxiii. 20 .....		27
			29 .....		143

NUMBERS.

i. 1 .....	139
vi. 2, 5, 18 .....	74
26 .....	37
x. 29-32 .....	202
xi. 16 .....	198
xii. 11 .....	52
xiv. 18 .....	228
24 .....	119
xvi. 14 .....	25
xxi. 11 .....	321
28, 29 .....	325
29 .....	326
xxii. 5 .....	326
22, 23, 31, 34 ..	351
xxiii. 10.....	107, 145
xxiv. 17 .....	325
20 .....	107
21 .....	328
xxvii. 11 .....	261
xxviii. 15, 24 ....	39
xxx. 1-16.....	299
xxxi. 49 .....	277
xxxii. 3.....	320
26 .....	298
xxxiv. 3 .....	325
xxxviii 8 .....	335

DEUTERONOMY.

i 12 .....	185
38 .....	162

JOSHUA.

CHAP. v. 1 .....	Page 192
vi. 5 .....	242
xi. 10 .....	336
13 .....	229
22 .....	312
xiii. 18 .....	318
xv. 8 .....	155
21, 23, 48 ....	148
xviii. 14, 15 .....	325
16 .....	159
28 .....	58
xxi. 18 .....	13
37 .....	318
xxiii. 7 .....	42

JUDGES.

i. 16 .....	202
iii. 15 .....	364
iv. 11 .....	202
v. 22 .....	81, 343
vi. 2 .....	329
xi. 24 .....	327
34 .....	232
xiv. 4 .....	367
xix. 15 .....	84
xx. 26 .....	116

RUTH.

ii. 13 .....	299
--------------	-----

1 SAMUEL.

ii. 5 .....	129
iv. 10, 11 .....	70
11-22 .....	38
vii. 2 .....	38
x. 27 .....	364
xii. 15 .....	197
17, 18 .....	34
xiii. 6 .....	329
xv. 22 .....	73
32 .....	45
xvi. 2 .....	277
xviii. 6 .....	232
xix. 13, 16 .....	116
20 .....	197
xx. 5 .....	291
xxv. 2 .....	315
xxvi. 7, 11, 12, 16 .....	116
19 .....	139
20 .....	145

CHAP. xxviii. 10 .....	Page 352
xxx. 16 .....	234

2 SAMUEL.

i. 19, 25 .....	143
21 .....	165
22 .....	342
ii. 13 .....	289
iii. 33, 34 .....	146
v. 6, 7 .....	251
vi. ....	38
14 .....	234
vii. 28 .....	54
viii. 1-14 .....	377
2, 6 .....	364
10 .....	127
ix. 7, 10, 11 .....	374
x. 6-19 .....	377
16, 17 .....	222
xii. 20 .....	373
xiii. 19 .....	33
23 .....	139
xv. 25 .....	59
30 .....	33
34 .....	180
xix. 7 .....	299
38, 40 .....	289
xx. 19 .....	128
xxii. 34 .....	143

1 KINGS.

i. 14 .....	43
14-22 .....	406
iii. 18 .....	139
iv. 21 .....	364
21, 24 .....	377
24 .....	175
vi. 13 .....	69
vii. 15, 23, 27 ....	245
15 .....	370
25 .....	369
38 .....	369
42 .....	370
viii. ....	38
35 .....	121
44 .....	59
x. 5 .....	278
8 .....	203, 205
xi. 5 .....	327
xii. 28, 29 .....	317
xv. 22 .....	288

CHAP. xvii. 1 .....	Page 120
xviii. 4 .....	198
17 .....	105
26, 28.....	41
28 .....	136
46 .....	132
xix. 6 .....	116
xxi. 12 .....	210
19 .....	244
21 .....	267
xxii. 6 .....	198
8 .....	105, 184
26 .....	213

2 KINGS.

ii. 3 .....	191
iii. 15 .....	132
25 .....	320
vi. 1 .....	197
30 .....	66
viii. 1 .....	336
x. 14 .....	288
15 .....	202
33 .....	327
xii. 4 .....	300
9 .....	371
15, 24.....	367
xiv. 7 .....	332
xv. 29 .....	327
35 .....	211
xvi. 3 .....	266
7 .....	369
9 .....	334
17 .....	369
18 .....	278
xvii. 3 .....	364
30.....	282
xviii. 17 .....	242
34 .....	334
xix. 13 .....	334
24 .....	151
xxi. 4, 5, 7 .....	75
11-15 .....	239
11-16 .....	366, 409
xxiii. 4 .....	75, 371
26, 27 .....	239, 409
29 .....	294, 310
30-34 .....	169
31, 36 .....	169
34 .....	169

CHAP. xxiii. 33, 34 .....	Page 27
xxiv. 1 .....	128
2 .....	172, 174
	202, 372
3 .....	409
7 .....	294
10, 11 .....	174
11 .....	365
11-17 .....	174
12-16 .....	371
12-17 .....	160
15 .....	176
17 .....	169, 213
xxv. 3 .....	367
4 .....	367
6 .....	21, 367
8 .....	257, 367, 368
11.....	368
17.....	370
19.....	371
23.....	293
27.....	373

1 CHRONICLES.

ii. 48.....	285
55.....	202, 205
iii. 15 .....	169
17, 18.....	177
iv. 9 .....	206
v. 26.....	327
xxiv. 5 .....	158
xxvi. 16 .....	278
xxviii. 2 .....	384
xxix. 24 .....	343

2 CHRONICLES.

iii. 15 .....	370
iv. 13 .....	370
vi. 12 .....	278
23 .....	170
vii. 11 .....	299
x. 15.....	367
xvi. 10 .....	159
14 .....	253
xvii. 5, 11 .....	364
10, 11 .....	377
xix. 8 .....	198
xxi. 16 .....	118
19 .....	253
xxii. 7 .....	367
10.....	89

CHAP. xxiii. 13 .....	Page 278	CHAP. i. 16-18 .....	Page 406
xxiv. 20, 21.....	31	20 .....	75, 287
xxv. 20.....	367	22 .....	162
xxvi. 6-8 .....	377	ii. 8. ....	66, 116
xxvi. 8 .....	364	13 .....	312
xxviii. 16-21 ....	32	iii. 23 ..	400
xxix. 8 .....	127	iv. 9 .....	50
27 .....	58	v. 7 .....	197
xxxii. 5.....	282	vii. 2 ..	169, 170
23 ..	364	ix. 6 .....	331
xxxiv. 6 .....	269	x. 11 ..	400
xxxv. 20 .....	302	xii. 10 .....	195
25 .....	87, 375	xiii. 27 .....	159
xxxvi. 6 .....	172	xiv. 17 .....	29
7 .....	360	xvi. 13 .....	387
10 .....	174, 213	xix. 8 .....	395
13 .....	283	xxi. 11 .....	234
16 .....	31	14 .....	85
19 .....	287	xxx. 9. ....	396
22 .....	189	xxxi. 22.....	261
EZRA.		xxxii. 2.....	193
i. 1 .....	189	xxxiii. 11 .....	159
7 .....	360	21 .....	45
iii. 2, 3 .....	287	xxxiv. 37 .....	319
3, 6, 8.....	287	xxxviii. 8.....	400
10 .....	58	xxxix. 14-16....	403
iv. 12 .....	344	xlii. 6 .....	66
NEHEMIAH.		11 .....	138
iii. 13, 14.....	156	PSALMS.
29 .....	155	PSALM i. 3 .....	144
v. 13. ..	386	ii. 6 .....	96
vi. 1 .....	57	9. ....	196
10 .....	209	v. 6. ....	69
ix. 7 .....	54	vi. 4 .....	183
22 ..	325	vii. 9.....	106
26 .....	31	ix. 6 .....	244
38 ..	341	xi. 9 .....	409
x. 1 ..	341	xii. 4 .....	31
xii. 31 .....	156	xiv. 7 .....	267
xiii. 3 .....	192	xvi. 7 .....	106
ESTHER.		xvii. 8.....	115, 390
iii. 1 .....	373	xviii. 44.....	56
iv. 3 .....	66	xxi. 11 .....	391
vi. 14 .....	406	xxiii. 4 .....	24
JOB.		xxviii. 3 .....	69
i. 10 .....	385	xxx. 11.....	234
14 .....	58	xxxi. 13 .....	164
		21 .....	115
		xxxv. 6.....	180
		19 .....	401

PSALM xxxvi. 10 . . . . .	Page 231
xxxvii. 37, 38 . . . . .	107
xxxix. 3 . . . . .	163
xliv. 19 . . . . .	24
20 . . . . .	115
xlvi. 2 . . . . .	350
xlvi. 2 . . . . .	59, 389
xlix. 9 . . . . .	393
13 . . . . .	345
l. 2 . . . . .	59, 388
20 . . . . .	394
li. 4 . . . . .	113
16 . . . . .	73
lviii. 6 . . . . .	82
8 . . . . .	153
lxi. 5 . . . . .	115
lxiii. 11 . . . . .	69, 154
lxiv. 2 . . . . .	115
lxviii. 11 . . . . .	382
lxix. 1, 2 . . . . .	401
5 . . . . .	401
21 . . . . .	80
lxx. title . . . . .	202
lxxii. 10 . . . . .	364
lxxiv. 4 . . . . .	386
7 . . . . .	288
lxxviii. 8, &c. . . . .	22
9 . . . . .	304
30, 31 . . . . .	406
39 . . . . .	54
60-64 . . . . .	70
lxxix. 7 . . . . .	59, 100
lxxx. 8 . . . . .	385
12 . . . . .	27
lxxxv. 1 . . . . .	267
lxxxvii. 2 . . . . .	59
lxxxix. 39 . . . . .	288
40 . . . . .	386
41 . . . . .	328
48 . . . . .	393
xc. 15 . . . . .	393
xciv. 7 . . . . .	54
5-7 . . . . .	107
7-9 . . . . .	70
xcv. 9 . . . . .	405
xcix. 5 . . . . .	384
cv. 16 . . . . .	336
cvi. 45, &c. . . . .	23
cix. 12 . . . . .	231
13 . . . . .	220
cxix. 23 . . . . .	394

PSALM cxix. 36 . . . . .	Page 62
53 . . . . .	409
114 . . . . .	115
119 . . . . .	67
136 . . . . .	228
162 . . . . .	215
cxxi. 3, 4 . . . . .	123
cxxii. 5 . . . . .	343
6 . . . . .	59
cxxiv. 4, 5 . . . . .	401
cxxv. 1 . . . . .	343
cxxvi. 4 . . . . .	220
cxxxii. 7 . . . . .	384
13, 14 . . . . .	59
17 . . . . .	178
cxixvi. 8, 9 . . . . .	72
15 . . . . .	386
cxixvii. . . . .	59
1 . . . . .	113
7 . . . . .	378, 407
8 . . . . .	269
cxliii. 3 . . . . .	115, 394
cxliv. 2 . . . . .	395
cxlix. 3 . . . . .	234
cl. 4 . . . . .	234

PROVERBS.

CHAP. iii. 3 . . . . .	142
vii. 3 . . . . .	142
viii. 34 . . . . .	381
x. 9 . . . . .	394
xi. 31 . . . . .	330
xii. 19 . . . . .	63
xiii. 11 . . . . .	58
xv. 8 . . . . .	103
xvi. 1 . . . . .	230
xix. 20 . . . . .	107
27 . . . . .	94
xxiii. 15 . . . . .	244
18 . . . . .	107
xxiv. 14, 20 . . . . .	107
xxv. 4 . . . . .	67

ECCLESIASTES.

xi. 3 . . . . .	54
9 . . . . .	407
xii. 5 . . . . .	87

CANTICLES.

ii. 8 . . . . .	99
14 . . . . .	320, 332

CHAP. iii. 4 . . . . .	Page 166	CHAP. xvi. 6-11 . . . . .	Page 322
v. 6 . . . . .	236	7 . . . . .	321
vii. 1. . . . .	236	8, 9 . . . . .	321
ISAIAH.		10 . . . . .	322
i. 3. . . . .	79, 125	14 . . . . .	316
11-13 . . . . .	103	xviii. 5 . . . . .	53
12, 13 . . . . .	126	6 . . . . .	110
14 . . . . .	185	xix. 13 . . . . .	52
14, 15 . . . . .	386	16 . . . . .	237, 391
22, 25 . . . . .	67	18 . . . . .	42
ii. 6 . . . . .	46	18, 19, 23, 24 . . . . .	340
10, 19 . . . . .	329	xx. 1 . . . . .	192
15. . . . .	241	3-5. . . . .	118, 304
iii. 12 . . . . .	391	4. . . . .	30, 118
17 . . . . .	118	6. . . . .	25
26. . . . .	116, 228, 318	xxi. 2. . . . .	338
iv. 2 . . . . .	178, 340	xxii. 2 . . . . .	362
6 . . . . .	115	6 . . . . .	338
v. 1-7 . . . . .	28	xxiv. 17, 18 . . . . .	140, 324
2, 5 . . . . .	385	18 . . . . .	324
19 . . . . .	147	xxv. 2 . . . . .	229
25. . . . .	44	xxvi. 16 . . . . .	39
26. . . . .	55	xxvii. 8. . . . .	152
26-28 . . . . .	47	10 . . . . .	59
26-30 . . . . .	65	11 . . . . .	391
30. . . . .	31	12 . . . . .	38
vii. 7. . . . .	291	13 . . . . .	269
20 . . . . .	27	xxviii. 12 . . . . .	63
viii. 22 . . . . .	31	19 . . . . .	127
x. 5 . . . . .	313	xxix. 2 . . . . .	46
9 . . . . .	334	4 . . . . .	307
31. . . . .	43	13 . . . . .	106
xi. 1 . . . . .	178	xxx. 2 . . . . .	231
12, 13 . . . . .	40	3-5 . . . . .	305
xiii. 2 . . . . .	45	10 . . . . .	58
19-22. . . . .	349	18 . . . . .	139
20 . . . . .	343	19 . . . . .	377
xiv. 15 . . . . .	258	xxxii. 1. . . . .	178
21 . . . . .	237	xxxiii. 2 . . . . .	250
23 . . . . .	360	14 . . . . .	144
24. . . . .	291, 367	xxxiv. 11 . . . . .	386
xv. 1 . . . . .	312	14 . . . . .	63
2 . . . . .	323	xxxvi. 16 . . . . .	288
3 . . . . .	323	xxxvii. 3 . . . . .	118
4, 5. . . . .	322	9 . . . . .	118
5 . . . . .	314, 315	26. . . . .	268
7 . . . . .	323	xxxviii. 16 . . . . .	219
xvi. 4 . . . . .	330	xl. 3 . . . . .	99, 231
6 . . . . .	320	19, 20. . . . .	92
		xli. 4. . . . .	54
		7 . . . . .	92, 162

[illegible]

CHAP. xxxviii. 7 . . . . .	Page 148	CHAP. xiii 2 . . . . .	Page 198
xxxix. 8 . . . . .	287	3 . . . . .	181
15 . . . . .	209	10, 11 . . . . .	388
xl. 1 . . . . .	235	xiv. 3 . . . . .	48
xlii. 17 . . . . .	297	10 . . . . .	352
xliii. 3 . . . . .	291	17 . . . . .	313
9, 10 . . . . .	301	xvi. 24, 25, 31 . . . . .	34
xliv. 22 . . . . .	185	53 . . . . .	221, 267
30 . . . . .	294	60 . . . . .	23
xl. 4 . . . . .	390	xvii. 13 . . . . .	49
xlv. 1 . . . . .	295	16, 18 . . . . .	283
2 . . . . .	294	xviii. 2 . . . . .	238
26 . . . . .	301	6 . . . . .	341
xlvi. 27 . . . . .	378, 383	xix. 8 . . . . .	174
43 . . . . .	400	8, 9 . . . . .	172
46 . . . . .	326	xx. 5-26 . . . . .	22
xl. 2 . . . . .	400	6 . . . . .	40
7 . . . . .	407	9, 14, 22, 44 . . . . .	122
11 . . . . .	27	xxi. 3 . . . . .	313
20 . . . . .	350	12 . . . . .	235
l. 23 . . . . .	287	27 . . . . .	261
37 . . . . .	391	xxii. 18-20 . . . . .	67
44-46 . . . . .	334	20-22 . . . . .	68
li. 6 . . . . .	403, 407	xxiv. 7 . . . . .	32
11 . . . . .	287	17 . . . . .	138
30 . . . . .	391	21 . . . . .	55
lii. 12 . . . . .	287	xxv. 2-7 . . . . .	326
		3, 6 . . . . .	383
		3, 6, 8, 12, 15 . . . . .	378
		8 . . . . .	319
		8, 9 . . . . .	315
		12-14 . . . . .	329
		13 . . . . .	193
		16 . . . . .	192
		xxvi. 2 . . . . .	378
		6 . . . . .	269
		20 . . . . .	343
		xxvii. 7, 24 . . . . .	95
		11 . . . . .	353
		30 . . . . .	195
		xxviii. 24 . . . . .	378
		xxix. 6, 7 . . . . .	205, 378
		11 . . . . .	343
		13 . . . . .	309
		17 . . . . .	305, 372
		19 . . . . .	295
		xxx. 5 . . . . .	192, 304
		14, 16 . . . . .	308
		15 . . . . .	308
		xxxi. 15 . . . . .	359
		xxxiii. 2-9 . . . . .	64

LAMENTATIONS.

i. 17 . . . . .	51
iv. 10 . . . . .	157
19 . . . . .	86
21 . . . . .	192
v. 6 . . . . .	343

EZEKIEL.

i. 2 . . . . .	139
3 . . . . .	132
24 . . . . .	104
iii. 14, 22 . . . . .	132
17 . . . . .	64
v. 10 . . . . .	157
12 . . . . .	87
vi. 3, 4, 13 . . . . .	341
vii. 4 . . . . .	170
viii. . . . .	17
ix. 2 . . . . .	159
xi. 21 . . . . .	170
xii. 3 . . . . .	98, 306
20 . . . . .	168
22, 27 . . . . .	147

xxxiv. 14 . . . . .	59
23, 24 . . . . .	227
xxxv. 2 . . . . .	329
5 . . . . .	153
15 . . . . .	383
xxxvi. 2 . . . . .	143
22 . . . . .	40
35 . . . . .	343
xxxvii. 10 . . . . .	180
21, 22 . . . . .	40
24, 25 . . . . .	227
xxxix. 4 . . . . .	109
xliii. 7, 9 . . . . .	69
xliv. 7 . . . . .	56
xlvi. 29 . . . . .	46

DANIEL.

i. 1 . . . . .	173, 303
1-3 . . . . .	128
2 . . . . .	360
3-6 . . . . .	371
5, 8, 10, 16 . . . . .	359
5, 18 . . . . .	173
ii. . . . .	173
iii. 20, 21 . . . . .	222
iv. 8 . . . . .	282
24 . . . . .	223
v. 3, 4 . . . . .	359
viii. 2 . . . . .	338
ix. 1 . . . . .	188
2 . . . . .	189
14 . . . . .	381
24 . . . . .	189

HOSEA.

i. 6 . . . . .	185
11 . . . . .	40
ii. 2-5 . . . . .	128
7 . . . . .	166
14 . . . . .	139
iii. 5 . . . . .	227
iv. 16 . . . . .	74, 395
vi. 6 . . . . .	73
ix. 10 . . . . .	41, 102
x. 4 . . . . .	80
6 . . . . .	317
11 . . . . .	342
12 . . . . .	43
xiii. 2 . . . . .	95
11 . . . . .	366

CHAP. xiii. 15 . . . . .	Page 152
xiv. 5 . . . . .	41

JOEL.

i. 8 . . . . .	324
19 . . . . .	86
ii. 4 . . . . .	356
22 . . . . .	86
iii. 8 . . . . .	65
19 . . . . .	329

AMOS.

i. 3-5 . . . . .	334
11, 12 . . . . .	329
13 . . . . .	327
13-15 . . . . .	326
ii. 13 . . . . .	185
iv. 5 . . . . .	58, 123
7, 8 . . . . .	288
v. 16 . . . . .	87
18 . . . . .	147
22 . . . . .	103
vi. 7 . . . . .	134
12 . . . . .	80
vii. 14 . . . . .	198
viii. 13 . . . . .	359
ix. 14 . . . . .	267

OBADIAH.

2 . . . . .	331
3 . . . . .	328, 332
7, 8 . . . . .	329
10-12 . . . . .	407
10-14 . . . . .	378
12 . . . . .	383
16 . . . . .	331

JONAH.

iii. 6 . . . . .	66
iv. 8 . . . . .	359

MICAH.

i. 1 . . . . .	199
iii. 5, 11 . . . . .	198
12 . . . . .	199
vi. 8 . . . . .	90
16 . . . . .	395
vii. 12 . . . . .	27

NAHUM.

CHAP. iii. 5 .....	Page 118
8 .....	308
10 .....	391
13 .....	391
15 .....	356

HABAKKUK.

i. 13 .....	399
ii. 13 .....	363

ZEPHANIAH.

ii. 7 .....	220
8-10 .....	315
8, 10 .....	319
8-11 .....	326
9 .....	327
iii. 4 .....	198

HAGGAI.

i. 1 .....	177
ii. 5 .....	69

ZECHARIAH.

i. 11 .....	343
12 .....	189
ii. 4 .....	343
10, 11 .....	69
iii. 8 .....	178
iv. 7 .....	143
v. 3 .....	228
vi. 12 .....	178
vii. 7 .....	343
viii. 5 .....	61
ix. 5 .....	343
xii. 6 .....	343
xiv. 10, 11 .....	343

TOBIT.

iv. 17 .....	138
--------------	-----

ECCLESIASTICUS.

xxxviii. 29 .....	149
-------------------	-----

1 MACCABEES.

v. 6 .....	327
42 .....	371
vii. 19 .....	288

MATTHEW.

CHAP. i. 12 .....	Page 177
ii. 15 .....	235
17, 18 .....	234
ix. 23 .....	88
xii. 42 .....	65
xiii. 7 .....	43
xviii. 20 .....	40
30, 34 .....	398
xx. 22 .....	191
xxi. 19 .....	216
xxiii. 2, 3 .....	198
30-37 .....	31
xxiv. 1 .....	69
1, 2 .....	69
xxv. 29 .....	12
xxvi. 39 .....	190
xxvii. 34 .....	81

MARK.

v. 38 .....	88, 135
xi. 13 .....	216
xiii. 1, 2 .....	69
xv. 23 .....	81

LUKE.

i. 19 .....	368
68 .....	39
69 .....	178
ii. 1 .....	194
26 .....	393
x. 34 .....	84
xviii. 14 .....	37
xxii. 52 .....	159

JOHN.

vi. 44, 45 .....	230
xi. 19 .....	138

ACTS.

i. 16-20 .....	235
iv. 1 .....	159
18 .....	208
v. 24, 26 .....	159
40 .....	208
vii. 52 .....	31
xv. 18 .....	19
xxvii. 9 .....	207

ROMANS.

CHAP. i. 9 .....	Page	42
li. 29 .....		43
iii. 30 .....		90
viii. 29 .....		132
ix. 1 .....		42
2 .....		132
xi. 5, 26, 27 .....		345
26 .....		40

1 CORINTHIANS.

i. 30 .....		178
iv. 8 .....	31,	171
viii. 5, 6 .....		87
ix. 16, 17 .....		163

2 CORINTHIANS.

iv. 2 .....		125
xi. 31 .....		42
xii. 2-4 .....		113
19 .....		42

GALATIANS.

i. 15, 16 .....		19
20 .....		42
iii. 7 .....		272
iv. 7 .....		26
26 .....		38
vi. 16 .....		272

EPHESIANS.

ii. 2, 3 .....		326
3 .....		75
13-22 .....		111

COLOSSIANS.

CHAP. ii. 11 .....	Page	43
--------------------	------	----

1 TIMOTHY.

ii. 5 .....		87
-------------	--	----

2 TIMOTHY.

iii. 16 .....		10
---------------	--	----

HEBREWS.

iv. 12 .....		184
vi. 16 .....		42
vii. 25 .....		87
viii. 9 .....		239
10 .....		240

JAMES.

v. 17 .....		120, 121
-------------	--	----------

1 PETER.

iv. 17, 18 .....		330
------------------	--	-----

2 PETER.

ii. 3 .....		125
iii. 4 .....		147

REVELATIONS.

ii. 23 .....		106
ix. 7 .....		356
xiv. 10 .....		190
20 .....		382
xvi. 19 .....		190
xviii. 21 .....		364
22, 33 .....		362
xix. 15 .....		382
xxi. 2, 3 .....		38

INDEX OF PERSONS.

---

- ABRADATES, 338
 ABRAHAM, 336
 ÆLIAN, 122
 AHAB, 105, 184
 AHAZ, 32, 369
 AHIKAM, 200
 ALSHECK, 69
 AMMIANUS, 302
 ANTONINUS, 295
 APRIES. See PHARAOH-HOPHRA.
 AQUILA, 57, 89, 155, 242, 263, 275,
     292
 ASA, 288

 BARUCH, 14, 198, 206, 207, 214, 262
 BELSHAZZAR, 188, 282
 BEROSUS, 128, 294, 361, 371
 BLACKSTONE, 263
 BOCHART, 25, 82, 108, 113, 118, 122,
     145, 295, 304, 349, 356
 BUXTORF, 27, 40, 47, 111, 116, 117,
     146, 168, 239, 289, 324, 339

 CALMET, 201
 CALVIN, 268
 LUD. CAPELLUS, 46
 CASTALIO, or CASTELLIO, 270, 353
 CASTELL, 104, 135
 CHARDIN, 34, 48, 66, 82, 132, 135,
     138, 188, 212, 258
 COCCEIUS, 143
 CONIAH, 177. See JECONIAH.
 COOKE and CLARKE, 137
 CUSH, 304
 CYRUS, 189, 333, 349, 356, 357

 DANIEL, 173, 282, 338, 371
 D'ANVILLE, 59
 DARIUS the Mede, 188
 DARIUS HYSTASPES, 189
 DAVID, 146, 158, 224, 250, 267, 272, 377

 DEDAN, 193
 DIODORUS SICULUS, 65, 83, 203, 301
 DIONYSIUS PERIEGETES, 65
 DRUSIUS, 275
 DURELL, 6, 51, 65, 67, 91, 93, 99,
     127, 132, 143, 164, 170, 307, 351,
     404

 EBED-MELECH, 275
 EPHRAIM, 71, 226, 236
 EPICTETUS, 107
 EVIL-MERODACH, 188, 361, 373
 EURIPIDES, 88
 EUSEBIUS, 321
 EZRA, 365

 FORSTER, 136, 137

 GADATAS, 353
 GEDALIAH, 13, 285, 368
 GIBBON, 161
 GOBARYS, 353
 GRABE, 143, 285, 288, 303, 321, 361, 371
 GREEN, 211
 GROTIUS, 46, 81, 156, 172, 214, 222,
     223, 274, 294, 311, 319, 328, 351,
     356, 389, 396, 398

 HANAMEEL, 260
 HANANIAH, 246
 HARMER, 34, 35, 45, 47, 66, 82, 116,
     132, 135, 136, 138, 169, 182, 187,
     201, 203, 212, 258, 373, 409
 HAZOR-MAVETH, 336
 HECATEUS, 295
 HEMATH, 206
 HEROD, 77, 234
 HERODOTUS, 91, 192, 295, 301, 304,
     308, 353, 357, 359, 362, 364
 HOBAB, 202
 HOMER, 88, 104, 121, 138, 235, 255,
     356

- HORACE, 77, 91, 94, 171, 235, 364
 HOUBIGANT, 75, 129, 148, 183, 268,
 333, 379, 390, 391
 HYRCANUS, 77
 ILVERODANUS. See EVIL-MERODACH.
 ISAAC, 39
 JARCHIUS, 350
 JECONIAH, or CONIAH, 16, 174, 176, 177
 JEHOAHAZ, 15, 168
 JEHOIADA, 223
 JEHOIAKIM, 15, 167, 173, 174, 212
 JEROME, 13, 33, 58, 81, 131, 137,
 192, 222, 288, 304, 323, 335, 375,
 398
 JETHRO, 202
 JOHANAN, 169
 JOKTAN, 336
 JONADAB, 202
 JOSEPHUS, 77, 83, 87, 128, 173, 174,
 176, 208, 210, 242, 251, 287, 288,
 294, 301, 304, 305, 313, 326, 335,
 361, 371, 375
 JOSIAH, 13, 15, 27, 171, 366
 JOTHAM, 211
 JUSTIN, 83
 KAIMES, 165
 KALINSKY, 82
 KEDAR, 336
 KENNICOTT, 4, 8, 51, 94, 147, 164,
 171, 185, 249, 268, 331, 379, 402
 KIMCHI, 83, 206, 287, 350
 LE CLERC, 108, 244
 L'EMPEREUR, 69
 LIVY, 255, 338
 LOWTH, MR., 40, 97, 104, 119, 128,
 139, 164, 243, 248, 250, 254, 266,
 288, 319, 325, 395
 LOWTH, BISHOP, 3, 4, 18, 22, 27, 28,
 45, 49, 50, 75, 79, 88, 92, 97, 114,
 116, 119, 137, 160, 165, 189, 191,
 218, 227, 231, 263, 268, 277, 307,
 313, 316, 321, 322, 323, 328, 329,
 349, 358, 363, 364, 376, 384, 385,
 398, 399, 400, 401
 LUCILIUS, 88
 LUDOLPHUS, 51
 MAILLET, 45, 182, 201
 MAIMONIDES, 212
 MANASSEH, 14, 75, 366
 MAUNDRELL, 108
 MEGASTHENES, 294
 MEIBOMIUS, 185
 MICAH, 197
 MICAIAH, 105, 184
 MICHAELIS, 46, 143, 277
 MILTON, 383
 MIZRAIM, 304
 MUDGE, 58
 NABONADIUS. See BELSHAZZAR.
 NABOPOLLASSAR, 16, 128
 NEBUCHADNEZZAR, 16, 26, 81, 128,
 173, 174, 186, 188, 194, 305, 310,
 313, 333, 334, 360, 372
 NEBUZARADAN, 235, 281, 284, 285,
 367, 372, 409
 NERIGLISSAR, 188
 NIMROD, 55
 NOLDIUS, 62, 97, 99, 103, 114, 139,
 325
 OPPIAN, 109
 ORIGEN, 135, 361
 OVID, 307
 PACHOMIUS, 7
 PASHUR, 155, 158, 159, 223
 PATRICK, 266
 PETERS, 144
 PHARAOH HOPHRA, 301, 310
 PHARAOH-NECHO, 15, 26, 302, 310
 PHUT, 304
 PIETRO DELLA VALLE, 204
 PLINY, 20, 64, 65, 68, 82, 83, 193,
 304, 338
 POCOCKE, 212, 239
 PRIESTLEY, 189
 PRIDEAUX, 172, 206, 259, 360
 PSAMMITICHUS, 192
 PTOLEMY, 188, 319, 328
 QUINTUS CURTIUS, 132
 RACHEL, 226, 234
 RANDOLPH, 169
 RECHAB, 202
 RUSSELL, 213

- SANDYS, 118, 156, 312
 SCHULTENS, 58
 SECKER, 7, 20, 25, 27, 29, 31, 33, 36,
     38, 39, 40, 41, 43, 44, 46, 47, 49,
     50, 54, 58, 59, 60, 62, 66, 68, 69,
     72, 74, 78, 82, 85, 89, 90, 94, 97,
     99, 102, 103, 104, 107, 108, 111,
     116, 119, 123, 124, 128, 131, 132,
     133, 138, 144, 145, 147, 148, 150,
     152, 154, 156, 157, 163, 164, 166,
     171, 172, 176, 180, 181, 182, 183,
     185, 186, 191, 192, 193, 196, 197,
     200, 203, 209, 211, 214, 215, 216,
     217, 219, 220, 221, 223, 227, 228,
     230, 234, 235, 240, 244, 250, 255,
     269, 270, 272, 273, 274, 275, 280,
     284, 285, 287, 288, 289, 291, 294,
     295, 297, 298, 299, 301, 302, 303,
     304, 305, 306, 311, 314, 315, 316,
     317, 319, 322, 324, 326, 334, 335,
     340, 346, 350, 353, 359, 362, 363,
     365, 395, 407
 SENECA, 407
 SENNACHERIB, 151
 SERAIAH, 222
 SHALLUM, 15, 169
 SHALMANESER, 224, 313
 SHAW, 34, 82, 216, 320, 403
 SOLOMON, 77, 83, 142, 205, 210, 277
 STATIUS, 88, 400
 STRABO, 65, 83, 130, 193, 294, 332,
     338
 SYMMACHUS, 57, 89, 131, 155, 263,
     398, 408
 SYRUS, 193
 TACITUS, 83, 151
 TARTAN, 192
 TAYLOR, 35, 93, 241, 329, 353, 396,
     402, 403
 TENA, 193
 THEODORET, 221
 THEODOTION, 57, 89, 94, 121, 155,
     221, 275, 292, 398
 THEOGNIS, 106
 THEOPHRASTUS, 64
 THUCYDIDES, 353
 TIGLATH-PILESER, 334
 TOBIT, 138
 URIJAH, 15, 201
 USHER, 206, 254, 259, 313, 372, 375
 VARRO, 122
 VIGNOLES, 287, 303, 353
 VIRGIL, 51, 91, 122, 311
 WOIDE, 6
 XENOPHON, 194, 338, 353, 356, 357,
     359
 ZEDEKIAH, 17, 169, 174, 177, 215,
     244, 248, 253, 254, 259, 278, 281,
     282, 363, 366, 407
 ZEPHANIAH, 223, 370
 ZERUBBABEL, 177, 224
 ZIMRAN, 193
 ZINGIS, 160

INDEX OF THINGS.

---

- Acra*, one of the hills on which Jerusalem stood, 281
- Acrostic*, see Alphabetical.
- Additions*, Hebrew text, 26, 39, 77, 87, 89, 96, 100, 101, 105, 234, 276, 278, 285, 288, 304, 322, 326, 331, 334, 360, 364, 382, 402
- Aleppo*, ploughing time there, 35
- ..... great houses, how disposed, 169
- ..... lodging rooms, how warmed, 212
- All the kingdoms of the earth*, to be taken in a limited sense, 194
- Almond tree*, its early blossoms, 20
- Alphabetical poems*, 375
- ..... their variety and use, 375
- Alphabetical order*, inverted in three instances, 389, 400
- Amendments*, new, suggested, 26, 54, 58, 59, 85, 90, 93, 102, 103, 111, 113, 135, 147, 163, 221, 261, 269, 270, 277, 280, 285, 289, 298, 318, 322, 343, 365
- Ammon*, the Egyptian Jupiter, 308
- ..... his temple at Thebes, 308
- Anathoth*, a city of Benjamin, belonging to the priests, 13
- Arabia*, whence denominated, 24
- ..... its divisions, 193
- Arabian freebooters*, called "the sword of the wilderness," 409
- Arabians*, distinguished, 91, 336, 337
- ..... the noblest always dwell in tents, 204
- ..... of the desert, why called a mingled people, 336
- ..... their isolated habitations, 337
- ..... Scenites, 203, 336
- ..... watching for plunder, 34
- Arabians*, cut their hair and beards in a particular manner, 91
- Ararat*, the greater Armenia, 356
- Ark of the covenant*, God's footstool, 384
- Arrows*, called "sons of the quiver," 395
- Arphad*, the same as Aradus, 335
- Ashkelon*, 312
- ..... its beautiful and rich valley, 312
- Ashkenaz*, or Ascania, in Phrygia, 356
- Asphaltites*, lake, or Dead Sea, 321
- Asyndeton*, 52, 121, 274, 384
- Athbash*, what, 350
- Azotus*, otherwise Ashdod, 192
- Babylon*, its situation, 194
- ..... its greatness, 357
- ..... height and thickness of its walls, 362
- ..... the manner of its being taken alluded to, 349, 357-359
- ..... its fall and perpetual desolation foretold, 189, 339, 361-363
- ..... why called a golden cup in God's hand, 352
- Babylonians*, supposed to have commenced the year differently from the Jews, 173, note.
- ..... date the reign of Nebuchadnezzar differently from the Jews, 173, 187
- ..... prefixed the names of their idols to those of their great men, 282
- ..... their invasion and conquest of Judea foretold, 36
- Babylonish nation*, of great antiquity, 55
- Balm of Gilead*, 83

- Bactrians*, subjected by Nebuchadnezzar, 194
- Barbary*, time of sowing there, 35
- Bel*, the chief idol of Babylon, 282
- Benhadad*, a name common to the kings of Syria, 336
- Beth-haccerem*, 58
- Bible*, a new English version by authority, much wanted, 9
- Boccore*, an early sort of figs, 216
- Bows*, large ones of steel, how bent, 351
- Brasiers* of lighted coals, used to warm room in several parts of the east, 212
- Calamus aromaticus*, 64
- Captain* of the temple, 159
- Caphtorim*, and country of Caphtor, 312
- Captivity* of the Jews at Babylon, its period ascertained, 188, 189, 220
- Caravanseras*, 84
- Carchemish*, Egyptians defeated there, 16, 128, 302
- Carmel*, 306
- Caverns* in the mountains, used by the Jews for burying places, 24, 115
- Chaldee paraphrase*, 26, 88, 94, 125, 156, 184, 228, 250, 268, 319, 345, 348, 350, 378, 385, 394, 397
- Chaldeans*, addicted to astrology, 92
- Chalybes*, famous for tempering steel, 130
- Change* of apparel a mark of respect in the east, 373
- Chapters*, their disorderly arrangement how rectified, 14, 166, 186, 201, 215, 248
- ..... not digested in their present order by Jeremiah, 365
- ..... not rightly divided, 22, 42, 76, 83, 275
- Charming* of serpents, 81
- Chief priests*, 158
- Children* of persons of rank, anciently employed in menial offices, 121
- ..... made to pass through the fire, 266
- Chimneys*, none admitted in Jerusalem, 212
- Chittim*, countries of, 25
- Christ*, called "Our Righteousness," 178, 272
- ..... the righteous Branch, 178
- Circumcision*, its moral import, 43
- Cisterns*, or reservoirs, their use in Judea, 35, 288
- Conjectural criticism*, when and how far admissible, 5
- Conversion* of the Gentiles, 36, 111
- Corrections*, Hebrew text by mss., 20, 21, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 32, 35, 36, 41, 42, 43, 50, 51, 53, 55, 60, 62, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 73, 74, 75, 77, 78, 79, 80, 82, 90, 93, 96, 98, 100, 101, 102, 103, 108, 111, 117, 121, 123, 124, 127, 128, 129, 131, 134, 135, 138, 140, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 150, 151, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 163, 167, 168, 180, 182, 184, 186, 187, 188, 190, 191, 192, 197, 198, 199, 200, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 229, 241, 242, 244, 245, 246, 247, 249, 250, 251, 252, 254, 256, 257, 258, 261, 262, 263, 264, 266, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 282, 284, 285, 286, 287, 289, 290, 292, 294, 296, 297, 305, 306, 307, 315, 317, 318, 319, 320, 323, 324, 325, 326, 328, 329, 330, 331, 337, 339, 342, 344, 346, 348, 350, 352, 354, 355, 356, 358, 361, 363, 368, 372, 373, 379, 380, 381, 382, 384, 385, 386, 388, 390, 391, 392, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 401, 402, 403, 406, 408, 409, 410
- Corrections*, Hebrew text by ancient versions only, 28, 29, 40, 55, 57, 60, 82, 87, 93, 102, 117, 123, 143, 154, 182, 186, 227, 230, 235, 303, 345, 346, 350, 362, 364, 388, 389, 391, 392, 406
- Corrections*, Hebrew text by conjecture, 35, 39, 44, 48, 52, 56, 62, 67, 93, 94, 115, 122, 128, 129, 143, 151, 154, 155, 166, 170, 178, 182, 183, 184, 190, 195, 200, 212, 219, 223, 227, 233, 240, 265, 292, 296,

- 303, 304, 306, 314, 318, 322, 329,
333, 335, 348, 351, 352, 357, 358,
359, 361, 364, 367, 369, 379, 380,
382, 386, 391, 392, 402, 406
- Courses* of the priests, 158
- Courts* of justice, held in the city gates, 121, 147, 277, 410
- Covenant* of general release, entered into, and broken, by the Jews, 253
- Covering* the head in affliction, 33
- Covert* of the sabbath, 278
- Cup* of consolation, 138
- ... of the wine of God's wrath, 114,
190, 407
- Cush*, a country of merchandise, 160
- Cushites*, Arabians bordering on the Red Sea, 118, 193, 304
- Cutting* the flesh in mourning, 135,
287, 302, 323
- ..... forbidden the Jews,
135-137
- ..... the hair in the like circumstances usual with many nations, but forbidden by the law of Moses, 137
- Damascus*, 334
- Darkness*, an emblem of distress, 31
- Death*, personified, 89, 395
- Delusive* appearance of water in the desert, 132
- Desolation* of Judah, whence to be computed, 16
- Difference* in the given heights of Solomon's brazen pillars, how reconciled, 370
- Distinction* between אלהים and בעלים, 86
- Doves* build in the natural hollows of rocks, 320
- Dragons* suck in the air, 122
- Dress*, its magnificence in the east consisted much in the rich colours, 95
- Drought*, a calamity frequent in Palestine, 121
- Dungeon*, 258, 276
- Dwelling houses* of great men used for prisons in the east, 258
- Dying*, an art carried to great perfection by the ancients, 95
- East wind*, used to express God's severe judgments, 152
- Edom*, or Idumea, 198, 329, 402, 407
- Egypt*, invaded and plundered by Nebuchadnezzar, 18, 295, 305
- ..... her numerous cities, 307
- ..... her fall and restoration, 305-309
- ..... famous for manufactures, 160
- Egyptians*, deceitful allies, 32, 279, 305
- ..... their defeat at Carchemish foretold, 242
- ..... their repositories for the dead, 201
- Elam*, or Elymais, an ancient kingdom, 337
- .... distinct from Persia, 337
- .... under Daniel's government, 338
- Elamites*, famous archers, 338
- Ellipsis*, 40, 61, 84, 119, 128, 137,
155, 164, 261, 288, 322, 329, 379,
383, 394, 405
- English version*, its marginal notes sometimes preferable, 20, 106, 119, 409
- ..... old, 22, 32, 55, 112,
131, 379
- Ethiopians*, paint their eyes with antimony and soot, 51
- ..... famous for long bows, 304
- Euphrates*, 27, 112, 360
- False prophets*, 179, 180, 218, 243, 388
- Festival*, annually, at Heliopolis, in honour of the sun, 295
- Figs*, three different sorts, 216
- Figures*, strong poetical ones, not to be interpreted too strictly, 165
- Form* of ratifying a covenant, 255
- Formalities* of a Hebrew bargain of sale, 261, 262
- Fullers' fields*, 242
- Gate Harsith*, 155
- .... higher, of Benjamin, 159
- .... middle or centre gate of Jerusalem, 281
- Gareb* and Goatha, 242

- Gaza*, 310, 312
Geruth-Chimham, 289
Gilead, 168, 345
Glosses, from margin into text, 39, 87, 89
Grand ascent from the king's house to the temple at Jerusalem, 277
Gospel dispensation foretold, 36-41, 224, 345
Greek authors, why they mention no conquest of Egypt by the Babylonians, 294

Hamam-et, 320
Hamath, 334
Harangues of historians not genuine, 358
Hebrew words derived from Arabic, 28, 29, 63, 92, 104, 134, 182, 223, 307, 316, 398, 404
Hebrew slaves, entitled to a release after six years, 253, 254
Heifers, used for treading out corn, 342
Hendyadys, 60, 63, 128, 184
Heshbon, 314, 325
Higher court of the temple, 210
Hills, made use of for idolatrous worship, 41, 341
Historical sketch of the times in which Jeremiah prophesied, 14-18
Horonaim, a city of Moab, 315
Human sacrifices, practised by idolatrous Jews, 32, 75, 266
Huns, their custom of wounding their cheeks on the death of a friend or great man, 136
Hunting wild beasts with toils, 400
Hyrcanians, subjected by Nebuchadnezzar, 194

Idiom of the passive verb impersonal, with an accusative after it, 204, 214
Images, fine assemblages of them, 49, 376
Isis, or Io, 307
Israel, sacred to God as the first-fruits, 23
..... the chief of the nations, 232, 233

Israelites, originally designed for husbandmen and shepherds, 237

Jaazer, a city of Moab, 320, 321
..... lake or sea of, geographical mistake, 321, 322
Jeconiah, held in great esteem by the Jews, 176
Jeremiah, his life and character, 13, 14
..... his style of writing, 18, 165
..... vindicated from unmerited censure, 161, 164
Jerusalem, taken by Nebuchadnezzar the first time, 16, 172
..... taken the second time, 16, 174
..... taken the third time, and burned, 17, 252, 281, 368, 371
..... situate in the lot of two tribes, 159
..... built upon two hills, 251, 281
..... its enlarged plan in future times, 241
Jews, carried captives to Babylon at six different times, 372
Jonadab's charge to the Rechabites, probable motive of, 203
Jordan, subject to great inundations, 108
Josephus, convicted of mistakes, 173, 174
Jubilee, a year of general release, 254
Judah, called "God's mountain," 143

Kedar, 25
..... a general name for the Arabs descended from Ishmael, 336
Kedem, one of the divisions of Arabia, 193, 336
Keepers of fields, 47
..... of the door of the temple at Jerusalem, 371
Kermes, or summer-fig, 216
Kidron, the brook, 242
Kir-heres, a principal city of Moab, 320

Lamentations of Jeremiah, their metrical construction, 375

- Lamentations* of Jeremiah, date and occasion, 375, 376
 ..... poetic excellence, 376
Lamentation of David over Abner, 146
 ..... over Saul and Jonathan, 165
Laws and institutions of the Nabathæans and Saracens, 203
Lead, used in refining silver, anciently, 68
Lebanon, 151, 168, 174, 175
Lions, denote great princes and conquerors, 26
Locusts, 356
Luhith, 315
- Marks* on the hand, 263
Masoretical readings, rejected, 28, 30, 31, 48, 56, 58, 65, 85, 115, 127, 154, 168, 175, 182, 220, 225, 260, 264, 266, 276, 285, 314, 341, 347, 351, 358, 366, 367, 370, 384
Messiah, called "David," 224, 227
Migdol, or Magdolus, in Egypt, 295
Milcom, the chief deity of the Ammonites, 327, 328
Mill-stones, their noise first heard in the morning, 187
Minni, the lesser Armenia, 356
Money, anciently paid by weight, 261
Moon, constantly masculine in old northern languages, 72
Mountains, powerful nations and princes so called, 143, 355
Mournful outcries over the dead, 134, 165
Mourning feasts, 137
Mourning women, 87, 165
- Nazarites*, 74, 404
Nebo, an idol of the Babylonians, 282
Nebuchadnezzar, styled "the sword of Jehovah," 313
Nergal, an idol of the Cuthites, 282
New amendments suggested, see Amendments.
New names assumed by kings, on mounting the throne, 169, 176
New Zealanders, their custom of cutting themselves on the forehead in mourning, 135
- Nitre*, or Natrum, of the ancients, 28
No, otherwise Thebes, in Egypt, 308
Noph, otherwise Memphis, 27, 295
Numbers of Jews carried to Babylon, 371, 372
- Oaks*, scenes of idolatrous worship, 32
Oath, a solemn act of religion, 42
 .... ancient manner of administering it, 343
Omissions, Hebrew text, 75, 127, 155, 199, 222, 241, 262, 272, 287, 323, 328, 354, 372, 385, 391, 397
Ophir, gold of, see Uphaz
Ostrich, its unnatural cruelty, 403
Otaheitean women, wound the crown of their head in mourning, 135
 ..... cut off their hair on the like occasion, 137
Overflowing of vitiated bile occasioned by vexation, 387
- Painting* eyelids, a fashion of eastern ladies, 50
Pans of coals, see Brasiers.
Parallism, a mark of versification, 5, 6
 ..... its use in correcting and interpreting, 42, 49, 64, 95
Paranomasia, 20, 40, 314
Passages cited in the New Testament, 234, 239
Pathros, or 'Thebais, 295
Pelusium, 295
Peninsula of Arabia, 91, 193, 336
Period of seventy years' captivity, ascertained, 188, 189
Persians, commonly called "Medes," 353
Petra, or Selah, strong city of Idumea, 332
Philadelphia, see Rabbah.
Philistines, when ravaged by Nebuchadnezzar, 310
Phocæans, their oath not to return to their own country, 364
Phut, 304

- Pillars* of brass, in Solomon's temple, 369
 ..... or tall poles set up as way-marks in the desert, 236
Pit, or reservoir, at Mizpeh, 288
Pomegranates on the brasen pillars, their numbers, 370
Potter's wheel, 149
Princes of Judah, their court, or sanhedrim, 198
Principal scribe of the host, 371
Prisoners of the land, insolvent debtors delivered over to their creditors, 398
 ..... of war, their treatment, 30, 118
 ..... how disposed of by the Mogul Tartars, 160
Promise of perpetuity in the lines of David and Levi, 272
Prophecies of Jeremiah, part in metre and part in prose, 22
 ..... not compiled into a book till long after the first publication, 311
 ..... concerning the Philistines and other nations, when delivered, 309-311
 ..... when fulfilled, 313
Prophecies of the perpetuity of the Jewish nation, a proof of their divine inspiration, 309
Prophecy by vision, 112, 191, 231
 ..... misapplied to the miraculous conception of the Virgin Mary, 236
Prophets, an order of men bred in seminaries or schools, 197
 ..... called watchmen, 64
Prostitutes, their punishment, 119
Proverb of fathers eating sour grapes, &c., explained, 238

Rabbah of the children of Ammon, 321
Rains, former and latter, 34
Ramah, a city of Benjamin, 234
Rechabites, when they retired into Jerusalem, 202
 ..... their descent and rules of living, 202, 203

Reigns of Jehoiakim and Zedekiah, intended for the punishment of the Jews, 366
Release of Hebrew slaves given and recalled, 253
Reservoirs, see Cisterns
Restoration of Jews under Christ, 38, 224, 225, 267, 327, 341
Return of Jews from Babylon, foretold, 189, 340
Roll, read by Bāruch only once, 206-208

Saba, 65.
Sabæans, men of tall stature, 160
Sabbatical year, 254
Sackcloth, 66
Sacrifices of the wicked not desired, 73
Samaritan text, 127, 325
Scribes, 79, 198, 262
Sealing deeds, an ancient mode of authentication, 262
Selah, see Petra
Sepulchres of persons of condition, distinct from the vulgar, 201
Seraiah, sent with the tribute to Babylon from Zedekiah, 364
Shadow of death, 24, 115
Shallecheth, a gate of the temple, 278
Shaving the head and beard, customary in mourning, 74, 137, 287, 312, 323
Sheshach, 194, 360
Shiloh, 70, 197, 287
Shushan, capital of Susiana, 338
Sibmah, famous for its wines, 321
Sihor, a name of the Nile, 27
Silence, expressive of affliction, 312, 387
 ..... a mark of mark of depopulation, 362
Singular nouns, with a plural sense, 229
Singular verb, or adjective, used with a plural substantive, 47, 168, 324, 342
Sitting, a posture of humiliation, 116, 317
Sitting, or lying in ashes, customary in affliction, 66

- Smiting* on the thigh, an indication of sorrow, 235
- Sodom*, its punishment less than that of Jerusalem, 403
- Sorek*, vine of, 28
- Spices* burnt at the interment of Jewish princes, 253
- Sun*, constantly feminine in old northern languages, 72
- Tabor*, Mount, 306
- Tahpanhes*, or Daphnæ Pelusiacæ, 27, 293, 295
- Talmud*, Jerusalem, 48, 49, 246
..... Babylon, 48, 246, 284
- Targum*, Jonathan, see Chaldee Paraphrase
- Tear*, called "the daughter of the eye," 390
- Tekoa*, 58
- Temple* at Jerusalem, kept like a military garrison, 159
- Temple* of the sun, at Heliopolis, 295
- Terebinthus*, its healing resin, 83
- Terror*, a line strung with feathers, 328, 400
- Thebais*, see Pathros
- Thebes* in Egypt, called Diospolis, see No
- Third entrance* into the house of Jehovah, 278
- Threshing* with a drag, 358
- Topheth*, 75, 157
- Tower* of Hananeel, 241
- Transpositions*, Hebrew Text, 35, 52, 68, 93, 115, 148, 154, 218, 335, 351, 361, 392, 397
- Travellers' lodge*, 84
- Treasures* taken out of David's sepulchre, 77
- Tribute* sent to Babylon, 364
- Tseboa*, a variegated ravenous bird, 108
- Type* of the potter, 149
.... of breaking a potter's vessel, 155
.... of good and bad figs, 216
.... of bands and yokes, 243
- Tyre*, siege of, 305, 310
- Tyrian purple*, 95
- Ulai river*, 338
- Uphaz*, gold of, 94
- Uz*, land of, 192
- Valley* of Hinnom, 29, 75, 155, 242
..... Jehoshaphat, 155
..... between Gaza and Ashkelon, 312
- Variation* of the same names, 249, 281, 293
- Verbs*, used indefinitely, or impersonally, 36, 78, 88, 204, 214, 324, 356, 381, 383
- Verses* wrongly divided, 29, 81, 89, 233, 320, 330, 331, 340, 351, 397
- Version* of the LXX., its use, 25, 28, 32, 50, 87, 89, 100, 101, 103, 123, 154, 202, 227, 234, 240, 241, 247, 262, 263, 265, 284, 285, 288, 295, 316, 320, 330, 334, 340, 341, 347, 350, 352, 355, 359, 366, 373, 376, 381, 385, 389, 392, 393, 394, 401, 402
- Version* of the LXX., ms. Pachom., 7, 10, 28, 89, 188, 244, 247, 250, 251, 264, 275, 285, 288, 292, 294, 297, 304, 311, 314, 320, 331, 340, 348, 350, 355 ;
- Version*, Syriac, 32, 41, 94, 100, 125, 144, 154, 214, 215, 261, 265, 288, 335, 388, 389, 392, 402
- Vulgate*, 27, 57, 69, 100, 104, 212, 227, 242, 265, 316, 330, 335, 353, 402
- Vineyards*, not free for the planter's use till the fifth year, 232
- Voice*, low, like an enchanter's, 307
- Vows* of women, when not binding, 299
- Wild asses*, extremely sharp sighted, 122
- Wild beasts*, forced out of their thickets by the inundations of Jordan, 108, 332
- Wilderuess*, why called a pit, 24
- Wind*, scorching and malignant in the desert of Arabia, 45, 119, 182, 409
- Wines*, require to be kept on their lees, 316
- Winter-fog*, 216

- Witnesses* anciently did not subscribe their names to deeds, 263
- Women*, celebrated public rejoicings with music and dancing, 231
 . . . . . sometimes denote weak and effeminate persons, 391
- Words* wrongly joined or divided in Hebrew Text, 28, 48, 60, 67, 78, 82, 84, 103, 129, 151, 166, 182, 185, 212, 303, 307, 318, 330, 333, 351, 359, 361, 369, 379
- Words* improperly connected, 34, 64, 115, 120, 135, 143, 181, 195, 255, 307, 325, 369
- Year* of release, 254
- Zedekiah*, tried and condemned as a traitor, 282
- אדני for יהוה, 381, 384, 385, 386, 391, 392, 397, 399, 401
- איה for איה, 258
- א and אים, 25, 192, 312
- אכן, its force, 44
- א and ה changed, 41, 48, 80, 157, 187, 276, 307, 330, 342, 368, 402
- א and ע mistaken, 102, 293, 386
- ב and כ mistaken, 150, 152
- ב and נ mistaken, 240, 268, 352
- בצע, πλεονεξία, 62
- במות, strong holds, 143
- ד and ר mistaken, 122, 155, 196, 242, 286, 323
- הוא, 54
- הרגיע, 63, 231, 348
- התחורה, 107, 171
- ו and י mistaken, 60, 115, 129, 140, 146, 155, 285, 291, 294, 314, 315, &c. &c.
- ו and ך mistaken, 227
- חטא, punishment for sin, 399
- י lost, 35, 118, 166, 167, 200, 261, 270, 279, 284, 291, 303, &c. &c.
- כפש as כבש, 396
- לוא for לו, 380
- לבן, “after this,” 139, 229, 266, 316, 361
- מדרב, 45, 86, 110
- ם, plural termination, omitted, 171, 270, 402
- על followed by a verb in the preter, 228
- ערב, 192, 193
- עצבים, 398
- עון, punishment, 352, 407, 409
- פשיים or שפים, 45, 75, 110
- קצוצי פאה, 91, 193, 325
- שמט, 144

THE END.

A LITERAL TRANSLATION
OF
THE PROPHETS,
FROM
ISAIAH TO MALACHI.

WITH NOTES,
CRITICAL, PHILOLOGICAL, AND EXPLANATORY.

BY LOWTH, BLAYNEY, NEWCOME, WINTLE, HORSLEY, ETC.

IN FIVE VOLUMES.
VOL. III.—EZEKIEL.

BY WILLIAM NEWCOME, D.D., BISHOP OF WATERFORD.

A New Edition.

LONDON:
PRINTED FOR THOMAS TEGG & SON, CHEAPSIDE;
R. GRIFFIN & CO., GLASGOW; AND
TEGG, WISE, & CO., LOWER ABBEY STREET, DUBLIN.

MDCCCXXXVI.

THE PROPHET EZEKIEL.

SANCTO AUSUS RECLUDERE FONTES.

VIRG.

AN ATTEMPT

TOWARDS

AN IMPROVED VERSION,

A

METRICAL ARRANGEMENT, AND AN EXPLANATION

OF

THE PROPHET EZEKIEL.

BY WILLIAM NEWCOME, D.D.

BISHOP OF WATERFORD,

AND MEMBER OF THE ROYAL IRISH ACADEMY.

.

LONDON:

PRINTED FOR THOMAS TEGG AND SON,
73, CHEAPSIDE.

R. GRIFFIN & CO., GLASGOW ; AND TEGG, WISE, & CO., DUBLIN.

MDCCCXXXVI.

LONDON :
BRADBURY AND EVANS, PRINTERS,
WHITEFRIARS.

PREFACE.

---

I MOST gratefully acknowledge the important helps which I have received in my attempt to explain the prophet Ezekiel; as they will stamp on the following work its principal value. His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury very obligingly allowed me a transcript of Archbishop Secker's valuable notes, from the manuscripts bequeathed to the Lambeth library; and likewise of that judicious writer's dissertation on the vision of the temple, which is inserted in its proper place. Dr. Woide, of the British Museum, deserves to be as well known for his courtesy in furnishing assistance to editors, as for the literary productions with which he has favoured the public. To this eminent scholar I am indebted for copying Archbishop Secker's remarks; for collations of a <sup>1</sup> Coptic version supposed to be of the second century, and of the Pachomian manuscript of the Septuagint version, ascribed to the tenth or eleventh century; for an English translation of the very learned J. D. Michaelis's annotations, subjoined to his German version of the bible; and for a curious extract relating to Ezekiel, translated from Professor Eichhorn's <sup>2</sup> introduction to the Old Testament, written also in the German language, and highly esteemed in that country. Learned notes on Ezekiel were also transmitted to me by the Rev. Mr. Henry Dimock, my worthy contemporary at Pembroke College in the University of Oxford.

IT is uncertain whether Ezekiel calls himself a <sup>3</sup> priest, or the son of a priest. <sup>4</sup> Josephus says that he was carried to Babylon in his

<sup>1</sup> See Bishop Lowth's preface to Isaiah, p. lxvii.

<sup>2</sup> Leipsic. 1783. 8vo.

<sup>3</sup> Ezek. i. 4. The construction in the original is doubtful. The word of Jehovah came expressly unto Ezekiel the son of Buzi the priest. Here the word priest may be construed with Ezekiel, according to the Greek, the Vulgate, and our English version; or with Buzi, according to the points in the Arabic. The former construction is favoured by the close of Isai. xxxvii. 2.

<sup>4</sup> Ant. x. vi. 3. See 2 Chron. xxxvi. 5, 6.

youth, with three thousand other captives of rank, at the time of Nebuchadnezzar's expedition to Jerusalem in the reign of Jehoiakim, king of Judah. The warlike and victorious king of Babylon made another descent on Judah, within so short an interval as three months and ten days after the conquest of Jehoiakim: at which time Jerusalem was so pressed by a vigorous siege, that Jehoiachin, who succeeded his father Jehoiakim in the throne of Judah, was <sup>1</sup> compelled to a surrender; and so great a number of captives was taken to Babylon, that none remained in the conquered country except the poorest of the people. We may justly conclude that Ezekiel became an exile in the course of that calamitous year when Jerusalem was twice subdued; and probably at the latter period, as the captivity of Jehoiachin is the era from which he commonly <sup>2</sup> dates his prophecies; and as the date from the beginning of his own captivity, which <sup>3</sup> occurs in two places, may reasonably be supposed to coincide with his other general mode of computation.

The king of Chaldea <sup>4</sup> planted his Jewish captives at Tel-abib, and other places on the river Chebar; which flows into the east side of the Euphrates at Circesium, or Carchemish, near two hundred miles northward of Babylon. This was the scene of Ezekiel's prophecies, which were continued through a course of <sup>5</sup> twenty two years: here he was present in body, though <sup>6</sup> in visionary representation he was sometimes taken to Jerusalem.

That we may better understand the propriety and force of these divine revelations, the circumstances and disposition of the Jews in their own country, and in their state of banishment, and the chief historical events of that period, should be stated and considered.

<sup>7</sup> Zedekiah, uncle to the captive king Jehoiachin, was advanced by Nebuchadnezzar to the kingdom of Judah: and the tributary King bound himself to subjection by a solemn <sup>8</sup> oath in the name of Jehovah. But, notwithstanding the divine judgments which had overwhelmed Judah during the reigns of his two immediate predecessors, <sup>9</sup> he did evil in the sight of God, who alone could <sup>10</sup> save by few or by many. Jerusalem was so idolatrous, impure, oppressive, and blood-thirsty,

<sup>1</sup> 2 Kings xxiv. 8—16.

<sup>2</sup> C. i. 2. &c.

<sup>3</sup> C. xxxiii. 21. xl. 1.

<sup>4</sup> C. i. 1, 3. iii. 15, 23. x. 15, 20.

<sup>5</sup> From the 5th to the 27th year of Jehoiachin's captivity. C. i. 2. xxix. 17.

<sup>6</sup> C. viii. 3. xl. 2.

<sup>7</sup> 2 Kings xxiv. 17.

<sup>8</sup> 2 Chron. xxxvi. 13. Ezek. xvii. 18.

<sup>9</sup> 2 Chron. xxxvi. 12.

<sup>10</sup> 1 Sam. xiv. 6.

that God is <sup>1</sup> represented as smiting his hands together through astonishment at such a scene of iniquity. The prophet Jeremiah was rejected, insulted, and persecuted. False prophets abounded; whose language was, <sup>2</sup> Ye shall not serve the King of Babylon: <sup>3</sup> I have broken the yoke of the King of Babylon. They even limited the restoration of the sacred vessels, and the return of Jehoiachin and his fellow-captives, to so short an interval as <sup>4</sup> two years. Zedekiah, blinded by his vices and by these delusions, flattered by the embassies which he had received from <sup>5</sup> Edom Moab Ammon Tyre and Sidon, and probably submitting with his accustomed <sup>6</sup> timidity to the advice of evil counsellors, rebelled against his powerful conqueror, and sent ambassadors into <sup>7</sup> Egypt for assistance. Hence arose a third invasion of the Chaldeans. Pharaoh Hophrah, King of Egypt, did not advance to the assistance of Zedekiah till Jerusalem was <sup>8</sup> besieged. The Babylonians raised the siege, perhaps with a design of distressing the Egyptians in their march, and of giving battle when advantage offered: but Pharaoh, with great perfidy and pusillanimity, <sup>9</sup> returned to his own country, and left the rebellious and perjured King of Judah to the rage of his enemies. Before the siege was thus interrupted, Zedekiah endeavoured to conciliate the favour of God by complying so far with the Mosaic law as to proclaim the sabbatical year a year of <sup>10</sup> liberty to Hebrew servants. But such was his impiety, and so irresolute and fluctuating were his counsels, that on the departure of the Chaldeans he <sup>11</sup> revoked his edict. Upon which God, by his prophet Jeremiah, proclaimed <sup>12</sup> liberty to the sword, to the pestilence, and to the famine; and commissioned these messengers of his wrath to avenge him on his people. When the siege was resumed, we have a further instance of Zedekiah's extreme infatuation; his rejection of <sup>13</sup> Jeremiah's counsel, given him by the authority of God, to preserve himself, his family, and his city, by a surrender to the Chaldeans. Thus after a siege of <sup>14</sup> eighteen months, Jerusalem was stormed and burnt; <sup>15</sup> Zedekiah was taken in his flight; his sons were slain before his eyes; his eyes were afterwards put out, agreeably to the savage custom of eastern conquerors; and he was carried in chains to Babylon.

<sup>1</sup> Ezek. xxii. 13. See also Jer. v. 1.
vii. 6.

<sup>2</sup> Jer. xxvii. 9.

<sup>3</sup> Jer. xxviii. 2.

<sup>4</sup> Jer. xxviii. 3, 4.

<sup>5</sup> Jer. xxvii. 3.

<sup>6</sup> Jer. xxxviii. 25.

<sup>7</sup> Ezek. xvii. 15.

<sup>8</sup> Jer. xxxvii. 5.

<sup>9</sup> Jer. xxxvii. 7.

<sup>10</sup> Exod. xxi. 2.

<sup>11</sup> Jer. xxxiv. 11.

<sup>12</sup> Jer. xxxiv. 17.

<sup>13</sup> Jer. xxxviii. 17.

<sup>14</sup> Jer. xxxix. 1, 2.

<sup>15</sup> Jer. xxxix. 5, 6, 7.

The exiles on the river Chebar were far from being awakened to a devout acknowledgment of God's justice, by the punishment inflicted on them. They continued <sup>1</sup> rebellious and idolatrous; they hearkened to <sup>2</sup> false prophets and prophetesses; and they so alienated God that he <sup>3</sup> refused to be enquired of by them. In vain did their great prophet Ezekiel endeavour to attract and win them by the charms of his flowing and insinuating eloquence; in vain did he assume a more vehement tone, to awe and alarm them by heightened scenes of calamity and terror.

We know few particulars concerning the Jews in Babylon. They enjoyed the instruction and example of the prophet Daniel; who was carried away captive to that city <sup>4</sup> in the third year of Jehoiakim, eight years before the captivity of Ezekiel. Jeremiah cautioned them not to be deceived by their false <sup>5</sup> prophets and diviners; against some of whom he denounced fearful judgments. He exhorted them to <sup>6</sup> seek the peace of the city where they dwelt, to take wives, build houses, and plant gardens, till their restoration after seventy years. He also comforted them by a prediction of all the evil which God designed to inflict on Babylon: he assured them that none should remain in that proud city, but that it should be desolate for ever. The messenger, when he had read the book containing these denunciations, was commanded to <sup>7</sup> bind a stone to it, and cast it into the Euphrates, and say, "Thus shall Babylon sink, and shall not rise from the evil which I will bring on her." It further appears, by <sup>8</sup> divine hymns now extant, that God vouchsafed to inspire some of these Babylonian captives with his holy spirit.

Nebuchadnezzar appointed <sup>9</sup> Gedaliah Ruler of the people that remained in Judea: and the scattered military <sup>10</sup> commanders and their men, together with other Jews who had taken refuge in the neighbouring countries, submitted to his government on the departure of the Chaldeans. The Jews employed themselves in <sup>11</sup> gathering the fruits of the earth; and a calm succeeded the tempest of war: but it was soon interrupted by the turbulence of this devoted people. Ishmael slew Gedaliah; and compelled the wretched remains of the Jews

<sup>1</sup> Ezek. ii. 3. xx. 39.

<sup>2</sup> Ezek. xiii. 2, 17.

<sup>3</sup> C. xx. 3.

<sup>4</sup> Dan. i. 1.

<sup>5</sup> Jer. xxix. 8, 9, 15, 21.

<sup>6</sup> Jer. xxix. 5, 6, 7, 10.

<sup>7</sup> Jer. li. 59—64.

<sup>8</sup> See ps. lxxix. cii. cvi. cxxxvii.

<sup>9</sup> 2 Kings xxv. 23. Jer. xl. 5.

<sup>10</sup> Jer. xl. 7, 11.

<sup>11</sup> Jer. xl. 12.

in Mizpah, the seat of Gedaliah's government, to retire with him towards the country of the <sup>1</sup> Ammonites, a people <sup>2</sup> hostile to the Chaldeans. <sup>3</sup> Johanan raised a force to revenge this mad and cruel act, pursued Ishmael, overtook him, and recovered from him the people whom he had forced to follow him: but the assassin himself escaped with eight men to his place of refuge.

The succeeding event furnishes another signal instance of human infatuation. Johanan through fear of the Chaldeans, many of whom Ishmael had <sup>4</sup> massacred together with Gedaliah, conceived a design of <sup>5</sup> retreating to Egypt: but, before he executed this resolution, he formally consulted the prophet Jeremiah. The <sup>6</sup> prophet answered him in the name of Jehovah, that, if Johanan and the people abode in Judea, God would build them and not pull them down, would plant them and not pluck them up; but, if they went to sojourn in Egypt, they should die by the sword, by famine, and by pestilence, and should become an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach. Notwithstanding this awful assurance, and the many prophecies of Jeremiah which the most calamitous events had lately verified, Johanan defied the living God and his prophet, and madly adhered to his determination.

Not long after the destruction of Jerusalem, the siege of Tyre was undertaken by Nebuchadnezzar. It continued for the space of thirteen years: and many think that the <sup>7</sup> conquest of the Sidonians, Philistines, Ammonites, Moabites, and Idumeans, coincided with this period; the Chaldean being able to make powerful detachments from his vast forces. After the reduction of that famous city, Nebuchadnezzar made his descent on Egypt, which he subdued and ravaged throughout: and at this time Johanan, and his Jewish colonists, experienced the vengeance of the conqueror together with the Egyptians. So widely did Nebuchadnezzar spread his victories and devastations, that, according to the learned chronologer <sup>8</sup> Marsham, this might justly be called the æra of the subversion of cities.

Omnis eo terrore Ægyptus, et Indi,
Omnis Arabs, omnes verterunt terga Sabæi.
Virg.

<sup>1</sup> Jer. xli. 10.

<sup>2</sup> Jer. xxvii. 3.

<sup>3</sup> Jer. xli. 11—15.

<sup>4</sup> Jer. xli. 3.

<sup>5</sup> Jer. xli. 17.

<sup>6</sup> Jer. xlii.

<sup>7</sup> See the prophecies, Jer. xxvii. 2, 3. xlviii. xlix. Ezek. xxv.

<sup>8</sup> London ed. 1672. fol. p. 556. see xviii.

How highly Grotius thought of Ezekiel, appears from the eulogium bestowed on him in the introduction to his commentary on that prophet. "He had great erudition and genius: so that, setting aside his gift of prophecy which is incomparable, he may deservedly be compared with Homer, on account of his beautiful conceptions, his illustrious comparisons, and his extensive knowledge of various matters, particularly of architecture."

Bishop Lowth <sup>1</sup> characterizes Ezekiel as "much inferior to Jeremiah in elegance; but as equal even to Isaiah in sublimity, though their style of composition is very different. For he is bold, vehement, tragical, wholly intent on exaggeration: in his sentiments elevated, warm, bitter, indignant; in his images fertile, magnificent, harsh, and sometimes almost deformed; in his diction grand, weighty, austere, rough, and sometimes uncultivated: abounding in repetitions, not for the sake of ornament or gracefulness, but through indignation and violence. Whatever subject he undertakes to treat of, he pursues it diligently, he remains entirely fixed on it, and rarely deviates from his purpose; so that his reader is scarcely ever unable to discern the series and connection of his matter. Perhaps he is excelled in other respects by most of the prophets; but none in the whole compass of writers has ever equalled him in the manner of writing for which he seems to have been singularly qualified by nature, in force, impetuosity, weight, and grandeur. His diction is sufficiently perspicuous; almost all his obscurity lies in his matter: his visions are particularly obscure; and yet, as in Hosea Amos and Zechariah, they are interpreted by a narration which is plain and altogether historical. The greater part of Ezekiel, and what lies in the middle of his book, is poetical, whether we regard the matter or the diction: but he is for the most part so rude and void of composition in his sentences, that I am often doubtful what to determine in this respect."

In another <sup>2</sup> place he thus expresses his opinion on the last topic: "There are some prophecies, weighty perhaps and elevated, but by no means composed in a poetical style and turn of sentences: of which kind there is much in Ezekiel, who perhaps should be oftener placed among the orators than the poets."

He thinks <sup>3</sup> that, with respect to style, we may justly assign to

<sup>1</sup> Hebr. Præl. xxi. 279. 8<sup>o</sup>. 2d ed.

<sup>2</sup> H. P. 261.

<sup>3</sup> H. P. 279.

Ezekiel the same rank among the Hebrews that Æschylus holds among the Greeks.

He remarks that this prophet is almost always employed in exciting <sup>1</sup> the passion of terror: and, again, that it is customary with him to <sup>2</sup> inspire us with terror rather than to move our pity; especially in his two <sup>3</sup> lamentations on the city and king of Tyre. Thus also his <sup>4</sup> two prophecies which denounce the fall of Pharaoh and Egypt, and his <sup>5</sup> poetical parables on the Princes of Judah and on Jerusalem, <sup>6</sup> convey scarcely any signification of grief, but breathe a remarkable spirit of menace and terror.

He places the first commendation of parable in the use of known and fit images, the signification of which is plain and determinate: and asks, "What can be more accurate in this way than <sup>7</sup> the useless vine delivered over to the fire, under which image the ungrateful people of God are more than once represented? what, than the <sup>8</sup> whelp of the lioness falling into a pit? by which how appositely are the captive princes of Judah marked out! What, than the beautiful, tall, and most flourishing <sup>9</sup> cedar of Libanus, hiding its head in the clouds, but at length cut down and left; which exhibits the glory and fall of the Assyrian king in as lively colours as a picture? I shall subjoin one example more;—I mean that similitude under which the love of God to his people, and their allegiance to him, are expressed by colours taken from the holy covenant of marriage: which image Ezekiel has pursued with much freedom in <sup>10</sup> two parables."

He quotes the following allegory, under which the fall of Pharaoh is threatened, as an instance of the dangerous and daring style in the application of a well known metaphor by which darkness is made to represent calamity; a topic on which the Hebrew poets give the full reins to poetical boldness:

<sup>11</sup> * I will cover the heavens when I quench thee,
And I will clothe the stars thereof with black:

* The reader will observe that some parts of Ezekiel are here metrically disposed, which in the body of the following work are represented as prose. There is great difficulty in determining whether many parts of this prophet should be poetically

<sup>1</sup> H. P. 215.

<sup>2</sup> H. P. 301.

<sup>3</sup> C. xxvii. xxviii. 12—19.

<sup>4</sup> C. xxxii.

<sup>5</sup> C. xix.

<sup>6</sup> H. P. 301.

<sup>7</sup> C. xv. xix. 10—14.

<sup>8</sup> C. xix. 1—9.

<sup>9</sup> C. xxxi.

<sup>10</sup> C. xvi. xxiii. H. P. 123, 4.

<sup>11</sup> C. xxxii. 7, 8. H. P. 68, 70.

I will cover the sun with a cloud,
 And the moon shall not give her light.
 All the shining lights of the heavens will I clothe with black over thee,
 And will set darkness upon thy land,
 Saith the Lord Jehovah.

He thus compares the <sup>1</sup> description of the Egyptian multitude brought down to the pit, with similar images in Isaiah's triumphal ode over the King of Babylon: <sup>3</sup> "Ezekiel has excellently furnished the same scene [of the Hebrew Infernum poeticum] with the same ornaments of adjuncts; and has displayed a remarkable instance of that exaggeration which is deservedly esteemed the characteristic of this poet."

The same eminent writer, in his commentary on Isaiah, observes that the image, I have set my face as a flint, <sup>4</sup> "is expressed with great force by Ezekiel, in his bold and vehement manner.

Lo, I have made thy face firm against their faces,
 And thy forehead firm against their foreheads:
 As an adamant, firmer than flint, have I made thy forehead:
 Fear them not, neither be dismayed at their looks,
 Though they be a rebellious house." C. iii. 8, 9.

He <sup>5</sup> introduces this as "a strong instance of the metaphor called Anthropopathia;" by which, from the necessity of expressing the divine attributes by sensible images, the qualities of men are ascribed to God:

Thus shall mine anger be accomplished;
 And I will cause my fury to rest upon them,
 And will be comforted. C. v. 13.

He <sup>6</sup> considers "the description of well established peace, by the image of beating swords into ploughshares and spears into pruning-hooks, as very poetical;" and in his judgment "the prophet Ezekiel has presignified the same great event with equal clearness, though in the more abstruse form of an allegory; from an image, suggested by arranged or not. But as a poetical distribution obtains in the passages quoted from the critics referred to, a like division was observed in all the quotations, for the sake of uniformity in this introductory part.

<sup>1</sup> Ezek. xxxii. 18—32.

<sup>2</sup> Isai. xiv. 9—19.

<sup>3</sup> H. P. 89.

<sup>4</sup> Isai. i. 7.

<sup>5</sup> Notes on Isaiah, p. 14.

<sup>6</sup> p. 22.

the former <sup>1</sup> part of the prophecy, happily introduced, and well pursued.

Thus saith the Lord Jehovah :

I will take from the highest branch of a lofty cedar, and will set it ;

From the top of its young twigs I will crop off a tender one, and will plant it ;

Upon a mountain which is high and eminent,

In a lofty mountain of Israel, will I plant it ;

And it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit,

And shall become a goodly cedar :

And under it shall dwell every fowl of every wing ;

In the shadow of its branches shall they dwell.

And all the trees of the field shall know

That I Jehovah have brought low the high tree,

Have raised high the low tree,

Have dried up the green tree,

And have made the dry tree to flourish.

I Jehovah have spoken, and will do it.

C. xvii. 22—4.

“The severity of God’s judgments,” says the same <sup>2</sup> writer, “Ezekiel has set forth at large, after his manner, with great boldness of imagery, and force of expression. God threatens to gather them into the midst of Jerusalem, as into a furnace ; to blow the fire upon them, to melt them :

Son of man, the house of Israel

Is become unto me as dross :

All of them are as brass, and tin, and iron,

And lead, in the midst of the furnace :

They are as the dross of silver.

Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah :

Because ye are all of you become dross,

Therefore, lo, I will gather you

Into the midst of Jerusalem.

As men gather silver, and brass, and iron,

And lead, and tin, into the midst of the furnace,

To blow the fire upon it, to melt it ;

So will I gather you in mine anger and in my fury,

And I will blow upon you and will melt you :

Yea, I will collect you,

And will blow upon you with the fire of my wrath,

And ye shall be melted in the midst thereof.

As silver is melted in the midst of the furnace,

So shall ye be melted in the midst thereof ;

And ye shall know that I Jehovah,

Have poured out my fury upon you.”

C. xxii. 18—22.

Behold, it cometh to pass and shall be done,
 Saith the Lord Jehovah :
 This is the day whereof I have spoken.
 And they that dwell in the cities of Israel shall go forth,
 And shall set on fire and burn the armour, the shields and the bucklers,
 The bows, and the arrows, and the handstaves, and the spears ;
 And they shall burn them with fire seven years :
 So that they shall take no wood from the field,
 Neither cut down any from the forests ;
 For they shall burn the armour with fire :
 And they shall spoil those that spoiled them,
 And shall plunder those that plundered them,
 Saith the Lord Jehovah." C. xxxix. 3—10.

Lastly he thus enlarges on Isaiah xxxiv. 6 :

The sword of Jehovah is glutted with blood,
 It is made gross with fat ;
 With the blood of lambs and of goats,
 With the fat of the kidneys of rams :
 For Jehovah hath a sacrifice in Bozrah,
 And a great slaughter in the land of Edom :

" Ezekiel has manifestly imitated this place of Isaiah : he has set forth the great leaders and princes of the adverse powers under the same emblems of goats, bulls, rams, fatlings, &c. and has added to the boldness of the imagery, by introducing God as summoning all the fowls of the air, and the beasts of the field, and bidding them to the feast, which he has prepared for them by the slaughter of the enemies of his people :

And thou, son of man,
 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah :
 Say unto the birds of every wing,
 And unto every beast of the field ;
 Assemble yourselves and come, gather yourselves from every side,
 To my sacrifice which I make for you,
Even a great sacrifice upon the mountains of Israel :
 And ye shall eat flesh, and drink blood ;
 The flesh of the mighty shall ye eat,
 And the blood of the princes of the earth shall ye drink ;
 Of rams, of bulls, of he-goats ;
 Of bulls, all of them fatlings of Bashan.
 And ye shall eat fat till ye be full,
 And ye shall drink blood till ye be drunken,
 Of my sacrifice which I make for you.
 Thus shall ye be filled at my table
With horses and with their riders,
 With mighty men and with all warriors,
 Saith the Lord Jehovah." C. xxxix. 17—20.

“The sublime author of the Revelation, c. xix. 17, 18, has taken this image from Ezekiel, rather than from Isaiah. And I saw an angel standing in the sun, and he cried with a loud voice, saying to all the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven, Come and gather yourselves together unto the supper of the great God; that ye may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses and of them that sit thereon, and of the flesh of all men, both free and bond, both small and great.”

Thus far this able and elegant writer; who, like Newton, Locke, and Clarke, raises the character of commentator on the scriptures to rank and dignity; and shews that the importance of their matter, and the varied beauty of their manner, may so enchant a man of superior learning, taste, and genius, as to engage him in the minute labour and obscure diligence of a verbal critic and annotator.

That eminent orientalist J. D. Michaelis, whose deep and extensive researches have so much elucidated the sacred writings, reprinted the Hebrew prelections at Goettingen, with large notes and additions. The following is his <sup>1</sup> remark on Bishop Lowth's general character of Ezekiel:

“I ought to be almost angry with myself, and to suspect my own judgment, that I cannot agree with Lowth in a matter wholly depending on poetical taste; though I have endeavoured to adapt my sentiments to his opinion. For I am so far from thinking that sublimity should be praised in Ezekiel, much less a sublimity like Isaiah's, that I should rather impute to him more art and luxuriancy in adorning and amplifying his images than can consist with poetical force and sublimity. He is in some respect a perpetual imitator, and yet a new and peculiar one, not great but ingenious: for the images to which the Hebrew poetry had been long before accustomed, which had been invented by others but only seen by them with a glance through a lattice, and on which it is clear that they did not prolixly dwell, are wholly completed by him, and painted so fully and at large, as to make us assert that nothing can be added, that nothing is left in the mind of the reader: and when he does this, he deservedly gains the praise of a rich genius, and causes his readers to understand the ancient poets more perfectly; but he strikes us, and raises our admiration, in an inferior degree.

<sup>1</sup> Notæ in prælect. xxi.

“ I will illustrate this matter by a single example : a perusal of the prophet himself will afford others. Birds of prey are frequently, but concisely, mentioned by the best poets in describing great slaughters. Who is unacquainted with that passage in the beginning of Homer’s Iliad ?

Ἄντοὺς δ’ ἐλώρια τέϋχε κύνεσσιν,
Οἰῶνοισί τε πᾶσι.

It is a part of military boasting in the prose writers of the Hebrews ;
<sup>1</sup> I will give thy flesh to the fowls of the air and to the beasts of the field. Nor are the eastern poets unacquainted with the phrase. I assume what I have endeavoured to prove in my tract on understanding the Hebrew language ; that עוֹרֹת is rightly rendered birds by the ancients. Asaph then says, He gave up their cattle to the hail, and their flocks to the birds. Ps. lxxviii. 48. Moses is more sublime :

I will spend my arrows upon them.
 They shall be consumed by famine, and devoured by birds,
 And by <sup>2</sup> bitter destruction.
 I will also send the teeth of beasts upon them,
 With <sup>3</sup> the poison of serpents of the dust. Deut. xxxii. 23, 4.

But Habakkuk is more excellent than either, when he speaks of Jehovah about to conquer his enemies :

Before him went the pestilence ;
Birds followed his footsteps :

that is, birds certain of their prey. Isaiah is somewhat more copious ;—but so as not to make express mention of birds, and, as it were, of guests.

Jehovah hath a sacrifice in Bozrah,
 And a great slaughter in the land of Edom.
 Wild goats shall fall down with them,
 And bullocks together with bulls.
 Their land shall be drenched with blood,
 And their dust shall be made gross by fat.

Ezekiel, embracing in his mind all these particulars and more, as none can doubt, and studious to imitate the whole of them without the omission of any one, did not use the very images which were supplied, but, as he was luxuriant in a singular richness of genius, amplified them with new fictions, and made them in some degree novel, and his own, by exhausting in his poetry every thing likely to happen in a great slaughter. For, first, when he foretels the slaughter of Magog, c. xxxviii. xxxix. he sees the fields covered with as much warlike preparation and as many arms as are sufficient fuel to the Israelites for seven years: he sees the place destined for the sepulchres of the dead, which from that circumstance was to have an everlasting name; and the name is recorded by him: he relates the manner of marking where unburied carcasses lay; he finishes all the supplemental decorations, all the sportive fancies of the painter, so that he seems scarcely willing to leave any thing to the imagination of the reader, or untouched by his own pencil; and he afterwards subjoins the following passage, which is bold, and in some degree<sup>1</sup> original: c. xxxix. 17—20. ‘Here I seem to read a poet that will not easily dismiss whatever figure or fiction he has conceived in his mind: and who thinks that whatever can with probability be added to the picture is necessary to his poem: and who, for this very reason, approaches nearer to poets of mediocrity than to those of the first rank, because he omits nothing that is beautiful. But see how the author of the Apocalypse, himself a perpetual imitator, born with a more divine genius, and in whose prose-poem (if I may so call it) every thing receives a splendour, has contracted these images of Ezekiel<sup>2</sup>: c. xix. 17, 18: a writer in this respect also a masterly one, that he has placed these words before battle was given, thus increasing the expectation of the reader, and expressing a certainty of victory: almost as historians have related, and have considered it as ominous, that eagles, presaging destruction, have accompanied armies destined to total overthrow.

<sup>1</sup> 1 Sam. xvii. 44.

<sup>2</sup> Pestisque atrocissimæ. J. D. Michaelis.

<sup>3</sup> Iracundiamque. Id.

“‘But Ezekiel does even more; he is so delighted with this image, so intent on the trackless spots of the muses worn by no foot, that he assigns to birds trees, which he uses as emblems of empires, and places the shades of them in the seats of the infernal regions: which is new, and certainly unattempted by the biblical poets.

Upon his ruin dwelt all the fowls of the heavens;
And upon his branches were all the beasts of the field:
To the end that none of all the trees by the waters

<sup>1</sup> See the quotation p. xvi. Bishop Lowth followed Michaelis in suggesting this example. The comment on Isaiah was published in 1778; and Michaelis's notes on the Hebrew prelections were reprinted at Oxford in 1763.

<sup>2</sup> Quoted above, p. xvii.

Exalt themselves for their stature,
 Neither set their top among the thick boughs ;
<sup>1</sup> Neither the oaks stand up in their height,
 Nor any trees that drink water ;
 For all of them are delivered to death,
 Unto the lower parts of the earth
 In the midst of the sons of mortal man,
 Unto them that go down to the pit.—
 At the sound of his ruin I made the nations to shake,
 When I brought him down to the grave
 With them that go down to the pit ;
 And all the trees of Eden,
 The choice and best of Lebanon,
Even all that drank water,
 Were comforted in the lower parts of the earth.
 They also went down with him to the grave,
 To them that were slain by the sword. C. xxxi. 13—17.

In this passage, though we easily admire the novelty of the fiction, the variety of manifold art, and the fruitfulness of the writer's genius, yet we shall not be struck by sublimity.

"I almost forgot to mention that Ezekiel lived at a time when the glory and majesty of the Hebrew tongue began to fade, and a silver age to succeed a golden one: which in a short interval was to bring on an iron one. If we compare him with the Latin poets of Rome in her decline, we shall find a similar old age of the poetic faculty gradually creeping on in very different nations."

To explain the character of the prophet Ezekiel still more distinctly, I shall add to these testimonies the sentiments of the learned Professor Eichhorn, in his introduction <sup>2</sup> to the Old Testament.

"§. 545 <sup>3</sup>. Ezekiel is distinguished by much originality. He commonly gives his relations in prose, and adds dignity to them by lively fictions of his inexhaustible imagination:—he creates great artificial images, and, by such means, new worlds: he passed his youth in his mother country:—here he gathered materials for his poems, which his rich imagination afterwards created.

"§. 547. The two <sup>4</sup> first visions are so accurately polished, and demanded so much art to give them their last perfection and proportion, that they cannot possibly be an unpremeditated work. And if, according to the commonly received opinion, they were publicly read by Ezekiel—as we read them now, he must have seriously designed them as a picture, and finished them in form. The intention of his visions might make this necessary. He designed, no doubt, to make deep impressions at first upon the people whom he was to guide, and, by highly labouring the divine appearances, to open their ears for his future oracles and representations. The more complete, sublime, and majestic the divine appearances were which he represented, the deeper veneration was impressed on the mind towards the prophet to whom such high visions were communicated. Most of the parts which compose Ezekiel, as they are generally works of art, are full of artificial and elaborate plans.

<sup>1</sup> The learned critic reads as the text now stands; and paraphrases thus: illasque adorant reliquæ bibentes aquam. [Nomen est poeticum arborum.]

<sup>2</sup> 3 vol. 8°. Leipsic. 1783. <sup>3</sup> Of the third volume. <sup>4</sup> C. i—vii. viii.—xi.

“§. 548. The peculiarities of language in the first chapter are to be found in the middle and at the end of the book. The same enthusiasm, which in the beginning of his prophecies produced the magnificent divine appearances, must also have built the temple of God at the conclusion. As in the beginning every thing is first proposed in high allegorical images, and afterwards the same ideas are repeated in plain words; thus also, in the middle and at the end, in every piece allegorical representation is succeeded by literal. Throughout the style is rather prose than verse; and rough, hard, and mixed with the Chaldee.

“§. 549. The division of Ezekiel into two parts has been adopted by several writers. They continue the former part to the xxxixth chapter; and consider the last nine chapters from the xlth as a separate book. This division is possible. From the xlth chapter a new elevated scene commences. Before there was nothing but oracles full of misfortunes, of punishments, of death, and ruin; visions concerning the destruction of the government, and concerning the flight and state of the last king; and pictures of the universal corruption, idolatry, and superstition of Israel. From the xlth chapter a new temple rises before the eyes of the holy Seer, he walks round about it in Palestine, he measures the city and country for their new inhabitants, he orders sacrifices, feasts, and customs. In short a Magna Charta is planned for priests, kings, and people, in future and latter times. Lastly, from hence prosaic expression predominates: at least, the prophet elevates himself by poetical colouring much more rarely than before.

“§. 550. A generally acknowledged character of Ezekiel is, that he minutely distinguishes every thing in its smallest parts. What the more ancient prophets brought together in one single picture, and to which they only alluded, and what they explained with the utmost brevity or shewed only from one side, that he explains and unfolds formally, and represents from all possible sides.

“Another character, and a principal one, which distinguishes his oracles is,—that no other prophet has given so free a course to his imagination.—Almost every thing is dressed in symbolical actions, in fables, narrations, allegories, or in the still higher poetry of visions. And as they are very complicate,—there resound from all sides complaints of darkness.—Whoever can look on these things with the eye of an eagle, and is not disturbed from the principal object by what is not essential ;—he alone is able to comprehend the sense of the whole composition, and he scarcely conceives how any one can complain of obscurity. Meanwhile, how different soever the species of composition are which he hazards, they are all worked out in the same general form. What he represents in one image, picture, or vision, in allegory, parable, or narration, is explained in a short speech, which God, who is at his right hand, enables him to pronounce.

“§. 551. It is evident that he has shewn an inexhaustible imagination, and power of invention, throughout all the pages of his book. He uses all sorts of prophetic poetry, to appear always great and magnificent: and it cannot be denied that he has given all kinds of excellent pieces both in design and execution. Particularly, he is so used to ecstasies and visions, that he adopts the language proper to these even where he has no visions to describe.

“If the dress of vision fitted any prophet, it was certainly Ezekiel: he was even naturally led to it by his situation, and by the subjects which he was to represent. He was to describe, and foretell to his fellow captives, several facts which happened in Palestine, in Jerusalem, and in the king's palace. A narration and description in simple prose could not possibly suit a prophet: he must give his objects the requisite prophetic dignity by a particular dress.

“He therefore brought the scene of events nearer: for this purpose he chose high ecstasies, such as the Greek and Roman poets pretended to in their flights of enthusiasm: the hand of Jehovah came upon him, and carried him to that place where what he intended to propose to his countrymen in their exile might be seen and considered. All ecstasies, in my opinion, are nothing but dresses, nothing but poetical fictions: and a poet of another age, and of another tone, of an inferior imagination and poetical endowments, would have given the same ideas quite another dress.

“Accustomed to this kind of poetry,—he represented the restitution of the Jewish state in a sublime vision: his imagination placed him upon graves, where he stood on decayed bones of the dead. He saw how the graves opened, the bones were clothed with flesh, and the dead came forth by a new creation. Could there be a more lively fiction for this case? Another poet would have represented the restoration of the Jews in simple words, and would have only compared it to a resurrection, or given it some other ornamental delineation. To view this intuitively in an example, compare Ezek. xxxvii. 1—14, and Isaiah xxvi. 19:

Thy dead shall live, their dead bodies shall rise :
Awake, and sing, ye that dwell in the dust :
For thy dew is as the dew of herbs ;
And the earth shall cast forth the mighty dead.

“And however numerous the fictions of Ezekiel are, they all appear in a magnificent dress, and each in its peculiar splendid one. Lustre shines in him on every side. And if the poet has here and there overloaded his subject with ornaments, we shall be unable to refuse our admiration to his genius, notwithstanding these defects.

“The first part of his book may be an instance. The barren genius of Moses was gone, when God appeared only in a fiery bush in the wilderness: and, as the world improved in cultivation, a more luxuriant one succeeded in its place, which in process of time demanded wonderful figures and giant forms, that the representation of the divine appearance might please. Isaiah had already appeared in a higher style than Moses. To him God manifested himself in the pomp of an oriental king; and this <sup>1</sup> piece makes a strong impression by its unity, and gains on us by elevated simplicity, majesty, and dignity. But Ezekiel differs widely. Before him stands the chariot-throne of God with wonderful forms. He summons all the pomp that nature and art can furnish, he abundantly employs fiction and composition, to give his divine appearance dignity, elevation, and majesty, and thus to make a suitable impression. The whole creation must lend him its most noble forms. Men, oxen, lions, and eagles support the throne. The Hebrew history must furnish all its wonderful scenes, to surround the chariot-throne with the greatest pomp imaginable. I admire the master hand of the artist, who knew how to compose in such a manner. I am astonished at the richness of his imagination that could give dignity to all the exalted scenes of the Hebrew history, and could combine them in one body. But, notwithstanding this, the scene in Ezekiel is far from making the same deep and heart-striking impression with that of Isaiah. A short view of the whole in Isaiah does wonders: in Ezekiel the prospect is dispersed; and, as it is not rounded, it astonishes rather than impresses. In Isaiah there is a majestic silence, which is only interrupted by the heavenly <sup>1</sup> cry of the seraphs: in Ezekiel the noise of the restless wheels and moving wings confounds us. In Isaiah the eye is delighted with artless majesty: in Ezekiel it is consumed by the brightness of the fire which shines round about the chariot-throne.

<sup>1</sup> Isai. vi.

“It almost seems that the poet himself felt the hurtful consequences of his ample representations; and that he endeavoured to prevent them by first giving a general sketch, and then every thing more determinate and in detail. But I doubt whether he has thus prevented them. This method is rather productive of another hurtful consequence; that he occasionally seems to correct himself, but really does not; that he occasionally seems to retract something, which, when accurately considered, is not the fact.

“The author of the Revelation, whose poetry is in the same style with that of Ezekiel, and full of imagination, for the most part has avoided the rocks on which his predecessor stranded; and for the most part has happily cut off the wild shoots of a heated imagination. He also has fictions of wonders and giant forms: but he has produced them only so far as to give the reader a full image before his eyes; he does not pursue them minutely,—and he does not distract or pain his reader.

“But as Ezekiel describes, designs, paints, and exhausts all minutiae, he sometimes injures his poems. According to my feeling, he should have broken off after he had given the chariot-throne restless wheels,

<sup>1</sup> Isai. vi. 3.

The reader may observe instances of this, c. v. 5—17. vi. xiv. xviii. xx. 1—44. xxxiii. 1—20. xxxiv. xxxvi.

But his manner of writing is never enervated : it is often strong and masculine. A perusal of the following passages will reward the lover of Hebrew composition : they are mostly instances of the true δείνωσις, or exaggeration, which <sup>1</sup> Quintilian defines to be, “rebus indignis, asperis, invidiosis, addens vim oratio.” c. xx. 45—48. xxi. 3—7. xxii. 2—16. 24—31. xxiii. 31—34. xxvii. 28—32. xxxv. 5, 6.

It is also evident that this prophet sometimes rises to the sublime. Let the truth of this assertion be tried by a few examples :

When I shall send upon you the evil arrows of famine. C. v. 16.

The king shall lament himself, and the prince shall be clothed with astonishment. C. vii. 27.

Thou therefore, son of man, prophesy,
And smite thine hands together ;
And bring the sword twice, yea, bring it thrice :
It is the sword of the slain ;
The sword of great slaughter ; it entereth into their chambers.
That their heart may melt, and their overthrow may be multiplied,
I have set the terror of the sword against all their gates.
Ah ! thou that art prepared for glittering, that art furbished for slaughter,
Get thee different ways, go to the right hand, go to the left hand, Whithersoever thine edge is set.
I also will smite mine hands together,
And I will cause my fury to rest upon thee :
I Jehovah have spoken it. C. xxi. 14—17.

Lo, I am against thee, O Tyre ;
And I will cause many nations to come up against thee,
As the sea causeth his waves to come up. C. xxvi. 3.

Thy rowers have brought thee into great waters :
The east wind hath broken thee in the heart of the seas.
C. xxvii. 26.

Lo, I am against thee, Pharaoh king of Egypt ;
The great dragon that lieth in the midst of his rivers,
That saith, “ My river is mine own, and I have made it for myself.”
C. xxix. 3.

<sup>1</sup> Inst. orat. vi. 2.

At Tahapanes the day shall be darkened ;
 When I break there the yokes of Egypt,
 And when the pride of her strength shall cease in her.
As for her, a cloud shall cover her,
 And her daughters shall go into captivity. C. xxx. 18.

Thus saith the Lord Jehovah :
 In the day when he went down to the grave,
 I caused the deep to mourn, I covered it, for him ;
 And I restrained the floods thereof, and the great waters were stayed ;
 And I clothed Lebanon with black for him,
 And all the trees of the field fainted for him. C. xxxi. 15.

Thou shalt go up, as a storm cometh ;
 Thou shalt be as a cloud to cover the land. C. xxxviii. 9.

If this is the old age of the Hebrew language and composition, it is a firm and vigorous one ; and should induce us to trace its youth and manhood with the most assiduous attention.

THIS LANGUAGE is of very remote antiquity, and of a most curious structure ; it abounds in those nerves of language, verbs and substantives ; it occasionally furnishes the * onomatopœia ; its roots often express the leading † quality of the derivative : and it is singularly concise, forcible, and majestic.

* As חתת to be broken, ילל to howl, נהק to bray, פוח to blow, פעה and צעק to cry out, רעע to break, רעם thunder, רעש to shake, שאג to roar, שאך to pant, תפף to beat the tabret, &c.

† From the many instances which present themselves, I shall select the names for idols or images ; from which the copiousness of the Hebrew language in some respects may also appear.

1. אים an idol, because it is worshipped with terror, or occasions terror to its worshippers.
2. אלל an idol, because it is a thing of nought ; or from אלה or אלל to lament, as it is the cause of lamentation.
3. נליל an idol, from its polluting filthy nature : נלל signifying convolutio stercoreis humani.
4. חמם an image, supposed to be that of the sun, from חמם to be hot.
5. מצבה an image, from יצב, in Hiphil, to set up.
6. סמל an image. Arab. pacem fecit.
7. עצב an idol, from עצב to grieve, because it occasions grief.
8. פלץ an idol, from פלץ to tremble, because it is worshipped with trembling, or occasions trembling to its worshippers.
9. פסל an image, from פסל to engrave.
10. ציר an idol, from צור to straiten, to distress ; because it straitens and distresses its worshippers.
11. צלם an image, from the Syriac verb imagine expressit.
12. משכית, שכית, an image, from the Arabic root similis fuit.
13. שקץ an idol, from שקץ to be abominable.
14. תרף, an image, probably of a man.

The defects commonly imputed to it are its want of copiousness, its want of perspicuity, and its want of culture and elegance.

It undoubtedly was not the language of a people famed for commerce, arts, and learning; of an extensive country, or powerful empire: the usual sources from which languages have derived their copiousness and polish. The Hebrews inhabited a narrow territory; and their religious rites were intended to exclude them from intercourse with the idolatrous nations which surrounded them. - But it must be observed that the remains of this language are comprehended in one volume; ample indeed, and greatly diversified as to its matter and style, but of very inconsiderable bulk when compared with the Greek and Roman writings which have escaped the wreck of time. Hence it follows that we are not acquainted with its full extent. If the book of <sup>1</sup> Jasher and of <sup>2</sup> lamentations, all the odes <sup>3</sup> of Solomon, and all his <sup>3</sup> writings on natural history, were now extant; if the larger <sup>4</sup> annals of the kings of Judah and Israel, and the histories ascribed to several <sup>5</sup> prophets, had also been transmitted to us; the Hebrew tongue would have been enriched with many additional words and phrases, and many dark passages in the books which are preserved would have been placed in the clearest light. It is true, as <sup>6</sup> Le Clerc asserts, that there is a similar thread of narration, and much repetition of the same words and phrases, in the historical books of every age: but it is equally true that we find great variety in the manner and style of the poetical books, among which a large proportion of the prophetic writings is justly included.

On this supposed poverty of the Hebrew tongue let the reader weigh the opinion of an eminent judge; who appears to have studied the language as accurately, and to have understood it as intimately, as any modern critic.

“As <sup>7</sup> to the nature of the language itself, which you say is the most barren of all languages; I take this to be a charge which you cannot prove. What did the Hebrew writers then want words and phrases, to express properly and fully the subjects of which they

<sup>1</sup> Josh. x. 13. <sup>2</sup> Sam. i. 18.

<sup>3</sup> 1 Kings iv. 32, 33.

<sup>2</sup> 2 Chron. xxxv. 25.

<sup>4</sup> 1 Kings xiv. 19, 29.

<sup>5</sup> See 1 Chron. xxix. 29, 2 Chron. ix. 29, xii. 15, xiii. 22, xx. 34, xxxii. 32, xxxiii. 19.

<sup>6</sup> Diss. de lingua Hebraica, p. viii prefixed to his comment on the Pentateuch.

<sup>7</sup> Lowth's Letter to Warburton. 2nd. ed. Lond. 1766.

treated? Far from it. I think, there might be produced from them examples of amplification set off with as great copiousness of expression, as from almost any authors whatever. And, in several instances, there are in <sup>1</sup> Hebrew as many synonymous terms and phrases to express the same ideas, as perhaps can be produced, in a like number of instances taken at pleasure, even in the Greek language itself.

“ Your Lordship enters further into this subject in another place ; which I shall therefore consider.

“ Amant Hebræi, says Grotius, as you <sup>2</sup> quote him, verborum, copiam ; itaque rem eandem multis verbis exprimunt. He does not tell us the reason ; but your Lordship is so good as to supply it. It arises from the narrowness of the Hebrew language, which is the scantiest of all the learned languages of the east : for when the speaker's phrase comes not up to his ideas, as in a scanty language it often will not, he naturally endeavours to explain himself by a repetition of the thought in other words ; as he whose body is straitened in room is never relieved but by a continual change of posture. A reason so very refined, that I must suspect it has no good foundation. The Hebrews are fond of a copiousness of words ; and therefore express the same thing in many words : or, as you very rightly explain it, by a repetition of the same thought in many words. Now I think they would never have been able to satisfy this their fondness for a copiousness of words, by repeating the same thought in other words ; unless they had at command different words, to express the same thought in : that is, unless their language had been copious, and had abounded in synonymous or parallel expressions. For example : the general subject of the cixth psalm is the blessedness of keeping the law ; which is pursued through twenty-two alphabetical stanzas, of eight distichs each, with much sameness of thought, but great variety of expression. Instead of twelve or fourteen synonymous terms to express the Law, and at least four times as many parallel phrases to express the keeping of it ; if you reduce the psalmist to a single term or two, you strike him dumb : be he ever so fond of pleonasm, and ever so eager to express himself copiously. he will neither be able to attain, nor so much as to testify, his desire, unless you give him his free range in the natural copiousness of his language. Can it then possibly be ascribed to the narrowness of his language, that the psalmist repeats his thought so often in other words? to his inability, and at the same time his eagerness, to express himself to his satisfaction, that he so often changes his posture? On the contrary; do we not evidently see, that he sets out with a formed design of amplifying his subject to a surprising extent, upon a plan, that necessarily required a hundred and seventy-six distichs, upon almost the same thought, and in confidence of an ample stock of words and phrases to carry him through it? This manner of repeating the same thing in synonymous or parallel terms prevails throughout the Hebrew poetry; and is a principal characteristic of the poetical style. The character of the poetical style in general must arise from the nature of the language; and the pleonastic character in particular must arise from the abundance of parallel terms and phrases in the language."

<sup>1</sup> See Carpzovii Critica sacra. P. i. C. v. S. 4.

<sup>2</sup> Divine Legation, B. iv, Sect. iv.

The next charge brought against the Hebrew tongue is its obscurity.

Le <sup>1</sup> Clerc argues that, in the Hebrew scriptures, penury of words begets ambiguity; because, "when proper expressions are wanting, figurative ones must be used, or generic terms must be applied to many particulars of a different nature. Thus it becomes difficult to distinguish the literal sense from the metaphorical; and to ascertain the various significations comprehended under the same general word."

So great is the number and so nice are the differences of sensible objects, and so active is the human mind in reflecting on its own operations and in combining a variety of abstract notions, that language must necessarily labour to furnish distinct appellations for every archetype in the vast storehouses of nature and intellect. Tully <sup>2</sup> therefore observes very justly that metaphor was the offspring of necessity; though it was afterwards recommended by the pleasure and delight which the mind takes in contemplating such analogies. But the nature of things, and the genius of a particular language and people, will usually determine, with sufficient accuracy, whether words are figuratively applied or not: and, where the figure is allowed, it is an acknowledged rule of criticism not to urge the similitude too far. Those who are conversant in the scriptures will observe a great daringness in metaphorical language. Due allowances must be made for these flights: they must be attributed to the glowing imagination of eastern writers : and attention must be given to the comparisons which the learned have drawn between the ardent expressions of the Hebrews and Arabs, whose manners and climate bear a great resemblance.

<sup>1</sup> Diss. de ling. Hebr. p. ix.

<sup>2</sup> De oratore. iii. 38.

With respect to general terms, it is a remark applicable to all languages that <sup>1</sup> words put on different significations as they are joined with others : and that the series of the discourse commonly serves to limit such words with due precision.

Le Clerc proceeds thus ; “ If we consider the various senses of the undeclinable particles, and the confusion of almost all the tenses in the verbs, and add to these the perpetual changes of genders, numbers, and persons ; the perspicuity of the Hebrew tongue will not be matter of boast. Read Noldius on the Hebrew particles, and Glassius’s sacred grammar, books well known to all and deservedly commended ; and, when these have been examined, it will appear even to the pertinacious that perhaps no tongue is more full of ambiguity and obscurity than the Hebrew.”

The significations of the Hebrew particles are often needlessly multiplied. They constitute a great nicety in the sacred language ; which is true of the particles in <sup>2</sup> Greek, and even in English : but it is a nicety which yields to penetration and industry. A disquisition into the force of what grammarians call the preter and future tenses of the Hebrew verbs is also curious and subtle. But the exigentia loci, the ancient translators, and the most judicious and learned commentators and philologists, afford ample assistance on this subject. The difficulties respecting these and other modifications of the Hebrew verb are allowed to be considerable ; but no deep enquirer will assert that they are invincible. The potential mood, for instance, is not distinguished from the indicative by inflexions peculiar to itself. But still the competent judge of the language is able to determine when the verb is used in this form, by attention to the context and to the use of certain particles. On the other hand, precision is given to the language by the feminine terminations of verbs in the preter and future tenses and in the imperative mood, as well as in the participial forms. It is true that the enallages of genders, numbers, and persons are bold and frequent: but they are rather unusual than inexplicable; and naturally arise from the warmth and enthusiasm which still prevail among the eastern nations.

<sup>1</sup> Vid. Clerici art. crit. L. ii. sect. 1. c. v.

<sup>2</sup> See Devarius Vigerus, and Hoogeveen on the Greek particles. The last work is contained in two large quarto volumes. In Johnson’s Dictionary, but has 18 senses, to 31, and for 42.

In another <sup>1</sup> work, Le Clerc gives additional reasons why many things cannot be understood in the Hebrew tongue and in the books of the Old Testament. 1. Because only one volume remains, and that of no great bulk; in which the genius and phraseology of the whole language cannot be comprehended. 2. Because in these books mistakes of transcribers exist, which disturb the sense, and which, through negligence or difficulty in transcribing, corrupted the text before any versions were made. 3. Because there are very many words which occur once, or very rarely; and that in places where neither the nature of the thing nor the context shews in what sense we should understand them. 4. Because, except the Mosaic rites and other customs appointed by divine authority, we either know not very many opinions of the Hebrews, or collect them from a few places by doubtful conjecture. 5. Because we have a very short compendium of their history; so that we are every where at a loss. 6. Because our surer assistances in overcoming these difficulties were furnished in those ages when the Hebrew tongue had been long disused, and was no otherwise known than by tradition among a few of the learned.

On each of these reasons it is necessary to make a short remark.

1. The Providence of God has preserved to us so large a volume of the Hebrew scriptures, written by so many authors, on such different subjects, and at such distant periods of time, that our materials for acquiring the language may justly be called ample ones, that obscurities affect only minuter parts, and that the curious enquirer is generally gratified in his researches though not always.

2. “The casual errors of transcribers,” says <sup>2</sup> Bishop Lowth, “may blemish parts; but do not destroy, or much alter, the whole. Important and fundamental doctrines do not wholly depend on single passages; an universal harmony runs through the holy scriptures; the parts mutually support each other, and supply one another's deficiencies and obscurities. Superficial damages and partial defects may greatly diminish the beauty of the edifice, without injuring its strength, and bringing on utter ruin and destruction."

<sup>1</sup> Ars critica, P. i. c. iv. sect. iii. §. 3.

<sup>2</sup> Pref. to Isaiah, p. lix.

3. There are very few words or phrases in the Hebrew scriptures of which a probable explanation cannot be given, either from the nature of the thing, or the context, or a comparison of the doubtful place with parallel ones, or the aid of the sister-languages, or the interpretations of the ancient translators: and our inability to solve such verbal difficulties in a manner altogether satisfactory will not affect our religious knowledge, or the regulation of our moral conduct.

4. The books of Moses contain an authentic system of the religious and political laws under which the Hebrews lived. The miscellaneous contents of their sacred writings largely explain their customs and opinions. Their own writers, since the volume of their sacred writings was completed, supply no small assistance on these subjects: and the accounts which historians and travellers give of the east, where manners continue unaltered through a course of ages, are a further source of most useful information.

5. The history of the Hebrews, though concise, is more authentic than that of any other ancient nation. Larger histories, both of that people and of the neighbouring kingdoms with which they had intercourse, would have been highly valuable and useful; particularly, in shewing the completion of some prophecies by recording facts which we now assume without injuring the grand argument from this topic: but enough is written for the purpose of instruction and example in all ages of the church.

6. The Greek version, though no part of it is supposed to be earlier than two hundred and fifty years after the Babylonish captivity, at which time the Hebrew tongue ceased to be vernacular, may still represent very old manuscripts, or very correct copies of them. This observation may be extended to the Chaldee paraphrase of Jonathan, made about the time of Christ; to the Syriac version, which is generally attributed to the first century; to the imperfect Greek versions of Aquila, Symmachus, and Theodotion, who lived in the second century; and even to the Latin version of which Jerom was the author in the fourth century. The Æthiopic and Arabic versions are generally allowed to be translations from the Greek. The period which some learned men have assigned to the Æthiopic is the apostolical age. Saadias rendered the Pentateuch into Arabic about the year 900 of the Christian era. The other Arabic versions of the Old Testament are of an uncertain date. We also derive important assistance from the Masoretic punctuation; from the grammars, lexicons, concordances, and commentaries of the later Jews, and from the more complete, learned, and judicious ones of modern times; from that invaluable discovery, the text of the Samaritan Pentateuch; and from that grand and highly useful undertaking, the collation of Hebrew and Samaritan manuscripts.

The difficulties in the Hebrew scriptures will be diminished in proportion as our external helps are multiplied; and as these inestimable books are carefully studied by men who add to sagacity and judgment a large share of human learning, and that insight into the nature of language which arises from logical and critical enquiries, and from an acquaintance with the structure of the learned tongues and of the kindred oriental dialects. “The Hebrew language, like others,” says <sup>1</sup> a competent judge, “has its ambiguities and anomalies; (for where is there one that has not?) yet it is in the main a regular and a beautiful language: like the works of God, at least in its original contrivance, wonderfully simple, and yet artificial; and very intelligible to those who will be at the pains to study it.”

The last disparaging remark on the Hebrew language is, that it never received polish and elegance from a studious cultivation.

Whether we consider the historical style of Moses, or the <sup>2</sup> orations and poems interspersed in his books; he is the first of the Hebrew writers in point of excellence as well as antiquity. In him the Hebrew language attained its perfection at once; as the Greek did, long afterwards, in the poetry of Homer, and in the prose of Herodotus. We cannot doubt but that succeeding writers formed themselves by this great model; and particularly the prophets who were trained in the <sup>3</sup> schools instituted by Samuel. Among these we find that the art <sup>1</sup> of music was cultivated; probably because it was suited to the remarkable alternation which prevails in the Hebrew poetry: so that they were sister-arts, and might well flourish together. How far they pursued the other arts and disciplines which tend to polish and enrich a language, it is impossible to determine; but it is hardy to assert, with Le Clerc, that they were neglected and despised. On the rhythm and harmony of the Hebrew language we are wholly unqualified to pass a judgment: and the pleasure which would naturally have arisen from these sources is irrecoverably lost. Strength appears to be its characteristic: but a strength by no means void of manly beauty. Nor can its graceful dignity be always perceived in a verbal translation; which not uncommonly disguises the original, as much as a prosaic rendering would cast a veil over the beauties of Homer or Sophocles. However, various kinds of beauty will ever shine by their native splendour throughout the Hebrew scriptures.

<sup>1</sup> Peters on Job. Dissert. p. xxviii. 2d ed.

<sup>2</sup> See Gen. xliv. 18—34: and the book of Deut. particularly c. iv. 1—40. vi. viii. x. 12—22. xxviii. xxix. xxx.

<sup>3</sup> 1 Sam. xix. 20.

We are often struck by the force and novelty of the eastern metaphor and periphrasis. The sword <sup>2</sup> devours flesh, and is made <sup>3</sup> drunk with blood; the floods <sup>4</sup> clap their hands; the valleys, covered with corn, <sup>5</sup> shout for joy and sing; a fountain is an <sup>6</sup> eye of water, the Arabian Gulf is the <sup>7</sup> tongue of the Egyptian sea; a bird is <sup>8</sup> the master of the wing, the pupil is <sup>9</sup> the daughter of the eye, * an arrow is the <sup>10</sup> son of the quiver, a spark is the <sup>11</sup> son of the burning coal, * the most terrible destruction is the <sup>12</sup> first-born of death.

The peculiar conformation, or parallelism, of the sentences, is the grand artifice and principal characteristic of the Hebrew poetry; and a copious source of exquisite embellishment. This subject is largely and ably discussed in Bishop Lowth's excellent treatise on the Hebrew poetry; and in the very instructive preliminary dissertation prefixed to his comment on Isaiah. From the various examples of ornament and elegance which might be produced, I shall select a very few; and

<sup>1</sup> 1 Sam. x. 5.

<sup>2</sup> Deut. xxxii. 42.

<sup>3</sup> Jer. xlv. 10.

<sup>4</sup> Ps. xcvi. 8.

<sup>5</sup> Ps. lxxv. 13.

<sup>6</sup> Gen. xlix. 22.

<sup>7</sup> Isai. xi. 15.

<sup>8</sup> Prov. i. 17.

<sup>9</sup> Lam. ii. 13.

<sup>10</sup> Lam. iii. 13.

<sup>11</sup> Job. v. 7.

<sup>12</sup> Job. xviii. 13.

* The passages marked with an asterisk occur in the prelections on the Hebrew poetry; which may be considered as a storehouse of the beauties contained in the Old Testament.

those of that particular class, where the following clauses so diversify the preceding ones as to rise above them.

To bring him that is bound out of the dungeon ;
And them that sit in darkness out of the prison house. Isai. xlii. 7.

Who maketh a way in the sea ;
And a path in the mighty waters. Isai. xliii. 16.

O Jehovah my God, thou art very great :
Thou art clothed with glory and majesty. Ps. civ. 1.

Jehovah is a great God ;
And a great King above all Gods. Ps. xcv. 2.

Let the day perish wherein I was born ;
And the night in which it was said, A man child is brought forth.
Job iii. 3.

He forsook God that made him ;
And lightly esteemed the Rock of his salvation. Dent. xxxii. 15.

He found him in a desert land,
And in the waste howling wilderness :
He led him about, he instructed him ;
He kept him as the apple of his eye. Dent. xxxii. 10.

My substance was not hidden from thee,
When I was made in secret,
And <sup>1</sup> curiously wrought in the lower <sup>2</sup> parts of the earth.
Ps. cxxxix. 15.

Thy wrath lieth hard upon me ;
And thou hast afflicted me with all thy waves. Ps. lxxxviii. 7.

If Jehovah had not been on our side,
When men rose up against us ;
Then had they swallowed us up alive,
When their anger was kindled against us :
Then had the waters overwhelmed us,
The stream had gone over our soul :

<sup>1</sup> Wrought as embroidery, or needlework. Acupictus. Acupingendi artificium apud Hebræos dicatum sanctuario. Præl. Hebr. viii.

Tua pinxit acus mirabile textum. Ib. xxix.

<sup>2</sup> The lower parts of the earth is a phrase equivalent to here below. Isai. xliv. 23.

Then the proud waters
Had † gone over our soul. Ps cxxiv. 2—5.

The comparisons in the Hebrew scriptures are apt, elegant, and magnificent.

* The heavens shall be rolled up as a scroll :
And all their host shall fade,
As the leaf falleth from the vine,
And as the falling fig from the figtree. Isai. xxxiv. 4.

* The land staggereth greatly, as a drunkard ;
And moveth herself, as a lodge for a night. Isai. xxiv. 20.

Nebuchadnezzar shall array himself with the land of Egypt, as a shepherd arrayeth himself with his garment. Jer. xliii. 12.

Lament, as a bride, girded with sackcloth,
For the husband of her youth. Joel i. 8.

* I will be as the dew to Israel :
He shall blossom as the lily :
And he shall strike his roots as Lebanon :
His suckers shall spread,
And his glory shall be as the olive tree,
And his smell as ‡ frankincense. Hos. xiv. 5, 6

* As an eagle stirreth up her nest,
Fluttereth over her young ones,
Spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them,
Beareth them on his pinions ;
So Jehovah alone did lead him,
And there was no strange god with him. Deut. xxxii. 11, 12.

* As the rain cometh down,
And the snow from the heavens,
And returneth not thither ;
But watereth the earth,
And maketh it bring forth, and spring up,
That it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater :
So shall my word be which goeth forth from my mouth ;
It shall not return unto me void,
But it shall accomplish that which I have desired,
And prosper that for which I have sent it. Isai. lv. 10, 11.

As when the lion roareth,
Even the young lion, over his prey ;

† עברו. Hare.

‡ See Chald.

Though the whole company of shepherds be called forth against him,
 He will not be afraid because of their voice,
 Nor abase himself because of their multitude :
 So shall Jehovah God of hosts come down to fight
 For mount Sion, and for the hill thereof.      Isai. xxxi. 4.

When the metaphorical style is continued, that species of writing arises which rhetoricians call allegory. I have already quoted one of Ezekiel's <sup>1</sup> allegories, as an example of his poetical beauties. There is a well known <sup>2</sup> allegory in the psalms, which is deservedly admired for its happy adjuncts, and for the natural manner in which it gradually passes from the figurative to the literal style.

* Thou didst bring a vine out of Egypt ;
 Thou didst cast out the heathen, and plant it.
 Thou didst prepare a place before it,
 And didst cause it to take deep root ; and it filled the land.
 The hills were covered with its shadow,
 And its boughs were like the goodly cedars.
 She sent forth her branches to the † sea,
 And her young shoots to the † river.
 Why hast thou then broken down her hedges,
 So that all who pass by the way pluck her ?
 The boar out of the wood wasteth it,
 And the wild beast of the field devoureth it.
 Return, we pray thee, O God of hosts,
 Look down from heaven, and behold,
 And visit this vine ;
 And the stock which thy right hand hath planted,
 And the † son of man whom thou madest strong for thyself.
It is burnt with fire, it is cut down :
 They perish at the rebuke of thy countenance.      Ps. lxxx. 8—16.

The prophet Nahum thus exults over the fall of Nineveh ; whose king had lately taken Samaria, and carried the ten tribes of Israel into captivity.

“ Where now is the habitation of the lions,
 And that which was the feeding-place of the young lions ?
 Whither the lion and the lioness went,

† See versions and MSS.

<sup>1</sup> Page viii.

<sup>2</sup> See Præl. Hebr. x. 125.

† The Mediterranean sea, and the river Euphrates, were the promised boundaries of Palestine, if the Israelites had faithfully served God. Deut. xi. 24. Josh. i. 4.

And the whelp of the lion ; and none made them afraid.
 The lion tare for his whelps,
 And strangled for his lionesses ;
 And filled his dens with prey,
 And his habitations with rapine.” Nah. ii. 11, 12.

Fable and parable are akin to allegory. The most ancient fable is that which Jotham addressed to the Shechemites, when his brother Abimelech, the son of Gideon by a bondmaid, was appointed king of Shechem, after he had hired rain and light persons to slay his brethren.

“ The trees went forth to anoint a king over them : and they said to the olive-tree, Reign thou over us. But the olive-tree said to them, Should I leave my fatness, wherewith by me gods and men are honoured, and go to be <sup>1</sup> promoted over the trees ? And the trees said to the fig-tree, Come thou, and reign over us. But the fig-tree said to them, Should I leave my sweetness and my good fruit, and go to be promoted over the trees ? Then said the trees to the vine, Come thou, and reign over us. And the vine said to them, Should I leave my wine, which echeereth gods and men, and go to be promoted over the trees ? Then said all the trees to the bramble, Come thou, and reign over us. And the bramble said to the trees, If in truth ye anoint me king over you, then come and put your trust in my shadow : and if not, let fire come forth from the bramble, and devour the cedars of Lebanon.” Judg. ix. 8—15.

Another elegant fable occurs in the historical books of the Old Testament. When Amaziah, king of Judah, provoked Jehoash, king of Israel, to war, the monarch of the more powerful state returned him this proud answer : “ The thistle that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, saying, Give thy daughter unto my son to wife : and there passed by a wild beast that was in Lebanon, and trod down the thistle.” 2 Kings xiv. 9.

Every reader must have been affected by the parable which Nathan uttered to David, when that great king had taken Bathsheba, the wife of Uriah, and had caused the death of his virtuous and magnanimous servant at the siege of Rabbah. “ There were two men in one city ; the one rich, and the other poor. The rich man had exceeding many flocks and herds : but the poor man had nothing save one little ewe lamb, which he had bought and nourished up : and it grew up together with him and with his sons : it ate of his own morsel, and drank of his own cup, and lay in his bosom, and was unto him as a daughter. And there came a traveller unto the rich man, and he spared to take of his own flock, and of his own herd, to dress for the wayfaring man that came unto him ; but took the poor man's lamb, and dressed it for the man that came unto him." 2 Sam. xii. 1—4.

<sup>1</sup> Hebr. to be waved, or, to wave myself.

Very beautiful parables occur in the ' prophetical writings. I shall produce an example of one from Isaiah.

- 1     § I will sing now [a song] concerning my beloved,
A song on my beloved concerning his vineyard.
My beloved had a vineyard
On a high and fruitful hill.
- 2     And he † fenced it round, and gathered out the stones thereof,
And planted it with the choicest vine,
And built a tower in the midst of it,
And also hewed out a lake therein :
And he looked that it should bring forth grapes,
But it brought forth loathsome berries.
- 3     And now, O inhabitants of Jerusalem and men of Judah,
Judge, I pray you, between me and my vineyard.
- 4     What could have been done more to my vineyard,
That I have not done unto it ?
Wherefore, when I looked that it should bring forth grapes,
Brought it forth loathsome berries ?
- 5     But come now, I will declare unto you
What I will do to my vineyard.
I will take away the hedge thereof, and it shall be wasted ;
I will destroy the wall thereof, and it shall be trodden down.
- 6     And I will make it a desolation ;
It shall not be pruned nor digged ;
But there shall come up briars and thorns :
I will also command the clouds,
That they rain no rain upon it.

Isai. v. 1—6.

† Or, dug it.

<sup>1</sup> Ezek. xix. 2—9, 10—14. xxix. 3—5. xxxi. 3—14. xxxii. 2—6.

§ In the two first lines the prophet Isaiah addresses himself to his beloved countrymen. Then follows a parabolical song, in which the case is supposed among men. Men, in such circumstances, would express disappointment and displeasure. Judge then, says God, v. 3, what I should do, in similar circumstances, with respect to my people.

It is observable, that according to δ. Ar. and Chald. God is introduced speaking at the third line. For the verbs are read in the first person, I fenced &c. I looked.

Or the six verbs may have this force : And one fenced it round : that is, And it was fenced round &c. And it was expected that it should bring forth grapes, &c.

Many passages in the Hebrew scriptures are animated by the apostrophe.

* Judah is a lion's whelp.
From the prey, my son, thou art gone up.
He stoopeth down, he coucheth, as a lion,
And as a lioness : who shall rouse him up ?      Gen. xlix. 9.

* They have corrupted themselves, † they are not his, they are blemished sons ;
They are a perverse and crooked generation.
Do ye thus requite Jehovah,
O foolish nation, and not wise ?
Is not he thy father that bought thee ?
Did not he make thee and fashion thee ?      Deut. xxxii. 5, 6.

The prosopopœia is very frequent in the sacred poetry : of which figure there are <sup>1</sup> two kinds ; one, when inanimate things are personified ; another, when a probable speech is attributed to a real person.

* Canst thou send forth the lightnings, that they may go,
And say unto thee, Here we are ?      Job xxxviii. 35.

* Ho ! sword of Jehovah !
How long wilt thou not be quiet ?
Put up thyself into thy scabbard, rest, and be still.
How can it be quiet, since Jehovah hath given it a charge ?
Against Ashkelon, and against the havens of the sea, there hath he appointed it.      Jer. xlvi. 6, 7.

* The mother of Sisera looked out through a window,
And cried through the lattice :
Why doth his chariot delay coming ?
Why tarry the wheels of his carriages ?
Her wise princesses answered,
Yea, she returned answer to herself :
Have they not found and divided the spoil ?
To every man a damsel or two ;
To Sisera a spoil of divers colours,
A spoil of divers colours of needlework,
Of diverse colours of needlework on both sides : a spoil meet ‡ for his neck ?      Judg. v. 28—30.

† See Samar.

‡ See the lxx.

<sup>1</sup> Præl. Hebr. xiii. p. 153.

Grotius was so struck with this animated dramatic form that he remarks, Ostendit vel hic unus locus illis gentibus ἐννοίας valde poeticas fuisse.

Lively description is among the excellencies of the Hebrew poets. Joel thus prophetically describes the march of locusts, and the terror and destruction spread by them.

Blow ye the trumpet in Zion,
 And sound an alarm in mine holy mountain :
 Let all the inhabitants of the land tremble :
 For the day of Jehovah cometh, for it is near :
 A day of darkness and of gloominess ;
 A day of clouds and of thick darkness.
 As the dusk spread upon the mountains
Cometh a people numerous and strong.
 Like them there hath not been of old time ;
 And after them there shall not be,
Even to the years of many generations.
 Before them a fire devoureth,
 And behind them a flame burneth :
 The land is as the garden of Eden before them,
 And behind them a desolate wilderness :
 Yea, and nothing shall escape them.
 Their appearance shall be like the appearance of horses,
 And like horsemen shall they run :
 Like the sound of chariots, on the tops of mountains shall they leap :
 Like the sound of a flame of fire which devoureth stubble.
They shall be like a strong people set in battle array.
 Before them shall the people be much pained :
 All faces shall gather blackness.
 They shall run like mighty men ;
 Like warriors shall they climb the wall :
 And they shall march every one in his way :
 Neither shall they turn aside from their paths :
 Neither shall one thrust another :
 They shall march each in his road :
 And if they fall upon the sword, they shall not be wounded.
 They shall run to and fro in the city, they shall run upon the wall, they shall climb up into the houses :
 They shall enter in at the windows, like a thief.      Joel. ii. 1—9.

The military array of the Medes and Babylonians, and the besieging and sacking of Nineveh, are described by the prophet Nahum with great force and animation.

The shield of his mighty men is made red :
 The valiant men are clothed in scarlet :

The chariots are as the fire of lamps, in the day when he prepareth them:

And the horsemen spread terror.

The chariots madden in the streets:

They run to and fro in the broad places:

Their appearance is as lamps, they run as lightning.

He recounteth his mighty men: they cast down in their march.

They hasten to the wall, and the covering is prepared.

The gates of the rivers are opened:

And the palace melteth with fear, and the fortress.

She is taken into captivity, she is brought up:

And her handmaids are carried away as with the moaning of doves,

Smiting upon their breasts.

And the waters of Nineveh are become as a pool of water:

And they flee; and men cry, "Stand, stand;" but none looketh back.

They make spoil of silver, they make spoil of gold:

And there is none end of the glorious store,

From all kinds of desirable furniture.

She is void, empty, and desolate:

And the heart melteth, and the knees smite together:

And there is great pain in all loins;

And the faces of them all gather blackness. Nah. ii. 3—10.

Bishop <sup>1</sup> Lowth refers to the description of the horse in Job as universally admired; and as abundantly evincing how much this kind of beauty prevails in that ancient poem.

* Hast thou given the horse strength?

Hast thou clothed his neck with thunder?

Canst thou make him afraid as the grasshopper?

The glory of his nostrils is † terrible.

He ‡ paweth in the valley, and rejoiceth in his strength:

He goeth forth to meet the || armed men.

He mocketh at fear, and is not affrighted;

Neither turneth he back from the sword.

The quiver rattleth against him,

The § glittering spear and the lance.

He swalloweth the ground with †† fierceness and ‡‡ rage:

Neither believeth he that it is the sound of the trumpet.

||| He saith among the trumpets, Ha, ha:

† H. terror.

‡ See versions.

|| H. armour.

§ H. flame of the.

†† Or, rushing.

‡‡ Or, violence.

||| Or, When the trumpet soundeth
again, he saith, Ha, ha. [See Chald.]

<sup>1</sup> Prael. Hebr. xxxiv.

And he smelleth the battle afar off,
The thunder of the † captains, and the shouting.

Job xxxix. 19—25.

I shall in the next place select a few examples from among the many affecting elegies which occur in the Hebrew scriptures. David's most beautiful lamentation over Saul and Jonathan claims the first place.

* O glory of Israel, slain upon thine high places !
How are the mighty fallen !
Tell it not in Gath,
Publish it not in the streets of Askelon ;
Lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice,
Lest the daughters of the uncircumcised triumph.
Ye mountains of Gilboa, let there be no dew,
Neither let there be rain, upon you ;
Nor fields ‡ that bear heave-offerings.
For there the shield of the mighty was cast away ;
The shield of Saul, the || weapons of him who was anointed with oil.
From the blood of the slain, from the fat of the mighty,
The bow of Jonathan turned not back,
Neither did the sword of Saul return, § empty.
Saul and Jonathan
Were mutually beloved, and dear, in their lives ;
And in their death they were not divided.
They were swifter than eagles, they were stronger than lions.
Ye daughters of Israel, weep over Saul,
Who clothed you in scarlet †† and delightful apparel,
Who put ornaments of gold on your garments.
How are the mighty fallen,
In the midst of the battle !
O Jonathan, slain, upon thine high places !
I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan :
Thou wast very dear unto me :
Thy love to me was wonderful,
Surpassing the love of wives.
How are the mighty fallen,
And the weapons of war perished !      2 Sam. i. 19—27.

The prophet Jeremiah is peculiarly excellent in this species of writing.

* †† Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by the way ? Behold, and see,

† Or, leaders.

|| 𐤓𐤕 1 MS. 2 edd.

‡ H. of heave-offerings.

§ Or, in vain : or, without effect.

†† H. with delights.

‡‡ Or, Ho ! unto you. See the lxx. Vulg. Green. Blayney.

If there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow, which Jehovah hath brought upon me,
Wherewith he hath afflicted me, in the day of his hot anger.
For these things I weep, mine eye runneth down with water :
Because the comforter, the reliver of my soul, is far from me :
My sons are become desolate, because the enemy hath prevailed.
Lam. i. 12. 16.

Sometimes the grief of this poet expresses itself in a more lofty tone.

Interdum tamen et vocem querimonia tollit.

How hath the Lord covered the daughter of Sion with a cloud in his anger !
And cast down from heaven to earth the beauty of Israel,
And remembered not his footstool in the day of his anger !
He hath bent his bow like an enemy ; he hath stood with his right hand like an adversary ;
And hath slain [every † youth,] all that were desirable to the eye ;
In the tabernacle of the daughter of Sion he hath poured out his fury like fire.
The elders of the daughter of Sion sit upon the ground, they keep silence ;
They cast dust upon their heads, they gird themselves with sackcloth :
The virgins of Jerusalem hang down their heads to the ground.
Lam. ii. 1, 4, 10.

The Hebrew poets often celebrate the actions and praises of the Deity in poems which bear a resemblance to the <sup>1</sup> hymns of Homer and Callimachus. Bishop Lowth instances in the civth, the cviiith, and the cxxxixth psalms, which are admirable in their kind. The ciiiid psalm is a sacred hymn which has always forcibly affected me.

Bless Jehovah, O my soul ;
And all that is within me bless his holy name :
Bless Jehovah, O my soul ;
And forget not all his benefits :
Who forgiveth all thine iniquities ;
Who healeth all thine infirmities :
Who redeemeth thy life from destruction ;
Who crowneth thee with loving-kindness and tender mercies :
Who satisfieth thy ‡ mouth with good things,
So that thou || renewest thy youth like an eagle.

† Chald. Bp. Lowth.

‡ Or, vigour. Cocc. lex. 8vo.

|| וּמַחֲדֵשׁ And who reneweth. Syr. תַּחֲדֵשׁ I MS.

<sup>1</sup> See Præl. Hebr. xxix.

Jehovah executeth righteousness,
 And judgment, for all them that are oppressed.
 He shewed his ways unto Moses,
 And his works unto the sons of Israel.
 Jehovah is merciful and gracious,
 Slow to anger, and plenteous in loving-kindness.
 He will not always rebuke,
 Neither will he keep his anger for ever.
 He hath not dealt with us according to our sins,
 Nor requited us according to our iniquities.
 For as the height of the heavens over the earth,
 So † high is his loving-kindness over them that fear him.
 As far as the east is from the west,
 So far doth he remove our transgressions from us.
 As a father hath tender mercy on his children,
 So hath Jehovah tender mercy on them that fear him.
 For he knoweth our frame ;
 He remembereth that we are dust.

The days of man are as grass :
 As a flower of the field, so he flourisheth.
 For the wind passeth over it, and it is gone ;
 And the place thereof knoweth it no more.
 But the loving-kindness of Jehovah is from everlasting
 To everlasting upon them that fear him,
 And his righteousness unto children's children ;
 Among those that keep his covenant,
 And remember his precepts to do them.

Jehovah hath established his throne in the heavens,
 And his kingdom ruleth over all.
 Bless Jehovah [ ‡ all ] ye his angels,
 That excel in strength, that execute his word,
 That hearken to the voice of his word.
 Bless Jehovah, all ye his hosts,
 Ye ministers of his, that do his pleasure.
 Bless Jehovah, all ye his works,
 In all places of his dominion.
 Bless Jehovah, O my soul.

Of the odes which occur in the Hebrew scriptures some are remarkable for grace and elegance, others for grandeur and sublimity. Of the beautiful odes the most distinguished seem to be the * xixth psalm, the * xxivth, the lxxi<sup>d</sup>, and the cxivth ; which last I shall subjoin.

When Israel went forth from Egypt,
 And the house of Jacob from a people of a strange language ;

† Seeker. Lowth.

‡ The lxx. Ar. Æth. Vulg. 4 MSS. The following similar letters, ַבּ, seem to have excluded ַבּ. See v. 21, 22.

Judah was <sup>1</sup> his holy portion,
 Israel his kingdom.
 The sea <sup>2</sup> saw him and fled,
 Jordan turned back.
 The <sup>3</sup> mountains skipped like rams;
 The hills like † young ones of the flock.

What befel thee, thou sea, that thou fleddest?
 Thou Jordan, that thou turnedst back?
 Ye mountains, that ye skipped like rams?
 And ye hills, like young ones of the flock?

<sup>4</sup> Tremble, thou earth, at the presence of the Lord;
 At the presence of the God of Jacob:
 Who turned the rock into a pool of water
 And the flint-stone into <sup>5</sup> springs of water.

The loftiness of Isaiah's triumphal ode over the fall of Babylon is justly insisted on by Bishop <sup>6</sup> Lowth with an enthusiastic warmth of admiration.

How hath the oppressor ceased! the <sup>7</sup> exactress of gold ceased!

† H. sons.

<sup>1</sup> —his.—Jehovah's, by way of eminence. There is no doubt, says Hare, but that the suffix must be referred to God. He suspects that this is a fragment. Otherwise, he observes that it is a remarkable example of the relative without the antecedent. Perhaps לקדש ירהו was once written "לקדש ירהו, i. e. לקדש יהוה: was the holy portion of Jehovah. But there is no trace of this reading in versions or MSS. We have an instance v. 7, how easily the י and ה are confounded.

Judah is used in the feminine gender; as Jer. xxiii. 6. Hare. It is equivalent to Israel; and put, by synecdoche, for the whole people of God. See ps. lxxvi. 1, 2. "Judah was his holy, or peculiar inheritance; Israel was the people over whom he vouchsafed to bear sway."

Δὴ τότε μόνον ἔην ὅσιον γέλος διέειπε Ἰουδᾶ.
 Ἐν δὲ Θεὸς λαοῖσι μέγα κρείων βασιλεύεν.

Milton.

<sup>2</sup> —saw him.—ראו: vidit eum. Syr. Secker.

<sup>3</sup> The mountains skipped.—Lightnings and earthquake caused Sinai, Horeb, and their range of hills, to tremble. Exod. xix. 18. Ps. xxix. 6. lxxviii. 7, 3. Hab. iii. 6.

<sup>4</sup> Tremble.—"The lxx and Syr. have the preterperfect." Secker. Kennicott adopts this reading; but with some doubt. Remarks on select passages &c. 1787. But Mudge justly observes, that "the answer is elegantly understood, and turned into a command." Ye had just cause to tremble: the earth hath just cause, when God appeareth.

<sup>5</sup> —springs.—מעיין, lxx. Syr. Vulg. Honbigan, Secker, Kennicott. I Kings xviii. 5.

<sup>6</sup> See the close of his viiith, xiiith, and xxviiiith prelections: and his notes on Isaiah p. 86. The beautiful conduct and bold imagery of this ode are illustrated with great spirit and taste in his remarks; and strongly represented in his version of it into Alcaics. Two of our best poets, Mason and Potter, have also given excellent poetical translations of it in our own language. See other sublime odes Exod. xv. Deut. xxxii. Judg. v. Hab. iii.

—the exactress of gold.—"A Chaldee word for the Hebrew מזהבה. Aurea,

How hath Jehovah broken the staff of wicked men, the sceptre of the rulers!

He that smote the people in wrath is<sup>1</sup> smitten, without any to avert the stroke;

He that ruled the nations in anger, is persecuted without any to hinder.

The<sup>2</sup> whole earth is at rest, and is quiet :

Even the fir-trees break forth into singing,

And the cedars of Lebanon rejoice over thee :

“Since thou hast lain down, no feller cometh up against us.”

The grave from beneath is troubled because of thee, to meet thee at thy coming :

He stirreth up for thee the mighty dead, all the<sup>3</sup> chiefs of the earth :

He raiseth up from their thrones all the kings of the nations.

All of them speak and say unto thee :

“Art thou also made weak as we? art thou become like unto us?

Is thy pride brought down to the grave, and the sound of thy viols?

Is the worm<sup>4</sup> spread under thee, and doth the earth-worm<sup>5</sup> cover thee?”

How art thou fallen from heaven, O bright star † of the morning!

How art thou cut down to the earth, that didst weaken<sup>6</sup> the nations!

Yet thou didst say in thine heart, “I will ascend into the heavens;

Above the stars of God I will exalt my throne;

<sup>7</sup> And I will sit upon the appointed mount, and upon the sides<sup>8</sup> of the north :

I will ascend above the<sup>9</sup> heights of the clouds; I will be like The Most High.”

But thou art brought down to the grave,<sup>10</sup> to the sides of the pit.

† H. son of the morning.

anro ornata. Apoc. xvii. 4. in the Syriac version; where the very word in the text occurs.” See J. D. Michaelis suppl. ad Lex. Hebr. But both this critic and Doederlein prefer מַרְהֵבָה; which the latter commentator renders turbatrix, from מַרְהֵבָה Syr. A gate of the temple of Mecca was called מַדְרֵבָּה, inaurata. Rob. clav. pent. diss. p. 28.

<sup>1</sup> —smitten.—מָכָה, 7 MSS. 3 originally. This is the learned Mr. Green’s division. Poetical parts, p. vii.

<sup>2</sup> See also poetical parts &c. p. vii.

<sup>3</sup> Hebr. rams. See Jer. l. 8. Zech. x. 3, in both which places the Chaldee explains rams by princes. Ulysses is compared to a ram by Homer:

Αὐτὸς δὲ, κτίλος ὥς, ἐπιπωλεῖται στίχας ἀνδρῶν. Il. iii. 196.

<sup>4</sup> —spread.—יָצַע 4 MSS. But the lxx. יָצַע סָרְוָסוּסִי.

<sup>5</sup> —cover thee.—וּמָכַסְךָ, et operiens te: above 60 MSS. and 12 edd. Defectiva sane lectio et singularis longe præferenda. De Rossi.

<sup>6</sup> —the nations.—וְהַגּוֹיִם the lxx and Ar. add כָּל: all the nations.

<sup>7</sup> And I will sit.—The lxx, Ar. Vulg. omit and.

<sup>8</sup> —of the north.—The temple might be situated in the northern division of the city. But it is not necessary to suppose the latter clause in apposition with the former.

<sup>9</sup> —the heights.—בְּמִוְתָּי, 5 MSS.

<sup>10</sup> —to the sides of the pit.—in opposition to the sides of the north.

They that see thee narrowly look at thee, and consider thee :
 “Is this the man that made the earth to tremble, that shook kingdoms?

That made the world like a desert, and destroyed its cities?

That <sup>1</sup> dismissed not his prisoners to their own home?”

All the kings of the nations, all of them,

Lie down in glory, each in his own tomb :

But thou art cast out <sup>2</sup> of thy sepulchre, as an abominable <sup>3</sup> branch ;

As the <sup>4</sup> raiment of them that are slain, that are thrust through with the sword,

That go down to the <sup>5</sup> stones of the pit :

As a carcase <sup>6</sup> trodden under foot, thou art not joined <sup>7</sup> to them in burial ;

<sup>1</sup> That dismissed not ὅς.—Literally, That loosed not his prisoners homeward. There is no trace of בִּיתָם in versions or MSS. Were this reading admitted, the literal rendering would be ;

As for his prisoners, he opened not their prison-house :

and a more elegant one, that of our English version :

That opened not the house of his prisoners.

<sup>2</sup> —of thy sepulchre.—It is said, v. 15, that the king of Babylon was “brought down to the grave, to the sides of the pit.” Death had brought him down to the lower parts of the earth, to the caverns which were the receptacles of the dead. But he had not his honourable place allotted him in this mansion : he had no cell, or niche, where he was laid with his weapons of war, and his ensigns of royalty.

<sup>3</sup> —branch.—Where נָצַר occurs elsewhere, Isai. xi. 1. lx. 21. Dan. xi. 7, it signifies a young branch ; which, according to the sense of the verb נָצַר, requires to be preserved with care. See Tayl. conc. Christ says, “If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered. Cocceius, in his lexicon, voc. תַּעֲב, has this illustration : ut surculus abominabilis, venenate, noxie arboris ; qui non conditur in terra, ut crescat, sed projicitur, ut exarescat. Vulg. Syr. Chald. Theod. represent the present reading in the text.

But ὁ. Ar. have νεκρὸς, מֵית, “as an abominable dead body :” Aq. has ἰχῶρ, tabes :” and Symm. ἑκτρωμα, “an untimely birth,” נָפֵל, which last would suit the place perfectly well. נָצַר seems a corrupt reading.

<sup>4</sup> As the raiment.—Thus ὁ. Syr. Ar. But Vulg. has obvolutus ; Chald. teetus, obductus ; Bp. Lowth, cloathed ; and Doederlein, obtectus. לְבוּשׁ, the reading of many MSS. is either the substantive, or the participle passive. On the latter supposition I would render,

“Thou art covered with them that are slain, that are thrust through with the sword,

“That go down to the stones of the pit ; thou art as a carcase trodden under foot.”

I prefer the former sense. Where the prosopopœia is not used, I conclude from v. 4 that a Jew speaks : and, according to Jewish ideas, the bloody raiment of the slain was an object of abhorrence.

But the reader will observe that in ὁ. there are two translations ; and that, in the former of them, the words לְבוּשׁ הַרְגִּים are rendered, μετὰ πολλῶν τεθνηκότων. This circumstance may lead him to suspect the genuineness of the text.

<sup>5</sup> —to the stones of the pit.—An emphasis will be given to this phrase, if we suppose a reference to the promiscuous burial of the common slain in pits covered with stones.

<sup>6</sup> —trodden under foot.—A great indignity. 2 Kings ix. 33. The punctuation is Green’s, ubi supra.

<sup>7</sup> —to them.—Unto the kings, who partake of an honourable burial.

Because thou hast destroyed <sup>1</sup> thy country, and slain thy people.
The seed of evil doers shall never be <sup>2</sup> renowned.

Prepare ye slaughter for his children, because of the iniquity of <sup>3</sup> their fathers:

Lest they rise, and possess the earth; and fill the face of the world with cities.

For I will rise up against them, saith Jehovah God of hosts;

And will cut off from Babylon the name, and the remnant;

<sup>4</sup> And the son, and the son's son, saith Jehovah.

And I will make it an inheritance for the porcupine, and pools of water;

And will <sup>5</sup> sink it in deep mire <sup>6</sup> and destroy it, saith Jehovah God of hosts.

Jehovah God of hosts hath sworn, saying:

“Surely, as I have thought, so shall it be;

And as I have decreed, that thing shall stand:

That I will crush the Assyrian in my land, and on my mountains tread him under foot:

And that his yoke shall depart from off them,

And his burthen depart from off <sup>7</sup> their shoulder.”

This is the decree which is † determined on the whole earth;

And this is the hand which is stretched out over all the nations.

For Jehovah God of hosts hath decreed; and who shall disannul it?

And his hand is stretched out; and who shall turn it back?

Isai. xiv. 4—27.

I cannot close this very confined and imperfect enumeration of the excellencies contained in the Hebrew poets, without adding a few instances of grand and sublime passages, <sup>8</sup> where the conception is elevated or the passion vehement. I need not remind the reader that detached beauties of composition create a glare, which is softened down by the gradation of colouring, and proper degree of shade, allotted them in their natural situation.

§ II. decreed.

<sup>1</sup> —thy country.—“My country, my people.” ó. Ar. Aq. Symm. Theod. But Bp. Lowth.

<sup>2</sup> —be renowned.—קְרוֹאִים occurs for renowned, Ezek. xxiii. 23. Chald. renders יִתְקַים, and Syr. נִקְוִים; as if the reading in the Hebrew had been יָקוּם, be established.

<sup>3</sup> —their fathers.—אֲבֹתָם, their father. ó. Syr. This resembles אֲבוֹתָם.

<sup>4</sup> And the son.—בֶּן, the son, 6 MSS. 3 originally, 1 ed.

<sup>5</sup> —in deep mire.—See Bp. Lowth, and Michaelis: præl. Hebr. xxviii.

<sup>6</sup> —and destroy it.—Literally, perdendo.

<sup>7</sup> —their shoulder.—All the ancients in the London polyglot render as if they read שֶׁכֶּמֶס, except the lxx: and in that translation ἀὐτῶν occurs Polygl. Antw. and is added in edd. Grabe, Breit. as found by Origen in some other Greek versions.

These remarks are intended as supplemental to Bishop Lowth's.

<sup>8</sup> See Hebrew prelections: xvi. xvii.

In many places sublimity arises from the greatness of the thought.

* Let them praise the name of Jehovah ;
For he commanded, and they were created. Ps. cxlviii. 5.

* He spake, and it was done ;
He commanded, and it stood fast. Ps. xxxiii. 9.

* Who hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand ;
And meted out the heavens with his span ;
And comprehended the dust of the earth in a † measure ;
And weighed the mountains in scales,
And the hills in a balance ? Isai. xl. 12.

* Thy mercy, O Jehovah, reacheth to the heavens,
And thy faithfulness up to the clouds ;
Thy righteousness is like the great mountains,
Thy judgments like the vast deep. Ps. xxxvi. 5, 6.

Canst thou by searching find out God ?
Canst thou find out the Almighty to perfection ?
It is as the heights of heaven : what canst thou do ?
It is deeper than hell : what canst thou know ?
The measure thereof is longer than the earth,
And broader than the sea. Job. xi. 7—9.

Another source of the sublime is perturbation of mind, and impetuosity of passion.

Admiration expresses itself grandly and concisely :

* Who is like thee, O Jehovah, among the gods ?
Who is like thee, glorious in holiness,
Fearful in praises, doing wonders ?
Thou didst stretch out thy right hand, the earth swallowed them.
Exod. xv. 11, 12.

Nothing can be more magnificent than the following representation of the divine anger in the song of Moses :

* I ‡ lift up mine hand to the heavens,
And say ; As I live for ever,
Surely I whet my glittering sword,

† H. tierce.

‡ Or, I swear.

And mine hand taketh hold on judgment.
 I will render vengeance to mine enemies,
 And will recompense them that hate me :
 I will make mine arrows drunk with blood,
 And my sword shall devour flesh ;
Even with the blood of the slain and of the captives,
 With the hairy head of the enemy. Deut. xxxii. 40—42.

In Isaiah these terrors are set in array against the enemies of the Jews :

Howl ye, for the day of Jehovah is near :
 As a destruction from the Almighty shall it come.
 Therefore shall all hands be slackened ;
 And every heart of man shall melt, and they shall be terrified.
 Distresses and pangs shall seize them ;
 They shall be pained as she that travaileth :
 They shall look on one another with amazement ;
 Their faces shall be as flames.
 Lo, the day of Jehovah cometh,
Even fierceness, wrath, and hot anger ;
 That he may make the land a desolation,
 And destroy her sinners out of her.
 For the stars of heaven, and the constellations thereof,
 Shall not send forth their light :
 The sun is darkened at his going forth,
 And the moon causeth not her light to shine.
 And I will visit the world for its evil,
 And the wicked for their iniquity.
 And I will cause the arrogance of the proud to cease,
 And will bring low the haughtiness of the terrible.
 I will make a mortal more precious than fine gold ;
 Yea, a man than the pure gold of Ophir.
 Therefore will I make the heavens to tremble,
 And the earth shall be shaken out of her place ;
 In the wrath of Jehovah God of hosts,
 And in the day of his hot anger. Isai. xiii. 6—13.

Struck by such passages as these, and by numberless others, for it is more difficult to choose examples than to find them, Mr. Addison<sup>1</sup> says ; “ As the Jewish nation produced men of great genius, without considering them as inspired writers, they have transmitted to us many hymns, and divine odes, which excel those that are delivered down to us by the ancient Greeks and Romans, in the poetry, as much as in the subject to which it was consecrated. This, I think, might easily be shewn, if there were occasion for it." And a learned French writer gives this character of the Hebrew language: "It is the true language of poetry, of prophecy, and of revelation: a celestial fire animates and transports it: what ardour in its odes! what sublime images in the visions of Isaiah! how pathetic and affecting are the tears of Jeremiah! One there finds beauties and models of every kind. Nothing is more capable than this language of elevating a poetic spirit; and we do not fear to assert that the Bible, superior to Homer and Virgil in a great number of places, can inspire still more than they that rare and singular genius which is the portion of those who dedicate themselves to poetry." Encyclop. Yverdon. 4°. HEBRAIQUE lan ue.

<sup>1</sup> Spectator, N. 453.

From particular beauties in the Hebrew writers, I might naturally pass on to their general character; to the lively dramatic spirit and enchanting simplicity of their historians, and to the discriminating marks and peculiar excellencies of their poets. But this field has been almost entirely occupied by the eminent author of the Hebrew Prelections. I shall therefore only add, as a supplement to that immortal work, the opinion which he elsewhere gives on "the characters of some of the principal Hebrew writers, and on the difference of style and manner which may, upon just grounds, be observed in them; yet only so far as may be necessary to throw some light on the question concerning the age of the book of Job.

"Moses stands at the head of the Hebrew writers; not only in point of time, but in regard also of literary merit, as an historian, as an orator, and as a poet. Whatever defects may be noted in his history upon the whole, when compared with the more regular and more laboured productions of the polished historians of Greece and Rome; yet in many parts of it he has given evident marks of superior abilities in the character of an historian. The history of Joseph, for instance, is an example of simple, noble, elegant, interesting, pathetic narration; of justness, neatness, and perspicuity of historic composition; to which nothing equal, or in any degree comparable, can be produced from Herodotus or Xenophon, Sallust or Livy. As an orator, his exhortations in the Book of Deuteronomy have a force, a spirit, and an elegance equal at least to any thing of the same kind in the prophets of a later age. As a poet, his prophetic ode is superior to every thing of its kind, except perhaps that of Isaiah, c. xiv: and we have in this ode of Moses an excellent example of the poetical construction, or sententious style characteristic of the Hebrew poetry. It appears here in its just form, and full beauty; though properly tempered and chastised, nor carried to its utmost precision, and most laboured accuracy; which would not have been so suitable to the great sublimity of the subject. And a like instance of judgment may be observed in Isaiah's ode above-mentioned; for though that prophet is perhaps of all the Hebrew poets the most elegant composer in that style, yet in this ode he has not aimed at a studied exactness of the short sententious construction, but has chosen a more free and flowing manner of composition. It may perhaps be said, that this perfect accuracy of the sententious style was not yet acquired, but was the late effect of progressive refinement: and that for this reason the author of Job, who is acknowledged to be very accurate in this manner of writing, was of a later age. That this is not so, will evidently appear from other examples of the earliest times, which are most perfect in the sententious manner. In short, Moses's writings, in various forms and characters of composition, are in no respect inferior to the productions of later ages of the Jewish republic: and the language of Moses is the very purity of the Hebrew tongue. However succeeding writers may differ from him in style and manner; this difference is to be ascribed to the peculiar turn and genius of those writers, not to any improvements of science, or refinements of language, in a more civilized and polished age.

“ But further: in the poetical style Moses has not only given some excellent examples of his own faculty, but has likewise preserved several specimens of poetry from other hands, and of a higher age. He has given us the prophecies of Jacob, which were in all probability delivered down to posterity in their genuine form, as taken from the mouth of the patriarch: these are in the same short sententious style; which, as it is the most distinguishing character of the Hebrew poetry, so it appears by this, and the other examples, to have been the most ancient, the genuine and original mark of it. He has given us the prophecies of Balaam; which are in this style the most perfect, the most polished, the most exquisite examples, that can be produced. There are certain odes of Horace, which, for their exquisite taste, the delicacy of composition, purity of diction, and elegance of form, one might safely pronounce to be peculiar to the Augustan age, and that no succeeding age could possibly have produced them. The prophecies of Balaam seem to me to have something of this kind of peculiar cast; a neatness, a purity, and precision in the sententious manner, which later ages seldom attained. I hardly know any thing in this kind, which can be set in competition with them : except the cxivth psalm, of a later age (not higher, I guess, than the time of David), and some parts of Job, of an age, as I suppose, somewhat earlier than that of Balaam. From these considerations I presume to mark the age of Moses as an age in which Hebrew composition, both prose and verse, was arrived at its full form of maturity and perfection ; and to conclude that the excellence of the composition of the poem of Job is no bar to its being ascribed to that age.—And upon the most strict examination of the style, manner, language, and poetical composition of that poem, I believe it will appear to all proper judges to be more suitable to that age, the age equal or somewhat prior to the time of Moses, than to any other whatever.”

But the grand topic in recommending the cultivation of the Hebrew language is the importance of the treasures which it unfolds. The venerable books written in Hebrew are indeed highly curious and instructive, apart from religious considerations. The historian, the geographer, the chronologer, the antiquarian, the naturalist, the poet, the orator, the legislator ; the observer of human nature in its original simplicity, of the sources whence nations sprang, of society in its earliest stage, and of ancient eastern manners in their only genuine representation ; will here find their researches amply rewarded, no less than the divine who raises his eye to the adorable ways of Providence in the religious and civil history of mankind. Such a vein of Hebraism runs through the writings of the New Testament, that even these divine oracles cannot be accurately understood, nor the anomalies of their style explained, without some knowledge of Hebrew literature : and, as <sup>1</sup> Luther observes, “ those who read only versions of the Hebrew Scriptures see with the eyes of others ; they stand with the people in the courts, and view the sacred rites at a distance : but whoever is acquainted with the original text itself, is admitted with the priests into the sanctuary, and is himself a witness and judge of all that is transacted in the recesses of the temple. Hence,” says this learned Reformer, “ though my knowledge of the Hebrew tongue is small, I would not barter it for all the treasures of the whole world.”

The learned author of Critical Observations on Books Ancient and Modern [London, 1776. White] advances this ingenious position, that the prophets “ never depart from the chronologic order of delivery, unless when they substitute a better order of arrangement; namely, either the order of historic accomplishment, or the still better order of oratorical and persuasive arrangement." He quotes Jerom's words, Non curæ erat prophetis tempora servare, quæ historiæ leges desiderant; sed scribere utcunque audientibus atque lectoris utile noverant. Vol. II. 139. He quotes Le Clerc as saying, that "the prophets, before they put their last hand to their works, interspersed some historic additions for the benefit of their readers:" and Carpzovius, as "not only allowing, with Le Clerc, that the present body of prophecies are the genuine ones of the prophets, without being corrupted by any additions of later collectors; but also that they are not fragments, and that even the present disposition of them proceeded from the prophets themselves, and that this disposition was not made at random, but rather contrived with an express view to some particular useful end, and this even in regard to Jeremiah the most intricate of them all in arrangement." Ib. 159.

<sup>1</sup> Quoted in the London Polyglot. Proleg. p. 20.

The reader will find in the notes a few extracts from this useful work, relating to the method of arranging some prophecies in Ezekiel; which will be sufficient to shew how well the author's idea deserves to be studied and pursued.—However, in the first place the genuine dates should be critically ascertained.

It must be observed that Kennicott's and De Rossi's MSS. added together often constitute the number of MSS. referred to in the following notes.

The probable ORDER OF TIME in which EZEKIEL'S PROPHECIES were communicated to him: with the various Dates in the Ancients and in Manuscripts.

Chapters.	Year of Jehoiachin's Captivity.	Month.	Day.	Observations.
I. II. III. IV. V. VI. VII.	5.	4.	5.
VIII. IX. X. XI. XII. XIII. XIV. XV. XVI. XVII. XVIII. XIX.	6.	6. 5. ó. Ar.	5.
XX. XXI. XXII. XXIII.	7.	5.	10. 15 ó. MS. Vat.
XXIV.	9.	10.	10.	The time at which the siege of Jerusalem began. See on Ezek. xxiv. 2. This siege lasted one year, five months, and twenty-nine days: reckoning thirty days in a month. See Jer. xxxix. 2. lii. 5, 6.
XXX. 1—16.	10. 12. ó. MS. Al. ἅλλος. Montfaucon.	10.	12. 1. ó. MS. Al.
XXX. 20—26. XXXI. XXXII. 1—16.	11. 11. 11. ó. MS. Al. polyg. Lond. marg. ed. Breit. Syr. 9 MSS. and 4 originally. 12. Hebr. 10 ó. ed. S. Quint. Ald. and οἱ λοιποὶ. Montfaucon.	1. 3. 10. ó. MS. Vat.	7. 1. 1.
		12. Hebr. ó. ed. Breit. and Ald.

Chapters.	Year of Jehoiachin's Captivity.	Month.	Day.	Observations.
XXXII. 17—32.	11. Syr. 2 MSS. 12. Hebr.	F. 10. 1. 6. Ar.	15.	It is conjectured that the month is the same as at v. 1 in 6. MS. Vat.
XXXIII. 1—20.	At or near the same time.
XXXIII. 21—33.	11. Syr. 6 MSS. 12. Hebr. 10. 6. ed. Ald. ed. S. Quinti.	12. 6. MS. Vat. ed. S. Quint. Ar. 10. Hebr.	5.	The prophet hears that Jerusalem was taken.
XXV. XXVI. XXVII. XXVIII. XXXIV.	} 12. 6. MS. Al. 11. Hebr. 10. MS. Copt. —	1. 6. MS. Al.	1.	After the destruction of Jerusalem was known by Ezekiel.
		—	—	After the destruction of Jerusalem was known by Ezekiel.
XXXV.		—	—	After the destruction of Jerusalem was known by Ezekiel, and before the conquest of Edom.
XXXVI. XXXVII. XXXVIII. XXXIX.	} —	—	—	After the destruction of Jerusalem was known by Ezekiel.
XL—XLVIII.		25.	Beginning of the Year. 1. 6. Ar.
XXIX. 17—21. XXX. 1—19.		27.	1.
			1.

Dublin, 1788.

THE BOOK OF EZEKIEL.

---

CHAPTER I.

1 Now it came to pass in the thirtieth year, in the fourth month, on the fifth day of the month, as I was * among the captives by the river Chebar, that the heavens were * Hebr. in the midst of the captivity.

---

1. —thirtieth year.—From whatever date expositors calculate, whether from the birth of the prophet, or from the beginning of Nabopolassar's reign, or from the renewal of the covenant with God in the eighteenth year of Josiah's reign, 2 Kings xxii. 3, &c. it is natural to expect that the period of time would have been specified. Elsewhere, throughout his book, Ezekiel dates from the captivity of King Jehoiachin. 2 Kings xxiv. 12. We seem therefore to have reason for questioning the integrity of the passage before us. Houbigant conjectures רס"ה. "When I was in my thirtieth year." Possibly, בחמישית שנה, "in the fifth year."

—fourth month.—Thammuz, which nearly corresponds to our July. See Chald. So ברס"ח is used for "in the first month:" e. xxix. 17. xxx. 20. בשש"י for, "in the sixth month:" e. viii. 1.

—captives.—Carried away by Nebuchadnezzar with King Jehoiachin. See 2 Kings xxiv. 14.

—Chebar.—Strabo mentions the Aborras, a river of Anthemusia, which is a part of Mesopotamia. P. 748, marg. fol. Amst. 1707. That

- 2 opened, and I saw visions of God. In the fifth day of the month, (this was the fifth year of king Jehoiachin's captivity,) the word of Jehovah * came expressly unto Ezekiel, the son of Buzi, the priest, in the land of the Chaldeans by the river Chebar; and the hand of Jehovah was there upon him.
- 4 And I looked, and lo, a† stormy wind came from the north, a great cloud, and a fire ‡ infolding itself; and a brightness was || round about it, and out of the midst thereof appeared as the § colour of amber, even out of the midst of * H. being was unto.

† H. a wind of storm.

‡ H. catching itself, or, taking hold of itself.

|| H. to it round about.

§ H. eye.

Ammianus calls this river Aboras, and Ptolemy, Chaboras, may be seen in the notes on Strabo. See c. iii. 15. "It falls into the Euphrates near Karkemish." Michaelis.

—were opened.—וּנִפְתָּחוּ ó. Ar. Syr. "that I was among, &c. and the heavens were opened."

2. —fifth year.—This was of course the fifth year of Zedekiah, who succeeded Jehoiachin: compare c. xxiv. 1, 2. xl. 1. Jer. xxxix. 1. lii. 4. 2 Kings xxiv. 8. xxv. 1: and as the city and temple were destroyed in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, 2 Kings xxv. 2, it follows that this vision appeared to Ezekiel six years before that event.

3. —came expressly.—Houbigant omits one חִיָּה: so does MS. 384. Both are represented in Chald. See also 1 Kings xiii. 32.

—upon him.—עָלַי, upon me, 8 MSS. and 4 originally. ó. Ar. Syr. See De Rossi.

4. —from the north.—This is supposed to denote the calamities which were to burst on Jerusalem from her northern enemies, the Chaldeans.

—a great cloud.—וְעָנָן, "and a great cloud," V. ó. Ar. 8 MSS. But Syr. Chald. omit וְ and.

—infolding itself.—Se amplectens et continens, sed non diffundens. Globi ignis. Cocceius. Quam [nubem] ambiebant ignis vortices. Houbigant. The original word occurs again Exod. ix. 24, and should be rendered uniformly in both places: as Syr. does by a word which signifies *inflamman*s, or, sese rapiens.

—round about it.—That is, the cloud.

—amber.—There was a bright pellucid appearance. Purior electro

5 the fire. Also out of the midst thereof was seen the likeness of four living creatures. And this was their appearance: * they had the likeness of a man: and † every one
 6 had four faces; and every one had four wings: and their legs were ‡ straight legs, and the sole of their feet was as the sole of a calf's foot; and they sparkled as the || colour
 7 of burnished brass: and they had the hands of a man under their wings on their four sides: even they § four had their 8 faces and their wings. Their wings were joined one 9

* H. there was to them.

‡ H. a straight foot.

† H. four faces were to every one, &c.

|| H. eye.

§ H. to them four were.

campum petit amnis. Virg. G. iii. 522. But Bochart shews that ἡλεκτρον, (the word in ó.) signifies amber, crystal, and a metal compounded of gold and silver or of gold and brass: and thinks that the last, called χαλκολίβανος Rev. i. 15, best suits this place. Accordingly, he derives the original word from נחש brass, and מללס, which, in Chaldee, is gold as from the mine. Vol. iii. 871. Lugd. Batav. 1712.

5. —their appearance.—We find מראיהן, and מראיך, used singularly, Gen. xli. 21, Cantic. ii. 14: but there is good authority in both places for omitting י: and it may well be omitted here.

—likeness of a man.—They had the human stature. Houbigant.

6. —four wings.—Rev. iv. 8, each of the living creatures has six wings: like the Seraphim, Isai. vi. 2. For לזהם, at the end of this verse, 2 MSS. read מהם.

7. —straight legs.—The word רגל may be rendered leg; as 1 Sam. xvii. 6. They were without any power of bending, but at the knee: in this circumstance resembling the legs of men, and not those of quadrupeds.

—as the sole of a calf's foot.—This seems to denote strength and firmness.

—and they sparkled.—Houbigant so translates as to refer this to the living creatures. See v. 13. It may refer to their feet. See Dan. x. 6. Rev. i. 15. x. i. חיות may be masculine as to the thing signified.

8. —hands.—Chald. many MSS. and some edd. read וידי: but ó. Ar. Syr. read ויד. Wings and hands are instruments, and natural signs, of swiftness and power.

9. —joined one to another.—Of the two in front, and of the two behind, the right wing of one reached to the left wing of the other; the to * another. They turned not about when they went :

 10 they went every one † straight forward. And as for the likeness of their faces, ‡ they four had the face of a man,

* H. her sister.

† H. towards the side of its face.

‡ H. to them four was.

extremities of the expanded inner wings forming an arch. See the plate in Pradus's continuation of Villalpandus : v. 1. p. 12 : which in this respect is just.

They turned not about.—This circumstance is repeated v. 12, 17. c. x. 11 : and is explained by its opposite, “they went every one straight forward :” versus plagam faciebus oppositam. Nold. not. 384. Statum suum, inter eundem, servabant, quo modo quatuor rotæ quadrigarum, quæ recto itinere feruntur. Houbigant. The wheels and horses of chariots bend, and make a circuit, in turning ; but this divine machine, actuated by one spirit, moved uniformly together ; the same line being always preserved between the corresponding cherubs and wheels, the sides of the rectangle limiting the whole being always parallel, and the same faces of each cherub always looking onward in the same direction with the face of the charioteer.

This proceeding directly on, in the same undeviating inflexible position, seems to shew their steadiness in performing the divine will, which advances to its destined goal right onwards. MSS. read בלכתם.

10. —and they four—also they four.—MSS. twice read לארבעתם.

These living creatures are called Cherubim, c. ix. 3 ; and c. x, throughout. Some derive this word from the Syr. and Chald. כרוב to plough : and Secker says that the word probably denotes unwearied diligence in serving God. Sermons vol. vi. 210. The root may be כרב Syr. potens, magnus, fortis : or, formare imagines.

Cherubim cannot represent Jehovah ; because, Rev. iv. 8, and v. 8, 9, they pay worship in heaven.

They cannot always represent angels alone ; because, Rev. v. 9, they were redeemed to God by the blood of the Lamb, and v. 11, are distinguished from angels.

I am of Taylor's opinion, Hebr. conc. in vocem, that, in the Apocalypse, they represent the people or body of the church of God ; as the twenty-four Elders represent the ministers of the church.

But I do not think with him that, in the book of Revelation, they represent the church of God on earth. They seem to foreshadow the glorified state of Christ's redeemed in heaven ; who will serve God with and the face of a lion, on the right side: and * they four had the face of an ox on the left side; also they † four 11 had the face of an eagle. [Thus ‡ were their faces.] And || the wings § of every one were parted above: two wings of every one were joined, and two covered their 12 bodies. And they went every one ** straight forward:

* H. to them four was.

† H. to them four was.

‡ H. And their faces.

|| H. their.

§ H. to.

** Towards the side of its face.

reason, with strength of affection, with perseverance, and with swift obedience: qualities which seem to be signified by the emblem here described.

Angels may have occasionally assumed this form; Gen. iii. 24; and they may have been represented under this form in the Holy of Holies: as it expresses their own nature, and that of those who will be like angels, ισάγγελοι, in heaven. Luke xx. 36. “Quatuor excellunt in mundo: leo inter feras, bos inter jumenta, aquila inter volucres, homo vero super omnia: et Deus eminet super universa.” Ita Talmudici.

Ex horum animalium formis constabant cherubim, forte quod hæ formæ cum imaginum earum nominibus et antitypis, angelis nimirum, optime convenirent. Nam vox cherubim potentes & sapientes denotat, & angeli creaturas alias potentia & sapientia longe antecedunt: bos enim et leo inter animalia summo corporis robore enitent, homo & aquila ingenii & visus acumine præstant: ideoque eorum tantum animalium φάσεις dignæ videntur quæ angelorum, potentia & sapientia præcellentium, typi essent & emblemata, & augusto illo cherubim nomine insignirentur.”

Spencer. iii. iv. ii. p. 353.

—on the right side.—Perhaps with respect to Him who sat on the throne: v. 26.

Milton had a right notion of this hieroglyphic, when he says of the cherubic shapes, “Four faces each had wondrous;” and afterwards calls them “the fourfold visag’d Four.” Par. Lost. vi. 753, 845.

11. —[Thus were their faces.]—Houbigant omits ופניהם, with ó. “Rectius, ni fallor, omiserunt ó.” Seeker.

—parted above.—In the act of flying.

—of every one were joined.—As explained on v. 9. ויש, that is, וישא.

—their bodies.—Lege vel גויתיהם, vel גויתיהן. Houb.

12. —spirit.—Will. Chald. here and v. 20.

- whithersoever the spirit was to go, they went: and they 13 turned not about when they went. And as for the likeness of the living creatures, their appearance was as burning coals of fire, as the appearance of lamps: it * went up and down among the living creatures; and † the fire was bright, and out of the fire came forth lightning.
 14 And the living creatures ran and returned as the appearance of a flash of lightning.
 15 And I beheld the living creatures, and lo, there was one wheel upon the earth by the living creatures, with its 16 four ‡ sides. The appearance of the wheels, and their

* Or, moved itself.

† H. and brightness was to the fire.

‡ H. faces.

—when they went.—MSS. vary, some reading בלכתם.

13. —burning coals of fire.—Nine MSS. and two edd. read בערת or בוערת; coals of burning fire.

—it went up and down.—That is, the fire moved itself up and down.
 See Chald. Milton's expression is, "And careering fires between."
 That is, fires which ran swiftly, and as it were tilted, at each other. See Par. Lost vi. 756. and Newton's note.

14. —ran.—Perhaps we should read רָוַץ, the two infinitives being used as currere & reverti in Latin. See my note on Malachi ii. 13. Houbigant proposes רָצוּ וּשְׁבוּ. The reading in Syr. Ar. may be רָצוּ שְׁבוּ רָצוּ, "ran and turned not." The present reading is consistent with v. 9.
 They ran, and returned; but always in a fixed relative position, as explained on v. 9, and straight forward.

—a flash of lightning.—Βεζεκ occurs in Theod. But one MS. and Chald. Ar. have בָּרַק, as v. 13. Syr. translates by a word which signifies a falling star.

15. —And I beheld the living creatures.—"הַחַיִּים prius non agnos-cunt ó." Secker.

—upon the earth.—Not lifted up. See v. 19.

—with its four faces.—One wheel intersected another at right angles, like the two colures: and the four spherical portions thus formed seem to be called the four faces, or sides. See v. 16, 17. The Jews, as Grotius observes on v. 4, call this vision מַרְבֵּב, or, The Chariot.

16. The appearance.—וּמֵרָאָה, And the appearance, MSS. and the ancients, except Chald.

work, was as the * colour of a beryl: and † they four had one likeness: and their appearance, and their work, was 17 as if a wheel had been in the midst of a wheel. When they went, they went upon their four sides: and they 18 turned not about when they went. And as for their fellows, and ‡ their strake, I beheld them; and their
 19 strakes were full of eyes round about || them four. And when the living creatures went, the wheels went by them: and, when the living creatures were lifted up from the 20 earth, the wheels were lifted up. Whithersoever the spirit was to go, they went: [thither was their spirit to

* H. eye.

† there was unto them four.

‡ H. and strake to them.

|| H. to them four.

—beryl.—A gem of a bluish green; and probably called in the text tarshish, from the place whence it came.

—they four.—לָאֶרְבַּעַתָּם 10 MSS. 2 MSS. originally, and 2 edd.

17. —sides.—רַבְעֵיהֶם, many MSS. בְּלִכְתָּם, at the end of the verse, 11 MSS.

—they turned not about.—From one straight course, and unbent line of direction. The axis of the former wheels was always parallel to that of the latter. See c. x. 11.

The wheels are supposed to express the revolutions of God's Providence; which are regular, though they appear intricate.

18. —fellows.—Summæ curvatura rotæ. Ovid. Nine or ten MSS. read וּגְבִיָּהֶם. Many MSS. and edd. read וּגְבוּתָם מְלֵאוֹת: and 9 MSS. now read לָאֶרְבַּעַתָּם, and 4 originally read so.

—strake—strakes.—גְבוּת signifies brows, Lev. xiv. 9. Here I suppose גְבוּת to denote canthus, seu ferrum quo rotæ vinciuntur: and גָּב, its root, signifies any part of a thing which rises above the rest. See Tayl. conc. and the margin of the English version. For וּגְבוּת one MS. reads גְבוּת: altitudo eis.

—I beheld them.—For וִירָאָה 6. Ar. Houb. read וַאֲרָאָה. See רָאָה used with ל, ps. lxiv. 5, 6.

—full of eyes.—The eyes denote God's all-seeing providence. That the cherubim also were full of eyes, see c. x. 12.

20. —[thither was their spirit to go.]—On reading this clause it seemed to me that it was a various lection of שֵׁם הַרוּחַ לְלִכְתָּ, which had crept

- go:] and the wheels were lifted up beside them: for the 21 spirit of the living creature was in the wheels. When those went, these went: and when those stood, these stood:
 and, when those were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up beside them: for the spirit of the living 22 creature was in the wheels. And the likeness of a firmament over the heads of the living creature was as the colour of fearful ice, stretched forth over their heads 23 above. And under the firmament their wings were * straight, one toward † another: also every one had two which covered on this side, and every one had two which 24 covered on that side, their bodies. And I heard the sound of their wings as the sound of many waters, as the voice of the Almighty, when they went: the sound of their speech was as the sound of an host: and when they stood, 25 they let down their wings. And there was a voice from the firmament, which was over their heads, [when they stood and let down their wings.]

* Or, upright.

† H. her sister.

into the text: and I was confirmed in this conjecture by observing the omissions in MSS. and that 9 or 10 MSS. for שם read שמה. Houbigant omits the clause, with ó. Syr.

—of the living creature.—See v. 22: and c. x. 15, 20.

22. And the likeness.—"And the likeness over the heads of the living creatures was as a firmament." See ó. "was the firmament." Secker.

—of fearful ice.—Not in its common state, but when it astonishes from its magnitude and splendor.

23. —straight.—Exporrectæ. Houbigant.

—on this side—on that side.—See דנה Dan. xii. 5. On the right hand, and on the left.

24. —they let down their wings.—כנפיהם: many MSS. and again, v. 25.

25. The three last words in the original are omitted by ó. Ar. Syr. See Cappellus and Houbigant. One of De Rossi's MSS. omitted the three words at first. Some MSS. omit the whole verse. I have translated as V. If we read ותרפינה, the passage will be clear.

- 26 And above the firmament, which was over their head, was the likeness of a throne, as the appearance of a sapphire-stone : and upon the likeness of the throne was the like-27 ness as the appearance of a man above upon it. And I saw as the * colour of amber, as the appearance of fire round about within it : from the appearance of his loins and upward, and from the appearance of his loins and downward, I even saw as the appearance of fire ; and a 28 brightness was † round about ‡ him. As the appearance of the bow which is in the cloud in the day of rain, so was the appearance of the brightness round about.

This was the appearance of the glory of Jehovah. And, || when I saw it, I fell upon my face.

* H. eye.

† H. to him round about.

‡ Or, to it.

|| H. And I saw it and fell.

26. —of a man.—The Representative of the Invisible God, his ever-blessed and only-begotten Son, who at length assumed human nature.

27. —within it.—Se. יָצַב the colour. See Nold. not. 391. and ó. MS. Al. where, and in MS. Copt. we have ἔσωθεν αὐτοῦ. Mr. Dimock ingeniously conjectures לֶהֱבֹרֶת שֵׁשׁ, a fire of flames ; as ps. cv. 32.

“Confer viii. 2. unde videntur omittenda quæ omittit cod. Vat.” Secker.

—round about him.—That is, the man. One MS. reads לֶהֱבֹרֶת se. שֵׁשׁ the fire. The nature of this brightness is explained in the next verse.

28. —is.—The Hebrew future is here frequentative : “is wont to be in the cloud.”

—glory of Jehovah.—This glory assumed a different appearance, Isai. vi. 1, 2. Thus was God pleased to reveal himself to the prophets πολυτρόπως, in divers manners.

We need not allegorize the circumstances of this august vision too minutely. Many of them may serve only to fill up the splendour of the scene ; though many, no doubt, have much significance ; which should be pointed out rather by a correct judgment than a luxuriant imagination.

CHAPTER II.

- 1 AND I heard a voice of one that spake : and he said unto me ; Son of man, stand upon thy feet, and I will speak
 2 unto thee. And the spirit entered into me when he spake unto me, and set me upon my feet ; and I heard
 3 him that spake unto me. And he said unto me, Son of man, I send thee to the sons of Israel, to * a rebellious nation which † hath rebelled against me : they and their fathers have transgressed against me, even unto this very 4 day. Although the sons be of an ‡ hardened countenance and of a firm heart, I do send thee unto them : and thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah.

* H. rebellious nations.

† H. have rebelled.

‡ H. hard of countenance, and firm of heart.

1. — son of man.—An imitation of the Syriac ברנשא, which is repeated continually. Eichhorn.

—stand upon thy feet.—He had fallen prostrate, in the eastern manner. C. i. 28.

2. —the spirit.—The power of the Highest. Luke i. 35. See c. iii. 12, 14, 24. 1 Kings xviii. 12. 2 Kings ii. 16.

3. —sons of Israel.—ó. Ar. have בית house, for בני sons. See, on the contrary, בני for בית, c. iii. 1, 14 MSS. 1 ed. V. ó. Ar. Syr. and ib. v. 4, Syr. Chald. See also c. iv. 3. Perhaps the same contraction, "ב, may have been anciently used for both words.

—a rebellious nation.—הנזים 4 MSS. and 1 originally : "the rebellious nation." Houbigant reads נזי : "a nation of rebels:" and observes that Syr. translates in the singular number. Some suppose that nations may refer to both Israel and Judah. "נזים non agnoscunt ó." Secker.

4. Although.—See ו, quavis, Nold. §. 46. But 2 MSS. read אני אשך. Thus the rendering would be : "For the sons are, &c. heart, unto whom I send thee : and thou &c." We may very well render—"day : and the sons are, &c., yet I do send, &c."

—of an hardened countenance and of a firm heart.—ó. MS. Al. and Theod. translate the original happily, by σκληροπρόσωποι καὶ στερεοκάρδιοι.

—the Lord Jehovah.—יהוה אלהים Jehovah our God : 3 MSS. Chald. One MS. and ó. MS. Vat. omit אדני, Lord.

- 5 And they *, whether they will hear or whether they will forbear, for they are a † rebellious house, yet shall they 6 know that there hath been a prophet among them. And thou, son of man, be not afraid of them, and of their words be not thou afraid; though briers and thorns be with thee, and thou dwell among scorpions: of their words be not thou afraid, and at their looks be not thou
 7 dismayed, though they be a rebellious house. But thou ‡ shalt speak my words unto them, whether they will hear or whether they will forbear: for they are || most rebellious.
 8 But thou, Son of man, hear what I say unto thee: Be not thou rebellious, like that rebellious house: open thy mouth, and eat that which I give thee.

* Or, as for them.

† H. a house of rebellion.

‡ Or, But speak thou.

|| H. rebellion.

6. — though briers &c.—סלון is a thorn c. xxviii. 24: and see under סלָא Ar. Cast. lex. purgavit spinis palman; and, aculei adnascentes palmarum ramis: and again under סלָה, סלֹוא Chald. spina. This leads to the sense of סרב, which does not occur elsewhere in Hebrew. “Though thou art likely to be torn by briers and thorns, and to be stung by scorpions: that is, though thou exposest thyself to injurious and malignant treatment.” In Syr. and Chald. סלָא is to despise; and סרב to rebel, to oppose. The sense therefore may be, “Though stubborn and proud men be with thee.” Houbigant prefers the former sense; because briers and thorns seem parallel to scorpions.

—with thee.—אֶתְךָ, 15 MSS. 3 edd.

7. — most rebellious.—בֵּית מְרִי, “a rebellious house,” 19 MSS. 3 edd. 3 MSS. in the margin: 6. Ar. Syr. v. 5, 6, 8. c. iii. 9, 26, 27. So that there is full authority for admitting this various lection into the text.

8.— thou rebellious.—מְרִי is an adjective. c. xlv. 6.

—eat.—See c. iii. 1, 3, 10. God’s words were to sink into him, that he might faithfully deliver them to others. Thus Christians eat bread and drink wine, partly to shew that they should receive and imbibe the doctrines of Christ, so as to practise them. John vi. “Take in, retain, digest.” Secker.

- 9 And when I looked, lo, an hand was * put forth unto 10 me; and lo, a roll of a book was therein: and he spread it before me; and it was written within and without; and there was written therein, “ Lamentations, and mourning, and woe.”

---

CHAPTER III.

- 1 AND he said unto me: Son of man, eat that which thou findest; eat this roll; and go, speak unto the house of 2 Israel. So I opened my mouth, and he caused me to eat
 3 that roll. And he said unto me: Son of man, cause thy belly to eat and fill thy bowels with this roll which I give thee. Then did I eat it; and it was in my mouth as honey for sweetness.
 4 And he said unto me: Son of man, go, get thee unto the house of Israel, and speak my words unto them.
 5 For thou art not sent unto a people † of a strange speech, and of an hard language; but unto the house of Israel:

* H. sent.

† H. deep of lip and heavy of tongue.

---

10. —written.—כתוב sc. הורה, this.

—within and without.—Scriptus et in tergo, necdum finitus, Orestes.
 Juv.

Quoted by Grotius.

The ancient books were rolled on cylinders of wood, or ivory; and, usually, the writing was only on the inside.

—and woe.—Perhaps, ודוי.

1. —findest.—Quod tibi porrigitur. Quod obviam habes ab alio adductum. Recte Chald. quod tibi datur. Houbigant.

3. —eat it.—ואוכלה 3 MSS. ה is the affix, according to the ancient versions and Chald. See Rev. x. 9. The substance, which had the appearance of a roll, was capable of being eaten. “ Perhaps it was sweet, from the pleasure of being so honourably employed.” Seeker.

- 6 not unto many * people of a strange speech and of an hard language: surely, I have not sent thee unto them;
 7 they would have hearkened unto thee. But the house of Israel will not hearken unto thee; for they will not hearken unto me: for as to all the house of Israel, they
 8 are † of a firm forehead and of an hardened heart. Lo, I have made thy face firm against their ‡ faces; and thy
 9 forehead firm against their || foreheads. As an adamant, firmer than § flint, have I made thy forehead: fear them not, neither be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house.
- 10 Moreover he said unto me: Son of man, all my words which I shall speak unto thee receive in thine heart, and 11 hear with thine ears. And go, get thee unto them of the captivity, unto the sons of thy people, and speak unto them; and say unto them, “Thus saith the Lord Jehovah:” whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear.
- 12 Then the spirit lifted me up; and I heard behind me a voice as of a great ** shaking, which said, “Blessed be the * H. peoples deep of lip and heavy of tongue.

† H. firm of forehead, and hard of heart.

‡ Or, face.

|| H. forehead.

§ Or, than a rock.

** Or, rustling.

6. —surely I have not sent thee.—Houbigant observes that all the ancients omit לֹא; and proposes either to expunge it, or to read לוֹא וְלֹא, certe autem si. Jud. viii. 19. See לֹא, surely, Nold. §. 5.

8. —I have made firm.—Here, and in the following verse, may be an allusion to the prophet's name; which signifies, God confirmeth.

12. —a great shaking.—רָעַע in Cast. lex. is, concussus est eum strepitu. Quidam susurrus, qui tamen, præ frequentia eorum qui illum edunt, imitatur murmur vehemens. Gussetius. Ut quando cedri Libani moventur. Cocceius. The two latter refer to Ps. lxxii. 16.

—the glory of Jehovah.—Or, the glorious Jehovah.

—from his place.—By us his ministering spirits, who are now in the place where his glory dwelleth.

- 13 "glory of Jehovah from his place." I heard also the sound of the wings of the living creatures which * touched one † another, and the sound of the wheels beside them, and
- 14 the sound of a great ‡ shaking. So the spirit lifted me up, and took me away; and I went || in bitterness, in the heat of my spirit; and the hand of Jehovah was strong upon me.
- 15 Then I came to them of the captivity at Tel-abib, that dwelt by the river Chebar; and I dwelt where they dwelt, I even dwelt there astonished among them seven days.
- 16 And it came to pass at the end of seven days, that the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying;
- 17 Son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel: therefore hear the word from my mouth, and * H. kissed.

† H. her sister.

‡ Or, rustling.

|| H. bitter.

13. —touched.—See c. i. 9, 11.

14. —in bitterness.—Or grief, because of the calamities which I was to foretel. C. ii. 10. But ó. MS. Al. Pachom. and ed. Ald, ο μετέωρος.

—in the heat of my spirit.—In hot indignation against my rebellious countrymen.

—strong upon me.—Urging and empowering me to execute my commission. Mr. Lowth refers to Jer. xx. 9.

15. —Tel-abib.—The prophet was before at some distance from this place, though on the same river. C. i. 3. iii. 12, 14. If the Chebar runs into the Euphrates from mount Masius, those of Jehoiachin's captivity to whom Ezekiel prophesied were planted high up in the country, north of Babylon.

—and I dwelt &c.—וַאֲשַׁב, Keri, many MSS. and edd. וְהָמָה 5 MSS. Agreeably to this reading we may translate: "And I dwelt (forasmuch as they dwelt there) I even dwelt &c." The English version follows the Vulgate. "Forte legendum, וַאֲשַׁב אֲשֶׁר." Secker. But Houbigant prefers אֲשֶׁר הָמָה "for they dwelt there: and I dwelt there" &c.

—astonished.—מִשְׁתַּמֵּם 2 MSS. As Ezra ix. 3. Astonished at the commission with which I was entrusted; and affected by the overpowering splendour of the vision.

- 18 warn them from me. When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; and thou warnest him not, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way * to save his life; that wicked man shall die for his iniquity,
- 19 but his blood will I require at thine hand. Yet if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his evil way; he shall die for his iniquity, but
- 20 thou hast delivered thy soul. Again, when the righteous turneth from his righteousness and committeth iniquity, and I lay a stumbling-block before him, and he dieth because thou hast not given him warning; he shall die for his sin, and his righteousness which he hath done shall not be remembered, but his blood will I require at
- 21 thine hand. Nevertheless if thou warn him, [even the righteous,] that the righteous sin not, and he do not sin;

* Or, to cause him to live.

18. When I say.—באמרי, c. xxxiii. 8. Compare v. 17, 18, 19, and c. xxxiii. 7, 8, 9.

—die.—An immature death, if not a violent one. The learned Michaelis understands the phrase of all the punishments of sin.

—to save his life.—לחיותו MSS. and edd. And 3 MSS. read in Hiphil להחיותו; which Houbigant proposes as the best reading.

19. —thy soul.—That is, thyself. See c. iv. 14. The opposite to this clause is, “His blood will I require at thine hand.” v. 20.

20. —a stumbling-block.—Such a temptation to sin, and particularly to idolatry, as he might have resisted.

—and he dieth.—והוא 3 MSS. (See De Rossi) and Syr. Ar. express the connexive particle. It must also be observed that vau precedes. After writing this, I found that Houbigant proposes the same reading, as corresponding to what follows in the next verse: “and he do not sin.”

—his righteousness—shall not be remembered.—MSS. and edd. read תזכרנה צדקותיו.

21. [even the righteous.].—It is obvious to conjecture that the former צדיק is a gloss. But the ancients and Houb. read הוזהרת “Nevertheless if thou warn the righteous.” Houbigant thinks that the second צדיק should be placed with ó. after the second חטא: “that he sin not, he shall surely live, because he is warned : also thou hast delivered thy soul.

- 22 And the hand of Jehovah was there upon me ; and he said unto me ; Arise, go forth into the plain, and there 23 will I speak unto thee. Then I arose and went forth into the plain : and lo, the glory of Jehovah stood there, as the glory which I saw by the river Chebar : and I fell
 24 upon my face. Then the spirit entered into me, and set me upon my feet. And he spake unto me, and said unto 25 me ; Go, shut thyself within thine house. And thou, Son of man, lo, bands shall be put upon thee, and thou shalt be bound therewith ; and thou shalt not go out among 26 them. And I will make thy tongue cleave to the roof of thy mouth, that thou shalt be dumb, and shalt not be unto 27 them * a reprovcr : for they are a rebellious house. But, when I speak unto thee, I will open thy mouth ; and thou shalt say unto them, “ Thus saith the Lord Jehovah.” He that heareth, let him hear ; and he that forbearcth, let him forbear : for they are a rebellious house.

* II. for a man of reproving.

and he do not sin ; the righteous shall surely live—” מִיָּהוָה יֵהִי מִסָּד MSS. and edd.

24. —spake unto me.—See c. xx. 3.

25. —bands shall be put upon thee.—They put, men put, or, they shall put &c. For the verb may be converted by the distant vau. This impersonal form is equivalent to the passive voice : and indeed the word, differently pointed, becomes passive : “ are put : ” that is, “ shall be put.” See Mr. Lowth on Isai. xlv. 18. At thy command, thy domestics shall bind thee. See c. iv. 8.

26. —dumb.—For some space of time, I will withhold revelations from thee.

—a reprovcr : for.—For, being a rebellious house, they are well deserving of reproof. Or, though they be a rebellious house.

27. —unto thee.—אַתָּה. MSS. and edd. See c. xiv. 4.

Thus saith the Lord.—The prophet was to declare his divine commission in these words. See c. ii. 4. c. iii. 11. It is more agreeable to

CHAPTER IV.

- 1 THOU also, son of man, take thee a * tile, and lay it before thee, and † pourtray upon it a city, even Jerusalem.
 2 And lay siege against it, and build a tower against it, and ‡ cast up a mount against it: set a || camp also against it, and place battering-rams against it round
 3 about. Moreover, take thou unto thee a plate of iron, and set it for a wall of iron between thee and the city: and set thy face against it, and it shall be § besieged, and thou shalt ** straiten it. This shall be a sign to the house
 4 of Israel. Lie thou also upon thy left side, and lay the

* Or, brick.

† Or, engrave.

‡ H. pour out.

|| Or, tents.

§ H. in siege.

** Or, beset, or, distress.

---

these passages to suppose that the following words, “He that heareth—forbear,” are the words of God to Ezekiel; not part of the message which the prophet was to deliver.

1. — and lay it.—וַנִּתֵּן MSS. and edd. here; and twice in v. 2; and again v. 3.

2. — a tower.—From דִּוּק Chald. דִּק Syr. introsperit, prospexit.

3. — a plate of iron.—Probably such as cakes were baked on. See Tayl. cone. This may denote the strong trenches of the besiegers, or their firmness and perseverance in the siege; or, according to others, that there was an iron wall between the besieged, and God whom the prophet represented.

— and set.—וַיִּסָּב וְנִתְּנָה. Seven MSS. omit the final ה.

— against it.—The city. Agreeably to what follows: “and it shall be besieged.”

— to the house.—לְבָנֵי “to the sons.” ὦ. Ar. 1 MS. originally. See on c. ii. 3.

4. Lie thou.—In his own house. C. iii. 24. This was to be his posture, not without intermission, but in the exercise of his prophetic office during that part of each day when the people were likely to observe his conduct.

punishment of the iniquity of the house of Israel upon it: according to the number of the days that thou shalt lie upon it, * thou shalt bear the punishment of their iniquity. For I have appointed thee the years of the punishment of their iniquity, according to the number of days, three hundred and ninety days: and † thou shalt bear the punishment of the iniquity of the house of Israel. And, ‡ when thou hast accomplished them, lie again on thy right side; and || thou shalt bear the punishment of the iniquity of the house of Judah forty days:

* Or, bear thou.

† Or, bear thou.

‡ H. And thou shalt accomplish them, and shalt lie.

|| Or, bear thou.

—lay the punishment &c.—That is, Declare that you thus represent the punishment &c.

—thou shalt bear &c.—Thou shalt presignify the punishment which they shall bear.

5. —three hundred and ninety days.—This number of years, see v. 6, will take us back, with sufficient exactness, from the year in which Jerusalem was sacked by Nebuchadnezzar to the first year of Jeroboam's reign, when national idolatry began in Israel. The period of days seems to predict the duration of the siege by the Babylonians: see v. 9: deducting from the year five months and twenty-nine days, mentioned 2 Kings xxv. 1—4, the time during which the Chaldeans were on their expedition against the Egyptians. Jer. xxxvii. 5. Jackson, Chron. i. 383, follows the reading of ó. according to Origen, which is 190 years: and computes them from the 7th of Hoshea, when the siege of Samaria began, to the 2nd of Cyrus, when liberty of returning to their own country was granted to the Israelites. But he confesses that he cannot explain the term of 40 years, as the duration of the punishment undergone by the house of Judah; and thinks that no tolerable explanation has yet been given of it.

6. —forty days.—Reckon near fifteen years and six months in the reign of Manasseh, two years in that of Amon, three months in that of Jehoahaz, eleven years in that of Jehoiakim, three months and ten days in that of Jehoiachin, and eleven years in that of Zedekiah; and there arises a period of forty years, during which gross idolatry was practised in the kingdom of Judah. Manasseh's reformation, 2 Chron. xxxiii. 13, is sup-

- 7 * each day for a year † have I appointed thee. And thou shalt ‡ set thy face toward the siege of Jerusalem, and thine || arm shall be uncovered; and † thou shalt prophesy
8 against it. And lo, I will put bands upon thee, and thou shalt not turn thee ** from one side to another, until thou
9 have ended the days of thy siege. Also take thou unto thee wheat, and barley, and beans, and lentiles, and panic, and spelt, and put them in one vessel, and make them food for thee during the number of the days that thou liest on thy side: three hundred and ninety days
10 shalt thou eat thereof. And thy provision which thou shalt eat shall be by weight twenty shekels a day: from 11 time to time shalt thou eat it. Thou shalt also drink water by measure, the sixth part of an hin: from time to

* H. a day for a year, a day for a year.

|| Or, and let thine arm be uncovered.

† H. have I appointed it unto thee.

§ Or, and prophesy thou.

‡ Or, and set thou.

** H. from thy side to thy side.

posed to have lasted during the remainder of his reign; and Josiah was uniformly a good king. ib. xxxiv. 2. Forty days may have been employed in spoiling and desolating the city and temple.

—have I appointed.—V. 6. Ar. Syr. read ונתתי; as v. 5.

7. —uncovered.—Disengaged from the upper garment worn in the east; and thus ready for action. See Tayl. conc. and Isai. lii. 10.

—prophesy.—By these signs, and by occasional explanations of them.

8. —I will put bands.—God is said to do what was done in consequence of his command. See on c. iii. 25. This seems to shew the firmness of the Chaldeans in carrying on the siege till they took the city.

9. —lentiles, and panic, and spelt.—In Celsius the first of these is lens, Gr. φακήs; the second panicum; and the third zea, to which spelta is equivalent. They all serve to make a kind of bread, according to this author: and they were mixed together in one vessel, to denote the coarse food which should be used in the siege. See v. 16. In this v. 6 MSS. read ונתתי, and many MSS. read ונתת.

10. —twenty shekels.—Not ten ounces, troy weight.

11. —the sixth part of an hin.—An hin was about ten pints. The prophet was to take this pittance from day to day, and in small portions from time to time of the same day, while he subjected himself to public notice. At other seasons he might be left to his natural liberty. The act denoted scarcity during the siege.

- 12 time shalt thou drink. * Thou shalt also eat a barley cake, † and with ‡ dung that cometh out of man shalt 13 thou bake it in their sight. Also Jehovah said; Even thus shall the sons of Israel eat their polluted food among 14 the nations whither I will drive them. Then said I: Ah, Lord Jehovah! lo, my soul hath not been polluted: for from my youth up even until now I have not eaten of that which died of itself, or was torn in pieces; neither
 15 hath abominable food come into my mouth. Then he said unto me, Behold, I have given thee cow's dung for man's dung; and thou shalt prepare thy food || therewith.
 16 Moreover he said unto me: Son of man, lo, I will break the staff of bread in Jerusalem; and they shall eat bread by weight and with care, and they shall drink water 17 by measure and with astonishment: that they may want bread and water, and be astonished § one with another, and pine away in their iniquity.

* H. And a barley cake, thou shalt eat it.

† H. and as for it.

‡ H. dung of the filth of man.

|| Or, thereon.

§ H. a man and his brother.

The humane Mr. Howard allows a prisoner "a pound and a half of good household bread a day, and a quart of good beer: besides twice a day a quart of warm soup made from pease, rice, milk, or barley." 4°. ed. 3. p. 40.

12. —dung.—Dathius observes that the dung of oxen and of camels was often used by the easterns as fuel for preparing their food. The command to use human dung expressed extreme necessity. Harmer i. 260.

15. —unto me.—After אֶלִי é. Ar. read י, i. e. יהוה; which word occurs in one MS

16. —the staff of bread.—On which man leaneth for support. See Le Clerc. Lev. xxvi. 26.

Et quoniam non est quasi quod suffulciat artus,
 Debile fit corpus, languescunt omnia membra,
 Brachia palpebræque cadunt, poplitesque procumbunt.

Lucret. L. iv. 948.

17. —that they may want.—"Because they shall." Seeker.

—with another.—בְּאֶחָד 3 MSS. 1 ed. See De Rossi. ad fratrem suum. V. at one another.

CHAPTER V.

- 1 AND thou, son of man, take thee a sharp * tool, even a barber's razor shalt thou take thee, and shalt cause it to pass upon thine head and upon thy beard; and thou shalt take thee balances † to weigh, and shalt divide ‡ the hair.
- 2 A third part shalt thou burn || with fire in the midst of the city, when the days of the siege are fulfilled; and thou shalt take a third part and smite about it with the § tool; and a third part shalt thou scatter in the wind, and I will
- 3 draw out a sword after them. Thou shalt also take thereof
- 4 a few in number, and shalt bind them in thy skirts. Then shalt thou take of them again, and cast them into the midst of the fire, and burn them in the fire: for thereof shall come forth a fire into all the house of Israel.

* Or, instrument.

† H. of weight.

§ Or, instrument.

‡ H. them.

|| Or, in the fire.

1. —a sharp tool.—ó. Ar. read מתער, præ novaculâ, and thus furnish a beautiful sense. “Take thee a sharp sword, sharper than a barber's razor shalt thou take it unto thee.” Syr. seems to read בתער, “as sharp as a barber's razor &c.” Thus חרב may be rendered a sword throughout.

—cause it to pass.—והעברתה, 1 MS. 2 edd. ó. Ar. Syr. and cause it to pass.

—balances to weigh.—“Weighing scales.” Seeker.

2. —with fire.—באש, 1 MS.

—of the city.—Which the prophet had portrayed, or engraven.

—the siege.—The typical siege.

—and smite.—ותכה “and smite” V. Syr. Houbigant. For the meaning of this typical representation, see v. 12. How those who seceded into Egypt after the murder of Gedaliah were destroyed, see Jer. xlii. 16. xliii. 11. xliv. 12, 27.

3. —skirts.—The extremities of thy garment. This denotes the few that were left in the land by Nebuzaradan. Jer. xl. 6. 2 Kings xxv. 22.

- 5 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: 'This is Jerusalem: * in the midst of the nations have I set her, and countries are 6 round about her: and she hath changed my judgments into wickedness more than the nations; and my statutes more than the countries which are round about her: for they have refused my judgments; and as for my statutes, 7 they have not walked in them. Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Because ye are changed more than the nations which are round about you, and have not walked in my statutes nor kept my judgments, but have done according to the judgments of the nations which are 8 round about you; therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah:
lo, I, even I, am against thee, and will execute judgments 9 in the midst of thee, in the sight of the nations. And I will do in thee that which I have not done, and whereunto I will not do any more the like; because of all thine

* Or, among.

4. —thereof shall come forth a fire.—In consequence of Ishmael's conspiracy against Gedaliah, destruction shall spread itself among the small residue of the Jews. See Jer. xlii, xliii, xliv. Houb. reads ממה se. שם.

5. —Thus saith.—In ó. Ar. the translation is "And thou shalt say unto all the house of Israel: 'Thus saith, &c.'" The four last words of v. 4. seem to have been originally repeated, with ושמרת prefixed to them, at the beginning of v. 5.

6. —more than the nations.—More than the nations have changed their judgments. See Jer. ii. 11.

—they have refused.—The nations have adhered to the religious rites transmitted down to them by their ancestors.

7. —Because ye are changed.—The connection with the foregoing verse leads to the reading of המורכב from מור to change: inf. Niphal. Houbigant conjectures חמסכם, "ye do violence."

—but have done.—לֹא is omitted by 22 MSS. 4 edd. and Syr. See also c. xi. 12. However, a good sense arises from retaining it. "Neither have done according to the judgments [or manners] of the nations that are round about you:" sc. by persevering in the religion of your forefathers.

9. —the like.—The national punishment of the Jews, comprehending

- 10 abominations. Therefore the fathers shall eat the sons in the midst of thee, and the sons shall eat their fathers: and I will execute judgments in thee; and I will scatter the
- 11 whole remnant of thee towards * all the winds. Therefore, as I live, saith the Lord Jehovah, surely because thou hast polluted my sanctuary with all thy detestable things, and with all thine abominations; even I also will diminish, and mine eye shall not spare, even I also will
- 12 not have pity. A third part of thee shall die with the pestilence, or shall be consumed with famine in the midst of thee; and a third part shall fall by the sword round about thee; and a third part will I scatter towards all the
- 13 winds, and I will draw out a sword after them. Thus shall mine anger be accomplished, and I will cause my fury to rest upon them, and will be comforted: and they shall know that I Jehovah have spoken it in my † zeal,
- 14 when I have accomplished my fury upon them. Moreover I will make thee ‡ a desolation and || a reproach among the nations which are round about thee, in the
- 15 sight of all that pass by. And thou shalt be a reproach and a reviling, an instruction and an astonishment, unto the nations which are round about thee, when I shall execute upon thee my judgments in anger and in fury
- 16 and in furious rebukes: I Jehovah have spoken it: When I shall send upon you the evil arrows of famine which are

* Or, every wind.

† Or, jealousy.

‡ H. for a desolation.

|| H. for a reproach.

---

what they suffered from Nebuchadnezzar, Titus and Adrian, has been remarkably signal.

11. —diminish.—Two or three MSS. Kenn. read אֶגְדַּע, “will cut off:” and 4 of De Rossi’s MSS. and 5 originally.

12. A third part of thee.—Many MSS. read שְׁלִישִׁתְךָ.

15. And thou shalt be.—וְהָיִיתָ The ancients; and Houbigant in his translation.

—unto the nations.—בְּגוֹיִם, “among the nations.” MSS. V. 6. Ar

16. —upon you.—בְּכֶם Syr.

for destruction, which I will send to destroy you; and shall encrease the famine upon you, and shall break your 17 staff of bread; and when I shall send upon you famine, and evil beasts which shall bereave thee, and pestilence and blood shall pass through thee, and I shall bring the sword upon thee. I Jehovah have spoken it.

CHAPTER VI.

- 1 ALSO the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying;
- 2 Son of man, set thy face towards the mountains of Israel,
- 3 and prophesy against them, and say; Ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord Jehovah. Thus saith the Lord Jehovah to the mountains and to the hills, to the streams and to the vallies: Lo, I, even I, will bring a —evil arrows of famine.—This is poetical and sublime. Famine might be inflicted various ways; by locusts, hail, showers, blasts, drought, &c. See Grot.

—for destruction.—למשחת ו. Syr.

17. —which shall bereave thee.—ושכלוך many MSS. 1 ed.

2. —of Israel.—"Israel being carried captive, Judah is called Israel: and perhaps possessed a great part of the country." Secker.

3. —to the mountains and to the hills.—See Deut. xii. 2. Jer. ii. 20. iii. 6. c. xviii. 6. Philip II. king of Macedon, in his expedition against Sparta, sacrificed to the Gods on each of the hills, one of which was called Olympus and the other Eva. Polyb. l. v. p. 372. ed. Casaub. Cyrus, just before his death, offered sacrifices to Jupiter, the sun, and the other Gods, ἐπὶ τῶν ἄκρων. Cyrop. l. viii. p. 647. ed. Hutchinson 4°. where see Diss. ii. p. xliii. Jupiter speaks of Hector as sacrificing to him

Ἰδὼς ἐν κορυφαῖσι πολυπύχου. Il. xxii. 17'

—Lo I.—הנה. See MSS. and the ancients.

—high places.—Set apart for idolatrous worship.

- 4 sword upon you, and I will destroy your high places: and your altars shall be desolate, and your * images shall be broken; and I will cast down your slain before your idols:
- 5 and I will lay the carcasses of the sons of Israel before your idols, and I will scatter your bones round about your altars.
- 6 In all your habitations the cities shall be laid waste, and the high places shall be desolate; that your altars may be laid waste and destroyed, and your idols may be broken and cease, and your † images may be cut down, and your
- 7 works may be abolished: and that the slain may fall in the midst of you, and ye may know that I am Jehovah.
- 8 Yet will I leave a remnant, that ye ‡ may have some who shall escape the sword among the nations, when ye
- 9 shall be scattered through the countries. And || they that escape of you shall remember me among the nations whither they shall be carried captives, when I have broken their whorish heart which departed from me, and their

* Or, sun-images.

† Or, sun-images.

‡ H. in that there shall be unto you escapers from the sword.

|| H. the escapers.

4. —images.—Statuæ solis, imagines subdiales. Cast. lex. חַמָּם to be warm.

5. —your idols.—V. 6. 10 MSS. read with the affix בָּם. But Syr. Ar. Chald. Theod. with הֵם: “the idols worshipped by them.” Four of De Rossi’s MSS. and 3 originally, read בָּם.

6. In all.—6. MS. Al. prefix ו and, or rather for. This verse seems addressed to the people of the land.

—shall be desolate.—תִּשְׁמָנָה: many MSS. 3 edd.

8. —that ye may have.—Houbigant says that the true reading is לַחֲיוֹת, One of De Rossi’s MSS. reads thus originally. “Putaret quis legendum potius לַחֲיוֹת בָּכֶם לַחֲיוֹת.” Seeker.

—when ye shall be scattered.—בְּהִזְרוֹתְכֶם 2 MSS.

9. —when I shall have broken.—That is, subdued. שְׁבַרְתִּי is the reading of V. Syr. Chald. Houbigant. See אֲשֶׁר when Nold. §. 18. It is equivalent to בָּאֲשֶׁר.

eyes which went a whoring after their idols: and they shall loathe * themselves for the evils which they have 10 committed, in all their abominations: and they shall know that I Jehovah have not said in vain that I would do this evil unto them.

11 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Smite with thine hand, and stamp with thy foot, and say, Alas for all the evil abominations of the house of Israel! for by the sword, by 12 famine, and by pestilence, shall they fall. He that is far off shall die by the pestilence, and he that is near shall fall by the sword, and he that remaineth, and is preserved, shall die by the famine: and I will accomplish my fury
 13 upon them. Then shall ye know that I am Jehovah, when their slain men shall be among their idols round about their altars, upon every high hill, in all the tops of the mountains, and under every green tree, and under every thick oak, the place where they offered † sweet 14 savour to all their idols: and when I shall stretch out mine hand upon them, and make the land a desolation and an astonishment more than the desert towards Diblath, in all their habitations: they shall even know that I am Jehovah.

* H. their faces.

† H. a savour of rest.

9. —they shall loathe themselves.—See the same construction with ב Job x. 1. Hebr. “they shall loathe their faces.” So “the face of Jehovah” is Jehovah.

10. —that I Jehovah have not.—וְלֹא Syr. “that I am Jehovah, and have not &c.”

—this evil.—All this evil: 6. MS. Al. Pachom. Arab.

12. —and is preserved.—So Syr. from נִצָּר. But V. 6. Chald. Houb. “and is besieged” from צֹר.

13. Then shall ye know.—Syr. וְיָדְעוּ: “then shall they know.” The sense of the present more authorised reading may be: “Then shall ye who survive know &c.” Observe that the three first affixes, הֵם their, are read כֶּם your in V. 6. and in some MSS.

14. —Diblath.—See Numb. xxxiii. 47. and Grot.

CHAPTER VII.

- 1 MOREOVER the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying :
 2 Also, thou son of man, thus saith the Lord Jehovah unto the country of Israel :

An end cometh, the end cometh,
 Upon the four corners of the land.

- 3 Now cometh the end upon thee :
 And I will send mine anger upon thee ;
 And will judge thee according to thy ways,
 And will recompense upon thee all thine abominations.
 4 And mine eye shall not spare thee, neither will I have pity :
 But thy ways will I recompense upon thee,
 And thine abominations shall be in the midst of thee ;
 And ye shall know that I am Jehovah.

—their habitations.—Your habitations : 3 or 4 MSS. and 1 ed.

—they shall even know.—6. “ye shall know.” Ar. “ye shall even know” : representing ידעתם, or ידעתם. See the beginning of v. 13.

This chapter shews that, though Ezekiel's eloquence is generally diffuse, he can occasionally give it strength. It bears strong marks of a poetical cast.

2. Also, thou son of man.—After these words 6. Ar. Syr. Houb. Dath. add אמר say, as c. xi. 5, 17.

An end cometh.—קץ בא הקץ בא : one MS. Kenn. V. 6. Ar. Syr. Chald. Houb. or rather, קץ בא בא הקץ. 1 MS. De Rossi, and another originally : v. 6.

—the four.—ארבע 14 MSS. Masora. Houb.

4. —spare thee.—הוּם is used with עַל, Jer. xxi. 7. c. vii. 4. xvi. 5.

But thy ways.—בדרך־ךָ, “according to thy ways,” 6 MSS. Kenn. 4 De Rossi, v. 9.

—thine abominations shall be.—תהייננה 11 MSS. See also MSS. v. 9. The punishment of your abominable idolatries shall be manifest among you.

- 5 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah :
Lo, evil cometh after evil :
- 6 An end cometh, the end cometh ;
It * awaketh against thee ; lo, it cometh ;
- 7 The morning cometh upon thee ;
O thou that dwellest in the land, the time cometh :
The day of tumult is near, and not of joyful shoutings.
- 8 Now will I shortly pour out my fury upon thee,
And accomplish mine anger against thee :
And I will judge thee according to thy ways,
And recompense upon thee all thine abominations.
- 9 And mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity :
According to thy ways will I recompense † thee,
And thine abominations shall be in the midst of thee ;
And ye shall know that I Jehovah smite you.
- 10 Lo, the day, lo, it cometh ;
The morning goeth forth.

* Or, watcheth.

† H. upon thee.

5. —after evil.—אחר after, is the reading of more than 20 MSS. Kenn. 3 edd. 7 MSS. De Rossi. Chald. Houb. But Syr. reads תחת, in the place of.

6. —It awaketh against thee.—Houbigant omits הקיץ with Chald. and says that “the end awaketh” has no sense in Hebrew or Latin : and, on examining יקץ and קיץ in the concordances, I find no example of their use as here. However, the paronomasia is common in the Hebrew prophets. Two MSS. read הקץ : and if we read בא for באה, with Houbigant, we may render this hemistich, “Lo, the end cometh against thee.” עליך is read here in 5 or 6 MSS. and in one MS. v. 7.

7. —of joyful shoutings.—I read with Houbigant הודים or הודים, “celeusmatum, of acclamations.” See Isa. xvi. 9, 10. Michaelis retains the common version ; and proposes as one probable sense, “the joyful cries of the victorious. Isai. xl. 9.”

8. —shortly.—Job xx. 5. favours this rendering : and MS. Copt. has a word equivalent to it. But Jer. xxiii. 23, the versions, and Houb. favour “de proximo, cominus, from near, from at hand :” making the sense, “Now will I draw near and pour out, &c.” To pour out fury is a natural image. So Livy xxxix. 34. In Maronitas iram effundit.

10. —it cometh.—Perhaps we should read בא, as I do not find that

The rod hath blossomed; pride hath flourished;

11 Violence hath risen up into a rod of wickedness.

None of them shall remain, nor of their multitude,

Nor of their concourse; neither shall there be wailing for them.

12 The time cometh, the day draweth near.

Let not the buyer rejoice;

Neither let the seller lament himself:

For hot anger is upon all the multitude thereof.

13 For the * sellers shall not return to that which is sold,

Although † they were yet alive.

For the vision is against all the multitude thereof, ‡ it shall not return:

* H. seller.

† H. their life were yet among the living.

‡ Or, they.

יום is feminine. It is not so elegant to render, “Lo, the day; lo, the morning cometh, it goeth forth.”

The rod.—The rod of oppression, and of wickedness, v. 11, prevails among the Jews, and their pride increases.

11. None of them.—יְהִי, shall be, is understood. Therefore may be prefixed to this hemistich by way of connection.

Nor of their concourse.—I propose reading מִהֶמְתֵּם, that is, מִהֶמְתֵּם. Two or three MSS. insert the י: “of their tumultuous ones;” which agrees with the marginal rendering in the English bible. Moerlins renders thus: Violentus (hostis) surrexit contra tribum improbitatis; non (erunt) ex illis tribus improbitatis sociis et non (erunt) ex multitudine eorum neque ex turba (ab הֶמְתֵּם turbare) eorum, in quibus non (videbitur) luctus. “Ex sonitu eorum.” V. See Prov. i. 21. Isai. xiv. 11.

—wailing.—But נָח (neither shall there be rest among them) is the reading of many MSS. 2 ed. V.

12. —lament himself.—As the enemy would soon have torn his property from him.

—thereof.—Of the land. v. 2, 9.

13. —return.—At the year of Jubilee.

Although.—Syr. Ar. and one Greek MS. in Montf. Hex. read וְלֹא. “Neither shall their life be among the living.”

—the vision.—So all the ancients. But 2 MSS. read הָרָוֶן, and a rasure seems to shew that this was the original reading of a third. Thus Neither shall any strengthen himself by the iniquity of his life.

14 Blow ye the trumpet, and let all be ready :

Yet none goeth to the battle :

For [mine] hot anger is upon all the multitude thereof.

15 The sword is without, and the pestilence and the famine within.

He that is in the field shall die by the sword ;

And he that is in the city, famine and pestilence shall devour him.

16 But they * that are to escape of them, shall escape,

And shall be on the mountains as moaning doves.

Death consumeth them, each for his iniquity :

* H. the escapers of them.

the close of v. 12 is repeated, after the poetical manner. “For hot anger is upon all the multitude thereof.” See also v. 14.

—it shall not return.—One MS. and 2 edd. supply נאם יהוה saith Jehovah : “quod et alios libros exhibere notant ad marg. biblia Bomberg. 1518.” De Rossi. Thus a second hemistich is formed : “It shall not return, saith Jehovah.” This variation must be pleasing to the espousers of the metrical system ; as, from v. 2, the measure halts in this place only. Of a vision it may be said, It shall not return back unfulfilled : Isai. xlv. 23. lv. 11 : Of anger, It shall not turn again, without fully avenging me. Isai. v. 25. ix. 12, &c.

—by the iniquity.—V. seems to read בעון : and Chald. בעונו “by the iniquities.” Syr. may read יהזקו : “Neither shall any strengthen his-life by his iniquity.”

14. —and let all be ready.—והבנו V. והבן, 2 MSS. 2 edd. והבינו, and prepare, Syr. והדינו, and judge, ó. Ar.

Yet none goeth &c.—Such is the judicial cowardice which prevails.

—mine hot anger.—הרון, hot anger, 1 MS. as v. 12.

16. —as moaning doves.—Houb. reads חגיות moaning. But then we must read חגיות. I conjecture חגיות of the clefts ; a word elsewhere used with the masculine termination.

Death consumeth them.—So Houbigant. But ó. Ar. אמות. “I will slay all of them.” And Syr. reads ימות. “All of them shall die.” From MSS. הומת, “All of them shall be put to death,” seems a probable reading.

- 17 All hands shall be feeble, and all knees shall * flow with water :
- 18 They shall also gird themselves with sackcloth, and horror shall cover them ;
And upon all their faces shall be shame ;
And upon all their heads baldness.
- 19 Their silver shall they cast into the streets,
And their gold shall be † as an unclean thing :
Their silver and their gold shall not be able to deliver them,
In the day of the wrath of Jehovah :
They shall not satisfy their ‡ souls,
Neither shall they fill their bowels :
Because it was the stumbling-block of their iniquity.
- 20 For as to the beauty of their ornaments, they turned it to pride ;
And the images of their abominations, || and of their detestable things, they made therewith :

* Or, run down.

† H. for.

‡ H. soul ; or, appetite, or, desire.

|| Or, even their.

17. — shall flow with water.—So the Hebrew phrase is used, Joel iii. 18. “ The hills shall flow with milk.” In sudorem solventur. Houbigant. But ó. Kai pántes mhoi molunthísontai úypasía. See also the other versions, and Chald.

18. — their faces.—Syr. Chald. read פניהם, their faces.

— their heads.—שׂושים, heads, ó.

19. — as an unclean thing.—They shall remove it from them, as if it had contracted legal pollution.

They shall not satisfy.—Their silver and their gold shall not remove the distresses of famine during the siege ; because they have employed them to adorn their idols, the iniquitous causes of their fall. See v. 20, and c. xvi. 17. xiv. 3. xlv. 12.

20. — of their ornaments.—ערים, as Exod. xxxiii. 6 ; V. Syr. Houb. and perhaps one MS.

— they turned it.—See Joel i. 7. Isai. xxi. 4. Read שמוהו, as V. ó. Syr. Houb. Mr. Dimock also proposes this reading.

And the images.—Syr. reads לַצִּלְמֵי.

Therefore have I appointed it unto them * as an unclean thing.

21 And I will give it into the hands of strangers for a prey ;
And to the wicked of the earth for a spoil, and they shall defile it.

22 For I will turn my face from them ;
† And men shall defile my secret place ;
And ‡ robbers shall enter into it, and shall defile it.

23 Make a chain :
For the land is full of || bloody judgment,
And the city is full of violence.

* H. for.

† Or, And my secret place shall be defiled.

‡ H. breakers through.

|| H. judgment of bloods.

—and of their detestable things.—V. Syr. 11 MSS. and 1 ed. Kenn.
10 MSS. De Rossi. prefix ו, and.

According to the two last readings we may render :

“ To the images of their abominations :

“ And their detestable things they made therewith :” &c.

Or, by a different punctuation, the whole may stand thus :

For the beauty of their ornaments, which was for their pride,

They turned it into the images of their abominations :

And their detestable things they made therewith :

Therefore &c.

22. —into it.—The secret place or sanctuary. Read בור, and ויהללוהו. The latter is the reading of 7 MSS. 1 ed. Keri. But some understand עיר, the city.

23. Make a chain.—To denote that the people will be led away captive in chains. But ó. translate Καὶ ποιήσουσι φεγγμόν: et facient perturbationem. ערב would answer to ó. but does not resemble the word in the text.

“ And robbers shall enter into it,

“ And shall defile it, and make it a waste place.”

Possibly, עשה הנתוק, faciendo evulsum, “making it a place plucked up ;” in opposition to the passive participle, צפון, v. 22. Both the sense and the metre need a more satisfactory conjectural emendation than I can propose.

- 24 Therefore I will bring * cruel nations,
And they shall possess their houses:
I will also make the pride of the strong to cease,
And their holy places shall be defiled.
- 25 Destruction cometh, and they shall seek peace, and there
shall be none.
- 26 Calamity shall come upon calamity,
And rumour shall be upon rumour:
And they shall seek a vision from the prophet:
And the law shall perish from the priest, and counsel from the elders.
- 27 The king shall lament himself, and the prince shall be clothed with astonishment;
And the hands of the people of the land shall be troubled.
I will do unto them according to their way,
And according to their judgments will I judge them:
And they shall know that I am Jehovah.

* II. evil of the nations.

24. —cruel nations.—The Babylonians. See c. xxx. 24.

—the pride of the strong.—Τῆς ἰσχύος αὐτῶν. ὁ. recte: עֹז, conf. xxiv. 21. xxx. 6. xxxiii. 28. Lev. xxvi. 19. the excellency of their strength: i. e. the temple." Seeker. עֹז occurred originally in one of De Rossi's MSS.

25. —cometh.—בָּאֵה one MS. "he maketh haste, who is to come. קָבַד הָבֵא."—Michaelis.

26. Calamity.—ὁ. Ar. read דוּי, woe, 'twice. "Woe shall come upon woe."

27. —and the prince.—וְהַנְּשִׂיא 2 or 3 MSS.

—with astonishment.—Μᾶρор. V. Stupor. Houb. Perhaps we should read שְׁמָה, or מִשְׁמָה. "To be clothed with desolation" seems harsh.

—according to their way.—Mr. Dimock proposes כְּדִרְכָּם with V. ὁ. Syr. Ar. and observes that 6 MSS. and V. read וְכַמִּשְׁפָּטֵיהֶם. This reading is also found in 11 of De Rossi's MSS. אֲתָם MSS. add.

CHAPTER VIII.

- 1 Now it came to pass in the sixth year, in the sixth month, on the fifth day of the month, as I sat in mine house, and the elders of Judah sat before me, that the hand of the 2 Lord Jehovah fell there upon me. And I looked, and lo, a likeness as the appearance of fire: from the appearance of his loins and downward, fire: and from his loins and upward, as the appearance of brightness, as * the colour 3 of amber. And he put forth the form of a hand, and took me up by a lock of mine head; and the spirit lifted me up between the earth and † the heavens, and brought * H. the eye.

† H. between the heavens.

1. —in the sixth month.—Fifth month. ó. Ar. Aq. Observe that, c. iv. 4, 5, 6, the prophet is commanded to lie on his left side three hundred and ninety days, and on his right side forty days: to which must be added the seven days mentioned c. iii. 15. But the interval between this vision, and c. i. 1, is only one year and two months, or four hundred and twenty days, reckoning thirty days in a month. Therefore this revelation was made to the prophet during his typical siege. “But Vignoles, v. ii. 447, thinks that the year was a lunar one with an intercalation of 30 days.” Secker. And, according to Michaelis, the Jews, and in general the people of Asia were used to lunar years of 354 days. Add to them two months, or 59 days, and you have 413 days. A whole month was intercalated from time to time into the lunar year to make it agree with the harvest year. Add 29 days, and you have 442 days.

—of the Lord Jehovah.—אדני Lord is wanting in 3 MSS. and in ó. MS. Vat.

2. —as the appearance of fire.—Houbigant reads במראה אדם, as the appearance of man; and confirms this reading from c. i. 26, from ó. and from the phrase his loins. Probably איש a man, is the true reading; as it resembles אש, fire. “ó. ἀνδρὸς, איש, recte. Conf. i. 26.” Secker.

me in the visions of God to Jerusalem, to the door of the inner gate which looketh toward the north, where was the seat of the idol of jealousy, [which provoketh to jealousy.]

4 And lo, the glory of the God of Israel was there, according to the vision which I saw in the plain.

5 Then said he unto me: Son of man, lift up thine eyes now the way toward the north. So I lifted up mine eyes the way toward the north; and lo, northward, at the gate
6 of the altar, this idol of jealousy in the entry. He said furthermore unto me: Son of man, seest thou what they do? even the great abominations which the house of Israel commit here, * so as to go far from my sanctuary. But † turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see great abominations.

7 And he brought me to the door of the court; and I looked,
8 and lo, a hole in the wall. Then said he unto me; Son

* Or, that I should go far.

† Or, thou shalt still again see.

3.—in the visions of God.—By mental representation: for it seems most probable that every thing to c. xi. 24 passed while the prophet was in a trance. C. xi. 25, Ezekiel relates his vision to the elders who sat before him.

—which provoketh to jealousy.—The original word הַיָּדֹנָן (as 3 MSS. 6 edd. read, see Kenn. & De Rossi) may be a gloss on the foregoing word, or a different reading of it. ó. Ar. Syr. Sym. omit it. See also v. 5. What this image was, which rivalled God and raised his jealousy, cannot be determined. See 2 Chron. xxxvi. 14. Deut. xxxii. 21.

4. —of the God of Israel.—“Of Jehovah God of Israel. 1 MS. and ó.” Mr. Dimock.

—in the plain.—See c. iii. 22, 23.

5. —at the gate of the altar.—Probably so called from the time of Ahaz; who placed the brazen altar to the north of the altar built according to the model of that which he had seen at Damascus. 2 Kings xvi. 14.

—in the entry.—בִּיָּאֵה See MSS. and edd. It is a substantive, used only here. V. has, in ipso introitu.

6. —what they do.—Read מַה הֵם עוֹשִׂים, with some MSS.

—so as to go far from my sanctuary.—So ó. Ar. Syr. Houb. But V. Ch. as Engl. vers. “that I should go far” &c. and Michaelis supposes a reference to c. ix. 3. x. 13.

- 9 of man, dig now in the wall. And when I had digged in the wall, lo, a door. And he said unto me, Go in, and
 10 see the wicked abominations which they do here. So I went in and saw; and lo, every form of creeping * things, and of † abominable beasts, and all the idols of the house of Israel, ‡ pourtrayed upon the wall || round about: and
 11 seventy men of the elders of the house of Israel; and Jaazaniah the son of Shaphan standing in the midst of those who stood before them: and every man had his censer in his hand, and a § thick cloud of incense went 12 up. Then said he unto me; Hast thou seen, O son of man, what the elders of the house of Israel do in the dark, every man in the chambers of his imagery? For they say, “Jehovah seeth us not: Jehovah hath forsaken 13 the earth.” He said also unto me; ** Turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see great abominations which these 14 do. Then he brought me to the door of the gate of * H. thing.

|| H. about about.

† H. beast which is abomination.

§ H. a thickness of a cloud of the incense.

‡ Or, engraven.

** Or, Thou shalt still again see.

10. —and of abominable beasts.—Syr. and 3 MSS. read וְשִׁקָּץ, “and of beasts and of abominable things.” “Round the room in Thebes where the body of King Osymanduas seemed to be buried, a multitude of chambers was built, which had elegant paintings of all the beasts sacred in Egypt.” Diod. Sic. i. p. 59. ed. Wess. Referred to by Secker.

11. —Jaazaniah.—Probably a prince of the people. See the close of c. xi. 1.

—before them.—The idols.

12. —in the dark.—Hence Milton says of Ezekiel with great propriety,

By the vision led
 His eye surveyed the dark idolatries
 Of alienated Judah.

Par. Lost. i. 455.

—of his imagery.—מִשְׁכַּבְתּוֹ, of his bed. The ancients. Hallet. iii. 14.

- Jehovah's house, which was toward the north; and lo, 15 women sat there weeping for Thammuz. Then said he unto me; Hast thou seen this, O son of man? * Turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations 16 than these. And he brought me into the inner court of Jehovah's house; and lo, at the door of the temple of Jehovah, between the porch † and the altar, were about five and twenty men, with their backs toward the temple of Jehovah and their faces eastward; and these bowed themselves eastward to the sun.
 17 Then said he unto me; Hast thou seen this, O son of man? Is it a light thing to the house of Judah, that they commit the abominations which they commit here? For they have filled the land with violence, and have returned

* Or, Thou shalt still again see.

† H. and between.

14. — Thammuz.—With what impure rites the annual time of lamenting Adonis was observed, see Univ. hist. i. 401, 3 Fol.

The love-tale

Infected Sion's daughters with like heat;

Whose wanton passions in the sacred porch

Ezekiel saw.

Par. Lost. i. 453.

16. — between the porch and the altar.—See on Joel ii. 17.

— their backs toward the temple.—An expression of contempt to Jehovah. See Mr. Lowth. "Hence it appears that the vestibule of the temple was to the east." Spencer 442.

— bowed themselves.—משתחוים, 7 or 8 MSS. Kenn. 3 of De Rossi's MSS. and 7 originally.

— eastward.—

Illi, ad surgentem conversi lumina solem,

Dant fruges manibus salsas.

Æn. xii. 173.

17. — a light thing—that they commit.—See נקל thus used with מ. Isai. xlix. 6.

— the abominations.—Three MSS. 2 originally, and the three most ancient editions, prefix כל: all the abominations. See De Rossi.

— have returned to provoke.—Have repeatedly provoked.

to provoke me to anger; and lo, they send forth a 18 * scornful noise through their nostrils. Therefore will I act in fury: mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity: and though they cry in mine ears with a loud voice, yet I will not hear them.

* H. a singing.

---

—they send forth a scornful noise &c.—See שָׁלַח ps. l. 19. Prov. vi.
 14, 19. שָׁלַח is found in 8 MSS. and 3 edd. and this word signifies in Chaldee “crepitus ignominiae causa.” See Cast. lex. See also שָׁלַח, in the sense of per, Nold. §. 16. We may therefore adopt the rendering which I have proposed; and which is that of Aq. Symm. and, as to the sense, of
 ó. MS. Pachom. Vat. See on c. xxxiii. 31. Jerom and Origen observe that ἐκτείνουσι τὸ κλῆμα, “they put the branch,” which is found in ó.
 MS. Al. is added from Theodoton. See Monf. Hex. and ó ed. Sixt Quint. In favour of our common version Dathius says, Recentis-simus Persiae religionis enarrator—Perronius, Itin. p. 665, in supellectile sacra Persarum Indiae orientalis enumerat etiam fasciculum sareulorum, Barsom in lingua Persica veteri dictum, quem inter precandum manibus tenent. Michaelis says that they held it before their face opposite to the holy fire; and that it is represented in D’Auquetil’s voyages, tabl. iii. n.
 3, 4. p. 665. Germ. ed. Ἐν ταῖς λιτανείαις καὶ ἱκετηρίαις τοὺς τῆς ἐλαίας θάλλους προτείνουσι. Porphy. in Antro nympharum. 8°. Romæ. 1630.
 p. 131. See also Spencer l. iv. v. 1117, who observes that the heathens, in the worship of their deities, held forth the branches of those trees which were dedicated to them.

Τίνας ποθ’ ἔδρας τάσδε μοι θοάζετε,

Ἰκτηρίοις κλάδοισιν ἐξεστέμμενοι;

Soph. Œd. Tyr. l. 2, 3.

18. —will I act.—Mr. Dimock supplies בָּרַח with ó. “deal with them in fury.”

CHAPTER IX.

- 1 He cried also in mine ears with a loud voice, saying;
 Draw near, ye that have charge over the city, even every 2 man * with his destroying weapon in his hand. And lo, six men came from the way of the higher gate which looketh toward the north, and every man † his slaughter-weapon in his hand: and one man among them was clothed with linen, with a writer's inkhorn ‡ by his side:
 3 and they went in and stood beside the brasen altar. And the glory of the God of Israel went up from the cherub, whereupon it was, to the threshold of the house: and he called to the man clothed with linen, who had the writer's 4 inkhorn by his side; and Jehovah said unto him, Go through

* H. the weapon of his destruction. † H. a weapon of his breaking in pieces.

‡ H. upon his loins.

1. — Draw near.—So Syr. Houb. However the English version very well supposes that the verb is used in Pihel. Secker observes that “another translation may be, They that have charge over the city are drawn near.”

—ye that have charge.—See a like use of the original word, Isai. lx. 17. Ye that are appointed to avenge me on Jerusalem. This is prophetic of the slaughter which the Babylonians were to make.

2. —the north.—The Babylonians made their inroads into Palestine from the north.

—inkhorn.—That the easterns wore it suspended from the girdle, see Shaw's Travels, p. 293 fol. 227 4<sup>o</sup>.

3. —cherub.—That is, cherubim: as c. x. 2, 4. Transit a vehiculo. Grot.

—he called.—He who sat on the throne. c. i. 26. See c. x. 2. “He spake.” Or, we may render, “And Jehovah called to the man clothed with linen, who had the writer's inkhorn by his side, and said unto him, &c.”

4. —unto him.—וְאֵלָיו MSS.

the midst of the city, even through the midst of Jerusalem ;
 and * set a mark upon the foreheads of the men that sigh, and that cry out, for all the abominations that are done in 5 the midst thereof. And to the others he said in mine † hearing ; Pass ye after him through the city, and smite :
 6 let not your eye spare, neither have ye pity. Slay ‡ utterly old and young, and virgins and little children and women ; but come not near any one upon whom is the mark ; and begin at my sanctuary. Then began they 7 at the elders who were before the house. And he said unto them, Pollute the house, and fill the courts with the slain : go ye forth. And they went forth, and smote in 8 the city. And it came to pass || while they were smiting them that I was left ; and I fell upon my face and cried, and said, Ah, Lord Jehovah ! Wilt thou destroy all the remnant of Israel, in thy pouring out of thy fury upon 9 Jerusalem ? Then he said unto me, The iniquity of the house of Israel and Judah is § very exceedingly great, and the land is ** full of blood, and the city full of †† perverseness : for they say, “ Jehovah hath forsaken the * H. mark.

† H. ears.

‡ H. to destruction.

†† Or, wrestling, or, turning aside, of judgment.

|| Or, after they had smitten

§ H. great in much much.

** H. filled with bloods.

—set a mark.—One form of the Samaritan letter Thau resembles the capital Chi of the Greeks, which is a very natural and simple mark. But Harmer observes that the easterns used ink in sealing ; whence appears the use of the inkhorn. ii. 456.

5. —let not your eye spare.—MSS. read אל and עינכם.

6. —and young.—וּבְחֹר 1 MS. ó. Ar. Syr.

7. —Pollute the house.—With the blood of the slain.

—and go ye forth.—One MS. seems to have read originally וצאו.

8. —while they were smiting.—MSS. בְּהִכּוֹתֵם. So, xi. 13, בְּהִנְבְּאִי is found in some MSS. and edd. for בְּהִנְבְּאִי.

—that I was left.—וְנִשְׁאַר (part. pres. Niphal) 12 MSS. But Houbigant proposes וְנִשְׁאַר.

9. —and Jehovah.—ó. and one MS. omit ו, and. See c. viii. 12.

- 10 earth; and Jehovah seeth not." Therefore as for me, mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity: Their 11 way will I recompense upon their head. And lo, the man clothed with linen, who had the inkhorn * by his side, † returned answer, saying, I have done as thou hast commanded me.

---

CHAPTER X.

- 1 Then I looked, and lo, in the firmament that was above the head of the cherubim there appeared over them as it were a sapphire-stone, as the appearance of the likeness 2 of a throne. And he spake unto the man clothed with linen, and said; Go in ‡ between the wheels even || under the cherub, and fill thine hands with coals of fire from between the cherubim, and scatter them over the city.
 3 And he went in before mine eyes. (Now the cherubim stood on the right side of the house, when the man went

* H. upon his loins.

† H. brought back word.

‡ H. to between.

|| H. to under.

---

11. —returned answer.—See Prov. xviii, 13. xxiv. 26.

Most of this chapter has been explained in the notes on c. 1.

2. —under the cherub.—See כרוב ps. xviii. 11. c. ix. 3. The wheels were below the cherubim, and the firmament was above them.

—over the city.—A beautiful prophecy that Jerusalem should be burnt by the Babylonians.

3. —the right side of the house.—The right side is the south : for the east is the front, or forepart, according to the Hebrews. See Chald. Houbigant, and c. xvi. 46. The cherubim had moved from the situation mentioned c. viii. 3, 4.

—when the man went in.—The ancients and Houbigant read כבש ; and Houbigant remarks that a circle over the word in MSS. points out the corrupt reading. But possibly כבש may be a gloss.

4 in; and the cloud filled the inner court: and the glory of Jehovah had been lifted up from the cherub to the threshold of the house; and the house was filled with the cloud, and the court was filled with the brightness of
 5 Jehovah's glory: and the sound of the cherubim's wings was heard even to the outer court, as the voice of Almighty
 6 God when he speaketh.) And it came to pass when he commanded the man clothed with linen, saying, "Take fire from between the wheels," and he went in and stood
 7 beside the wheel; that one cherub * stretched forth his hand from between the cherubim to the fire that was between the cherubim, and took thereof, and put it into the hands of him that was clothed with linen: † who took
 8 it, and went out. And I saw in the cherubim the form
 9 of a man's hand under their wings. And when I looked, lo, four wheels by the cherubim; one wheel by one cherub, and another wheel by another cherub: and the appearance of the wheels was as the ‡ colour of a beryl-stone. And as for their appearances, they four had one likeness; as if a wheel had been in the midst of a wheel.
 11 When they went, they went upon their four sides: they turned not about when they went: but to the place whither the head looked, || to that they went; they 12 turned not about when they went. And their whole body,

* H. Sent forth.

† H. and he took.

‡ H. eye.

|| H. after.

4. —had been lifted up.—See c. ix. 3.

5. —as the voice of Almighty God.—Probably, as thunder. Michaelis.

7. —from between the cherubim.—The hand towards the opposite cherub.

—went out.—To execute the divine command.

8. And I saw.—6. Syr. read וָאֵרָא. The English version requires וָאֵרָא, to agree with תִּבְנִית.

11. —they turned not about.—Some MSS. add. and versions read וָאֵרָא twice. Vau precedes.

12. —body.—בִּשְׂרָ is thus used c. xi. 19.

and their backs, and their hands, and their wings, and the wheels, were full of eyes round about, * even the wheels which they four had. † As for the wheels, ‡ it was cried unto them, O wheel, in mine || hearing. And § every one had four faces: ** the first face was the face of a cherub, and the second face was the face of a man, and the third the face of a lion, and the fourth the face of an eagle. And the cherubim were lifted up: (this is the living creature which I saw by the river Chebar:) and when the cherubim went, the wheels went by them; and when the cherubim raised their wings to lift themselves up from the earth, the wheels also †† turned not themselves from ‡‡ beside them. When they stood, these stood; and when they were lifted up, these were lifted up with them: for the spirit of the living creature was in them. Then the glory of Jehovah departed from off the threshold of the house, and stood over the cherubim. And the * H. their wheels to them four.

† Or, To the wheels.

‡ Or, one cried.

|| H. ears.

§ H. four faces were to every one.

** H. the face of the first, &c.

†† H. they turned.

‡‡ H. by.

---

—and their backs.—מַגְבֵּיהֶם MSS. and add. But Michaelis renders the word frons, from the Arab. Suppl. lex. Hebr.

—even the wheels which they four had.—The true reading seems to be לְאַרְבַּעַת “to their four wheels.” So V. 6. and thus אַרְבַּעַת is used c. i. 8, 17. Houbigant omits אַרְבַּעַת. We may read by a transposition of two letters, וְאַרְבַּעַת: “to them four and to their wheels.”

13. —O wheel.—The wheels were animated, therefore addressed; because capable of obeying the Great Charioteer. c. i. 20.

Wheel within wheel undrawn,

Itself instinct with spirit.

Par. Lost. vi. 751.

Michaelis observes that the original word signifies a storm or whirlwind. Ps. lxxvii. 18.

14. —of a cherub.—Or ox. See c. i. 10. from כֶּרֶב arare. Ch. Syr. as בֶּקָר, bos, from the Arab. terram vomere proscindere.

17. —with them.—אִתָּם, many MSS.

19. —and every one stood.—Mr. Dimock reads with 6. Syr. וַיַּעֲמֵדוּ, and they stood.

- cherubim raised their wings, and were lifted up from the earth, before mine eyes: when they went out, the wheels also were beside them; and every one stood at the door of the east-gate of Jehovah's house; and the glory of the
- 20 God of Israel was over them above. This is the living creature that I saw under the God of Israel by the river
- 21 Chebar: and I knew that they were the cherubim. * Every one had four faces apiece, and † every one four wings; and the likeness of the hands of a man was under their
- 22 wings. And as for the likeness of their faces, they were the faces which I saw by the river Chebar, their appearances and themselves: they went every one ‡ straight forward.

---

CHAPTER XI.

- 1 Then the spirit lifted me up, and brought me unto the east-gate of Jehovah's house, even to that which looketh eastward; and lo, at the || door of the gate five and twenty men; among whom I saw Jaazaniah the son of Azur, and
- 2 Pelatiah the son of Benaiah, princes of the people. Then

* H. four faces were to every one.

† H. to every one.

‡ H. towards the side of its face.

|| Or, entrance.

---

20. —and I knew that they were the cherubim.—From reading and hearing about those that were represented in the Holy of Holies.

22. —their appearances and themselves.—Se. ראיתי, I saw. “ו. et, ut videtur, Ch. Syr. ut sit nominativus אורת, ut, Josh. vii. 15, אורתו. Vel. potest legi אורתם, ומראהם, ut abundet אורת.” Seeker. ומראהם, 1 MS.

1. —and brought me.—Five MSS. and 1 edd. read איתי.

—which looketh eastward.—The two original words may be a gloss. Chald. reads הַפְתוּחָה, “which was open eastward.”

said he unto me; Son of man, these are the men that devise iniquity and * give wicked counsel in this city: 3 who say, "It is not near that we should build houses: 4 this city is the caldron, and we are the flesh." Therefore prophesy against them, prophesy, O Son of man.

5 And the spirit of Jehovah fell upon me; and he said unto me; Say,

Thus saith Jehovah: Thus have ye said, O house of Israel. For I know the things that come into your mind, 6 every one of them. Ye have multiplied your slain in this city; and ye have filled the streets thereof with the 7 slain. Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Your slain whom ye have laid in the midst of it, they are the flesh, and this city is the caldron: and I will bring you

• H. counsel.

3. It is not near &c.—The time is not near that we should build houses in a foreign land. Chald. Jer. xxix. 5. Here we shall die in mature age; as the choice pieces are not taken out of the caldron till they are perfectly prepared. The image is suggested by the process at the Jewish sacrifices. See 1 Sam. ii. 13, 14. In opposition to this, God says, v. 7, that if Jerusalem is the caldron, it is the caldron of the slain: and, v. 11, that it should not be the caldron of many, who were destined to fly and to perish in the extreme parts of their country. See 2 Kings xxv. 6, 7, 21.

"The city is the caldron, and we are the flesh, is a proverb which means, We will share all fates with her; we will either be preserved or perish with her." Michaelis.

5. —Thus have ye said.—Ye have advanced the assertion mentioned v. 3. "You have rightly said what you say: The city is the caldron, and we are the flesh, shall be fulfilled, but not as you understand it.—Many of you—will perish in the city. For those it will be the caldron, and they will be the flesh boiled in it. But yourselves shall not be the flesh in the caldron: but you shall be taken out, and elsewhere—cut in pieces."—Michaelis.

—I know—every one of them.—The affix ה is distributive.

6. —and ye have filled.—MSS. and edd. read ומלאתם.

7. —I will bring you forth.—Read אוציא with the ancients, Houbigant, and MSS. For the fact see Jer. lii. 27.

- 8 forth out of the midst thereof. Ye have feared the sword, and the sword will I bring upon; saith the Lord Jehovah.
- 9 And I will bring you forth out of the midst thereof, and will deliver you into the hand of strangers, and will
- 10 execute judgments * upon you: ye shall fall by the sword. On the † borders of Israel I will judge you; and
- 11 ye shall know that I am Jehovah. This city shall not be your caldron, neither shall ye be the flesh in the midst thereof. On the ‡ borders of Israel I will judge you;
- 12 and ye shall know that I am Jehovah: because ye have not walked in my statutes, neither have ye || executed my judgments; but have done according to the § manners of the nations that are round about you.
- 13 And it came to pass, when I prophesied, that Pelatiah the son of Benaiah died. Then fell I down upon my face, and cried with a loud voice, and said, Ah, Lord Jehovah, wilt thou make a full end ** of the remnant of Israel?
- 14 15 And the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying: Son of man, thy brethren, [even thy brethren] †† thy fellow-captives, and all the house of Israel, even all of them, are they unto whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, Remove ye far from Jehovah: unto us is this land given
- 16 †† in possession. Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Although I have removed them far off among

* Or, among.

† H. border.

‡ H. border.

|| H. done.

§ H. judgments.

** H. with.

†† H. the men of thy captivity.

‡‡ H. for a possession.

10. —borders.—Here, and v. 11, ó. read הרי mountains; which is the reading of one MS. v. 10.

15. —even thy brethren.—Houbigant thinks that the second אחיו should be omitted with ó. It is omitted in two MSS. and was at first in three of De Rossi's MSS.

—thy fellow captives.—Read גולתך with ó. Syr. Houb.

—even all of them.—כלו, which agrees with בית, is found in 5 MSS. But Syr. Chald. Houb. read כלם.

the nations, and although I have scattered them in the countries; yet will I be unto them as a sanctuary for a short time, in the countries whither they are come.

- 17 Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: I will assemble you from the * people, and I will gather you from the countries in which ye have been scattered; and 18 I will give you the land of Israel. And they shall come thither, and they shall take away from thence all the detestable things thereof, and all the abominations thereof.
 19 And I will give them † one heart, and a new spirit will I put within them; and I will take away the heart of stone from their flesh, and will give them an heart of flesh:
 20 that they may walk in my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them; and they may be ‡ my people, and
 21 I may be || their God. But if their heart walk after all their detestable things, and their abominations; their way will I recompense upon their heads, saith the Lord Jehovah.

* II. peoples.

† Or, another.

‡ II. unto me for a people.

|| II. unto them for a God.

16. —as a sanctuary.—A refuge and protection. See Isai. viii. 14.

—are come.—Venerunt. Vulg.

17. —say.—אמר die is omitted in V. Syr. Ch. in 4 MSS. and in 4 of De Rossi's originally.

19. —one heart.—See Jer. xxxii. 39. Cappellus observes that ó read אחר another. See also Ar. But Syr. reads חדש new; which reading is found in 3 MSS. in the margin of a fourth, and in 2 edd. Comp. c. xxxvi. 26.

—within them.—בקרבתם, the ancients, many MSS. and edd.

20. —their God.—The Greek, MS. A. Ald. MS. Copt. and Arab. add, saith the Lord.

21. But if—all.—I read ואל כל. Mr. Dimock makes the same conjecture, and refers to r. 18. ו signifies si, quod si, Nold. §. 60. כל was the original reading of MS. 126. Houbigant observes that the former לב is a manifest corruption; and proposes אל וכל. “Omnes autem qui ad abominationes suas . . . eunt.”

- 22 Then the cherubim raised their wings; and the wheels were beside them; and the glory of the God of Israel 23 was over them above. And the glory of Jehovah went up from the midst of the city, and stood upon the mount which is on the east-side of the city.
- 24 Then the spirit took me up and brought me into Chaldea, to those of the captivity, in vision by the spirit of God.
 And the vision which I had seen went up from me.
- 25 Then I spake unto them of the captivity all the * words of Jehovah which he had shewed me.

CHAPTER XII.

- 1 2 THE word of Jehovah also came unto me, saying; Son of man, thou dwellest in the midst of a rebellious house;
 they have eyes to see and see not, they have ears to hear 3 and hear not; for they are a rebellious house. Therefore thou, son of man, prepare thee stuff for removing into * Or, things.

22. —and the wheels were beside them.—See V. 6.

—of the God.—Of Jehovah God &c. 1 MS. and another in the margin. See the following verse. Mr. Dimock.

23. —went up from the midst of the city.—This was emblematical that God would desert Jerusalem.

—the mount.—Olivet.

2. —thou dwellest in the midst of a rebellious house.—He was among them of the captivity in Chaldea: v. 10. c. xi. 24: xiv. 22: xxiv. 2: and these seem to have disbelieved the prophecies that Jerusalem should be smitten and burnt, and its inhabitants scattered abroad. c. iv. 2. ix. 5. x. 2. xi. 9.

3. —stuff.—Instruments, furniture, goods; whatever is fitting for a particular purpose, as here for a long journey.

captivity, and remove by day before their eyes: thou shalt even remove from thy place unto another place before their eyes: it may be they will consider, though 4 they be a rebellious house. And thou shalt carry forth the stuff, as stuff for removing into captivity, by day before their eyes: and thou shalt carry forth in the evening before their eyes, * as they that carry forth for 5 removing into captivity. Before their eyes dig † thou
 6 through the wall, and carry forth thereby. Before their eyes thou shalt bear upon thy shoulder; in the twilight thou shalt carry forth: thou shalt cover thy face, and shalt not see the ground: for I have made thee a sign unto the house of Israel.

7 And I did so, as I was commanded: I carried forth my stuff, as stuff for removing into captivity, by day; and in the evening † I digged through the wall with mine hand; I carried forth in the twilight, I bare upon my shoulder, before their eyes.

8 And the word of Jehovah came unto me in the morning,
 9 saying; Son of man, hath not the house of Israel, the * H. as the carryings forth of captivity.

† H. to thee.

‡ H. I digged me.

—by day.—"Removing in the day represents that the greater part of the Jews would be transported in the eleventh year of Zedekiah: removing at night relates to a particular circumstance which happened to Zedekiah and his soldiers." Michaelis.

—they will consider.—"They will fear, יִירָאוּ. Chald.

4. —thou shalt carry forth in the evening.—I suppose that the original verb, written at full length, would be תְּנוּצִיא. See v. 6, 7.

6. —a sign.—A type and figure of what should actually happen. See v. 12. Covering the face was a token of shame and grief.

7. —I carried forth &c.—This repetition is in the true spirit of the ancients. Compare Virg. Georg. iv. 538—553.

9. —hath not the house of Israel—said?—I know that they have said. As, "Are they not written in the book of the Chronicles &c.?" Houbigant.

- 10 rebellious house, said unto thee, What doest thou? Say unto them; Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: This prophecy concerneth the prince in Jerusalem, and all the house of 11 Israel that are among them. Say, I am your sign: like as I have done, so shall it be done unto them: * they 12 shall remove, they shall go into captivity. And the prince that is among them shall bear upon his shoulder; in the twilight he shall carry forth; he shall dig through the wall to carry forth thereby; he shall cover his face,
 13 that he see not the ground with his † eyes. I will also spread my net upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare; and I will bring him to Babylon in the land of the Chaldeans; yet he shall not see it, though he shall die

* H. they shall go into removal, into captivity.

† H. eye.

10. —concerneth the prince.—Onus istud Principis est. Cappellus. But Houbigant proposes בנשיא. "This prophecy is against the Prince, against Jerusalem, and against all &c." Chald. has גל, and V. super. By the Prince King Zedekiah is meant.

—among them.—Perhaps בתוכה, "in the midst thereof." i. e. of Jerusalem. See Arab. The same conjecture suggested itself to Mr. Dimock: and is further confirmed by the authority of Michaelis. So v. 12. Ar. reads בתוכה, but Syr. בתוככם.

11. —unto them.—"Unto you," לבם Syr. 7 MSS. perhaps an 8th, 2 at present, 2 at first, and 3 edd. Kenn.

12. —in the twilight he shall carry forth.—יציא is the reading of 4 MSS. and of 2 at present. See also V. Chald. But יוציא seems the true reading. See on v. 4. The punctuation of this clause is that of all the ancients.

—he shall dig.—6. Ar. Syr. For the fact, See Jer. xxxix. 4. lii. 7. 2 Kings xxv. 4. It is probable that the king and his companions fled through a breach made by themselves in the wall. Or, as Michaelis suggests, the gate through which they fled may have been walled up during the siege.

—cover his face.—"Agreeably to the customs of the Israelites. See 2 Sam. xv. 30." Michaelis.

13. —he shall be taken.—See 2 Kings xxv. 5.

—he shall not see it.—His eyes were put out at Riblah. ib. v. 7.

14 there. And all that are round about him * to help him, and all his bands, will I scatter toward every wind; and 15 I will draw out the sword after them. And they shall know that I am Jehovah, when I shall disperse them among the nations, and scatter them in the countries.
16 But I will leave † a few men of them from the sword, from the famine, and from the pestilence; that they may declare all their abominations among the heathen whither they come: and ‡ they shall know that I am Jehovah.

17 THE word of Jehovah also came unto me, saying;
18 Son of man, eat thy food with quaking, and drink thy 19 water with trembling and with carefulness: and say unto the people of the land; Thus saith the Lord Jehovah concerning the inhabitants of Jerusalem in the land of Israel: their bread shall they eat with carefulness, and their water shall they drink with astonishment; that || her land may be desolate from all § that is therein, because * H. his help.

† H. men of number.

§ H. the fulness thereof.

‡ Or, and that they may know.

|| Or, their.

14. —to help him.—Præsidium ejus. V. The reading of עזרו is supported by 4 MSS. and other authorities in Bibl. Kenn. But Houbigant proposes עזבו, “shall forsake him;” and, with more probability, אורד, “I will scatter.”

16. —a few men.—Hebr. men of number. This phrase is illustrated by ἀριματτοι ἀπὸ πολλῶν: Theocr. xvi. 87; and, populus numerabilis utpote parvus. Hor. A. P. 206.

—declare.—Confessing that they were justly punished for their idolatries and immoralities.

19. —in the land of Israel.—So Chald. Israel being used of the country formerly inhabited by the twelve tribes. c. xiv. 1, 4. But Syr. לוֹא, and of.

—her land may be desolate.—תאשם 4 MSS. “may be treated as guilty.” ארצם, their land, 7 or 3 MSS.

—from all that is therein.—Literally, says Houbigant, absque plenitudine ejus: and he renders in the text, riduata frugibus. But מלוא

- 20 of the violence of all that dwell therein; and the cities that are inhabited may be laid waste, and the land may become desolate; and ye may know that I am Jehovah.
- 21 MOREOVER the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying;
- 22 Son of man, what is that proverb which * ye have † in the land of Israel, saying, “The days are prolonged, and
- 23 every vision faileth?” Therefore say unto them; Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: ‡ I will make this proverb to cease, and they shall no more use it as a proverb in Israel: but say unto them, “The days draw near, and
- 24 the effect of every vision.” For there shall be no longer any vain vision, or smooth divination, within the house of
- 25 Israel. For I Jehovah will speak the word which I shall speak, and it shall be performed, || it shall be no more prolonged: for in your days, O rebellious house, will I speak the word, and will perform it, saith the Lord Jehovah.

* H. is unto you.† Or, concerning.‡ H. I have made, &c.|| H. thou shalt not prolong it any more.

fulness may refer to the inhabitants and cattle as well as to the produce of a country. “So that there shall be no fulness thereof.” כ, ita ut non. Nold. § 21.

22. —are prolonged.—Are wont to be prolonged—is wont to fail. See c. i. 28.

23. —and the effect of every vision.—The word, or matter, of every vision draweth near. “Perhaps, and every vision shall be fact. Et erit omnis visio. Syr. And so perhaps v 25 should be translated, When I the Lord speak, what I speak shall be fact, and it shall be done: it shall be no more prolonged. And in like manner v. 23.” Secker.

24. —house of Israel.—For בית, house, MSS. and the ancients read יב, sons.

25. —will speak the word.—See Chald.

—it shall be no more prolonged.—It is possible that a feminine substantive may be understood. See on Hos. v. 9. But ó. read שמש, I will no more prolong.

- 26 THE word of Jehovah also came unto me saying;
 27 Son of man, lo, the house of Israel say, The vision that * he seeth is for many days to come, and † he prophesieth 28 of times that are far off. Therefore say unto them; Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: ‡ There shall none of my words be prolonged any more: the word which I shall speak shall be performed, saith the Lord Jehovah.

CHAPTER XIII.

- 1 2 THE word of Jehovah also came unto me, saying: Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel that prophesy, and say unto them that || prophesy out of their 3 own heart, Hear ye the word of Jehovah: Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Woe unto the foolish prophets, that 4 go after their own spirit, and have seen nothing. Thy 5 prophets, O Israel, are like the foxes in the deserts. Ye have not gone up into the breaches, neither § made up the ** fence for the house of Israel, to stand in battle

* Or, this man.

† Or, this man.

‡ H. thou shalt no more prolong any of my words.

|| H. are prophets.

§ H. fenced up.

** Or, walled up the wall.

27. —that he seeth.—In v. 21—25 there is a reference to the visions of all prophets: but v. 26—28 refer particularly to Ezekiel's prophecy.

28. —be prolonged.—Houbigant translates עָמַדְתִּי here and v. 25, "in longum duces": and I see not how the construction can be otherwise rectified in this place.

3. and have seen nothing.—נֹחַדְתִּי non, nequaquam. Nold. §. 2. "Et ad nihil vident." Houb. "And [go after] things which they have not seen." Marg. Engl. vers.

4. —like the foxes.—They seize their prey in a cunning and cowardly manner, and then fly into lurking places.

5. —Ye have not gone up אֲפֹרָא. —Ye have not exercised your prophetic-

- 6 in the day of Jehovah. They have seen * vanity and † lying divination; they say, Jehovah speaketh, whereas Jehovah hath not sent them; and they have caused others to hope that they would confirm the word.
- 7 Have ye not seen a ‡ vain vision, and have ye not spoken a lying divination; whereas ye say, Jehovah speaketh, 8 although I have not uttered it? Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Because ye have spoken || vanity, and have seen a lie, therefore, lo, I am against you, saith the 9 Lord Jehovah: and mine hand shall be against the prophets that see § vanity, and that divine a lie: they shall not be in the assembly of my people, neither shall they be written in the writing of the house of Israel, neither shall they enter into the land of Israel: and ye shall 10 know that I am the Lord Jehovah. Because, even because they have seduced my people, saying, “Peace,”

* Or, falsehood.

† H. divination of a lie.

§ Or, falsehood.

‡ Or, false.

|| Or, falsehood.

cal office, and framed your own conduct, so as to stop the wrath of Jehovah by admonitions and exhortations, and by personal goodness. C. xxii. 30. Ps. cvi. 23. Jer. v. 1.

6. —and lying divination.—Houbigant observes that all the ancients read וקסמו, “and have divined a lie.”

—they have caused others to hope.—See יחל Ps. cxix. 49. “or, hoped to establish the word.” Secker. “They hoped, however, that their words would be fulfilled.” Michaelis.

7. —whereas ye say.—אמרים, saying, 5 MSS. Houb. who also proposes האמרים, as v. 6.

9. —assembly.—Of those who shall hereafter worship me in Jerusalem. Or, in the secret council of those who shall consult on public affairs.

—writing.—Roll of those who shall return from captivity. “Genealogical tables. That is, they shall die without children.” Michaelis.

10. Because, even because.—Noldius says, “Repetitio intendit significationem.”

—they have seduced.—התעו 1 MS. But in Syr. Chald. and Sam. the root is written with ט. See Cast. lex.

- and there was no peace; and one built up a wall, and, lo, 11 others daubed it with untempered mortar; say thou unto those who daub it with untempered mortar, that it shall fall: there shall be an overflowing shower; and ye, O great hailstones, shall fall; and * a stormy wind shall 12 rend it. Lo, when the wall is fallen, shall it not be said unto you, where is the daubing with which ye daubed it?
 13 Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah: I will even rend it with † a stormy wind in my fury; and there shall be an overflowing shower in mine anger, and great hailstones in 14 my fury, ‡ to consume it. Thus I will break down the wall which ye have daubed with untempered mortar, and will bring it down to the ground, so that the foundation

* H. a wind of storms.

† H. a wind of storms.

‡ Or, for a full end.

—a wall.—חִיץ occurs only here. Cappellus observes that it is explained by קיר v. 12. and that חֹסֵם in Arab. signifies a wall. See חִיט cinxit. Gol. lex. See also, under חִיץ, similar roots in Syr. Æth. which signify cinxit, circumdedit.

—untempered mortar.—תַּפֵּל “quod non est paratum ut oportet.” Cocceius. ἀναπτύξω Symmachus. Cimento sine paleis: some commentators. See c. xxii. 28.

11. —there shall be.—וְהָיָה 4 MSS. 6. Observe the paronomasia in תַּפֵּל וַיִּפֹּל. “Pro וְהָיָה legit Syr. הֵנָּה, ecce.” Secker.

—and ye.—V. 6. Syr. render “And I will give, or, send. But then, as Houbigant observes, we must read with 6. וְתַפְּלָנָה, “and they shall fall.” Houbigant proposes וְאִתְּנִי, “et cum eo, sc. imbre.” Perhaps וְנָתַן וְאִתְּנִי. For Guarini gives many instances of ה prefixed to nouns in construction. Gramm. 421. But see v. 18, 20, לְבָנָה and אֶתְנָה. “Syr. legit וְאִתְּנִי וְאֶתְנָה, dabo, et lapides: non male. Pro וְאֶתְנָה legit Chald. וְאֶת. אֶת nominativo subinde præfigitur. Nec hoc male.” Secker.

—great.—גְּבִישׁ gemma, unio, crystallus. Job. xxviii. 18. The Arabic article is prefixed. Hailstones of gems: i. e. as large as gems. See Grot.

13. —rend.—בָּקַע, in Pihil, may be rendered with V. erumpere faciam. Sc. findendo nubes vel terram educam.

- thereof shall be discovered; and it shall fall, and ye shall be consumed in the midst thereof: and ye shall know that
- 15 I am Jehovah. Thus will I accomplish my fury upon the wall, and upon those that daubed it with untempered mortar; and will say unto them, The wall is * no more,
- 16 and they that daubed it are † no more: even the prophets of Israel who prophesy concerning Jerusalem, and who see for her a vision of peace, and there is no peace, saith the Lord Jehovah.
- 17 Likewise, Son of man, set thou thy face against the daughters of thy people who prophesy out of their own
- 18 heart; and prophesy against them, and say, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Woe to the women that ‡ sew pillows to all arm-holes, and make coverings upon the head of every * H. not.† H. not.‡ Or, apply cushions.

14. —and it shall fall.—וַנִּפֹּל one MS. which I think right; and that we should read בַּתּוֹכּוֹ.

15. —no more.—"אֵינָהּ, ubi? Syr. Confer v. 12." Seeker.

16. Even the prophets.—This verse explains the whole from v. 10. Jerusalem is the wall, which is to be destroyed, according to the sublime prophecy in v. 13; and those who daubed it with mortar unduly prepared are the false prophets.

18. —that sew.—Gussetius approves of this sense; and observes that the original word is twice opposed to קָרַע lacerare, here v. 20, and Eccl. iii. 7. The general sense of applying suits Job xvi. 15.

—pillows.—So the ancients, and most expositors: and כִּסֵּת has this sense in Chaldee. Symmachus renders by ὑπαγκλώνα. See כִּסֵּת textit, and in Syr. Ar. induit.

—to all arm-holes.—See Jer. xxxviii. 12: and read יָדִים (written contractedly "יָדִי) with Syr. Chald. 4 MSS. one of which is ancient, and a 3d in the margin. But V. 6. Symm. read יָד.

This may be figurative language, designed to express that men were taught to recline at ease on their couches, and to partake of banquets. See what Harmer says concerning the eastern mode of sitting supported by pillows. ii. 98. Carpets, matrasses, and cushions are the furniture of divans. Russel's hist. of Aleppo. 4<sup>o</sup>. 101. Sir John Chardin also men-

19 stature, to hunt souls ! Will ye hunt the souls of my people, and will ye save your own souls alive ? And will ye pollute me among my people for handfuls of barley, tions a matráss with large cushions placed at the back and sides of the person who uses it as a bed. Harmer. ii. 123. See also Shaw's travels : 209 : 4º. who says that several velvet or damask bolsters were placed on the carpets or matrasses in Barbary.

—coverings.—See ó. and Cast. lex.

—upon the head of every stature.—Upon every head, כָּל רֹאשׁ, of every stature. ó. 2 MSS. The false prophetesses did this without distinction of stature, or age.

—to hunt souls.—To destroy men, to expose them to God's vengeance by lulling them into security. See Prov. vi. 26. נַפֵּשׁ signifies a person, or life.

This may be a strong eastern manner of expressing that these women hoodwinked their votaries, and kept them in spiritual darkness.

Or the covering of the head may have been of the ornamental or triumphal kind, to denote prosperity or victory ; as pillows denoted tranquillity and plenty : and both may have been significantly applied to the heads and arms of those who consulted the prophetesses. “ The prophetesses may be represented as covering the head of those they by their prophesyings destined to death ; as the head of Haman was covered when he was really in those circumstances.

I am nevertheless disposed to understand the clause in a different sense. These prophetesses did the same thing by their flattering words as would have been best expressed if they had thought fit to signify the same thing by actions only, (as the prophets sometimes did) by making bolsters for the arms, and presenting them to the Israelitish women whom they wanted to assure of the continuance of their prosperity ; and embroidering handkerchiefs proper to bind over the ornaments of females in a state of honour, and afterwards putting them on their heads.” Harmer. ii. 93.

Perhaps incantations were used. See Chald. on v. 20 : and we learn from 1 Sam. xxviii. 7, and from the Greek and Roman writers, that women employed themselves in magical rites. It is not impossible that every stature may refer to images of different sizes. Lanca & effigies erat, altera cerea. Hor. Sat. l. 1. viii. 30.

Terque hæc altaria circum

Effigiem duco.

Virg. Ecl. viii. 74.

—and will ye save your own souls alive?—See Syr. Houbigant, and and for * pieces of bread; to slay the souls that should not die, and to save the souls alive that should not live, by 20 your lying to my people that hearken to a lie? Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Lo, I am against your † pillows wherewith ye there hunt the souls, that they may escape; and I will rend them from your arms, and will let the souls go whose soul ye hunt, that they may * Or, morsels of food.

† Or, cushions.

Dathius. "Ye shall not save your own souls alive: ye shall die." Therefore to save souls alive is opposed to hunting souls: and, v. 19, this latter phrase is equivalent to slaying souls. Perhaps we should read לבן התחייה. But see v. 11, 20, אמתנה.

"This verse should seem to mean that these women made every body easy to their ruin, for their own profit." Seeker.

"The easterns had, and still have, frequent amulets and ribands of charms, which they put principally at their hands and heads. Such charms these female prophets fabricated; and, as appears, attributed to them the power of preserving the life of those who wore them, and of bringing death on their enemies." Michaelis.

19. ———pollute me.—Profane my name by making use of it as a sanction to your lies: v. 7. Mr. Lowth.

———handfuls of barley.—For the humblest presents. It is well known how customary gifts were, and are to this day, in the east. MSS. read שערים.

———to slay the souls &c.—By pronouncing the sentence of death on the righteous, and by assuring the wicked that they should live. See v. 22.

———a lie.—בברי כזב, lying words. ó. Ar. 1 MS.

20. ———there.—In Jerusalem. But שם is wanting in V. Syr. 2 MSS.

———that they may escape.—Sc. from your snares. פרח signifies volare in Ch. Syr. See V. "Pro avolantibus:" "ut sint avolantes." Gussetius, voc. כסת, proposes another sense, "ut efflorescant;" and considers the word as expressive of prosperity. ó. have εἰς διασκορπισμὸν, and Chald. "ut pereant:" either of which senses would suit the place, though I cannot form any plausible conjecture how they read.

———from your arms.—From the arms of you my people, who are lulled into security by the false prophetesses.

———whose soul.—Read נפש שם with Houb. 4 MSS. 1 originally, ó. and Syrus Hexaplaris Ambrosianus. See De Rossi.

- 21 escape. I will also rend your coverings, and deliver my people out of your hand; and they shall be no more in your hand to be hunted; and ye shall know that I am
- 22 Jehovah. Because ye have grieved the heart of the righteous by falsehood, whom I have not grieved; and set yourselves to strengthen the hands of the wicked, that he should not turn from his evil way, that I should save his
- 23 life; therefore ye shall no more see vanity, neither divine divinations: but I will deliver my people out of your hand, and ye shall know that I am Jehovah.

---

CHAPTER XIV.

- 1 Now certain men of the elders of Israel came unto me,
- 2 and sat before me. And the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying:
- 3 Son of man, these men have set up their idols in their heart, and have put the stumbling-block of their iniquity before their face: shall I be enquired of at all by them?

---

—ye hunt.—Forte אַתֶּן. 1 MS.

22. —that I should save his life.—לְחַיֵּיתוֹ 1 MS. “that he might live:” a reading favoured by the ancients. This and the following verse illustrate the general sense of the foregoing obscure ones, v. 17—20.

23. —ye shall no more see &c.—Ye shall soon perish.

1. Now—came.—Seven MSS. read וַיָּבֹאוּ or וַיָּבֹאוּ: which reading is represented by the ancients.

3. —have set up their idols in their heart.—Have a strong inward disposition to idolatry.

—and have put the stumbling-block &c.—And have actually placed before them idols which they worship. See on c. vii. 19.

—shall I be enquired of at all.—Houbigant rightly reads הֲדִרְרֵשׁ, inf. Niphal: and Mr. Dimock proposes the same reading. See c. xvi. 4.

- 4 Therefore speak * unto them, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: † Every one of the house of Israel that setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumbling-block of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to the prophet, I Jehovah will answer him that 5 cometh according to the multitude of his idols: that I may take the house of Israel in their own heart; because they are all estranged from me through their idols.

- 6 Therefore say unto the house of Israel:

Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Turn ye, even turn yourselves, from your idols, and turn your faces from all your 7 abominations. For ‡ every one of the house of Israel, or of the stranger that sojourneth in Israel, who separateth himself from me, and setteth up his idols in his heart, and

* H. with.

† H. man man.

‡ H. man man.

4. —unto them.—אָהֲרָם MSS. edd. See c. iii. 27.

—in his heart.—Eight MSS. read עַל, as in v. 3.

—him that cometh.—See the authority in Bibl. Kenn. for reading אָבִי. But, says Houbigant, this is barbarism; and he ingeniously proposes בִּי by myself, as at v. 7: which one MS. seems to read, and which is favoured by Chald. Compare Chald. here, and at v. 7: and observe that at v. 7 the punctuation of Chald. should be, “et venerit ad prophetam ut interroget eum: in verbo meo ego Dominus respondebo ei, in verbo meo.” בִּי is wanting in 2 MSS. “בִּי is entirely Syriac, and so strange to a Hebrew, that the Masoretes wanted to correct it to אָבִי, and thus corrupted the text.” Eichhorn. See the Syriac version. Perhaps אָבִי is a gloss on לִי.

5. —that I may take &c.—Catch, surprise them, in their own consciences; when they perceive that I am acquainted with their secret idolatries.

6. —even turn yourselves.—See on c. xviii. 30: and Houbigant, who in both places reads וְהִשְׁבִּנוּ in Hophal; that the verb in Hiphil may not be without a case. Can נִפְשֵׁכֶם yourselves be understood?

7. —every one.—The declaration is general, and affects the captive Israelites, those who still remained in their own land, and the proselytes who dwelt there.

- putteth the stumbling-block of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to * the prophet to enquire of him; by myself 8 I Jehovah will answer him, even by myself: and I will set my face against that man, and will make him a sign and † a proverb, and will cut him off from the midst of my 9 people; and ye shall know that I am Jehovah. And when
‡ the prophet is deceived || after he hath spoken a thing,
I Jehovah have deceived that prophet; and I will stretch out mine hand upon him, and will destroy him from the 10 midst of my people Israel. And they shall bear the punishment of their iniquity; the punishment of the prophet's iniquity shall be even as the punishment of his iniquity 11 that seeketh unto him: that the house of Israel may no more go astray § from me, neither be polluted any more with all their transgressions; but that they may be ** my people, and I may be †† their God, saith the Lord
Jehovah.

- 12 THE word of Jehovah also came unto me, saying :
13 Son of man, when a land sinneth against me by trespassing ‡‡ grievously, and I shall stretch out mine hand

* Or, a prophet.

† H. proverbs.

‡ Or, a prophet.

|| H. and.

§ H. from after me.

** H. unto me for a people.

†† H. unto them for a God.

‡‡ H. a trespass.

—to enquire of him.—Compare, for the use of דרש, 2 Chron. xxxi.
21. Ezr. vi. 21. Isai. viii. 19.

—by myself I Jehovah.—This gives the clause an animated turn.
But that we may render “to enquire for himself of me,” see דרש with ב
1 Sam. xxviii. 7. 2 Kings i. 2, 16. 1 Chron. x. 14.

8. —and will make him.—Five MSS. and 3 edd. read fully,
והשימוניהו, from שום.

9. —I Jehovah have deceived &c.—When any false prophet is deceived, the probable event proving contrary to his prophecy; I Jehovah have so superintended the course of things as to deceive that prophet.

13. —a land.—See Mr. Lowth. “When the inhabitants of a land have filled up the measure of their iniquities, the few righteous shall not upon it, and shall break the staff of the bread thereof, and shall send famine upon it, and shall cut off from it man 14 and beast; though these three men were * in it, Noah Daniel and Job, they should deliver but their own souls

 15 by their righteousness, saith the Lord Jehovah. If I cause noisome beasts to pass through a land, and they bereave it, and it be desolate, that none passeth through 16 because of the beasts; though these three men were † in it, as I live, saith the Lord Jehovah, they should deliver neither sons nor daughters; they only should be delivered,
 17 but the land should be desolate. Or if I bring a sword upon that land, and say, “Sword, pass through the land,”
 18 so that I cut off from it man and beast; though these three men were ‡ in it, as I live, saith the Lord Jehovah, they should deliver neither sons nor daughters; but they 19 only should be delivered. Or if I send a pestilence upon that land, and pour out my fury upon it in blood, to cut
 20 off from it man and beast; though Noah Daniel and Job were || in it, as I live, saith the Lord Jehovah, they should

* H. in the midst of it.

† H. in the midst of it.

‡ H. in the midst of it.

|| H. in the midst of it.

deliver it.” Secker renders thus; and I stretch out—and break—and send.

14.—Daniel.—He was taken captive in the third year of Jehoiakim. Dan. i. 1. After this, Jehoiakim reigned eight years. 2 Kings xxiii. 36. And this prophecy, as appears from c. viii. 1, was uttered in the sixth year of Jehoiachin’s captivity, who succeeded Jehoiakim, and reigned only three months. 2 Kings xxiv. 6, 8. Therefore at this time Daniel had been fourteen years in captivity. דניאל, MSS.

15. —and they bereave it.—ושכלתיה, “and I bereave it,” 2 MSS. V. 6.

16. —though—three.—ושלש 16 MSS. 4 edd. 6. Ar. Syr. v. 18: Houbigant.

19. —upon that land.—על, 15 MSS. and 2 edd. as. v. 17.

—in blood.—Houbigant proposes בדבר, by pestilence; for which there is no external authority. Blood, says Grotius, denotes every kind of immature death. Michaelis suspects כדם.

deliver neither son nor daughter, they should deliver but 21 their own souls by their righteousness. Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah : How much more when I send my four grievous judgments against Jerusalem, the sword and the famine and the noisome beast and the pestilence, 22 to cut off from it man and beast? Yet lo, therein shall be left * escapers that shall be brought forth, both sons and daughters : lo, they shall come forth unto you, and ye shall see their way and their doings : and ye shall be comforted concerning the evil which I have brought upon Jerusalem, even concerning all that I have brought upon 23 her. They shall even comfort you, when ye see their way and their doings : and ye shall know that I have not done without cause all that I have done against her, saith the Lord Jehovah.

* H. An escaping.

21. — How much more &c.—If it is just with respect to other countries, that the good alone should escape punishment ; how much more with respect to Jerusalem, after such repeated instructions and admonitions ?

22. — that shall be brought forth.—But the versions and Houbigant read הַמְצִיִּים, “that shall bring forth sons and daughters.”

— ye shall see &c.—Ye shall be made sensible of their guilt and reformation.

— ye shall be comforted.—By their confession of their idolatries, by a conviction of my justice, and by the spirit of allegiance to me which they shall propagate.

23. — without cause.—אֵל הַנֶּם MSS. and edd.

CHAPTER XV.

- 1 THE word of Jehovah also came unto me, saying :
 2 Son of man, what is the wood of the vine more than any * wood of a branch which is among the trees of the forest ?
 3 Shall wood be taken of it to make into any work ? or will 4 men take a pin of it to hang any vessel thereon ? Lo, it is cast into the fire for fuel ; the fire devoureth both the ends 5 of it, and the midst of it is burnt. Is it † meet for any work ? Lo, when it is whole it is not made into any work :
 how much less, when the fire hath devoured it and it is burnt, shall it then be made into any work ?
 6 Concerning this matter, thus saith the Lord Jehovah :
 As the wood of the vine among the trees of the forest, which I have ‡ appointed for the fire for fuel, so have I 7 appointed the inhabitants of Jerusalem. And I will set my face against them ; they shall go out from || one fire,

* Or, branching wood.

† Or, good, or, profitable.

|| will it profit, or, prosper ?

‡ H. appointed it.

|| H. the fire.

2. —is.—יִהְיֶה is the future frequentative. What is the wood of the vine wont to be accounted &c. ?

—wood of the vine.—"The vine is the noblest of all trees, as long as it brings forth fruit : but if it is cut down, its soft wood cannot be worked. —It is only fit for fuel." Michaelis.

3. —to make into any work.—מַלְאכָה "to do work" 1 MS. מְלָאכָה לְ "to do any work" 2 MSS. But see v. 5.

—a pin.—See on Zech. x. 4.

5. —hath devoured it and it is burnt.—Hath preyed on it in some degree, and it is partly burnt.

6. Concerning this matter.—לְכֵן quantum ad hoc ; as διὰ τοῦτο Mark xii. 24. Nold. §. 4.

7. —they shall go out.—V. and ó. render the original word as in the future tense.

and * another fire shall devour them : and ye shall know that I am Jehovah, when I set my face against them.

8 And I will make the land desolate, because they have † grievously trespassed; saith the Lord Jehovah.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 THE word of Jehovah also came unto me, saying :

2 Son of man, cause Jerusalem to know her abominations ; and say, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah unto Jerusalem :

3 Thy ‡ rise and thy nativity were of the land of || Canaan ; thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother an Hittite.

* H. the fire.

† H. trespassed a trespass.

‡ H. diggings out, or, dealings.

|| H. the Canaanite.

—another fire.—Some of the inhabitants of Jerusalem were destroyed in their own country, and others in Egypt. Jer. xlv. 14.

Jerusalem is represented under the image of an exposed infant, whom God preserved from destruction, brought up, espoused, and exalted to sovereignty. But she proved faithless and abandoned ; and therefore God threatens her with severe vengeance, but graciously promises that hereafter he will fulfil his early covenant with her.

The allegory is easily understood ; and, as Mr. Lowth observes, has much force, liveliness, and vehemence of eloquent amplification. The images are adapted to a people immersed in sensuality. See on c. xxiii, 1 : and Bp. Lowth præf. Hebr. xxxi. p. 403. ed. 2<sup>da</sup>. 8vo.

3. —they rise.—Prosapia tua. Houbigant. C. xxi. 30, induces me to prefer this sense, and to derive the original word from כרה to dig. See Isai. li. 1 : and to observe that V. 6. Syr. render thy root. מכורותיך, 4 MSS. The word may also be rendered thy dealings, from מכר to sell. The idea of commercium, negotiatio, conversatio assidua, will suit every place where the word occurs ; even Gen. xlix. 5, whether we read with the Hebrew or with the Samaritan.

—an Amorite &c.—Your degenerate and idolatrous conduct being

- 4 And as for thy nativity, in the day when thou wast born thy navel was not cut, neither wast thou washed in water * to supple thee; thou wast not salted † at all, nor swad-
 5 dled ‡ at all. None eye pitied thee, to do unto thee any of these things, to have compassion on thee: but thou wast cast out || in the open field, to the lothing of thy
 6 person, in the day when thou wast born. And when I passed by thee, and saw thee § wallowing in thy ** blood, I said unto thee when thou wast in thy †† blood, Live: [yea, I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood,
 7 Live.] ‡‡ I caused thee to encrease as the || || bud of the field, and thou didst encrease and wax great, and camest to §§ excellent ornaments; thy breasts were fashioned,

* H. for a suppling.

† H. in being salted.

‡ H. in being swaddled.

|| H. on the face of the field.

§ H. kicking thyself.

** H. bloods.

†† H. bloods.

‡‡ H. I made thee a great number.

||| Or, growth, or, branch.

§§ H. ornaments of ornaments.

suitable to such a descent. See Susan. 56. John viii. 44. It is the language of indignation and reproof, like Duris genuit te cautibus horrens Caucasus.

Æn. iv. 366.

4. —in the day when thou wast born.—See the same construction in the original; Gen. xl. 20.

—to supple thee.—In mollitiem. שׁעׁע in Chald. signifies lene, molle reddidit; and שׁעׁע in Syr. is linivit, levit. So Kimchi, Capellus, Cast. lex. Houbigant. But Buxtorf, ad aspectum meum, that I might look on thee with favour: and Schultens, to cleanse thee: from מׁשׁע Arab. removere inquinamentum. Vid. Gol. lex. & Dath. in loc.

—salted at all.—Sale modico insperso, cutis infantis densior solidiorque redditur. Galen. de san. i. 7. in Pol. Syn. Potius, ut foetus a sorde partus mundetur.

6. [yea I said unto thee &c.]—The four last words of this v. in the original are repeated by mistake. See 6. Ar. Syr. Houb.

7. —to encrease.—Perhaps רבובה auctam. Part. Pahul.

—excellent ornaments.—Many MSS. and 4 edd. for עריים read ערים. It is probable that עריים or ערים is a second reading of ערי, introduced from the margin into the text. For the two words Syr. reads and thine hair grew, whereas thou wast * naked and bare.

- 8 And I passed by thee and saw thee, and lo, thy time was the time of love; and I spread my skirt over thee, and covered thy nakedness: yea I sware unto thee, and entered into a covenant with thee, saith the Lord Jeho-9 vah, and thou becamest mine. Then I washed thee with water; yea, I thoroughly washed away thy † blood from 10 thee; and I anointed thee with oil: and clothed thee with brodered work, and shod thee with badger's skin, and wrapped thee about with fine linen, and covered thee with 11 silk, and adorned thee with ‡ ornaments: and I put brace-12 lets upon thine hands, and a chain upon thy neck. And

* H. nakedness and bareness.

† H. bloods.

‡ H. ornament.

עריים cities. One interpreter in Montf. Hex. has εἰς ὄραν καλλωπισμοῦ, as if the true reading were בעת עריים, to the time of ornaments.

—thy breasts.—ידיך 1 MS. and another originally. V. 6. Ar. Syr. Houb.

—hair.—Pubes.

—naked.—“Agreeably to the custom of the poorest Bedouines in the deserts.” Michaelis.

8. —skirt.—Ruth iii. 9. Ὅταν δ' ὁπ' ἀνδρὸς χλαῖναν ἐδγενοῦς πέσῃς. Eurip. quoted by Grot.

Mr. Lowth thinks that v. 4, 5, 6 describe the deserted state of the Israelites in Egypt, and v. 7 their encrease there.

9. —thy blood.—“Sc. congressus nuptialis.” Seeker.

10. —badger's skin.—Josephus and Bochart understand תחש as the name of a colour. See Hieroz. iii. xxx. p. 989. and Cast. lex. “Shod thee with purple sandals.” But see Exod. xxv. 5.

—silk.—From נשה, because the threads are finely drawn. Tayl. conc. From נשי Arab. to paint, Cast. lex. Houbigant: and therefore the learned French critic says that the word may be rendered pictis. “A veil composed of fine hair.” See Michaelis.

11. —a chain upon thy neck.—רצב in Arab. sign. 15, Cast. lex. denotes “a variegated collar of wool hung for ornament about the neck of an animal.”

It pectore summo

Flexilis obtorti per collum circulus auri. Virg. Æn. v. 558.

- I put a jewel in thy nostril, and ear-rings in thine ears,
 13 and * a goodly crown upon thine head. Thus wast thou adorned with gold and silver; and thy raiment was of fine linen, and of silk, and of brodered work; fine flour, and honey, and oil, didst thou eat; and thou wast † very exceedingly beautiful, and thou didst prosper into ‡ a queen.
 14 And || thy renown went forth among the nations for thy beauty: for it was perfect through § my comeliness which I had put upon thee, saith the Lord Jehovah.
 15 But thou hast trusted in thy beauty, and hast committed fornication because of thy renown, and hast poured out thy fornications on every one that passed by: the like to

* H. a crown of goodliness.

‡ H. a kingdom.

† H. in much much.

|| H. renown went forth to thee.

§ Or, the comeliness from me.

12. —in thy nostril.—See on Hos. ii. 13. and Bishop Lowth on Isai. iii. 21.

13. —fine linen.—שש MSS. and edd.

—didst thou eat.—אכלת, 12 MSS. 1 edd.

—into a queen.—I conjecture לַמַּלְכָּה: which Chald. seems to favour: “and ye ruled over all kingdoms.” See v. 30.

14. —my comeliness.—In ó. two translations of the original word occur, ἐν εὐπρεπείᾳ, ἐν τῇ ὀψαύσῃ, for which Arab. has only one word, in gloria; both reading בְּהָדָר, without the affix.

15. —because of thy renown.—Contra nomen tuum: Houb. a sense mentioned by the continuators of Pool’s annotations: “against thy renown: to the blasting of thy honour.” But this clause is best explained by the foregoing. “Thy beauty raised thy confidence; thy renown corrupted thy heart.”

—the like to which will not be again.—Chald here and v. 16: “But it was not right for thee to do thus.” Which seems to be the true sense. ὁ οὐκ ἔσται. ó. MS. A. יהיה 2 MSS. I think that the genuine reading is לֹא יהיה; “which should not have been done.” See the close of v. 16, and the parallel phrase לֹא יַעֲשֶׂה Gen. xxxiv. 7.

After I had betrothed thee, or become thy God, v. 8, and adorned, or prospered, thee; and given thee abundance, and raised thee to high estate and reputation; v. 8—14; thou didst then commit spiritual fornication in revolting from me. v. 15.

- 16 which will not be again. And thou hast taken of thy garments, and made thee high places spread with diverse colours, and hast committed fornication thereupon: the like things to which have not come to pass, and will not be again.
 17 Thou hast also taken * thy goodly jewels of my gold and of my silver which I gave thee, and hast made thee images † of men, and hast committed fornication
 18 with them: and thou hast taken thy brodered garments and covered them, and hast set mine oil and mine incense
 19 before them. My food also which I gave thee, fine flour and oil and honey wherewith I fed thee, thou hast even set
 20 it before them for ‡ a sweet savour. And it hath come to pass, saith the Lord Jehovah, that thou hast taken thy sons and thy daughters whom thou hast borne unto me, and these hast thou sacrificed unto them || to be devoured.
 21 Is this of thy fornications a small matter, that thou hast slain my sons; and hast delivered them up to cause them

* H. the jewels of thy goodness.

† H. of a male.

‡ H. a savour of rest.

|| H. to devour.

16. —high places.—Places of idolatrous worship, commonly built on eminences.

—the like things &c.—This construction supposes the verb-substantive, and יהוה דבר, to be understood with באות, and יהוה דבר with יהוה. But I prefer reading with ó. לא באת: whither thou shouldest not have come, neither should it have been done. That the preter and future have this force, see Gen. xxxi. 42. Numb. xxii. 33. Judg. viii. 19. Gen. xliv.

3. Lev. x. 18, 19.

17. —of n eu.—Thus shewing thy flagitious and shameless spirit. See the note on Baal-peor. Hos. ix. 10.

19. —thou hast even set it.—ונתתהו, all the ancients.

19, 20. —savour. And &c.—See this punctuation in ó. Ar. Houbigant and Michaelis approve of it. “Perhaps, And it hath come to pass—that thou hast taken &c. For so ó. V. may be construed. Comp. v. 23, 24.” Secker.

20. —thou hast borne.—ילדת, MSS. and edd.

—of thy fornications.—מתונותיך, MSS. and edd.

21. —my sons.—But בניך, 4 MSS. ó. Ar. thy sons.

—to pass through.—Two MSS. supply באש through the fire. As c.

22 to pass through the fire unto them? Also in all thine abominations, and thy fornications, thou hast not remem-23 bered the days of thy youth, when thou wast * naked and bare, and † wast wallowing in thy blood. And it hath come to pass, after all thy wickedness, (woe woe unto 24 thee! saith the Lord Jehovah,) that thou hast also built unto thee an arched place, and hast made thee a raised 25 place in every street: at every head of the way thou hast built thy raised place, and hast made thy beauty to be abhorred, and hast opened thy feet to every one that 26 passed by, and hast multiplied thy fornications. Thou hast also committed fornication with ‡ the Egyptians thy neighbours, great of flesh; and hast multiplied thy forni-27 cations, to provoke me to anger. Therefore, lo, I stretched

* H. nakedness and bareness.

† H. kicking thyself.

‡ H. the sons of Mizraim.

xx. 31. Here causing to pass through the fire seems equivalent to slaying, and to sacrificing to be devoured: v. 20. Compare v. 36: c. xxiii. 37. and ps. cvi. 37, 8. See Robertson, clavis Pentateuchi, Lev. xviii. 21. and Tayl. conc. voc. תָּשַׁח; whether the phrase imports a burning alive, or only a rite of lustration and consecration. There is a very remarkable passage in Dion. Hal. Ant. Rom. L. 1. §. 83. p. 72, and marg. 75. ed. Hudson. Μετὰ δὲ τοῦτο πυρκαϊὰς πρὸ τῶν σκηνῶν γεῖσθαι κελεύσας, ἐξάγει τὸν λαὸν τὰς φλόγας ὑπερβρώσκοντα, τῆς ὁσιώσεως τῶν μασμάτων ἕνεκα. “And after this, having ordered that fires should be made before the tents, he brings out the people to leap over the flames, for the purifying of their pollutions.”

22. —thou hast not remembered.—וְנִשְׁכַּחְתָּ MSS.

—and wallowing.—וּמִתְבֹּסֶסֶת, “and wallowing,” ה. MS. A. Syr.

—in thy blood.—בְּדַמְּיֶיךָ, “in thy bloods:” ה MSS.

24. —a raised place.—גִּבְעָה answers to fornix; and בִּמְהָרָה v. 16, and רָמָה here, may include the idea of lupanar; because impure practices were frequent in high places dedicated to the worship of idols.

25. —at every head of the way.—לְכָל רֹאשׁ כֹּל. 1 MS. v. 31. “at the head of every way:” which seems right.

—thy fornications.—Here and v. 26, 29, MSS. and some edd. have תְּנוֹנוֹתֶיךָ.

26. —the Egyptians.—They were remarkable for many gross idolatries.

out mine hand against thee, and diminished thine * appointed portion, and delivered thee unto the will of them that hated thee, the daughters of the Philistines, who were
 28 ashamed of thy † wicked way. Thou hast also committed fornication with ‡ the Assyrians, || without being satisfied; yea, thou hast committed fornication with them, and ye
 29 thou wast not satisfied. Thou hast also multiplied thy fornication in the land of Canaan unto Chaldea; and yet 30 herewith thou wast not satisfied. How weak is thine heart, saith the Lord Jehovah, in that thou doest all these things, the work of a woman committing fornication and
 31 bearing rule: in that thou buildest thine arched place at the head of every way, and makest thy raised place in every street; and hast not been as one that committeth
 32 fornication, in that thou scornest hire, but as a woman that committeth adultery, that instead of her husband taketh 33 strangers! To all women that commit fornication near give a reward; but thou hast given thy rewards to all thy * H. appointment.

 † Or, lewd.

‡ H. the sons of Ashur.
 || H. without satiety.

27. —unto the will.—Syr. by rendering יד seems to have read כנפ into the hand.

29. —unto Chaldea.—“And unto Chaldea. 6. MS. A. Syr.” Mr. Dimock.

30. How weak is thine heart.—אמולה 12 MSS. and 2 originally. לבות hearts is frequent, but I do not find לבה heart elsewhere. “How shall I circumsise thine heart?” Houb. mundabo. V. διαθε. 6. According to our translators, with whom other interpreters agree, the reading must be אמללה. Michaelis interprets the word from the Arab. speravit. “Quo desiderio ex cruciante speras expectasque amasios tuos!” Suppl. ad. lex. Hebr.

—bearing rule.—And therefore no way restrained in her licentiousness.

31.—in that thou scornest hire.—6. read לקט, or לקלט, the former being a Hebrew word, and the latter a Chaldee, for to gather. “So as to gather hire.” See Houbigant. עשית. MSS. היית. MSS.

33. —thy rewards. נדך 1 MS. If the root be נדה, to put away, lovers, and hast hired them to come unto thee from every 34 side for thy fornications. And the contrary is in thee from other women in thy fornications, and * after thy manner none committeth fornication; in that thou givest hire, and no hire is given unto thee: therefore art thou contrary.

35 36 Therefore, O harlot, hear the word of Jehovah. Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Because thy † wealth is poured out, and thy nakedness discovered, in thy fornications with thy lovers, and with all ‡ thine abominable idols, and in the || blood of thy children whom thou hast given 37 unto them; therefore, lo, I will assemble all thy lovers unto whom thou hast been pleasing, and all them that thou hast loved, with all them that thou hast hated; I will even assemble them unto thee round about, and will uncover thy nakedness unto them, and they shall see all 38 thy nakedness. And I will judge thee with the judgments of adulteresses, and of them that shed blood; and * H. according to thee.

† H. brass.

‡ H. the idols of thine abominations.

|| H. bloods.

---

the word denotes the abominable hire of the harlot. Deut. xxiii. 18.
 170 Arab. is liberalis fuit. Cast. lex. “גִּדְּוֹן vagina uteri.” Michaelis.

34. —in that thou givest.—בְּתִתִּיךְ 2 MSS. 6.

36. —thy wealth is poured out.—Æs tuum profudisti. Houb. See also V. 6. Syr. as if there were an allusion to the profligate gifts mentioned v. 33. But Chald. seems to suggest the true reading, בְּשִׁתֶּךָ thy shame. “Because thy shame [thy shameful fornication v. 15.] is poured out.” The word does not elsewhere signify money. גִּדְּוֹן. MSS.

—and in the blood.—וּבְדָמֶיךָ MSS. edd. 6. Ar. Ch. Houb. Dath. But בְּדָמֶיךָ, in the blood, V.

—thou hast given.—נָתַתְּ MSS. and edd.

37. —thy nakedness unto them.—אֶל־יָדָם MSS. and edd. This is explained v. 39; that Jerusalem should be given into the hands of her enemies.

38. —of adulteresses.—Adultery, and idolatry which is spiritual adultery, were both capital offences by the law. Lev. xx. 10. Deut. xvii.
 2—7.

—and of them that shed blood.—וְשֹׁפְכוֹתָם or וְשֹׁפְכוֹתָם, MSS. and edd.

- I will give thee to drink the blood of fury and of jealousy.
- 39 And I will give thee into their hand, and they shall destroy thine arched places, and shall cast down thy raised places; they shall also strip thee of thy garments, and shall take * thy goodly jewels, and leave thee † naked
- 40 and bare: and they shall cause a company to come up against thee, and they shall stone thee with stones, and
- 41 shall cleave thee asunder with their swords: and they shall burn thine houses with fire, and execute judgments upon thee in the sight of many women: and I will cause thee to cease from being an harlot, neither shalt
- 42 thou give hire any more: so will I make my fury towards thee to rest, and my jealousy shall depart from thee, and
- 43 I will be quiet, and will be no more angry. Because thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth, but hast ‡ provoked me in all these things, behold, I will even * H. the jewels of thy goodliness.

† H. nakedness and bareness.

‡ Or, disquieted.

The law made this a capital offence. Ex. xxi. 12. That Jerusalem was guilty of shedding blood, see v. 21, 36.

—and I will give thee &c.—See Rev. xvi. 6. Isai. xlix. 26. I will drench thee with thine own blood, shed in my fury and jealousy.

39. —thine arched places.—גִּבֹּתַי, 2 MSS.

—thy raised places.—רִמּוֹתַי, 16 MSS.

40. —a company &c.—Adulteresses were publicly stoned with stones: John viii. 5. Michaelis gives בִּתּוּק the sense of cutting asunder limb by limb; a mode of punishment among the Chaldeans. Suppl. ad. lex. Hebr. Comp. c. xxiii. 47. See Chald. There is also a reference in this and the following v. to the military engines, the sword, and fire, of the Babylonians.

41. —many women.—Nations, who shall triumph over thee. Chald.

42. —to rest.—"The phrase signifies, I will make my fury to rest upon thee, v. 13 and xxiv. 13. And here it means not reconciliation, but the satisfaction which arises from vengeance, together with a subsequent neglect." Secker.

43. —hast not remembered.—נִשְׁכַּחְתָּ 15 MSS.

—behold.—וְהִנֵּה is wanting in 2 MSS. V. Ch.

recompense thy way upon thine head, and thou shalt not execute thy wicked device, because of all thine abominations.

- 44 Lo, every one that useth proverbs shall use this proverb against thee, saying, As is the mother, so is her daughter.
45 Thou art the daughter of thy mother, that * loathed her husband and her children; and thou art the sister of thy sisters, that loathed their husbands and their children:
your mother was an Hittite, and your father was an 46 Amorite. And thine elder sister was Samaria, she and her daughters, that dwelt at thy left hand: and thy sister that was younger than thou, that dwelt at thy right hand, 47 was Sodom and her daughters. Yet thou hast not walked in their ways, nor done according to their abominations;

* H. loathing.

—thine head.—רֹאשׁךָ V. ó. Ar. Syr. 3 MSS. originally, and Houbigant; who refers to e. xvii. 19. xxii. 31.

—and thou shalt not execute §c.—עֲשִׂיתָ 13 MSS. הִזְמַתָּךְ V. ó. MS. Al. Or render thus: “and thou shalt not commit deliberate wickedness, together with [or, in] all thine abominations.

For וְלָךְ Syr. has causal particles, as if בִּי, which makes a good sense, were the true reading: and ó have καὶ οὖτως.

45. —that loathed §c.—In imitation of which unnatural practice, thou hatest me, thy husband, and offerest thy children to idols.

—sisters.—F. אֲחֵיכֶם.

46. —elder sister.—“Samaria was the metropolis of a more powerful kingdom.” Michaelis.

—daughters.—Besides the literal sense, there is a reference in this word to the subordinate cities of Samaria and Sodom.

—left hand.—In determining the points, the Hebrews suppose the face to be eastward. Thus the situation of Samaria was northward, or on the left hand; and of Sodom southward, or on the right. See Mr. Lowth on this e. e. x. 3, and my note on Joel ii. 20. Job. xxiii. 8, 9, the four cardinal points may be enumerated.

47. —nor done.—עֲשִׂיתָ MSS. and edd. So v. 51.

(that was loathed as a small thing) but thou hast been corrupted more than they in all thy ways.

- 48 As I live, saith the Lord Jehovah, * Sodom thy sister hath not done, she nor her daughters, as thou hast done 49 and thy daughters. Lo, this was the iniquity of Sodom thy sister: pride, fulness of food, and † prosperous rest, ‡ had she and her daughters; and the hand of the poor and needy she did not strengthen. And they were
50 haughty, and committed abomination before me; therefore I took them away, as thou || hast seen.
51 § Neither hath Samaria committed half of thy sins: but thou hast multiplied thine abominations more than they, and hast justified thy sisters in all thine abominations
52 which thou hast done. Do thou also bear thy confusion, who hast pleaded for thy sisters by thy sins which thou

* H. if Sodom thy sister hath done.

|| Or, seest.

† H. prosperity of rest.

§ H. And as for Samaria, according

‡ H. was to her and to her daughters. to half thy sins she hath not sinned.

—that was loathed &c.—This is the marginal rendering of our translators. קט may be קוט, the participle Pahul. קט Arab. duntaxat. Parum id duntaxat. Schultens. Animadv. Phil. Houbigant reads קטרת fastidisti.

50. —committed abomination.—See Lev. xviii. 22.

—as thou hast seen.—ראית, V. Ar. 1 MS. ut vides. Houb. The corrupt addition of י is remarkable throughout this chapter. But עשיתי, 2 MSS. as I have done. “Syr. ó. Ch. When I saw it. Comp. Gen. xviii. 20, 21.” Secker.

51. —than they.—אנחה than she. 1 MS. which reading Houbigant prefers.

—hast justified.—Hast shewn that she is less guilty than thyself. Capellus quotes Absolvit Phrygium vestra rapina Parim.

Mart. xii. Epigr. 52.

—thou hast done.—עשית MSS.

52. —who hast pleaded for.—By thy much greater sins hast been an advocate for them, to extenuate their guilt. See Tayl. conc. פלל. One MS. reads לאחיותיך at the beginning of this v. and 2, at the end.

hast committed more abominably than they: they are justified more than thou: therefore be thou also ashamed and bear thy confusion, in that thou hast justified thy sisters.

- 53 Yet I will bring again their captivity, even the captivity of Sodom and her daughters, and the captivity of Samaria and her daughters; and I will bring again thy captivity
54 in the midst of them: that thou mayest bear thy confusion, and mayest be confounded because of all that thou
55 hast done, in that thou hast comforted them. And thy sisters, Sodom and her daughters, shall return to their former estate, and Samaria and her daughters shall return to their former estate; and thou and thy daughters shall return 56 to your former estate. Although thy sister Sodom was * not heard of from thy mouth in the day of thy pride;

* H. for a hearing of thy mouth.

53. Yet I will.—"The true translation is, And I will—and, v. 55, And thy sisters shall—And so ó. Syr. Ch. V. &c. v. 61 shews it." Seeker.

—the captivity of Sodom.—Sodom and her daughters may mean cities placed in the district where Sodom stood. "Sodom was not where the lake is. See on Gen. xix. 24." Seeker. "The Moabites and Ammonites, descended from Sodom, are called by this name. So the Moabites are called the remnant of Adama: Isai. xv. 9." Michaelis.

—and I will bring again.—Read ושבתי, as at the beginning of the verse. Syr. V. ó. Ch. Houb. Seeker.

—thy captivity.—שביתך or שבויתך, 8 MSS. The sense of this v. is again expressed v. 55: and both verses are to be explained by v. 61. I refer the words rather to the future restoration of the Jews than to their return from Babylon.

54. —that thou mayest bear thy confusion.—By being led into captivity; and by a diminution of thy glory when thou art restored.

—last comforted them.—By exceeding them in wickedness.

55. —shall return.—תשובנה, or תשבנה, is the reading of MSS. thrice in this verse.

56, 57. Although thy sister &c.—The exemplary punishment of Sodom was not duly considered, and spoken of, by thee in the time of thy pres-

57 before thy wickedness was discovered, as in the time of thy reproach from the daughters of Syria and from all that were round about her, and from the daughters of the 58 Philistines who despised thee round about. As for thy deliberate wickedness and thine abominations, * thou hast 59 borne them, saith Jehovah. For thus saith the Lord Jehovah : I will even do with thee as thou hast done, who hast 60 despised the oath so as to break the covenant. Nevertheless I will remember my covenant with thee in the days of thy youth, and I will establish with thee an everlasting 61 covenant. Then shalt thou remember thy ways and be confounded, when thou shalt receive thy sisters that are elder than thou, together with those that are younger than thou, and when I shall give them unto thee for daughters;
 62 but not by † the covenant now made with thee. For I

* Or, thou bearest them.

† H. thy covenant.

perity and self-confidence; before thy humiliation shewed thy wickedness, and defeats and distresses were brought on thee by the Syrians and Philistines. But MSS. edd. read אֶדֹם Edom, instead of אֲרָם Syria.

58. —thy deliberate wickedness.—וְזַמְתִּיךְ 4 MSS. and ó Syr. Ch. render plurally wickednesses.

—thou hast borne them.—V. ó. Ch. Syr. נִשְׂאֵתָם, which is the reading of 1 MS. or, the word may be in the participial form: portans es, vel, eris. They had already borne them in some degree, by the triumphs of the Syrians and Philistines over them: and v. 59, they were to bear the full burthen of them.

—Jehovah.—אֲנִי is prefixed in many MSS. and 3 edd. See also V. Syr.

59. —I will even do.—וְעָשִׂיתִי MSS.

—the oath.—Deut. xxix. 12, 14.

60. —I.—But though you have broken your covenant, yet will I remember mine. Houb.

—with thee.—אִתְּךָ MSS. and edd.

61. —when thou shalt receive thy sisters.—Converted with thee to Christianity.

—not by the covenant &c.—But by the new covenant under the gospel.

- will establish my covenant with thee; and thou shalt 63 know that I am Jehovah: that thou mayest remember, and be ashamed, and * not open thy mouth any more, because of thy confusion, when I † am pacified toward thee for all that thou hast done, saith the Lord Jehovah.

---

CHAPTER XVII.

- 1 THE word of Jehovah also came unto me, saying :
 2 Son of man, put forth a ‡ dark speech, and speak a pa-
 3 rable, unto the house of Israel; and say, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: A great eagle, || with great wings, § with long feathers, full of plumage, and that had ** divers colours, came to Lebanon, and took the highest branch of 4 a cedar: he cropped off the top of its young twigs, and

* H. there may not be to thee any more an opening of mouth.

† Or, I forgive thee.

‡ H. an acute.

|| H. great of wings.

§ H. long of penfeathers.

** H. embroidery, or, needlework.

---

3. ——— A great eagle.—Nebuchadnezzar: v. 12: fitly represented by the eagle,

Cui rex deorum regnum in aves vagas Permisit.

Hor.

There is much beauty in this parable; and in the resumption of its images, v. 22—24.

——— with great wings.—It is said that they are frequently seven feet in extent.

Καὶ οἱ ἐπ' αἰτὸν ὥρσε τανύπτερον.

Hes. Theog. 523.

——— divers colours.—“An allusion to the various nations which composed the Babylonian empire.” Michaelis.

——— the highest branch.—Jehoiachin: v. 12. 2 Kings xxiv. 12.

carried it into a land of * traffick; he set it in a city of 5 merchants. He took also of the † seed of the land, and put it in a ‡ fruitful field; || he placed it by great waters, 6 he set it with § much care. And it grew, and became a vine which spread itself but was of ** low stature: its branches turned towards him, and its roots were under him: it even became a vine, and brought forth branches, and †† shot forth boughs.

* H. of a trafficker.

† Or, produce.

‡ H. field of seed.

|| H. placing it.

§ Or, looking well to it.

** H. low of stature.

†† H. sent.

4. —of traffick.—Babylon was a city of great commerce. For בָּבֶלֶן
 MS. Al. read כַּשְׁדִּים, of the Chaldeans.

5. —seed.—The verb זָרַע is used of planting, Isai. xvii. 10: and therefore by the substantive זָרַע may be understood a cion. Thus Virgil uses semen of a young vine fit for transplanting.

Mutatam ignorent subito ne semina matrem.

Georg. ii. 268.

Zedekiah, who was of the seed royal, is meant. v. 13. 2 Kings xxiv. 17.
 He was placed in Judea after the removal of Jehoiachin.

—in a fruitful field.—The land of Judea.

—he placed it.—קָה may be rendered capiendo, and be considered as the infinitive mood here and Hos. xi. 3. Dathius is of this opinion; and refers to Schultens, Inst. L. Hebr. p. 320.

—with much care.—Ἐπιβλεπόμενον. ὁ. Cocceius renders the word curatio, observatio; and Gussetius, speculatio accuratissima. See צִפָּה Prov. xxxi. 27. Dathius justly observes that the word signifies a willow tree in Arab. Gol. p. 1362.

6. —of low stature.—Alluding to the tributary state of Zedekiah.
 v. 14.

—its branches turned.—F. רָלִיּוּתָהּ. The literal rendering is, ἐν τῷ βλέπειν, ὥστε βλέπειν.

—towards him.—Him who, v. 5, put it in a fruitful field.

—its roots.—F. וּשְׂרָשֻׁיהָ. See v. 7. In this and the foregoing clause the obedience and subjection due from Zedekiah to the King of Babylon are denoted. See v. 7.

—boughs.—פְּאֲרוֹת MSS. The root signifies ornavit; and boughs

- 7 There was also another great eagle * with great wings, and of much plumage: and, lo, this vine bent its roots towards him, and shot forth its branches unto him, that 8 he might water it from the beds of its plantation. In a good † soil, by great waters, was it planted, that it might bring forth branches, and that it might bear fruit; that it might be a ‡ goodly vine.
- 9 Say thou; Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Shall it prosper? || shall not its roots be pulled up, § and its fruit be cut off, that it wither? in all the leaves of its branching it shall wither: nor shall it be in the power of a mighty

* H. great of wings, and plenteous of feathers.

† H. field.

‡ H. a vine of goodliness.

|| H. shall not one pull up, &c.

§ H. and shall not one cut off, &c.

may as properly be called the ornaments of trees as leaves. Sylvis honorem decutit. Hor.

7. —another great eagle.—Houbigant observes that all the ancients besides Chald. read אָחֵר for אֶחָד. The King of Egypt is meant. v. 15.

—with great wings.—One MS. elegantly reads בְּעַל כַּנְּפִים dominus alarum. But see v. 3.

—bent.—כָּפָן is to conceal in Syr. and to place under in Arab. Cast. lex. Houbigant reads with Chald. כַּפְּפָה incurvarit. כַּנְּפָה, alarum instar produxit. 2 MSS. 1 Marg. See De Rossi.

—its branches.—וּדְלִיּוֹתֶיהָ 1 MS.

—that he might water it.—That the King of Egypt might protect Zedekiah.

—from the beds of its plantation.—That is, where it was planted. עֲרוּג, as MSS. represent the word here and v. 10, seems to signify channels of water running by beds. Gussetius renders it, rivulus, a murmur tanquam cervi quod edit. “E fontibus, e significato Æthiopico verbi עֲרוּג scaturire. Licet etiam interpretari ex flexibus. Quippe Arab. significat flectere se, unde כַּנְּעֵרָג anfractus fluminis in dextram et sinistram.” Houbigant.

9. —Shall it prosper?—הֲתִצְלֶה 4 MSS. 2 originally. ה precedes, as Houbigant observes, who adopts this reading, and refers to v. 10, 15.

—that it wither.—Sc. the fruit. Or, literally; and shall not one dry it up? Nonne exsiccabit quis eam? For this is the force of the verb in Pihel.

arm and of much people, * that it should not be taken 10 away by the roots thereof. Yea, behold, being planted, shall it prosper? shall it not † utterly wither, when the east wind toucheth it? in the beds of its branching it shall wither.

11 Moreover the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying :
 12 Say now to the rebellious house: Know ye not what these things mean? Say: Lo, the King of Babylon came to Jerusalem, and took her king and her princes, and ‡ led 13 them with him to Babylon: and took of || the king's seed, and made a covenant with him, and § took an oath of him :
 14 he took also the mighty of the land: that the kingdom might be ** low, so as not to lift itself up; but that it 15 might keep his covenant, †† and might stand. But he rebelled against him in sending his ambassadors into

* H. that one should not take it away.

|| H. the seed of the kingdom.

† H. wither in withering.

§ H. brought him to an oath.

‡ Or, carried.

** Or, humble, or, base.

†† H. that it might stand.

— in the power of a mighty arm.—See Nold. 2 §. 19. So we say, in man, for in the power of man. The meaning is explained, v. 15, 17.

— that it should not be taken away.—לְבִישָׁתָא, 3 MSS. 2 ed. ut ne quis tollat. See 2 Nold. §. 21. But Houbigant reads נִהַשְׁמַת ne devastetur: literally, “ne vastet quis,” and renders, “Neque efficiet brachium potens, nec multitudo magna, ne radicitus evellatur.” The ancients give this sense: “Nor shall it require a mighty arm and much people, that it should be taken away by the roots thereof.” It is an effect which may be produced with ease, God being their enemy. מַשְׁמַת is supposed to be the Syriac or Chaldee infinitive; and is alleged as an instance of the prophet’s debased style.

10 Yea, behold.—הִנֵּה, 3 MSS. V. Syr.

— utterly wither.—יִבֹּשׁ, 6 MSS. 2 edd. arescendo.

13. — and took an oath of him.—Read וַיִּבְרַח. Five MSS. read וַיִּבְרַח, See 6. Chald. But Syr. reads וַיִּבְרַח and וַיִּבְרַח: “and entered with him into an oath.”

14. — and might stand.—The kingdom. לְעִבְדָּה, 1 MS. “that it might serve.” But Chald. “that it might serve him.”

15. — into Egypt.—2 Chron. xxxvi. 13. Jer. lii. 3. xxxvii. 5, 7.

- Egypt, that they might give him horses, and much people. Shall he prosper, shall he escape, that doeth these things? when he hath broken the covenant, shall he
- 16 escape? As I live, saith the Lord Jehovah, surely in the place of the king's dwelling that made him king, whose oath he hath despised, and whose covenant he hath
- 17 broken, even in the midst of Babylon he shall die. Neither shall Pharaoh with his mighty army, and great company, deal with him in war; * when mounts are cast up, and towers are built, to cut off many persons.
- 18 Because he hath despised the oath † by breaking the covenant, (when, lo, he had given his hand,) and hath
- 19 done all these things, he shall not escape. Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah: As I live, surely mine oath that he hath despised, and my covenant that he hath
- 20 broken, I will recompense it upon his own head: and I will spread my net upon him, and he shall be taken in my

* H. in the pouring out of a mount, and in the building of a tower.

† H. so as to break.

Zedekiah must have sent his ambassadors into Egypt, between the sixth month of his sixth year and the fifth month of his seventh year. Compare c. viii. 1. c. xx. 1.

16. —he hath broken.—Vulg. very properly places the stop at אָתּוּ, cum eo. But ó. Syr. read אֲלֵתִי and בְּרִיתִי: “because he hath despised my oath, [the oath taken in my name] and because he hath broken my covenant [the covenant to which I was a witness] with him, [the king of Babylon.]” Observe that the Arabic version supposes the stop at μετ’ αὐτοῦ in ó. and see v. 19, and 2 Chron. xxxvi. 13.

17. —deal with him.—The King of Babylon. אָתּוּ MSS. and edd. See the phrase c. xx. 44. xxii. 14. Houbigant renders with Vatablus, subveniet ei, sc. Sedeciae. All the ancients and one MS. read מִלְחָמָה, shall make war with him,” sc. Nebuchadnezzar. That this is elegant Hebrew, see Gen. xiv. 2.

Accordingly, the Vulgate version renders thus: Et non in exercitu grandi, neque in populo multo, faciet contra eum Pharaoh praelium.

18. —his hand.—Dextræ, quæ fidei testes esse solebant, perfidiâ sunt & scelere violatæ. Cic. Philipp. xi. 5.

snare: and I will bring him to Babylon, and will plead with him there, for his trespass which he hath trespassed 21 against me. And all his fugitives, with all his bands, shall fall by the sword; and they that remain shall be scattered to every wind: and ye shall know that I Jehovah have spoken it.

22 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: I will take from the highest branch of a lofty cedar, and will set it; from the top of its young twigs I will crop off a tender one, and
23 will plant it; upon a mountain which is high and eminent, in * a lofty mountain of Israel, will I plant it; and it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and shall become a goodly cedar: and under it shall dwell every fowl of every wing; in the shadow of its branches shall they 24 dwell. And all the trees of the field shall know that I Jehovah have brought low the high tree, have raised high the low tree; have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish. I Jehovah have spoken, and will do it.

* H. a mountain of loftiness.

20. —and I will bring him.—והביאתיהו 14 MSS. 2 edd.

—for his trespass.—במעל 5 MSS. 4 originally. But the preposition is frequently omitted. על מעל, 1 MS.

21. —fugitives.—מברחי MSS. But Chald Syr. seem to read מבוחריו chosen ones. Καὶ πάντες οἱ ἐκλεκτοὶ αὐτοῦ, is one of the two versions which we find in Theodoret. See Cappellus. Secker approves of rendering chosen men.

Ductores Danaûm, delecti, prima virorum.

Lucret. i. 87.

—with all his bands.—ובל, and all, 7 MSS. Syr.

22—24. These verses may have a reference to Zerubbabel, to the Maccabees, to the Messiah, and to the future restoration of the Jews.

22. —and will set it.—6. MS. Vat. Syr. 1 MS. Houb. omit ינתתי F. ונתתי. See v. 5. and Bp. Lowth on Isai. ii. 2.

23. —fruit.—“The cones which the cedar produces.” Michaelis.

24. The high tree and the green tree refer to Nebuchadnezzar; the low and the dry tree, to the Jews.

mine: as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son * is mine: the soul that sinneth, it shall die.

- 5 6 But if a man be just, and do judgment and justice; if he have not eaten upon the mountains, nor lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, nor defiled his neighbour's wife; if he come not near to † a removed woman, and do not oppress any, if he restore the debtor his pledge, spoil none by violence, give his food to the hungry, and 8 cover the naked with a garment, give not forth upon usury and take not increase, withdraw his hand from iniquity, 9 execute ‡ true judgment between man and man, walk in * H. son, they are mine.

† Or, a woman set apart for unclean.

‡ H. the judgement of truth.

6. —eaten upon the mountains.—Feasted on the sacrifices there offered to false gods. See c. vi. 2.

—lifted up his eyes.—In prayer and adoration.

—come not near.—קרב 2 MSS. But the vu may convert at a distance; or the future tense may have the force of the present, or of the past. There being a change in the original from the past form to the future, here and in the three following verses; this change is denoted by the use of the present tense, though ישיב, v. 12, shews that the version of our translators is a just one.

—a removed woman.—Lev. xx. 18. Our translators use this rendering, c. xxxvi. 17.

7. —the debtor.—ל is understood. The preposition is often thus omitted in English; as in the translation of this passage. See the law, Ex. xxii. 26.

—spoil none by violence.—Hebr. rapinam non rapiat, ἀρπαγμα οὐχ ἀρπάξῃ, Lev. vi. 2.; xix. 13.

8. —upon usury.—See Deut. xxiii. 19, 20: whence it follows that taking increase is not malum per se; but agreeable to justice, if duly circumstanced. Every kind and degree of usury was forbidden to the Israelites among each other, to promote a spirit of mutual kindness. But this law was peculiar to them; like their not reaping the corners of their fields, and their not gleaning their vine-trees and olive-trees. Lev. xix. 9, 10. Deut. xxiv. 19—22.

my statutes, and keep my judgments, * to deal truly; he is just, † he shall surely live, saith the Lord Jehovah.

- 10 But if he beget a son that is a robber, a shedder of blood, 11 and that doeth [to his brother] ‡ any one of these things, and doeth not all those duties; but hath even eaten upon 12 the mountains, and hath defiled his neighbour's wife, hath oppressed the poor and needy, hath often spoiled by violence, hath not restored the pledge, hath lifted up his 13 eyes unto idols, hath committed abomination, hath given forth upon usury and taken increase; shall he live? He shall not live. He hath done all these abominations:
 || he shall surely die: his § blood shall be upon him.

- 14 But, lo, if he beget a son, that seeth all the sins of his father which he committed, that even seeth them and doeth

* H. to execute truth.

‡ H. of any one.

† H. in living he shall live.

|| H. in dying he shall be put to death.

§ H. bloods.

9. —to deal truly.—To do what is right. Cappellus observes that ó transpose אמת into אמתם, “to do them.”

—he shall surely live.—He shall be preserved from the sword, from pestilence, and famine. Grot.

10. —and that doeth to his brother.—ó. read ועושה. Three MSS. V. Syr. omit אה; and this word may be a part of אהר or אהת, which a transcriber was about to write instead מאהר or מאהת; which latter word is the reading of MSS. and edd. Chald. Houb. translate “to his brother.” See v. 18.

12. —hath often spoiled by violence.—Hebr. rapta rapuit, ἀπράγματα ἤρπασε. See v. 7. But 2 MSS. and ó. read גוללה, as v. 7, 16.

—hath committed abomination.—This may refer to the two last clauses of v. 6.

13. —die.—ימות 2 MSS. V. ó. MS. Al. Syr. Chald. v. 20, 21, 26. He shall die an immature death: “ante diem.” Grot.

—his blood shall be upon him.—The words are most naturally understood of a death by the shedding of blood: but may be applied to any kind of death judicially inflicted. Houbigant observes that we should read דמו or יהיו.

14. —that even seeth them.—ויראה, MSS. edd. Chald. Masora. v.

- 15 not such like; hath not eaten upon the mountains, nor lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, hath 16 not defiled his neighbour's wife, nor oppressed any, hath not * taken a pledge, nor spoiled by violence, but hath given his food to the hungry, and hath covered the naked 17 with a garment, hath turned away his hand from the poor, hath not taken usury nor increase, hath executed my judgments, hath walked in my statutes; he shall not die 18 for the iniquity of his father, he shall surely live. As for his father, because † he hath greatly defrauded and ‡ hath greatly spoiled his brother by violence, and hath done that which is not good among || his people, lo, he shall die for his iniquity.
- 19 Yet ye say, Why? doth not the son bear the iniquity of the father?

When the son hath done judgment and justice, hath kept all my statutes, and hath done them; § he shall * H. pledged a pledge.

‡ H. in spoiling hath spoiled.

† H. in defrauding he hath defrauded.

|| H. his peoples.

§ H. living he shall live.

28. וירא, the reading in the text, may be rendered and feareth, with ó.
 Ar. V. Houb.

15. — hath not defiled.—וּמִצְוָה MSS. edd. the ancients.

16. — with a garment.—The preposition ב is in like manner understood, c. xvi. 10.

17. — hath turned away his hand from the poor.—In opposition to lifting it up against him. But ó. read מַעוֹל, or, rather, מַעוֹן. ἀπὸ ἀδικίας. See v. 8.

18. I suppose עָשָׂה 2º. and גָּזַל 2º. to be infinitives; as נָחַם, in the accusative case, requires. Observe that ó. Ar. omit נָחַם.

— that which is not good.—That which is in a high degree wicked.
 Pro sollicitis non tacitus reis. Hor. for eloquent.

— his people.—ó. read עַמִּי, my people. Cappellus.

19. — Why? &c.—Why sayest thou, v. 17, that the son shall not die for the iniquity of his father? Is not this contrary to what we experience? God replies, that now every man shall bear his own burthen.
 See on v. 3.

- 20 surely live. The soul that sinneth, it shall die: the son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son: the righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him, and the wickedness of 21 the wicked shall be upon him. But when the wicked shall turn from all his sins which he hath committed, and shall keep all my statutes, and shall do judgment and
 22 justice; * he shall surely live, he shall not die: all his transgressions which he hath committed shall not be remembered unto him; for his righteousness which he
 23 hath done he shall live. † Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord Jehovah: ‡ and 24 not that he should turn from his ways and live? But when the righteous turneth from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and doeth according to all the abominations which the wicked man doeth, shall he live? All his righteousnesses which he hath done shall not be remem-

* H. living he shall live.

† H. in having pleasure have I pleasure.

‡ Or, have I not pleasure that.

20. —of the wicked.—הַרְשֵׁעַ, MSS. edd.

21. —from all his sins.—חַטֹּאתָיו MSS. edd. and the ancients. i. e. חַטֹּאוֹתָיו.

—he shall not die.—וְלֹא, 11 MSS. ó. Ar. Syr. V.

23. —that the wicked should die.—בְּמוֹת in moriendo, (as בְּשׁוּבוֹ, which follows) 12 MSS. perhaps 2 more, 8 originally, v. 32, c. xxxiii. 11, Syr. Chald. Houb. But הַפֶּן governs an accusative case, ps. xxxiv. 12: and here we may render, “Do I at all desire the death of the wicked?” though the former reading is preferable.

—from his ways.—מִדֶּרֶכָיו, many MSS. and edd. V. But ó. Ar. Syr. מִדֶּרְכּוֹ הַרְשֵׁעָה, as c. iii. 19: “from his evil way.”

24. —All his righteousnesses.—צַדִּיקוֹתָיו, or צַדִּיקָתָיו, MSS. V. ó. Chald. righteousnesses.

Cappellus observes that ó. omit the words יַעֲשֶׂה וְחַי; and he thinks that they are superfluous, and perplex the sentence. Syr. omits וְחַי. Houbigant proposes to make the passage clear by reading וְכִבֵּל. “Keeping all that the Hebrew hath, it may be translated—iniquity, according to bered: in his trespass which he hath trespassed, and in his sin which he hath sinned, in them shall he die.

- 25 Yet ye say, The way of the Lord is not equal. Hear now, O house of Israel: Is not my way equal? are not 26 your ways unequal? When the righteous man turneth from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, he shall die because of those deeds; for his iniquity which he hath 27 committed he shall die. Also when the wicked man turneth from his wickedness which he hath committed, and doeth judgment and justice, he shall save his soul alive. Because he seeth, and turneth from all his transgressions which he hath committed, * he shall surely live,
 28 he shall not die. Yet † saith the house of Israel, The way of the Lord is not equal. Are not my ways equal,
 30 O house of Israel? are not your ways unequal? Therefore I will judge you, O house of Israel, every one according to his ways, saith the Lord Jehovah. Turn ye, even turn yourselves, from all your transgressions; and let 31 not iniquity ‡ be your cause of falling. Cast away from you all your transgressions whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a new heart, and a new spirit: for why will

* H. in living he shall live.

† H. be unto you for a stumbling-

‡ H. say.

block.

---

all the abominations that the wicked man doeth, shall he do it and live? Seeker.

25. — Is not my way equal?—יִתְבַּנּוּ 2 MSS. “are not my ways equal?” See v. 29. Some MSS. have יְהוּדָה for אֲדָנִי here and v. 29; and c. xxxiii. 17, 20.

26. — he shall die because of those deeds.—Moriatur in eis. V. גְּלִיָּהֶם, “because of such things,” Karà tò σηµαυνόμενον. See c. xxxiii. 18.

28. — he seeth.—He considereth. V. He feareth. Houb. but then we must read וִירָא. Compare v. 14.

29. — your ways unequal.—יִתְבַּנּוּ MSS. and edd.

30. — even turn yourselves.—וְהִשְׁבֵּנוּ in Hophal. Houb. So 1 MS. But see v. 32, and ps. lxxxv. 3 † 4. See on c. xiv. 6.

— your cause of falling.—לְעִשְׂבֶּל 5 MSS.

- 32 ye die, O house of Israel? seeing I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord Jehovah. Wherefore turn yourselves, and live.

CHAPTER XIX.

- 1 MOREOVER, * take thou up a lamentation for the princes
 2 of Israel, and say :
     What was thy mother? A lioness;
     She lay down among lions;
     In the midst of young lions she nourished her whelps.
 3 And she brought up one of her whelps; he became a young lion;
     And he learned to † seize the prey, ‡ he devoured men.
 4 The nations also heard of him; he was taken in their pit;
     And they brought him in chains unto the land of Egypt.
 5 When she saw that he was become weak, her hope was lost;

* Or, utter.

† H. to prey upon the prey.

‡ Or, to devour.

---

32. Wherefore turn yourselves.—In Hiphil, הִשִּׁיבוּ, V. Chald. 10 MSS. 2 edd.

1. —princes.—נְשִׂאֵם prince. ó. Ar. Houb. י follows. But two princes are spoken of.

2. —A lioness.—An allusion to Gen. xlix. 9, says Grotius. Judea was among the nations like a lioness among the beasts of the forest: she had strength and sovereignty.

3. —one of her whelps.—Jehoahaz, the son of Josiah, is meant; whom Pharaoh-nechoh put in bands, and took into Egypt. 2 Kings xxiii. 33, 34.

4. —in chains.—Instrumentum ferreum, in modum spinæ aculeatæ, quo olim captivi figebantur. Cast lex. voc. חֲרוּחַ. “They put rings into his nose.” Michaelis.

5. —that he was become weak.—Sc. the whelp that had been taken

And she took another of her whelps, and she made him a young lion.

6 And he went up and down among the lions; he became a young lion;

And he learned * to seize the prey, † he devoured men.

7 And he brought evil upon ‡ their palaces, and laid waste their cities;

And the land was desolate, and || all that was therein, from the voice of his roaring.

8 Then the nations set themselves against him on every side from the provinces,

* H. to prey upon the prey,
† Or, to devour.

‡ H. his.
|| H. the fulness thereof.

into Egypt. נחלה 12 MSS. 2 edd. See the word, Isai. xiv. 10. The reading of ó. seems to be נחלם: see Mic. iv. 7: "that he was removed far off:" which makes a satisfactory sense.

—her hope was lost.—The rendering may very well be, "And she saw that he was become weak, and that her hope was lost:" that is, he who was the object of her hope.

—took another.—For אחר one ó. Ar. Houb. read אחר another. See c. xvii. 7. Jehoiachim, or Eliakim, another son of Josiah, succeeded Jehoahaz. 2 Kings xxiii. 34.

7. And he brought evil upon their palaces.—ó. read וירעה from רעה pascere: Chald. וירע et vastavit, from רוע malefacere in Hiphil, or רעע conterere. See Boch. Hieroz. L. iii. c. iv. p. 760. 'Εκάκωσε, Cappellus.

Sixteen MSS. and 2 edd. Chald. Grot. Houb. read ארמנותיו his palaces. See Isai. xiii. 22. The word is derived from רום to be high; and signifies arx, castellum, palatium. The affixes, ו and הם, are used indiscriminately to agree with אדם: unless with ó. we read ארץ the land for עריהם their cities: or, with Syr. ערים the cities.

—from the voice.—Or, "because of the voice of his roaring," which spread terror and fright.

8. —set themselves against him.—Ἐδωκαν ἐπ' αὐτόν. ó. Ἐπέθεντο αὐτῷ. Another Greek version in Montf. Hex. But Houb. conjectures ויחנו, et castra posuerunt; or rather, וירגזו, et coierunt. The Chaldeans, Syrians, Moabites, and Ammonites, afflicted Judah in the reign of Jehoiakim; and Nebuchadnezzar bound him in fetters, and carried him to Babylon. 2 Kings xxiv. 2. 2 Chron. xxxvi. 6.

- And spread their net over him : he was taken in their pit.
 9 And they put him in ward in chains,
 And brought him to the king of Babylon, * who brought him into strong holds ;
 That his voice might no more be heard
 Upon the mountains of Israel.
 10 Thy mother was like a vine, like a pomegranate,
 Planted by the waters :

* H. and he.

—in their pit.—"The Arabs dig a pit where the lions are observed to enter ; and, covering it slightly with reeds, or small branches of trees, they frequently decoy and catch them. Pliny has taken notice of the same practice." Shaw. 172. 4<sup>o</sup>.

9. And they put him.—ויתנודו, 8 MSS.

—And brought him.—ויביאודו, 3 MSS. ó. MS. Al. Ar. V. Syr. Chald.

—who brought him into strong holds.—ויביאודו 1 MS. ó. MS. Vat. Syr. "and he [the king of Babylon] brought him into strong holds [or, into toils]." This seems right. But ó. MS. Al. Ar. V. read ויביאודו, "they even brought him." and 19 MSS. 2 edd. יביאודו, which may be written for ויביאודו, "they even brought him." So Chald.

The unhappy fate of these princes, mentioned v. 4, and v. 8, 9, is a just subject of lamentation.

10. —like a pomegranate.—We may read כרמן with ó. a reading pointed out by Cappellus and Pradus, both of whom observe the similitude of the corresponding letters in this word and in ברמן. See an instance of a like double comparison, and asyndeton, Numb. xxiv. 6. רמון is masculine, Jer. lii. 23 ; but it there signifies the fruit, not the tree. "כרמן, ὡς ρόα." Secker. Houbigant proposes נדמה is like ; which indeed occurs in Chald. but rather as a paraphrase of כ, the particle of similitude, than as a reading. If we read נדמה, part. pres. Niphal, I think that we must likewise read לנפן ; as Houbigant seems inaccurate in asserting that נדמה is used with כ. Two MSS. omit ברמן.

—Planted by the waters.—This circumstance is mentioned of the vine, c. xvii. 8. Ray says of the pomegranate, umbras amare aiunt et rigationes. Hist. plant p. 1462. fol.

She was fruitful, and full of branches, by reason of many waters.

11 * And she had strong rods

For the sceptres of them that bear rule :

And her stature was raised high † amidst the thick boughs,
And her height was seen among the multitude of her branches.

12 But she hath been plucked up in fury, she hath been cast down to the ground ;

And the east wind hath dried up her fruit :

‡ Her strong rods have been broken off and dried up, the fire hath consumed her.

13 And now she is planted in the desert,

In || a dry and thirsty land.

* H. And there were to her rods of strength.

† H. to among.

‡ H. the rods of her strength.

|| H. a land of drought and thirst.

—fruitful.—פְּרִיָה, 18 or 19 MSS.

—and full of branches.—וְעִנְיָפָה 2 MSS. et ramosa.

11. —amidst the thick boughs.—"Of other trees. In several countries they join the vine to trees, about which they wind themselves and run very high." Michaelis.

Longo judicatur ævo, nobilia vina non nisi in arbustis gigni ; & in his quoque laudatiora summis, sicut uberiora imis. Adeo excelsitate proficitur. Hac ratione & arbores eliguntur. Prima omnium ulmus,—deinde populus nigra. Plin. l. xvii. c. xxiii.

See Merrick's note on ps. lxxx. 11.

—And her height was seen.—Et vidit quis, i. e. visa est. See רָאָה with ב Mic. vii. 9. In this form רָאָה often signifies to look with pleasure. Obad. 12.

I think that the affixes throughout this v. should be regularly feminine.

12. —rods.—Read כִּשְׁתִּים, i. e. כִּשְׁוֹת, as in v. 11. V. Syr.

—hath consumed her.—אֶכְלָתָה 1 MS. ó. V. Syr. Observe that van follows.

13. —in the desert.—An allusion to the conquered and enslaved state of Judea, after the taking of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. Grotius thinks that the captive Jews may have been placed in the worst part of Chaldaea.

- 14 And a fire is gone forth out of a rod of her branches, which hath devoured her fruit :
 And there is not in her a strong rod, a sceptre to rule.
This is the lamentation ; and it shall be for a lamentation.

CHAPTER XX.

- 1 Now it came to pass in the seventh year, in the fifth month, on the tenth day of the month, that certain men of the elders of Israel came to inquire of Jehovah, and sat
 2 before me. Then came the word of Jehovah unto me, 3 saying: Son of man, speak unto the elders of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Are ye come to enquire of me? *As I live, * I will not be* enquired of by you, saith the Lord Jehovah.
 4 Wilt thou not judge them, wilt thou not judge them,
 Son of man? Cause them to know the abominations of * H. if I will be enquired of.

14. —a fire is gone forth.—A prophecy of the dreadful effects which would arise from Ishmael's conspiracy against Gedaliah. See Jer. xli. 7. xlii. 22.

In c. xvii. the king of Judea was compared to the highest branch of a cedar; and the king of Babylon to an eagle. With a like decorum, in the two beautiful parables of this chapter Judea is compared to a lioness, and her king to a young lion; and the country is again represented under the image of a fruitful, branching, and lofty vine.

In this c. to v. 44, we have another striking instance of the clear and flowing style observable in c. xviii.

1. —in the fifth month, on the tenth &c.—ó. MS. V. read עשר בחדש "on the fifteenth day of the month."

3. —speak unto.—Eight MSS. read אל for את. But see c. iii. 24.

—say unto them.—אליהם MSS. edd. So again v. 7.

4. Wilt thou not judge.—הannon? nonne? Nold. §. 2. See Mr.

5 their fathers: and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord
 Jehovah: in the day when I chose Israel, and * lifted up mine hand unto the seed of the house of Jacob, and was known unto them in the land of Egypt, when I † lifted up mine hand unto them, saying, I am Jehovah your God; 6 in that day when ‡ I lifted up mine hand unto them, to bring them forth out of the land of Egypt unto a land which I had || espied for them, flowing § with milk and 7 honey, ** which is the glory of all lands; I then said unto

* Or, sware unto.

† Or, sware unto.

‡ Or, sware unto.

|| Or, sought, or, searched out.

§ II. of milk.

** II. this.

Lowth: and c. xxii. 2: where V. has nonne? and ó. MS. A. οὐ κρινεῖς; and c. xxiii. 36: οὐ κρινεῖς; ó. Wilt thou not argue with them, reprove, and condemn them? But Houbigant reads התשפט in Hithpael, "Make thyself a judge with them:" and many MSS. and edd. omit the van in התשפוט. This form of the verb does not occur elsewhere. IV. 5—9. The forefathers of the Israelites were rebellious and idolatrous in Egypt: but God spared them.

5. —Israel.—In ó. Ar. the reading is ישראל בית, the house of Israel. The house of Jacob follows.

—lifted up mine hand.—That is, sware: this being a gesture used in swearing. Gen. xiv. 22. Exod. vi. 8. Dan. xii. 7. Rev. x. 5, 6. "Among the Jews, the juror held up his right hand towards heaven; which explains a passage in the cxlivth psalm [v. 8] whose mouth speaketh vanity, AND THEIR RIGHT HAND IS A RIGHT HAND OF FALSEHOOD. The same form is retained in Scotland still" See Paley's excellent book on moral and political philosophy, p. 159. 4<sup>o</sup>. This manner of taking an oath is allowed by law to a certain description of Protestant dissenters in Ireland called Seceders. 21, 22 G. 3. c. lvii.

6. —flowing with milk and honey.—Bochart, Hier. p. ii. L. iv. c. xii. 520, observes that this phrase occurs about twenty times in the scriptures; and that it is an image frequently used in the classics: as ῥεῖ δὲ γάλακτι πέδον,

ῥεῖ δ' οὖφ, ῥεῖ δὲ μελισσῶν

Νέκταρι.

Eurip. Bacch. 142.

—the glory of all lands.—The construction of this line may be, היא [הדרבה]. This [circumstance of flowing with milk and honey] is a

them, Cast ye away every man the abominations of his glory to all lands. But the rendering of V. "quæ est egregia inter omnes terras," is a probable one, and founded in truth. "That land is the glory." Seeker. "Judææ uber solum. Exuberant fruges nostrum ad morem." Tac. hist. v. §. vi. Commentators understand fruges of corn, wine, and olives. "Non minor loci ejus apricitatis quam ubertatis admiratio est," says Justin of the valley of Jericho. L. xxxvi. c. iii. Josephus represents Galilee as wholly under culture, and everywhere fruitful; as throughout abounding in pastures, planted with all kinds of trees, and inciting by the good quality of the land those who are least disposed to the labour of tillage. He describes Perea as for the most part barren and rough, and too churlish for the growth of cultivated fruits: but adds that, where there is soil, it bears every thing; that the plains are planted with various trees; and that it is chiefly prepared for the produce of the olive, the vine, and the palm-tree. He observes that the nature of Samaria differs in nothing from that of Judea, that both have mountains and plains, have soil for agriculture, bear much, are planted with trees, and are full of wild and of cultivated fruits. B. J. L. iii. c. iii. Again, B. J. L. vi. c. i. §. 1. we find that, when the Romans besieged Jerusalem, they laid bare a country round about that city ninety stadia in circuit, which had been before adorned with trees and gardens. See Numb. xiii. 27. Dent. viii. 7, 8, 9. 1 Kings v. 11. 2 Kings xviii. 32. Pietro della Valle in Shaw's travels, 4°. p. 337. That the mountains were cultivated is plain. See ps. lxxii. 16. Isai. v. 1. vii. 25.

Juvat Ismara Baccho

Conserere, atque olea magnum vestire Tabernum.

Virg. G. ii. 37.

"We were drawn up the Rhine by horses. The grapes grow on the brant rocks so wonderfully, that ye will marvel how men dare climb up to them; and yet so plentifully, that it is not only a marvel where men be found to labour it, but also where men dwell that drink it." Ascham's letters. 4°. p. 372. How some of the mountains were cultivated we learn from Maundrell. "Their manner was to gather up the stones, and place them in several lines along the sides of the hills, in form of a wall. By such borders they supported the mould from tumbling, or being washed down; and formed many beds of excellent soil, rising gradually one above another from the bottom to the top of the mountains. Of this form of culture you see evident footsteps, wherever you go in all the mountains of Palestine." p. 65. 8vo. Oxford. 1740.

7. —the abominations of his eyes.—His idols. See c. xviii. 6.

- eyes, and pollute not yourselves with the idols of Egypt:
- 8 I am Jehovah your God. But they rebelled against me, and would not hearken unto me: they did not every man cast away the abominations of their eyes, neither did they forsake the idols of Egypt. Then I said that I would pour out my fury upon them, that I would accomplish mine anger against them, in the midst of the land of
- 9 Egypt. But I acted for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted in the sight of the nations in the midst of whom they were; in whose sight I was known unto them, in bringing them forth out of the land of Egypt.
- 10 And I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, and
- 11 * led them into the desert. And I gave them my statutes, and my judgments I made known unto them; † which if
- 12 a man do, he shall even live by them. Moreover also I ‡ gave them my sabbaths, that they might be || a sign

* H. brought them, or, caused them to enter.

† H. the man that doeth them shall, &c.

‡ Or, appointed.

|| H. for a sign.

8. —neither did they forsake &c.—The fact, that the Israelites were idolaters in the land of Egypt, and God's exhortation to them v. 7, are not recorded in the books of Moses. But it may be collected, from their proneness to idolatry in the desert, that they had learnt it from the Egyptians. See Houbigant, and c. xxiii. 3, 8. Josh. xxiv. 14.

—I said.—I threatened.

9. But I acted.—See the full phrase v. 44: “I acted or dealt, אָחַז, with them.” Syr. reads אָחַז I spared, here and v. 14, 22.

VV. 10—17. The forefathers of the Israelites were rebellious in the desert; but God spared them, yet did not bring that generation into the promised land.

11. —live by them.—Lev. xviii. 5. Enjoy a long life, and every temporal blessing. Eternal life, though not promised, would also have been the lot of the true Israelite.

12. —sabbaths.—Not only the seventh day, but other solemn days of rest.

—a sign.—A mark of distinction to mankind that I was their Creator and God, and they my creatures and people; and a memorial to themselves, which might constantly suggest to them that they were set

- between me * and them; that they might know that I 13 Jehovah sanctified them. But the house of Israel rebelled against me in the desert: they walked not in my statutes, and my judgments they despised, † which if a man do, he shall even live by them; and my sabbaths they greatly polluted. Then I said that I would pour out my fury upon them in the desert, that I would consume them.
 14 But I acted for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted in the sight of the nations in whose sight I 15 brought them forth. Yet ‡ I lifted up mine hand unto them in the desert, that I would not bring them unto the land which I had given them, flowing with milk and 16 honey, || which is the glory of all lands: because they despised my judgments; and my statutes, they walked not in them; and my sabbaths they [greatly] polluted:
 17 for their heart went after their idols. Nevertheless mine eye spared them, that I did not destroy them; neither did I make a full end of them in the desert.
 18 But I said unto their sons in the desert; Walk not in the statutes of your fathers, neither keep their judg-

* H. between them.† H. the man that doeth them, &c.‡ Or, I swear.|| H. this is.

apart by me to be a holy and peculiar nation. Exod. xxxi. 13. See Spencer. i. v. vii. p. 65. J. Mede. Disc. xv.

13. The verse is read thus in ó. MS. A. ed. Ald. Arab. and MS. Copt. "And I said unto the house of Israel in the desert; Walk in my statutes, and keep my judgments and do them, which if a man do, he shall even live by them." &c. This is very agreeable to the prophet's manner. Observe how v. 8, and v. 21, are introduced.

15. —given them.—Add לָהֶם, to them V. ó. Ar. Syr. 1 MS. Houb.

16. —they [greatly] polluted.—Syr. 5 MSS. and 2 editions add מְאֵד.

17. —a full end of them.—אֶתֵּם MSS. and edd. "consummationem cum eis."

VV. 18—22. Notwithstanding God's admonitions and forbearance, the sons of that rebellious race were also rebellious: and yet God extended his mercy to them.

- 19 ments, nor pollute yourselves with their idols. I am
 Jehovah your God: walk in my statutes, and keep my 20 judgments and do them; and hallow my sabbaths, and let them be a sign between me * and you, that ye may 21 know that I am Jehovah your God. But the sons rebelled against me: they walked not in my statutes, neither kept they my judgments to do them; which if a man do, he shall even live by them: and my sabbaths they polluted. Then I said that I would pour out my fury upon them, that I would accomplish mine anger 22 against them in the desert. Nevertheless I † withdrew mine hand, and acted for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted in the sight of the nations, in whose sight
 I brought them forth.
- 23 Moreover [also] I ‡ lifted up mine hand unto them in the desert, that I would scatter them through the nations, and that I would disperse them through the countries; 24 because they had not executed my judgments, but had despised my statutes, and had polluted my sabbaths, and 25 their eyes had been after their fathers' idols. Moreover also I gave unto them statutes that were not good, and * H. and between you.† Or, turned back.‡ Or, swore unto them.

21. —and my sabbaths.— $\text{נשׁוּב}$  MSS. edd. and all the ancients.

IV. 23—26. But though God spared them, yet he foretold that at length his people should be led into captivity for their idolatries; and, in consequence of their guilt, he gave them up to a reprobate mind and to deserved punishment.

23. Moreover [also].—Nine MSS. and 3 edd. read  $\text{נשׁוּב}$ . See rr. 15, 25. Compare ps. cvi. 26, 27.

25. —I gave unto them statutes &c.—I permitted them to observe statutes, or idolatrous rites, of an evil and execrable nature. See a like  $\text{λιτότης}$  Prov. xvi. 29. xvii. 26. xx. 23. xxviii. 21. c. xviii. 18. c. xxxvi. 31. Rom. i. 28. So Horace; relicta non bene parmula.

- 26 judgments by which they should not live : and I polluted them in their * gifts, in that they caused to pass through the fire all that openeth the womb, that I might make them desolate ; to the end that they might know that I am Jehovah.
- 27 Therefore speak unto the house of Israel, O son of man, and say unto them ; Thus saith the Lord Jehovah : Moreover in this your fathers dishonoured me, in that
- 28 they † grievously trespassed against me : for when I brought them into the land, concerning which ‡ I lifted up mine hand that I would give it unto them ; then they

* Or, offerings.

† H. trespassed a trespass.

‡ Or, I sware.

Οἱ δεινὰ καπόθητα πείσσεσθαι ποτε

Μέλλοντες.

Lycophr. 540.

Καὶ τὸ τέλος σφι ἐγένετο ἄχαρι.

Herod. Ur. 13.

Tristique palus inamabilis unda

Alligat.

Virg. See Toup. Epist. crit. 82.

In like manner Milton :

“Such resting had the sole

Of unblest feet.”

Par. Lost : i. 237.

—by which they should not live.—Whoever observed the statutes of Moses lived by them. v. 11, 13, 21. Therefore the law of Moses is not meant in this place : but such practices as are mentioned in the following verse.

26. —I polluted them.—I suffered them to pollute themselves by their sacrifices to idols.

—that I might make them desolate.—The consequence of which was, that they would be exposed to my anger, and at length would acknowledge my hand in the judgments inflicted on them.

XX. 27—31. God reminds those who consulted him of the idolatries committed by their fathers on every high hill, and under every green tree. He expostulates with them on this account, and because they polluted themselves in like manner ; and refuses to answer them.

27. —dishonoured me.—נָכַח “to treat contumeliously by words or deeds.” Tayl. conc. suppl. Cocceii lex.

saw every high hill, and every thick tree; and there they * offered their sacrifices, and there they presented † their provoking oblation, and there they placed ‡ their sweet savour, and there they poured out their drink-offerings.

29 Then I said unto them, What is || the high place whereunto ye § go? [Nevertheless, the name thereof is called Bama, [that is, the high place,] unto this day.]

30 Therefore say unto the house of Israel; Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Are ye polluted ** after the manner of your fathers? And do ye commit fornication †† after their 31 abominations? And, in that ye offer your gifts, in that ye make your sons to pass through the fire, are ye polluted with all your idols unto this day? And shall I be enquired of by you, O house of Israel? As I live, saith the Lord Jehovah, †† I will not be enquired of by you.

* H. sacrificed.

† H. the provocation of their oblation.

‡ H. the savour of their rests.

|| H. Bama.

§ H. are coming.

** H. in the way.

†† Or, according to.

†† H. if I will be inquired of.

28. —poured out their drink-offerings.—The Hebrew phrase is expressed in V. ó. libaverunt libationes suas: ἔσπεισαν τὰς σπονδὰς αὐτῶν.

29. Then I said unto them &c.—אֵלֶיֶם MSS. edd. “What is this idolatrous high place, to which ye go rather than to my sanctuary? And yet, notwithstanding my reproof, the name continues, and the practice, unto this day.” But it may be doubted whether the six last words of this verse have not been taken into the text from the margin, where they anciently stood as a note. “All the old versions have this verse, which yet seems out of its place here. If the verse should stand, it relates to something not to be explained now.” Secker.

30. —Are ye polluted.—Or, Are ye not polluted? See Mr. Lowth on v. 4.

—after the manner.—הַכְּדֶרֶךְ 1 MS. “according to the way.”

31. —your sons.—One MS. and 2 edd. read וּבְנֵיהֶם “and your daughters.”

31. —unto this day.—Six MSS. and 1 in the margin add הַיּוֹם “this day.”

32 And that which cometh into your mind shall * not be at all; that ye say, We will be as the nations, as the families 33 of the countries, † serving wood and stone. As I live, saith the Lord Jehovah, surely with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out will I 34 reign over you. And I will bring you forth from the ‡ people, and I will assemble you from the countries, wherein ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with a 35 stretched out arm, and with fury poured out. And I will bring you into the desert of the || people, and there § will 36 I plead with you face to face. Like as I pleaded with your fathers in the desert [when I brought them out] of the land of Egypt; so will I plead with you, saith the 37 Lord Jehovah: And I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you under the chastisement of the 38 covenant. I will also purge out from among you the rebels, and the transgressors against me; I will bring

* H. in being shall not be.

‡ H. peoples.

† H. in serving.

|| H. peoples.

§ H. Or, contend in judgment.

IV. 32—38. The Israelites shall continue the people of Jehovah. He will shew himself their God by punishing them. After their captivity, they shall be restored to their land. But the most rebellious shall be destroyed.

35. —the desert.—Between Judea and Babylon, through which ye shall pass into captivity. But some think that the barren lands, in which the Babylonians planted these captives, are meant. “The desert of the people is the desert in the neighbourhood of the Chaldeans and of other nations.” Michaelis.

—plead with you.—Punish you in the face of the world, and fill you with conviction that my punishments are just.

36. —the desert.—After this word ó. MS. Alex. ed. Ald. and Arab. add when I brought them out בְּהוֹצִיאָם מִן. Hallet. iii. 16.

37. —the rod.—Of punishment; and will bring you under the chastisement due to you for breaking my covenant. But there may be an allusion to the custom of numbering flocks and herds by striking them with a rod; and of thus severing some for preservation, and some for slaughter. See Lev. xxvii. 32: and Mr. Lowth.

them forth out of the country * where they sojourn, but they shall not enter into the land of Israel: and ye shall know that I am Jehovah.

- 39 And as for you, O house of Israel, thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Go ye, serve ye every one his idols: yet hereafter ye shall surely hearken unto me, and ye shall not pollute mine holy name any more with your † gifts and 40 with your idols. For in mine holy mountain, in ‡ a lofty mountain of Israel, saith the Lord Jehovah, there shall all the house of Israel serve me, even all of them, in the land: there will I accept them: and there will I require your heave-offerings, and the first-fruits of your presents, in all

* H. of their sojournings.

† Or, offerings.

‡ H. a mountain of loftiness.

38. —but they shall not enter.—יבואו, or יבאו, MSS. V. ó. Ar. Syr. Chald. Houb.

I think that those are referred to, who, after the murder of Gedaliah, went into Egypt, called here the land of their sojourning. Some of these were to be carried into Chaldea with the captive Egyptians: Jer. xliii. 11: though the greater part were to be consumed: Jer. xlv. 12. Some of the obstinately rebellious Jews might also sojourn in other neighbouring countries subdued by Nebuchadnezzar, as Edom, Moab, Ammon, Tyre, &c. and might thence be taken into captivity.

The small number who returned from Egypt into Judea were righteous men; and not such as are here called rebels and transgressors.

VV. 39—44. In allusion to v. 32, God foretels that, however idolatrous the Israelites were at present, at their restoration they should all of them serve him, with remorse for their past transgressions, and with acknowledgements of his power and merey.

39. —Go ye, serve ye &c.—Go at present, and serve your idols; persist in your idolatries, agreeably to the stubbornness of your hearts. An indignant concession. Hallet, vol. iii. 16, prefers the reading of ó. ἐξάπαρε, העבירו, cast away, for עבדו, serve.

—surely.—The original is equivalent to אֵם לֹא אֶתֵּם. I am not a God of truth if ye shall not hearken unto me, and if ye shall not pollute &c.

40. —serve me.—יעבדוני MSS.

—even all of them.—בְּלֹו 3 MSS. and 2 in the marg.

It is obvious to conjecture בְּלֹם. Either of these readings is satisfac-

- 41 your holy * things. In your sweet savour I will accept you, when I bring you forth from the † people, and when I assemble you from the countries, wherein ye have been scattered; and I will be sanctified because of you in the sight of all the nations. And ye shall know that I am Jehovah, when I shall bring you into the land of Israel, into the country concerning which I ‡ lifted up mine hand that I would give it to your fathers. And there shall ye remember your ways, and all your doings wherein ye have been defiled; and ye shall loathe || yourselves for all your evils which ye have committed. And ye shall know that I am Jehovah, when I deal with you for my name's sake; not according to your evil ways, nor according to your corrupt doings, O ye house of Israel, saith the Lord Jehovah.

- 45 THE word of Jehovah came also unto me, saying:
 46 Son of man, set thy face toward the way of the south, and drop thy word against the south, and prophesy against 47 the forest of the south field; and say to the forest of the

* Or, offerings.

† H. peoples.

‡ Or, I swear.

|| H. your faces.

---

tory. All of the house of Israel that are restored shall serve me in Jerusalem. There shall be no separation of tribes, no calves in Dan and Bethel. 40, 41. We may point thus: "and the first fruits of your presents. In all your holy things, in your sweet savour, I will accept you."

41. —because of you.—The nations shall consider me as a great and holy God, when they observe my deliverance of you and your obedience to me.

43. —ye shall loathe yourselves.—See c. vi. 9.

44. —deal with you.—See c. xxii. 14.

46. —forest of the south.—Ezekiel was in the northern part of Chaldea; and therefore Judea was to the south of him. Secker supposes that a city is called a forest rather from its inhabitants than its buildings. In this v. there are three Hebrew words for the south; which are rendered in V. by Auster, Africus, and ager meridianus.

south, Hear the word of Jehovah : Thus saith the Lord Jehovah :

Lo, I will kindle in thee a fire, and it shall devour in thee every green tree, and every dry tree : the * flaming flame shall not be quenched, and all faces shall be burnt 48 therein from the south to the north. And all flesh shall see that I Jehovah have kindled it : it shall not be 49 quenched. Then said I : Ah, Lord Jehovah ! they say † of me, Doth he not speak parables ?

* H. flame of flaming.

† Or, unto.

47. — every green tree &c. — The righteous and the wicked. C. xxi. 3. Luke xxiii. 31. Many of these two classes were alike to be led into captivity ; though in other respects a great difference was made between them. See Bp. Lowth on Isai. ix. 17.

— the flaming flame. — Flamma succensionis. V. rightly. שִׁלְהַבֵּת is a substantive. Job. xv. 30. Cantic. viii. 6.

— from the south to the north. — “ The length of Jerusalem extended itself from south to north.” Michaelis.

48. — it shall not be quenched. — אֵשׁ וְיִשְׁכָּח וּ and it &c. 6 MS. A. Ar. Syr. 1 MS. 1 ed.

Devoted kingdoms are elsewhere represented under the image of a forest, which God threatened to burn or cut down. See Isai. x. 18, 34. Jer. xxi. 14. xxii. 7. xlv. 23. Zech. xi. 2. See also Isai. xxxvii. 24.

49. — Doth he not speak parables ? — Hence we learn that Ezekiel’s parabolical manner had been objected to him. God therefore commands him, c. xxi, to utter plainly what, v. 47, 48, he was here instructed to deliver parabolically.

CHAPTER XXI.

- 1 ALSO the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying :
 2 Son of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, and drop thy word against the holy places, and prophesy against 3 the land of Israel ; and say unto the land of Israel, Thus saith [the Lord] Jehovah :
 Lo, I am against thee, and will draw forth my sword out of its sheath, and will cut off from thee the righteous 4 and the wicked. Seeing then that I cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked, therefore shall my sword go forth out of its sheath against all flesh from the south 5 to the north. And all flesh shall know that I Jehovah have drawn forth my sword out of its sheath : it shall not 6 return any more. Thou therefore, O son of man, sigh ;

In this chapter, as in c. vii, we have an instance of Ezekiel's forcible and animated manner.

2. — Jerusalem—the holy places—the land of Israel.—These expressions correspond to the three Hebrew words which denote the south, c. xx. 46.

—the holy places.—Three MSS. read מקדשם, their sanctuary, with ó. Ar. Syr. Two MSS. read מקדשי my sanctuary. But see ps. lxxviii. 35, and five or six other passages in the concordances. Different divisions of the temple were holy in different degrees.

3. Jehovah.—ó. MS. Al. Syr. V. 16 MSS. 2 edd. supply אדני “the Lord Jehovah.”

4. —the righteous and the wicked.—A plain reference to the green and dry tree, c. xx. 47 : on which see the note.

—from the south to the north.—See these words c. xx. 47. Four MSS. and perhaps two more, read צפונה.

5. —all flesh &c.—Parallel to the beginning of c. xx. 48.

—it shall not return.—Into its scabbard. So, c. xx. 48, the fire was not to be quenched. One MS. ó. MS. Al. Syr. read וְלֹא, “and it shall not return.”

with the breaking of thy loins, and with bitterness, shalt 7 thou sigh before their eyes. And it shall be, when they shall say unto thee, Wherefore sighest thou? that thou shalt say, For the * rumour, because it cometh: and every heart shall melt, and all hands shall be feeble, and every spirit shall fail, and all knees shall flow with water:
 lo, it cometh, and shall be brought to pass, saith the Lord
 Jehovah.

8 ALSO the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying:

9 Son of man, prophesy, and say, Thus saith [the Lord]
 Jehovah: Say, A sword, a sword is sharpened, and also 10 † furbished. It is sharpened that it may ‡ make a sore slaughter, it is || furbished that § it may glitter: alas! the sceptre of my son is destroyed: it despiseth every tree.

* Or, report.

‡ H. slay a slaughter.

† Or, brightened.

|| Or, brightened.

§ H. that there may be a glittering to it.

6. —with the breaking of thy loins.—Ut latera dirumpas. Houb.
 See Isai. 21. 3. Invidiâ rumpantur ut ilia Codro. Virg.

7. —the rumour.—See c. vii. 26.

—shall melt.—See ps. cvii. 26.

—and all hands &c.—See c. vii. 17.

—shall fail.—See Isai. xlii. 4. lxi. 3.

—all knees &c.—See c. vii. 17.

9. —the Lord Jehovah.—אֲדֹנָי is added in MSS. edd. V. ó. MS. Al.
 Ar. Syr. Chald.

10. —it is furbished.—מְרוֹטָה, 3 MSS. as v. 9: though more MSS.
 read מורטתה in Pyhal.

—alas! &c.—The text is plainly corrupt. For או, if there be no such particle of exclamation or admiration, we may read אוי or אה.
 נשש in Syr. is debilitatus, infirmatus est. Cast. lex. See also נסס
 נשם, from שסס, Hebr. is direptus, spoliatus est. Houbigant reads ונתנשיש et dejiciet, from the Syr. נשש. Dathius renders ut dejiciat; and thinks that the ancient interpreters read a word derived from נשש or נסס, either of which, according to him, signifies in Arab. debilitari, infirmari. See נסס, sign. 14. Cast. lex. Observe that in Chald. נסיס is perturbatus, and the substantive perturbatio, afflictio.

As ó. render או נשיש eis parályssu, and Syr. למרתעו, ad exagitan-

- 11 And it is given to be * furbished that it may be † handled ; this sword is sharpened, and it is furbished, to give it 12 into the hand of the slayer. Cry and howl, son of man ; for this cometh to pass among my people, this cometh to pass among all the princes of Israel : terrors by reason of the sword are among my people : therefore smite upon

* Or, brightened.

† H. holden in the palm of the hand.

dum, luxandum, elevandum, efferendum, Cast. lex. it is probable that the former read a substantive with ל, as למשכה ad direptionem ; and the latter a verb with ל, as לנהוש ad extirpandum, destruendum, or לשאת ad auferendum.

Vulg. renders, qui moves sceptrum filii mei, succidisti omne lignum : which Capellus understands of Nebuchadnezzar, who took away the sceptre and overturned the kingdom. If the participle נושא were equivalent to תומך, I would read it in the text on this authority, and render the Hebrew, “O thou that swayest the sceptre of my son, it [the sword] despiseth every tree.” One MS. reads נשיא, and the latter ש in נשיא is on a rasure in two MSS. According to this MS. the rendering may be, “Alas ! for the prince, for the sceptre of my son.”

—the sceptre.—This seems the true rendering, rather than the tribe ; on account of the following clause, and of c. xix. 11.

—of my son.—See the people of God so called, Exod. iv. 22, 3. Hos. xi. 1. The Hebrew may be so pointed as to admit of rendering my sons.

—it despiseth.—Easily felling it. מואסת, 14 MSS. See also MSS. v. 13.

11. And it is given.—Et dedit quis eum, i. e. datus est gladius. But V. Houb. ואתן “And I have given.”

—to be furbished.—The Hebrew may signify by a different punctuation, ad expoliendum eum, ut expoliat quis eum ; the affix being added to the infinitive mood.

—this sword.—חרב is omitted in 1 MS. and it seems a marginal note, supplying the noun which governs היא.

12. —for this cometh to pass.—Understanding הרברה. But חרב may be supplied : “For it falleth upon my people, it falleth upon all the princes of Israel.”

—among my people.—For את, with, 2 MSS. and 1 ed. read אל upon. The true reading of the whole clause seems to be,

מגורי חרב היו את [אל] עמי

- 13 thy thigh. * For it is tried: and what if it also despise the sceptre? It shall not remain, saith the Lord Jehovah.
 14 Thou therefore, son of man, prophesy, and smite thine † hands together; and ‡ bring the sword twice, yea, bring it thrice: it is the sword of the slain; the sword of great 15 slaughter; it entereth into their chambers. That their

* Or, For there hath been a trial of † H. the palm of the hand to the palm of the hand.
 it.

‡ H. double the sword, yea treble it.

Or, "מגורי" may have been written for מנורי, if we read אל-חרב. But see c. xxxii. 15, יושבי בה; whence a question may arise whether מגורי may not be in statu constructo before אל-חרב.

—smite &c.—See Jer. xxxi. 19. 'M. 162. 'O. 113, 397. 'H. 124. Here the action is expressive of grief.

13. —For it is tried.—Οτι ἡπεινήσεν. Aq. Quia probavit quis eum gladium. Or בוחן, (for so 5 MSS write it here, and 10 MSS. Isai. xxviii. 16) may be a substantive: Quia probatio fuit. The sense may be: For the firmness of the sword has been proved: and what if it destroy not only the common branches, but even the rod of the sceptre? [v. 10. c. xix. 11.] Will not this be just vengeance? It [the sceptre] shall not remain. The regal succession shall end in Zedekiah.

V. reads ולא יהיה "and it remain not." Houbigant proposes ואם כי בחונה "Quippe hic probatus fuit, et sceptrum, cum ei non pepercerit, non erit amplius." Dathius prefers אם כי בחונה, agreeably to ó. MS. Al. "Immo tunc gladius iste operam suam mihi probaverit, si virgam illam ita everterit ut non amplius extet."

14. —smite thine hands.—A sign of grief, c. vi. 11: of rage, Numb. xxiv. 10: of astonishment, c. xxii. 13: but many think it here, and v. 17, a gesture of encouragement to the victorious Chaldeans.

—and bring the sword &c.—I render ותכפל, "et duplicabis." Two MSS. read שלשתה, and V. Syr. supply the connexive particle. If therefore we read ושלשתה, "et triplicabis eum," the sense will be clear.

—slaughter.—I suppose with Houbigant that חלל is occisio, a substantive omitted in lexicons.

—it entereth into their chambers.—"Conclavia penetrans eis;" or, as 12 or 14 MSS. and 1 ed. read, לכם vobis. I think this more elegant than החדרת, the reading of one MS. even if this word could signify in Kal terrens, terrorem afferens, as Houbigant renders it, and were used heart may melt, and their overthrown may be multiplied,

 I have set * the terror of the sword against all their gates.
 Ah! thou that art prepared for glittering, that art fur-16 bished for slaughter, get thee different ways, go to the right hand, go to the left hand, whithersoever thine edge

* Or, the terrible sword.

with ל. If we follow the ancients in reading a word which expresses the notion of fear, החרדות seems preferable: trepidationum eis.

The sword is to be brought thrice; and three clauses describing the sword follow.

15. —may melt.—Perhaps מונג, or מונג. See Syr. and ó. MS. Al. ὅπως θραυσθήσεται πάντα καρδία, כל לב.

—their overthrown.—Pointing the word as Jer. xviii. 23.

—the terror of the sword.—Exterminium gladii; the wasting sword. See Cast. lex. Mucronem gladii. Houb. Potestatem gladii. De Dieu: from אבח Æth. potestatem dare. טבחה the slaughter, ó. טבחי slayers. Chald. בעת or בעות conturbationem. Vulg. See Dathius.

—that art furbished.—One MS. reads מרוטה, F. מערה, i.e. מוערה, “set, appointed:” from יער. Dathius observes that עטה Arab. is manu prehendit, and מעט Arab. glabrum, lævem esse.

16. —get thee different ways.—התאחר 1 MS. and perhaps 3 more, in Kennicott's collations; 3 MSS. and 1 originally, in De Rossi's; from אחר alius: which seems an elegant verb. Διαπορεύων, ó. MS. Al. הבער nuda te, seems the reading of Chald. who renders unsheath thyself. V. and ó. render ὀξύνων, from חדר in Hithpael; for in this version, and in Arab. we have two renderings of the same Hebrew word. This is likewise the rendering of Syrus Hexaplaris, as De Rossi observes. Dathius follows Syr. strenue age; and observes that אחר Arab. in the seventh and eighth conjugations signifies unitus fuit, in unum coaduit.

—go to the left hand.—השימי is wanting in one MS. I suspect that this word is an imperfect writing of השמילי, inserted in some ancient MS. and not expunged for fear of deforming the copy. But it is difficult to assert that “dextrorsum-vade, pone te” may not be an Hebraism for “pone te ut dextrorsum vadas:” as שוב, with a verb, expresses a repeated action. Two MSS. have השמי, which may be rendered lay waste. Chald. understands the right hand and the left of south and north. See on c. xvi. 46.

—thine edge.—F. פיותיך thine edges; with which מערות, or 17 is set. I will also smite mine * hands together, and I will cause my fury to rest upon thee. I Jehovah have spoken it.

18 MOREOVER the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying:

19 Also thou, son of man, appoint thee two ways by which the sword of the king of Babylon may come: from one country both of them shall go forth: and choose thou † a

20 place, choose it at the head of a way to the city: thou shalt appoint a way by which the sword may come † towards Rabbah of the sons of Ammon, and || towards

21 Judah, against Jerusalem the fenced city. For the king of Babylon stood at the § parting of the way, at the head of two ways: to ** use divination, he mingled his arrows, * H. the palm of mine hand to the palm of mine hand.

† Or, a tract.

** H. divine.

‡ Or, against.

|| Or, against.

§ H. mother.

מוערות as MSS. and edd. read, may agree. Houbigant proposes העמרת as 2 Kings viii. 11: firmasti faciem tuam.

17. —smite mine hands.—See on v. 14.

—to rest upon thee.—ó. Ar. 1 MS. supply בך. See c. xxiv. 13. The weight of my fury shall fall and rest on thee.

19. —appoint thee.—So as to represent them to the eyes of thy countrymen. See c. iv. 1. “Designa in tabella, lapide, aut terra.” Vatablus.

—shall go forth—They shall be two branches of the road which the king of Babylon took from his own country.

—choose thou.—I think that we should read ברה twice.

—a place.—See יר Tayl. conc. xiv.

—to the city.—Jerusalem. But ó. ed. Rom. omit the former ברה, and for the latter ברה read בראש: which suggests this rendering; Et tractum in capite viæ urbis, in capite viæ pones. Secker prefers this reading: but renders יר jaculare, vel sortes projice, from Joel iii. 3.

20. —against Jerusalem.—וירושלם 3 or 4 MSS. ó. Ar. Syr. and Jerusalem; represented as strongly fortified, in which she prided herself.

21. —stood.—יעמד shall stand, ó. Ar. But the action may have taken place soon before this revelation to the prophet. See c. xxiv. 1, 2.

—he mingled his arrows.—This is the rendering of V which Pocock

- 22 he consulted with images, he looked in the liver. Towards his right hand * fell the divination against Jerusalem; to set battering-rams, to open the mouth in slaughter, to lift up the voice in shouting, to set battering-rams against the
- 23 gates, to † cast up a mount, to build a tower. But it shall be unto them as ‡ a vain divination in their sight,

* H. was. † H. pour out.
‡ H. a divination of vanity.

prefers. See Mr. Lowth. Houbigant adopts miscere, but also suggests succutere, and refers to Jer. iv. 24. קלקל Arab. is commovit, perturbavit. "Not much different was βελομαντεία, in which divination was made by arrows shaken together in a quiver." Potter's Arch. Græc. V. i. L. ii. c. xvi. "Seven divining arrows were kept at the temple of Mecca; but generally in divination the idolatrous Arabs made use of three only; on one of which was written, My Lord hath commanded me, on another, My Lord hath forbidden me, and the third was blank. If the first was drawn, they looked on it as an approbation of the enterprise in question; if the second, they made a contrary conclusion; but if the third happened to be drawn, they mixed them, and drew over again, till a decisive answer was given by one of the others." Sale's Koran. Prel. 126. Pocock, spec. hist. Arab. p. 329, is referred to by Mr. Lowth as treating fully of this mode of divination. See on Hos. iv. 12.

—images.—Teraphim were idols of the human form. See on Hos. iii. 4.

22. Towards his right hand.—מִיְמִינוֹ 2 MSS.

—against Jerusalem.—בִּירוּשָׁלַם 2 MSS. and in all the ancients we find a preposition: which indeed only expresses the force of the genitive case, as it now stands in the original text. "Caditque in dextera ejus omen Jerusalem." Houb. "Divinationes ejus indicant versus dextram pergendum esse, versus Jerusalem." Dathius. "In dexteram ejus erat divinatio cadens ad declinandum ad Jerusalem." Chald. Supposing the face towards the east, the southern branch of the two roads, which was towards the right hand, led to Jerusalem: for this city lay to the south of Rabbah. "You must represent Nebuchadnezzar as coming from Dan, and marching along the Jordan. Here Rabbah was situated at the left hand, and Jerusalem at the right." Michaelis.

—in slaughter.—בְּצֶרֶחַ in a loud cry, ó. Houb.

—to build.—וּלְבִנוֹת, and to build, MSS. edd. ó. Ar. Syr. Ch.

23. But &c.—בְּקֶסֶם MSS. But this process shall be unto the Jews, when some of their friends behold it and report it at Jerusalem, as a

- even* to them who had sworn oaths unto them: but he calleth to remembrance their iniquity, that they may be
- 24 taken. Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Because your iniquity is * remembered, in that your transgressions are discovered, † so that your sins appear in all your doings; even because ye are remembered, ye shall be taken with the hand.
- 25 And thou, prophane wicked prince of Israel, whose day is come, in the time of the punishment of iniquity, even
- 26 in the end thereof; thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Remove the diadem, and take off the crown: hath not this, even
- 27 this, abased the exalted, and exalted the abased? I will overturn, overturn, overturn it: moreover this shall not deceitful lot, such as the event would not verify: it shall even appear so to the Jews who had sworn false oaths to the Chaldeans, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 13, and ought therefore to have expected the divine vengeance: [read נִשְׁבַּעִי] But he, Nebuchadnezzar, is mindful of their perjury; and gladly turns his army first against them, to revenge himself on them. “וְהָיָה. Καὶ αὐτὸς ὁ. וְהָיָה, ut postea. Ὡς μαντεύόμενος. ὁ. V. בְּקוֹסֶם. Reete, ni fallor.” Seeker.

* H. remembered unto you. † H. to the end that your sins may appear.

24. —is remembered.—The Hebrew word should be pointed as in the inf. Niphal.

—in all.—וְכָל, and all, Syr. 2 MSS. originally.

25. —prince.—Zedekiah.

—of iniquity.—See this clause repeated c. xxxv. 5; where ὁ. render ἐν καιρῷ ἀδικίας, ἐπ’ ἐσχάτων. See also v. 29.

26. —diadem.—The original word is often used for the priestly mitre. See Chald.

—this.—מִלְכָּה, this kingdom of Babylon. See c. 27.

—abased.—הִשְׁפִּילָה i. e. הִשְׁפִּילָה.

—and exalted.—I read וְתִנְּבָה. See ὁ. The following word is read הִשְׁפִּיל in MSS. For the sense here given, see Vulg.

27. I will overturn.—The literal rendering is, An overturning, an overturning, an overturning I will set it. See יָרָה Isai. xxiv. 1.

—this.—This kingdom of Judah.

be any more, until he come whose right it is, and I shall give it him.

28 And thou, son of man, prophesy, and say :

Thus saith the Lord Jehovah concerning the sons of Ammon, and concerning their reproach.

Then shalt thou say :

O sword, O sword, thou art drawn * to slay, thou art
 29 furbished to consume because of thy glittering: while they see vanity † concerning thee, while they divine falsehood ‡ concerning thee; that I may bring thee upon the necks of them that are slain of the wicked, whose day is come in the time of the punishment of their iniquity,
 30 even in the end thereof. Hath he caused it to return into its sheath? In the place where thou wast || created, in 31 the land of thine origin, I will judge thee: and I will

* Or, for slaughter

† Or, for.

‡ Or, for.

|| Or, born.

—until he come.—Zerubbabel, the restorer of the Jews; or rather the Messiah, who is their king, Luke i. 32, 33, and under whose dispensation their kingdom will be re-established with great splendour. See on Hos. iii. 5. Secker compares whose right it is, ᾧ καθήκει, ὁ. with Shiloh, ᾧ ἀπόκειται, ὁ. Gen. xlix. 10. See also Theol. repos. iii. 254.

28. —the sons of Ammon.—Why these are mentioned, see v. 20. See on Amos i. 13—15.

—their reproach.—Which they should sustain in being conquered by Nebuchadnezzar. See Jer. xxvii. 3, 6.

—to consume.—Houbigant reads להליל ad fulgendum; Dathius להאכיל ad consumendum. I prefer לאכול ad devorandum, consumendum; or, rather, as ὁ. read and perhaps Chald. לבלה ad consumptionem.

29. —they see.—The Ammonites.

—whose day &c.—See on v. 25.

30. —Hath he &c.—The king of Babylon; though he has now turned his march another way. No. In place &c. השב i. e. השיב.

—created.—Where thou, O Ammonite, becamest a nation.

—thine origin.—See on c. xvi. 3. The Ammonites were destroyed in their own country. The Jewish nation was sent into exile.

pour upon thee mine indignation, * in the fire of my wrath I will blow upon thee, and will deliver thee into 32 the hands of brutish men, † skilful to destroy. Thou shalt be for fuel to the fire; thy blood shall be in the midst of the land: thou shalt not be remembered: for I Jehovah have spoken it.

---

CHAPTER XXII.

1 MOREOVER the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying:
 2 Now thou, son of man, wilt thou not judge, wilt thou not judge ‡ the bloody city, and shew her all her abominations, and say? Thus saith [the Lord] Jehovah: The city sheddeth blood in the midst of her, that her time may come; and maketh idols || against herself, to defile herself. In thy blood which thou hast shed thou art become guilty, and in thine idols which thou hast made thou hast

* Or, in my fiery wrath.

† H. artificers of destruction.

‡ H. the city of bloods.

|| Or, within.

---

31. —in the fire of my wrath.—Hebr. x. 27. we have πυρὸς ζῆλος. See a like boldness of expression c. xxxvi. 5. Zeph. i. 18. iii. 8.

—blow upon thee.—To melt thee, as it were, in the furnace. See c. xxii. 20, 21.

32. —thou shalt not be remembered.—אָל 2 MSS. Syr. Ar. And thou &c. Compare c. xxv. 10. The Jewish people now subsist. The Ammonites are lost in the mass of mankind; and have been long forgotten.

2. —wilt thou not judge.—See c. xx. 4. There is no repetition of this verb in 2 MSS. ó. Ar. Syr. and it was not repeated in 2 MSS. originally.

3. The city.—O city, that &c. ó. Ar. Secker.

4. In thy blood.—בְּדַמְּךָ 2 MSS.

defiled thyself; and thou hast caused thy days to draw near, and hast brought on the time of thy years. Therefore have I made thee a reproach unto the nations, and a 5 mocking unto all countries. The countries that are near, and that are far from thee, shall mock thee, O thou
 6 * whose name is defiled, who art much troubled. Lo, the princes of Israel every one was in thee † with his arm, to 7 shed blood. In thee have they set light by father and mother: in the midst of thee have they dealt by violence with the stranger: in thee have they oppressed the
 8 fatherless and the widow. Mine holy things thou hast
 9 despised, and my sabbaths thou hast defiled. In thee have been men ‡ who dealt in slander to shed blood; and in thee have they eaten upon the mountains; in the 10 midst of thee have they committed presumptuous wickedness. In thee have they uncovered their father's nakedness, in thee have they humbled her that was polluted
 11 || in her separation. And one man hath committed abomination with his neighbour's wife; and another hath defiled his daughter-in-law, with presumptuous wickedness; and in thee another hath humbled his sister, his 12 father's daughter. In thee have they taken a reward to * H. defiled of name, much of trouble.

† Or, according to his power was in thee.

‡ H. men of slander.

|| H. of separation.

—and hast brought on the time of thy years.—וְהַבִּי־אָ. V. Houb. וְהַבִּי־אָ MSS. and edd. עַתָּה, the time, 2 MSS. 1 in the marg. and all the ancients. The time of vengeance is meant.

—unto the nations.—בְּגוֹיִם, among the nations. MSS. edd.

5. —whose name is defiled.—The construction in the Hebrew, polluta nominis, is the same as polluta separationis, v. 10.

6. —with his arm.—His uplifted arm of violence. But per suas quisque familias, Houb. and ó. Syr. render, “against his own seed, or, relations.”

10. —uncovered &c.—By defiling his wife.

—have they humbled.—עֲנָה 3 MSS. humiliavit quis. But עֲנָה Houbigant.

shed blood. Thou hast taken usury and encrease, and thou hast gained of thy neighbour by violence: and hast 13 forgotten me, saith the Lord Jehovah. Therefore, lo, I have smitten mine hands together at thy gain which thou hast made, and at thy * blood which hath been in the midst
 14 of thee. Shall thine heart endure, or shall thine hands be strong, in the days when I shall deal with thee? I
 15 Jehovah have spoken it, and will do it. I will even disperse thee among the nations, and will scatter thee in the countries, and will consume thy defilement out of 16 thee: and I will be profaned because of thee in the sight of all the nations; and thou shalt know that I am Jehovah.

17 MOREOVER the word of Jehovah came unto me,
 18 saying: Son of man, the house of Israel is become unto me as dross: all of them are as † brass, and tin, and iron,

* H. bloods which have been.

† Or, copper.

12. —blood.—"Innocent blood. Ch. One MS. reads נקי for נשך." Secker.

13. —smitten mine hands together.—With astonishment. See c. xxi. 14.

—and at thy blood.—וּשְׁלֹ, or שֶׁל, 4 MSS. דָּמִיךָ 4 MSS.

15. —consume.—As by fire dross is purged away. See Mr. Lowth, who refers to c. xxiii. 27.

16. And I will be profaned.—Suffer my name to be profaned for a time. C. xx. 9, 14. xxxvi. 21, 22. All the ancients read the verb in the first person: and 1 MS. originally read וְנִחַלְתִּי. Or, And thou shalt be polluted within thee, by being carried into captivity among the Chaldeans. Amos vii. 17. Isai. xlvii. 6. Houbigant reads בָּהּ. "Et mirabilem faciam immunditiam tuam præ te, [turpitudinem tuam divulgabo ultra quam speras,] et profana eris in ea [immunditia.]" Syr. renders from רָתַת, et exterrebo te, וּבְהִלְתִּיךָ: Chald. has et sanctificabor in te: וְנִכְבְּדַתִּי בְךָ.

18. —dross.—Grotius derives the word סִיג from סָוֵג abscedere, and extends its signification to every mixture which ought to be separated from precious metals; as the alloy of copper, tin, iron, or lead.

and lead, in the midst of the furnace: they are as the dross of silver.

- 19 Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Because ye are all of you become dross, therefore, lo, I will gather you 20 into the midst of Jerusalem. * As men gather silver, and † brass, and iron, and lead, and tin, into the midst of the furnace, to blow the fire upon it, to melt it; so will I gather you in mine anger, and in my fury, and I will
 21 blow upon you and will melt you: yea, I will collect you, and will blow upon you with the fire of my wrath, and ye 22 shall be melted in the midst thereof. As silver is melted in the midst of the furnace, so shall ye be melted in the midst thereof; and ye shall know that I Jehovah have poured out my fury upon you.

- 23 MOREOVER the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying:
 24 Son of man, say unto her; Thou art a land which is not watered with showers, nor rained upon, in the day of 25 indignation. There is a conspiracy of her prophets in * H. According to the gathering of.

† Or, copper.

—furnace.—Rather the crucible, or vessel in which metals were fused.

—dross of silver.—The construction requires סיגני.

19. —of Jerusalem.—Which shall be as the crucible.

20. As men gather.—The particle כ is understood here, as frequently, before the substantive קבוצה, congregatio.

—to melt it.—להנתך that it may be melted. 1 MS. ó. Syr.

—and I will blow upon you.—Houbigant reads והפחתי; the foregoing part of this verse requiring this word, as he justly observes.

21. —in the midst thereof.—Of Jerusalem, or, of the fire: but her, v. 24, 25, 26, inclines me to supply the former word. Compare ps. cxix. 119. Prov. xxv. 4. xxvi. 23. Isai. i. 22, 25. Jer. vi. 28—30.

24 —her.—Jerusalem: v. 19.

—watered with showers.—Houbigant reads מטרה, part. Pual, with ó. who render βρεχομένη.

25. —a conspiracy.—To do evil. ó. read אשר נשיאיה, whose

the midst of her: they are like a roaring lion * tearing the prey: they have devoured † souls; they have taken treasure and precious things: they have multiplied her 26 widows in the midst of her. Her priests have violated my law, and polluted my sanctuary: they have not distinguished between the holy and the polluted, neither have they made known the difference between the defiled and the clean; and from my sabbaths they have hidden
 27 their eyes, and I am profaned in the midst of them. Her princes in the midst of her are like wolves ‡ tearing the prey: they set themselves to shed blood, and to destroy
 28 || souls, that they may § get gain. And her prophets have daubed for them with untempered mortar, seeing falsehood and divining for them a lie; saying, “Thus saith
 29 the Lord Jehovah,” when Jehovah hath not spoken. The people of the land have done violence, and have exercised robbery, and have oppressed the poor and needy: and to the stranger they have done violence without measure.
 30 And I sought for a man among them that should ** make up the fence, and that should stand in the breach before me, for the land, that I should not destroy it; but I found
 31 †† none. Therefore have I poured on them mine indignation, in the fire of my wrath have I consumed them; their way have I recompensed upon their head, saith the Lord Jehovah.

* H. preying on.† H. the soul, or, the life.‡ H. preying on.|| Or, lives.§ H. gain.** H. fence up.†† H. not.

princes; as Cappellus and Houbigant observe. The latter critic prefers אֲשֶׁר, which, says he, may be interpreted ejus, vel, quoniam.

—they have taken.—לָקְחוּ 2 MSS.

—treasure.—חֶסֶד in Aphel Chald. is possedit.

26. Her priests.—See a parallel place, Zeph. iii. 4.

—hidden their eyes.—Absenting themselves from the holy rites to be performed in my courts.

28. —have daubed.—See on c. xiii. 10.

29. —without measure.—See Jer. xxx. 11. But Chald. “by that which is not right.”

30. —make up the fence &c.—See on c. xiii. 5.

CHAPTER XXIII.

- 1 MOREOVER the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying :
 2 Son of man, there were two women the daughters of one 3 mother. And they committed fornication in Egypt, in their youth they committed fornication : there were their breasts pressed, even there * the paps of their virginity 4 were bruised. And their names were Aholah the elder, and Aholibah her sister : and they became mine, and bare sons and daughters : Moreover, as for their names, Samaria is Aholah, and Jerusalem is Aholibah.
 5 And Aholah committed whoredom † when she was mine ; and she doted on her lovers, on the Assyrians her

* Or, men bruised &c.

† H. when she was under me.

The style of this chapter, like that of c. xvi, is adapted to men among whom, at that time, no refinement subsisted. Large allowance must be made for language addressed to an ancient eastern people, in the worst period of their history ; all whose ideas were sensual ; and whose grand inducement to idolatry seems to have been the brutal impurities which it encouraged.

The parable explains itself. There is great strength in v. 31—34, 46, 7.

3. —pressed.—כָּעָצוּ 4 MSS. But כָּעָצוּ compresserunt may answer to עָצוּ contractarunt ; quidam, or homines, being understood before each verb.

That the Israelites were idolaters in Egypt, see c. xx. 8.

4. Aholah.—That is, Her tent, or, tabernacle : idolatrous Samaria pitching her own tabernacle, in opposition to God's dwelling-place in Jerusalem.

—Aholibah.—That is, My tent, or, tabernacle, is in her : alluding to the temple in Jerusalem.

—and they became mine.—Mihi nupserant. Dathius.

5. —when she was mine.—So Houbigant and Dathius : as if the preposition expressed, “when she was under my dominion.” See 2 Kings viii. 29 Hos. iv. 12.

- 6 neighbours; who were clothed in blue, captains and rulers, all of them * desirable young men, horsemen, riding on 7 horses. And she bestowed her whoredoms upon them, even upon all the choice young men † of Assyria: and, among all on whom she doted, with all their idols she 8 was defiled: neither forsook she her whoredoms brought from Egypt: for they lay with her in her youth, and they bruised the paps of her virginity, and poured their 9 fornication upon her. Wherefore I delivered her into the hand of her lovers, into the hand of the ‡ Assyrians 10 upon whom she doted. These uncovered her nakedness, they took her sons and her daughters, and they slew her with the sword. And she was a name of reproach among women; for they executed || judgment upon her.
- 11 And her sister Aholibah saw this, and § was more corrupt in her doting than she; and in her whoredoms, than 12 the whorings of her sister. She doted on the ** Assyrians, captains and rulers, her neighbours, clothed †† most gorgeously, horsemen, riding on horses, all of them
 13 †† desirable young men. Then I saw that she was de-14 filed, |||| that they both took one way. And she added to her whoredoms: for she saw men pourtrayed upon the * H. young [or, chosen] men of desire.

† H. of the sons of Asshur.

‡ H. sons of Asshur.

|| H. judgments.

§ H. corrupted her doting.

** H. sons of Asshur.

†† H. to perfection.

‡‡ H. young [or, chosen] men of desire.

|||| H. that there was one way unto both of them.

—doted on—the Assyrians.—F. עָלָה, here and v. 12. See v. 9, 16, 20. עָלָה est admiratione deperire & insanire. Arab. Schultens. Anim-
 adv. Phil.

8. —they lay with her.—אִתָּה MSS. The Egyptians are meant.

10. —among women.—לִּי inter. Nold. §. 19.

12. —most gorgeously.—Syr. and Houb. read תְּכֵלֶת in blue, as v. 6.
 But see c. xxvii. 24. xxxviii. 4.

14. —men pourtrayed.—Viros sculpturæ, vel, operis insculpti. For מִחֻקָּה must be here a substantive; or the particle Pual, insculpti. In the

- wall, images of Chaldeans pourtrayed with vermillion, 15 girded with girdles upon their loins, exceeding in dyed attire upon their heads, in their appearance all of them leaders, after the * manner of the † Babylonians, even of 16 Chaldea, the land of their nativity : and she doted upon them, ‡ as soon as she cast her eyes on them ; and sent 17 messengers unto them into Chaldea. And the Babylonians came to her into the bed of || love, and they defiled her with their whoredoms ; and she was defiled with them so that her soul was alienated from them.
 18 And she discovered her fornications, and she discovered her nakedness : and my soul was alienated from her, 19 like as my soul had been alienated from her sister. For she multiplied her whoredoms, in calling to remembrance the days of her youth, wherein she committed whoredom 20 in the land of Egypt : for she doted on their paramours, whose flesh was as the flesh of asses, and whose issue was as the issue of horses.
 21 Now since thou hast repeated the deliberate wickedness

* Or, likeness.

† H. the sons of Babel.

‡ H. at the sight of her eyes.

|| H. loves.

sense of the parable, the deified men, worshipped by the Chaldeans, must be meant. These the inhabitants of Chaldea had represented on the walls in Jerusalem : and the Jews desired to possess the idols, that they might pay them divine honours.

15. —exceeding &c.—Flowing, luxuriant, in the turbans worn by them. See Cappellus, and Tayl. conc.

—leaders.—Qui triginta præsunt. Cast. lex.

17. —her soul &c.—That is, she, through satiety loathed them. See Chald. עָרַב Arab. is explevit, restinxit sitim. But still, e. xvi. 29, she desired other paramours.

18. —she discovered her fornications &c.—She was open and notorious in them, and in the highest degree shameless.

20. —paramours.—Dathius observes that the original word is here used of males. The Egyptians are meant, whose idolatry was very gross.

21. —repeated.—Iterasti. Dathius. The word may signify, numof thy youth, in that they bruised thy paps in Egypt, and 22 that they pressed the breasts of thy youth ; therefore, O Aholibah, thus saith the Lord Jehovah : Lo, I will raise up thy lovers against thee from whom thy soul is alienated ; and I will bring them against thee on every side ;

 23 the * Babylonians and all the Chaldeans, Pekod, and Shoa, and Koa, and all † the Assyrians with them : all of them ‡ desirable young men, captains, and rulers, leaders, 24 and renowned, all of them riding on horses. And they shall come unto thee with scythed cars, with chariots, and || carriages, and with a great company of § people : the buckler, the shield, and the helmet shall they appoint

* H. the sons of Babel.

|| H. wheel.

† H. the sons of Asshur.

§ H. peoples.

‡ H. young [or, chosen] men of desire.

bered again. See 1 Sam. xiv. 17. Chald. may read וְתִזְכְּרִי, hast remembered.

—in Egypt.—בְּמִצְרַיִם 1 MS. V. 6. Ar. Syr.

—that they pressed.—The verb מָעַךְ should be here read, as v. 3. See V. Syr. Houb. and Dathius. The Vulgate and Syr. read וּמָעַךְ and that they pressed ; which, or מָעַךְ answering to בַּעֲשׂוֹת, seems the true reading.

22. —is alienated.—"The Chaldeans, against whom the Jews revolted, rebelling against Nebuchadnezzar." Michaelis.

23. Pekod and Shoa and Koa.—All the ancients but Vulg. understand these words as names of places. Pekod occurs Jer. l. 21. The subdivisions of the Babylonish empire are little known to us.

—and all.—וְכָל "and all" 2 MSS. 6. Ar. Syr. "The Assyrians were now under the king of Babylon, and served him as auxiliary troops." Michaelis.

—with them.—אִתָּם MSS.

24. —scythed cars.—See Cast. lex. Tayl. conc. הֶצֶץ in Arab. is conculcare. 6. read מִצְפוֹן from the north, which Houbigant approves of. Forte, אֶזְזָן i. e. בְּאֶזְזָן, "with armour." Cum instrumentis armorum : Chald. See זֶזָן, זֶזָן.

—carriages.—So, c. xxvi. 10, the word occurs for wheel-carriages.

—the buckler.—Properly, a shield with a sharp point. See Cast. lex. In poetical language, the armour and the weapon are put for the warrior.

- against thee round about : and I will set judgment before them, and they shall judge thee according to their judgments. And I will set my jealousy against thee, and they shall deal with thee in fury : they shall take away thy nose and thine ears ; and * thy posterity shall fall by the sword ; they shall take thy sons and thy daughters, and * thy posterity shall be devoured by the fire. They shall also strip thee of thy garments, and shall take † thy goodly jewels. Thus will I make thy deliberate wickedness to cease from thee, and thy whoredom brought from the land of Egypt : so that thou shalt not lift up thine eyes unto them, nor remember Egypt any more. For thus saith the Lord Jehovah : Lo, I will deliver thee into the hand of them whom thou hatest, into the hand of them from whom thy soul is alienated : and they shall deal with thee in hatred, and shall take all the fruit of thy labour,

* Or, those that are left behind thee. Or, thine offspring.

† H. the jewels of thy goodness.

—set judgment.—I will so dispose events that they shall erect themselves into judges over you.

—according to their judgments.—Well known to be rigorous.

25. —deal with thee.—יָרָא, MSS.

—take away &c.—A punishment of adultery which rage sometimes dictated.

Populataque tempora raptis
Auribus, & fœdas inhonesto vulnere nares.

Æn. vi. 496.

—thy posterity.—Οἱ καταλοιποὶ σου. ὁ. Reliquiæ tuæ. Houb. Some may think that by the latter part of this v. the word is restrained to offspring. Comp. Am. ix. 1.

26. See a parallel passage c. xvi. 39.

27. —unto them.—Houbigant translates from the land of the Egyptians ; and the original word admits of that rendering. Or, Egypt imports the inhabitants of Egypt.

29. —all the fruit of thy labour.—See the note on Hos. xii. 8. appendix. So Virgil G. ii. 514.

and shall leave thee * naked and bare, and the nakedness of thy whorings shall be discovered, and thy deliberate wickedness, and thy foul whoredoms. I will do these things unto thee, because thou hast gone a whoring after the nations, and because thou hast been defiled with their idols. Thou hast walked in the way of thy sister; therefore will I give her cup into thine hand. Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Thou shalt drink thy sister's cup, † which is deep and large: thou shalt be a laughing-stock and a derision: it ‡ containeth much. Thou shalt be filled with drunkenness and grief, with the cup of astonishment and desolation, with the cup of thy sister Samaria. Thou shalt even drink it and suck it out; and thou shalt break the sherds thereof, and pluck off thine own breasts: for I * H. nakedness and bareness.† H. the deep and the large.‡ H. it multiplieth to contain.

Hinc anni labor, hinc patriam parvosque nepotes Sustinet.

Ex agricultura habet totius anni substantiam.

Serv.

Proventus ex labore annuo.

Heyne.

—and the nakedness &c.—Thy nakedness: ו. MS. Al. “The nakedness of thy whorings” may mean, “thy open and shameless whorings.” We should read ונגלתה, unless ונגלה can be understood as the participle passive.

30. I will do.—This rendering supposes that the verb should be written עושה. But 4 MSS. and a 5th in the marg. have עשו, as V. Ch. Houb. They do i. e. men do: which form is well rendered passively by Syr. These things are done &c.

33. —with drunkenness and grief.—Thy drunkenness shall be a state of heavy affliction. We may render the two next clauses; “The cup of thy sister Samaria is a cup of astonishment and desolation.”

34. Thou shalt even drink &c.—An imitation of ps. lxxv. 8. Isai. li. 17.

—and thou shalt break &c.—Comp. Job ii. 8. xli. 30. Thou shalt tear away thy breasts with the sharp pieces of the broken cup, through grief and madness. נתק Arab. detrahere de corpore pellem.

- 35 have spoken it, saith the Lord Jehovah. Concerning this matter, thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Because thou hast forgotten me, and cast me behind thy back, therefore bear thou also thy deliberate wickedness and thy whoredoms.
- 36 Moreover, Jehovah said unto me: Son of man, wilt thou not judge Aholah and Aholibah? Yea, declare unto them
- 37 their abominations: because they have committed adultery, and blood is in their hands; even with their idols have they committed adultery; and also their sons, whom they bare unto me, have they caused to pass through the
- 38 fire unto them to be * devoured. Moreover they did this unto me: they defiled my sanctuary in the same day,
- 39 and my sabbaths they polluted: for when they had slain their sons to their idols, then came they to my sanctuary on the same day to pollute it; and, lo, thus they did in
- 40 the midst of mine house. And, furthermore, ye sent for men † to come from far; unto whom a messenger was sent, and, lo, they came: for whom thou didst wash thy-

* Or, consumed. H. for food.

† H. coming.

36. —Yea, declare.—וְתִגִּיד “and wilt thou not declare?” 1 MS. V. 6. Ar.

37. —unto them.—לָהֶם ed. Vanderhooght. Syr. “to the idols.” If we read לָהֶן, sibi, with 13 MSS. 2 edd. it is redundant. Observe that the former part of the first clause is enlarged on in the second clause; and that the remaining part, “and blood is in their hands,” is explained by the last clause. Therefore blood-guiltiness was incurred by an actual sacrifice of their children; they were devoured by the flames; they were slain. v. 39. See on c. xvi. 21.

38. —in the same day.—On the very day when they had contracted the deepest defilement by their idolatrous and horrid rites, they came into my courts to observe my sabbaths.

39. —and, lo, &c.—Indignation is expressed at so complicated a breach of the law.

40. And furthermore &c.—וְאֵתֵּן כִּי v. 37.

—ye sent.—תִּשְׁלֶה thou hast sent. Chald. See v. 14—16, where Aholibah is spoken of.

self, paint thine eyes, and adorn thyself with ornaments :
 41 and didst sit on a * stately † bed, and with a table prepared before it, whereupon thou didst place mine incense 42 and mine oil. Also the voice of a great company at ease was with her : and together with the men, among the multitude of men, were brought Sabeans from the desert ;

* Or, glorious.

† Or, couch.

—paint thine eyes.—See Bishop Lowth on Isai. iii. 16. “The syрма is a black impalpable powder, and so volatile as to spread itself like down upon a small brass wire fixed in the cork of the bottle which contains it. The extremity of the wire is applied to the interior corner of the eye, resting it upon the eyelids, and drawing it softly towards the temples, in order to leave within the eyelids two black streaks.” &c. Mem. of Baron de Tott. 8vo. i. 156. Robinson. 1785. כחל occurs only here in the Hebrew ; but its sense is confirmed by Chald. Syr. Æth. Ar. in Cast. lex. The powder is called Alcohole from this root.

41. —before it.—The bed, or couch. But V. 2 MSS. and 4 originally, לפניך before thee. A table, well-spread, was placed before the couch ; and a feast, after a sacrifice to idols, partaken of. The lectisternia of the Romans were borrowed from this eastern idolatrous rite. See Livy. v. xiii.

—mine incense and mine oil.—Which should have been offered to me.

Sir John Chardin thus describes an Asiatic bride. “They place her on a bed, they set smoking some incense-pots, and serve up sweet meats on a table placed before her.” Harmer. ii. 123.

“The stately bed, on which Aholibah is represented as sitting, seems to mean the floor of an idol-temple.” Ib. 64.

42. —at ease.—שלי 5 MSS. Feasting and making merry.

—was with her.—בא Syr. went up.

—and together with.—For ואל Syr. reads ואל and also.

—the multitude of men.—Who were present at her idolatrous feasts.

—were brought Sabeans.—סבאים is the reading of MSS. and edd. written as Joel iii. 8 : Isai. xlv. 14 : in which places the word denotes certain inhabitants of Arabia. Or, possibly, the ancient Zabian idolaters may be meant. See Spencer de leg. Hebr. L. ii. c. 1. sect. 1. Read סבאים מובאים. Houb.

who put bracelets upon their hands, and a * goodly crown 43 upon their heads. Then said I concerning her that was old in adulteries; Now they will commit whoredoms with 44 her, even with her. And they went in unto her, as men go in unto a woman that committeth whoredom: after this manner they went in unto Aholah, and unto Aholibah; 45 women of deliberate wickedness. Therefore righteous men † shall judge them according to the judgment of adulteresses, and according to the judgment of women that shed blood: for they are adulteresses, and blood is in 46 their hands. For thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Bring up a company upon them, and give them to be ‡ removed

* H. a crown of goodness.

† H. they shall judge.

‡ H. for a removing and a spoil.

—upon their hands.—ידיהם, 5 MSS. and 5 originally: ראשיהם, 6 MSS. and 3 originally. V. Chald. But Syr. reads with the text, ידיהן; “the hands of the two women.” That the Sabeans themselves wore bracelets and crowns, seems more agreeable to the context.

43. —old in adulteries.—Aholibah, who had been long idolatrous. See v. 40.

—now they will commit &c.—עתה ינונו, MSS. Houbigant’s note is, “Causus rectus היא attrahitur ad obliquum, per Affixum ה, quod antecessit.” ה is supposed by him to have a preposition, as את, על, ב, understood before it, of which construction I do not at present find other instances; and היא to be used as Zech. vii. 5; where see my note. V. reads תננה. “Then I said unto her [Aholah] that was old in adulteries; Now will she [Aholibah] commit her whoredoms, even she.”

44. —And they went in.—ויבאו, or ויבאו, 2 MSS. all the ancients, and Houbigant.

—women.—אשיות MSS. “τοὺ ποῦσαι ὁ. ἐσθיות,” Secker.

45. —judge them.—אתהן or אותהן, 10 or 11 MSS. אותהן, Houbigant. They shall be, as it were, solemnly pronounced guilty by just judges. See c. xvi. 38.

46. —upon them.—עליהן MSS. and edd.

—and give.—ונתון, 10 or 11 MSS. The regular imperative may be here used, as the regular infinitive often is. See V. ὁ. Syr. So יצק, or יצוק see MSS. c. xxiv. 3.

- 47 and spoiled : and let the company stone them with stones, and cut them asunder with their swords ; their sons and their daughters let them slay, and their houses let them 48 burn with fire. Thus will I cause deliberate wickedness to cease out of the land, that all women may be admonished, and may not do according to your deliberate 49 wickedness : and they shall recompense your deliberate wickedness upon you ; and ye shall bear the sins of your idols ; and ye shall know that I am Jehovah.

CHAPTER XXIV.

- 1 MOREOVER the word of Jehovah came unto me in the ninth year, in the tenth month, on the tenth day of the 2 month, saying : Son of man, write thee the name of the day, even of this same day : the king of Babylon * set 3 himself against Jerusalem on this same day. And utter a parable unto the rebellious house, and say unto them :
Thus saith the Lord Jehovah : Set on a caldron, set it

* Or, fixed, or, established, himself.

47. —and cut them asunder.—וּבְרָאוּ Houbigant. Syr. Chald. Ar. Membratim secabunt : Mich. suppl. ad Lex. Hebr. Compare c. xvi. 40. בְּנִיהֶן וּבְנוֹתֵיהֶן is the reading of V. Ar. Syr. and of some MSS.

49. —and ye shall know.—וִידַעְתֶּן 1 MS. 2 originally. Syr. The verb, in the masculine gender, must mean the people to whom the parable was addressed.

2. —this same day.—See 2 Kings xxv. 1. Jer. xxxix. 1. lii. 4.

3. —a caldron.—See on c. xi. 3 ; where it is shewn that the image is a more dignified one than it may at first appear to the generality of readers. Si cui minus placebit—meminerit vatem sacerdotem hoc ex suis sacris duxisse, minime veritum, ne id deforme aut humile unquam haberi

- 4 on, and also pour water into it. Gather the pieces thereof into it, even every good piece: Fill it with the thigh and the shoulder, even with the * choice joints.
- 5 Take the choice of the flock, and pile also the bones under it: make it boil † well, and let them ‡ seethe the joints of it therein.
- 6 Concerning this matter, thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Woe to || the bloody city, to the caldron whose scum is in it, even whose scum is not gone out of it! bring it out
- 7 piece by piece; let no lot fall upon it. For her blood is in the midst of her; I have set it upon the top of a rock;

* H. the choice of the bones.

† H. its boilings.

‡ Or, prepare.

|| H. the city of bloods.

posset, quod cum sacrosancto templi ministerio esset conjunctum. Præl. Hebr. x.

4. —joints.—So Vatablus, and Houbigant. “Carnes nominantur ab ossibus quibus adhærent, quoniam secundum ossa exsecantur.” Houb. The good pieces, the choice joints, the choice of the flock, are the great men of Jerusalem.

5. —and pile also.—The verb וָרַר is used in another sense ps. lxxxiv. 10. Michaelis learnedly and ingeniously deduces the significations of this word from the Arab. in orbem ire. 1 Habitatio: a tentorium orbiculari vico, vocato Douwar. Shaw pref. p. viii. 4°. 2. Pyra, a rotunditate. 3. Ætas, generatio: quia temporis est longior orbis. Compare suppl. ad lex. Hebr. and Tayl. conc. This is one instance of the many beautiful improvements which may be made in our knowledge of the Hebrew language.

—the bones.—The useless bones, v. 10; which the coals, v. 11, would consume. This was to shew what a general destruction of the meaner sort would be caused by the Chaldeans.

6. —to the caldron.—To the city, resembling a caldron whose scum is in it. Scum denotes wickedness.

—bring it out &c.—Bring out many of the choice pieces; all of which without distinction shall be the prey of the enemy.

7. —her blood.—The blood shed by the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

—I have set it—I have not poured it.—6. read שְׂמַתִּיהוּ, and שִׁפְכָתִיהוּ; which v. 8 requires.

- I have not poured it upon the ground to cover it with 8 dust: that I might cause fury to come up, that I might take vengeance, I have set her blood on the top of a rock, that it should not be covered.
- 9 Concerning this matter, thus saith the Lord Jehovah:
 Woe to the bloody city! I will also make the pile for fire 10 great. Take much wood, kindle the fire, waste away the flesh, prepare it as a compound, and let the bones be 11 burnt: then place it empty upon its coals, that its brass may be hot and may burn, and that its filthiness may be dissolved in the midst of it, and its scum may be wasted 12 away. Her scum is iniquities: neither doth her great —on the top of a rock.—It remains before my eyes, that I may punish those who shed it.

—cover it with dust.—An allusion to Lev. xvii. 13. כסד is used transitively with עָלָה: see on Hab. ii. 14: and ב is understood before עָפָר.

8. —take vengeance.—Ad ulciscendum ultionem. Judg. xvi. 28. Jer. xx. 10.

10. —waste away.—Percoquendo consume. The type is repeated, says Grotius. The caldron is supposed to be filled with other flesh.

—prepare it as a compound.—Excoquam illos sicut pharmacopolæ sua pharmaca et pigmenta, donec omnia fere consumantur et tertium quiddam fiat." Cornelius a Lapide. This seems a pertinent and strong sense. Dathius scarcely doubts but that the reading of Syr. is right; ורתח רתח, et effervescat fervor: see v. 5. Houbigant calls the reading of Syr. no contemptible one; but adds, Tamen recte hoc loco radix רקח componere (pigmenta,) quia similis fit olla fervens vasi pigmentorum super prunas bullienti.

The burning of the bones, and of the pot, denotes God's judgments not only on the inhabitants but also on the city.

11. —empty.—ריקה MSS. edd.

In v. 9, 10, is prefigured the universal calamity in which the inhabitants of Jerusalem would be involved; and in v. 11 the destruction of the city by fire. 2 Kings xxv. 9.

12. —Her scum.—I suppose that the true reading is חלאתה: see חלאת and חלאתה in MSS. See also תאונים, in 4 MSS.

scum go forth out of her: her scum shall be in the fire.

- 13 In thy filthiness is deliberate wickedness. Because I have cleansed thee, and thou wast not cleansed, thou shalt not be cleansed from thy filthiness any more, until 14 I have caused my fury to rest upon thee. I Jehovah have spoken it. It shall come to pass, and I will do it: I will not go back, neither will I spare, neither will I repent: according to thy ways, and according to thy doings, * shall they judge thee, saith the Lord Jehovah.

- 15 MOREOVER the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying:
 16 Son of man, lo, I take from thee the desire of thine eyes † by a sore disease: yet thou shalt not mourn nor weep,
 17 nor shall ‡ thy tears run down. Sigh thou in silence; make not mourning for the dead, bind the ornament of thine head upon thee, and put thy shoes on thy feet, and cover not thy || mouth, and eat not the food of wretched men.

* Or, thou shalt be judged.

† Or, by a mortal stroke.

‡ H. thy tear come.

|| H. the upper lip.

14. —it shall come to pass.—Veniens erit, sc. הַדְּבָרָה.

—go back.—פָּרַע recusare, rejicere, omittere. Cocceius. retrocedere. Cast lex. Inhibere ad se trahendo. Arab. Gol. lex. But see Schult. Prov. i. 25.

—shall they judge thee.—The Chaldeans. But שַׁפְּטִיתִיךָ I have judged thee, 3 MSS.: which reading V. 6. Ar. Syr. Ch. may render I will judge thee; the past tense being sometimes used in prophetic language to express the certainty of a future event.

17. —Sigh thou in silence.—Literally, Suspira silendo. Στέναζε σιγῶν. Montf. Hex.

—the ornament of thine head.—Thy tiara.

—cover not thy mouth.—See on Mic. iii. 7. and compare 2 Sam. xv. 30: xix. 4.

—of wretched men.—"Of mourners." Secker. Ne comedat cibum hominum, ut alii lugentes solent, quibus mittunt vicini cibos. Kimchi.

- 18 So I spake unto the people in the morning; and my wife died in the evening: and I did in the morning as I was commanded.
- 19 And the people said unto me: Wilt thou not tell us what 20 these things are unto us; that thou doest thus? Then I said unto them: The word of Jehovah came unto me, saying:
- 21 Say unto the house of Israel; Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Lo, I will pollute my sanctuary, the excellency of your strength, the desire of your eyes, and that which your soul affecteth; and your sons and your daughters, 22 ters, whom ye have left, shall fall by the sword. And ye shall do as I have done: ye shall not cover your mouth,

Here שׂוֹנֵא is used in its strict sense, with a reference to its root ægrotavit.

Has inter mediamque, duæ mortalibus ægris

Munere concessæ Divum.

Virg. G. i. 237.

Aurora interea miseris mortalibus almam

Extulerat lucem, referens opera atque labores.

Virg. Æn. xi. 183.

Ὅς γὰρ ἐπεκλώσαντο θεοὶ δειλοῖσι βροτοῖσι,

Ζῶειν ἀχρυσμένους.

Il. xxiv. 525.

18. — I did in the morning.—“Syr. adds, of the next day.” Secker.

19. —are unto us.—לָנוּ may be redundant: accordingly, V. 6. Syr. do not render it.

—that thou doest thus.—For כִּי 2 MSS. read אַשׁ: “which thou doest.”

21. —the desire.—וְאֵת 2 MSS. V. Syr. Ar. “and the desire.”

—and that which your soul affecteth. מַחְמֵל affectu motus est in aliquid, etsi aliter meruerat. Cast. lex. Notat animi affectum pium—ad jucunditate ab aliquo fruendum. Cocceius. Hence מַחְמֵל may be used for an object of affection in general. Schultens, animadv. phil. thinks the word parallel to מִשְׁא, v. 25. and explains מִשְׁא by id ad quod quis desiderio fertur. מַחְמֵר, the desire, 1 MS. 2 originally. 1 now. 2 edd. which Dathius rightly rejects.

- 23 nor eat the food of wretched men : and your ornaments shall be upon your heads, and your shoes upon your feet :
 ye shall not mourn nor weep ; but ye shall pine away for 24 your iniquities, and moan * one to another. Thus Ezekiel shall be unto you a sign : according to all that he hath done shall ye do, when this cometh : and ye shall know that I am the Lord Jehovah.
- 25 And as for thee, O son of man, shall it not be, in the day when I take from them their strength, the joy of their glory, the desire of their eyes, and that whereunto they 26 lift up their soul, and their sons and their daughters ; that
 † one who escapeth shall come unto thee, ‡ to cause thee
 27 to hear it with thine ears ? In that day shall thy mouth be opened unto || him that escapeth, and thou shalt speak and be no more dumb : and thou shalt be a sign unto them, and they shall know that I am Jehovah.

* H. every man to his brother.

† H. an escaper.

‡ H. for the hearing of the ears.

|| H. the escaper.

23. —ornaments.—וּפְאָרִיכֶם, MSS. edd.

—one to another.—That is, privately.

24. —when this cometh.—V. 6. point thus.

25. —and their sons. וּבְנֵיהֶם MSS. edd. Syr. Ar. rightly : as the foregoing clauses refer to the temple. See v. 21.

26. —one who escapeth &c.—See c. xxxiii. 21, 22, 23, &c.

CHAPTER XXV.

1 MOREOVER the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying :
 2 Son of man, set thy face against * the Ammonites, and
 3 prophesy concerning them ; and say unto † the Ammonites,

Hear the word of the Lord Jehovah : Thus saith the Lord Jehovah : Because thou saidst, Aha, against my sanctuary when it was profaned, and against the land of Israel when it was made desolate, and against the house
 4 of Judah when they went into captivity ; therefore, lo, I will deliver thee to the sons of the east for a possession ; and they shall set their palaces in thee, and shall make in thee their dwellings : they shall eat thy fruit, and they
 5 shall drink thy milk. And I will make Rabbah a stable for camels, and ‡ the Ammonites a couching-place for 6 flocks : and ye shall know that I am Jehovah. For thus saith the Lord Jehovah : Because thou hast clapped thine
 || hands, and stamped with thy § feet, and hast rejoiced, with all thy despite, ** heartily, against the land of Israel ;
 7 therefore, lo, I will stretch out mine hand upon thee, and

* H. the sons of Ammon.

† H. the sons of Ammon.

‡ H. the sons of Ammon.

|| H. hand.

§ H. foot.

** H. in soul.

---

The chronological order of this chapter is after c. xxxiii. 21 &c. at a time when not only the taking of Jerusalem was known, but also the conduct which the surrounding nations pursued in consequence of that event.

2.—against the Ammonites.—All the ancients but V. represent the same preposition, ל, twice.

will deliver thee for a spoil to the nations, and will cut thee off from among the * people; I will destroy thee, and thou shalt know that I am Jehovah.

- 8 THUS saith the Lord Jehovah: Because Moab saith, [and Seir,] Lo, the house of Judah is like all the nations; 9 therefore, lo, I will open the side of Moab from his cities, even from his borders will I open the glory of the country, 10 Beth-jeshimoth, Baal-meon, and Kiriathaim. Unto the sons of the east will I give it for a possession, together

* H. peoples.

7. —for a spoil.—לְבוֹז 12 MSS. Keri, Houb. c. xxvi. 5. xxxvi. 5. But, according to some, בֹּז conveys the notion of dapes opiparæ, cibus exquisitor. The letters are easily confounded. Thus we have גֹּז for זֹה, c. xlvii. 13.

—to the nations.—בְּגוֹיִם, among the nations, 1 MS. 2 originally. ó. Ar.

8. —[and Seir].—וּשְׁעִיר is omitted in ó. MS. Vat. and in Arab. The note in ed. Sixt. Quint. is, In plerisque libris sequitur, Kai σηείρ. quod dicit S. Hieronymus in lxx non haberi, sed de Theodotionis editione additum esse. Possibly וּשְׁעִיר may be a corruption of וּזְעִיר, Zoar being a city of Moab. Jer. xlviii. 34.

—like all the nations.—Subdued by Nebuchadnezzar indiscriminately with them.

Observe that the house of Israel and Judah is the reading of ó. Ar. and that 1 MS. has בֵּית יִשְׂרָאֵל in the margin.

9. —the side.—See כַּתֵּף Numb. xxxiv. 11.

—from his cities.—In מִמְּעָרָיו and מִמְּדֵעָרָיו we seem to have an instance of a double reading inserted in the text. See ó. MS. Vat. and Arab. If either of these words occurred twice, we might render distributively, “from every one of his cities.”

—even from his borders.—וּמִקְצָיו V. Syr. “and from his borders.” See the cities mentioned, Josh. xiii. 20. Numb. xxxii. 37, 38. Jer. xlviii. 23, 24.

10. See Moab and Ammon joined Zeph. ii. 8, 9. Nebuchadnezzar subdued both. Jos. Ant. x. ix. 7. ed. Hav.

—will I give it.—The vau in the original is merely conversivè, as v. 13.

with the sons of Ammon : that Rabbah of the sons of 11 Ammon may not be remembered among the nations : and on Moab will I execute judgments ; and they shall know that I am Jehovah.

12 THUS saith the Lord Jehovah : Because Edom hath dealt in * taking vengeance on the house of Judah ; and they have greatly offended, and avenged themselves 13 upon them ; therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah : I will stretch out mine hand upon Edom, and will cut off from it man and beast ; and I will make it desolate from Teman, and unto Dedan they shall fall by the 14 sword. I will also shew my vengeance upon Edom by the hand of my people Israel ; and they shall deal with Edom according to mine anger, and according to my fury ; and they shall know my vengeance, saith the Lord
 Jehovah.

15 THUS saith the Lord Jehovah : Because the Philistines have dealt in vengeance, and have taken vengeance with despite heartily, for destruction, with the old hatred ;
 16 therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah : Lo, I will

* H. in avenging vengeance.

—that Rabbah.—Rabbah is found in Syr. and thus the passage is satisfactorily restored. “That thou mayest not mention the sons of Ammon among the nations,” seems an unusual transition.

12. —and they have greatly offended.—Et deliquerunt delinquendo. But 17 MSS. 3 edd. read with Houbigant שם, et deliquerunt delictum. Some give שם the idea of a sacrilegious offence ; Judah being God’s heritage. וינקמו, 1 MS.

13. Teman and Dedan were noted cities of Idumea, See Jer. xlix. 7, 8. Tema was a son of Ishmael : Gen. xxv. 15 : Dedan was a grandson of Abraham by Jokshan : 1 Chron. i. 32 : Gen. xxv. 3.

14. —by the hand.—After the restoration of the Jews, Edom was subdued by them. See on Amos i. 12.

stretch out mine hand upon the Philistines, and I will cut off the Cherethites, and destroy the remnant of the 17 sea-ports. And I will execute great * vengeance upon them, with † furious rebukes: and they shall know that I am Jehovah, when I shall shew my vengeance upon them.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 AND it came to pass in the twelfth year, in the first month, on the first day of the month, that the word of 2 Jehovah came unto me, saying: Son of man, because Tyre hath said against Jerusalem, "Aha, she is broken; the merchandise of the ‡ people is turned unto me;

* H. vengeances.

† H. rebukes of fury.

‡ H. peoples.

16. —Cherethites.—See on Amos ix. 7. Compare Zeph. ii. 5. In the original there is a paronomasia.

1. —in the twelfth year.—6. MS. Al. read בשתי "in the twelfth year," for בעשתי: "in the eleventh year." The same MS. reads, "on the first day of the first month;" agreeably to Ezekiel's usual manner of dating facts: supplying בראשון before לאחר לחדש; or, as Houbigant conjectures, באחר; which word, says he, occurring twice, transcribers by a common mistake inserted it only once. Arab. supplies a like omission 2 Kings xxv. 3: rendering, "on the ninth day of the fourth month." The Coptic MS. reads in the text "the tenth year."

It is plain that the date in the text must be posterior to whatever is the true date c. xxxiii. 21: because this prophecy was delivered after the taking of Jerusalem was known to Ezekiel and his people. See v. 2.

2. —Tyre.—Fuit Tyrus emporium totius orientis nobilissimum, ditione non tam terrestri quam per mare late sparsa, opibus copiisque florentissimum. Illius splendorem, rem nauticam, vires conductitias, mercatumque uberrimum graphice descripsit Ezekiel. Marsham. can. chron. sec. xviii. p. 537.

—the merchandise.—Houbigant reads רככלת, as c. xxvii. 3: and this is the reading of Chald.: the Hebrew word, as it is differently

3 * she that was full is become desolate;" therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah:

Lo, I am against thee, O Tyre; and I will cause many nations to come up against thee, as the sea causeth his 4 waves to come up: and they shall destroy the walls of Tyre, and throw down her towers: and I will scrape off her earth from her, and I will make her like the top of a
5 rock. She shall be a place for the spreading of nets in the midst of the sea: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord pointed, signifying mercatrix or mercatura. ó. Ar. read רָלָה and נִסְבָּו, and ó. should be pointed as Arab. Εἶγε, συνετρίβη, ἀπόλωλε, τὰ ἔθνη ἐπεστράφη πρὸς μέ. "Aha, she is broken, she is brought low: the people are turned about unto me." Possibly the true reading may be, נִשְׁבַּרְתָּ רָלָה: "thou art broken, thou art brought low:" &c.

* H. the full is the desolate.

— she that was full.—Read הַמְלֵאָה, with ó. Ar. Chald. Houb.

3. — as the sea &c.—They shall be as loud, as numerous, as irresistible, as the waves of the sea. This is one of the beautiful and expressive images which occur in the magnificent prophecy here recorded.

4. — her earth.—An allusion to the custom in Palestine of fertilizing particular spots by carrying mould to them from other places less eligible for the purpose of sowing or planting.

— the top.—The bare shining surface of a rock.

5. — for the spreading of nets.—"The present inhabitants of Tyre are only a few poor wretches, harbouring themselves in the vaults, and subsisting chiefly upon fishing." Maundrel. p. 49. The Jesuit Hadrianus Parvillerius resided ten years in Syria; and Huetius heard him say, that when he approached the ruins of Tyre, and beheld the rocks stretched forth to the sea, and the great stones scattered up and down on the shore, made clean and smooth by the sun waves and winds, and useful only for the drying of fishermen's nets, many of which happened at the time to be spread on them, it brought to his memory this prophecy. See Bishop Newton on the prophecies. i. 190. 4<sup>o</sup>. Diss. xi.

— in the midst of the sea.—Probably Old Tyre, or its suburbs, stood in the sea on a peninsula, See v. 17: and c. xxvii. 4. Thus Carthage is alluded to in Appian as πόλις ἐν τῇ θαλάσσῃ, a city in the sea. Libyca. p. 41. ed. H. Steph. c. 51. Vitruv. in Isai. p. 666. Vitranga thinks it pro-

- Jehovah. And she shall be for a spoil to the nations :
 6 and her daughters that are in the field shall be slain by the sword : and they shall know that I am Jehovah.
 7 For thus saith the Lord Jehovah : Lo, I will bring against Tyre Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, a king of kings, from the north ; with horses, and with chariots, and with horsemen, and with a company of much people.
 8 Thy daughters in the field shall he slay with the sword ; and he shall set a tower against thee, and * cast up a mount against thee, and lift up the buckler against thee :
 9 and his battering-rams shall he set against thy walls, and 10 thy towers shall he break down with mattocks. By the bable that insular Tyre served as a station for the ships of Old Tyre. "Alexander employed the ruins and rubbish of the old city in making his causeway from the continent to the island, which henceforwards were joined together. It is no wonder therefore, as Bishop Pocock observes, Travels i. b. 1. c. 20. p. 81, 82, that there are no signs of the ancient city ; and as it is a sandy shore, the face of every thing is altered, and the great aqueduct in many parts is buried in the sand." Bishop Newton. Diss. xi. However, Dr. Pocock mentions a great bay, south of Tyre, and assigns some reasons for supposing that Old Tyre stood in a corner of this bay. Travels. ib.

* H. pour out.

7. —and with a company &c.—וּבְקָהֶל 2 or 3 MSS. But a more important reading is עַם, for וְעַם, which is found in 3 MSS. and is confirmed by ó.

That Nebuchadnezzar besieged Tyre for thirteen years in the reign of Ithobal, see Jos. contr. App. l. i. §. 20, 21, p. 451, 2: ed. Havere. Compare Ant. x. xi. §. 1. p. 538. See Jer. xxvii. 3, 6. Ezek. xxix. 18—20: and on Amos i. 10.

8. —the buckler.—"In forming the testudo." Michaelis.

9. —his battering-rams.—Percussiones arietis sui. מַחֲזֵא percussit. קַבֵּל Chald. contra, adversus, e regione. See Cappellus.

—with mattocks.—The original word is derived from חָרַב to lay waste ; and here denotes some tool, as a pickaxe, by which besiegers demolished walls, when they approached them under cover.

- abundance of his horses, their dust shall cover thee ; by the sound of the horsemen, and of the * carriages, and of the chariots, thy walls shall shake ; when he entereth into thy gates, † as men enter into a city which is broken up.
- 11 With the hoofs of his horses shall he tread on all thy streets : thy people shall he slay with the sword, and thy
- 12 ‡ strong fortress shall go down to the ground. And they shall spoil thy substance, and make a prey of thy merchandise ; and they shall destroy thy walls, and break down || thy pleasant houses ; and thy stones, and thy wood, and thy earth, they shall lay in the midst of the
- 13 waters. And I will cause the noise of thy songs to cease, and the sound of thy harps shall be no more
- 14 heard. And I will make thee like the top of a rock : thou shalt be a place for the spreading of nets : thou shalt be built no more : for I Jehovah have spoken it, saith the Lord Jehovah.

* H. the wheel.† H. according to the enterings of.‡ H. the fortress of thy strength.|| H. the houses of thy desire.

10. —broken up.—Which is stormed through a breach. See 2 Kings xxv. 4. Jer. lii. 7.

11. —fortress.—מצבת 5 MSS. 1 Sam. xiv. 12. Statio, stativa, castra, præsidium, arx.

14. —be built no more.—This is true of Old Tyre. New Tyre, taken by Alexander, was built in an island : and of this Quintus Curtius says, Post excidium renata, nunc, longa pace cuncta refovente, sub tutela Romanæ mansuetudinis acquiescit. iv. iv. 21. The same author refers to Old Tyre. When Alexander was desirous of sacrificing to Hercules, the ambassadors replied, Esse templum Herculis extra urbem, in eam sedem quam Palætyron ipsi vocant ; ibi regem Deo sacrum rite facturum. iv. ii. 4. And, again, when insular Tyre was to be joined by a mole to the continent, he observes ; Magna vis saxorum ad manum erat, Tyro vetere præbente. iv. ii. 18. Duplicem Tyrum agnoscunt Strabo, Plinius, Ptolemæus ; Insularem & Palætyrum.—Scylax de Insulari Tyro, antequam peninsula fieret, Βασιλεία Τύρου καὶ λιμὴν, ὅσον ὀκτὼ στάδια ἀπὸ γῆς. De Palætyro deinde, Ἄλλη πόλις Τύρος, λιμένα ἔχουσα ἐντὸς τείχους,

- 15 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah concerning Tyre : Shall not the isles shake at the sound of thy fall, when the wounded cry out, when * great slaughter is made in the
 16 midst of thee ? Shall not all the princes of the sea come down from their thrones, and lay aside their mantles, and put off † their embroidered garments ? shall they not clothe themselves with ‡ trembling, and sit on the ground, and tremble every || moment, and be astonished
 17 at thee ? And shall they not utter a lamentation over thee, and say unto thee : “ How art thou destroyed § that vast inhabited by sea-faring men, the renowned city : that was strong in the sea, she and her inhabitants : who spread their terror through all the inhabitants of 18 the earth ! ” Now shall the isles tremble in the day of

* Or, when the slayer slayeth.

‡ H. tremblings.

† H. the garments of their embroidery. || H. at moments.

§ H. inhabited, or, peopled, from the seas.

(αὕτη δὲ ἡ νῆσος βασιλεία Τυρίου f. Τυρίων. Voss.) καὶ ἀπέχει ἀπὸ θαλάττης στάδια τρία. Παλαιῦτος πόλις, καὶ πόταμος διὰ μέσης ῥέι. Marsham. sec. xviii. p. 539. Scylax lived in the time of Polybius. See his Periplus, p. 42. Geogr. script. min. ed. Hudson. vol. 1.

15. —when great slaughter is made.—In occidendo occisione ; or, as 1 MS. reads הורג, cum occidit occisor.

16. —clothe themselves with trembling.—With fear productive of trembling. See like bold expressions, c. vii. 27. ps. xxxv. 26. cix. 29. cxxxii. 18.

—sit on the ground.—A posture expressive of grief. See Bishop Lowth on Isai. iii. 26.

—and tremble &c.—See this repeated, c. xxxii. 10.

17. —by sea-faring men.—Ad quam ab omni mari advenæ veniebant. Grot. A diebus, sc. antiquis. Houb. Doederlein apud Dathium. בימים V. Ch. in the seas.

—of the earth.—Syr. reads יושבי הארץ. But Houb. and Dath. prefer היבשה, toti aridæ.

18. —the isles.—צִים, the ships : Vulg. Dath. Houbigant proposes האמים the people. האיים occurs in 5 MSS. and originally in 2 others :

- thy fall; yea, the isles that are in the sea shall be troubled at thy departure. For thus saith the Lord Jehovah :
 19 When I shall make thee a desolate city, as the cities that are not inhabited, when I shall bring up the deep upon
 20 thee, and the great waters shall cover thee; and when I shall bring thee down with them that descend to the pit, to the people of old time; and shall set thee in the lower parts of the earth, in the desolate places of old time, with them that descend to the pit, that thou be not inhabited; and when I shall appoint glory in the land of the living;
 21 I will then make thee * a terror, and thou shalt be no more : and thou shalt be sought for, but shalt not be found any more for ever, saith the Lord Jehovah.

* H. terrors.

it is also the reading of ó. Ar. Syr. The Syrians traded to these places, and planted colonies in many of them.

—the isles that are in the sea.—Here יִם, which often signifies the sea-coasts, seems to denote an island properly so called : though indeed it may be said of coasts, occasionally projecting into the sea, that they are in the sea. See v. 5, 17.

—at thy departure.—Into captivity. Chald. At thy forsaking of the city, and flying in ships. Houb. See Bp. Lowth on Isai. xxiii. 1.

19. —the deep.—Part of the city towards the port may have stood on ground recovered from the sea.

20. Compare Isai. xiv. 11, 15. c. xxxii. 18.

—the lower parts of the earth.—Literally, in terra inferioritatum.

—appoint glory.—To Nebuchadnezzar thy conqueror. Houbigant reads with ó. for וְהָיָה צִבְי וְנָתַתִּי צִבְי “nec stabis:” and Mr. Dimock, without having consulted Houbigant, observes of this reading that only one letter is omitted, and confirms it by Syr. as well as by ó. very justly adding that “the force of the negative particle is carried on, as in other instances.” “ó. legebant וְהָיָה צִבְי ni fallor, recte.” Secker.

—of the living.—וְהַחַיִּים 3 MSS.

21. —be found.—See on v. 5.

CHAPTER XXVII.

- 1 MOREOVER the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying :
 2 Also thou, son of man, utter a lamentation for Tyre ;
 3 and say concerning Tyre :

O thou that art situated at the * entering in of the sea, that art a merchant of the † people to many ‡ isles ; thus saith the Lord Jehovah : O Tyre, thou hast said, “ I am 4 perfect || in beauty.” Thy borders are in the heart of 5 the seas ; thy builders have perfected thy beauty. Of fir-trees from Senir they have made thee all thy ship- boards : they have taken cedars from Lebanon to make 6 masts for thee : of the oaks from Bashan have they made

* H. enterings in.

† H. peoples.

‡ Or, coasts.

|| H. of beauty.

2. Also.—See c. xxvi. 17.

3. —situated.—היִשְׁבֶּתֶת or הַיִּשְׁבֶּתֶת. MSS. edd. The ancients render, “unto Tyre, which is situated &c. which is a merchant &c.”

—of the sea. Which formed its harbour.

4. —Thy borders &c.—See on c. xxvi. 5, 19.

5. —from Senir.—A part of the ridge of mount Hermon, in the eastern half-tribe of Manasseh. Deut. iii. 9. 1 Chron. v. 23.

—thy ship-boards.—Some account for the use of the dual number by supposing the planks on each side of a ship to be meant. Dathius understands the word of the ornaments placed at the head and stern of a ship ; but observes that V. reads לְחֹזֶת יָם “tabulata maris,” and that Chald. explains these two words by גִּשְׁרֵךְ, “omnem pontem tuum.” Boards of the sea may mean ship-boards.

—cedars.—Michaelis brings two sufficient witnesses to prove that the name אֲרֵז is given by the present inhabitants of Lebanon to the tree which has the botanical characters of the cedar. Suppl. ad lex. Hebr.

—masts.—Though cedars have a thick and not a lofty trunk, masts consisting of different parts may be made of different cedars duly sized, or properly shaped if of too large a size.

thine oars: thy benches have they made of ivory, inlaid
 7 in box from the * isles of Chittim. Fine linen with embroidered work from Egypt was † spread forth by thee,

* Or, coasts.

† H, that which was spread forth.

6. —oaks.—That they might be strong. Cels. i. 72.

Nunc, o lecta manus, validis incumbite remis.

Æn. x. 294.

Houbigant translates alnos, quia alnus quercu multo levior. According to ó. the oars were of fir. For that translation should be pointed thus: τοῦ ποιῆσαι σοι ἰστούς. Ἐλατίνους ἐκ τῆς Βασανίτιδος ἐποίησαν τὰς κόπας σου, κ. λ.

—thy benches.—Perhaps the seats in the cabins of the royal galleys. In ó. the word is read plurally.

—of ivory, inlaid in box.—Reading with R. Salomo, Bochart, &c. בתאשרים. See Isai. xli. 19. lx. 13.

Quale per artem

Inclusum buxo, aut Oricia terebintho,

Lucet ebur.

Æn. x. 139.

We may allow that the benches of some Tyrian ships were adorned with streaks of ivory inlaid in box. But in one MS. ןש is wanting; and the insertion of this word may have arisen from the similar ending of ןש, written ןשן, or ןש, with the kibbutz for the vau. Then the rendering would be, “Thy benches they have made of box-trees” &c. agreeably to what precedes from the beginning of v. 5. Mr. Dimock concurs with me in omitting ןש.

—Chittim.—Italy. Vulg. Bochart. Numb. xxiv. 24. Dan. xi. 30. “The islands and coasts of the Mediterranean.” Bp. Lowth on Isai. xxiii. 1. Corsica was famous for the box-tree. Chittim was a son of Javan. Gen. x. 4. Cetia was a city of Latium: The Cetii were a people of Italy; and Cetus was a river near Cumæ. Boch.

7. —with embroidered work.—Μετὰ ποικιλίας. ó. Two MSS. read רקמה without ב. Michaelis calls this chapter antiquissimum historiæ mercatoriæ monumentum. Spic. hist. geogr. p. 42.

Bishop Newton compares this luxury in the Tyrian shipping with the elegance and magnificence of Cleopatra’s galley, when she sailed on the river Cydnos to meet Antony. On prophecy. Diss. xi. Plut. i. p. 927. ed. Par.

to be * thy standard: blue and purple from the † isles of 8 Elisha were thy covering. The inhabitants of Sidon and Arvad were thy rowers: thy wise men, O Tyre, that were 9 in thee, were thy pilots: the ancients of Gebal, and the wise men thereof, were in thee ‡ thy calkers. All the ships of the sea, with their mariners, were in thee to trade 10 in thy market. They of Persia, and of Lud, and of Phut, were || thy warriors in thine army: they hanged
 the shield and the helmet in thee; they set forth thy 11 glory. The § men of Arvad, and thine army, were upon

* H. unto thee for a standard.

† Or, coasts.

‡ H. the strengtheners of thy breaches.

|| H. thy men of war.

§ H. sons.

—of Elisha.—Peloponnesus, famous for its purple. Boch. Hellas: Michaelis, spic. geogr. who observes that in the Samaritan copy the word is written אֵלִישׁ. It is also written thus in one Hebr. MS. and the ה is on a rasure in another. “Nec equidem Peloponnesum excludo, in qua—Hellenes—consedis—dicuntur ab Herodoto.” Mich. ubi supr.

—thy covering.—Perhaps the awning placed over part of the ship. Harmer. ii. 520.

8. —Arvad.—The island Aradus, at the mouth of the river Eleutherus, on the coast of Phœnicia. The Arvadite is mentioned Gen. x. 18.

—thy wise men, O Tyre.—“Videtur latere nomen loci sub literis רַצְוֹר.” Secker.

9 —Gebal.—Probably Biblos, on the coast of Phœnicia. E. Gibliis Græci fecere Biblios. Boch. de Phœn. col. L. 1. c. 1. p. 345. Gebal, mentioned ps. xxxiii. 7, is in Arabia.

—to trade in thy market.—Ut commercia tua exerceant. Houb. Ad negotiandum negotiationem tuam. Cappellus. לַעֲרוֹב 5 MSS. See v. 27.

10. —Lud.—We read that Mizraim begat Ludim. We also read that Lud was a son of Shem. Gen. x. 13. 22. Bochart thinks that Lud denotes African Ethiopia; but Michaelis places this people westward in Africa. Both think Lud an Egyptian colony. See geogr. sacr. and Mich. spic. geogr.

—Phut.—The African Nomades. Boch. See on Nah. iii. 9.

11. —and thine army.—Forte בְּחֵילְךָ “were in thine army:” as v.

thy walls round about, and the Gammadim were in thy towers: they hanged their quivers upon thy walls round 12 about: they made thy beauty perfect. Tarshish was thy trafficker, through the multitude of all thy substance; with silver, iron, tin, and lead, they furnished thy fairs.
 13 Javan, Tubal, and Meshech, these were thy merchants in the * persons of men; and with vessels of brass they fur-

* H. soul of man.

10. “רוחילך. Sic versiones. Sed videtur legendum ברוילך. Vide v. 10. et quæ sequuntur.” Secker.

—Gammadim.—Probably a people of Phœnicia; and perhaps the inhabitants of Ancon, ἀγκών and גמרא signifying a cubit. Pliny mentions Gamale a city of Phœnicia; for which some propose to read Gamade. L. ii. C. xci. שמרים, guards, is the reading of ó. Ar. Syr. Hallet iii. 18. גמרים, et Cimmerii, 8 MSS. These were anciently inhabitants of Crim Tartary. “Parvula simulacra, plerumque cubitalia, in domibus aut turibus ethnicorum, in earum tutelam, aut præsidium, collocata.” Spencer. ii. xxiv. iii. 464.

—quivers.—So the word signifies in Syr. See V. 6. and Jer. li. 11.

12. —Tarshish.—See on Jonah i. 3. Michaelis thinks that there was only the Spanish Tarshish; and that ships sailed to it from Ezion-geber round Africa. Spic. geogr. Spain was anciently remarkable for silver mines. Plin. l. xxxiii. c. vi.

—they furnished.—Dederunt sic accipiendum ut fecerunt esse nundinas tuas. Houb.

13. —Javan.—Greece. Dan. viii. 21. “Ionum nomen facile agnoscēs.” Mich. spic. geogr.

—Tubal and Meshech.—Sons of Japheth. Gen. x. 2. The people called Tibareni and Moschi are here meant; who are generally mentioned together, and were situated towards mount Caucasus. See Bochart and Michaelis.

—in the persons of men.—Ἀνδραποδισταί, or sellers of men for slaves, are branded by St. Paul as highly criminal. 1 Tim. i. 10. Thessaly abounded with them:

Ἐμπορος ἦκων ἐκ Θετταλίας παρὰ πλείστων ἀνδραποδιστῶν.

Aristoph. Plut. 521.

- 14 nished thy market. They of the house of Togarmah furnished thy fairs with horses, and horsemen, and mules.
15 The * men of Dedan were thy merchants: many † isles were the mart of thine ‡ handy-work: they returned thee 16 for thy price horns, ivory, and ebony. Syria was thy * H. sons.† Or, coasts.‡ H. hand.

Bochart observes that Pontus, to which the Tibareni extended themselves, was remarkable for slaves.

Mancipiis locuples eget æris Cappadocum rex. Hor.

And that the Grecian slaves were the most valuable of any.

Quibus Argivæ pulchræque ministrant
Thessalides, famulas et quæ meruere Lacænas.

Claud. l. ii. in Eutropium.

Nec tener Argolica missus de gente minister.

Mart. iv. 66.

—vessels of brass.—"Cupri fodinas in hunc usque diem Caucasus habet, in quo et Kubescha, vicus elegantîæ vasorum aeneorum nobilitatus. Arzeri præterea, quæ est urbs Armeniæ montanæ, adeoque in vicinia Moschicorum montium sita, plurima vasa aenea fieri, cuprique fodinas tridui abesse, auctor est Buschingius." Mich. Spic. Geogr. 50.

14.—Togarmah.—Some think that the Turcomanni are thus called. Bochart supposes that Cappadocia is meant. Michaelis prefers Armenia; which abounded in horses, and among the inhabitants of which a tradition prevailed that they were descended from Thorgom. The Greek scholiast on Ezekiel says, that some understood Togarmah of the Armenians: on which Michaelis lays much stress. Spic. geogr. p. 76. See Gen. x. 3. and c. xxxviii. 6.

15. —Dedan.—A city in the Persian Gulf, now called Daden. Boch. Mich. To this place the inhabitants of the eastern isles, or sea-coasts, brought their wares.

—the mart.—סחרות 1 MS. the marts.

—horns.—Some think that the long horns of the ibex, a kind of goat, are meant. Of these cups and bows were formed

—ebony.—

Sola India nigrum

Fert ebum.

Virg. G. ii. 117.

16. —Syria.—Edom. Syr. אֶדֶם ó. Ar. Syr. Hexapl. 13 MSS. 10

- trafficker, through the multitude of thine handy-works ; with rubies, purple, and embroidered work, and fine linen, and coral, and carbuncles, they furnished thy fairs.
- 17 Judah, and the land of Israel, * were thy merchants : with wheat, myrrh, and panic, and honey, and oil, and
- 18 balm, they furnished thy market. Damascus was thy trafficker in the multitude of thine handy-works, through the multitude of all thy substance ; in the wine of Helbon, * H. these were.

originally. See De Rossi. "The Syrian trade is mentioned afterwards under the name of Damascus ; and some merchandises are also mentioned which are not proper for Syria. The Syrians could buy purple from Tyre, but sell none to Tyre." Michaelis.

—carbuncles.—Some sparkling gem ; the root of the original word being כרר scintilla.

—thy fairs.—Three MSS. omit the preposition ב in the original. See v. 12, 13. and Houbigant.

17. —with wheat, myrrh.—The present reading is, "with wheat of Minnith," a city or district of the Ammonites, Judg. xi. 33. Houbigant reads with ó. ברחמים לוט ; see Gen. xliii. 11 : and observes that a produce of Judah or Israel must be referred to, and that wheat of Minnith is wholly unknown in the sacred writings. Syr. translates by רונס, rice. The Rev. Henry Dimock, in a learned sermon on Matth. v. 18, Oxford. 1783, proposes וית שים, wheat, olive.

—and panic.—Mr. Dimock, ubi supr. conjectures רפג, and the fig. As Syr. renders by a word which signifies millet, which panic resembles, I have translated by this latter word from the similarity of its sound to פכג. See Grotius. Panis fit e panico rarius. Plin. l. xviii. c. vii. The Massilians, when besieged by Cæsar, panico vetere omnes alebantur. B. C. ii. xxii. Though, according to Galen, it is dry and affords not much nutriment ; it might be useful in voyages, because it could be preserved for a long time. V. Luther, Houb. Dathius, and many others, suppose the word to mean balsam. Casia. ó.

18. —of Helbon.—'Εκ Χελβών. ó. MS. Vat. Mr. Dimock prefers הלבנון, of Lebanon. See Hos. xiv. 7. But he observes that Strabo and Hesychius mention Chalybonian wine as the produce of Syria. "It was so excellent that the Persian king drank no other : and Posidonius says that it grew in Damascus of Syria." Athen. Deipn. L. i. c. xxii. Casau-

19 and in white wool. Dan also, and Javan from Uzal, were in thy fairs: they furnished wrought iron: casia, and 20 sweet reed, * were in thy market. Dedan was thy mer-21 chant in gorgeous apparel for † horsemen. Arabia, and all the princes of Kedar, these were traffickers ‡ in thine handy-work: in lambs, and rams, and goats, in these they 22 became thy traffickers. The merchants of Sheba and bon's note is, Chalybonium vinum Strabo, Hesychius, Eustathius, nasci in Syria scribunt. See Strabo p. 735. marg. It is observed that, in Suidas, for οἶνος Χαλυδώνιος we should read Χαλυβώνιος. Mr. Lowth says that Helbon is the same part of Syria which is called Chalybonitis by Ptolemy; and that it is now called Aleppo.

* H. was.† H. riding.‡ H. of thine hand.

19. Dan also &c.—For דן Theod. and V. read דן. According to Drusius some Greek copies have Δαυδαν, and Jerom's text has Dedan. Grotius thinks that Dan in the kingdom of Israel can scarcely be meant here; and finds that a city named Dana is placed by Ptolemy in the island of Ceilon. דן is a city of Idumea. See Phaleg. l. iv. c. vi. The very learned Michaelis, on Gen. x. 27, supposes Vudan, as well as Javan, to be a city, or people, of Arabia Felix.

By Javan from Uzal we may understand inhabitants of the district of Javan, or Jeman, in Arabia, from Uzal a city of that district. Boch. Phaleg. l. ii. c. xxi. Gen. x. 27. From Uzal. ó. Ar. Syr. “Azal nomen Sanaæ, quæ metropolis Arabiæ Felicis.” Camusus, teste Golio. Michaelis on Gen. x. 27.

—wrought iron.—Or, bright. See עשתי. עשת ó. V. See Houb. עשות, for לעשות, ut fabrefaceres. Syr. “Ferrum fabrefactum. Refero ad radicem עשת, fabricare, cogitare, moliri aliquid: unde nomen Thalmudicum עשת, lamina ferrea. Buxt. lex. Rabb.” Michaelis. Gen. x. 27.

20. —for horsemen.—Ad equitandum. Cappellus. The ה is paragogie. For בגרי ó. read בגרי.

21. —Kedar.—Kedareni Arabes, quod nigrorem contrahant a sole. Boch. Phaleg. iv. ii.

—in these they became thy traffickers.—Houbigant joins the words, במסחרך, pro mercaturis tuis. Or מסחר may signify forum, nundinæ.

22. Sheba.—A people of Arabia Felix.

Solis est thurea virga Sabæis.

Virg. G. ii. 117.

Raamah, these were thy merchants: with the chief of all spices, and with all precious stones, and with gold, they 23 furnished thy fairs. Haran, and Calneh, and Eden, were thy merchants: Sheba, Ashur, and Chilmad, were in thy 24 market. These were thy merchants in excellent wares; in * mantles of blue and of embroidered work; and in chests of † rich apparel, bound with cords and made of cedar,

* H wrappers.

† Or, variegated.

—Raamah.—Raamah was son of Cush and father of Sheba. Gen. x. 7. According to Bochart, Raamah is a city of Arabia on the Persian Gulf. But Michaelis, spic. geogr. alleges authority for supposing that it may be a city of Arabia Felix.

23. Haran.—Not Charan; or Charraë, a city of Mesopotamia; but Haran Alcarin in Arabia. Michaelis.

—Calneh.—This is the reading of Grotius and Houbigant. Calneh, or Ctesiphon, in Babylonia, is mentioned Gen. x. 10. Is. x. 9. Am. vi. 2. But Michaelis observes that Chald. here understands Canneh of the city Nesibis in Mesopotamia. Spic. geogr. 227, 9. However, in his note on this verse he says that Canna is a cape and port of Arabia Felix on the Indian sea, in the country of Hadramaut.

—Eden.—Mentioned with Haran, 2 Kings xix. 12, and probably in Adiabene, as Chald. has נַדְרִיב in the London Polyglot. See Bochart. Phaleg. iv. xix. 241. and Pol. Syn. But Michaelis understands it of Aden, a port of Arabia Felix.

—Sheba.—“This is probably another Saba, as it appears from Gen. x, 7, 28, that there were three nations of this name.” Michaelis.

—and Chilmad.—We find the connexive particle and in V. 6. Ar. Chald. Carmania: 6. Ar. Media: Chald. Charmandæ, urbs trans Euphratem. Steph. See Bochart. Can. i. xviii. p. 442.

24. —in excellent wares.—In rebus perfectissimis: Grot. absolutissimis: Castalio. pretiosissimas merces: Dathius. pretiosis vestibus: Houb. See c. xxiii. 12. xxxviii. 4.

—of rich apparel.—בָּרַם is funis bicolor, tænia: Arab. and מְבָרַם, vestis e contortis filis contexta. Gol.

—bound &c.—We find חֲבוּשִׁים and אֲרוּזִים in MSS. This description of the chests seems unnatural, and אֲרוּזִים does not occur elsewhere. It is very difficult to propose a satisfactory sense. Possibly חֲבָלִים may denote “cords of fine linen, purple, or silk;” Esth. i. 6; חֲבוּשִׁים, “tur-

- 25 * among thy merchandise. The ships of Tarshish were thy chief traders in thy market: and thou wast filled, and wast made very glorious, in the heart of the seas.
- 26 The rowers have brought thee into great waters: the
- 27 east-wind hath broken thee in the heart of the seas. Thy substance, and thy fairs, thy markets, thy sailors, and thy pilots, thy † calkers, and the traders in thy market, and all thy warriors that are in thee, and all thy company that is in the midst of thee, shall fall in the heart of the seas,
- 28 in the day of thy fall. At the sound of the cry of thy
- 29 pilots the suburbs shall shake: and all that handle the oar shall come down from their ships, the mariners and all
- 30 the pilots of the sea shall stand upon the ‡ shore, and

* Or, in thy market.

† H. the strengtheners of thy breaches.

‡ H. land.

bans bound on the head, or some other ornament bound about the body:” and for אַרְוִיִּים perhaps we should read חַרְוִיִּים, “rows of jewels for the neck, hands, or feet.” See אַרְוִיִּים Cocc. lex.

—among thy merchandise.—Or, בִּם רִכְלֶיךָ “in these was thy merchandise.” See 6. MS. Al.

25. —thy chief traders.—See שׂוֹר Tayl. conc.

26. —into great waters.—Altum urges. Hor. Under these beautiful and expressive figures Tyre is represented as brought into danger by her statesmen, and destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar. Grotius refers to Hor. od. l. i. xiv.

27. —thy markets.—מַעְרָבִיךָ 1°. 6 MSS. and 2°. one MS.

—and all thy company.—וְכָל MSS. edd. 6. Syr. Ch. V. reads בְּכָל, “with all thy company.”

—shall fall in the heart of the seas.—The image may be carried on from v. 26: “Shall cease with respect to thee, as if they were sunk in the ocean.” Or, “Shall fall, notwithstanding thy strong situation in the sea.” See v. 32.

28. At the sound of the cry &c.—Some of the Tyrian pilots endeavoured to escape, but were intercepted in the suburbs. See c. xxvi. 15.

29. —and all the pilots.—All the ancients supply and.

—upon the shore.—The shore of the adjoining island; from which they viewed the conflagration of their city.

shall cause their voice to be heard for thee, and shall cry out * bitterly, and shall cast dust upon their heads, they 31 shall wallow themselves in ashes: and they shall make their head bald for thee, and gird them with sackcloth: and they shall weep for thee with bitterness of soul, and
 32 bitter mourning: and in their wailing they shall * take up for thee a lamentation, and shall lament over thee, saying, "What city is as Tyre, which is cut off in the 33 midst of the sea?" When thy wares went forth from the seas, thou didst satisfy many ‡ people: with the multitude of thy substance, and of thy merchandise, thou didst 34 enrich the kings of the earth. Now art thou broken in the seas, and thy merchandise in the midst of the waters; and all thy company in the midst of thee are fallen. All

* II. in bitterness.

† Or, utter.

‡ II. peoples.

Jerom says, from the ancient histories of the Assyrians, that, when the safety of the city was despaired of, great numbers of the Tyrians secured themselves and their riches in their ships.

31. —and they shall make &c.—Three MSS. read עֲלִיךְ; and MSS. and edd. read קָרַח. Φαλακρῶσουσιν ἐπὶ σὲ φαλάκρωμα. Theod.

32. —in their wailing.—Reading by transposition בְּנֵהִים. V. The present reading signifies their sons, or, their children; sc. of the mariners and pilots: ó. Ar. Syr. Theod. some MSS. and edd. represent it, and Dathius says that beyond doubt it is the true reading.

—which is cut off.—I read נִדְמָה with Houbigant; but suppose it the participle Niphal, excisa: in which I have the pleasure to find the concurrence of Mr. Dimock. "Quis fuerat per maria Tyro similis?" Houb. But כְּדֹמָה 14 MSS. 3 edd. "as she that is put to silence:" quæ obmutuit: V. Part. Pahlul from דָּוַם silere.

33. —went forth &c.—Were landed at the several marts.

—of thy substance.—הוֹנֵךְ 2 MSS.

34. —Now.—V. ó. Ar. Chald. read עַתָּה.

—in the seas.—ó. Ar. Houbigant: who observes that בְּעַמְקֵי follows.

—are fallen.—After נָפְלוּ ó. read בְּלִשְׁטִיךְ, πάντες οἱ κωπηλάται σου,

- 35 the inhabitants of the isles are astonished at thee; and their kings * are horribly afraid, they are troubled in their 36 countenance. The traffickers among the people hiss at thee: thou art become † a terror; and thou shalt not be any more for ever.

---

CHAPTER XXVIII.

- 1 ALSO the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying :
 2 Son of man, say unto the prince of Tyre, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Because thine heart is lifted up, and thou hast said, “ I am a god, I sit in the seat of God, in the heart of the seas ;” whereas thou art a man, and not God, though thou set thine heart as the 3 heart of God: lo, thou art wiser than Daniel, there is no
 4 secret which can be hidden from thee: by thy wisdom and * H. are afraid with horror.

† H. terrors.

---

as Cappellus observes. “ And all thy company in the midst of thee: all thy rowers are fallen.”

36. — a terror.—See c. xxvi. 21.

2. — the prince of Tyre.—Ithobal. See on c. xxvi. 7.

— in the seat of God.—“ Inaccessible by mortals.” Seeker.

3. — wiser than Daniel.—In thy own conceit. That the wisdom of Daniel might be famous at this time, see on c. xiv. 14; and on c. xxvi. 1.

— which can be hidden.—There is no abstruse matter which men can hide from thee. This form of expression is rightly understood by the authors of the Vulgate version and of the Chaldee paraphrase. Omne secretum non est absconditum a te. Et omne secretum [arcanum, mysterium] non abscondetur a te. In like manner V. and Ch. render מלסוד, v. 16. See also c. xxx. 4. וְלִקְדוֹר, et ablata fuerit. Vulg. So Luke xii.

- by thine understanding thou hast gotten thee substance, 5 and hast gotten gold and silver in thy treasures: by the greatness of thy wisdom, and by thy merchandise, thou hast multiplied thy wealth, and thine heart is lifted up 6 because of thy wealth: therefore thus saith the Lord
 Jehovah: Because thou hast set thine heart as the heart
 7 of God, therefore, lo, I will bring upon thee strangers, the terrible of the nations; and they shall draw their swords against the beauty of thy wisdom, and shall defile thy bright-8 ness. They shall bring thee down to the pit, and thou shalt die * the death of the slain, in the heart of the seas.
 9 † Wilt thou indeed say, “I am a god,” before them that kill thee? whereas thou art a man, and not God, in the 10 hand of them that slay thee. Thou shalt die the ‡ death of the uncircumcised by the hand of strangers: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord Jehovah.

* H. by the deaths.

† II. Saying wilt thou say.

‡ II. deaths.

48.  $\phi$  παρέθεντο πολὺν, περισσώτερον αἰτήσουσιν αὐτόν. See also Luke vi. 38.

5. —and by thy merchandise.—Five MSS. and the ancients read with the vau. The Hebrew is well represented in V. In multitude—multiplicasti.

6. —Because.—Resumed from v. 2.

7. —their swords.—After this word ó. Ar. add עֲלֵידָו. And they shall draw their swords [against thee, and] against the beauty of thy wisdom.

8. —and thou shalt die.—Read וּמָתָה, with the Dagesch forte in the last letter.

—in the heart of the seas.—Notwithstanding the proud, and seemingly impregnable, situation of thy city. See c. xxvii. 27, 32.

9. —before them that kill thee.—הַרְגֵיךָ plurally, 22 MSS. 3 edd. ó. Ar. Syr. V.

—them that slay thee.—מַחֲלֵיךָ MSS. V. Syr.

10. —of the uncircumcised.—Contemptissimorum: Houb. from the Arab. عَرْلٌ amotus fuit. But Dathius agrees with Schnurrer that the

- 11 THE WORD of Jehovah came also unto me, saying ;
 12 Son of man, * take up a lamentation for the king of Tyre, and say † concerning him,
 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah:
 Thou art like a signet of ‡ curious engraving;
 Thou art full of wisdom, and perfect in beauty.
 13 Thou hast been in Eden, the garden of God.
 Every precious stone hath been thy covering;
 The ruby, the topaz, and the diamond,
 The beryl, the onyx, and the jasper,
 The sapphire, the emerald, and the carbuncle :
 And of gold was the workmanship of thy tabrets, and of thy pipes, because of thee :

* Or, utter. † Or, unto. ‡ H. of similitude, or, form, or, figure.

Jews might proudly call other nations the uncircumcised, as the Greeks gave them the contemptuous name of barbarians. See 1 Sam. xvii. 36.

12. —a signet of curious engraving.—See Jer. xxii. 24. Hagg. ii. 23. Houbigant observes that all the ancients read תבנית similitudinis : hoc est, effigiem habens in sculpturâ suâ. This is also the reading of 8 MSS. and of 3 originally. Dathius renders, Tu es annulus bene figuratus.

13. —in Eden.—Thou hast enjoyed every delight. Houbigant proposes בעֵדֶן, us Eden; and 1 MS. reads thus; but, as it seems, by accident.

—thy covering.—In the canopy of thy throne. Or, thy garments have been adorned with them.

—The ruby &c.—Observe, with Cappellus and Menochius, that ó. enumerate twelve precious stones. See Exod. xxviii. 17—20. Rev. xxi. 19, 20. The Greek version also adds, “and silver and gold.”

—And of gold.—Six MSS. 2 edd. and V. read זהב. The tabrets and pipes might be bound with gold.

Tibia non, ut nunc, orichalco vineta. Hor. But ó Syr. read מלאת thou hast filled; and perhaps for תופיך, תופיך, תופיך, or תופך, (see MSS.) תובך, or תוכך, the midst of thee, i. e. of thy treasures: see ó. v. 16: and they seem to understand נקביך, or נקבך as 2 MSS. read, in the sense of antrum, excavatio, “caverns serving for repositories;” the root in Sam. Ar. signifying fodere. V. reads יפִיך, decoris tui.

—because of thee.—Mr. Lowth. Or, in the city subject to thee.

In the day when thou wast * born they were prepared.

14 I made thee as the anointed covering Cherub ;

Thou wast upon the holy mountain of God ;

Thou didst † remain amidst the stones of fire.

15 Thou wast perfect in thy ways from the day when thou wast ‡ born,

* H. created.

† H. walk to and fro.

‡ H. created.

See v. 18. בך is not expressed V. Syr. and may denote that the foregoing word is differently read, ונקבין—בך; two MSS. as I have observed, omitting ך.

—In the day &c.—Ed. Complut. ó. Ar. Syr. read מיום. The sense is the same, whether we interpret, From, or, In, the day of thy nativity.

14. I made thee.—נרתין ó. Ar. Houbigant. Caph final, a similar letter to vau, precedes. נת is transitive.

—The anointed covering Cherub.—The particle of similitude כ, as, like, is understood. The two Cherubim of beaten gold were part of the ark, and therefore anointed. Exod. xxv. 18, 21. xxx. 26. One MS. reads כמשך, which answers to extensus, in Vulg. and which Grotius thought to be Jerom's reading. See Exod. xxv. 20. The two Cherubim covered, כספים, the mercy seat with their wings.

In this lamentation, wisdom beauty magnificence splendour and perfection are attributed to the king of Tyre. He likewise bore an exalted and sacred office. On these accounts he is compared to one of the angelic orders. Proculdubio vox illa, Cherub, potentiam & magnitudinem illam indicat, qua rex ille vicinos, immo & semetipsum, superavit, ex quo Deus illum ad sedem regiam evexisset. Spencer. p. 844.

—Thou wast &c.—The image of the Cherub is pursued. “Such was thy eminent distinction, that thou wast, as it were, placed in the temple of God on his holy mountain. Thou wast, as it were, conversant among the twelve precious stones on the breast plate of the high priest, which shone like fire.” See Mr. Lowth. Whenever God, who dwelt between the Cherubim, was approached, the high priest wore his breast plate. Exod. xxviii. 30. 1 Sam. xxviii. 6. The allegory is bold, after Ezekiel's manner.

“Thinking himself more than a mortal, is expressed by being, as Adam was, in paradise; and, as the Cherubim were, in a place not to be approached.” Secker.

Until iniquity was found in thee.

- 16 Through the multitude of thy merchandise * they have filled the midst of thee with violence;

And thou hast sinned, therefore I will cast thee as profane out of the mountain of God;

And I will destroy thee, O covering Cherub, from amidst the stones of fire.

- 17 Thine heart was lifted up because of thy beauty:

Thou hast corrupted thy wisdom by reason of thy brightness:

I will cast thee to the ground;

I will lay thee before kings, that they may see their desire on thee.

- 18 Through the multitude of thine iniquities, by the unrighteousness of thy traffick,

Thou hast profaned thy sanctuaries:

Therefore will I bring forth a fire from the midst of thee, † which shall devour thee;

And I will bring thee to ashes upon the earth,

Before the eyes of all that look upon thee.

* Or, the midst of thee is filled.

† H. it.

15. —was found &c.—F. במצאה. Until degeneracy of manners was found in thee, and the people had filled up the measure of their iniquity.

16. —they have filled.—Three MSS. two of which are among the most ancient, read מלאו. Houbigant conjectures מלא plenum est. Syr. 6. Ar. read very well מלאות, thou hast filled.

17. —that they may see &c.—לראות 1 MS. “Forte לראות.” Secker. For the phrase, see Obad. 12, 13. Ps. liv. 8. lix. 11. cxviii. 7.

18. —thy sanctuaries.—Or, thy sanctuary. See MSS. edd. “The lxx read חללתי in the first person, which agrees with ראויציא.” Mr. Dimock.

—from the midst of thee.—See v. 16.—From the midst of that city over which thou rulest. Thee, in the following line, seems to include both the city and its king.

19 All that know thee among the * people shall be astonished at thee :

Thou † shalt become a terror ; and thou shalt not be any more for ever.

20 THE WORD of Jehovah came also unto me, saying :

21 Son of man, set thy face against Sidon, and prophesy

22 against her, and say :

Thus saith the Lord Jehovah : Lo, I am against thee, O Sidon ; and I will be glorified in the midst of thee.

And they shall know that I am Jehovah, when I execute 23 judgments in her, and am sanctified in her. And I will send upon her pestilence, and blood in her streets. And the wounded shall fall in the midst of her, by the sword which shall be upon her from every side : and they shall know that I am Jehovah.

24 And there shall be no more unto the house of Israel a

* H. peoples.

† H. art become terrors.

19. — Thou shalt become, &c.—Repeated from c. xxvii. 36. MS. Copt. adds at the end of this v. “Ego Dominus, ego dixi.”

21. — Sidon.—The mother-city of Tyre. See Justin l. xviii. c. iii.

22 — And they shall know.—“And thou shalt know,” וידעת, ó. here, and ó. MS. A. v. 23.

— judgments in her.—בך, in thee, ó. Ar. Chald. 3 MSS. and a fourth now.

— sanctified in her.—בך, in thee, ó. Ar. 1 MS. originally, and a second now.

23. — upon her.—בך, upon thee, ó. MS. Al. It is wanting in one MS.

— in her streets.—In thy streets, ó. Ar. 1 MS.

— shall fall.—ונפל one MS. ascribed to the beginning of the twelfth century, 3 originally, V. ó. Ar. Syr. ונפל החלל, 1 MS.

— in the midst of her.—Of thee, ó. Ar.

— upon her.—Upon thee, ó. Ar.

pricking brier, or a grieving thorn, of all that are round about them that despised them: and they shall know that I am [the Lord] Jehovah.

- 25 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: When I assemble the house of Israel from the * people among whom they are scattered; then will I be sanctified through them in the sight of the nations, and they shall dwell in their land 26 which I gave to my servant, even to Jacob; they shall even dwell therein securely, and shall build houses and plant vineyards and dwell securely, when I have executed judgments upon all that despised them round about: and they shall know that I am Jehovah their God.

* II. peoples.

24. —grieving.—מַגְרִיב, MSS. 3 edd.

—of all.—Nebuchadnezzar subdued all the ancient enemies of the Jews.

—that I am [the Lord] Jehovah.—יְהוָה, the Lord, is omitted in 9 MSS. ó. MS. Vat. But ó. MS. Al. read as at the end of v. 26, Jehovah their God.

25. —among whom.—For בִּם MSS. and some edd. read שָׁם.

—even to Jacob.—So Chald. The other ancients and 1 MS. read יַעֲקֹב, Jacob. Or, rather, the ancient translators render thus; as does the author of the English version.

CHAPTER XXIX.

- 1 IN THE tenth year, in the tenth month, on the twelfth day of the month, the word of Jehovah came unto me, 2 saying; Son of man, set thy face against Pharaoh king of Egypt, and prophesy against him and against * all 3 Egypt: Speak and say:

Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Lo, I am against thee,

* II. Egypt all of it.

1. —tenth year.—The twelfth year: ó. MS. Vat. and "ἄλλος in Montf. Hex. Dathins justly remarks that this and the three following chapters are joined together, because they treat of the same subject; though they consist of prophecies uttered at very different periods of time.

—tenth month.—Eleventh month: ó. MS. Al. MS. Copt. twelfth month: Arab. MS. Pachom.

—twelfth day.—First day: ó. The period assigned in the present text is during the siege of Jerusalem; and, agreeably to v. 6, 7, may be immediately after Pharaoh's retreat, foretold by Jeremiah, c. xxxvii. 7.

2. —Egypt.—Ruina Tyri exceptit Ægyptus. Historia utraque obscura est, ac præter prophetas a nemine tradita. Clades Ægypto illata in sacris literis pleno ore denunciatur; ut mirum sit apud exteros tantum esse de ea silentium. Marsham. p. 541.

Sacerdotes illi Ægyptii, qui Herodoto seiscitanti de rebus Ægyptiacis respondebant, ea quæ ad laudem gentis faciebant tantum docuerunt, cætera quæ ad illorum ignaviam, servitutem, & tributa quæ Chaldæis pendebant, tacuerunt. Atqui ex Beroso & Jeremia constat illos reges Ægyptios precario regnasse, & Babyloniis vectigales fuisse. Scalig. in Fragm. p. 11.

Eusebius Psammi dat annos 12, Vaphri 30, id est, undecim plures quam iis impertitus est Herodotus. Hiatus iste, sive annorum undecim ἀναρχία, cum calamitatibus Ægypto a Nabuchodonoso illatis convenienter se habet. Marsham. 543.

Pharaoh king of Egypt ; the great * dragon that lieth in the midst of his rivers, that saith, “ My † river is mine
 4 own, and I have made it for myself : ” and I will put hooks in thy jaws, and I will make the fish of thy rivers cleave to thy scales, and I will bring thee up out of the midst of thy rivers, and all the fish of thy rivers shall 5 cleave to thy scales. And I will leave thee in the desert,

* Or, crocodile.

† Or, rivers are—made them—

3. —the great dragon.—הַתַּנִּין 17 MSS. The crocodile is alluded to. “ Among the ancients it was a symbol of Egypt ; and appears so on Roman coins.” Michaelis. Milton has this sublime passage in view :

Thus with ten wounds

The river-dragon tam'd at length submits.

Par. Lost. xii. 190.

See Addison. Spect. n. 369. D'Herbelot cites an eastern poet, who, celebrating the prowess of a most valiant Persian prince, said, He was dreadful as a lion in the field, and not less terrible in the water than a crocodile. Harmer. ii. 529. See c. xxxii. 2 : where both these comparisons are used.

—rivers.—The Nile had seven mouths. Rivers also emptied themselves into it, and channels were cut from it.

—have made it for myself.—That עָשִׂיתִי לִי may be equivalent to עָשִׂיתִי לִי, see on Zech. vii. 5. This vaunting language agrees with what Herodotus relates of Pharaoh-Hophra, (See Jer. xlv. 30) or Apries. “ This is said to have been the persuasion of Apries, that no God was able to deprive him of his kingdom.” L. ii. §. 169. p. 186. Ed. Wess. See Grotius.

4. —hooks.—הַחֲזִיבִים MSS. edd. Houbigant. See on c. xxxviii. 4. This refers to the conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar : see Jer. xliii. 10. xlv. 30 : and also to the defeat of Apries by the Cyreneans, and by Amasis. Herod. ii. §. 161.

—the fish.—Pharaoh's subjects, or auxiliaries.

—and all the fish.—וְאֵת is wanting in four MSS. אֵת is sometimes used before the nominative case. Or, we may point thus : “ And all the fish of thy rivers : they shall cleave to thy scales.”

5. —thee in the desert.—In siccum solum. Dathius. Or, we may here have an allusion to the heavy loss which Apries and his Egyptian

- even* thee and all the fish of thy rivers: thou shalt fall on the * open field, thou shalt not be gathered together nor assembled: to the beasts of the field, and to the fowls of 6 the heavens, I have given thee for food. And all the inhabitants of Egypt shall know that I am Jehovah; because they have been a staff of reed to the house of 7 Israel: when they took hold of thee with their hand, thou wast crushed, and didst tear all their shoulder; when they leaned on thee, thou wast broken, and didst strain all their loins.
- 8 Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Lo, I will bring a sword upon thee, and will cut off from thee man 9 and beast: and the land of Egypt shall be † desolate and waste; and they shall know that I am Jehovah. Because army sustained in the expedition against the Cyreneans; towards whom they must have marched over the desert. Herod. ii. §. 161. Apries himself did not fall in battle; but was taken prisoner by Amasis, and strangled by the Egyptians. Herodotus, ii. §. 169. Jer. xlv. 30.

* H. the face of the field.

† H. for desolation and wasteness.

—thou shalt fall,—תפל MSS. edd. Houb. A king is said to be defeated, or victorious, when his armies are so. See Mr. Lowth.

—nor assembled.—To the dead, in the sepulchres allotted for them. קבץ signifies to bury, Hos. ix. 6. Jer. viii. 2.

6. —they have been a staff of reed.—The image is taken from 2 Kings xviii. 21. Isai. xxxvi. 6. Dathius observes that ó. Syr. V. render thou wast, היית, or הייתך: but that perhaps they had translated thus to make the connection with the following verse more easy. הייתכם, ye were, 1 MS.

7. —with their hand.—בכף, with the hand, MSS. edd. בכפם, with their hand ó. Houb.

—and didst strain.—והמערת, a transposition found in Pol. syn. and Tayl. conc. and approved of by Houbigant, who renders inrasti, vacillare fecisti. Dissolvisti. V. “Omnino legendum והמערת. Patet res ex ps. lxix. 23.” Seeker.

- thou hast said, "The river is mine, and I have made it," 10 therefore, lo, I am against thee and against thy river; and I will give up the land of Egypt to * desolation † by the sword and to wasteness, from Migdol to Syene, even 11 to the border of ‡ Ethiopia. There shall not pass through it the foot of man, and the foot of beast shall not pass through it; neither shall it be inhabited forty years.
 12 And I will make the land of Egypt § waste, in the midst of lands that are wasted; and her cities, in the midst of cities that are made desolate, shall be || waste forty years :
 and I will scatter the Egyptians through the nations, and * H. desolations. † Or. to. ‡ H. Chus. § H. a wasteness.

 || H. a wasteness.

9. —and I have made it.—עשיתני, as v. 3, 1 MS. another originally, and a third now. I greatly prefer this reading.

10. —by the sword.—וחרב, and to the sword: ó. Ar. The word is omitted in Syr. as if it were a different reading of the preceding word.

—and to wasteness.—ושממה ó. Ar. Chald. and ἄλλος in Montf. Hex.

—from Migdol &c.—So c. xxx. 6, we should render "from Migdol to Syene," as Mr. Lowth, and Prideaux, ann. 573, observe. The ה in סונה may be local. Migdol, or Magdulus, is mentioned Exod. xiv. 2. Num. xxxiii. 7. Jer. xlv. 1. xlv. 14: and from the passage in Exodus it appears to be situated towards the north of Egypt. Antoninus places it at the entrance into Egypt, twelve miles from Pelusium. Boch. Phal. iv. xxvii. p. 277. It is well known that Syene was to the south of Egypt, under the tropic of Cancer, and bordering on African Ethiopia.

—even to.—עד, to, 6 MSS. The preposition also signifies juxta. Nold. §. 14.

11. —forty years.—After the total defeat of Apries by the Cyreneans, in which so many Egyptians fell that the whole nation was enraged against their king, a civil war with Amasis followed, a conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar, and another conquest of it by Cyrus. We learn from this passage during what period of years Egypt was desolated, and, in a manner, deserted.

12. —in the midst of lands that are wasted.—By the extensive conquests of Nebuchadnezzar, and afterwards of Cyrus.

—shall be waste.—תהיינה MSS. 2 edd. c. xxx. 7.

—scatter the Egyptians.—Berosus informs us that Nebuchadnezzar

- 13 will disperse them through the lands. Yet thus saith the Lord Jehovah: After the end of forty years, I will assemble the Egyptians from among the * people whither 14 they are scattered. And I will bring again the captivity of the Egyptians, and will cause them to return into the land of Pathros, unto the land of their origin; and they
 15 shall be there a low kingdom: it shall be the lowest of the kingdoms, neither shall it exalt itself any more above the nations: and I will diminish them, that they rule not 16 over the nations. And they shall no more † be the confidence of the house of Israel, calling their iniquity to remembrance when they turn after them: but they shall know that I am [the Lord] Jehovah.

- 17 Now IT came to pass in the twenty-seventh year, in the first month, on the first day of the month, that the word of

* H. peoples.

† H. to the house of Israel a confidence.

carried many Egyptians captives to Babylon; and Megasthenes, that he transplanted others to Pontus. See Bp. Newton on the prophecies. 8vo. i. 362. 3d ed. 4°. p. 198, 9.

13 —the end of forty years.—Probably at the settlement of the kingdom by Cyrus.

14. —Pathros.—Phaturites Nomos in Thebaide. Plin. Boch. Phal. iv. xxvii. p. 277. אל ארץ פתרוס, 2 MSS. and again אל ארץ for ארץ על, 3 MSS. 2 originally, and the 3 first edd.

—a low kingdom.—In general, it shall be tributary and in subjection to strangers; to Nebuchadnezzar, to Cyrus, to Cambyses, to Artaxerxes Ochus, to the Macedonians, to the Romans, to the Mamalucs, and to the Turks. See Bishop Newton on the prophecies: Dissert. xii.

16. And they shall no more be.—So all the ancients; as if they read ידיו.

—calling their iniquity to remembrance.—Causing God to remember, and to punish, the iniquity of his people.

—the Lord Jehovah.—אדני is wanting in 12 MSS. and in 6. MS. Vat.

17. —the twenty-seventh year.—If the date be genuine, (and there

- 18 Jehovah came unto me, saying: Son of man, Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon caused his army to serve a great service against Tyre: every head was made bald, and every shoulder was peeled: yet neither he nor his army had wages from Tyre, for the service which he served
- 19 against it. Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah; Lo, I will give the land of Egypt unto Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon; and he shall take her multitude, and * share her spoil, and † seize her plunder; and she shall be wages
- 20 for his army. For his labour wherewith he served against it, I have given him the land of Egypt; because of that which they have done against me, saith the Lord Jehovah.

* H. spoil.

† H. plunder.

is no variation in the ancient versions, or in MSS.) this is the last prophecy which Ezekiel uttered. Prideaux argues that the Phœnician annals agree with this date. Anno 573. Nebuchadnezzar 32.

18. —Nebuchadnezzar.—Ten MSS. and 6. Ar. V. Syr. read thus. So v. 19, 5 MSS. and 6. Ar. V. Syr.

—made bald.—By the helmet, by disease, and by labour.

—peeled.—Worn, galled, by bearing burthens.

—had wages.—"We have read in the histories of the Assyrians, that, when the Tyrians were besieged, after they saw no hope of escaping, they went on board their ships, and fled to Carthage, or to some islands of the Ionian and Egean sea." Hieron. on Isai. xxiii. 6. "When the Tyrians saw that the works for carrying on the siege were perfected, and the foundations of the walls were shaken by the battering of the rams, whatsoever precious things in gold silver clothes and various kinds of furniture the nobility had, they put them on board their ships, and carried them to the islands; so that, the city being taken, Nebuchadnezzar found nothing worthy of his labour." Hieron. in loc. Bishop Newton on prophecy. Diss. xi.

20. —they have done against me.—The Egyptians. So Chald. See v. 3. But Houbigant renders as our English version: "quia operam suam pro me posuerunt, cum urbem Tyrum, ex meis consiliis delendam, deleverunt. עשו עשרו pertinet ad הויל." Pro eo quod laboraverit mihi: עשה, Vulg.

- 21 In that day I will cause the horn of the house of Israel to bud; and I will give thee an opening of thy mouth in the midst of them: and they shall know that I am Jehovah.

---

CHAPTER XXX.

- 1 THE WORD of Jehovah came also unto me, saying ;
 2 Son of man, prophesy, and say,
 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Howl ye, alas for the 3 day ! Because the day is near, it is near: the day of Jehovah shall be a day of * clouds, it shall be the time of * H. a cloud.

---

21. —the horn.—The enlargement of Jehoiachin may be referred to. See 2 Kings xxv. 27. Jer. lii. 31. Daniel, and Shedrach, Meshach and Abednego, were also advanced to authority. Dan. ii. 48, 49. iii. 30. These marks of favour bestowed on the Jews were preludes to their general restoration. Whatever event is foretold, Ezekiel lived to be animated by it in the execution of his prophetical office.

—of the house.—לְבַלְבֵּית. ó.

—an opening of thy mouth.—See c. xxiv. 27. The accomplishment of Ezekiel's prophecies would give him authority. Ezekiel might also take occasion to observe how Jeremiah's predictions were fulfilled: Jer. xliii. 10. xlii. 17.

1. —came also unto me.—Probably at the time mentioned c. xxix. 17.

2.—alas for the day!—הֵדָה is repeated in ó. Ar. Vulg. "alas, alas, for [or, because of] the day!"

—it is near.—Syr. reads קרוב without ו: and ó. omit יום וקרוב, as if וקרוב were a different reading of קרוב. "Because the day of Jehovah is near: it shall be a day of clouds, and the time of the nations."

3. —the time.—The appointed time of the nations, whom Nebuchadnezzar was to destroy.

- 4 the nations. And the sword shall come upon Egypt; and great pain shall be in Ethiopia, when the slain shall fall in Egypt, and * they shall take away her multitude, and 5 her foundations shall be destroyed. Ethiopia, and Phut, and Lud, and all Arabia, and Chub, and † the men of every country that is ‡ in league, shall fall with them by the sword.
- 6 Thus saith Jehovah: They that uphold Egypt shall fall, and the pride of her strength shall come down: from Migdol to Syene shall they fall in her by the sword, saith 7 the Lord Jehovah. And they shall be wasted in the midst of lands that are wasted; and her cities shall be in 8 the midst of cities that are made desolate. And they

* Or, her multitude shall be taken away. † H. the sons. ‡ H. of league.

4. —and they shall take away.—See on c. xxviii. 3.

5. —and all Arabia.—So Symmachus.

—and Chub.—In Mareotis, an Egyptian province, according to Ptolemy. Grot. “The ancient geographers have a mercantile town Kube on the Indian sea, under the 8th degree of north latitude.” Michaelis. Throughout the scriptures mention of this people does not occur elsewhere. Kai Libnes, kai Aithiopes, kai p̄sa ē Ap̄bia. Some copies of ó. ed. Sixt. Quint. But Chub is not represented in any copy.

—country.—ארץ is omitted in ó. Ar. “And all Arabia, and Chub, and those that are in league.” Hebr. “the sons of the league.” But ó. Ar. “of my league:” which may be a periphrasis for the Jews who took refuge in Egypt after the murder of Gedaliah. Jer. xli. 17.

Omnis eo terrore Ægyptus, et Indi,
 Omnis Arabs, omnes verterunt terga Sabæi.

Æn. viii. 705.

Mr. Dimock conjectures, וכל בני ארץ: Secker reads ומבני, on the authority of ó. MS. Al. and Ar.

6. —Jehovah.—1°. Nine MSS. V. Syr. add ארני. See v. 2, 10, 13. It is observable that ó. Ar. omit “Thus saith Jehovah:” and the construction is clear without them. But see a like construction v. 10, 13.

7. —and her cities.—ועריה Arab. as c. xxix. 12. The Arabic also reads ונשמה, et rastabitur.

- shall know that I am Jehovah, when I shall set a fire in 9 Egypt, and all her helpers shall be * destroyed. In that day messengers shall go forth from me in ships, to make Ethiopia afraid that dwelt securely; and great pain shall come upon them in the day of Egypt; for, lo, it cometh.
 10 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: I will make the multitude of Egypt to cease by the hand of Nebuchadnezzar king 11 of Babylon. He, and his people with him, the terrible of the nations, shall be brought to make the land desolate; and they shall draw their swords against Egypt, and shall 12 fill the land with slain. And I will make the rivers † dry, and I will sell the country into the hand of evil men; and I will lay waste the country, and ‡ all that is therein, by the hand of strangers: I Jehovah have spoken it.
 13 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: I will destroy the idols, and will cause the images to cease, out of Noph; and there

* H. broken.† H. dryness.‡ H. the fulness thereof.

9. —from me.—Omitted in ó. Ar. and, I think, rightly. If we retain the original word, the sense given by expositors is, “as if sent by me;” the army of Nebuchadnezzar, raised up by me against Egypt, occasioning this message.

—in ships.—Up the Nile, to Ethiopia; it being a more secure way of communicating intelligence in a time of general commotion. But ó. σπεύδοντες, and Symm. ἐν ἐπείξει: reading, according to Cappellus, אֲצִיִּים festini; according to Houbigant, רָצִים currentes.

—that dwelt securely.—Syr. and Chald. read יוֹשֶׁבֶת בְּטָח. V. reads אֶת כּוֹשׁ בּוֹטָחָה, Æthiopie confidentiam; or, read אֶת כּוֹשׁ בּוֹטָחָה, Æthiopiam confidentem. ἡτὰρ πεποιθῖαν. Aq.

—in the day.—בְּיוֹם, 39 MSS. 1 ed. V. ó. Ar. Syr.

—it cometh.—הַדְּבָרָה, the event: or, הַלַּחֲלָה; great pain.

10. —multitude of Egypt.—It was a very populous country.

12.—dry.—The fertility of Egypt depended on the rise of the Nile.

—evil men.—The haughty and cruel Babylonians. See c. vii. 24.

13. —Noph.—Memphis; now Cairo, which is called at this day Menoph. See on Hos. ix. 6.

shall be * no more a prince † of the land of Egypt :
 14 and I will cause fear in the land of Egypt. And I will lay waste Pathros, and will set a fire in Zoan, and will 15 execute judgments in No. I will also pour my fury upon Sin, the strength of Egypt ; and I will cut off the 16 multitude of No. And I will set a fire in Egypt ; Sin shall be greatly pained, and No shall be broken up, and 17 Noph ‡ shall be straitened in the day-time. The young men of On and of Phi-beseth shall fall by the sword, and 18 the women shall go into captivity. At Tahapanes also

* Or, no longer. † Or, from. ‡ H. shall have straiteners of the day-time.

—no more a prince.—This may refer to the future government of Egypt by foreigners ; or to the general destruction of Egyptian princes by Nebuchadnezzar and Amasis. “ Josephus against Apion, l. ii. §. 11, saith, All men know ὅτι Περσῶν, καὶ μετ’ ἐκείνους, ἡγουμένων τῆς Ἀσίας Μακεδόνων, Ἀγύπτιοι μὲν ἐδούλευον, ἀνδραπόδων οὐδὲν διαφέροντες.” Secker. Cambyses destroyed the idols of Egypt. But ὁ. read גדולים and גדירים, great men and nobles, for idols and images.

14. —Zoan.—Or Tanis.

—No.—Diospolis, or Thebes. Boch. See on Nah. iii. 8.

15. —Sin.—Pelusium, a strong city on the frontiers of Egypt. Bochart. Syene : ὁ. v. 16 : and Michaelis.

16. —broken up.—See c. xxvi. 10. 2 Kings xxv. 4.

—shall be straitened in the day time.—That is, besieged. Fortified cities are always shut by night : when they are shut by day, it is a time of danger. Et quoad Noph, angustantes erunt interdiu.” See the status constructus in this prophet, c. xxi. 12. xxxii. 15. Et in Memphis angustiae quotidianæ. Et Memphim circundabunt inimici quotidie. Chald. πολέμιοι αὐθημερινοί. Ἄλλος in Montfaucon. For ונוף צרי יומם, ὁ. read מים ונוף et defluent aquæ. See c. vii. 17. Syr. reads, for צרי, למפלה, erit in ruinam : and begins the following verse with במים : Sicut aquæ erunt juvenes &c. Houbigant proposes לצברים : “ et Noph in acervos.”

17. —On.—Heliopolis. Gen. xli. 45. On was the Egyptian name of the sun.

—Phi-beseth.—Or Bubastum.

—and the women.—והנשים ὁ. MS. Vat. Ar. ed. Ald. probably written ונהג.

18. —Tahapanes.—Daphnæ Pelusiaceæ. The word should be written uniformly in our translation.

- the day shall be darkened ; when I break there the yokes of Egypt, and the pride of her strength shall cease in her : as for her, a cloud shall cover her, and her daughters shall go into captivity. Thus will I execute judgments on Egypt ; and they shall know that I am Jehovah.
- 20 Now it came to pass in the eleventh year, in the first month, on the seventh day of the month, that the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying :
- 21 Son of man, I have broken the arm of Pharaoh king of Egypt. And, lo, it shall not be bound up, to apply medicines ; a bandage shall not be put about it, to strengthen
- 22 it for holding the sword. Concerning this matter thus saith the Lord Jehovah : Lo, I am against Pharaoh king of Egypt, and I will break his arm, even the strong and the stretched out arm ; and I will cause the sword to fall
- 23 out of his hand. And I will scatter the Egyptians among —the yokes.—מטות the staff: 2 MSS. Syr. See Isai. xiv. 5. מטות, σκῆπτρα. ó. “The yokes imposed by the Egyptians.” See c. xxxiv. 27.

—as for her.—והיא 1 MS. and ó. “and as for her.”

20. —on the seventh day of the month.—באחד, 3 MSS. on the first day.” and so MS. Copt.

21. —I have broken.—I have determined to break, by Nebuchadnezzar. See v. 24. So Jer. xlviii. 20, 21, 25. l. 2. Isai. xxi. 9, a future event is spoken of as past. Mr. Lowth.

—the arm.—See the same image, Jer. xlviii. 25. “The horn of Moab is cut off; and his arm is broken, saith Jehovah.”

—be bound up.—See Isai. i. 6. c. xxxiv. 4.

—shall not be put.—לא שום Syr. Houbigant.

—to strengthen it.—The word before this, להבשה, to bind it, is omitted in 1 MS. and by ó. and greatly weakens the sentence.

22. —arm.—So V. But the other ancients and MSS. read plurally.

—the stretched out.—Thus ó. reading השלוחה, or הנטויה. Aq. renders ἐψηλόν, הנשנבה, and Theod. μέγαν. The present corrupt text is rendered by Houbigant, “brachium sanum ut et vulneratum,” and by Dathius, “dextrum et sinistrum.”

- the nations, and I will disperse them among the countries.
- 24 And I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and will put my sword in his hand. But I will break the arms of Pharaoh, and he shall groan before him with the
- 25 groanings * of a deadly wounded man. I will even strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and the arms of Pharaoh shall fall down. And they shall know that I am Jehovah, when I shall put my sword into the hand of the king of Babylon, and shall stretch it out upon the
- 25 land of Egypt. And I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and will disperse them among the countries; and they shall know that I am Jehovah.

CHAPTER XXXI.

- 1 Now IT came to pass in the eleventh year, in the third month, on the first day of the month, that the word of
- 2 Jehovah came unto me, saying: Son of man, say to Pharaoh king of Egypt, and to his multitude,
- Unto whom art thou like in thy greatness?
- 3 Lo, the Assyrian was as a cedar in Lebanon,

* Or, of one that is slain.

24. —before him.—Two MSS. read לְפָנַי, before me. Mr. Dimock.

25. —I will even strengthen.—The vau may be merely conversive.

3.—the Assyrian.—Meibomius takes אֲשׁוּר to be a species of cedar. “Nec tamen facile possum concoquere Assyrium illum, qui nescio quomodo, valde certe incommode, ut mihi quidem videtur, huc se ingessit.” Præl. Hebr. x. Secker observes, that this seems an admonitory comparison of Pharaoh to the late Assyrian empire, under the image of a cedar, applied v. 18 to Pharaoh. He adds that כִּי v. 2, 18, is much oftener who than what. The learned author of critical observations on books says:

* With beautiful branches, and with a shadowing shroud, and † of an high stature ;

And his top was among thick boughs.

4 The waters made him great, the deep set him up on high ;
It brought its streams about his plantation,

And sent forth its ‡ little rivers

Unto all the trees of the field.

5 Therefore his height was exalted

Above all the trees of the field ;

And his boughs were multiplied, and his branches became long,

Because of many waters, when he shot forth.

* H. beautiful of branch.

† H. lofty of stature.

‡ Or, channels, or, rivulets.

“ This historic recital is expressly brought as an argumentative confirmation of the prophet’s veracity in declaring that Egypt would soon after meet with like fate. This is particularly indicated by v. 18 ; which serves as a moral to the preceding funeral panegyric over Assyria.” ii 186.
“ The destruction of the great kingdom of Assyria at Nineveh could not have happened sooner than about the beginning of Zedekiah’s reign.” Ib. 180.

—thick boughs.—See c. xix. 11 ; where the sense of this word seems to be fixed by the*parallel clause. But ó. give it the signification of עֲבֹרָה clouds : which Bishop Lowth approves of : præl. Hebr. x. The top, or leader, is well supposed to represent the king of Assyria ; and the thick boughs, his subordinate Kings and Rulers.

4. —the deep.—The subterraneous waters. Houb.

—It brought.—Read הוֹלִיכָה, as ó. render ἡγάγε, and שְׁלַחָה follows ; or הֹלִיךְ, eundo : “ going with its streams.”

—his plantation.—Read מִטְעָו ; as צִמְרָתוֹ v. 3, and קִמְתּוֹ, v. 5.

—little rivers.—An allusion to the small artificial channels through which water was usually distributed in eastern gardens. See Bishop Lowth on Isai. i. 20.

5. —was exalted.—גְּבַהָהּ MSS. 1 ed.

—when he shot forth.—Houbigant considers שָׁלַח as a verb neuter. Ἐν τῷ ἐκτεῖναι αὐτόν. Ἄλλος, in Montfaucon.

- 6 In his boughs all the fowls of the heavens made their nest ;
 And under his branches all the beasts of the field brought forth their young :
 And under his shadow dwelt an assembly of great nations.
- 7 Thus was he beautiful in his greatness, in the length of his branches :
 For his root was by many waters.
- 8 The cedars in the garden of God could not hide him ;
 The fir-trees were not like his boughs,
 And the plane-trees were not as his branches :
 Not any tree in the garden of God
 Was like unto him in his beauty.
- 9 I made him beautiful in the multitude of his branches ;
 So that all the trees of Eden,
 Which were in the garden of God, envied him.
- 10 Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah :
 Because he was high in stature,
 And set his top among the thick boughs,
 And his heart was lifted up in his height ;

6. — an assembly.—קֶהָל, cœtus, V. Houb. xxxii. 3.

8. — the fir-trees—the plane-trees.—In the garden of God must be supplied.

— as his branches.—בפִּאֲרָתָיו, here, and פִּאֲרָתָיו i. e. פִּאֲרוֹתָיו v. 12, 13, MSS. and edd.

9. — So that &c.—The order of the clauses in the Hebrew is :

So that all the trees of Eden envied him,
 Which were in the garden of God.

10. — he was high.—גָּבַהּ V. Syr. Houb. Dathius.

— in stature.—בְּקוֹמָתוֹ Syr. Houb. “in his stature.”

— his heart was lifted up.—This allegory is boldly pursued ; though here, and v. 11, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, its imagery is not supported with the scrupulous accuracy of polished writers. Est quidem genus parabolæ, cui unice proposita est rei subjectæ exornatio ; qualis est insignis illa apud Ezekielem Cedrus Libani ; qua nulla est, si ipsam imaginem spectemus,

- 11 Therefore I delivered him into the hand of a mighty one of the nations,
That * dealt hardly with him; I drave him out for his wickedness.
- 12 And strangers, the terrible of the nations, cut him down,
and left him:
Upon the mountains, and in all the valleys, his branches fell;
And his boughs were broken by all the streams of the land;
And all the people of the earth went down from his shadow, and left him.

* H. in dealing dealt.

aptior aut venustior; si lineamenta et colores, nulla elegantior, nulla ornatior; in qua tamen Vates [v. 11, 14, 15, 16, 17,] propria quædam admisit mediis translatis permista; an quod hujus Parabolæ ratio ita ferat, an ex ipsius fervido ingenio, styli accuratioris leges minus interdum attendente, vix ausim statuere. Præl. Hebr.

11.—a mighty one.—אֵל מִסִּיחַ MSS. edd. Either, a mighty king of the nations, or, a mighty nation.

—That dealt hardly with him.—Exacted severe punishment of him. See עֲשָׂה c. xx. 44. xxii. 14. and observe the force of the future, v. 13. If we render shall deal, the sense may be; Who shall punish his former arrogance and cruelty by dealing severely with him in his vanquished state.

—for his wickedness.—בְּרָשָׁעוֹ, according to his wickedness. V. Syr. MSS. edd.

12. —cut him down.—Virgil has a like comparison with respect to the fall of Troy.

Ac veluti summis antiquam in montibus ornum
Quum ferro accisam crebrisque bipennibus instant
Eruere agricolæ certatim; illa usque minatur,
Et tremefacta comam concusso vertice nutat;
Vulneribus donec paulatim evicta supremum
Congemuit, traxitque jugis avulsa ruinam.

Æn. ii. 626.

- 13 Upon his ruin dwelt all the fowls of the heavens ;
 And upon his branches were all the beasts of the field :
 14 To the end that none of all the trees * by the waters
 Exalt themselves for their stature,
 Neither set their top
 Among the thick boughs ;
 Neither the oaks stand up in their height,
 † Nor any trees that drink water :
 For all of them are delivered to death,
 Unto the lower parts of the earth
 In the midst of the sons of mortal man,
 Unto them that go down to the pit.
 15 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah :
 In the day when he went down to the grave,
 I caused the deep to mourn, I covered it, for him ;
 And I restrained the floods thereof, and the great waters were stayed ;
 And I ‡ clothed Lebanon with black for him,

* H of the waters.

† H. All that drink.

‡ H. I caused Lebanon to be black.

13. Upon his ruin &c.—Even the fallen trunk and broken branches of this stately tree afforded shelter to birds and beasts.

—And upon.—ועל 3 MSS.

14. To the end that.—The supposed measure is :

Ut non eleventur propter altitudinem suam

Omnes arbores aquarum.

—Neither the oaks.—I read אלים, or אילים.

—that drink water.—A poetical periphrasis for trees ; as master of the wing, for birds.

—the lower parts.—תחתיות 4 MSS. as c. xxvi. 20. xxxii. 18. “terram profunditatum.”

15. I caused the deep to mourn &c.—Houbigant omits כסיתי with ó. If we render “I caused the deep to mourn, I covered it, for him,” the sense is, I caused it to cover itself in token of grief. Clarius. Grotius. 2 Sam. xv. 30. or, I covered it with a mourning vest. Isai. l. 3. c. xxxii. 7.

And all the trees of the field fainted for him.

16 At the sound of his ruin I made the nations to shake,

When I brought him down to the grave

With them that go down to the pit :

And all the trees of Eden,

The choice and * best of Lebanon,

Even all that drank water,

Were comforted in the lower parts of the earth.

17 They also went down with him to the grave,

To them that were slain by the sword ;

And his seed, and those that abode under his shadow,

Were destroyed in the midst of the nations.

18 Unto whom art thou like in strength,

In glory, and in greatness, among the trees of Eden ?

Thou shalt be brought down with the trees of Eden

To the lower parts of the earth ;

* H. good.

—fainted.—עלפו ó. Syr. Houbigant, and perhaps one MS. The literal rendering of the present text may be, “And as for all the trees of the field, there was fainting for him.”

16. —Were comforted.—Because he became as one of them. Isai. xiv. 10.

—lower parts.—תחתיות, 1 MS.

17. —And his seed.—See ó. Syr.

—were destroyed.—ó. supply ἀπόλυντο, and Chald. אתברו were broken. The Greek word suggests נשברו, or אברו: but the former is preferable, because it approaches nearer to נשברו, the reading of Chald. See also c. xxxii. 12. Houbigant reads ונורעו et perierunt, for ונרעו.

—that abode.—ישבי, ó. Houb. See on c. xxx. 16.

18. —in strength.—Read בבה i. e. בכוח. Nobilius notat in quibusdam libris haberi ista, ἐν δυνάμει, καὶ ἐν δόξῃ, καὶ ἐν μεγέθει. Capriellus. In quibusdam libris hæc sequuntur, ἐν δυνάμει, καὶ ἐν δόξῃ, καὶ ἐν μεγέθει. Not. in ed. Sixti Quinti.

—among the trees of Eden.—“Forte לעצי, ut his verbis fiat responsio.” Secker.

—lower parts.—תחתיות, 1 MS.

Thou shalt lie down in the midst of the uncircumcised,
 With them that are slain by the sword.
 This is Pharaoh, and all his multitude,
 Saith the Lord Jehovah.

CHAPTER XXXII.

1 IT CAME to pass also in the twelfth year, in the twelfth month, on the first day of the month, that the word of 2 Jehovah came unto me, saying: Son of man, * take up a

* Or, utter.

—uncircumcised.—See on c. xxviii. 10. “Nations that admitted circumcision held the uncircumcised in the utmost contempt. The Egyptians, at least the priests and learned among them, were circumcised; but now they shall lie among the uncircumcised.” Michaelis.

—his multitude.—הַמְּלִיטָה, 10 MSS. In this verse the latter part of v. 2 is resumed; and the allegory under which the Assyrian is represented is applied to Pharaoh.

“To the preceding funeral panegyric over Assyria, the fate of which was past, Ezekiel prophetically subjoins a similar panegyric over Egypt, though its fate was still future; making plainly here a happy variation only in the oratorical figure of πρὸ ὁμμάτων ποιεῖν. For by that figure past events are brought down, and represented as now present before our eyes; whereas on the contrary by this prophetic figure future events are anticipated, and represented as already past.” Obs. on books, ii. 188.

1. —in the twelfth year.—So Chald. ó. MS. V. Ar. But MS. Al. ἐνδεκάτω, polyg. Lond. ed. Bretinger marg.; and δεκάτω, ed. Sixt. Quint. and Ald. and οἱ λοιποὶ in Monf. Hex. In the eleventh year is also the reading of Syr. and of 9 MSS. and 4 originally: and Houbigant prefers it, that v. 17 may contain a posterior date to what occurs here.

—in the twelfth month.—Tenth. ó. MS. V. but ed. Breit. and Ald. δωδεκάτω.

lamentation for Pharaoh king of Egypt, and say unto him ;

Thou art like a lion among the nations :

And thou art as a * dragon in the seas,

And breakest forth in thy rivers,

And troublest the waters with thy feet, and foulest thy rivers.

3 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah :

I will spread my net over thee

Amidst an assembly of many † people ;

And they shall bring thee up in my drag :

4 And I will leave thee on the land,

I will cast thee upon the ‡ open field,

And I will cause all the fowls of the heavens to remain upon thee,

And I will satiate with thee the beasts of the whole earth.

* Or, a crocodile.

† H. peoples.

‡ H. the face of the field.

2. —a lion.—Houbigant reads כפפיר. The verb is used with ל, ב, and א; and I do not elsewhere find it without one of the prepositions.

—among the nations.—בגוים Chald.

—a dragon.—Compare c. xxix. 3, &c.

—And breakest forth.—ó. Ar. Syr. read as the text now stands ; but derive the word from נגח cornu petere. Sed minus commode, says Capellus, nisi quis velit metaphoram esse a tauris lascivientibus, qui huc illuc discurrentes cornua jactant & quasi ventilant. נוח crumpere may refer to the act of the crocodile when he bursts above the water to seize his prey. I find in Gussetius, Nec alienum est נוח, ps. xxii. 10, ab actu crocodilorum, dum caput exserunt ut respiratione se reficiant. In 1 MS. and 2 others originally, the reading is, ונתנו, and restest.

—foulest thy rivers.—ותרפס MSS. edd. נהרותיך ó. Ar.

3. —And they.—The great company assembled at such a spectacle. But V. ó. Ar. ואתלך, or ואתליתך : and I will bring thee up.

4. —the beasts of the whole earth.—כל חית 3 MSS. Syr. all the beasts of the earth : which answers to all the fowls of the heavens in the preceding line. We find in ó. Ar. and 1 MS. all the beasts of all the earth.

- 5 And I will lay thy flesh upon the mountains,
And fill the valleys with thine height.
- 6 And I will water the earth with thy gore ;
* Thy blood shall be on the mountains ;
And the streams shall be filled with thee.
- 7 And I will cover the heavens when I quench thee,
And I will † clothe the stars thereof with black ;
‡ I will cover the sun with a cloud,
And the moon shall not give her light.
- 8 All the shining lights of the heavens I will clothe || with black § over thee,
And will set darkness upon thy land,
Saith the Lord Jehovah.
- 9 And I will grieve the heart of many ** people,

* H. of thy blood.

|| H. clothe them.

† H. cause the stars thereof to be black.

§ Or, for.

‡ H. The sun, I will cover it with a cloud.

** H. peoples.

5. —with thine height.—רמותיך MSS. 2 edd. with thine heights, i. e. thy great height. But R. Salamo Cappellus and Moerlius derive רמות from רמה projectit: projectione tua, seu, cadavere tuo: on which Gussetius observes, sed nullum aliud derivatum non significat fallaciam. רמתך, with thy worms: Syr. 1 MS. “Recte. Exod. xvi. 24. et in re simili, Isai. xiv. 11.” Secker. רמך, or רמין, with thy blood; ó. Ar. Dathius has recourse to the Arab ريم reliquiæ.

6. —with thy gore.—צפה fluor, sanies, from צופ fluere. See Houbigant. Inundatione tua. Munsterus. Cruore. Tirinus.

—Thy blood.—There shall be of thy blood on the mountains: i. e. part of thy blood shall be &c. But Houbigant and Dathius transpose thus:

And I will water the earth with thy blood ;
Thy gore shall be on the mountains ; &c.

7. —cover—clothe—with black.—Compare this sublime passage with c. xxxi. 15.

8. —All the shining lights.—Perhaps we should read מאירי in Hiphil, agreeably to ó. πάντα τὰ φαίνοντα [in Hiphil] φῶς: “all that

When I bring thy captives among the nations,
Into countries which ye have not known.

- 10 Yea, because of thee I will astonish many * people,
And their kings shall be † horribly afraid because of thee,
When I brandish my sword before them:
And they shall tremble ‡ every moment, every one || for his life in the day of thy fall.

- 11 For thus saith the Lord Jehovah:
The sword of the king of Babylon shall come upon thee:
12 By the swords of the mighty will I cause thy multitude to fall:

They are the terrible of the nations, all of them;
And they shall spoil the pride of Egypt,
And all her multitude shall be destroyed.

- 13 I will also cause all her beasts to perish
From beside the great waters:
Neither shall the foot of man trouble them any more,
Nor shall the hoofs of beast trouble them.

* H. peoples.

† H. afraid with horrid fear.

‡ H. moments.

|| Or, for himself.

cause light to shine." A periphrasis for luminaries. See on c. xxxi. 14.
מארי 2 MSS.

It is well known that the destruction of kingdoms is denoted by the strong figurative language used in this and the foregoing verse. See Bishop Lowth on Isai. xiii. 10.

9. — thy captives.—שבותך is the reading of ó. and of Houbigant. If שברך can signify confractos tuos, the text may stand.

—ye have not known.—ידעת, or ידעתן, V. ó. Syr. Chald. nosti, vel, nosti eas.

13. — From beside.—Ita ut non futura sit juxta. Nold. מכל §. 8.
"So that they cease to be beside." There were large and fertile meadows on the banks of the Nile.

—trouble them.—The country shall be so deserted, that the waters of the river shall not be fouled by man or beast.

—any more.—During the space of forty years. C. xxix. 11.

- 14 Then will I make their waters clear,
And will cause their rivers to run as oil,
Saith the Lord Jehovah;
- 15 When I shall make the land of Egypt * desolate,
And the land shall be † destitute of all that was therein;
When I shall smite all that dwell therein;
And they shall know that I am Jehovah.
- 16 This is the lamentation, which they shall ‡ utter: the daughters of the nations shall ‡ utter it: for Egypt and for all her multitude shall they ‡ utter it, saith the Lord
Jehovah.
- 17 IT CAME to pass also in the twelfth year, [in the first month,] on the fifteenth day of the month, that the word 18 of Jehovah came unto me, saying; Son of man, wail for the multitude of Egypt, and cast them down, || even her, and the daughters of the famous nations, unto the lower parts of the earth, with them that go down to the pit:
saying,

* Or, a desolation.

† H. desolate from the fulness thereof.

‡ H. lament.

|| Or, together with.

14. Then will I &c.—On the contrary, the Nile shall then be clear and smooth.

16. —which they shall utter.—וְקִנְיָה, 7 MSS.

17. —twelfth year.—Eleventh year. Syr. 1 MS. and another ancient one in the margin: reading עֲשָׂתִי for שְׁתִּי, which I prefer.

—in the first month.—This is the addition of ó. Ar.

18. —and cast &c.—אָזְזָה is found in MSS. and edd. and we may very well render with Houbigant, “And cast them down, [represent them as cast down,] thou and the daughters of the famous nations.” Jubetur propheta, ut ipse, cum filiabus gentium, plangat Ægyptum. Houb. See v. 16. “Cast. The prophets are said to do what they foretel. See c. xliii. 3. Jer. 1. 10.” Secker.

—famous.—אֲדִירִים, MSS. edd.

—with them.—אֵלַי, unto, MSS.

—to the pit.—Imitari nostrum carmen elegantissimum Jesaiæ, c.

- 19 “Come down from * the pleasant waters,
And be thou laid with the uncircumcised.”
- 20 They shall fall in the midst of them that are slain by the sword.
She is delivered to the sword: draw her to the pit, and all her multitudes.
- 21 The † strongest of the mighty men shall speak unto him
Out of the midst of the ‡ pit, together with them that helped him :

* H. the waters of pleasantnesses. † H. strong. ‡ Or, grave.

xiv, quisque intelligit ; sed id facit suo more, ita ut non minus ac in illo ingenii fertilitas, sermonis copia, et sententiarum variatio sit admiranda. Dathius. Eandem scenam cum eodem adjunctorum apparatu egregie instruxit Ezekiel ;—insigni illius δευώσεως exemplo quæ hujus vatis propria merito habetur. Præl. Hebr. vii.

19. —the pleasant waters.—Of the Nile. I suppose that נַעֲמוֹת is the true reading. The version, which produces a beautiful sense and a good pause, may be seen in Syr. Theod. and Houbigant. Mr. Dimock also proposes it.

20. —to the sword.—So Chald.

—draw her. Drag her carcase to the sepulchre. But Chald. renders ut consumat, perdat, exscindat ; reading, for לְהַשְׁמִיד, לְהַשְׁמִיךְ, or some such word. Or, “She is delivered to the sword, (which is drawn) [quem strinxerunt eum] and all her multitude.” See מִשַׁר Cocc. lex.

—multitudes. הַמִּוֶּנֶה, multitude, 8 MSS. 4 originally.

21. —The strongest. אֵילִי MSS. edd. and Houbigant.

—pit. The spacious sepulchre, full of receptacles hewn round about its sides, in which the dead were deposited. See v. 23. To this region of the dead the land of the living is opposed, v. 23 &c.

Ἐπὲρ δὲ τοῦ Μεμνονείου, θῆκαι βασιλέων ἐν σπηλαίοις λατομηταὶ περὶ τετταράκοντα, θαυμαστῶς κατεσκευασμένοι, θέας ἄξια· ἐν δὲ ταῖς θήκαις ἐπὶ τινων ὀβελίσκων ἀναγραφαὶ δηλοῦσιν τὸν πλοῦτον τῶν τότε βασιλέων, καὶ τὴν ἐπικράτειαν, ὡς μέχρι Σκυθῶν, καὶ Βακτριῶν, καὶ Ἰνδῶν, καὶ τῆς νῦν Ἰωνίας διατείνασαν· καὶ φόρων πλῆθος, καὶ στρατιᾶς περὶ ἑκατον μυριάδας. Strabo of Egyptian Thebes. L. xvii. p. 816. or 1171. See on v. 25.

—that helped him.—Pharaoh's adversaries and auxiliaries shall address him.

Who are gone down, who lie, uncircumcised, slain by the sword.

22 There is Assyria, and all her company :

Her graves are round about her :

All of them slain, fallen by the sword :

23 Whose graves are set in the sides of the pit,

And her company is round about her grave :

All of them slain, fallen by the sword,

Who caused their terror in the land of the living.

24 There is Elam, and all her company

Round about her grave :

All of them slain, fallen by the sword ;

Who are gone down uncircumcised into the lower parts of the earth ;

Who caused their terror in the land of the living :

Yet have they borne their shame with them that go down
to the pit ;

This difficult verse may be otherwise distributed :

The strongest of the mighty men shall speak unto him out of the midst of the pit :

They are gone down, they lie, together with them that helped him,
Uncircumcised, slain by the sword.

22. —her company.—קָהָלָם, their company, 1 MS. קָהָלוֹ his company, 6. Houb. But the other countries mentioned, as Elam, Meshech, and Tubal, and Edom, are used with feminine affixes. On the conquest of Assyria, see c. xxxi. 3.

—Her graves.—קְבֻרֹתֶיהָ, 1 MS. סְבִיבוֹת, Syr. “round about her graves:” as v. 23, 24.

23. Whose graves.—Read קְבֻרֹתֶיהָ, with 9 MSS. 3 edd.

—her grave.—קְבֻרָתָהּ, 10 MSS.

—their terror.—חֲתִיתָם, 6. Ar. Houb. 1 MS. and the ם is erased in another MS. : a reading agreeable to v. 25, 26.

24.—Elam.—Strabo places the Elymæi near the Persians and the Susians ; p. 524. marg. L. xi : and, p. 732. marg. L. xv, he mentions them as bordering on Susis and Sitacene. Pliny says, Susianen ab Elymaide disternit amnis Eulæus. l. vi. c. xxvii. See Ezra iv. 9. Dan.

- 25 They are * laid in the midst of the slain.
 She hath her bed among all her multitude ;
 Her graves are round about her ;
 All of them uncircumcised, slain by the sword :
 Though they caused their terror in the land of the living,
 Yet have they borne their shame with them that go down
 to the pit ;
 They are † laid in the midst of the slain.
- 26 There is Meshech, Tubal, and all her multitude :
 Her graves are round about her :

* H. put.

† H. put.

viii. 2: on which latter text Bochart remarks, Elam aliquando latius sumitur, ita ut vicinas aliquot provincias ad Eulæum amnem includat. Phaleg. L. ii. c. ii. That Elam was subdued, see Jer. xxv. 25. xlix. 34—39. Dan. viii. 1, 2, where it appears to be a province under the king of Babylon. “The invasion of Elam (Persia) was apparently effected by the joint forces of Cyaxares and Nebuchadnezzar.” Obs. on books. ii. 180. “After the expulsion of the Scythians, Cyaxares reduced all the nations who had, at his defeat by the Scythians, revolted from him, among which probably Persia was one: and this happened before the capture of Nineveh, which is mentioned as the very latest event in his reign.” Ib. 192. Cyaxares is supposed to have died in the fourth year of Zedekiah.

25.—of the slain.—The punctuation is suggested by Houbigant.

—bed.—Ita appellatur ἡ θήκη, cella quæ sarcophagum recipit. Præl. Hebr. vii.

—Her graves.—קברותיה, 10 MSS. 3 edd.

—round about her.—סביבותיה, Houbigant.

—they caused.—נתנו 2 MSS. V. Syr. Ar. Houb.

—They are laid.—נתנו, V. Syr. Houb.

26. —Meshech, Tubal.—See on c. xxvii. 13. See also Jer. xxv. 26. The Scythians may be comprehended, who anciently governed Asia. “This is no other than the well known expulsion of the Scythians from Media by Cyaxares; as Jackson has already rightly observed. i. 363.” Obs. on books. i. 192. “And Tubal.” ὁ. Syr. V. Ar.

—round about her.—סביבותיה, Houb. But ὁ. Syr. read סביבות.

- All of them uncircumcised, slain by the sword,
 Though they caused their terror in the land of the living.
 27 And these lie down with the mighty,
That are fallen of old time,
 That are gone down to the pit with their weapons of war,
 And have laid their swords under their heads;
 And the punishment of their iniquity is upon them, Though they were the terror of the mighty in the land of the living.
-

There is Meshech, and Tubal, and all her multitude round about her graves.

—slain.—"Forte legendum ללל, ut supra. Præcedit ׀." Secker.

27. And these.—Houbigant proposes ואלה, and thinks that אלה arose from ואל written for ואלה. Dathius has the same criticism. 6. Ar. Syr. omit the negative particle; which Cappellus approves of. Two MSS. 1 cd. and 271 A, read אלה, and Syr. also omits the connexive particle.

The present reading is thus defended: "Herodotus informs us, l. i, that Cyaxares massacred the Scythian invaders by inviting them to an entertainment, and making them drunk; on which he slew them. Now to this the prophet seems to refer in these words." Obs. on books. ii. 193.

—of old time.—מערלם 6. Ar. Houb. Dathius. But the text, as it now stands, furnishes an apposite sense.

—their swords.—

Ingenti mole sepulchrum

Imponit, suaque arma viro. Æn. vi. 233.

Mr. Lowth. See also Bishop Lowth on Isai. p. 90. Δήλου καθαιρομένης ἀπὸ Αθηναίων,—καὶ τῶν θηκῶν ἀναιρεθεισῶν ὅσαι ἦσαν τῶν τεθνεώτων ἐν τῇ νήσῳ, ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν Kāres ἐφάνησαν, γνωσθέντες τῇ τε σκευῇ τῶν ὅπλων ξυντεθαμμένη, καὶ τῷ τρόπῳ ᾧ νῦν ἔτι θάπτουσι. Thucyd. i. 8. referred to by Moerlius. See Isai. xiv. 18.

—iniquity.—עונתם MSS. perhaps from עונה, a substantive which does not occur elsewhere. I was pleased to find my own rendering confirmed by Dathius, who thinks the sense equivalent to the phrase "they have borne, or bear, their shame:" v. 24, 30. "Videtur עץ pronomen reciprocum, ille, ipse." Dathius.

- 28 And thou also shalt be broken in the midst of the uncircumcised,
And shalt lie down with them that are slain by the sword.
- 29 There is Edom, her kings, and all her rulers,
Who in their might are * laid with them that are slain by the sword;
They lie down with the uncircumcised,
With them that go down to the pit.
- 30 There are the princes of the north,
All of them, and all the Sidonians:
Who are gone down with the slain
In their terror, ashamed of their might;
And lie down uncircumcised with them that are slain by the sword,
And bear their shame with them that go down to the pit.
- 31 Pharaoh shall see them,
And shall be comforted over all his multitude slain by the sword;

v. 29.

* H. put.

29. —in their might.—In the midst of their boasted might.

—With them that go down.—אֶת, 19 MSS. ó. Ar. It is generally supposed that Edom was subdued during the siege of Tyre.

30. —of the north.—Probably the Syrian kings, who reigned at Damascus.

—Sidonians.—צִירוֹנִים 1 MS. צִירָנִים 2 MSS. as if "צִרְנִי had been written contractedly for the regular plural. "But ó. read אֲשֹׁר נְצִיבֵי אֲשֹׁר, see 2 Chron. xvii. 2. or perhaps קְצִינֵי σαρπηγοὶ Ἀσσοῦρ." Secker. סַרְנֵי, satrapæ, 1 MS. originally. See De Rossi. "The mention made of the Sidonians, and not of the Tyrians, persuades me that this prophecy was delivered during the siege of Tyre." Mr. Desvieux.

—In their terror.—So, "in their might," v. 29. But Houbigant proposes, מַחֲתִיתָם, "Ashamed of their terror, and of their might."

31. —co'forted.—See c. xxxi. 16.

—his multitude —חֲמוֹנָו, 4 MSS. 3 in the margin, 1 ed. Houb.

—slain by the sword.—See this punctuation in V. Syr. But ó. MS. A. and Chald. point thus: Pharaoh shall see them, and shall be comforted

- Even* Pharaoh, and all his host,
 Saith the Lord Jehovah.
- 32 Though I caused his terror in the land of the living,
 Yet shall he be laid in the midst of the uncircumcised,
 With them that are slain by the sword,
Even Pharaoh and all his multitude ;
 Saith the Lord Jehovah.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

- 1 THE WORD of Jehovah came also unto me, saying ;
 2 Son of man, speak unto the sons of thy people, and say
 unto them ;
 * When I bring the sword upon a land, and the people of the land take a man out of their borders, and set him

* H. a land when I bring a sword upon it.

over all his multitude ; Pharaoh shall be slain by the sword, and all his host, saith the Lord Jehovah. Herodotus affirms that Apries, or Pharaoh-Hophra, was strangled : οἱ δὲ μὲν ἀπέπνιξαν. L. ii. p. 154. marg. 186. ed. Wess. But the enemies of Apries may have used the sword against him, before he expired.

32. —his terror.—ó. Ar. Syr. Dathius. But חתיתי 9 MSS. Keri, V. Houb. “ For I have caused my terror &c. And he shall be laid &c.”
 —his multitude.—חמונו 8 MSS. 1 marg. ó. V.

1. It is plain that Ezekiel uttered what is contained in this chapter to v. 20, before Jerusalem was taken by the Babylonians : but how long before is uncertain.

2. —out of their borders.—The proper places to station watchmen.

“ When the prophet had confirmed his predictions of evil both to the Jews and Heathens by exemplifications of the like predictions already fulfilled among the latter ; he proceeds to apply home the conclusion arising hence, by an expostulation and pathetic address to the hearts and

- 3 for their watchman, and he seeth the sword coming on the land, and bloweth the trumpet, and warneth the people,
 4 and they hear; whosoever heareth the sound of the trumpet, and taketh not warning, and the sword cometh and taketh him away, his blood shall be upon his own
 5 head: he heard the sound of the trumpet, and took not warning; his blood shall be upon him: but he that taketh
 6 warning shall * save his life. But if the watchman see the sword coming, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned, and the sword come, and take away any person from among them; he is taken away for his iniquity, but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand.
- 7 † So thou, son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel: therefore hear the word from my

---

* H. deliver his soul, or, himself.

† Or, And as for thee.

consciences of the Jews.—But to what Jews is this addressed? To the Jews who were already in captivity. In order then that this address might make the stronger impression on them, and produce its wished-for effect, he immediately subjoins an information, which he represents as having been just then received, of the actual capture and destruction of the city of Jerusalem, agreeably to his foregoing prophecies against it: the accomplishment of which prediction against the Jews themselves, joined to his historic narrations before of the accomplishment of many others against the Heathens, both complete his arguments in favour of the credit and veracity of his predictions against Egypt or other nations, and also prove by a conspicuous example the truth of that maxim with which he had concluded his late address to the captive Jews, “That God will judge every one after his ways, both Jews and Heathens.” Obs. on books, ii. 196, 7.

3. —and they hear.—One MS. reads וְשֹׁמֵעַ, et audiens erit. Both ó. and Chald. are capable of the punctuation here proposed.

5. —shall save.—The verb in the original may be converted into the future by the distant van.

6. —for his iniquity.—The land was full of idolatry at the time when this was spoken.

- 8 mouth, and warn them from me. When I say unto the wicked, "O wicked man, * thou shalt surely die," and thou speakest not to warn the wicked from his way; that wicked man shall die for his iniquity, but his blood will I 9 require at thine hand. Yet if thou warn the wicked of his way, that he turn from it, and he turn not from his way; he shall die for his iniquity, but thou hast delivered † thy soul.
- 10 Thou also, son of man, say unto the house of Israel: Thus have ye ‡ spoken, saying; Surely our transgressions and our sins are upon us, and we pine away for 11 them: how then shall we live? Say unto them: As I live, saith the Lord Jehovah, || I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but in that the wicked turn from his way, and live: turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for why will ye die, O house of Israel?
- 12 Thou, also, son of man, say unto the sons of thy people: The righteousness of the righteous shall not deliver him in the day of his transgression: and as for the wickedness of the wicked, he shall not fall thereby in the day when he turneth from his wickedness: neither shall the right-13 eous be able to live in the day of his sin. When I say

* H. dying thou shalt die.

† Or, thyself.

‡ H. said.

|| H. if I have pleasure.

8. When I say.—באמרי, c. iii. 18. Compare v. 7, 8, 9, with c. iii. 17, 18, 19.

10. —we pine away.—We experience their bitter consequences in famine and disease, and in the invasions and insults of the Babylonians.

—shall we live?—How can such assurances be true, as were given us c. xviii. 17, 19, 22, 27, 28, 32?

11. Compare c. xviii. 23, 32.

—his way.—ó. MS. A. and Ar. supply רשע, "from his wicked way."

—for why &c.—This line occurs c. xviii. 31.

12. —to live in the day.—בד is omitted ó. MS. Al. and ed. Ald. and

- unto the righteous, * “He shall surely live;” and he trusteth in his righteousness, and doeth iniquity; all his righteousnesses shall not be remembered, but for his iniquity which he hath committed, even for it shall he die.
- 14 Again, when I say unto the wicked, † “Thou shalt surely die;” and he turneth from his sin, and doeth
- 15 judgment and justice, and the wicked returneth the pledge, giveth that again which he had taken by violence, walketh in the statutes of life so as not to commit iniquity;
- 16 ‡ he shall surely live, he shall not die: all his sins which he hath || committed shall not be remembered unto him; he hath done judgment and justice, § he shall surely
- 17 live. Yet the sons of thy people say, “The way of the Lord is not equal.” But as for them, their way is not
- 18 equal. When the righteous man turneth from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, he shall die
- 19 ** because of it. And when the wicked turneth from his

* H. Living he shall live.

† H. Dying thou shalt die.

‡ H. living he shall live.

|| H. sinned.

§ H. living he shall live.

** H. for them.

in Syr. Houbigant thinks it beyond a doubt that the true reading is, וְצַדִּיקָהּ הַצַּדִּיק, as at the beginning of the verse, and in opposition to וְרַשָּׁעָהּ הַרַשָּׁע. “And as for the righteousness of the righteous, he shall not be able to live thereby” &c.

—of his sin.—See ó. MS. Al.

13. —all his righteousnesses.—צַדִּיקוֹתָיו 4 MSS. 3 edd.

—be remembered.—תּוֹכַרְנָה MSS. edd. See c. xviii. 24.

15. —and the wicked.—רַשָּׁע is wanting in 2 MSS. ó. Ar. Syr. but it seems to be repeated with elegance.

—he shall surely live.—הָיָה הָיָה MSS. Houb. so again, v. 16.

16. —his sins.—חַטָּאוֹתָיו, i. e. חַטָּאוֹתָיו MSS. edd.

17. —the Lord.—Here, and v. 20, some MSS. have יְהוָה; as c. xviii. 25, 29.

18. —because of it.—בִּזְיוֹ Houb. ἀντὶ sc. ἀνομιᾶς. ó. MS. Al. See also Syr. Arab. But V. ó. MS. V. and Chald. render plurally. But see on c. xviii. 26. Dathius observes, “numerus sæpe sensum, non verba, respicit.”

- wickedness, and doeth judgment and justice, he shall 20 live because of them. Yet ye say, "The way of the Lord is not equal." I will judge you every one according to his ways, O house of Israel.
- 21 Now IT came to pass in the twelfth year of our captivity, in the tenth month, on the fifth day of the month, that one who had escaped out of Jerusalem came unto me, 22 saying, The city is smitten. And the hand of Jehovah had been upon me in the evening before he that had escaped came; and he had opened my mouth until he came unto me in the morning; * and my mouth was opened, and I was no longer dumb.
- 23 And the word of Jehovah had come unto me, saying;

* Or, he even opened my mouth.

20. — I will judge.—Compare c. xviii. 30. At the end of this v. 6. MS. Al. Ar. and MS. Copt. add, "saith the Lord."

21. — twelfth year.—Eleventh year: Syr. and 8 MSS. reading עשתי עשרתי, which, says Dathius, Doederlein approves of: and it seems preferable. In 6. ed. Ald. and Sixti Quinti, we find the tenth year, a plain mistake; as the Babylonish army entered Jerusalem in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in the fourth month, on the ninth day of the month. 2 Kings xxv. 3, 4.

— in the tenth month.—Twelfth month: 6. MS. V. Al. but the tenth, ed. Ald.

If we read the eleventh year, near six months will pass between the taking of Jerusalem and the communication of that event to Ezekiel. As the Hebrew text now stands, the interval must be one year, five months, and twenty-six days.

22. — and my mouth was opened.—Chald. furnishes a very good reading; ונפתח, and I opened. See c. xxiv. 25, 26, 27. If in c. xxxii. 17, we read the twelfth year, the first month, and the fifteenth day of the month, the interval between the revelation recorded v. 24 and the immediately preceding one is eight months and twenty days.

- 24 Son of man, they that inhabit those waste places in the land of Israel * speak, saying ;
 Abraham was one, and he inherited the land : but we are many : unto us is the land given for an inheritance.
- 25 Therefore say unto them, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah :
 Ye eat with the blood, and lift up your eyes to your idols, 26 and shed blood : and shall ye possess the land ? Ye stand with your swords, ye commit abomination, and ye defile every one his neighbour's wife : and shall ye possess the
 27 land ? Thus shalt thou say unto them : Thus saith the Lord Jehovah : As I live, surely they that are in the waste places shall fall by the sword ; and him that is † in the open field I will ‡ give to the beasts || to be devoured ; and they that are in the strong holds, and in the caves,
 28 shall die of the pestilence. And I will make the land a deso-

* H. say. † H. on the face of the field. ‡ H. I will give him.
 || H. to devour him.

24. This seems to be the word spoken by Ezekiel before the messenger came.

—waste places.—The country and the city had been now laid waste by the Babylonians.

—unto us.—Who are many ; and preferable in the sight of God to Abraham, a single individual. They thought that they should remain unmolested in the land, when the Babylonians had left them in it ; not expecting to suffer those severe calamities which ensued in consequence of Gedaliah's murder. Jer. xli.

25. —with the blood.—Contrary to the law : Deut. xii. 16.

—your eyes.—עֵינֵיכֶם, the ancients, MSS. edd.

26. —with your swords.—Ready to commit acts of violence on every one that passes. But Houb. reads עַל רֹחַבְכֶּם, in your street, openly practising idolatry. הַבְּרֶכֶת, contra socium vestrum, i. e. populares vestros impugnatis. Doederlein apud Dathium.

27. —unto them.—אֲלֵיהֶם, MSS. edd.

—I will give.—The verb is converted by the distant vau.

—caves.—In the mountains ; which caves were the usual places of refuge in times of danger.

- lation and an astonishment, and the pride of its strength shall cease : and the mountains of Israel shall be made desolate, that none shall pass over. Then shall they know that I am Jehovah, when I make the land a desolation and an astonishment, because of all their abominations which they have committed.
- 30 And as for thee, O son of man, the sons of thy people speak concerning thee near the walls, and in the doors of the houses, and speak one to another, even every man to his * neighbour, saying; Come, I pray you, and hear
- 31 what is the word that goeth forth from Jehovah. And my people come unto thee, † according to the manner in which the people come, and sit before thee, and hear thy words, but do them not : for they make mockings with
- 32 their mouths, and their heart goeth after gain. And, lo, thou art unto them as a song ‡ that is sung to musical

---

* H. brother.

† H. according to the coming of the people.

‡ H. of musical instruments.

30. —near the walls &c.—“Dr. Pococke informs us that the Coptics spend their holydays—sitting under their walls in the winter. The better sort of houses in the east have porches, or gateways, according to Dr. Shaw, with benches on each side, where the master of the family receives visits.” Harmer i. 22.

—one to another.—אחד, 1 MS. Houb.

31. —the people come.—Syr. omits במבוא, and ó. MS. Al. read עמי, whence arises this version : “And my people come unto thee, and my people sit before thee.”

—mockings.—Chald. suggests לענים, jests, marg. Engl. vers. In ó. Ar. Syr. המה עשים is omitted, and כזב, or כזבים, suggested as the true reading. “For a lie is [or, lies are] in their mouth.” See on c. viii. 17.

—and—after—ואחריו ó. Ar. Syr. V. 8 MSS.

32. They were struck with his eloquence, without regarding his exhortations and admonitions. “Μη γὰρ ἄλλως αὐτὰ ἀνεγνώκατε ἢ ὡς ῥῥάτια; Arr. Epict. L. iii. c. 23. p. 478. ed. Upton. Vid. et Aul. Gell. l. v. c. i. neque illic philosophum loqui, sed tibicinem canere.” Secker.

instruments, of one that hath a pleasant voice, and that can play well on an instrument: and they hear thy words, 33 but they do them not. And when this cometh to pass, (lo, it shall come to pass,) then shall they know that a prophet hath been among them.

---

CHAPTER XXXIV.

1 2 THE WORD of Jehovah came also unto me, saying; Son of man, prophesy against the shepherds of Israel, prophesy, and say unto them;

O ye shepherds, thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Woe unto

---

33. — this cometh to pass.—Sc. הַדָּבָר הַזֶּה, this matter, this event; the destruction of Jerusalem.

— lo, it shall come to pass.—See a like parenthesis proposed, c.
 xxxii. 20.

1. — came also unto me.—"It is probable that this prophecy immediately followed the preceding. At or before the arrival of the news that Jerusalem was conquered, the prophet was to speak of the tyranny and carelessness of the governors, and to promise the return of the people." Michaelis. "Ezekiel still continues his prophetic cares and foresight toward those who survived the desolation of Jerusalem, both those who continued in Jerusalem and also the captives elsewhere. Of the former some false hopes seem to have been formed by the captive Jews, that this remnant would be still able to preserve the existence of the Jewish state in Palestine. c. xxxiii. 24." Obs. on books. ii. 199. "The negligence of the governors being pointed out as a cause of the incredulity of the people, the transition here is natural, and the connexion close between this prophecy and the foregoing one; as also between the beginning of this prophecy and its conclusion. For, considering that in part the people suffered for the faults of their shepherds, mercy now urged the prophet to declare from God that he would judge between them—save the flock, and—set up one shepherd over them, who should feed them, even his servant David. Ib. 201, 2.

2. — shepherds.—"The king, his counsellors, and the heads of the people." Michaelis.

O ye shepherds.—Houbigant reads הָרָעִים; which is confirmed by Syr.

the shepherds of Israel that feed themselves ! Should not 3 the shepherds feed the flock? Ye eat the milk, and ye clothe you with the wool, and ye slay * that which is fat :
 4 but ye feed not the flock. The weak ye have not strengthened, and the sick ye have not healed, and † that which was broken ye have not bound up, and ‡ that which was driven away ye have not brought again, and || that which was lost ye have not sought : but with force have ye ruled 5 over them, and with rigour. And they were scattered, because there was no shepherd : and they became meat to all the beasts of the field, [and to the fowls of the heavens,] 6 when they were scattered. My flock wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill ; yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the land ; and none did search or seek after them.

* H. the fat. † H. the broken. ‡ H. the driven away. || H. the lost.

and v. 9. Vulg. and ó. MS. Vat. omit אֵלֵיהֶם. The English version may stand. The rendering “and say unto them, even unto the shepherds,” would require אֵל רְעִים, according to Houbigant.

—shepherds of Israel that feed themselves.—The beauty of the original may be expressed in Latin or Greek, though not in English : pastoribus qui pascunt semetipsos : τοῖς ποιμέσιν οἱ ποιμαίνουσιν ἑαυτοῦς.

—the flock.—The original word includes goats, throughout this chapter. See v. 17.

3. —and ye slay.—So V. ó. Syr. 3 MSS. 1 of the year 1106 ; 1 originally, and 1 now. In the four verbs the future is frequentative.

4. The weak.—הַנְּחֹלֶת in the singular number, 1 MS. V. ó. Syr.

5. —no shepherd.—None, in effect : none deserving of the name.

—and to the fowls &c.—The words וְלַעֲוִפֵּי הַשָּׁמַיִם are added by ó. MS. A. and Arab. But they are wanting, v. 8.

—when they were scattered.—The original word is omitted by ó. Ar. Syr. Houbigant joins it to the following verse, Illæ dispersæ sunt, errantque &c. The two Hebrew verbs are of different genders, as they now stand. But the alteration to וַשְׁגָּו in v. 6 would be slight ; and is favoured by ó. Ar. Syr.

6. —upon all the face.—“Upon the face of all,” 3 MSS. Arab. ó. ed.

- 7 Therefore, ye shepherds, hear the word of Jehovah :
 8 As I live, saith the Lord Jehovah, surely because my flock became a prey, and my flock became meat to all the beasts of the field, forasmuch as there was no shepherd, neither did my shepherds search after my flock, but the 9 shepherds fed themselves, and fed not my flock ; therefore, O ye shepherds, hear the word of Jehovah :
 10 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah : Behold, I am against the shepherds ; and I will require my flock at their hand, and will cause them to cease from feeding the flock, neither shall the shepherds feed themselves any more : for I will deliver my flock from their mouth, and they shall not be meat for them.
 11 For thus saith the Lord Jehovah : Behold, I, even I, will 12 search after my flock, and will diligently seek them : * as * II. according to the diligent seeking.

Ald. and in the Antwerp polyglot. In ó. MS. A. the reading is, παντὶ προσώπῳ πάσης.

10. —require.—The original word is translated search after, v. 6. The beauty of the reference is lost in the translation.

—shall not be.—תהיינה MSS.—“This must surely have been said before Zedekiah was taken : and so must v. 2. Some would translate, I have required. But what needed they then to be called upon, as v. 7, 9, for what they knew already, and have a woe pronounced, as v. 2, that was already executed : unless it be to be executed in another world?” Secker.

If the prophecy in this chapter is connected with that in the foregoing, the time of its delivery is ascertained c. xxxiii. 22 : and the woes denounced, and admonitions given, may be extended to the time of the captivity, and to the calamities which befel some of the ruling Jews in Egypt after the murder of Gedaliah. Jer. xlii. 1, 18, &c. If the conquest of Jerusalem, and the taking of Zedekiah, are referred to, the time when Ezekiel delivered the prophecy contained in this chapter cannot be fixed with precision.

11. —diligently seek.—The Hebrew word signifies, to seek early, to seek in the morning.

- a shepherd diligently seeketh his flock, in the day when he is among his flock that are spread abroad; so will I diligently seek my flock, and will deliver them out of all the places where they have been scattered in the day * of
- 13 clouds and of thick darkness. And I will bring them out from the † people, and gather them from the countries; and will bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the mountains of Israel, by the streams, and in all
- 14 the dwelling-places of the land. I will feed them in a good pasture, and upon ‡ the high mountains of Israel shall their fold be: there shall they lie down in a good fold; and in a fat pasture shall they feed, upon the moun-
- 15 tains of Israel. I will feed my flock, and I will cause
- 16 them to lie down, saith the Lord Jehovah. I will seek that which was lost, and will bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen the sick; and will || keep the fat and the strong, and will feed § them with discretion.
- 17 And as for you, O my flock, thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Behold, I will judge between cattle and cattle, * H. of a cloud. † H. peoples. ‡ H. the mountains of the height.

|| Or, preserve, or, give heed to. § H. it.

12. —in the day of clouds.—See this clause Joel ii. 2. Zeph. i. 15. That darkness is used for calamity, see on Amos v. 20.

Two MSS. 1 originally, and 1 ed. read אֶתְהֵן in this verse.

13. —and will bring them.—וְהִבִּיאֶתִּים MSS.

14. —and in a fat pasture.—וּבִמְרֵעָה and in a fat pasture. 4 MSS. מְרֵעָה in a fat pasture. 1 MS.

16. —will keep.—אֲשָׁמֵר, or אֲשִׁמּוֹר, 6. Ar. Syr. V. Houb. Dathius. The bad shepherd “slew that which was fat:” v. 3: on the contrary, the good shepherd is here represented as preserving it, and as feeding it with discretion: which last clause establishes the reading here proposed.

17. —between cattle and cattle.—Between the weaker part of my sheep and goats, and the stronger part, even the rams and he-goats that

- 18 even the rams and the he-goats. Seemeth it a small thing unto you that ye eat up the good pasture; but that ye tread down with your feet the remainder of your pastures? and that ye drink * the clear waters; but that ye foul with
- 19 your feet what remaineth? and that my flock eat what ye have trodden with your feet, and drink what ye have fouled with your feet?
- 20 Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah unto them: Behold, I, even I, will judge between the fat cattle † and
- 21 the lean cattle. Because ye thrust with your side and with your shoulder, and push all the weak with your
- 22 horns, till ye scatter them abroad; therefore will I save my flock, and they shall no more be a prey; and I will
- 23 judge between cattle and cattle. And I will raise up one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David: he shall feed them, and he shall be their
- 24 shepherd. And I Jehovah will be their God, and my servant David a prince among them: I Jehovah have
- 25 spoken it. And I will make with them a covenant of peace,

* H. the clearness, or, depth, of the waters.

† H. and between.

use violence towards them. See v. 20. Glassius rightly observes that rams and he-goats are put in apposition with לֶשֶׂה, and cattle.

18. —unto you.—See כִּכְם thus used Numb. xvi. 9. Isai. vii. 13. כִּי is understood before תִּרְעוּ.

—clear waters.—See ó. Arab. Vulg.

20. —unto them.—So Chald. But אֲלֵיכֶם unto you. V. 2 MSS. 1 ed. In 2 MSS. the word is omitted: ó. MS. Vat. and Syr. read only אֲרֵנִי יְהוָה, or יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים; and ó. MS. A. ed. Ald. and Arab. read אֲרֵנִי יְהוָה אֱלֹהִים.

23. —my servant David.—This prophecy may refer to Zerubbabel, to Christ, and to a future descendant of David who shall reign over the Jews after their restoration. See on Hos. iii. 5. לָהֶם is read for לָהֶן in 21 MSS. and אֹתָם seems the true reading for אֶתְהֶן.

25. —with them.—With David. ó. Ar.

and will cause evil beasts to cease out of the land: and they shall dwell safely in the desert, and shall sleep in the 26 woods. And I will make them, and the places round about my hill, a blessing; and I will cause the shower to come down in its season, there shall be * plentiful
 27 showers. And the trees of the field shall yield their fruit, and the earth shall yield her encrease; and they shall be secure in their land, and shall know that I am Jehovah, when I shall break the bands of their yoke, and shall deliver them from the hand of those that served them-
 28 selves of them. And they shall be no more a prey to the nations, neither shall the beasts of the land devour them; but they shall dwell securely, and none shall make them
 29 afraid. And I will raise up for them † a peaceful plantation, and they shall be no more consumed by famine in the land, neither bear the reproach of the heathen any 30 more. Thus shall they know that I, Jehovah their God,

* H. showers of blessing.

† H. a plantation of peace.

26. —and the places round about.—כְּבִיבוֹת is the reading of 6 MSS. and 3 originally, V. ó. Syr. Chald. “And I will make them round about my hill a blessing.”

—plentiful showers.—See on Joel ii. 14.

27. —shall yield their fruit.—Hebr. give. So, καὶ ἐδίδον καρπὸν, Matth. xiii. 8.

—served themselves.—Exacted service.

29. —a peaceful plantation.—Houbigant and Dathius render מַטֵּעַ plantarium, i. e. locus ubi plantatur. For לְשֶׁם these critics read שְׁלָם, with ó. Ar. Syr. and observe that not renown but security, prosperity, and consequent exemption from famine, are insisted on.

—consumed by famine.—Gathered into the sepulchre among their deceased ancestors, in consequence of famine.

30. Thus shall they know.—Four MSS. one originally, one now, and three edd. read וידעו הגוים “Thus shall the nations know:” which is a very good reading.

am with them, and that they, even the house of Israel, are 31 my people, saith the Lord Jehovah. For ye my flock,
 * the flock of my pasture, are men, and I am Jehovah your God, saith the Lord Jehovah.

---

CHAPTER XXXV.

1 MOREOVER THE word of Jehovah came unto me, say-
 2 ing; Son of man, set thy face against mount Seir, and 3 prophesy against it, and say unto it,

Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Behold, I am against thee, O mount Seir, and I will stretch out mine hand against thee, and will make thee a desolation and an astonish-4 ment. Thy cities I will † lay waste, and thou shalt be ‡ desolate; and thou shalt know that I am Jehovah.

* H. ye the flock. † H. make a waste. ‡ H. a desolation.

---

—am with them.—אִתָּם is wanting in 3 MSS. and in ó. Ar. Syr.
 “that I am Jehovah their God, and that they” &c.

31. —For ye.—וְאַתֶּם, 1 MS. and 1 originally.

—are men.—אֲדָם is omitted in ó. Ar. and some may approve of this omission. “For ye are my flock, ye are the flock of my pasture, and I” &c. But Cappellus refers to c. xxxvi. 38; and Dathius remarks that the prophet thus explains how the foregoing allegory is to be understood.

—and I am Jehovah.—For וְאֲנִי, and I, see 1 MS. ó. Ar. Syr. V.
 יהוה Jehovah, is supplied in 11 MSS. a reading supported by all the ancients, except Chald. Suppose that transcribers wrote וְאֲנִי; and the preceding וְאֲנִי accounts for the omission of the following “י.”

“The prophet goes on to shew that the same reason, which will operate in favour of the Jews, will not operate in favour of the Heathen; especially not in favour of the Jews’ relations the Edomites: for they shewed no mercy and therefore deserved to receive none; and because they had a perpetual hatred, were to be made a perpetual desolation.” Obs. on books. ii. 202.

3. —I am against thee.—Three MSS. read עָלַיךְ.

- 5 Because thou hast borne * the old hatred, and hast † shed the blood of the sons of Israel by the sword, in the time of their calamity, in the time of the punishment of iniquity, 6 even in the end thereof; therefore, as I live, saith the Lord Jehovah, surely in blood will I deal with thee, and blood shall pursue thee: since thou hast not hated blood, there-7 fore blood shall pursue thee. Thus will I make Mount Seir a desolation and an astonishment, and will cut off from it 8 him that passeth out and him that returneth. And I will fill thy mountains with thy slain: as for thine hills, and thy valleys, and all thy streams, they that are slain by the 9 sword shall fall therein. I will make thee ‡ perpetual desolations, and thy cities shall not be inhabited: and ye shall * H. the hatred of old time.

† Or, poured out.

‡ H. desolations of eternity.

5. —the old hatred.—See c. xxv. 15. The ancient hatred of Esau towards Jacob is referred to.

—and hast shed &c.—See the phrase, ps. lxiii. 11. Jer. xviii. 21. In these places many of the ancients render the verb to deliver up; perhaps deriving it from גור to gather together. The root may be, גר to cut asunder. נגר, in Hiphil, may be understood of spilling, or pouring out, like water. על יד חרב may mean with the edge of the sword; but the phrase often denotes the means, or instrument.

6. —in blood will I deal with thee.—I find that Cappellus concurs in this interpretation: “agam tecum in sanguine.”

—blood shall pursue thee.—“Thy blood-guiltiness shall pursue thee: thou shalt be punished for it.” Michaelis. They that slay with the sword. Chald.

—hast not hated.—Hast shed blood so largely. See Mr. Lowth.

7. —and an astonishment.—Houbigant conjectured ומשמח; and 11 MSS. confirm this conjecture: which was also the reading of 5 MSS. originally.

—him that passeth out and him that returneth.—Every one. See on Mal. ii. 12.

8. —thy mountains—thy slain.—ó, MS. A. and ed. Ald. and Arab. read הרך and חללך. But Chald. reads the affix י, his, throughout the verse.

9. —be inhabited.—So the ancients, Houbigant, and Dathius. תושבנה 4 MSS. תשבנה many MSS.

- 10 know that I am Jehovah. Because thou hast said, “These two nations and these two countries shall be mine, and we will possess it;” whereas Jehovah was 11 there; therefore, as I live, saith the Lord Jehovah, I will do according to thine anger, and according to thine envy, which thou hast used from thine hatred against them; and I will make myself known among them, when 12 I shall judge thee. And thou shalt know that I, Jehovah, have heard all thy blasphemies which thou hast spoken against the mountains of Israel, saying, “They are laid 13 desolate, unto us are they given to be devoured.” Thus with your mouth have ye magnified yourselves against me, and multiplied your words against me: I have heard them, [saith the Lord.]
 14 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: When the whole land
 15 rejoiceth, I will prepare desolation for thee: as thou —and ye shall know.—וידעת, and thou shalt know, ó. Ar. Syr.

10. —two nations.—Israel and Judah.

11. —which thou hast used &c.—We may render, “Because thou hast dealt with them out of thine hatred.”

—hast used.—עשית: MSS.

—from thine hatred.—משנאתך MSS.

—among them.—“In thee. ó. See v. 12.” Secker.

It follows from this verse that the prophecy contained in this chapter was delivered after the destruction of Jerusalem, and before the conquest of Edom by Nebuchadnezzar.

12. —They are laid desolate.—So Keri, which the common version follows, and 3 MSS. See also V. ó. Syr. Houb.

13. —and multiplied.—“Et multiplicastis. Syr. Ch. forte ex usu Ch. locupletandi. ἐπλήθυνας, Grabe. unde nescio. Legendum וזהעתקתם, made your words hard. Confer 1 Sam. ii. 3. Ps. xxxi. 19. lxxv. 6. xciv. 4.” Secker.

—I.—And I. ó. MS. A. Ar. Syr.

—with the Lord.—This addition is found in ó. MS. A. and Arab.

14. —rejoiceth.—After the restoration from Babylon.

—desolation.—See on Amos i. 12.

didst rejoice at the inheritance of the house of Israel, because it was desolate, so will I do unto thee: thou shalt be * desolate, O mount Seir; and all Edom, even all of it: and they shall know that I am Jehovah.

---

CHAPTER XXXVI.

- 1 ALSO, thou son of man, prophesy unto the mountains of Israel, and say;
- 2 Ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of Jehovah: thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Because the enemy hath said against you, "Aha! even † the ancient high-place is in
- 3 our possession;" therefore prophesy, and say; Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Because they have made you desolate, and swallowed you up on every side, that ye might be a possession to the residue of the nations; and ‡ ye are taken up in the lips of talkers, and in the defam-

* H. a desolation.

† H. the high-place, or, hill, of old time.

‡ H. are caused to come up, [or, are come up] to the lip of the tongue, and to &c.

---

15. —so will I do &c.—I will make thee desolate; and others shall rejoice over thee.

—and they shall know.—וְתָדַע, "and thou shalt know," ó. Ar.

2. —the ancient high-place.—The hill of Sion. I suppose that we should read בִּמְתָה; which denotes a place of worship in general, because, in the idolatrous ages, such were usually situated on high places. See on c. vi. 2. Michaelis observes the affinity of βωμὸς to בִּמְתָה. Suppl. Hebr. lex. If בְּמִוְתָה, pl. בְּמִוְתִּים, height, be feminine, the present reading might stand. See Dr. Jubb, in Bp. Lowth's Isaiah: c. liii. 9.

3. —Because.—וּבִיעֵן 5 MSS. and 2 originally. As c. xiii. 10. and elsewhere.

—the residue.—The nations which remained unconquered by the Babylonians.

4 ing of the people; therefore, ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord Jehovah :

Thus saith the Lord Jehovah to the mountains and to the hills, to the streams and to the valleys, to the desolate wastes, and to the forsaken cities, which are become a prey, and a derision, to the residue of the nations that are
 5 round about : therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah : Surely in the fire of my jealousy have I spoken against the residue of the nations, and against all * Edom, who have appointed my land to themselves for a possession, with joy of their whole heart, and with a † despiteful
 6 mind, to cast it out for a prey. Prophecy therefore concerning the land of Israel, and say to the mountains and to the hills, to the streams and to the valleys : Thus saith the Lord Jehovah : Behold, I have spoken in my jealousy and in my fury, because ye have borne the reproach of
 7 the nations. Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah : I have ‡ lifted up mine hand, saying, surely the nations that are round about you || shall also bear their reproach.
 8 But ye, O ye mountains of Israel, shall shoot forth your branches, and shall bear your fruit to my people Israel ;
 9 for they are near § coming. For, behold, I am for you,

* H. Edom, all of it. † H. with despite of mind. ‡ Or, I have sworn.
 || H. they shall. § H. to come.

4. —of the Lord.—אֱלֹהֵי is wanting in 2 MSS. and in ó. Ar.

5. —all.—כֻּלָּהּ 7 MSS. 2 edd. Houb.

—with a despiteful mind.—Twenty-six MSS. read כַּנְפֵּשׁ, as c. xxv. 15.

—to cast it out.—הִגְרָשָׁה propter expelli eam, Houb. But some consider the word as the Chaldee or Syriac infinitive, which Ezekiel was prone to use. See c. xvii. 9.

6, 7. We may point thus : Behold, I have spoken in my jealousy and in my fury. Because ye have borne the reproach of the nations, therefore &c.

7. —their reproach.—Reproach cast on them by others.

8. —your branches.—עֲנַפֵּיכֶם, 5 MSS.

—for they &c.—For they [my people Israel] are near [in time] coming [from Babylon into their own land.] ὅτι ἐγγίξουσιν τοῦ ἐλθεῖν, is the true reading of ó. not ἐλπίζουσιν. See ed. Grabe and ed. Breitingen.

- and I will turn unto you, and ye shall be tilled and sown :
 10 and I will multiply men upon you, even all the house of Israel, all of * them : and the cities shall be inhabited, 11 and the waste places shall be built. And I will multiply men upon you, and beasts ; and they shall encrease and bring forth : and I will cause you to be inhabited according to your ancient state, and will do you good according to your † first time : and ye shall know that I am Jehovah.
 12 Yea, I will cause men to walk upon you, even my people Israel : and they shall possess thee, and thou shalt be their inheritance, neither shalt thou henceforth bereave 13 them of men any more. Thus saith the Lord Jehovah :
 Because they say of you, “Thou land devourest men, 14 and thou bereavest thy nation ;” therefore thou shalt devour men no more, neither bereave thy nation
 15 any more, saith the Lord Jehovah. Neither will I ‡ cause the reproach of the nations to be heard against

* H. it. † Or, beginnings. ‡ H. cause men to hear.

10. —all of them.—כלו 2 MSS. 2 in the marg. כולו 1 MS.

11. —and they shall encrease &c.—Seven MSS. transpose the words : “and they shall bring forth and encrease.” But the two Hebrew words are omitted by ó.

—according to your first time.—Read בראשיתכם, with ó. Ar. Syr. Chald.

12. —cause men to walk.—“והולדתי ó. ed. Rom. Ch. recte ut videtur. beget, or, cause to be born.” Seeker.

—possess thee.—אָרץ is understood here, and v. 13.

—bereave them of men.—By the sword, famine, and pestilence ; which were God’s judgments on his people for their idolatries.

13. —they say of you.—לָר, of thee, ó. Ar. Syr. The adjoining nations observed the heavy sufferings of Israel and Judah ; and accused the land of exterminating its inhabitants.

—Thou land devourest.—Read אַת, thou, with MSS. edd.

14. —no more.—For a long period of years : and absolutely no more, after the future restoration.

—bereave.—תשבלי MSS. edd. the ancients, and Keri.

thee any more, neither shalt thou bear the upbraiding of the * people any more, neither shalt thou bereave thy nation any more, saith the Lord Jehovah.

- 16 THE WORD of Jehovah came also unto me, saying:
 17 Son of man, when the house of Israel dwelt in their own land, they defiled it by their way and by their doings: their way was before me as the defilement of a removed 18 woman. Wherefore I poured my fury upon them for the blood which they had shed upon the land, and because they 19 had polluted it with their idols. And I scattered them among the nations, and they were dispersed through the countries: according to their way, and according to their 20 doings, I judged them. And when they came to the nations whither they went, they polluted mine holy name, in that it was said concerning them, “These are the people of Jehovah, and they are gone forth out of his land.”
 21 But I have had pity on them for mine holy name, which the house of Israel have polluted among the nations, whither they are gone.
 22 Therefore say unto the house of Israel: Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Not for your sakes do I this, O house of Israel, but for mine holy name, which ye have polluted
 23 among the nations, whither ye are gone. And I will sanctify my great name which hath been polluted among the nations, which ye have polluted in the midst of them; and the nations shall know that I am Jehovah, saith the

* H. peoples.

---

15. —bereave.—תשכלי 2 MSS. 2 in the margin. 1 ed. V. Chald. and Keri.

20. —they came.—ויבאו 8 MSS. 1 ed. all the ancients, Houbigant, Dathius.

—his land.—Their land. ó. MS. A.

21. —have polluted.—חללוהו, MSS. edd.

Lord Jehovah, when I shall be sanctified because of you 24 in their sight. For I will take you from among the nations, and gather you out of all countries; and bring 25 you into your own land. Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be cleansed from all your defilements, and from all your idols will I cleanse you.
 26 I will also give you a new heart, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will remove the heart of stone from your * flesh, and will give you an heart of flesh.
 27 And my spirit will I put within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and to keep my judgments and do 28 them. And ye shall dwell in the land which I gave to your fathers; and ye shall be my people, and I will be 29 your God. I will also † save you from all your defilements; and I will call for the corn and will multiply it, 30 and will not send famine upon you. And I will multiply the fruit of the tree, and the encrease of the field; that ye may ‡ receive no more the reproach of famine among 31 the nations. Then shall ye remember your evil ways, and your doings that were not good; and ye shall loathe yourselves for your iniquities and for your abominations.

* Or, body. † Or, deliver. ‡ Or, bear, or, undergo.

23. —in their sight.—לעיניהם MSS. edd. all the ancients, Houbigant, Dathius. Here the English version forsakes the text.

23, 24. We may render: “in their sight; and I shall take you &c.”

—the nations.—14 MSS. read מן הגוים for מן העמים agreeably to Syr. Ar. Chald.

25. This verse is pointed as in ó. V. Houbigant. It illustrates the usefulness of attention to other sources of criticism than a servile regard to the Masoretic distribution of clauses.

26—28. This prophecy will be fully accomplished at the general conversion and final restoration of the Jews.

31. —not good.—See on c. xx. 25.

- 32 Not for your sakes do I this, saith the Lord Jehovah; be it known unto you: be ashamed and confounded for your 33 own ways, O house of Israel. Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: In the day when I shall cleanse you from all your iniquities, and shall cause the cities to be inhabited 34 and the waste places to be built, and when the desolate land shall be tilled, whereas it was desolate in the sight of 35 all that passed by: then shall * it be said, "This land that was desolate is become as the garden of Eden; and the cities that were waste, and desolate, and ruined, are 36 become fenced and are inhabited." Then the nations that are left round about you shall know that I Jehovah have built the ruined places, and planted the land which was desolate: I Jehovah have spoken it, and I will do it.
 37 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: I will yet seek to do this for the house of Israel: I will encrease them with men, 38 like a flock: as the holy flock, as the flock of Jerusalem in her solemn feasts; so shall the waste cities be filled with flocks of men: and they shall know that I am
 Jehovah.

* II. shall men say.

32. At the end of this v. ó. MS. Al. and Ar. add, "saith the Lord:" MS. Copt. reads, "dicit Adonai Dominus, domus Israelis."

33—35. The Vulgate version connects these verses.

35. —are inhabited.—Men inhabit.

36. —and planted.—ונטעתי, "and planted," 2 MSS. ó. Ar. Syr. V.

—the land which was desolate.—The ancients render as if they read הנשמות, the desolate places.

37. —seek.—אדריש, 1 MS. Ego curabo diligenter ut hæc faciam domui Israel. Houbl. In eo curam geram Israelitarum. Dathius.

—like a flock.—Compare ps. cvii. 41. Job xxi. 11.

38. as the Sc.—As the flock of holy ones, or, of holinesses, i. e. as the numerous flocks destined for sacrifices, even as the numerous flocks assembled in Jerusalem during her passover and other yearly solemnities, so &c.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

- 1 THE HAND of Jehovah was upon me; and Jehovah brought me forth in the spirit, and set me in the 2 midst of a valley * which was full of bones, and caused me to pass by them round about; and, lo, there were
 3 very many on the † face of the valley, and, lo, they were very dry. Then he said unto me; Son of man, ‡ can these bones live? And I answered, O Lord
 4 Jehovah, thou knowest. Then he said unto me, Prophecy over these dry bones, and say unto them, O ye
 5 dry bones, hear the word of Jehovah. Thus saith the Lord Jehovah unto these bones: Behold, I will cause
 6 breath to enter into you, and ye shall live: and I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath into you; and ye shall live, and shall know that I am Jehovah.

* <sup>כ</sup>H. and it was full.

† Or, surface.

‡ Or, shall.

1. —Jehovah brought me.—See ó. Otherwise, יר would be masculine and feminine in the same verse.

3. —live?—Immediately, and in your sight. The prophet replies in a doubting manner, because he knew not the scope of the vision. Houbigant.

4. —unto me.—Six MSS. ó. ed. Ald. and Arab. supply בן אדם, “O son of man.”

—Prophecy over.—Speak by prophetic impulse over, or to, or concerning, these bones. Ad hæc ossa. Houb. de istis ossibus. V. Dathius.

—unto them.—Perhaps, אליהן. But MSS. read אליהם here, and עליהם v. 8.

- 7 So I prophesied as I was commanded: and as I prophesied there was a noise; and, behold, there was a 8 shaking, and the bones drew near, bone to its bone. And when I looked, behold, there were sinews upon them, and the flesh came up, and the skin covered them above: but 9 there was no breath in them. Then said he unto me, Prophecy unto breath, prophecy, O son of man, and say unto breath, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Come from the four winds, O breath; and blow upon these slain, that they may live.
- 10 So I prophesied as he commanded me; and the breath came into them, and they lived and stood on their feet, a 11 very exceedingly great host. Then he said unto me; Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold, they say, “Our bones are dried, and our hope is 12 lost; as for us, we are cut off.” Therefore prophecy, and say unto them; Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Behold, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, O my people; and bring you into 13 the land of Israel. And ye shall know that I am

7. —I was commanded.—צוּנִי, he commanded me, 1 MS. 6. Ar. Syr. V. v. 10.

—as I prophesied.—וְכַדְבַּר־יְהוָה 6 MSS. and 2 originally.

—drew near.—Eichhorn here observes an error in language, וַתִּקְרְבוּ, for וַתִּקְרְבוּהָ.

—to its bone.—To its corresponding bone in the human body.

8. —covered them.—The verb may be passive, abducebatur. See Syr.

9. —slain.—Probably Jews slain in the Babylonish wars; as the valley, represented in vision, might be one near Jerusalem.

11. —as for us.—Houbigant observes that לָנוּ is so redundant as to add emphasis, and express entire excision.

12. —your graves.—In the land of their captivity, the Jews seemed as absolutely deprived of their own country as persons committed to the grave are cut off from the living. The foregoing similitude shewed in a strong and beautiful manner that God, who could even raise the dead, had power to restore them.

Jehovah, when I open your graves, and cause you to 14 come up out of your graves, O my people, and put my breath within you, and ye live; and I place you in your own land: ye shall even know that I Jehovah have spoken
it, and have done it, saith Jehovah.

15 THE WORD of Jehovah came also unto me, saying;
 16 Moreover, son of man, take thee one stick, and write upon it, "For Judah, and for the sons of Israel his companions:" then take another stick, and write upon it,
 "For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim and of all the house of 17 Israel his companions." Then join them one to another into one stick, and let them become one in thine hand.
 18 And when the sons of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Wilt thou not shew us * what thou meanest by 19 these? say unto them, Thus saith the Lord; Behold,
 I will take the stick of Joseph, which was in the hand of Ephraim and of the tribes of Israel his companions, and will put them with it, even with the stick of Judah, and will make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine 20 hand. And the sticks whereon thou † writest, shall be in

* H. what these are unto thee.

† H. shalt write.

16. —and for the sons.—וְכָל בֵּית, "and for all the house," 2 MSS.

—his companions.—חֲבֵירָיו, or חֲבֵרָיו, MSS. edd. twice.

18. —these.—"Quid in his tibi velis. Vulg. Recte." Secker.

19. —which was &c.—Which was wielded as a sceptre in the hand of Ephraim, and of the other nine tribes of Israel the companions of their chief tribe Ephraim.

In this verse אֱלִיהֶם, חֲבֵרָיו, and וְעִשְׂתִּים, are readings confirmed by MSS. and edd.

—in mine hand.—בִּיד יְהוּדָה, "in the hand of Judah," is the reading of ó. Arab. from the abbreviation "בִּיד, as Cappellus curiously observes. I prefer this reading, as it makes the prophecy more definite. "In the hand of Judah; first, under Zerubbabel, and hereafter under a great king of that tribe."

- 21 thine hand before their eyes. And say thou unto them, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Behold, I will take the sons of Israel from among the nations whither they are gone, and will gather them from every side, and bring 22 them into their own land. And I will make them one nation in the land, upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king over them all; and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be 23 divided into two kingdoms any more at all. Neither shall they be defiled any more with their idols, nor with their abominations, nor with any of their transgressions: but I will save them from all their backslidings wherein they have sinned, and will cleanse them;
 and they shall be my people, and I will be their God.
 24 And my servant David shall be king over them, and they shall have one shepherd: and they shall walk in my

22. —in the land, upon.—בארצי ובהרי, “in my land and upon the mountains” ó. Ar. “in their land,” MS. Copt.

—and they shall be sc.—לא 2 MSS. יהיו MSS.

—any more at all.—Or, “any more divided into two kingdoms, even any more.” Syr. V. represent עור only once: Chald. represents it twice; and the Greek is very emphatical, οὐδὲ μὴ διαρθεῖσιν οὐκέτι.

23. —backslidings.—משובותיהם, from שוב. See how many MSS. and edd. leave the word at large by omitting the ו between מ and ש ἀνομιῶν, ó. suis rebellionibus, Houb.

24. —shall be king.—Rather, shall reign, as Syr. the verb מלך being converted by the distant van. See on c. xxxiv. 23. “This the Chaldee paraphrast, Hos. iii. 5, and many Rabbins explain to signify the Messiah, eminenter, as Grotius says.” Ben Mordecai. 8vo. 497. “It was customary among the Jews to call similar characters by one and the same name. As when Christ is called David.” Ib. 582. The similarity between Christ at his future advent to reign over the Jews, and David his progenitor, may consist in the flourishing state of spiritual affairs amidst external magnificence. “My servant David shall be their prince for ever,” favours the supposition that Christ will hereafter assume regal state on earth among the converted Jews.

—one shepherd.—See c. xxxiv. 23.

- 25 judgments, and observe my statutes, and do them. And they shall dwell in the land which I gave to my servant Jacob, wherein your fathers dwelt; they shall dwell therein, and their sons and their sons' sons for ever; and
- 26 David my servant shall be their prince for ever. And I will make with them a covenant of peace: it shall be an everlasting covenant with them: and I will place them, and multiply them; and will place my sanctuary in the
- 27 midst of them for ever. My tabernacle also shall be with them: yea, I will be their God, and they shall be my
- 28 people. And the nations shall know that I Jehovah sanctify Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for ever.

25. —your fathers.—אבותיהם, “their fathers,” ó. Ar. Syr. which is a preferable reading: and accordingly both Houbigant and Dathius translate eorum.

26. —covenant with them.—אתם, MSS.

—and I will place them.—Houbigant proposes וניחתיים, and I will lead them. Chald. has וברכתים, and I will bless them. Syr. omits the word. One MS. and ó. Ar. omit the whole clause. Dathius says, Potest ex Hebraismo pleonastice dictum esse. The force of the two verbs may be, “I will so place them in their land as to multiply them.” See ps. lxxv. 8. Isai. li. 17. where the verbs without the copula signify, ita bibent ut exsugant: bibisti ut exsugas.

—my sanctuary.—If we understand for ever in a limited sense, or suppose the condition of obedience implied, the rebuilding of the temple may be here foretold. At the final restoration of the Jews, God will place his sanctuary and tabernacle among them for ever in a larger sense.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

- 1 THE WORD of Jehovah came also unto me, saying :
 2 Son of man, set thy face against Gog of the land of Magog, prince of Rhos Meshech and Tubal, and prophesy
 3 against him, and say, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah :
 Behold, I am against thee, O Gog, prince of Rhos 4 Meshech and Tubal. And I will turn thee back, and put
-

2. —Gog.—Gen. x. 2, we learn that Magog was the second son of Japhet. Ezckiel uses Magog for the country of which Gog was prince. Michaelis compares the word Gog with Kuk, or Chak, the general name of kings among the ancient Turks, Moguls, Tartars, Cataians, and Chinese : Spic. Geogr. p. 34 : and thinks that Magog denotes those vast tracts of country to the north of India and China, which the Greeks called Scythia, and we Tartary. The Turks are generally allowed to be of Scythian origin. “Scythopolis and Hierapolis, which the Scythians took when they overcame Syria, were ever after by the Syrians called Magog. See Plin. l. v. c. xxiii.” J. Mede. Disc. l. p. 280. The Arabs call the Chinese wall Sud Yagog et Magog, that is, Agger Gog et Magog. Hyde’s works by Sharpe. ii. 426.

The Scythians ruled over Media for twenty-two years, before they were expelled from that country by Cyaxares, early in the reign of Zedekiah. After their expulsion, Nebuchadnezzar assisted in invading them. See obs. on books. ii. 181, 2. It follows that at this time they were a remarkable people on the theatre of the world.

—of the land.—“And the land.” ó. Ar. Syr.

—of Rhos.—This word is understood of a people by ó. Symm. Theod. and Houbigant. Bochart shews that the river Araxes was called Rhos ; whence the Russi, who seem to have first settled in Taurica Chersonesus. Geogr. l. iii. c. xiii.

—Meshech and Tubal.—See on c. xxvii. 13.

3. —prince.—And the prince. ó. Ar.

4. —turn thee back.—A few that escape shall return home.

hooks into thy jaws; and I will bring thee forth, and all thine army, horses and horsemen, all of them clothed in gorgeous apparel, even a great company with bucklers and 5 shields, all of them handling swords: Persia, Ethiopia, and Lybia with them; all of them with shields and hel-6 mets: Gomer, and all his bands; the house of Togarmah from the north-quarters, and all his bands; even many 7 * people with thee. Prepare even prepare thyself, thou and all thy † company that are assembled unto thee: and 8 be thou a guard unto them. After many days thou shalt be visited: in the latter years thou shalt come into a land brought back from the sword, and gathered out of many ‡ people, unto the mountains of Israel which had been

* H. peoples.

† H. assembly.

‡ H. peoples.

—hooks.—See. c. xxix. 4. It is an allusion to the manner of taking the crocodile. Consult Bishop Lowth on Isai. xxxvii. 29. “And I—jaws. It seems as if those words should be joined to the preceding verse.” Secker.

5. —Ethiopia.—Arabia Chusæa.

6. Gomer.—The most ancient Celts, who were perhaps originally situated on the confines of Europe and Asia. Michaelis spic. geogr. p. 22, 3. “Cimmerians: a very old and celebrated people, who inhabited the peninsula of Crim Tartary.” Michaelis’s note on this place.

—Togarmah.—See on c. xxvii. 14.

7. Prepare &c.—We may read הִכָּן paratus esto twice. Syr. omits וְהִכָּן; and ó. omit the copulative vau: “Prepare prepare thyself.”

—and be thou a guard.—And do thou, confiding in thy courage and discipline, watch and guard them. But Houbigant renders, “et quibus es præfectus,” “and of whom thou hast the charge.”

8. After many days.—It seems to me that the prophecy remains to be fulfilled, after the future re-establishment of the converted Jews in their own land; when the Mahometans and Pagans will invade them. On this supposition, the subject matter of c. xxxviii, xxxix, is well connected with the promises of distant blessings made towards the close of c. xxxvii.

—thou shalt be visited.—Punished. But Chald. “constitues, parabis, exercitum tuum.” Or, in Pyhal, “thou shalt be numbered.”

- long desolate: but * its inhabitants shall be brought forth from among the † people; and they shall dwell securely 9 all of them. And thou shalt go up, as a storm cometh, thou shalt be as a cloud to cover the land; thou and all thy bands, and many ‡ people with thee.
 10 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: It shall come to pass || at the same time that things shall arise in thine heart, and
 11 thou shalt think an evil thought; and shalt say, “ I will go up to the land of unwalled villages; I will go to them that are at rest, that dwell safely; all of them dwelling 12 without walls, and having neither bars nor gates: § to take a spoil, and ** to divide a prey; to turn mine hand against the desolate places that become inhabited, and against a people gathered out of the nations, possessing cattle and goods, dwelling in the †† middle of the earth.”
 13 Sheba, and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarshish, and * H. it shall be brought forth.

|| H. in that day.

† H. peoples.

§ H. to spoil.

‡ H. peoples.

** H. to prey.

†† Or, heights.

—long.—From the time of the Roman desolations.

—but its inhabitants &c.—The land is often put for those who inhabit it. See Jer. xliii. 11.

—dwell.—One of De Rossi's MSS. added originally עֲלֶיהָ, super eam, with V. Syr.

9. —as a storm cometh.—Et imminebis, ut ingruit tempestas." Houbigant. שׁוּאָה, ὑετός. ó. καταιγίς. "Ἄλλος in Montf. Hex. Tempestas. Dathius. Compare Prov. i. 27. iii. 25. Subita conturbatio, ut a procella. Cocceius. Descendes sicut procella." MS. Copt.

—with thee.—אִתְּךָ, 6 MSS. and 4 originally.

12. —mine hand.—יָדִי, ó. Arab.

—in the middle of the earth.—In editis terræ locis. Houb. Sie Hierosolyma vocatur propter situm sublimiorem. Dathius. Hebræi de Judæa intelligunt, quæ in medio terræ. Cast. lex. where it is observed that, Judg. ix. 37, מִבְּרַר is plainly the same with רָאשֵׁי, loca altiora, v. 36.

13. —the merchants of Tarshish.—The traders to Tarshish; that is, the people situated on the coasts of the Mediterranean or the Red Sea, all the villages thereof, shall say unto thee; “Art thou come * to take a spoil? hast thou † gathered thy company ‡ to divide a prey? to carry away silver and gold, to take away cattle and goods, to || divide great spoil?”

- 14 Therefore prophesy, son of man, and say unto Gog, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: In that day, when my 15 people Israel dwelleth securely, shalt thou not rise up and come from thy place, from the north quarters, thou and many people with thee, all of them riding upon horses, a 16 great company, and a mighty host? Shalt thou not come up against my people as a cloud to cover the land? shall it not be in the latter days that I will bring thee against my land; that the nations may know me, when I shall be sanctified in thee, O Gog, before their eyes?
17 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Art not thou he of whom I spake in old time § by my servants the prophets of Israel, who prophesied in those days and years, that I 18 would bring thee against them? And it shall come to * H. to spoil. † H. assembled thine assembly. ‡ H. to prey.

|| H. to spoil. § H. by the hand of.

successors to those who formerly had commerce with Tarshish. Chald. has, “the traders on the sea,” understanding Tarshish of any distant place.

—the villages.—This is the translation of ó. Syr. Theod. Houb. כפריה 2 MSS. כפריהם, their villages, ó.

15. —rise up.—Cappellus observes that ó. read תער, which Houbigant and Dathius greatly prefer. The latter critic refers to Jer. vi. 22. “תער ó. recte, ni fallor. Confer Jer. vi. 22.” Secker.

16. —shall it not be.—הרבה is understood: as c. xxxix. 8.

—the nations.—Two MSS. and 1 originally, add כל all, with ó. Ar. See c. xxxix. 23.

17. —Art not thou.—ה signifies, annon? nonne? Nold. p. 214.

—the prophets.—Whose predictions on this subject were never committed to writing, or are now lost.

—in those days.—מימים, from &c. 1 MS. ó. MS. Al. Arab.

—and years.—ושנים ó. Ar. Syr. Houb.

pass in that day, * when Gog shall come against the land of Israel, saith the Lord Jehovah, that my fury shall come up in mine anger and in my jealousy. In the fire of my wrath have I spoken: surely in that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel: so that the fishes of the sea shall shake at my presence, and the fowls of the heavens, and the beasts of the field, and every creeping thing that creepeth upon the ground, and all the men that are upon the face of the ground; and the mountains shall be thrown down, and the steep places shall fall, and every wall shall fall to the ground. And I will call for a sword against him throughout all my mountains, saith the Lord Jehovah: every man's sword shall be against his brother. And I will plead against him with pestilence and with blood, and with an overflowing shower and great hailstones; fire and brimstone will I rain upon him. Thus will I magnify myself and sanctify myself, and will be known in the sight of many nations; and they shall know that I am Jehovah.

* H. in the day when.

19. —in mine anger and in my jealousy.—See this punctuation in Syr. “in my jealous anger.”

—a great shaking.—Houbigant says rightly that an earthquake is described in this and the following verse. Compare Zech. xiv. 3, 4, 5.

20. —at my presence.—” מַפְנֵי י' Ar. at the presence of Jehovah.” Secker.

—the steep places.—הַרְגֵּז has the sense of gradus in the sister languages. Mr. Dimock proposes הַמְגִדְלוֹת, the towers, agreeably to the rendering of Syr. Chald. “Many mountains in Palestine, which had vineyards, had also terraces, which were surrounded with a wall that the rain might not wear away the small quantity of soil, and leave the rock naked.” Michaelis.

21. —against his brother.—Compare Zech. xiv. 13.

22. —fire.—שֶׁשׁ 3 MSS. Ar. Syr. According to this reading we may translate, “And I will plead against him with pestilence and with blood:

CHAPTER XXXIX.

- 1 Therefore, thou son of man, prophesy against Gog, and say, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Behold, I am against thee, O Gog, prince of Rhos Meshech and Tubal: 2 and I will turn thee back, and leave but a sixth part of thee, when I cause thee to come up from the north-quarters, and bring thee upon the mountains of Israel. 3 And I will smite thy bow out of thy left hand, and will 4 cause thine arrows to fall out of thy right hand. Thou shalt fall upon the mountains of Israel, thou and all thy bands, and the [many] * people that are with thee: to the ravenous birds of every † sort, and to the beasts of the 5 field, have I given thee to be devoured: thou shalt fall upon the face of the field: for I have spoken it, saith the 6 Lord Jehovah. And I will send a fire on Magog, and on

* H. peoples.

† H. wing.

---

and an overflowing shower, and great hailstones, and fire, and brimstone, will I rain upon him." Compare Rev. xx. 8, 9; where see Lowman, that the event may be literally fulfilled by a combination of enemies to the Christian name. It is plain that the extraordinary circumstances mentioned v. 19—22 remain to be accomplished on the future enemies of the Jews, when his people are reinstated in God's favour.

2. —and leave but a sixth part of thee.—וּשְׁאַשְׁתִּיךְ 2 MSS. perhaps a reduplicative from נִשָּׂא to deceive. See Chald. et seducam te: "And I will turn thee back, and will greatly deceive thee." Mr. Dimock proposes וְהִשְׁתִּיךְ, and deceive thee.

—when I cause.—וְ postquam. See Nold. § 42.

4. —people.—MSS. edd. read עַמִּים רַבִּים, many people, with Syr.

—6. Magog.—The country of Gog.

- them that dwell securely in the sea-coasts; and they shall 7 know that I am Jehovah. So will I make mine holy name known in the midst of my people Israel: neither will I cause mine holy name to be polluted any more: and the nations shall know that I am Jehovah, the Holy One in Israel.
- 8 Behold, it cometh to pass and shall be done, saith the Lord Jehovah: this is the day whereof I have spoken.
- 9 And they that dwell in the cities of Israel shall go forth, and shall set on fire and burn the armour, the shields, and the bucklers, the bows, and the arrows, and the hand-staves, and the spears; and they shall burn them with
- 10 fire seven years: so that they shall take no wood from the field, neither cut down any from the forests; for they shall

—in the sea-coasts.—The maritime regions, whether on the Mediterranean, see c. xxxviii. 13, or the Red Sea, see ib. or the Euxine, or the Caspian. Michaelis gives ים the general sense of regio, terra habitata. See his suppl. ad lex. Hebr. and spic. geogr. Gen. x. 5. Mede thinks the Greek aia derived from ים, and that Ægyptus is aia Cuphti, Æthiopia aia Theophi, &c. Disc. L. p. 281. See also Disc. xlix. p. 272.

7. —cause mine holy name to be polluted.—Or, “I will not pollute mine holy name” by seeming to desert my people. But ó. read ידל, βεβηλωθήσεται, “Neither shall mine holy name be polluted any more.”

—in Israel.—Four MSS. read ישראֵל without ב: “the Holy One of Israel.” See also V. ó. MS. Al. Ar. Syr.

8. —have spoken.—See c. xxxviii. 17.

9. —set on fire and burn the armour.—Only one verb is expressed in ó.

Bishop Lowth observes, on Isai. ix. 4, that some heathen nations burnt heaps of arms to the supposed god of victory; and that among the Romans this act was an emblem of peace. Among God’s people it might shew trust in him as their defender.

—seven years.—The victory shall be so great that, during this period of time, they shall suffice for fires on the mountains, and in the open fields; where the slain shall fall, and whither the inhabitants of the adjoining cities shall occasionally go forth. See בער used with ב Isai. xliii. 2 burn the armour with fire : and they shall spoil those that spoiled them, and shall plunder those that plundered them, saith the Lord Jehovah.

- 11 And it shall come to pass, in that day, that I will give unto Gog * a renowned place, a place of burial in Israel, the valley † of them that pass to the east of the sea : and it shall stop the nostrils of them that pass : and there shall they bury Gog, and all his multitude : and they shall call 12 it THE VALLEY OF THE MULTITUDE OF GOG. And seven months shall the house of Israel be burying them, that 13 they may cleanse the land : yea, all the people of the land shall bury them ; and it shall be renown to them in the day when I shall be glorified, saith the Lord Jehovah.
 14 And they shall set apart men ‡ of continual employment passing through the land, even passing through and burying those that remain upon the face of the land, to cleanse
 15 it : after the end of seven months shall they search. And || those that are appointed shall pass through the land ; and, when any seeth a man's bone, then shall he § set up

* H. a place of a name.

‡ H. of continuance.

† Or, through which men pass to.

|| H. those that pass through.

§ H. build.

11. — a renowned place.—See ó. V. Houbigant.

— the valley.—גיא MSS.

— of the sea.—The Dead Sea, or the Sea of Gennesareth.

— stop the nostrils.—In Cast. lex. the Arabic verb חסם signifies odoratu caruit, and the noun privatio odoratus. Seeker observes that there is no authority for the common translation : that ó. seem to read גיא את והסמו, omitting העברים with Syr. et claudent vallem : and that perhaps we should render, eaque [vallis] obturat i. e. claudit vada. “Et ca (detinet) frænat transeuntes : habenam injicit transeuntibus.” Cocc. lex.

— his multitude.—המונו MSS. ó.

14 — even passing through.—את העברים is the accusative case governed by יברילו. But ó. Syr. omit the words.

— to cleanse it.—From putrid carcases.

— after the end.—After seven months have been employed in burying the dead, v. 12, search shall be made for carcases still remaining unburied : so numerous shall the slain be.

- a mark by it, till the buriers bury it in THE VALLEY OF 16 THE MULTITUDE OF GOG. Also the name of a city shall be MULTITUDE. Thus shall they cleanse the land.
- 17 And thou, son of man, thus saith the Lord Jehovah : Say unto the birds of every wing, and unto every beast of the field ; Assemble yourselves and come, gather yourselves from every side, to my sacrifice which I * make for you, even a great sacrifice upon the mountains of Israel : and ye 18 shall eat flesh and drink blood ; the flesh of the mighty shall ye eat, and the blood of the princes of the earth shall ye drink ; of rams, of bulls, and of he-goats ; of bulls, all 19 of them fatlings of Bashan. And ye shall eat fat till ye be full, and ye shall drink blood till ye be drunken, of my 20 sacrifice which I † make for you. Thus shall ye be filled at my table with horses and with their riders, with mighty men and with all ‡ warriors, saith the Lord Jehovah.

* H. sacrifice.      † H. sacrifice.      ‡ H. men of war.

16. —of a city.—To be built near the great burial-place.

17. —to my sacrifice.—This bold imagery is founded on the custom of invitations to feasts after sacrifices. See Gen. xxxi. 54. 1 Sam. xvi. 3. Zeph. i. 7. Compare Isai. xxxiv. 6, which Ezekiel seems to have imitated ; and Rev. xix. 17, 18, where we find Ezekiel's animated address to the birds of prey, and even some of his expressions. The prophet has indulged the bent of his genius in a sublime amplification.

18. —of rams, of bulls.—It is observable that ó. Ar. read פרים bulls, for כרים lambs: and that this was originally the reading of 1 MS. Kings, princes, and tyrants, (see Chald.) are naturally expressed by rams, bulls, and he-goats.

20. —at my table.—At the table which is, as it were, spread by me. A continuation of the allegory. “The table of God is the field covered with dead bodies, the place of the slaughter of Magog. It is impossible to conceive how unbelievers could quote this verse to prove that the Jews of old times eat the flesh of horses, and even of men. Voltaire, though cautioned that not Jews, nor men, but wild beasts and birds, were invited to this feast of slaughter, that is, to the consumption of the slain, yet insisted to the last on his strange accusation.” Michaelis.

—with their riders.—This is the translation of ó. Syr. V. Cappellus, Houbigant, and Dathius. See also Rev. xix. 18.

- 21 And I will set my glory among the nations; and all the nations shall see my judgment which I have executed, and 22 mine hand which I have laid upon them. So the house of Israel shall know that I am Jehovah their God, from 23 that day and forward: and [all] the nations shall know that the house of Israel were carried away captives for their iniquity: because they trespassed against me, therefore hid I my face from them, and gave them into the hand of 24 their enemies; and all of them fell by the sword. According to their defilement of themselves, and according to their transgression, I did unto them, and hid my face from them.
- 25 Concerning this matter thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob, and have mercy upon the whole house of Israel, and be jealous for 26 mine holy name: and they shall forget their reproach, and all their trespasses whereby they trespassed against me, when they dwelt securely in their land, and none
 27 made them afraid; when I bring them back from the * people, and gather them from the lands of their enemies, and am sanctified because of them in the sight of 28 many nations. And they shall know that I am Jehovah their God, in that I caused them to be carried away captives among the nations, and afterwards collected them 29 into their own land. And none of them will I leave there any more, neither hide my face any more from them, when I have poured my spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord Jehovah.

* H. peoples.

23. —all the nations.—בְּלִי is supplied by ó. Ar. but omitted MS. Copt. See c. xxxviii. 16.

—all—by the sword.—The whole nation was subdued; and very many were put to the sword.

25. —the captivity.—שְׁבוּרָת MSS.

26. and they shall forget.—Houbigant. See Isai. liv. 4.

PRELIMINARY REMARKS

ON CHAPTERS XL—XLVIII.

“VITRINGA hath proved, in 2 vols. in Dutch, and a defence of them against the son of Cocceius, that this temple agrees with Solomon’s, and with that which was afterwards built by Zerobabel and Herod.” Secker.

“Men. Ben Isr. de resurrectione l. 3. c. 8. p. 314 &c produces 21 instances to shew that this prophecy of Ezekiel was not fulfilled under the second temple; and therefore is yet to be fulfilled.” Secker.

“This is certainly not the temple of Zerobabel, nor the division of the land nor the governors that we find either from Zerobabel’s time to the destruction of the Persian empire, or from Simon the Prince to the destruction of the Jewish kings of the Hasmonean race: nor the temple which Herod the Great began to build in the 18th year; much less is Herod the Prince mentioned in the xlvth chapter. I am not therefore able to give an historical account of these chapters.” Michaelis.

“Hæc mea est de tota hac pericopa sententia, quam modeste aliorum examini submitto. Non vaticinium continet, neque prædicatur quid futurum sit; sed præcipit quid fieri debeat, si totus populus, omnes tribus, ex captivitate in patriam suam redierint. Omnibus libertas concedebatur, omnes poterant redire. Jam præcipit Deus, quæ tunc debeat esse ratio cultus sacri, quæ divisio terræ inter tribus singulas. Nihil in tota descriptione extat, quod non potuisset executioni dari si modo omnes rediissent et terram a Deo eis concessam occupassent. In nova hac terræ promissæ occupatione, quam Deus populo obtulit, idem accidit quod in priori; cum, duce Joshua, terram tam diu desideratam essent ingressi. Illa divisio etiam admodum diversa fuit ab ea, quæ ex Dei voluntate fieri debebat. Socordia enim populi, bellum periculosum & diuturnum formidans, in causa fuit ut magna terræ pars primis ejus incolis relinqueretur. Atque eadem socordia, sive amor bonorum præsentium, retinebat eos, ut mallent exules vivere inter gentes, quam redire in patriam vel vastatam vel occupatam ab aliis. Numerus certe eorum, qui redierunt, erat admodum exiguus, si æstinetur ad eum qui de decem tribubus remanserunt. Quamquam enim ex his quoque se nonnulli Judæis et Benjamitis adjunxerunt, pauci tamen illi erant, neque hi pares præstandis aut implendis iis, quæ Deus per Ezechielem omnibus præceperat." Dathius.

"The temple described by Ezekiel should have been built by the new colonists; the customs and usages which he orders should have been observed by them; the division of the country should have been followed by them. That the temple did not arise out of its ruins according to his model, and that his orders were in no manner obeyed, was the fault of Israel. How far were they behind the orders of their first lawgiver Moses? what wonder therefore that they as little regard their second lawgiver Ezekiel? He supposes the return of all the tribes; which was agreeable to the prophecies of the other prophets, and to the will of Cyrus: but only Judah and Benjamin preferred the habitations of their ancestors to the country of Chaldea; and thus the great plan of Ezekiel was at once destroyed." Eichhorn.

A Dissertation on Ezekiel's Vision of the Temple, Ordinances of the Priest, Division of the Land, flowing of waters out of the Temple, &c. By Archbishop Secker.

Ezek. c. 40—48.

The Israelites mentioned in this vision are said to be the twelve tribes: Joseph is to have two shares of the land, and Levi none; but in the names of the gates Levi is mentioned, and but one named from Joseph. The country allotted them is described by geographical marks to be the land of Canaan. Indeed the shares of the several tribes are not the same, which they were in Joshua; nor is any of the country beyond Jordan divided amongst them. And 47. 22, 23, orders, that the proselytes sojourning in each tribe shall have an inheritance in land with those of the tribe in which they sojourn. This doth not seem to have been practised before the captivity. For though the Kenites, Judg. 1. 16, or rather part of them, 1 Sam. 15. 6, dwelt among the Jews, yet as they had neither house, nor vineyard, nor field, but dwelt in tents, Jer. 35. 7—9, as did Abraham, who had not a foot of the land in possession, Acts 7. 5, their case was not the same with that which is appointed here. But still in this alteration it appears, that the twelve tribes are meant literally, else there would be no distinction between them and the proselytes*.

* The meaning may possibly be, that the Gentile converts to Christianity shall have the same privileges with the Jewish. But supposing this, the twelve tribes must mean real Israelites: and they are considered as the principal inhabitants in this vision: whereas the Gentile proselytes to Christianity have greatly exceeded the Jewish. There is indeed a difficulty in the execution of this order, unless the several tribes in their captivity were kept distinct. For else how could it be determined amongst

And surely the vision must relate to those Israelites, who were to return in a short time from Babylon, not to those of a future age. It belonged to those who had been idolaters*, and practised their idolatrous worship in God's temple, so that only the wall was between him and idols: Comp. c. 8: and part of whose idolatries had been honouring the carcasses of their kings: 43. 7—9: and if they repented, the pattern of the house was to be shewn them, v. 11, which had been a small consolation, had it not been to be built for above 2000 years after. And as no other cause of God's anger against them is mentioned or hinted at but their idolatry, surely the vision must relate to their return from that captivity, before which they had been idolaters, not from one before which they had not†.

Besides, the temple to be built, or rather represented in this vision as built, is plainly the Jewish temple. Learned men, as Villalpandus and others, apprehend it to be of the same dimensions with Solomon's, and Vitrunga is said to have proved it in a Dutch work to be of the same dimensions also with Zerobabel's and Herod's. And Lowth apprehends there might be probably need of so exact a description of it, as is given in this vision, in order to enable them to build one of the same dimensions. Moses had the dimensions of the tabernacle revealed to him, Exod. 25 &c. and David of the temple, 1 Chr. 28. 11, 19; and no one after the captivity could be supposed to remember these. But there is a description of Solomon's temple 1 Kings 6, which we must suppose them to have had then, and which would be a great direction to them, though not so particular as Ezekiel's‡. Zerobabel's temple was indeed much inferior to Solomon's, Hagg. 2. 3; but this might be in ornaments, not things essential. The old people wept when the foundations of it were laid Ezr. 3. 12. but this might be joy or tenderness, not sorrow at its being of less dimensions, and indeed Solomon's was not very large||.

which of them the proselytes sojourned? But perhaps the meaning is, that where they sojourned after the return, and before the division of the land, there they should have a share. It is foretold, Zech. 2. 11, that Zion should have many proselytes at the return from Babylon; for that time appears by v. 6, 7, to be meant.

* They and their Kings. c. 43. 7.

† It should also be observed that as a person, with a line of flax in his hands, measures here the city as well as temple, so Zech. 2. 1, 2, a person appears with a measuring line in his hand going to measure Jerusalem, the length and breadth of it; and this was when Zion, that dwelt with the daughter of Babylon, was commanded to flee from the land of the north. v. 6, 7.

‡ And it is not easy to conceive, why directions so minute as his should be given, but in order to a real literal building. For surely no certain allegorical sense can be given of each. And to make them all only as ornaments of a parable is loading it with ornaments beyond measure.

|| Some make the measures of Ezekiel's temple and other things foretold so large, that the meaning cannot be literal. But I have not yet seen sufficient authority for this. Or if the measures were much larger than Solomon's temple, or than it was possible the temple, &c. should be, it might mean, not that no literal temple was intended,

The glory of the Lord had been seen by Ezekiel leaving the first house, 10. 19, and going to a mountain on the east (as it must naturally do, when it went out of the house, because the entrance of it was from the east) and standing there. 11. 23. And from the east it returned to this temple in the vision, and filled the house. 43. 1—5. 44. 4. Now the glory of the Lord* entered into Solomon's temple at the dedication of it, so that the priest could not enter into it to minister. 1 Kings 8. 10, 11. 2 Chron. 5. 13, 14. This was before Solomon's prayer. And again after this prayer fire came down from heaven, and consumed the sacrifice, and the glory filled the house so that the priests could not enter. 2 Chron. 7. 1, 2. One supposes therefore, it was not always in the same degree. But after this I know not that we have any mention of it in the historical books, though there is a vision of it Is. 6. Nor, I think, doth Josephus say any thing of it afterwards, though he doth say Antiq. 3. 8, 9, that the prophetic shining of the breast-plate and stone of the high priest's right shoulder left off 200 years before his time : τοῦ θεοῦ δυσχεραὶ νόντος ἐπὶ τῇ παραβάσει τῶν νόμων. We are not surely to think, that the glory of the Lord staid till the return from the captivity, much less stays till a future return, on any hill to the east of Jerusalem ; nor indeed is it said, but only that it went to a hill in the east, and returned by the way of the east. But are we to suppose that it did, or will literally return at all to the temple there described ? It is said here that it did, but it is said in a vision†. And neither Ezra, who gives the history of the building of the temple, nor Nehemiah, nor the prophets, who wrote afterwards, nor Josephus, mention it, which yet surely some of them would, though one should indeed have thought the departing of it at the Babylonish captivity should have been mentioned too. But if it did not return at the return from Babylon, it is not likely, if Christianity be true, to return at any future return of the Jews. For will God's glory now inhabit a temple built on the principles of Judaism, as this of Ezekiel's plainly is ?

Strangers uncircumcised in heart, and in flesh, had been brought into the temple, and the prophet was directed to tell the people of this ; and to charge that into this new temple no stranger uncircumcised in heart or flesh should enter. 44. 6—9. Surely this direction and charge must relate to a time near the commission of that offence, and to the next temple that was built after it, not a time distant, we know not how much but that it should be a very large and spacious one, as certain numbers are put for uncertain, and hyperbolical ones for real ones, as in the burning the weapons of Gog's army, and burying their carcasses.

* I think it is not mentioned from the entering into Canaan till now.

† Which perhaps may mean only, that God will as certainly direct and protect his people as if he was visibly present by a symbol amongst them.

above 2000 years ; especially as the last temple had no such crime allowed in it, and therefore there was no need to caution against it in a yet future one. And a literal circumcision must be meant here. For the crime under the former temple had been, admitting persons literally uncircumcised ; and the repetitions of that being forbid, the same circumcision must be meant ; besides that the sense is determined by adding in the flesh as well as in heart. Uncircumcised, when opposed to uncircumcised in heart, means literally, Jer. 9. 25, 26 ; much more then where in flesh is added.

Further, * sacrifices were to be offered in this temple, c. 43, 44, 45, 46, of blood and fat, 44. 7, the blood to be sprinkled on the altar, 43. 18, and God promises to accept them : 43. 27. Now though Christians are said in the New Testament to offer sacrifices, and their worship is understood to be meant in the Old Testament when incense and a pure offering is mentioned, Mal. 1. 11 ; yet the word there is מנחה, which denotes particularly a bread offering, and I believe the goats, bullocks, rams for sin, peace, burnt offerings, with their times, and quantities of flour and oil added to them, as described in these chapters, cannot be understood of other, than real Jewish sacrifices†.

Besides, they were to be offered by priests of the line of Aaron, and those of the sons of Zadoc, because the other priests had been guilty of idolatry, and those priests were to be employed only in lower offices in the temple : 44. 10—16. 48. 11. Now this seems to intimate a more speedy restoration of the temple, than the 70 years of Jer. Dan. Zech. will allow, and Ezekiel never mentions a number of years, but only that the time of return is near. After the 70 years scarce any could be supposed capable of officiating, that had officiated in an idolatrous worship before. But the prohibition may be designed for their posterity. And for their posterity in Zerobabel's temple it might. But surely not in a time yet future, when nothing but a revelation can determine who are Zadoc's posterity, and when it would seem very strange, a punishment should commence for what their forefathers did so long ago. And not only the sons of Aaron as such would not be put to officiate in a Christian temple of the Jews, but Christian ministers would scarce be described in this manner. But supposing this temple to be that to be built after the return from Babylon, all would be easy.

Further still, ceremonial laws of sacrifice and purification and distinc-

* There was to be an altar of such dimensions as are exactly specified, 43. 13, &c.

† Which, if the epistle to the Hebrews be true, to say nothing of the rest of the New Testament, God will not accept now, and therefore they must not be understood of future times.

tion between what the priests might do, and what the people might &c. were to be in force under this temple. c. 43. c. 44. Whether some of these may differ from the Mosaic, I have not particularly examined : if they do, Ezekiel must be considered as being in part a new legislator ; and I believe David and Solomon varied in some things from the rules of Moses. But still all these things cannot be designed, either to have allegorical meanings only, or to be ornaments of a parable only.

The prince mentioned in this vision, chap. 44—48, cannot be the Messias, but the ruler for the time being of the Jewish nation. It is directed, where he should sit in the temple to eat his share of the sacrifices, when and how he should go in and out, what he shall offer is specified very minutely for the sabbath day, for his voluntary offering &c. Particularly, it is directed, 45. 22, that at the passover he shall offer a bullock, a sin offering for himself and all the people. To guard him against the temptation of oppressing the people, he hath a provision of land allotted him, 45. 8 ; where it follows, and my princes shall not more oppress my people *. It is directed, 46. 16. &c. that if he give land out of his inheritance to one of his children, it shall be perpetual ; but if to another, it shall be only to the Jubilee. And the prince shall not take of the people's inheritance by oppression, to thrust them out of their possession : he shall give his sons inheritance out of his own possession. These are plainly political rules for common princes, and for a succession of them. Nor is there any thing great said either of the character, or the dignity and dominion, of any particular prince in this vision : though there are considerable things said of the prosperity of the branch of the cedar, which God would plant in the mountain of Israel, but not more than would be proper concerning a flourishing king of Israel. 17. 22, &c. Nor doth he any where say † more of the people of the Jews, than that they should return, and live happily in their own land, one people under one king, God's servant David, and should not be wicked any more or longer, but have his tabernacle amongst them for ever. See particularly c. 37. 24, and 39. 25 &c. And accordingly in this vision it is said, 43. 7 ‡, that the temple here described was the place of God's throne, where he would dwell for ever in the midst of the children of Israel, and his holy name should neither they nor their kings defile any more by their idolatries. This must relate to their return from a captivity, into which they had been sent for idolatry. And in order to preserve the truth of the prophecy,

* The princes, it seems, had oppressed them, whence it follows v. 9, Let it suffice you O princes of Israel—take away your exactions from my people.

† Or prophesy any thing against that kingdom, in which he lived ; though not only Isaiah, who lived before, but Jeremiah, who lived in a remote part of the empire, did.

‡ On the house being filled with the glory of the Lord.

the words for ever and no more must be explained, as they must in several other places for the same purpose. But supposing them to be understood of a long time only, they will preclude any plea, that the things here foretold were to have been fulfilled if the Jews had been pious ; but were not, they being otherwise.

Some object against understanding the description of the temple &c. literally, that the waters said to flow from the temple, and the increase of them, and their sweetening the Dead Sea, and the trees upon their banks with leaves for medicine, 47. 1—12, cannot be so understood, and direct the rest not to be so understood. But there was some literal foundation for this also. For there was much water conveyed in pipes to the temple for washing the place and the sacrifices and the priests, as Aristeeas affirms, whose book must have been written whilst the temple stood, and Light-foot from the Rabbins, and the nature of the things shews. And if I understand Lowth right, they ran out at the east end of the temple, and these several pipes uniting their streams with one another, and with the water of Siloam, and Kidron, and others, which were formerly more plentiful about Jerusalem, than in later times, and with waters from cisterns, see Reland, p. 294, 299, 300, 303, 856—860, might in a short space grow deep and considerable, and might also have trees on their banks, though I find no mention of any, and though Reland p. 295 mentions a place, where Kidron had none. What virtue the leaves of these trees might have I know not. But I see not why Grotius should think, these waters must be those of the fountain Callirhoe : for that being a medicinal water, as Josephus and Pliny say it was, see Reland p. 302, 303, hath no connexion with the medicinal virtue of the trees on its banks. And though Solinus in Grotius says, it was Hierosolymis proxima, yet that proximity might be at some miles' distance, and these waters were at a town which took its name of Callirhoe from them, and was near the Dead Sea. Reland p. 302, 678. Grotius also understands the healing of the waters to mean only, that this river shall pass through the Dead Sea, without being hurt by it, as the Rhone through the Lemane Lake, and others. But no river passes through the Dead Sea, but all are lost in it. And though perhaps a larger quantity running in might make fish live in it ; yet neither hath this ever literally happened, nor doth it appear to what very great purpose it would serve. Can it be intended then only as an hyperbolical expression, that in some time then future Jerusalem should have a more plentiful supply of water *, or in general, that it should have every thing they could wish *? Is. 41. 17—20 promises the Jews plenty of water in the wilderness, where there was none before, and that a variety of trees should grow there; and 43. 19, 20, that they should be for his people to drink, and that the beasts, dragons, and owls, should honour him for them. And from 35. 6—10, and 48. 20, 21, one should think this was to be at the journey from Babylon, in which, if any miracles of this kind had been literally performed, surely the book of Ezra, or Nehemiah, would have mentioned them. But Is. 44. 1—5 rather directs to understand these promises of God's spirit, which should extend to the fiercest of the Gentiles, as well as be abundantly poured on the Jews; and to these waters every one that is thirsty is invited, Is. 55. 1, and shall draw water with joy out of the wells of salvation, Is. 12. 3; and God feeds his sheep by the waters of rest. Ps. 23. And this seems the most natural interpretation of what is said here, and Joel 3. 18, that a fountain shall come forth of the house of the Lord, and water the valley of Shittim, which was near the Dead Sea; and Zech. 14. 8, that living waters should flow from Jerusalem, half to the eastern, half to the west sea †. Indeed Commentators mention some springs at Jerusalem that flowed literally some to the one, some to the other; but I know not on what authority. And were it literally true, it would still seem also a figure of what v. 9 expresses, "And the Lord shall be king over all the earth." And which Isaiah 2. 3, and Micah 4. 2, express in terms nearer akin to this figure: The Lord shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem ‡. And the conversion of the Gentiles is foretold in the Old Testament under the figure of taming wild beasts, and may be well understood here in Ezek. by healing the waters of the Dead Sea, of which yet some places would not be healed ||. But still this doth not prove, that the rest of the prophecy is not to be understood literally, any more than that the return from the captivity is not to be understood so. Nor doth any thing determine this increase of religious knowledge and practice to Christianity. Yet the mention of fishers favours it, as the apostles were some of them

* Which might be by repairing of the aqueducts, of which as Solomon and Hezekiah took care, so did afterwards Nehemiah and Simon. See Notes on Zech. 14. 8 in Pool.

* As indeed a promise of streams of water in uncommon places seems, Is. 30. 25, to mean plenty of good and happiness.

† Conformably to which Ezek. 47. 9 mentions two rivers, though before and after only one is mentioned. But see Hebr. Bib.

‡ And Is. 11. 9. brings it nearer still, The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea. Refer ad n. 1. And it hath been already observed here, that Zech. foretels, there should be many proselytes after the return from Babylon.

|| If the waters mentioned in the above place of Zech. 14. 8, be the same with the fountain opened to the house of David, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and uncleanness, Zech. 13. 1, this would turn one's thoughts to water for washing, not drinking, i. e. to expiation, not instruction. But the fountain, Zech. 13. 1, seems rather parallel to the clean water sprinkled Ezek. 36. 25. For the water of sprinkling was for חטאת and נרה, Numb. 19. 9, 13, which are the very words used Zech. 13. 1.

such, and Christ tells them, they should be fishers of men. But on the other hand this makes a confusion of figures : first, to make the waters a symbol of religious knowledge and divine grace, then instantly to represent the conversion of men, by pulling them out of these waters in which alone they can live : whereas considering it only as an ornament consequential to the waters being made wholesome, this difficulty is avoided.

Some indeed have understood v. 8, that these waters were to flow through Galilee ; and so ó. translate it, and so Ch. Syr. may be understood. Whether the word may not also be an appellative in them I know not. But if it be Galilee, it must be also eastern Galilee, and no such country is named elsewhere *. Besides no waters from Jerusalem could flow through Galilee ; but they did flow through the east country, to the Dead Sea, which is called the East Sea, v. 18 ; and these very waters are said to flow that way in Joel, and part of them to flow that way in Ezekiel. And the word must in some places of scripture signify something different from Galilee, and probably signifies a country, or boundary. Nor doth the New Testament, or any old Christian writer, so far as I can learn, apply this text to Christ's preaching. Still, without question, Christianity had spread true religion vastly more, than Judaism did ; and therefore this part of the prophecy is more applicable to Christianity. And as these waters flowed out after the temple was built, and it is not said how long after, or how long they were in coming to be so great a stream ; the building of the temple, and the rules about worship, and about the prince, may be literal, and belong to Judaism, and this of the waters be figurative, and belong chiefly to Christianity. But then † the division of the land cannot well be both literal and true ; for few of the twelve tribes returned, and we have no ground to think any such division was made to those that did. Nor yet did their sins hinder these things. For, as was mentioned above, it is in this vision foretold, they should not sin ‡.

* Upper and lower are : but one lay just south of the other.

† The city and temple were not built according to these directions ; for they were not separate from one another as c. 45, c. 48 require them, and accordingly Revel. 21. 22 says there was no temple in the city, but gives another reason ; nor were there such portions assigned, so far as appears, to people, prince, or priests at Jerusalem.

‡ And probably for some time after their return from captivity they sinned less than ever they had done in the same time before.

One should not think Ezekiel had respect to the tree of life, in what he says of the trees on the bank of this river. For though indeed in Hebrew tree may be used for such trees, yet Gen. 2. 9 placing the tree of life in the midst of the garden intimates there was but one, whereas in Ezekiel there are many trees, and it should seem of several sorts. Yet Revel. 22. 2, plainly referring to this place, calls the tree [for he says ξύλον though he must mean in the plural] ξύλον ζωῆς.

CHAPTER XL.

- 1 IN THE five and twentieth year of our captivity, in the first month, on the tenth day of the month, in the fourteenth year after that the city was smitten, on the self-same day the hand of Jehovah was upon me, and he brought 2 me thither: in the visions of God brought he me into the land of Israel, and set me upon a very high mountain, upon which was as the * frame of a city over against me.

* Or, building.

1. —in the first month.—For בראש השנה I read with ó. בראשון: as c. xxix. 17. xxx. 20. xlv. 18, 21.

—fourteenth year.—See on c. i. 1, 2. The eleventh year of Zedekiah, in which Jerusalem was taken, was also the eleventh year of Jehoiachin's captivity, from which the prophet dates: and therefore the twenty-fifth year of Jehoiachin's captivity was the fourteenth year after the taking of Jerusalem.

—on the self-same day.—Εν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ. ó. ea igitur die. Houb. illo inquam die. Dathius.

—and he brought me thither.—Jehovah brought me in vision from the land of my captivity. "This clause is not in ó. Syr. seems improper to be said before v. 2, and hath probably crept in here from v. 3. Some perhaps may think that for שמה we should read ירשלמה, as י precedes." Secker.

2. —a very high mountain.—If mount Moriah cannot be so called, the station may be considered as merely represented in vision, without a corresponding real one. "This probably signifies nothing more than that Jerusalem and the true worship of God should be very much exalted, and made known to all the world. A similar image we find in Isai. ii. 2." Michaelis.

—upon which.—על also signifies apud, prope.

—over against me.—מנגד ó. Houbigant. But if the mountain was no more than a visionary representation, the common reading and translation may stand: "by which was as the frame of a city on the south."

3 And when he had brought me thither, behold, there was a man whose appearance was as the appearance of brass, with a line of flax in his hand, and a measuring reed; and
4 he stood in the gate. And the man said unto me, Son of man, behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears, and * set thine heart unto all that I shall shew thee: for to the intent that I might shew them unto thee art thou brought hither: declare all that thou shalt see unto the house of Israel.

5 And, behold, a wall on the outside of the house round about, and in the man's hand a measuring-reed of six cubits in length, by the cubit and an hand-breadth: and he measured the † breadth of the building, one reed; and the height, one reed.

6 Then came he to the gate ‡ which looked toward the

* Or, regard.

† Or, thickness.

‡ H. Whose face was the way toward the east.

3. —of brass.—Bright and sparkling.

4. —said unto me.—One MS. adds ויאמר, and said: but see v. 45.

—set thine heart unto.—See Exod. ix. 21. Deut. xxxii. 46. “Diligently attend to.”

—shew them unto thee.—Perhaps הראות, as ה follows.

—art thou brought.—הובאת, 2 MSS.: and 5 other MSS. and 2 edd. omit the ה at the end.

5. —by the cubit and an hand-breadth.—Each cubit containing a cubit and an hand-breadth; called the great cubit c. xli. 8, and supposed equal to half a yard. According to Michaelis, the Hebrew measures are: 1. The finger's breadth. 2. Four fingers, or hand-breadth. 3. Ell; the smaller of five hand-breadths, the larger of 6. 4. Rod; of 6 ells. He also allows the Rabbinical account, that a finger is equal to the length of 6 barley grains.

—of the building.—Of the outer wall; which was three yards high, and three yards broad. This wall surrounded a part which corresponded to the court of the Gentiles, and served as a security against the precipices of the mount on which the temple stood. The word is here translated by δ. προτείχισμα, and in many following places τὸ δόριζον.

6. Then came he &c.—After having passed the court of the Gentiles, he came to the eastern gate of the court of Israel. Villalp.

east, and went up the steps thereof, and measured the * upper threshold of the gate, one reed broad, and the 7 other threshold of the gate, one reed broad. And every chamber was one reed long, and one reed broad; and between the chambers were five cubits: but the threshold of the gate, by the porch of the gate within, was one reed.
 8 [He measured also the porch of the gate within, one 9 reed.] Then he measured the porch of the gate, eight cubits; and the pillars thereof, two cubits: now the porch 10 of the gate was inward. And the chambers of the gate, eastward, were three on this side, and three on that side;
 they three had one measure, and the pillars had one 11 measure on this side and on that side. And he measured

* Or, lintel.

—the steps thereof.—במעלות שבע, seven steps, is the reading of ó. Arab. See v. 22, 26. במעלותיו. MSS.

—the upper threshold &c.—Liminis utriusque superioris et inferioris latitudinem mensus est. Dathius. The breadth of these was equal to the breadth of the wall.

7. And every chamber &c.—These chambers for the porters were built on each side of the gateway; but, as they projected beyond the walls of the gateway half a cubit on each side, they of course left the passage between them only five cubits: see Houbigant: whereas, according to v. 6, the inner threshold of the gate was a reed, or six cubits.

8. He measured &c.—Houbigant omits this verse with ó. Syr. V. 10 MSS. and 1 ed. He observes that the four first words are repeated from the beginning of v. 9, and the three last from the end of v. 7; and that the whole is inconsistent with v. 9. Possibly the porch of the inner gate, mentioned v. 15, is here represented as measured.

9. —the porch.—This portico looked inward, i. e. into the first court. Lowth. It was eight cubits in breadth.

—and the pillars thereof.—ואיליו, or ואיליו, 9 MSS. These were side-pillars, or half-columns, of stone; which supported the lintel, and were each one cubit broad.

10. —eastward.—The three chambers were in a line eastward.

—and the pillars.—ואיליו, 6 MSS. Their side-pillars, or half-columns, or fronts of the doors, were equal.

—and on that side.—ואם, 15 MSS. 2 edd.

the breadth of the entry of the gate, ten cubits; and the 12 length of the entry of the gate, thirteen cubits. The border also before the chambers was one cubit on this side, and the border was one cubit on that side; and every chamber was six cubits on this side, and six cubits on that 13 side. Then he measured the gate from the roof of one chamber to the roof of another: the breadth was five and 14 twenty cubits; and door was over against door. He measured also the pillars, sixty cubits: and they were by

11. —ten cubits.—The breadth of the gate exceeded that of the porch by two cubits, that is, by the breadth of the two side-columns mentioned v. 9. See Houbigant.

—and the length.—וַאֲרָךְ, 2 MSS. 6. V.

—of the entry of the gate.—See Houbigant.

12. The border.—Some understand this of a projecting rail, or balustrade. Houbigant says that, as the vestibule was only thirteen cubits long, that space was occupied by two chambers and by the additional breadth of two side-columns; and that the third chamber was not in the area of the vestibule, but between the columns of the court within. Others rightly place the three chambers in the interval mentioned v. 15.

—on this side.—The former part of this verse will correspond with the latter, if מִפֶּה is supplied after אֶחָדָה, with MS. n. 30.

—six cubits on that side.—מִפֶּה, MSS: and throughout the chapter.

13. —of another: the breadth.—We may read לִגְגַּי וּרְחֹב “from roof of every chamber to roof: and the breadth” &c. These opposite chambers of the vestibule were six cubits broad: v. 7. To these twelve cubits add ten for the breadth of the vestibule, v. 11; and three cubits for the walls on which the beams of the chamber rested; and the whole breadth of the roof will be twenty-five cubits.

14. Observe how 6. and Syr. differ from the text. In 6. MS. A. the measure is twenty cubits, but in MS. Vat. and Ar. twenty-five.

He measured also.—Houbigant reads וַיִּמָּד.

—and they were &c.—Houbigant renders, Parastadibus erant portæ in circuitu atrii: literally, “and to the pillars of the court were gates round about:” the singular being twice used distributively for the plural, as v. 7, 16. He thinks that the length to which these pillars extended is here meant, and not, as most suppose, their height: and understands the

- 15 the pillars of the court of the gate round about. And from the front of the gate of the entrance unto the front 16 of the porch of the inner gate, were fifty cubits. And there were narrow windows to the chambers, and to their pillars within the gate round about; and likewise to the porches were windows round about within: and upon each pillar were palm-trees.
- 17 Then he brought me into the outer court; and, lo, there were rooms, and a pavement made for the court round 18 about: thirty rooms were upon the pavement. And the pavement towards the side of the gates, by the length of sixty cubits of the length of the porticos of which the wing of the outer enclosure consisted; which porticos were distinguished by columns, and were empty and without chambers. He observes that the angel had only a reed of six cubits; is no where represented as ascending; and measured only the height of the outer wall, v. 5, and of the altar, v. 42.

The rendering in the text supposes the pillars ranged within the area, on each side of the portico, to the distance of thirty cubits north and as many south, though not extending as far as the thirty chambers mentioned v. 17; fifteen of which chambers may have been situated on one side of the portico, and fifteen on the other, to the extremity of the building.

15. And from.—Houbigant reads וּמֵעַל. The outer vestibule was thirteen cubits long: v. 11. The length of the inner vestibule is here added.

—the entrance.—הָאֵיכָּוֶן, MSS. edd. For עַל לְפָנַי MSS. read עַל פְּנֵי.

16. —and to their pillars.—Read אֵילֵי־הָם with Houbigant. The flat semi-columns, mentioned v. 10, had windows with narrow openings outward, but widening within.

—were windows.—V. 6. and 2 MSS. read חֲלוֹנוֹת, without vau prefixed.

17. —the outer court.—The court of Israel, or of the people: the outer of the two courts mentioned 2 Kings xxi. 5. Herod added a third, called the court of the Gentiles.

—upon the pavement.—Over the paved cloister, upon the higher pavement. Perhaps we should read עַל הַרְצָפָה.

- 19 the gates, was the lower pavement. Then he measured the breadth, from the front of the lower gate unto the front of the inner court without, an hundred cubits eastward.
- 20 Then he brought me northward; and as for the gate that looked toward the north, in the outer court, he measured
- 21 the length thereof and the breadth thereof. And the chambers thereof were three on this side, and three on that side; and the pillars thereof, and the porches thereof, were as the measure of the former gate: the length thereof was
- 22 fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits. And the windows thereof, and the pillars thereof, and the palm-trees thereof, were as the measure of the gate which looked toward the east; and they went up unto it by seven
- 23 steps, and the porches thereof were in front. And there

18. —the lower pavement.—Which lay on either side of the entry formed by the gates. This paved cloister was equal in breadth to the length of the entry between the two gates. See v. 11, 15.

19. —the lower gate.—The western gate of the entry; from which to the opposite eastern front of the inner court were one hundred cubits. The breadth of the area, comprehended between the gate of the outer square and that of the inner, was one hundred cubits.

—eastward.—In the direction which looked towards the eastern part, from which the mensuration began.

20. Then he brought me &c.—See ó. Ar. Houb. וַהֲבִיאֵנִי (as v. 17, or, וַיּוֹלִכֵנִי, as v. 24) לַצִּפּוֹן. It is also necessary to read לְקִדְמָה, or קִדְמָה, in v. 19.

21. Manuscripts have וַתֵּאֵי מִפָּה twice, וַאֲלֵיו, and וַאֲלֵמֶי: and Houbigant reads הֵיוּ. But that the singular may be used distributively for the plural, see v. 14. There are like variations in MSS. v. 23, 24, 25.

—fifty cubits.—See v. 15.

—five and twenty cubits.—See v. 13.

22. —and the pillars thereof.—Syr. reads וַאֲלֵיו, which is naturally followed by and the palm-trees thereof. See v. 16. Mention is made of the porches in the close of the verse.

—in front.—So Houbigant, who reads לְפָנֶימָה.

was a gate of the inner court over against the gate toward the north, as toward the east; and he measured from gate to gate an hundred cubits.

- 24 Then he led me toward the south; and, behold, a gate toward the south: and he measured the pillars thereof, and 25 the porches thereof, according to those measures. And there were windows in it, and in the porches thereof round about, like those windows: the length was fifty cubits, and
 26 the breadth five and twenty cubits. And * there were seven steps in going up to it, and the porches thereof were in front: and it had palm-trees, one on this side and 27 another on that side, on the pillars thereof. And there was a gate of the inner court toward the south; and he measured from gate to gate toward the south, an hundred cubits.

- 28 And he brought me to the inner court by the south gate; and he measured the south gate according to those mea-
 29 sures. And the chambers thereof, and the pillars thereof, and the porches thereof, were according to those measures: and there were windows in it, and in the porches thereof, round about: the length was fifty cubits, and the breadth
 30 five and twenty cubits. And the porches round about

* Or, the steps thereof were seven steps.

23. —inner court.—Or, court of the priests.

—as toward the east.—Read מִלְּקָרִים as ó. Houb. “as there was a gate over against that toward the east.” See v. 19.

26. —in going up to it.—עֲלִיתָיו, ascensus ejus; MSS. edd.

—in front.—See v. 22. “in the front of the gates:” the singular and plural number being both used to the substantive understood distributively.

29. —fifty cubits.—See v. 15, 21.

—five and twenty cubits.—See v. 13, 21.

30. This verse is omitted in ó. MS. Vat. and Michaelis thinks that it is not genuine. It is wanting in 2 MSS. and was at first wanting in a third.

were five and twenty cubits long, and five cubits broad.

31 Also the porches thereof were toward the outer court; and palm-trees were upon the pillars thereof; and in the going up thereof were eight steps.

32 And he brought me into the inner court toward the east; and he measured the gate according to those mea-

33 sures. And the chambers thereof, and the pillars thereof, and the porches thereof, were according to those measures: and there were windows in it, and in the porches thereof round about: the length was fifty cubits, and the 34 breadth five and twenty cubits. And the porches thereof were toward the outer court; and palm-trees were upon the pillars thereof, on this side and on that side; and in the going up to it were eight steps.

35 And he brought me to the north gate, and measured it .

36 according to those measures; the chambers thereof, the pillars thereof, and the porches thereof: the length was

37 fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits. And the porches thereof were toward the outer court; and palm-trees were upon the pillars thereof, on this side and on that side; and in the going up to it were eight steps.

38 And as for the rooms and their entries in the porch of the gates, there they washed the burnt-offering.

—long.—Villalpandus, and others, interpret this of height: which, says Houbigant on v. 11, is always denoted by קומה or גבה; as v. 5, 42. The porticos about the door of each adjacent chamber within the gateway extended in length twenty-five cubits; and the breadth of each portico was five cubits. See v. 7, 16.

31. —the going up.—מעלות, steps, 2 MSS. But מעליו, its steps, is a reading of better authority here and v. 34, 37.

36. —the chambers.—וּתְּאֵן, and the chambers, 4 MSS. 6. Ar. Syr.

37. —the porches thereof.—See V. 6. v. 31, 34.

38. —in the porch.—Nine MSS. and 3 edd. read אֵילִם, which resembles אֹלִם. Otherwise we must read בְּאֵילֵי, in the pillars.

—of the gates.—Both the inner and outer gate. See v. 44. But השַׁעַר seems the true reading, as in v. 39, 40, 41, and Syr.

—they washed.—See Lev. i. 13.

- 39 And in the porch of the gate were two tables on this side, and two tables on that side, to slay thereon the burnt-offering and the sin-offering and the trespass-offering.
- 40 And on the side without, at the going up to the door-way of the north gate, were two tables; and on the other side,
- 41 which was at the porch of the gate, were two tables: four tables were on this side, and four tables on that side, by the side of the gate; eight tables, whereupon they slew
- 42 their sacrifices. And the four tables for the burnt-offering were of hewn stone: their length was a cubit and an half, and their breadth a cubit and an half, and their height a
- 43 cubit: whereupon also they laid the instruments where-with they slew the burnt-offering and the sacrifice. And there were edges, of an hand-breadth, prepared within round about: and upon the tables was the flesh of the offering.
- 44 And he brought me to the inner gate; and, behold, there were two rooms in the inner court; one on the side of the north gate, and its prospect was toward the south; and one on the side of the south gate, and the prospect
- 45 was toward the north. And he said unto me, This room, whose prospect is toward the south, is for the priests that

43. —edges.—See c. xliii. 13. labra, V. Houb. Dath. χειλη, A. 2. Aq. Theod. in Montf. Hex. unci, Chald. Grot.

44. And he brought me &c.—It is clear that v. 45, 46, refer to the chambers mentioned in this verse: and therefore Mr. Lowth and Houbigant justly prefer the reading of ó. For ומחוזה Houbigant proposes ויוליכני, or ויביאני, or והוצאני.

—and behold.—והנה, ó. Houb.

—two rooms.—שנים, (rather שתים) for שרים. Houb. from ó.

—one.—אחד (rather אחת) for אשר. Houb. from ó.

—and its prospect.—Read ופניה, as in v. 45, 46; or, פני, which, as Houbigant observes, is parallel to the other פני in this verse.

—toward the south.—הדרום, for הקרים. Houb. from ó.

—and one.—Καὶ μία. ó.

- 46 keep the charge of the house. And the room, whose prospect is toward the north, is for the priests that keep the charge of the altar : these are the sons of Zadok, who come near to Jehovah, from among the sons of Levi, to minister unto him.
- 47 Then he measured the court ; the length was an hundred cubits, and the breadth an hundred cubits ; it was square : and the altar was before the temple.
- 48 Then he brought me to the porch of the temple ; and he measured the pillars of the porch, five cubits on this side and five cubits on that side : and the breadth of the gate was three cubits on this side and three cubits on that side.
- 49 The length of the porch was twenty cubits, and the breadth ten cubits : and they went up to it by ten steps : and there were columns by the porch, one on this side and another on that side.

46. — Zadok.—The lineal descendent of Aaron, through Eleazar and Phineas. See 1 Chron. vi. 53. Numb. xxv. 13.

48. — measured the pillars of the porch.—מַלְאֵם, the porch, 2 MSS. and 1 originally ; V. ó. MS. Al. Syr. The reading of the text, מַלְאֵם, or מַלְאֵם as one MS. reads and another in the margin, is explained by v. 9 ; and the thickness of the piers, or doorecase, must be understood. If the breadth of the porch be meant ; it was measured in two parts, corresponding to the valves of the doors.

— of the gate.—The folding gate, each part of which measured three cubits.

49. — ten cubits.—This is the reading of ó. ed. Ald. See 1 Kings vi. 3.

— ten steps.—Read עֶשֶׂר with ó. and with Houbigant in his version.

CHAPTER XLI.

- 1 Afterward he brought me to the temple; and he measured the pillars; six cubits was the breadth on this side and six cubits was the breadth on that side, which was the
- 2 breadth of the tabernacle. And the breadth of the door-way was ten cubits; and the sides of the door-way were five cubits on this side and five cubits on that side: and he measured the length thereof forty cubits, and the breadth twenty cubits.
- 3 Then he went inward, and measured the pillars of the door, two cubits; and the door, six cubits; and the breadth

In Josephus, the πρόναος, or vestibule, was 20 cubits long, according to the breadth of the house, and 10 broad. Ant. viii. iii. 2.

1. —the pillars.—But αἰλάμ, ó. the porch: and we find אֵילָם and אֵילָם in MSS. See on c. xl. 48.

—of the tabernacle.—As appears from Exod. xxvi. 16, 22, 23: where the west side of the tabernacle consists of eight boards, each a cubit and a half broad. But ó. read αἰλάμ, the porch; and Houbigant proposes הָאֵיל, taken distributively: “this was the breadth of the pillars.” In this verse commentators understand רָחֵב of thickness; as v. 5.

2. —of the door-way.—The door-way, or entrance, filled up by folding gates.

—the sides.—The walls on each side. Thus the whole breadth was twenty cubits: as was that of Solomon’s temple, 1 Kings vi. 2.

—forty cubits.—According to the dimensions of that part of the temple which was before the Most Holy Place in Solomon’s structure. 1 Kings vi. 17.

3. —the pillars.—The pillar on which each valve hung was one cubit broad.

—the door.—Each valve was three cubits broad. See c. xl. 48.

of the door-way, seven cubits [on this side, and seven 4 cubits on that side.] And he measured the length thereof, twenty cubits, and the breadth, twenty cubits;
according to the front of the temple.

5 Then he measured the wall of the house, six cubits; and the breadth of every side-chamber, four cubits round 6 about, round about the house. And the chambers were * one over another, three stories, thirty, in rows; entering into the wall which was built for the house for the side-

* H. chamber over chamber thrice.

—cubits [on &c.—The words inserted between brackets have the authority of ó. Ar. and are agreeable to the tenour of the descriptions in other places. Houbigant. Thus the whole breadth was twenty cubits: according to the dimensions in next verse.

4. —twenty cubits.—The length and breadth of the Holy of Holies in Solomon's temple. 1 Kings vi. 20.

—according to.—Two MSS. read עַל-פָּנָיו, secundum. Nold. 13. See Mr. Lowth.

5. —six cubits.—This was the thickness of the temple-wall, as it ran even with the lowest story of chambers.

—side-chamber.—See 1 Kings vi. 5, 8.

—four cubits.—Syr. reads seven. The breadth of the lowest chamber is five cubits, 1 Kings vi. 6. Josephus makes the length and breadth five cubits, and the height twenty. Ant. Jud. viii. iii. 2.

—round about.—סביב סביב pertinent ad הַצֶּלַע; tertium סביב de templo dicitur. Houb.

6. —three stories.—See 1 Kings vi. 6. שלוש signifies thrice: Exod. xxxiv. 23, 24. 2 Kings xiii. 18, 19.

—thirty.—See Jos. Ant. Jud. viii. iii. 2: where it appears that round Solomon's temple were chambers, three stories high, each story consisting of thirty chambers. It is supposed that twelve were placed to the north of the temple, twelve to the south, and six to the east.

—in rows.—I suppose ב understood before פַּעֲמִים, as 1 Kings vii. 4, 5.

—entering &c.—The beams of the chambers entering into the outer wall, built opposite to that of the temple.

chambers round about, that the beams might be holden; 7 for they were not holden in the wall of the house. And there was a widening and a winding about * still upward to the side-chambers; for the winding about of the house went * still upward, round about the house; therefore the breadth of the house was upward: and from the lowest 8 chamber they went up to the highest by the midst. I saw also the height of the house round about: the foundations of the side-chambers were a full reed of six cubits to each 9 chamber. The thickness of the wall, which was for the * II. upward upward.

—holden.—The original word is a doubtful term of architecture, not used elsewhere. Perhaps “that the beams might be holden firm in the wall:” גוברים, or כפסים, being understood. For though the beams of the chambers were admitted into the outer wall, they rested on the projections of the inner wall: either from reverence to the sacred place, or to secure it from fire.

7. —a widening and a winding about.—Perhaps an hendiadys for a winding stair-case which widened upward, as the inner wall decreased in thickness; this wall being six cubits thick as high as the first story; five, from the floor of the second story to that of the third; and four, from the floor to the ceiling of the third story: and thus there was a rest of one cubit in breadth to support the beams of the stories.

—for the winding about &c.—For the stairs widened as they rose.

—the breadth of the house.—That is, of the chambers in each story; each upper story being larger than that immediately below it by one cubit.

—and from.—I read with Houbigant ומן, which much resembles וכן.

8.—the height of the house.—Of the chamber, which rose to three stories.

—the foundations.—מוסדות, 12 MSS. 1 ed. Keri. By the foundations many understand the inner side-wall of the lower chambers, on which the beams of their ceilings rested. See v. 5. This seems to be confirmed by the next verse; which mentions the thickness of the outer wall, into which the beams of the chambers were inserted. See v. 6.

—a full reed.—מלא, i. e. מלוא. See MSS.

—to each chamber.—I conjecture הצלע, from similarity of sound.

- side-chambers without, was five cubits: and the space which was left was the * place of the side-chambers which
- 10 belonged to the house. And between the rooms was the breadth of twenty cubits, round about the house on every
- 11 side. And the doors of the side-chambers for the space which was left were one door toward the north and another door toward the south: and the breadth of the space which was left was five cubits round about.
- 12 And the building which was before the separate place, at the side toward the west, was in breadth seventy * H. house.

See v. 11. Some render אַזְעִילָה, ad axillam usque: as if a cubit were meant which reached to the arm-pit, instead of the elbow. See Cocceius. But Michaelis justly objects to the introduction of a new measure: and supposes the word equivalent to טַפַּח, and thus to express a cubit and a hand-breadth. See v. 5. Suppl. ad lex. Hebr. Houbigant renders separatus, making it agree with calamus.

9. —the space which was left.—מִנוּחַ MSS. There was a space besides, for a walk, or gallery of communication, along the chambers. This space was five cubits broad: v. 11.

10. —twenty cubits.—This seems to be the distance between the rooms built round the wall which enclosed the inner court. Singula vero conclavia distabant inter se viginti cubitis. Dathius.

11. And the doors &c.—And the entrance into the side-chambers, which entrance belonged to the galleries, was one entrance northward and another southward.

12. —the building &c.—The wall; as c. xl. 5. This wall, at the west end of the temple, measured seventy cubits from north to south: for

The breadth of the temple,	v. 2,	was	.	.	20 cubits of the two side walls,	v. 5,	.	.	.	12 of the two chambers	v. 5,	.	.	.	8
of their outer walls,	v. 9,	.	.	.	10
of the space which was left,	v. 11,	.	.	.	10
of the outer wall on each side,	v. 12,	.	.	.	10

cubits; and the wall of the building was five cubits thick round about, and the length thereof was ninety cubits.

- 13 Then he measured [before] the house, an hundred cubits long; even the separate place, and the building, and the 14 walls thereof, an hundred cubits long. Also the breadth towards the front of the house, and of the separate place 15 toward the east, was an hundred cubits. And he measured the length of the building before the separate place, and that which was behind it, and the side-buildings thereof on this side and on that side, an hundred cubits.

—ninety cubits.—This wall extended further, from west to east, by 20 cubits; for

The length of the temple, v. 2, 4, was	.	.	60 cubits
The breadth of one side wall, at the west, was	.	6 of one chamber	.	.	4
of one outer wall	.	.	5
of the space that was left	.	.	5
of the outer wall at each end	.	.	10
			—
			90

—the separate place.—By the separate place most understand the temple; and some make it equivalent to the space which was left: v. 11: which latter sense seems the more probable one, as the word is distinguished from בית, v. 14.

—before the house.—לפני הבית. This is the reading of ó. Ar. The outer enclosing wall westward was an hundred cubits long.

—the building.—והבנין 1 MS. The two walls of the space that was left seem to be meant.

—and the walls thereof.—וקירותיהם. ó. and their walls: the extreme surrounding wall.

14. —towards the front.—See ó. V. Here, again, the wall of circuit was an hundred cubits eastward.

15. —the length of the building.—This is called the length of the wall which enclosed the area, because it was parallel to the length of the temple.

—and that &c.—וואשר is the reading of Syr. Houbigant reads וועל, and places ושר before פני אל. Thus the wall of circumference to the north and to the south is represented as measuring an hundred cubits.

—and the side-buildings thereof.—ואתיקיה, MSS. edd. et appendices

- 16 And the inner-temple, and the porches of the court, the thresholds, and the narrow windows, and the side-buildings round about their three stories overagainst every threshold, were overlaid with wood round about from the ground up to the windows; and the windows were covered.
- 17 Upon the space above every door, and upon the inner house, and without, and upon all the wall round about,
- 18 within and without the house, were made cherubim and palm-trees, so that a palm-tree was between cherub and
- 19 cherub: and every cherub had two faces; and the face of a ejus. Houb. Dath. The root being נתק, avellere, projecting pillars of the separate place, or buildings detached from it and placed by the wall of circuit, may be meant.

16. And the inner &c.—This is Houbigant's punctuation.

—the thresholds.—Both upper and lower.

—and the narrow windows.—החלונות, 2 MSS. See v. 26.

—side-buildings.—This general term may have a different sense here and v. 15. Here it may mean the galleries of the chambers.

—overagainst every threshold.—Above, opposite to, the lower threshold.

—were overlaid.—Erat tectorium ligni. Cocceius says, ex contextu patet notio. Some derive the word from the Chald. decorticavit; the wood being fitted for the use by taking off the bark. See Pol. Syn. For the fact, see 1 Kings vi. 9, 15.

—from the ground.—מהארץ, as v. 20. Houb.

—covered.—With lattices, or curtains, or both.

17.—and upon.—ועל, 1 MS.

—the house.—Houbigant reads לבית. Perhaps we may read עשוי מרות, the preposition ב being understood. Thus the rendering will be “according to the measure of each, were made &c.” For the measures must have differed, according to the different positions.

18.—were made.—Houbigant and Dathius point the two verses thus. The participle is distributive, as v. 19.

—cherubim and palm-trees.—See 1 Kings vi. 29.

—two faces.—Which appeared; the other two being supposed below the plane.

- man was toward a palm-tree on one side, and the face of a lion toward a palm-tree on the other side: it was made upon all the house round about: from the ground unto above the door were cherubim and palm-trees made on the wall of the temple.
- 21 As for the temple, the posts were squared; and as for the front of the sanctuary, the appearance of the one was as the appearance of the other.
- 22 As for the altar of wood, the height thereof was three cubits, and the length thereof two cubits, [and the breadth thereof two cubits:] and the corners thereof, and the base thereof, and the walls thereof were of wood. And he said unto me, This is the table which is before Jehovah.
- 23 And the temple and the sanctuary had two doors.
- 24 And the two doors had two leaves apiece, they were * turning leaves; two leaves for one door, and two leaves

* Or, leaves which turned about.

20. —on the wall.—בִּקְיֶר, Ch. V. Houb.

21. —the temple.—וְהַהֵיכָל is the reading of 3 MSS. of one originally and of Houbigant. But observe הַמִּזְבֵּחַ, v. 22.

—the posts.—מִזְוָה 1 MS. For the fact, compare 1 Kings vi. 33. vii. 5. Both the pillars and door cases were squared, not round and arched.

22. —of wood.—Moses was commanded to make it of Shittim wood, two cubits high, one long, and one broad: and here the Arabic version makes the length and breadth one cubit: though in ó. two cubits are assigned to the three dimensions. Exod. xxx. 1, 2. xxxvii. 25.

—the base thereof.—אֲרֵנוֹ is the reading of ó. basis quâ pavimento adhærebat et infigebatur altare. See Mich. suppl. ad lex. Hebr. The probable root is from the Arab. رَأَن inferior fuit, whence رَوْن quod inferius est. See Cast. lex.

—walls.—Sides, or edges. See c. xl. 43.

—the table.—The altar is thus called, c. xliv. 16. Mal. i. 7, 12. And by altar the apostle means table, Hebr. xiii. 10.

24. —one door.—That of the temple.

—the other door.—That of the sanctuary. See 1 Kings vi. 34.

25 for the other door. And there were made on them, even on the doors of the temple, cherubim and palm-trees, like as were made upon the walls: and there were beams of 26 wood upon the front of the porch without. And there were narrow windows and palm-trees, on this side and on that side, on the sides of the porch, and on the side-chambers of the house; and also beams.

---

CHAPTER XLII.

1 Then he led me forth to the outer court, * the way toward the north; and he brought me to the rooms which were before the separate place, and which were before the

* The way was the way.

---

25. —And there were made.—I suppose וַעֲשׂוּי to be the true reading, as v. 11, 19. עֲשׂוּיִם. Houb.

—on the doors.—

In foribus pugnam ex auro, solidoque elephanto, Gangaridum faciam. Virg. Georg.

—upon the walls.—See v. 17—20. 1 Kings vi. 32, 35.

—beams of wood.—The heads of the beams which supported the second story appeared in the front of the vestibule. Villalp.

26. —on this side &c.—Compare c. xl. 10, 16.

—and also beams.—Continued along the stories of the side-chambers.
 Or we may render, and on the beams. Sc. were palm-trees.

1. —outer court.—Outer with respect to the temple itself. The court of the priests is meant. Houbigant. But ó. MS. Vat. reads “the inner court.”

—the rooms.—הַלְשָׁנוֹת, 1 MS. ó. But the singular may be used distributively. In ó. MS. Al. and Ar. the reading is “fifteen rooms.”
 See c. xl. 17.

—the separate place.—See c. xli. 12.

- 2 building toward the north. The length was an hundred cubits toward the north-gate; and the breadth was fifty 3 cubits. Before the gates which belonged to the inner court, and before the pavement which belonged to the outer court, were side-buildings against side-buildings in
 4 three stories. And before the rooms was a walk of ten cubits' breadth inward, and of an hundred cubits long; and
 5 their doors were toward the north. Now the upper rooms were shortened: for the galleries took of those more than 6 of the lowest and middlemost of the building. For they were in three stories; but had not pillars, as the pillars of the courts: therefore they were straitened more than the 7 lowest, and than the middlemost from the ground. And —the building.—The wall of separation.

2. The length.—In ó. MS. Vat. and in Arab. אֶל-פָּנָי is omitted in the beginning of the verse. פֶּתַח is also omitted before הַצִּפּוֹן in ó. Ar. and Ar. seems to read, for פֶּתַח פָּנָי, אֶל, as the rendering is נִדְחוּ. The sense is much more clear and natural if we render as in the text, or, “toward the north.” The whole length of the rooms will then be meant; the breadth of which was fifty cubits; according to the length of the whole gateway, or entrance, described, c. xl. 15, 21.

3. —the gates.—הַשַּׁעֲרִים, ó, both the outer and inner gate. See c. xl. 15, 18, 33. But Syr. הַשַּׁעֲרָה, the gate.

—side-buildings.—These buildings looked two ways; toward the temple, and toward the pavement of the outer court: c. xl. 17.

4. —and of an hundred cubits long.—See ó. Syr. Houb. מֵאָה אַמָּה וְאַרְבָּעָה. Syr. This was the length of the outer enclosing wall of the area in which the temple stood.

—doors were toward the north.—And therefore the angel brought Ezekiel to the outer court towards the north.

5. —took of those.—יָאֵכְלוּ, did eat, 4 MSS. 1 marg. and Bibl. Ven. ann. 1518. marg.

6. —had not pillars.—To support the galleries; but the breadth of these was taken out of the middle and upper rooms themselves. See Bernard L'Ami in Mr. Lowth.

—they were straitened.—נִצְרְרוּ, Houb. Or, Sepositum quid erat ab eis præ &c.

- as for the wall that was without, overagainst the rooms, toward the outer court which was before the rooms, the 8 length thereof was fifty cubits. For the length of the rooms that were in the outer court was fifty cubits; also of 9 those opposite to them: in all an hundred cubits. And from the bottom of these rooms was the entry from the east, as one came to them from the outer court.
- 10 In the breadth of the wall of the court toward the south, before the separate place, and before the building, were 11 also rooms. And the way before them was like the appearance of the rooms which were toward the north, as long as they and as broad as they; and all their goings out were both according to their fashions and according to 12 their doors. For in like manner were the doors of the rooms which were toward the south: there was a door in

7. —without.—In the court of the priests.

—fifty cubits.—Equal in length to one wing of the rooms; and perhaps divided by steps.

8. —also of those opposite to them.—והנה על פניהן, is the reading of ó. See Houbigant. The length of the other wing was also fifty cubits. Between these wings might be a gateway. These wings, divisions, or ranges, of apartments, if detached from each other, must extend themselves on each side somewhat beyond the wall of one hundred cubits which enclosed the temple. C. xli. 13, 14, 15.

9. And from the bottom.—Read הלשכות ומתחת with Masora, MSS. and Houbigant.

—from the east.—The length of the building was east and west; and the stairs were placed at the east end.

—the outer court.—See on v. 1.

10. —toward the south.—Read דרך הדרום with ó. Ar.

11. —before them.—לפניהן one MS. and bibl. Ven. marg.

—and as broad as they.—וּבְרָחֵב, ó.

—and all.—וּבְכָל, ó. “they were as long as they and as broad as they, and according to all their goings out, and according to their fashions, and according to their doors.”

12. For in like manner were the doors.—Perhaps we should read וּפְתָחֵי, “And as for the doors.”

- the head of the way, even the way before the wall which looked eastward as one came to them.
- 13 Then he said unto me, As for the north rooms and the south rooms, which are before the separate place, they are holy rooms where the priests that approach unto Jehovah shall eat the most holy things: there shall they lay the most holy things, both the offering of flour, and the sin-offering, and the trespass-offering; for the place is holy.
- 14 When the priests enter therein, then shall they not go out of the holy place into the outer court, but there shall they lay their garments wherein they minister; for they are holy: and shall put on other garments, and shall approach to the place which belongeth unto the people.
- 15 Now when he had made an end of measuring the inner house, he brought me forth toward the gate whose prospect is toward the east, and measured it round about.
- 16 He measured the east * side with the measuring reed five hundred cubits, even with the measuring reed round

* H. wind.

—which looked.—חַפְּנֵה, 1 MS. The chambers on the south side, like their corresponding ones on the north side, were entered from the east.

13. —and the south rooms.—The ancients, except Chald. read וּלְשִׁבּוֹת, and the vau may have been omitted from the similarity of the preceding letter.

—the most holy things.—See Lev. vi. 17. xxiv. 9.

14. —enter therein.—From the inner court toward the temple. For there must have been an inner access to these rooms; as well as the outer one at the east ends, mentioned v. 9, 12.

—wherein.—בִּהֶם, 4 MSS. 1 originally, and in 2 the ך is on a rasure.

—and shall put on.—וּלְבָשׁוּ MSS. edd.

15. —measured it.—The side on which the gate stood.

16. —five hundred cubits.—Read, here, and v. 17, 18, 19, אַמּוֹת for קַנִּים with Arab. and with ó. v. 17, 20. See Cappellus. MSS. and edd. establish the reading of חֲמֵשׁ אַמּוֹת. Houbigant observes that, according to Josephus, the circuit of the mount on which the temple stood did

17 about. He measured the north * side five hundred 18 cubits, with the measuring reed round about. The south † side he measured, five hundred cubits, with the mea-19 suring reed round about. On the west ‡ side he measured five hundred cubits, with the measuring reed.
 20 On the four || sides he measured it: it had a wall round about, five hundred cubits long, and five hundred cubits broad; to make a separation between the holy and the prophane place.

* H. wind.    † H. wind.    ‡ H. wind.    || H. winds.

not exceed four stadia, or five hundred Roman paces; and that therefore one side could only measure one hundred and twenty-five paces. See Ant. xv. xi. 3. Now 125 paces amount to 625 feet, at 5 feet to a pace; and 500 cubits, supposing each equal to a foot and a half, amount to 750 feet; which is itself too large a measure for Josephus's dimensions of the mount. Yet from c. xliii. 12, it appears that the mount admitted of the mensuration here given. Josephus speaks of the περιβολος built by Solomon; if Houbigant refers to the place which I have quoted: and, B. J. v. v. 1, he makes the whole compass, comprehending Antonia, to be six stadia. "The Roman stade was 625 Roman feet, which Josephus takes to be equal to the Jewish feet, or small ells, without considering the difference which may be between them." Michaelis.

18, 19. —round about.—המרה סביב, 2 MSS. סביב 2 MSS. and 2 others originally. Vulg. reads סביב, joining it to v. 18. ל' primo ס, 1 MS.

20. —measured it.—The holy place.

—a wall.—This was the outermost wall of circuit.

The vision in c. xl, xli, xlii, seems designed to shew that, if the Jews repented of their iniquities and idolatries, their temple should be rebuilt, and their worship according to the Levitical law should be restored. The buildings might at first be erected after the general plan here described, without deviation from it, though without ability to execute every part: and the whole might afterwards resemble it in many respects, though never exactly. However the Jews should have proceeded conformably to the directions here given.

CHAPTER XLIII.

1 Then he led me to the gate, even the gate that looked 2 toward the east. And, lo, the glory of the God of Israel came from the east: and the sound thereof was as the sound of many waters: and the earth shined with his 3 glory. And the appearance which I saw was as the appearance which I saw when he came to destroy the city: and the appearance [of the chariot] was as the appearance which I saw by the river Chebar: and I fell 4 upon my face. And the glory of Jehovah came into the house by the way of the gate whose prospect was toward 5 the east. Then the spirit took me up, and brought me into the inner court; and, lo, the glory of Jehovah filled 6 the house. And I heard one speaking unto me out of the

1. —even the gate.—שַׁעַר is omitted in ó. Ar. Syr. V. but expressed in Chald.

2. —from the east.—"It had removed thither, xi. 23: and was now returning." Seeker.

—and the sound thereof.—See c. i. 24.

3. And the appearance.—Omit וּמַרְאֶה, and read וְהַמְרֹאֶה, with ó. and Houbigant.

—when he came.—בָּבֹאִי 2 MSS. Vulg. "Αλλος in Montf. Hex. cum veniret (Dominus.) Houb. C. ii. 10. ix. 5, &c. But Chald. explains בָּבֹאִי thus, "cum prophetarem ad perdendam civitatem." בָּבֹאִי may be corrupted from "בָּבֹאִי יְהוָה i. e. בָּבֹאִי יְהוָה, when Jehovah came.

—and the appearance.—The word רָכֶב, or מַרְכָּב, of the chariot, is supplied by ó. The Jews called the vision מַרְכָּב. See Grot. on c. i. 4. וּמַרְאֶה is the reading of 2 MSS. as well as of ó.

4. —came into the house.—To shew that God would again accept that place and its sacred rites, and afford the Jews his protection. Grot.

- 7 house; and the man was standing by me. And he said unto me: Son of man, [thou seest] the place of my throne, and the place of the soles of my feet; * where I will dwell in the midst of the sons of Israel for ever; and the sons of Israel shall no more defile mine holy name, neither they nor their kings, by their fornication, and by
- 8 the carcases of their kings, in the midst of them: in that they set their threshold by my threshold, and their post near my post, and there was only a wall between me and them; † and in that they polluted mine holy name by their abominations which they committed: wherefore I
- 9 have consumed them in mine anger. Now let them remove far away from me their fornication, and the carcases of their kings; and I will dwell in the midst of them for ever.

* Or, for I will dwell there.

† Or, them: thus they polluted.

7. —[thou seest] the place.—אתה ראה is supplied by ó. But Dathius remarks that את is sometimes prefixed to the nominative case: “This is the place” &c. See c. xliv. 3.

—where I will dwell.—Virtually; though not by a cloud between the cherubim in the Holy of Holies, as in the former temple. But ó. שמי ישכן, “my name shall dwell.”

—for ever; and the sons.—Perhaps, “if the sons” &c. See Nold. §. 60. Or, after for ever the condition of obedience, which is expressed v. 9, must be understood, and extended to iniquities, v. 10, as well as idolatries.

—and by the carcases of their kings.—Here, and v. 9, the context seems to require נפסלי; “and the graven images.” “It seems that some monuments of the deceased kings were erected near the wall which surrounded the temple and the courts. This vicinity was regarded as a profanation of the temple.” Michaelis.

“Manassch and Amon were buried in the king’s garden, hard by the walls of the temple. 2 Kings xxi. 18, 26.” J. Mede. Disc. ii.

—in the midst of them.—בתוכם, ó. But I prefer ובמקומם, “and in their high places.” See ó. Syr. for prefixing the van.

8. —in that they set &c.—See 2 Kings xvi. 14. xxi. 4, 5, 7. c. viii. 3.

- 10 And thou, son of man, shew the house to the house of Israel, that they may be ashamed of their iniquities; and 11 let them measure the pattern. And if they be ashamed of all that they have done, let them know the form of the house, and the pattern thereof, and the goings out thereof and the comings in thereof, and all the forms thereof, and all the statutes thereof, and all the laws thereof: and write it in their sight, that they may observe all the forms thereof and all the statutes thereof, and do them.
- 12 This is the law of the house upon the top of the mount: all the border thereof round about shall be most holy: lo, this is the law of the house.
- 13 And these are the measures of the altar by cubits; each cubit being a cubit and an hand-breadth: now the bottom

10. And thou.—וְאַתָּה 19 MSS. and 8 originally: ó. Ar. V. Syr. Houb. —shew the house to the house of Israel.—Houbigant reads הִגֵּד אֶל הַבָּנִים, One MS. reads בְּנֵי “to the sons of Israel;” which is a more elegant reading, and probably from the contraction “ב.

—the pattern.—תְּבִנִית, Houb. 2 MSS. and perhaps 3 others. But Houbigant also proposes תְּכִנִּיתוֹ. Or read תְּבִנִּיתוֹ, as v. 11. Houbigant suspects a corruption in וְיִמְדְּדוּ, and observes that ó. read וְיִמְדְּדוּהוּ [rather וְיִמְדְּדוּהוּ] Καὶ τὰ μέτρα αὐτοῦ. Perhaps, וְיִמְדְּדוּהוּ וְתְבִנִּיתוֹ, “and its measures and its pattern.”

11. —the form of the house.—וְצִרְתָּ, Καὶ διαγράφεις, ó. Sic enim vertunt Cantic. viii. 9. nec male.” Secker.

—statutes thereof.—After this clause ó. and Houb. omit וְכָל צִוְּתוֹ. The words are omitted in one MS. the first time they occur: and in 4 MSS. and 7 originally, the second time they occur.

12. —of the mount:—This is the punctuation of ó. Ar. V. Syr. Chald. Houb.

—lo, this is the law of the house.—Houbigant omits this, with ó. Syr. It may serve for emphasis.

13. —the bottom.—The base of the altar. It had a border, or rim: and seems to have been called הֵיק, the lap, sinus, from its hollowness or capacity, which bore a general resemblance to that made by the flowing eastern garments when prepared to receive any thing. Ps. lxxix. 12. Isai. lxxv. 6 Luke vi. 33. See הֵיק again v. 17. See Villalp.

shall be a cubit high and a cubit broad, and the border thereof by the edge thereof round about shall be a span ;
 14 and this shall be the outer part of the altar. And from the bottom upon the ground to the lower ledge shall be two cubits, and the breadth one cubit; and from the lesser ledge to the greater ledge shall be four cubits; and
 15 the breadth a cubit. And the surface of the altar shall be four cubits; and from the surface of the altar and upward 16 shall be four horns. And the surface of the altar shall be twelve cubits long by twelve broad, square on the four

—a cubit high.—כַּבִּי is again omitted after span ; and thrice after cubits, v. 14, 15.

—border.—A rim, rising round the four sides to the height of a span, or half a cubit.

—the outer part.—Ambitus, pars quæ longius prominebat. Houb.

14. —from the bottom.—From the ground to the surface of that projecting part which formed the lower ledge.

—to the lower ledge.—To the lower area, narrowing, or imbenching ; diazoma, crepido. On this the priests walked round the altar ; and it was called the lower and lesser ledge, in opposition to the higher and greater ledge mentioned v. 17.

—one cubit.—This was the breadth of the lower, or greater, ledge : so that the side of the altar at the base was wider by two cubits (one at each end) than the side of the lower ledge.

—and from the lesser ledge to the greater.—The lower ledge is called the greater, in ṣ. Ar. see MS. Al. הַתַּחְתּוֹנָה הַגְּדֹלָה being supplied after הַתַּחְתּוֹנָה : and therefore some say that here the mensuration is downward.

—four cubits.—Twice as high as from the surface of the ground to the surface of the greater ledge.

—a cubit.—However, the decrease in breadth shall be only one cubit on a side.

15. And the surface of the altar.—The true reading seems to be אֶל־אֵל : whether the word signifies אֵל, the light of God, or אֵל־אֵר, the lion of God. It here denotes the hearth of the altar of burnt offerings, on which the sacrifices were consumed.

—four cubits.—High, from the surface of the ledge immediately below it.

- 17 sides thereof. And the ledge shall be fourteen cubits long by fourteen broad on the four sides thereof; and the border about it shall be half a cubit: and the bottom thereof shall be a cubit about, and its ascent shall look toward the east.
- 18 Then he said unto me; Son of man, thus saith the Lord Jehovah, These are the statutes of the altar: in the day when it shall be made, to offer burnt-offerings thereon,
- 19 and to sprinkle blood thereon, then shalt thou give to the

17. —the ledge.—It shall project on each side a cubit beyond the area of the hearth.

—half a cubit.—High, and probably as much broad: but the breadth is contained in the fourteen cubits.

—the bottom.—It is generally thought that this is a repetition of what was affirmed v. 13.

—ascent.—See Exod. xx. 26. פִּיגָה Talm. Bab. It was an inclined plane.

Thus the altar is ten feet high and twenty broad; as Solomon's, 2 Chron. iv. 1.

For the base, v. 13, is in height . . . . .	1 cubit
From the surface of the base to the first ledge, v. 14, is . . .	1 cubit
From the lower edge to the upper, v. 14, are . . . . .	4 cubits
From the upper ledge to the Ariel, v. 15, are . . . . .	4 cubits
	—
	10
	—

And as to the breadth: the upper ledge, v. 17, was . . . . .	14 cubits
Add a cubit on each side for the higher ledge: v. 14, latter part	2
Add a cubit on each side for the lower ledge: v. 14, former part	2
Add a cubit on each side for the base, v. 13, . . . . .	2
	—
	20

The altar of burnt offerings, described Exod. xxvii. 1. xxxviii. 1, was smaller than this; because it was to be removed from place to place with the tabernacle.

19. —shalt thou give.—Command to be given. Or, thy people shall give. וְנָתַתָּ MSS. here and v. 20.

priests the Levites that are of the seed of Zadok, that approach unto me, saith the Lord Jehovah, to minister 20 unto me, a young bullock for a sin-offering. And thou shalt take of the blood thereof, and put it on its four horns, and on the four corners of the ledge, and on the border
 21 round about: and thou shalt cleanse and purge it. And thou shalt take the bullock of the sin-offering; and * it shall be burnt in the appointed place of the house, without the sanctuary. And on the second day thou shalt offer a kid of the goats without blemish for a sin-offering; and they shall cleanse the altar, as they cleansed it with
 22 the bullock. When thou hast made an end of cleansing it, thou shalt offer a young bullock without blemish, and a
 23 ram out of the flock without blemish: thou shalt even offer them before Jehovah, and the priests shall cast salt upon them, and shall offer them up for a burnt-offering to 24 Jehovah. Seven days shalt thou sacrifice every day a goat for a sin-offering: they shall also sacrifice a young bullock, and a ram of the flock, each without blemish.
 25 Seven days shall they purge the altar and purify it, and 26 consecrate it. And when they have finished these days,

* H. one shall burn it.

21. —the bullock.—See Exod. xxix. 14. Lev. viii. 17.

25. —seven days &c —Compare Exod. xxix. 36, 37: where only a bullock is mentioned.

26. —shall they purge.—יִבְּרֹנוּ, MSS. edd. Or, point thus, with Houbigant:—"blemish seven days. And they shall purge" &c.

—and consecrate it.—The altar. Houbigant. The expression in the original, "and they shall fill its hand," is metaphorical; the priests being consecrated to their office partly by the act of filling their hands with what they were to offer. Exod. xxix. 24. But יְדֵיהֶם, their hands, is the reading of δ. MS. Vat. and ed. Ald. "the priests shall consecrate themselves."

it shall be that on the eighth day, and forward, the priests shall sacrifice upon the altar your burnt-offerings and your peace-offerings: and I will accept you, saith Jehovah.

---

CHAPTER XLIV.

- 1 Then he brought me back the way of the gate of the outward sanctuary which looked toward the east; and it
- 2 was shut. Then said Jehovah unto me, This gate shall be shut, it shall not be opened, and no man shall enter in by it; because Jehovah the God of Israel entered in by it,
- 3 therefore it shall be shut. It is for the prince; the prince he shall sit in it to eat food before Jehovah: he shall enter by the way of the porch of that gate, and by the same way shall he go out.
- 4 Then brought he me the way of the north gate before the house: and I looked, and, lo, the glory of Jehovah filled the house of Jehovah: and I fell upon my face.

---

1. —of the outward sanctuary.—In opposition to the temple itself, which was the inner sanctuary. This was called the outward sanctuary, because none but priests entered into it. The gate is to be understood of the inner gate which immediately communicated with the court of the priests. Houbigant.

2. —opened.—Unless at particular seasons. See c. xliii. 4. xli. 1, 2.

3. It is for the prince.—נָסִיחַ is sometimes used before the nominative case. The word prince comprehends Zerubbabel, and other governors of the Jews after their return from Babylon. That the kings had a corresponding place, see 2 Chron. vi. 13. xxiii. 13. xxxiv. 31.

—to eat food.—Compare Deut. xii. 7, 18. xv. 20.

4. —filled the house.—As appeared by the light which shone through the windows.

- 5 And Jehovah said unto me, Son of man, mark well, and behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears all that I say unto thee concerning all the statutes of the house of Jehovah and all the laws thereof; and mark well the enterings in of the house with all the goings out of the sanctuary.
- 6 And thou shalt say to the rebellious, even to the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: * let it suffice you
- 7 of all your abominations, O house of Israel, in that ye brought † strangers, uncircumcised in heart and uncircumcised in flesh, to be in my sanctuary to pollute it, even my house, when ye offered my food, the fat, and the blood; and ye brake my covenant with all your abominations:
- 8 neither did ye keep the charge of mine holy place; but ye set for keepers of my charge in my sanctuary keepers for yourselves.

* H. let it be enough [or, much] for you. † H. the sons of a stranger.

5. —enterings in.—למבוא־י V. Syr. Chald.

—with all.—לכל, to all, 3 MSS. ולכל, and to all, 1 MS. “Forté legendum וכל.” Secker.

6. —even to the house.—אל is wanting in 2 MSS. and Syr. translates “to the rebellious house of Israel.” Chald. reads אל עם מרי, “to the rebellious people:” ó. Houb. אל אל מרי אל, to the rebellious house, to &c.”

7. —to pollute it &c.—לחלל, 1 MS. V. Syr. Ch. “to pollute mine house:” but ó. omit ביתי אל, mine house.

—my food.—The sacrifices appointed by me.

—fat.—Lev. iii. 16.

—blood.—Lev. iv. 6. c. xlv. 15.

—and ye brake.—ותפרו ó. Ar. Syr. V. Houb. But ויפרו may refer to strangers; and 5 MSS. read “their abominations.” See Lev. xxii. 25.

—with all.—אל כל, 4 MSS. 3 originally.

8. —keepers for yourselves.—See Syr. Houb. It is sufficient to supply שמרים before לכם. Those who kept for you, not for me; who were designed as guards for your own persons.

- 9 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: No * stranger, uncircumcised in heart and uncircumcised in flesh, shall enter into my sanctuary; of any strangers that are among the sons 10 of Israel. But even the Levites who departed far from me when Israel went astray, who went astray from me 11 after their idols, shall bear their iniquity. Yet they shall be ministers in my sanctuary, † having charge at the gates of the house, and ministering at the house: they shall slay the burnt-offering, and the sacrifice for the people, and they shall stand before them to minister unto 12 them. Because they ministered unto them before their idols, and were a stumbling-block of iniquity to the house of Israel; therefore have ‡ I lifted up mine hand || against them, saith the Lord Jehovah, and they shall bear their 13 iniquity: and they shall not come near unto me to do the office of a priest unto me, and to come near unto any of mine holy things in the most holy place: but they shall bear their shame, and their abominations which they have 14 committed: and I will make them keepers of the charge of the house, for all the service thereof, and for all which 15 shall be done therein. But the priests the Levites, the sons of Zadok, that kept the charge of my sanctuary when the sons of Israel went astray from me, they shall draw

* H. son of a stranger. † Or, officers. ‡ Or, sworn.
 || Or, concerning.

---

10. —the Levites.—Many of the priests and Levites lived to see the second temple. Ezra iii. 12. But the descendants of former idolatrous priests and Levites may be meant. See v. 15.

—Israel.—Some MSS. and V. Syr. add בְּנֵי, the sons of Israel.

13. —to do the office of a priest.—In offering up sacrifices.

—in the most holy place.—Probably the outer building of the temple, which was forty feet square. But see c. xliii. 12.

15. —the Levites.—“And the Levites.” V. Syr. 2 MSS. originally.

The whole passage, from v. 10 to v. 16, naturally refers to the period of time when the second temple was rebuilt.

- near unto me to minister unto me, and shall stand before me to offer unto me the fat and the blood, saith the Lord
- 16 Jehovah. They shall come into my sanctuary, and they shall draw near unto my table to minister unto me, and shall keep my charge.
- 17 And it shall come to pass that, when they enter in at the gates of the inner court, they shall be clothed with linen garments, and no wool shall come upon them, while they minister in the gates of the inner court, and within.
- 18 They shall have linen ornaments upon their heads, and shall have linen drawers upon their loins; they shall not
- 19 gird themselves with any thing that causeth sweat. And when they go forth into the outer court [even into the outer court] unto the people, they shall put off their garments wherein they ministered, and lay them in the holy rooms, and shall clothe themselves with other garments, and they shall not sanctify the people in their
- 20 garments. Neither shall they shave their head, nor 17.—in the gates.—Where they had chambers assigned to them for particular offices. See c. xl. 38, 39.

18. —any thing that causeth sweat.—In sudore, seu, sudantes. Dathius. Modo instabili, segniter, laxe. Gussetius. ַעַד, significatu Chaldaico, veste lacera. Houbigant. ַעַד ֶ. Ar. V. MSS.

19. —even into the outer court.—The ancients, 4 MSS. Houbigant, and Dathius, omit the repetition of the three Hebrew words: and 3 of De Rossi's MSS. omitted them originally.

—sanctify.—Some interpret this, Bless. See Numb. vi. 23, 24. But Houbigant renders, “ne populum per eas religione obstringant:” whatever touched any thing holy becoming itself holy, and no longer to be profaned by vulgar use. Exod. xxx. 29. Lev. vi. 27. c. xlv. 20. “What touched the altar, or furniture of the tabernacle was holy. Probably what the holy garments touched was so too.” Secker.

20. —shave.—See Lev. xxi. 5. Sacrorum ministri seipsos ad vivam cutem aut calvitium non radent, nec eorum caesariem prolixam & incultam gerent; sed, utriusque extremi vanitatem declinantes, capita tondébunt solummodo. Spencer. 581.

suffer their locks to grow long; they shall surely poll 21 their heads. Neither shall any priest drink wine, when 22 they enter into the inner court. Neither shall they take for their wives a widow, or her that is put away: but they shall take virgins of the seed of the house of Israel, or a 23 widow that is the widow of a priest. And they shall teach my people the difference between the holy and the prophane, and cause them to discern between the defiled 24 and the clean. And in controversy they shall stand to judge; after my judgments shall they judge it; and they shall keep my laws and my statutes in all * mine assem-25 blies, and they shall hallow my sabbaths. And they shall come unto no dead person † to defile themselves: but for father, or for mother, or for son, or for daughter, or for brother, or for sister that hath no husband, they may 26 defile themselves. And after his cleansing, they shall 27 reckon unto him seven days. And in the day when he goeth into the sanctuary, into the inner court, to minister in the sanctuary, he shall offer his sin-offering, saith the

* Or, my solemn feasts.

† II. for defilement.

21. —drink wine.—See Lev. x. 9, 10, 11.

22. —for their wives.—See Lev. xxi. 14.

23. —the holy &c.—What places, according to the ceremonial law, are holy, and what common; what things are defiled, and what clean.

24. —to judge.—לשפוט is the reading of ó. Syr. Chald. Houb. and למשפט, to judgment, has the authority of MSS. edd. and Keri. But ó. read ריב דם a controversy of blood.

—after my judgments shall they judge it.—במשפט, in judgment, 2 MSS. Perhaps, כמשפטי. Nine or ten MSS. read ישפטוהו.

25. —they shall come.—יבוא may be distributive: but 1 MS. and Houb. read plurally.

—dead person.—Lev. xxi. 1, 2, 3.

—or for brother.—ולאח MSS. ó. Ar. Syr. V.

26. —they shall reckon.—יספר ó. Ar. Syr. 1 MS. originally: he shall reckon.

27. —his sin-offering.—See Lev. iv. 3.

- 28 Lord Jehovah. They shall have no inheritance; I am their inheritance: and ye shall give them no possession in 29 Israel; I am their possession. They shall eat the offering of flour, and the sin-offering, and the trespass-offering:
 30 and every devoted thing in Israel shall be theirs. And the first fruits of all things, the first born of all things, and every heave-offering of all things from all your heave-offerings, shall be the priest's: ye shall also give unto the priest the first of your dough, that he may cause a 31 blessing to rest on thine house. The priests shall not eat of any thing that dieth of itself, or that is * torn; whether it be of fowl or of beast.

* Or, a prey.

28. They shall have no inheritance.—Read לֹא הִיְתָדָה and נִחְלָהָ, with V. Cornelius a Lapide, Houbigant, and Dathius: for thus the former part of the verse corresponds to the latter. The two latter critics remove saith the Lord Jehovah from the end of the foregoing verse, and place that clause after inheritance.

Perhaps וְהִיְתִי, And I will be unto them an inheritance; even I will be their inheritance. “And their priesthood shall be &c. This I have added from Josh. xviii. 7.” Michaelis. See Numb. xviii. 20. Deut. x. 9. xviii. 2.

29. —devoted thing.—As a field, or a beast. See Lev. xxvii. 28. Numb. xviii. 14, 18.

30. —the first fruits.—So רֵאשִׁית is used Deut. xxvi. 10. See the law, Exod. xxiii. 19. xxxiv. 26. Numb. xviii. 13. Neh. x. 35. The punctuation is adopted from ó, where the reading is, רֵאשִׁית בְּרֵאשִׁית.

—the first born.—See Exod. xxii. 29, 30. Neh. x. 36.

—every heave-offering.—See Exod. xxix. 28. Lev. x. 15. Numb. v. 9. Neh. x. 37. עֶרֶס in Chald. is commiscuit.

—your dough.—Numb. xv. 19, 20, 21.

31. —dieth of itself.—Lev. xvii. 15. xxii. 8.

—torn.—Of beasts in the field. Exod. xxii. 31. Lev. xxii. 8.

CHAPTER XLV.

- 1 Moreover, when ye shall divide the land by lot for inheritance, ye shall offer an oblation to Jehovah, * an holy portion of the land; the length shall be five and twenty thousand cubits, and the breadth ten thousand; this shall be † an holy portion in all the borders thereof round about. [And] of this there shall be for the sanctuary five hundred cubits in length by five hundred in breadth, square round about; and fifty cubits for the suburbs thereof round about. Even of this measure shalt thou measure the length of five and twenty thousand, and the breadth of ten thousand; and therein shall be the sanctuary, even * H. holiness. † H. holiness.

1. —divide—by lot.—See Josh. xxiii. 4.

—ye shall offer an oblation.—Ye shall heave, as it were, an heave-offering, as the first fruits of the land itself. Mr. Lowth. See c. xlv. 30.

—cubits.—Houbigant reads thus for the second אַרְךְ. Michaelis prefers cubits to rods. It may be collected from v. 2 that the cubit was the measure to be used. “Duplex אַרְךְ non agnoscunt ṣ Syr. Vulg. Videtur vel prius ortum ex אַרְץ, vel posterius ex אֵלֶּף: non geminatur v. 3.” Secker.

—the borders thereof.—ט בְּבִלְוֵהוּ.

2. [And].—וְהָיָה, the ancients, except Chald. 3 MSS. and 1 in the margin; and Houbigant.

—five hundred.—This agrees with c. xlii. 16—20, as amended.

—suburbs.—Pomærium, spatium sine ædibus. Houb. A part excluded or cast out of walls or precincts. Tayl. conc.

3. Even of this measure.—Igitur secundum mensuram hanc (paulo ante indicatam) metitor &c. Corn. a Lapide. This verse is a repetition of v. 1, 2.

—shalt thou measure.—וְתִכְדֹּם 9 MSS. 3 edd. Houb.

- 4 the most holy place. This holy portion of the land shall be for the priests the ministers of the sanctuary, that draw near to minister unto Jehovah; and it shall be a place for their houses, and an holy place for the sanctuary. And five and twenty thousand in length, and ten thousand in breadth, shall be for the Levites the ministers of the house for a possession, for cities to dwell in. And ye shall appoint the possession of the city, five thousand in breadth and in length five and twenty thousand, overagainst the oblation of the holy portion: it shall be for all the house of Israel. And portions shall be for the prince on this side and on that side of the oblations of the holy portions and of the possession of the city, before the oblations of the holy portions and before the possession of the city, from the west side westward and from the east side eastward: and the length shall be overagainst every one of the portions, from the border of the west to the

4. This holy &c.—Or thus: “This is the holy portion of the land: it shall be for the priests” &c.

—and an holy place for the sanctuary.—למקדש seems an explanation of ומקדש, to shew that the preposition is omitted.

5. — for cities to dwell in.—עיריהם לשבת, is the reading of ó. But Houbigant prefers שערים, gates. Civitatem. Th. See the note in Montf. Hex.

6. — five thousand &c.—This rectangle contained an area of about seventeen miles in circuit; which was more than four times the circuit of Jerusalem. See Jos. B. J. v. iv. 3; where that city is said to be thirty-three stadia in circumference. Much therefore is here allowed for the convenience of the inhabitants.

7. — oblations.—In ó. we find ἀπαρχάς and ἀπαρχῶν; and therefore they read תרומות twice, comprehending the portions of the priests and also of the Levites.

—from the east side eastward.—Perhaps we should read הקדימה קרב. See c. xl. 6.

—length &c.—As one of the portions. ó.

—overagainst every one of the portions.—To be assigned to the adjoining tribes. See c. xlviii. 8.

- 8 border eastward. As for the land, it shall be unto him a possession in Israel, that my princes may no more oppress my people: and the rest of the land shall they give to the house of Israel according to their tribes.
- 9 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: Let it suffice you, O princes of Israel: remove violence and spoil, and execute judgment and justice, take away your oppressions from my people, saith the Lord Jehovah.
- 10 Ye shall have just balances, and a just ephah, and a just 11 bath. The ephah and the bath shall be of one measure; that the bath may contain the tenth part of an homer, and the ephah the tenth part of an homer: the measure thereof 12 shall be according to the homer. And the shekel shall be twenty gerahs: the pieces of silver of twenty shekels, five and twenty shekels, and fifteen shekels shall be together your maneh.
- 13 This is the heave-offering which ye shall offer; the sixth part of an ephah out of an homer of wheat, and the sixth

8. As for the land.—See ל Nold. §. 30. But Chald. reads הארץ.

—it shall be.—תהיה 2 MSS. והיה לו. to the border eastward of the land. And it shall be &c.

9. —oppressions.—Houbigant derives the word from the Syr. גרש, traxit, raptavit. The Arab. root signifies comminuit, like the Hebr. גרם, and also diripuit rem. Michaelis derives it from the Arab. גרם deposcere, and thinks that it refers to servitutem juris pasceudi in subditorum agris. However, in his version he renders, expulsiones ex patriis agris. See suppl. ad lex. Hebr.

10. —just balances &c.—See Lev. xix. 36. Deut. xxv. 15.

11.—of one measure.—The bath for things liquid, and the ephah for things dry: the bath containing about 75 gallons, and the ephah about 32 pecks. See Arbuthnot.

12. —twenty gerahs.—See Exod. xxx. 13.

—maneh.—We may well suppose that three of the usual current coins among the Jews answered to the three numbers of shekels here mentioned. The amount of the three was sixty shekels; which made a maneh, μνα, or mina.

13. —and the sixth part.—All the ancients read וששית; instead of

- 14 part of an ephah out of an homer of barley. And as for the statute concerning oil, [even the bath of oil,] ye shall offer the tenth part of a bath out of a cor: a cor is ten 15 baths; for an homer is ten baths. And ye shall offer one * lamb out of the flock, out of two hundred, from the watered pastures of Israel; for the offering of flour, and for the burnt-offering, and for the peace-offerings, to make 16 reconciliation for you, saith the Lord Jehovah. All the people of the land † shall give this heave-offering with the 17 prince in Israel. And it shall belong to the prince to give burnt-offerings, and the offering of flour, and the drink-offering, in the feasts, and in the new moons, and in the sabbaths, and in all the solemn assemblies of the house of

* Or, kid.

† II. shall be for this.

וששיתם, et sextabitis. The sixth part of an ephah from each homer, was the sixtieth part of the whole.

14. —concerning oil.—After this, one MS. omits הזבת השמן; of which words there is no trace in Syr. The tenth part of a bath from each cor is the hundredth part of the whole.

—a cor is ten baths.—V. Ch. read חזר here.

—for an homer &c.—The homer is universally reckoned equal to the cor. This is the proportion observed in Chald. and in Syr. if we render, De oleo vero; ex decem mensuris quibus constat eorus deciman sumant mensuræ unius. In ó. the proportion is too large: “one bath of ten baths.”

15. —from the watered pastures.—The reading in ó. is משפחות ביבלי, from all the families.

—for the offering of flour.—To accompany it, Exod. xxix. 39, 40: and for a burnt-offering, Lev. i. 10: and for peace-offerings. Lev. xvii. 3, 5.

—for you.—עליכם. ó. But if we read, “from all the families,” or, “from the families,” עליהם may refer to משפחות, κατὰ τὸ σημαυνόμενον.

16. —with the prince.—See ל Nold. § 9. and Mr. Lowth.

17. —burnt-offerings.—העלה, or העולה, the burnt-offering, 7 MSS.

—and in all.—ובכל MSS. edd. ó. Ar. V. Syr. Chald.

Israel: he shall sacrifice the sin-offering, and the offering of flour, and the burnt-offering, and the peace-offerings, to make reconciliation for the house of Israel.

- 18 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: in the first month, on the first day of the month, thou shalt take a young bullock 19 without blemish, and shalt cleanse the sanctuary. And the priest shall take of the blood of the sin-offering, and put it upon the posts of the house, and upon the four corners of the ledge of the altar, and upon the posts of 20 the gate of the inner court. And in like manner shalt thou do on the seventh day of the month, for him that erreth and for him that is simple: so shall ye make reconciliation for the house.
- 21 In the first month, on the fourteenth day of the month, ye shall have the passover, a feast of seven days: every one 22 shall eat unleavened bread. And upon that day shall the prince sacrifice for himself, and for all the people of the 23 land, a bullock for a sin-offering. And seven days of the feast he shall sacrifice a burnt-offering to Jehovah, seven —he shall sacrifice.—By the priest, at his own charge.

18. —thou shalt take.—See on c. xliii. 19.

—cleanse the sanctuary.—See Lev. xvi. 16. A yearly ceremony seems to be here enjoined, and not a mere dedication. “The regulations about the sacrifices, which here follow, are in several circumstances very different from the Mosaical ones.” Michaelis.

19. —the posts.—It seems that we should read מוֹזוֹת twice: see V. 6. unless the word may be taken distributively.

20. —of the month.—“בְּחֶדֶשׁ. Sic Num. x. ii. לְחֹדֶשׁ.” Secker. 3 לְחֹדֶשׁ MSS. 2 originally.

—that erreth.—See Lev. iv. 2, 13, 27.

—that is simple.—That wants understanding to conduct himself, so as to avoid legal defilement.

21. In the first.—וּבְרֵאשִׁוֹן. 6. Syr.

—of seven days.—“Legendum videtur שבועת; vel forte שבועת, ut Exod. xii. 15.” Secker. Both these readings are found in MSS.

22. —a bullock &c.—Lev. iv. 14.

23. —seven days.—Lev. xxiii. 8.

- bullocks and seven rams without blemish daily the seven 24 days; and a kid of the goats daily for a sin-offering. And he shall sacrifice an offering of flour, an ephah for a bullock and an ephah for a ram; and of oil an hin for an ephah.
- 25 In the seventh month, on the fifteenth day of the month, during the feast, he shall do the like seven days; according to the sin-offering, according to the burnt-offering, and according to the offering of flour, and according to the oil.

---

CHAPTER XLVI.

- 1 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: The gate of the inner court, that looketh toward the east, shall be shut the six days of work; but on the * sabbath-day it shall be opened, and on the day of the new moon it shall be 2 opened. And the prince shall enter by the way of the porch of that gate without, and shall stand by the post of the gate; and the priests shall sacrifice his burnt-offering, and his peace-offerings, and he shall bow down himself at the threshold of the gate: then he shall go forth, but the 3 gate shall not be shut until the evening. Likewise the people of the land shall bow down themselves at the door of this gate before Jehovah, on the sabbaths and on the * Or, day of rest.

---

—a kid of the goats &c.—Numb. xxviii. 15. xxix. 5.

25. —seven days.—Lev. xxiii. 34.

—according to the burnt-offering.—וּבְעֹלֶה, and according to the burnt-offering, 2 MSS. 6. Syr. Ch.

- 4 new moons. And the burnt-offering, which the prince shall bring unto Jehovah on the sabbath-day, shall be six 5 lambs without blemish, and a ram without blemish. And the offering of flour shall be an ephah for a ram; and the offering of flour for the lambs * as he is disposed to give;
 6 and of oil an hin for an ephah. And in the day of the new moon there shall be a young bullock without blemish;
 7 and six lambs, and a ram, without blemish. And he shall sacrifice as an offering of flour an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram: and for the lambs according as his hand shall attain unto; and of oil an hin for an ephah.
 8 And when the prince shall enter, he shall go in by the way of the porch of that gate, and he shall go forth by the way thereof.
 9 But when the people of the land enter before Jehovah on the solemn assemblies, he that entereth the way of the north gate, to bow down himself, shall go forth the way of the south gate; and he that entereth the way of the south gate shall go forth the way of the north gate: he shall not return the way of the gate by which he entered,
 10 but shall go forth overagainst it. And he that is prince in the midst of them shall enter when they enter, and * H. from the giving of his hand.

4. —lambs without blemish.—תמימים, MSS.

5. —as he is disposed to give.—See Deut. xvi. 17. For the proportions of flour and oil, see c. xlv. 24.

6. —bullock without blemish.—תמים, many MSS. as Houbigant proposed.

—ram without blemish.—תמימים, MSS.

4—7. “These laws of the proportion of the flour-offering, and the burnt-offerings, are again very different from the Mosaical laws. Numb. xv. 4—12.” Michaelis.

9. —but shall go forth.—יציא MSS. all the ancients: Houbigant. Vau follows.

- 11 shall go forth when they go forth. And in the feasts, and in the solemn assemblies, the offering of flour shall be an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram, and for the lambs as he is able to give; and an hin of oil for an ephah. And when the prince shall sacrifice a free-will offering, even a burnt-offering or peace-offerings for a freewill-offering unto Jehovah, the gate that looketh toward the east * shall be opened for him, and he shall sacrifice his burnt-offering and his peace-offerings, as he was wont to do on the sabbath-day: then he shall go forth, and † the gate shall be shut after he goeth forth.
- 13 And he shall sacrifice for a burnt-offering daily unto Jehovah a lamb ‡ of the first year without blemish: he shall sacrifice it || every morning. And he shall sacrifice with it an offering of flour every morning; even the sixth part of an ephah, and the third part of an hin of oil to moisten the fine flour, as an offering of flour to Jehovah; by a perpetual statute continually. He shall sacrifice the * H. one shall open for him the gate. † H. the son of his year.

† H. one shall shut the gate. § H. by morning by morning. So v. 14, 15.

10. —and shall go forth.—יָצָא, the ancients, MSS. Houb. Vau follows. The prince and the people were to begin and end their worship together, for the greater solemnity.

13. —he shall sacrifice.—יַעֲשֶׂה 1<sup>o</sup>. all the versions except Chald. 7 MSS. 1 now, 2 originally. יַעֲשֶׂה 2<sup>10</sup>. V. 6. Ar. Houbigant reads יַעֲשֶׂה twice.

14. —he shall sacrifice.—יַעֲשֶׂה 2 MSS. and the ancients, except Chald. It seems best to understand this of the Prince; because Exod. xxix. 40, Num. xxviii. 5, a tenth part of an ephah of flour, and a fourth part of an hin of oil, are commanded to be offered with the lambs morning and evening continually.

—statute.—חֻקַּת 2 MSS. 6. Syr. Chald. חֻקַּת 16 MSS.

15. He shall sacrifice.—יַעֲשֶׂה Arab. V. But יַעֲשֶׂה they, the princes in succession, shall sacrifice, 12 MSS. 3 originally, Keri, Chald. and יַעֲשֶׂה, and they shall sacrifice, Syr. Houb.

lamb, and the offering of flour, and the oil, every morning, for a continual burnt-offering.

- 16 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: If the prince give a gift unto any of his sons, the inheritance thereof * shall belong to his sons; it shall be their possession by inheritance. But if he give a gift of his inheritance to one of his servants, it shall be his to the year of liberty, when it shall return to the prince: but his inheritance given to his sons shall be theirs. Moreover the prince shall not take of the people's inheritance, to † force them out of their possession; but he shall give inheritance to his sons out of his own possession: that my people be not scattered every man from his possession.
- 19 Then he brought me through the entry which was at the side of the gate into the holy rooms belonging to the priests, which looked northward: and, lo, a place was there in the side thereof westward. And he said unto me, This is the place where the priests shall boil the trespass-offering and the sin-offering, and where they shall bake the offering of flour: that they carry them not forth into * H. it shall be.

† H. oppress.

13—15. “Here is only mention made of a morning offering, and the evening offering is entirely omitted: which makes an important difference between this and the old laws. Exod. xxix. 38—46.” Michaelis.

16. —the inheritance thereof.—“Out of his inheritance. ó. as v. 17.” Secker.

17. —but his inheritance.—Houbigant reads נחלת with ó. Syr. “but the inheritance of his sons &c.” Secker approves of this reading.

19. Then he brought me &c.—See c. xlv. 4.

—the side thereof.—Perhaps בִּירְכָתוֹ. Syr. has the affix. Houbigant reads בִּירְכָת יְמִינָה, in latere occidentali.

20. —shall boil.—2 Chron. xxxv. 13.

—the trespass-offering.—That part of this, and of the sin-offering, and of the offering of flour, was the portion of the priest, see Numb. xviii. 9, 10.

- 21 the outer court, to sanctify the people. Then he brought me forth into the outer court, and caused me to pass by the four corners of the court; and, lo, * in every corner of
- 22 the court there was a court. In the four corners of the court were small courts, forty cubits in length and thirty
- 23 in breadth: the four corners were of one measure. And there was a row of building round about in them, even round about them four; and it was made with boiling-
- 24 places under the rows round about. Then he said unto me, These are the houses of them that boil; where the ministers of the house shall boil the sacrifice of the people.

---

CHAPTER XLVII.

- 1 Afterward he brought me again unto the door of the house; and, lo, waters issued forth from under the threshold of the house eastward: for the forefront of the house stood toward the east, and the waters came down from under the right threshold of the house, on the south

* H. a court in the corner of the court, a court in the corner of the court.

---

—to sanctify the people.—See on c. xliv. 19.

22. —small courts.—Read קטנות with Syr. ó. Houb. But fumosa, Dathius: as marg. Engl. made with chimneys.

—forty cubits.—Add אמה, or באמה, with all the ancients.

—the four corners.—לארבעת 2 MSS. מקצעות 1 MS.

23. —made.—Et culinæ erant id quod factum fuit.

—under the rows.—הטורות 1 MS. הטורות 1 MS.

1. —eastward.—Which threshold was towards the east.

—the right threshold.—מפתן is the reading of 3 MSS. and of Chald. “the right hand, or south, side of the threshold.” It was one reed broad.

- 2 of the altar. Then he brought me out by the way of the gate northward; and led me round by the way without unto the outer gate which was by the way that looked 3 eastward; and, lo, waters ran from the right side. And when the man that had the line in his hand went forth eastward, he measured a thousand cubits; and he caused me to pass through the waters, and the waters were to the
 4 ankles. Again he measured a thousand cubits; and he caused me to pass through the waters, and the waters were to the knees. Again he measured a thousand cubits, and he caused me to pass through [the waters,] and the 5 waters were to the loins. Again he measured a thousand cubits, and it was a river which I could not pass through: for the waters were * lifted up, and were waters † to swim in, a river which could not be passed through.
 6 And he said unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen this? Then he brought me and caused me to return by the

* Or, were swollen.

† H. of swimming.

c. xl. 6. Or מִתַּחַת infernè, adverbially: from beneath, from the right side of the threshold of the house." The waters are said to flow from the right, or south part; because the face is supposed to look eastward, when the points of the heavens are to be fixed. See on Joel ii. 20.

2. —from the right side.—When the prophet came to the outer eastern gate, still he saw waters running from the south side of that gate.

3. —ankles.—So Syr. Chald. Aq. Symm. Theod. V. Houb. Dath.

4. —the waters were to the knees.—See מִי for מֵי, MSS. 1 ed.

—and he caused me to pass through [the waters].—In 7 MSS. בְּמֵי is added; it stood originally in an eighth, perhaps in a ninth, and is found in the margin of a tenth.

5. —were lifted up.—Ἐξύβριζεν, ó. lifted up their proud waves. But MS. Pachom. reads ἐπαύειν. These waters beautifully represent the gradual progress of the gospel. See Isai. ii. 2—4. Christ and his apostles often taught in the second temple. Compare the allegory with Joel iii. 18. Zech. xiv. 8. Isai. lv. 1. John vii. 38.

6. —caused me to return.—From the temple along the brink of the 7 brink of the river. Now as I returned, lo, on the brink of the river were very many trees on this side and on that 8 side. Then said he unto me, These waters issue forth toward the eastern border, and go down to the desert, and go into the sea; they go forth into the salt sea, and the 9 waters shall be healed. And it shall come to pass that every living thing which moveth, whithersoever the river shall come, shall live: and there shall be very many fish:

 because these waters shall come thither and shall heal, therefore every thing shall live whither the river shall river. But 3 MSS. and Syr. וישיבני, and placed me. However, וישיבני is the reading best supported.

8. —they go forth into the salt sea.—I read עַל הַיָּם הַמֶּלַח יִצְאִים. 'Ο 'Εβραῖος, ἀντὶ τῆς διεκβολῆς, τῆς ἀλμυρᾶς τῆς θαλάσσης ἔχει. See Montf. Hex. and Syr. has "in mare, in aquas fœtentes." The healing of the waters supposes that their bad quality is expressed: and v. 10, 11, restrain the sense of ים to the Dead Sea or Sea of Sodom, called הַמֶּלַח ים Gen. xiv. 3. Dent. iii. 17, "in contradistinction to the Sea of Galilee, the water of which was fresh." Tayl. conc.

—shall be healed.—This finely represents the tendency of the gospel to heal the corruptions of human nature.

9. —whithersoever the river shall come.—לֵךְ הַיָּם. Ar. Syr. V. מִי־נַחַל שֶׁ חֲסִי Ch. "the river shall come, the sea shall live." Michaelis: dividing נַחַלִּים into ים נַחַל.

—shall live.—Even in the Asphaltite lake, which is so unfavourable to animal life. Josephus represents this lake as salt and incapable of feeding fishes. Tacitus says that it does not suffer fishes, or water fowl, to live in it. Yet Maundrell observed two or three shells of fishes on the shore. Bishop Pococke found its water very salt; and on tasting it his mouth was constricted, as if it had been a strong alum water. The Bishop observes, "It has been said by all authors, and is the common opinion, that there is no fish in this lake: the fresh water fish of the river Jordan probably would not live in it. After I left the holy land, it was positively affirmed to me that a monk had seen fish caught in this water; and possibly there may be fish peculiar to the lake, for which this water may not be too salt:—but this is a fact that deserves well to be inquired

- 10 come. And it shall come to pass that fishers shall stand upon it; from En-gedi even to En-eglaim there shall be a spreading forth of nets; and their fish shall be, according to their kinds, as the fish of the great sea exceeding 11 many. As for the miry places thereof, and the pits thereof, they shall not be healed; they shall be appointed 12 for salt. And by the river upon the brink thereof, on this side and on that side, shall grow all trees for food, into. The air about this lake has always been thought to be very bad." See the very curious accounts of this lake which Bishop Newton has collected, vol. ii. 4<sup>o</sup>. 204. "The Dead Sea is more brackish than any known sea or salt-well in the world. It contains as much salt as water can dissolve, viz. the fourth part of the weight of the water; and this is the reason why neither men nor animals sink in the Dead Sea. If you throw fishes into so heavy a water, they cannot swim in it; but fall immediately on their side." Michaelis.

10. —shall stand.—There is authority in MSS. for עמדו and ועמדו, which latter Houbigant prefers.

—from En-gedi.—This is the punctuation of Syr. Vulg. Arab. and may be that of 6. En-gedi was in the wilderness of Judah. Josh. xv. 61, 62. De L'isle places it towards the south west point of the Dead Sea.

—to En-eglaim.—This city is placed by De L'isle at the north of the Dead Sea, where the Jordan runs into it. Eglaim is mentioned Isai. xv. 8, as a place on the borders of Moab, which country ran on the east of the Dead Sea.

—and their fish shall be.—It is obvious to correct the text by reading ידיו: ולכניה.

—according to their kinds.—In their several kinds, each kind as numerous as the fish of the Great Mediterranean Sea.

In v. 9, 10, there is an amplification of what is said in v. 8, that the waters should be healed: and the salutary effect of the gospel is strongly illustrated.

11. —the miry places.—בצאתיו MSS. that is, as I suppose, בצאותיו, or בצותיו, from בצא or בצה, cœnum, lutum.

—they shall not.—לֹא, 16 MSS. and, as Houbigant observes, all the ancients. Vau precedes.

—for salt.—They shall remain filled with salt water. The allego-whose leaf shall not fade, neither shall their fruit come to an end: every month they shall bring forth * new fruit, because their waters † issue forth from the sanctuary: and their fruit shall be for food, and their leaf for healing.

- 13 Thus saith the Lord Jehovah: This shall be the border whereby ye shall inherit the land, according to the twelve
 14 tribes of Israel. Joseph shall have two portions. And ye shall inherit it ‡ one as well as another; concerning which I || lifted up mine hand to give it unto your fathers: and this land shall fall unto you for an inheritance.
 15 And this shall be the border of the land toward the north side, from the great sea towards the way of Hethlon, as

* Or, early. † H. they issue. ‡ H. every man as his brother.
 || Or, swear.

rical sense is, that some shall reject the gospel, and some receive it without obeying it.

12. — and their fruit shall be.—והיה MSS. edd.

— for healing.—Perhaps, לְתִרְפָּא. The leaves of some plants and trees have a healing quality.

This verse, in its allegorical sense, expresses the blessed state of the good in this life: see Jer. xvii, 7, 8: and their perfect happiness in the future paradisiacal state. See Rev. xxii. 1, 2; where ξύλον is used for trees, as עץ. From v. 1 to v. 12 we have one of the most striking allegories in the Hebrew scriptures.

13. — This shall be the border.—וזה is the reading of 5 MSS. and was that of 7 originally. Houbigant reads וזה, and refers to v. 15. Here Grotius's note is, Hæc assignatio, & quæ sequitur capite postremo, locum habitura fuisset si Decem tribus, non minus quam Judæ & Benjaminis, se ad Deum convertissent: sic enim pariter impetrassent reditum. Nunc pauci tantum permixti Judæ & Benjamini rediere, iique sedes cum illis habuere communes.

14. — shall fall.—A metaphor taken from the falling of the lot.

15. — Hethlon.—Mentioned again, c. xlviii. 1. De L'isle writes it Hethalon with Vulg. and places it between Tyre and Damascus.

- 16 men go to Zedad· Hamath, Berothah, Sibrain, which is between the border of Damascus and the border of Hamath; and Hazarhatticon, which is by the border of 17 Hauran. Also the border from the sea shall be Hazar-Enan by the border of Damascus, and Ziphron, northward, and the border of Hamath: this is the north side.
 18 *And the east side ye shall measure from Hauran, and from Damascus, and from Gilead, and from the land of Israel *by* * II. of Jordan.

—Zedad.—See Numb. xxxiv. 8.—It is written Sedada in De L'isle, with Vulg. and placed east of Hethlon, nearly in the same latitude.

16. —Hamath.—In the northern part of the tribe of Naphtali.

—Berothah.—Some say that this was a small town east of Zedad. Berytus, in Phœnicia, seems too far north.

—Sibrain.—Or, Sabarim, is situated, according to De L'isle, between Hethlon and Zedad: but it is expressly said to be between Hamath and Damascus. Syr. reads “and Sepharvaim.”

—Hazar-hatticon.—Hazar media. See Syr. Dath. the middle village: marg. Engl. vers.

—Hauran.—The city Aurana, and the district Auranitis, are in the north east limit of the Holy Land.

17. Also &c.—The north border eastward is ascertained v. 15, 16. Here it is shewn how far it extends itself northward.

—Hazar-Enan.—Or, the village of Enan. See Numb. xxxiv. 9. This is placed by De L'isle to the north of Cesarea Philippi.

—Ziphron.—Houbigant observes that Syr. renders by a proper name, et Zaphion: and both he and Dathius translate, et Zaphon ad aquilonem. Ziphron occurs in the parallel place, Numb. xxxiv. 9.

—this is.—Read תַּזֵּן, as v. 20, here and v. 18, 19. See MSS. and Houbigant.

18. —and from the land of Israel.—From the extremity of the land of Israel eastward beyond Jordan.

—from the border.—The northern border, mentioned in the foregoing verse. See v. 20. Mr. Lowth. For תַּמְרוֹת, read תַּמְרֵי, φοινικῶνος, which Michaelis translates the palm-forest here, and v. 19.

- Jordan, from the border to the east sea: this is the east 19 side. And the south side southward shall be from
 'Tamar to the waters of strife in Kadesh, as far as the river by the great sea: this is the border southward on 20 the south side. The west side also shall be the great sea, from the border to the country overagainst the way that goeth to Hamath.
- 21 And ye shall divide this land among you, even among the 22 tribes of Israel. And it shall come to pass that ye shall cause it to fall unto you for an inheritance, and unto the sojourners that sojourn among you, who beget children among you: and they shall be unto you as he that is born in the land among the sons of Israel; they shall cause the land to fall unto them for an inheritance together with 23 you, among the tribes of Israel. And it shall come to pass that, in what tribe the sojourner sojourneth, there shall ye appoint him his inheritance, saith the Lord
 Jehovah.

—the east sea.—עַד for עַל, some MSS. The Dead Sea is here meant. The Sea of Chinnereth is also mentioned, Numb. xxxiv. 11.

19. —southward.—Or, towards Teman, which is the name of an Idumean city. See on Hab. iii. 3. But a pleonasm may be allowed. See e. xlviii. 28. Exod. xxvi. 18. xxvii. 9. xxxvi. 23. xxxviii. 9. Possibly תְּמַנָּה may be rendered, toward the right hand.

—Tamar.—Called Hazazon-tamar, or Engedi, 2 Chron. xx. 2.

—of strife.—MSS. read מַרִּיבָת, as e. xlviii. 28, in construction with Kadesh, which place is on the south limit of Judah.

—as far as the river.—Besor, which runs into the sea not far from Gaza. See on Am. vi. 14.

20. —from the border.—The southern-border, mentioned in the foregoing verse. Mr. Lowth.

—the way that goeth.—The way by which men come to Hamath.

22. —shall cause it to fall.—Shall divide. See v. 14.

23. —sojourner.—When a proselyte.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

- 1 Now these are the names of the tribes : from the north end, towards the country by the way of Hethlon as one goeth to Hamath, Hazar-Enan, the border of Damascus northward, towards the country of Hamath : and let his 2 east side be the sea : Dan one. And by the border of 3 Dan, from the east side to the west side, Asher one. And by the border of Asher, from the east side even to the 4 west side, Naphtali one. And by the border of Naphtali,
 5 from the east side to the west side, Manasseh one. And by the border of Manasseh, from the east side to the west
 6 side, Ephraim one. And by the border of Ephraim, from the east side even to the west side, Reuben one.
 7 And by the border of Reuben, from the east side to the west side, Judah one.
 8 And by the border of Judah, from the east side to the west side, shall be the oblation which ye shall offer, five and twenty thousand cubits in breadth, and in length as one of the portions, from the east side to the west side :
 9 and the sanctuary shall be in the midst of it. The oblation which ye shall offer unto Jehovah shall be five and twenty thousand in length, and ten thousand in breadth.

1. —Hazar-Enan.—If before this word we supply, the boundary shall be, what follows will be nearly parallel to v. 17.

—and let &c.—One MS. reads וְהָיָה. See Vulg.

2. —from the east side to.—קְרִימָה and יַעַר are found in MSS. from this v. to the end of v. 7.

3. —to the west side.—יַעַר, twice, 5 or 6 MSS.

—one of the portions.—Given to the adjoining tribes.

9. —unto Jehovah.—For his sanctuary and priests. See c. xlv. 1.

- 10 And of these cubits shall be the holy oblation for the priests; toward the north five and twenty thousand in length, and toward the west ten thousand in breadth, and toward the east ten thousand in breadth, and toward the south five and twenty thousand in length: and the sanctuary of Jehovah shall be in the midst of it. "It shall be for the priests that are sanctified, [of] the sons of Zadoc, who kept my charge, who went not astray when the sons of Israel went astray, as the Levites went astray. And it shall be a most holy oblation for them, out of the oblation of the land, by the border of the Levites. And, over-against the border of the priests, the Levites shall have five and twenty thousand in length, and in breadth ten thousand: all the length shall be five and twenty thousand, and the breadth ten thousand. And they shall not sell of it; neither shall any one exchange or transfer the first fruits of the land: for they are holy unto Jehovah. And the five thousand which are left in breadth, overagainst the five and twenty thousand in length, shall be a profane place for

10. —in length.—Vulg. supplies longitudinis, which Houbigant thinks necessary.

8—10. "Comparing this with v. 15, it appears that the sanctuary was not to be in the city: which also appears from xlv. 1, 7." Secker: who also observes that והר המקדש, and the mountain of the sanctuary, is the reading of 6. Ar. at the close of v. 10.

11. —that are sanctified.—המקדשים, 6. Syr. Chald. המקודש, 3 MSS. and בני, 1 MS. But V. Houb. sanctuarium, and marg. Engl. vers. the sanctified portion shall be for the priests. Sacerdotibus destinatum. Dathius.

12. —oblation.—תרמה, 3 MSS.

—out of the oblation.—Out of the whole oblation.

13. —the Levites shall have.—The lxx and Ar. translate as if they read וללויים, as c. xlv. 5. We may translate, And as for the Levites, they shall have overagainst &c.

14. —or transfer.—יעביר, Keri, 7 MSS. and 3 originally.

15. —five thousand.—See c. xlv. 6.

- the city, to dwell in, and for the suburbs: and the city 16 shall be in the midst of it. And these shall be the measures thereof: the north side four thousand and five hundred, and the south side four thousand and five hundred, and the east side four thousand and five hundred, 17 and the west side four thousand and five hundred. And the suburbs of the city shall be toward the north two hundred and fifty, and toward the south two hundred and fifty, and toward the east two hundred and fifty, and 18 toward the west two hundred and fifty. And the residue in length, overagainst the holy oblation, shall be ten thousand eastward and ten thousand westward: it shall be overagainst the holy oblation; and the encrease thereof 19 shall be for food to them that serve the city. And as to him that serveth the city, he shall serve it out of all the 20 tribes of Israel. All the oblation shall be five and twenty thousand by five and twenty thousand: ye shall offer the

16. — and the south side four thousand and five hundred.—One חמש is wanting in MSS. edd.

—and the east side.—וּפָאֵת, 4 MSS.

According to Josephus, B. J. v. 4. 3. Jerusalem was thirty-three stadia in circuit: which the square here described does not greatly exceed.

17. — the suburbs.—The city and suburbs together make a square of five thousand.

18 — and the encrease thereof.—וְתֵבֶטֶת, 4 MSS. Keri.

—serve the city.—Perform burthensome offices of public utility: whether of a higher or lower kind. “Unto those citizens who are possessed of land of which they make arable land, or gardens.” Michaelis.

19. — he shall serve it.—יַעֲבֹדָהּ, 18 MSS. 1 ed.

20. — by five and twenty thousand.—This square is composed of three rectangles: that for the priests, v. 9, 25,000 by 10,000; that for the Levites, v. 13, 25,000 by 10,000: and that for city and suburbs, 5000 by 5000, v. 16, 17, adding 10,000 on each side, v. 18, making together a rectangle of 25,000 by 5000.

holy oblation four square, together with the possession of the city.

- 21 And the residue shall be for the prince, on this side and on that side of the holy oblation and of the possession of the city; overagainst the five and twenty thousand of the oblation toward the border of the land eastward, and westward overagainst the five and twenty thousand toward the border of the land westward, even overagainst the portions shall be for the prince: and the holy oblation, and the sanctuary of the house, shall be in the midst thereof.
- 22 Even from the possession of the Levites, and from the possession of the city which shall be in the midst, shall be for the prince: between the border of Judah and between the border of Benjamin shall be for the prince.
- 23 And as for the rest of the tribes, from the east side unto
- 24 the west side, Benjamin one. And by the border of Benjamin, from the east side unto the west side, Simeon
- 25 one. And by the border of Simeon, from the east side —together with the possession of the city.—So Nold. לֹא, §. 8. Compare c. xlv. 7.

21. —the border of the land.—So Houbigant. The portion of the prince ran eastward to the Jordan, or the Dead Sea, and westward to the great sea; retaining its breadth of 25,000 cubits from north to south.

—and westward.—One מִן seems superfluous; and yet there is no external authority for omitting either.

—the portions.—Utramque divisionem. Houb. Beside these [or, joining to these] portions, shall be that belonging to the prince. Mr. Lowth. The portions are those of Judah and Benjamin. Compare c. xlv. 7.

—in the midst thereof.—בְּתוֹכָהּ Keri, 2 MSS. one originally and perhaps another, and Bibl. Venet. marg. The whole oblation, and of course the temple, shall lie between the two portions belonging to the prince.

22. —the Levites.—Including the priests: as c. xlv. 15.

—which shall be in the midst.—Houbigant reads אֲשֶׁר בְּתוֹךְ; and observes that most of the versions omit אֲשֶׁר. Chald. alone renders it.

- 26 unto the west side, Issachar one. And by the border of Issachar, from the east side unto the west side, Zebulon
 27 one. And by the border of Zebulon, from the east side 28 unto the west side, Gad one. And by the border of Gad, at the south side southward, the border shall be even from Tamar to the waters of strife in Kadesh, as far as the 29 river by the great sea. This is the land which ye shall cause to fall for an inheritance unto the tribes of Israel;
 and these are their portions, saith the Lord Jehovah.
- 30 And these are the goings out of the city: on the north side shall be four thousand five hundred cubits by measure:
 31 and the gates of the city shall be after the names of the tribes of Israel, three gates northward; one gate of 32 Reuben, one gate of Judah, one gate of Levi. And on the east side shall be four thousand and five hundred: and three gates; one gate of Joseph, one gate of Benjamin,

25. — Issachar.—This tribe was anciently placed between Zebulon to the north and the half tribe of Manasseh to the south; and was divided from the tribe of Simeon, not only by the half tribe of Manasseh, but by the tribes of Ephraim Dan and Benjamin.

28. — from Tamar.—See on c. xlvii. 19.

29. — for an inheritance.—בְּנִחֻלָּה, 1 MS. as c. xlv. 1. xlvii. 22. Chald. prefixes ל.

“Since there is no doubt but that other things which are said in these chapters relating to the temple and the land of Israel are of a prophetic nature, it seems safer to determine that the above-mentioned measures were observed both in building the temple and in assigning the lots to the tribes; though we know not how these things were done, because there is a great chasm in the sacred history from the time of Ezra to that of the Maccabees.” Houbigant.

These portions may have been given to some of the twelve tribes, as they returned: and may hereafter be given to such as return when the Jewish people shall be restored to their own land, and who know their tribe either by tradition or by the instruction of inspired prophets.

32. — one gate of Joseph.—וְשַׁעַר, 7 MSS. all the ancients. There being a gate named after Levi, the gate of Joseph includes Ephraim and Manasseh the sons of Joseph.

one gate of Dan. And on the south side shall be four thousand and five hundred by measure : and three gates ; one gate of Simeon, one gate of Issachar, one gate of 34 Zebulon. And on the west side four thousand and five hundred : and their gates three ; one gate of Gad, one 35 gate of Asher, one gate of Naphtali. It shall be round about eighteen thousand cubits : and the name of the city from that day shall be, JEHOVAH is THERE.

---

34. And on the west side.—וּפֶאֶת 4 MSS. and 5 originally : all the ancients.

—and their gates three.—וּשְׁעֵיהֶם, 1 MS. ó. MS. Al. ed. Breit. Ar. Syr. and three gates, as in the preceding verses. וּשְׁעֵרֵיהֶם, and their gates, Vulg. But Chald. as Hebr.

35. —eighteen thousand.—A square, each side of which was four thousand five hundred. It must be observed that the square is considered throughout these descriptions as a perfect figure. See also Rev. xxi. 16.

—from that day.—Houbigant thinks that יהוה was omitted from its similitude to יהוה, which follows. See Arab. Vulg.

—JEHOVAH is THERE.—Jehovah occasionally protected Jerusalem ; he filled it with glory by his visible Representative the Messiah ; and he will gloriously manifest himself in this city at its restoration.

INDEX OF THINGS.

---

- Abbreviation "ב for בית and בני page 10
 ————— "י for יהודה, 212
 ————— for יהוה, 256
- Addition in δ. 22, 58, 155, 196, 203, 210, 245, 250
 ——— in Syr. 137, 142
 ——— crept into the text, 7, 8, 15, 66, 136
- Adultery, how punished, 73
 Alcohole, a paint for the eyes, 127
 Allegory, vii, viii, xxxiv, 174, 281
 Altar, God's table, 223
 ——— its dimensions, 260
- Amulets, 58
 Apostrophe, xxxvii
 Aradus, 146
 Ariel, why the altar was so called, 260
 Arm, in what sense uncovered, 19
 Armour, why burnt, x, 221
 Arrows, divination by, 111
 Arvad, 146
 Asphaltite lake, 279
 Barsom, a bundle of twigs, 38
 Bath, a measure, 270
 Bedouines, 67
 Berothah, 282
 Beryl, why called tarshish, 7
 Besor, 283
 Books, ancient, 12
 Bread, staff of, 20
 Caldron, why a dignified image, 45, 129
 Calneh, 151
 Canaan, a fertile country, 95, 219
 Canneh, 151
 Cedar, 144
 Chebar, ii, 1, 14
 Children, punished for the idolatry of their fathers, 84
 Chilmad, 151
 Chittim, 145
 Clothed with trembling, shame, &c. 142
 Comparisons, xxxiii, decorum in them, 94
 Conjectural criticisms, 60, 112
 Copper mines, in Caucasus 148
 Coptic MS. i, 98, 138, 159, 161, 192, 209, 217
 Cor, a measure, 271
 Corsica, 145
 Covering the face, 50
 ——— the mouth, 132
- Crocodile, 162, 179
 Cubit, 235
 Dan, 150
 Darkness for Calamity, 198
 Dead Sea, 279
 Dedan, 137, 148, 150
 Description, xxxviii
 Diblath, 26
 Distributive affix, 45
 Divination by arrows, 111
 Dung, used for fuel, 20
 Eagle, parable of the, 78
 East, worshipping toward the, 37
 Eden, a city, 151
 Editions, differ in words, 30
 Egypt, 161, 165, 169, 178
 Elam 184
 Elegy, xl
 Elisha, 146
 Encyclopedie, xlix
 En-eqlaim, 280
 Engeddi, 280
 Ephah, 270
 Eyes, painting them, 127
 Fable, xxxv
 Fertility of the holy land, 95, 219
 Fire, passing through it, 69
 Forest, used for a city or kingdom, 104
 Future tense in Hebrew, frequentative, 9, 64, 196
 Gammadim, 147
 Gardens, how watered in the east, 173
 Gebal, 146
 Gloss, 35, 44, 101
 Gomer, 216
 Ground, sitting on it a posture of grief, 142
 Hamath, 282
 Hand, to lift it up, i. e. to swear, 95
 ——— right and left used for north and south, 74, 112
 Hands, smiting them together, 109
 Haran, 151
 Hauran, 282
 Hazar Enan, 282
 Hazar-batticon, 282
 Hebrew language, xxiii—li
 ——— books lost, xxiv
 Helbon, wine of, 149
 Hethlon, 281
 High places, 69, 70, 204
 Hin, 19

- Homer, a measure, 271
 Horn, 167, 171
 Hymn, xli
 Javan, 147, 150
 Idolatry, committed by the Israelites in Egypt, 97, 120
 Jerusalem, its circuit, 269
 Infinitive mood, its use, 6
 Inkhorn, how carried, 39
 Kedar, 150
 Koa, 123
 Lectisternium, 127
 Lions, how taken, 92
 Litotes, 87, 99
 Lud, 146
 Magog, a country, 215
 Maneh, 270
 Manuscripts, differ in words, 11, 29, 37,
   47, 56, 200, 202, &c.
 Mark, made in the form of the ancient thau, 40
 Measures, Hebrew, 235
 Meshech, 147
 Metaphor, xxxi
 Migdol, 164
 Minnith, 149
 Mount on which Ezekiel's temple stood,
   254
 Mountains, places of worship, 24, 85
 No. a city, 170
 Noph, 169
 North, kings of the, 187
   — denotes the Chaldeans, 2
 Nose jewel, 68
 Number, men of. For few, 51
 Ode, xlii
 Omission in 6. 88, 136
   — in Hebr. 176
 On, a city, 170
 Onomatopœia, in Hebrew, xxiii
 Pachom. MS. i. 26, 38, 161, 278
 Panic, a kind of grain, 149
 Parable, xxxvi, 105
 Parallelism, xxxi
 Particles, Hebrew, xxvii
 Past tense used for the future, 171
 Pathros, 165
 Pekod, 123
 Periphrasis, xxxi, 176
 Person, the third plural active used for the passive voice, 154
 Phibeseth, 170
 Phut, 146
 Points, cardinal, how determined, 74
 Pomegranate, 92
 Preposition, understood, 87
 Prophets, said to do what they foretel, 182
 Prophetesses, 57, 58
 Prosopopœia, xxxvii
 Proverb, 51, 84
 Raamah, 151
 Repetition, in the spirit of the ancients, 49
   — by mistake, in the text, 66
 Rhos, 215
 Sabbath, how a sign, 97
 Sacrifices, human, 69, 126
   — feasts on them, 223
 Sanctuary, 262
 Scythia, 185, 215
 Senir, 144
 Septuagint, its punctuation corrected, 138,
   145
 Sepulchres, ancient, 183, 186
 Sheba, 150
 Shepherds, heads of the people, 195
 Shekel, 19
 Shoa, 123
 Sibraim, 282
 Sidon, 159
 Sign, 49
 Similitudes, decorum in them, 94
 Sin, a city, 170
 Sitting on the ground, a posture of grief,
   142
 Slaves, 147
 Smiting on the thigh, 109
 Smiting the hands together, 109, 117
 Sodom, its situation, 76
 Status constructus, 109, 170
 Sublimity in the Hebrew scriptures, xlv—xlviii
 Swearing, the gesture used in it, 95
 Syene, 164
 Syrus Hexaplaris, 58, 110, 148
 Tahapanes, 170
 Tamar, 283
 Tarshish, 7, 147, 217
 Tel-abib, 14
 Teman, 137
 Temple, its vestibule eastward, 37, c.
   xlvii. 1.
   — Ezekiel's, 225—233, 254, 258
   — its law different from the Mosaical, 272, 274, 276
 Tenses, Hebrew, xxvii
 Thammuz, a month, 1
 Togarmagh, 148
 Tree, green and dry: the righteous and the wicked, 105
 Tubal, 147, 185
 Tyre, 138, 139, 141, 152, 166
 Uncircumcised, a term of contempt, 155,
   178
 Usury, why forbidden to the Israelites, 85
 Uzal, 150
 Vadan, 150
 Versions of O. T. xxix, xxx
 Vine, grows very high on trees, 93
 Wine, of Helbon, 149
 Zedad, 282
 Ziphron, 282
 Zoan, 170

INDEX OF PERSONS.

- Addison, xlviii, 162
 Aholah, 120
 Aholibah, 120
 Ammianus Marcellinus, 2
 Ammon, 114, 115
 Appian, 139
 Apries, 162, 164, 188
 Arbuthnot, 270
 Arrian, 194
 Ascham, 96
 Athenæus, 149
 Aulus Gellius, 194
 Berosus, 164
 Blayney, xl
 Bochart, 3, 145, 185
 Cæsar, 149
 Cappellus, passim
 Casaubon, 149
 Cherubim, 4, 44, 157
 Cicero, xxi, 82
 Cimmerians, 147
 Cocceius, 2, 13, 55, 100, 217
 Cornelius à Lapide, 131, 267, 268
 Curtius, Quintus, 141
 Daniel, 62, 154
 Dathius, passim
 David used for the Messiah, 199, 213
 De Rossi, passim
 Desvœux, 187
 Dimock, i, 31, 35, 38, 48, 50, 59, 143, 149, 153, 158, 172, 219
 Diodorus Siculus, 36
 Dionysius Halicarn, 70
 Doederlein, xlv, 142
 Eichhorn, i, xv—xx, 60, 226
 Euripides, 67, 95
 Ezekiel, history of him and his times, i—v.
 ——— his character as a writer, vi—xxiii
 ——— signification of the name, 13
 ——— why sometimes unrefined, 65, 120
 ——— an imitator, 125, 143, 163, 182, 193, 223
 ——— negligent of accuracy, 174
 ——— observes decorum in his images, 94
 ——— his division of the land, 281, 287
 Galen, 66
 Glassius, 199
 Gog, 215
 Goimer, 216
 Green, xl, xlv
 Grotius, vi, xxv, 117, 151, 152, 157, 281
 Gussetius, 13, 56, 80, 179, 180, 265
 Hallet, 103
 Hare, xliii
 Harmer, 56, 57, 127, 146, 162, 194
 Herodotus, xxx, 100, 161, 188
 Hesiod, 78
 Homer, xxx, 24, 109, 133
 Horace, 51, 57, 78, 87, 99, 152
 Houbigant, passim
 Howard, 20
 Howes, liv, 172, 178, 185, 186, 188, 195, 201
 Huetius, 139
 Hyde, 215
 Jerom, 153
 Johnson, xxvii
 Josephus, 96, 140, 170, 244, 254
 Ithobal, 140, 154
 Jubb, 204
 Justin, 96
 Juvenal, 12
 Kennicott, passim
 Le Clerc, xxvi—xxviii
 Livy, 28, 127
 Lowman, 220
 Lowth, Bishop, vi.—xii. xxiv, xxviii, xlix, 173, 174, 183
 Lowth, Mr. 16, 61, 65, 67, 163, 287
 Lucretius, 20, 83
 Lud, 146
 Lycophron, 100
 Marsham, v. 138, 161
 Martial, 75
 Mason, xliii
 Maundrell, 96
 Mede, Joseph, 215, 257
 Megasthenes, 165
 Meibomius, 172
 Messiah, 114
 Michaelis, J. D. v. et passim
 Milton, xliii, 6, 36, 43, 100
 Moerlius, 29, 180

- Moses, xxx, xlix
 Newton, Bishop, 139, 145, 165, 166,
     280
 Paley, 95
 Peters, xxx
 Pharaoh Hophra, 188
 Pliny, 184, 215
 Plutarch, 145
 Pocock, 140
 Polybius, 24
 Porphyry, 38
 Potter, xliii, 112
 Pradus, 3, 92,
 Prideaux, 164, 166
 Ptolemy, 2
 Robertson, xliv, 70
 Russel, 56
 Sabceans, 127
 Sale, 112
 Scaliger, 161
 Schnurrer, 155
 Schultens, 121, 132
 Scylax, 141
 Scythians, 185, 215
 Secker, v. 226—233, dissertation and notes: et passim
 Shaw, 39, 57, 96
 Son of God, Israel so called, 108
 Son of man, 10
 Sophocles, 38
 Spencer, 127
 Tacitus, 96
 Taylor, 4, 17
 Thammuz, 37
 Theocritus, 51
 Thucydides, 186
 Tott, 127
 Toup, 100
 Vatablus, 130
 Villalpandus, 241
 Virgil, 2, 37, 57, 66, 67, 96, 100, 107,
     133, 145, 168, 186, 251
 Vitringa, 225
 Voltaire, 223
 Warburton, xxiv
 Woide, i.
 Xenophon, 24
 Zabians, 127

INDEX OF TEXTS EXPLAINED.

Gen. xlix. 10 . . . . .	114	Psalm cxiv. 1, 2, 3 . . . . .	xlii, xliii
Deut. xxxii. 5, 6 . . . . .	xxxvii	— cxxiv. 5 . . . . .	xxxii
Judg. v. 28—30 . . . . .	xxxvii	— cxxxix. 15 . . . . .	xxxii
2 Sam. i. 19, 21, 25 . . . . .	xl	— cxliv. 8 . . . . .	95
2 Kings xxv. 3 . . . . .	138	Isaiah v. 1—6 . . . . .	xxxvi
Job xxxix. 25 . . . . .	xl	— xiv. 4—27 . . . . .	xliii—xlvi
Psalm lxxx. 11, 15 . . . . .	xxxiv	— xxiii. 14 . . . . .	x
— ciii. 5, 11, 20 . . . . .	xli, xlii	Lament. i. 12 . . . . .	xl

INDEX OF HEBREW WORDS

TREATED OF IN THE NOTES.

-
-
- |                                       |  |
|---------------------------------------|--|
| אחרית posterity, offspring 124        | מלוא fulness 51                                  |
| אי a maritime region 221              | מצבה a fortress, a citadel 141                   |
| גביש large hailstones 55              | מקדש a refuge 47                                 |
| אנוש wretched man 133                 | מקרוֹב shortly 28                                |
| אֹרז cedar 144                        | משי silk 67                                      |
| ארמון why a palace 91                 | משע suppling, or cleansing 66                    |
| אשם a sacrilegious offence 137        | מתלכח infolding itself 2                         |
| ברא to cut asunder limb by limb 129   | נפש self 15                                      |
| ברם rich apparel 151                  | סינ dross 118                                    |
| בשר body 42                           | סלון a thorn 11                                  |
| בתק to cleave asunder limb by limb 73 | עבתיִם thick boughs 173                          |
| נב a raised place 70                  | ערנ a rill 80                                    |
| נבה a strake of a wheel 7             | עצם a joint 130                                  |
| נוח to break forth 179                | עצמותם themselves 186                            |
| נולג a wheel-carriage 123             | עשה to deal with, to punish 104, 175             |
| דור why to pile 130                   | פננ panic 149                                    |
| דיק why a tower 17                    | פקודה prefect 39                                 |
| דרג a steep place 219                 | פרח to escape 58                                 |
| זרע to plant 79                       | קבל a battering ram 140                          |
| חזה a pointed iron collar 90          | קבר to bury 163                                  |
| חיצ a wall 55                         | קח the infinitive from לקח 79                    |
| חלל slaughter 109                     | קל light, used with מ 37                         |
| חמל to place affection on 133         | קלקל to mingle 112                               |
| חסן why treasure 119                  | שואה a storm 217                                 |
| חפץ to have pleasure: how used 88     | שלה to shoot forth. verb neut. 173               |
| חרב a mattock, a pickaxe 140          | שלט a quiver 147                                 |
| חשם to stop the nostrils 222          | צנה a pointed shield 123                         |
| חשמל amber, or a compound metal 3     | צפה gore 180                                     |
| טבר middle, height 217                | צפצפה much care 79                               |
| יד a place, or trait 111              | ראה with ל to behold 7                           |
| יניע fruit of labour 124              | with ב to behold with some affection of mind 158 |
| כדכד a sparkling gem 149              | רגל a leg 3                                      |
| כסה to cover, used with על 131        | רוח the will 5                                   |
| כלל excellent wares 151               | רקח to prepare as a compound 131                 |
| כתף side 136                          | תעש badger's skin, or the name of a colour 67    |
| לכן concerning this matter 64         | תפל untempered mortar 55                         |
| מחם strokes of a battering ram 140    |  |
| מכרה rise 65                          |  |

LONDON :
BRADBURY AND EVANS, PRINTERS, WHITEFRIARS.

A LITERAL TRANSLATION
OF
THE PROPHETS,
FROM
ISAIAH TO MALACHI.

WITH NOTES,
CRITICAL, PHILOLOGICAL, AND EXPLANATORY.

BY LOWTH, BLAYNEY, NEWCOME, WINTLE, HORSLEY, ETC.

IN FIVE VOLUMES.

VOL. IV.—DANIEL.

BY THOMAS WINTLE, B.D., RECTOR OF BRIGHTWELL.

A New Edition.

LONDON:
PRINTED FOR THOMAS TEGG & SON, CHEAPSIDE;
R. GRIFFIN & CO., GLASGOW; AND
TEGG, WISE, & CO., LOWER ABBEY STREET, DUBLIN.

---

MDCCCXXXVI.

THE PROPHET DANIEL.

DANIEL,

AN

IMPROVED VERSION ATTEMPTED;

WITH

A PRELIMINARY DISSERTATION,

AND NOTES

CRITICAL, HISTORICAL, AND EXPLANATORY.

BY THOMAS WINTLE, B.D.

RECTOR OF BRIGHTWELL, IN BERKSHIRE,

AND LATE FELLOW OF PEMBROKE COLLEGE.

LONDON:

PRINTED FOR THOMAS TEGG AND SON,
73, CHEAPSIDE.

R. GRIFFIN & CO., GLASGOW; AND TEGG, WISE, & CO., DUBLIN.

MDCCCXXXVI.

LONDON :
BRADBURY & EVANS, PRINTERS,
WHITEFRIARS.

PRELIMINARY DISSERTATION.

---

THE Providence of God, ever attentive to the welfare of the whole creation, hath contrived a great variety of methods wherewith to exercise the skill and industry of men. One distinguished property there is which belongs to them all, that they discover the marks of sovereign wisdom, and the more they are studied and explored, the brighter traces of this wisdom are manifested. This truth has often been acknowledged by those who have with the minutest care and most exact attention examined into the works of God. And it is one great presumption in favour of his word, that the like investigation which recommends his works, strongly pleads in behalf of this also, and the proportion of our deepest researches in both cases, if conducted with suitable fairness and candour, will redound nearly to the proportional credit of each.

It must be confessed that the books of the New Testament have by many ingenious Writers of this nation, in a variety of forms, been surveyed and examined; and perhaps we may attribute it in a considerable measure to this diligent attention, that the Christian Religion ought certainly not to be considered as in a declining state amongst us, but is generally received by the Patrons of Learning and the most enlightened Advocates for Truth, with that zeal and regard which are suitable to its divine Authority. The books of the Old Testament contribute in a very great degree to illustrate and confirm the Truths and Doctrines of the New: Our learned Men have therefore begun not long since to revise these with that close attention which they always deserved, and to which the discoveries of later times have given them a more especial title. Not that there have been wanting persons of ability who have long since explained and illustrated the ancient Scriptures, but their free spirits were constrained and tied down by some inveterate prejudices, such as the absolute Incorruptibility of the Hebrew Text, and the close adherence to the Masoretic Punctuation as essential to the Language, from which more recent authors have been happily emancipated.

The Writings of the Prophets have this peculiar advantage, that by holding forth matter which is constantly receiving its completion, they daily furnish the Christian world with new occurrences of concern; so that, exclusive of all the beauties and ornaments of composition, which furnish a very wide field of useful entertainment, they serve also continually to establish the Christian in his most holy Faith, by supplying the argument from Prophecy with a constantly increasing evidence. To set these writings in a clearer light, and to offer them to the world in a more improved English Dress, has been the intent and endeavour of some distinguished modern publications.

The late Lord Bishop of London first designed the plan, and has executed his share of it in the most masterly manner. In the preliminary Dissertation to his Isaiah the reader may find the whole scheme fully delineated, the reasons and motives that induced this pious Prelate to the undertaking, and the tracks he pursued in the execution. So happily was this first part finished, that it was feared the very completion of it might prevent the further advancement of the plan, as few writers could expect to equal so great a master. However not many years after the learned

Dr. Blayney, now Canon of Christ Church, and Royal Professor of Hebrew in Oxford, published the Prophecy and Lamentations of Jeremiah in the like form, and with very considerable success. He was followed by my most ingenious and much honoured friend Dr. Newcome, the present Bishop of Waterford, who favoured the world with a Translation and Notes, first on the Minor Prophets, and afterwards on Ezekiel. He has somewhat varied from the form of his Predecessors, but yet the general design has been executed with that comprehensive conciseness, and copious learning, which might be expected from the pen of this classical writer.

Thus have the Works of three of the Greater and all of the Lesser Prophets been attended to with due deference. I wish the same learned Prelate, who has had so large a share in this business, could have found leisure for a Comment upon the only remaining part, the Book of Daniel, instead of recommending it to the Author of these Sheets. However, in consequence of such recommendation, he turned his thoughts to it, and after having read and noted it with much care and study, at length determined to revise and arrange his Notes, in order to present them to the Public, if nothing should previously appear that might supersede their design: Such was his general intention.

But before we proceed to a more particular detail, it will naturally and justly be expected that some account should be given of the Book itself, and of the Author of it, that the reader may be better prepared for a minute examination of its contents.

1.—As to THE AUTHOR: Daniel was of the tribe of Judah *, and of very illustrious, if not of royal Descent †.

* Chap. i. v. 6.

† Chap. i. v. 4. It will be needless to point out the reference to every particular: from this first Chapter the chief of the following Character is taken, and is in the main confirmed by Josephus in his Antiq. x. 10. Ed. Hud.

Josephus * favours the latter opinion, and says he was of the family of Zedekiah, who was the last king of Judah before the destruction of the city and temple of Jerusalem by Nebuzaradan, the commander in chief of the Chaldean forces. At the beginning of the captivity he was carried away to Babylon, and was probably at that time not more than eighteen years † of age. He was possessed of extraordinary endowments both of body and mind. The comeliness and strength of his person recommended him to the particular notice of the chief chamberlain amongst the Babylonians; and these qualities were increased by his habitual temperance and abstinence, insomuch that his figure was one of the most graceful of all that were appointed for the immediate attendance on king Nebuchadnezzar.

But still the strength and habits of the mind must form the character; and these in Daniel were of a very superior cast, whether considered as the gifts of nature, or as the acquisitions of well-applied industry. An excellent Spirit ‡ was in him, which directed him to all the proper means of knowledge, and the right improvement of them; so that he became master of all the literature of the Chaldeans, and was ten times superior to all the Magi or Wise Men of the East. He was not only renowned for secular wisdom, but favoured with divine illuminations; had extraordinary insight into visions, and discernment in the interpretation of dreams. Qualified with these abilities he was admitted to the special favour of several very powerful monarchs, of Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, Darius, and Cyrus: And hence he is presumed not only to have resided in the court at Babylon, but occasionally also in those of Media and * Antiq. x. 10. Ed. Hud.

† At ver. 4. he and his companions are called in the Heb. ילדים. Josephus calls them παιδες ubi supra.

‡ I have rendered this passage, an enlarged mind was in him, Chap. v. 12, as thinking it more agreeable to the sense of the words, but the meaning in either form amounts to much the same.

Persia ; thus finely illustrating that judicious aphorism of Solomon, Prov. xxii. 29.

Seest thou a man ready at dispatch in his business,
He shall be placed before Kings, he shall not be placed before the obscure.

Nor was he less distinguished for his rare virtues, than for the extensive improvement of his understanding. His meekness, humility, and disinterestedness, his attachment to his friends, and ardent affection for his country, his fortitude in speaking the truth to kings, and the dexterity of his address in offering it in the most courteous and pleasing manner, are traits that are discernible upon the first attention to his character. But above all his eminent piety, like an illustrious radiance, strikes through the whole of his book ; and we need not wonder that he should be such an especial Favourite of Heaven, who is every where and at all times solicitous to display his gratitude to the God of Heaven, and to aspire constantly to the due acknowledgment of that universal Power, whose Will is guided by the most bounteous Beneficence, and exercised in the most diffusive manifestations of transcendent mercy.

The Scripture has given us but a short and unconnected account of this excellent man ; but short and scattered as it is, we find in it some of the strongest lineaments of real character, and the most beautiful marks of finished life. And in particular his great wisdom and exemplary piety are celebrated by his fellow-captive Ezekiel*, in that simple but bold energy of expression, which characterises the style of that ardent Writer. Daniel lived to a good old age†, to see the restoration of his captive brethren, and to enjoy the favour of that Monarch who restored them to * Chap. xiv. 14. and xxviii. 3. In this last place, " Art thou wiser than Daniel ? " seems to have the appearance of a proverbial expression. See Peters on Job, p. i. sect. 12.

† At least to the third year of Cyrus, Chap. x. 1.

their beloved Zion. Some think that he returned with them to Jerusalem, but neither Ezra nor Nehemiah mention this circumstance, so that the opinion of Josephus is more probable, that he died amongst the Medes*. Such is the example which the Scriptures afford us in the life of this holy Man; his character as a Prophet will fall more properly under the next point of discussion.

II.—HIS BOOK: It is a singular circumstance that the language of this is of two distinct kinds; which however may fairly be accounted for without any imputation on the credit of the Book, or the judgment of the Author. The people of the Jews during the time of the captivity had in a great measure been compelled to a conformity with the manners and customs of Babylon: Not only the proper Names† of several of their most eminent persons were altered, but their language had received into it many new words from the Chaldean: even their letters were changed, and the Chaldee character assumed in their stead. It is generally agreed that this is the character in which our present Bibles are printed, and that the original Hebrew was what is now called the Samaritan‡, of which the only genuine remains is the Samaritan Pentateuch. The Prophet Daniel had been early taught the language§ of the Chaldeans, and from a long residence in the country may be presumed to have been well acquainted with it;

* Some are of opinion that he was buried in Susan, the capital of Persia. See this opinion ingeniously supported by Dr. Prideaux, Con. p. i. b. 3. According to Epiphanius he died at Babylon; but the more probable account is, that he was interred at Ecbatane, in Media, where he built a Tower, as Josephus informs us, of very elegant and exquisite workmanship, used as a sepulture for the Kings of the Medes, Persians, and Parthians. Ant. x. xi. 7. Ed. Hud. However the authority of Benjamin of Tudela may be unfavourable to this opinion, yet I scarce think it sufficient to overturn the testimony of Josephus.

† Chap. i. 7.

‡ See Walton's Proleg. xi. prefixed to the London Polyg. Prid. Con. p. i. b. 5. §. 5. Scaliger's Animadv. on the Chron. of Enseb. &c. The more modern Syriac or the language that was used at Antioch and other parts of Syria, is a sort of dialect of the ancient Syriac or Chaldee, and has a different Character.

§ Chap. i. 4.

his Book also seems to have been designed not only for the Jews who returned from the captivity, but for those either Jews or Israelites who remained at Babylon, and not without regard to the benefit of the Chaldeans themselves, whose annals might receive confirmation from his work, and be alleged as vouchers of its authenticity. Now what could be more natural than that an author thus circumstanced should contrive his work in a manner the most extensively useful; and with this view should compose a part of it in the language of that country wherein he dwelt, and whose character he used, and the other part in the original language of the Church of God.

Neither is the objection to the authenticity of this Chaldee part well founded, that there are many words introduced into it of an apparently spurious origin, and which seem borrowed from the Greeks or other more western nations. For admitting the fact to be as represented, it is common to most languages to adopt terms of art from others, and therefore is no more than might be expected in the instance before us. But may it be farther observed, that in general the form and construction of these particular nouns is such, that they may as reasonably be presumed to have been borrowed by those foreign nations, as to have been exported from them. And it should be well remembered that before the navigation to India by the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean was understood, the treasures of that country were brought to Chaldea as early as the days of Semiramis; and Niniveh first, and afterwards Babylon, were the grand marts to which men usually resorted from the western countries for this kind of merchandize.

Nor were there wanting other methods of communication between the Greeks and the people of the East. Edom, on the borders of Palestine, was a city of great trade and flourishing commerce till the time of King David; and afterwards Tyre succeeded it, and was the most flourishing commercial city in the world: Ezekiel in his 27th Chapter * has left us a very valuable memoir of the many and various nations that traded with this famous city. Numerous voyages by sea, as well as expeditions by land, were made in the reign of King Solomon, and the traffic of the people of Israel must at that time have been very considerable: And where the communications between distant nations must be so frequent and constant, it is but natural to expect that somewhat of the languages of the different peoples might be incorporated into each other. It has been also observed by most of the Historians of credit, as quoted by Sir John Marsham, that many colonies of Greeks * Having mentioned this curious passage, I cannot help taking notice here of the high sense I entertain of its excellence. Considered in a geographical, and at the same time a poetical light, perhaps there is nothing to be found equal to it in its kind among all the Treasures of Antiquity. In the former respect it may be looked upon as a sort of key to open to later times the knowledge of the original peopling of the world. Most of the names mentioned in it agree with those in the Mosaic account, and the settlement of the descendants of Noah's sons have by means of this piece been traced out as low as the period of the Babylonish Captivity. At this time knowledge was generally disseminated, the history of the people of Israel became dispersed among the nations of the world, and one advantage resulting from the captivity was, the publishing throughout the earth by this Prophecy of Ezekiel the real origin of nations, and the primeval dispersion of men.

In order to show its excellency in a poetical view, let it be compared with Homer's ships in the second book of the Iliad, or with Virgil's warriors in the seventh Æneid; and I suppose in extent or simplicity of communication the discerning reader will not scruple to give the preference to the sacred Bard. In both the Greek and the Latin Poems the narrative is not only introduced with a pompous exordium, but continued in each to a very considerable length; whereas in Ezekiel a far wider extent of country, and some of the distinguishing characteristics of most of the nations upon earth, are comprised in less compass than a single chapter. Not only the isles of Chittim and the distant coasts of the Mediterranean, but the several kingdoms of Asia, and even the interior as well as more known parts of Africa, are in a kind of regular succession summoned as attendants on this commercial city, to join in the lamentation of Tyre, and to behold with general astonishment its fatal and final catastrophe.

Milton, who had not only the pagan but the sacred writers in his view, has improved this advantage in a similar instance with the arrangement before us, in the first book of his Paradise Lost. His subject is the wide and in fact almost universal diffusion of idolatry; and he summons the idols for all the earth as a part of the Conclave of Satan, those ——— who durst fix

Their seats long after next the seat of God,
Their altars by his altar, Gods a-lor'd,
Among the nations round ———

And hence his imagination has ample range, the whole world, except Judea, being before him, and falling within the compass of his description; which however capacious and vast, or finely executed, cannot but be accounted both horrible and painful migrated into Asia some hundreds of years before the captivity, and this circumstance, together with the connexion between the Asiatic kingdoms on the confines of Greece, must facilitate the transition of technical words at least from one country to the other. But more notice will be taken of this matter when we meet with some of these exotic terms, as we shall speak also again of the Chaldee language at our entrance upon it in the following Notes.

THE substance or matter contained in this book has been commonly divided into two classes; the Historical in the six former Chapters, and the Prophetical in the six latter. Not but that there are visions or predictions in the historical part; yet these were not offered to Daniel, but to other persons, the circumstances of which he has recorded. As I intend to speak more at large on this part, I shall beg leave to invert the order, and offer a few observations first on the Prophetical.

Now the well-known objections of Porphyry * from the clearness, exact agreement with their completion, and such like peculiar marks of full evidence in these predictions, have been long since refuted by Eusebius †, Jerom ‡, and other writers; and however they may have been revived by modern Jews and Infidels in similar forms, and with as deeply rooted prejudices, yet it surely must be an argument of temper strongly disposed to contention and cavil, to presume that those Scriptures were written after the events which they record, because the holy Spirit of God had vouchsafed to point them out in so minute a manner.

* Celsus and Porphyry were both very learned writers and enemies to Christianity; the former an Epicurean that lived in the time of Marcus Antoninus the philosopher, and probably reached the reign of Aurelius, was ably answered and refuted by Origen: he is placed by Dr. Lardner in the second century, about the year 176; the latter was born at Tyre, in the year of Christ 233, was commonly classed with Celsus, and his twelfth book was written against the Prophet Daniel.

† Bishop of Caesarea in his 18th, 19th, and 20th Vol. according to Jerom.

‡ See his preface on Daniel, written about the year 407 after Christ.

He to whom all his works are known from the foundation of the world could certainly foresee every contingency, and foretel every circumstance, that would concur in their accomplishment.

Besides this book in its present form was received into the Canon of Scripture most probably from the earliest times; according to Josephus* was exhibited to Alexander, in part at least, within 200 years after the death of Daniel; and, together with the other Scriptures, was translated by the LXX † many years before the days of Antiochus; which translation was well known in the age of Jerom, and referred to by him ‡, although not come down to us. For as to the edition lately published from a MS. in the Chigian Library at Rome, though it contains much useful information, yet it has often such evident marks of a Paraphrase or other similar production, that it cannot claim the least pretension to a pure and unadulterated translation of the first authority. Since the times of Antiochus, as has been justly observed §, it is impossible that such a work as this of Daniel could have been forged. Such a supposition cannot be entertained, without the most palpable * Ant. xi. 8. Porphyry was in the wrong to deny the genuineness of the Book of Daniel, which had been always received by the Jews, as we perceive from the books of Maccabees and Josephus, and from our Evangelists. Lardner's Works 8vo. Vol. ii. p. 201.

† Some persons may perhaps think this argument of no weight, or that it cannot be supported. Though what is now advanced may be sufficiently established without it, yet the reader will find reasons for the mention of it in the latter part of this Dissertation, to which I must refer him.

‡ Bishop Chandler points out fifteen places wherein Jerom refers to the LXX of Daniel, and gives out of it different Readings from the Version of Theodotion, and sometimes from those of Aquila and Symmachus. Vind. of the Def. Chap. i. Sect. 3.

§ From a careful attendance to the circumstances of the Jewish affairs, no portion of time from Antiochus to Herod can be assigned for forging such a book as Daniel's with any success. Nor could it be forged in Judea, but the far greater body of the Jews that remained in Babylon must be alarmed by it; and after Alexander the Great, and especially after Antiochus Epiphanes the Jews were dispersed in such numbers throughout Egypt and Asia Minor, that the whole nation must be consenting to the fraud, or it could not be contrived in one place, and not be opposed by all the rest. See Vind. of Def. Chap. ii. Sect. 1. See also Dr. Halifax (late Bishop of St. Asaph's) second Sermon at the Warburtonian, Lectures, where are many just and well-arranged arguments in favour of the authenticity of this book.

violation of the faith of History, without the maintenance of such principles as would equally militate against the code of the Old Testament. We must therefore receive the whole book as it now stands, according to the general sense of Jews * and Christians, according to the express words of Josephus †, who asserts it to be of divine authority, and according to the language of our Blessed Saviour himself, who cites the book of Daniel, and expressly calls the Author of it a Prophet ‡.

And if we reflect on the nature of his predictions we shall certainly be inclined to consider him as of the first rank among the Prophets. The Revelations of this Prophetical part are only four, all of which were communicated to David himself, with such an attention to the minuter circumstances or punctualities of place and time, as no other Prophet had been favoured with. The former of these is indeed of a more general nature, and being a sort of epitome of the others, and written in Chaldee, may be presumed to have been designed for more general benefit; the second appears to be confined to the Persian and Grecian empires, yet with a distant respect to subsequent matters in later times. The third at Chap. ix. is intended chiefly to typify and point out the coming of the Messiah, and its attendant circumstances; part of which Josephus § himself applies to the times of the Romans: And the last seems to unfold some of the most distinguishing scenes relating to the Church of God, from the full restoration of the Jews after the Captivity to the final Determination of all Things. Thus is the Chronological Order properly preserved in this arrangement; and the whole * Maimonides in his Moreh Nevochim, p. ii. c. 45, has some observations which tend to lessen the high prophetic estimation that has been generally assigned to Daniel; but other learned Jews, as Abarbanel and Jacchiades have sufficiently refuted him. "Negari certe non potest Daniele plenum fuisse Spiritu prophetico, habuisse illustres Visiones et somnia prophetica, et omnia Prophetarum αἰσώματα insigni ratione illi convenire." Calov.

† Εὐρησεὶ το βιβλίον του Δανιηλου ἐν τοις ιεροῖς γραμμασιν. Ant. x. x. 4.

‡ Mark, xiii. 14.

§ Ant. x. xi. 7.

may be considered as one comprehensive view of things *, worthy the Divine Interference, confirmed by the Writings of the New Testament, to which the History of God's Church has afforded an evident illustration from the commencement of the Predictions to the present period, and which we doubt not will receive their finishing completion at that awful crisis, when we shall all, together with the Prophet, stand up for the award of our decisive lot at the end of time †.

It must be confessed that in some of these predictions there is an apparent obscurity; but perhaps not greater than in those of other Prophets, which look forward to distant and different periods of accomplishment. In all real Prophecies the Power and Attributes of God are so far at least concerned as to be engaged for their Truth, or in other words, they must be true. How much beyond this in the mode of publication may be left to the tempers, abilities, habits, and like circumstances of men, is not easy for us to determine. What wise purposes may be answered by such interference, whether to prevent any infringement on moral agency, to secure the safety of the immediate

* The Prophecies of Daniel are all of them related to one another, as if they were but several parts of one general Prophecy, given at several times: Every following prophecy adds something new to the former. Sir Is. Newton's Observations on Daniel, p. i. c. 3.

† "Danielem Judæi Prophetam esse negant; verum argumentis valde futilibus sententiam suam confirmatum eunt; nam quæ de dotis Propheticæ conditionibus, de diversis ejusdem gradibus, deque discrimine inter veram Prophetiam et Spiritum Sanctum, statuunt, ea omnia sunt vanissima, nec in rei natura posita, neque ulla sacrorum scriptorum auctoritate comprobata. Addunt, eundem nec disciplinæ propheticæ usu et præceptis primo imbutum fuisse, neque postea more prophetico vitam instituisse: quod ad cœlestis instinctus et divinæ facultatis opinionem minuendam quid faciat, non video; causam forsitan ostendit, cur Danielis stylus tantum habeat a reliquis dissimilitudinem, tantumque abhorreat a poetico eharactere, quem cæteri fere communem habent, quemque e disciplina et scholis aliqua ex parte hauserunt." De Sacra Poesi Heb. Præl. xx. p. 197, 198.

In the account that Josephus gives of this book he chiefly recounts the historical parts, but observes also that the Author not only prophesied of things to come, like other Prophets, but hath also determined the time wherein those things should happen. Ant. x. 10, 11. And again, in the first book against Apion, he reckons the Book of Daniel amongst the thirteen books of the Prophets. Origen also places Daniel among the Prophets and before Ezekiel, and in this he follows Melito bishop of Sardis, who died anno 177. See his catalogue in Euseb. Eccles. Hist. iv. 26.

agents, or to exercise the understanding and skill of future ages, are known only unto Him to whom the whole comprehensive system of things, with all their modifications, varieties, and consequences, from their commencement to their dissolution, is naked and open *. This mixture however of human imperfection, in what degree soever it is, may be the chief occasion that some of the Predictions are not readily or perfectly understood even after their completion. That they have in themselves a clear and decisive meaning is not in the least to be doubted; that this meaning may be in a great and satisfactory measure discovered and pointed out has been verified by long and continued experience: Enough has been long since seen to induce us to view with admiration the Divine Contrivance; and it is extremely probable, that it is altogether owing to the weakness and ignorance of man, with some little allowances for the ravages of time, that a complete Illustration is not thrown upon all the Prophecies already fulfilled, and which we promise ourselves will hereafter appear, when we shall no more know in part, or be favoured only with an enigmatical view of things, but be gratified with the clearest intuitive evidence, shall know even as we are known †.

The light however which we now enjoy is progressive and gradually advancing: many of the mists of ignorance and error are already dispersed. It is probable that they will yield more and more to diligent and rational inquiry, that through the exertions of successive labourers new manifestations will continue to be disclosed, and hidden mysteries unfolded.—To say nothing of the rest, the Revelation at Chapter the Ninth will, I trust, receive some elucidation from the ensuing work: it evidently relates to two very distinguished Events, two grand Deliverances or Redemptions, the one typical of the other. The latter of these had long before appeared to Abraham in the eye of * Heb. iv. 13.

+ 1 Cor. xiii. 12.

Faith, who rejoiced to see the day* of its Author; and therefore we have the less reason to wonder that Daniel was enabled to calculate the time of his coming. Certain it is, that it was the same Divine Spirit that illumined all the ancient Prophets, that spake in times past to the fathers by them† all: His communications were made to them at sundry times and in divers manners, but all were united and linked together in one great chain, swelling and enlarging as it approached to its end. The Prophecies of Daniel had a very considerable share in this august series, with which the Religion of Christ was fundamentally connected ‡, and by the contemplation of which it is still maintained and established. The whole arrangement led on to the Messiah, and in him it finally terminates, so that we have every reason to conclude with the divine Author of the Apocalypse, that the Testimony of Jesus is the Spirit of Prophecy§.

AMONGST the preceding Observations some have been occasionally mentioned which tend to confirm the authority of the whole Book of Daniel, and therefore should not be forgotten to be applied to the remaining part which we are now proceeding to consider; and if the Reader should discover any observations in the subsequent discussion, which might equally or more properly apply to the former, he will avail himself of them, and excuse the defects of system, which when the occasion requires must be sacrificed, as well as every other prejudice, at the Shrine of Truth. And here I would observe, though it has been * John viii. 56.

† Heb. i. 1.

‡ To reject the Prophecies of Daniel is to reject the Christian Religion, which is founded upon his prophecy concerning the Messiah. Sir Isaac Newton, ubi supra.

§ Rev. xix. 10. See also John xiii. 19. and Acts x. 43. Munster observes, that the main design of Daniel is to set forth the glorious and eternal kingdom of Christ, and to show that all the kingdoms of the world are vain and perishing compared with it: And that in this he hath the palm among the Prophets, that he foretels the very point as it were wherein the Jewish ceremonies were to cease, and the kingdom of Christ to begin. Crit. Sac. on Daniel, Chap. i.

often noted before, that some of the Jewish and other writers, reflecting chiefly on the historical part of this Book, or on the very eminent situations of this illustrious man, or from some more sinister prejudice, have ranked his work amongst the Chethubim or Hagiographal parts* of the Old Testament rather than the Prophetical. Though whilst they consider the whole as sacred, it is not very material in what class they place it, yet still it should be remembered, that even in the former part there are Predictions recorded, which look forward to very distant periods; that it was “the same Spirit which illuminated the minds of some of the Prophets in the sheep-folds, and of others in regal palaces†;” and that even the History itself has plainly a relation to several distinguished events on which the Prophecies are grounded, to the circumstances of the person who relates them, or of the people for whom they are chiefly intended; that it contains instructions in many excellent truths, exhortations to the most exemplary virtues, and awakening calls to a due conviction of the power of God from such astonishing Interpositions of his Providence, as must serve to prepare the minds of those that read them with that unprejudiced humility and discreet confidence, which are expedient for the reception of the Prophecies, to satisfy the understandings of men, not only that he is faithful that hath promised‡, but that what he hath spoken he is able to perform§.

* So the ancient Talmudists in Bava-bathra place it with the Psalms, Proverbs, &c., but other Talmudical Writers in Megilla, c. ii. place Daniel with Zechary, Haggai, and other prophets. It is uncertain what the Jews precisely meant by the words Chethubim and Hagiographa, or when they were first introduced. The distribution of the Sacred Books into three classes seems to have been taken from the subjects contained in the books themselves, and not from the sacred authority of them; the Law and the Prophets and the rest of the Books, is a language of the Prologue to Ecclesiasticus. Our Saviour at Luke xxiv. 44. speaks of all things that were written in the Law of Moses and the Prophets and the Psalms concerning him. Yet there are Prophecies in the Psalms as well as in other Books. And perhaps no distinct or sufficient reason can be assigned, why Daniel should be excluded from the prophetical rank, which he is known to have held when Aquila and Theodotion translated their Versions, or in the early ages of Christianity. For a full account of the arrangement of the Canon of Scripture, see Prid. Conn. p. i. b. 5. §. 2. Kennicott's Diss. Gen. p. 14. and some of the preceding Notes.

† Lowth, Prel. xxi.

‡ Heb. x. 23.

§ Rom. iv. 21.

This History of Daniel comprehends the full period of the Captivity of the Jews, and includes in it the reigns of four very considerable Monarchs, all of whom, though mostly from different countries, presided over Babylon. The first of these was Nebuchadnezzar, who began his reign about* the commencement of the Captivity, and whose History is continued through the four first Chapters. Belshazzar, his Grandson, furnishes the story of the fifth, and Darius the Mede that of the sixth. Cyrus the Persian is mentioned several times in the book, in the third year of whose reign the Prophet saw the Vision to which the three last Chapters relate ; as that of the ninth Chapter happened in the reign of Darius, and the two preceding ones in that of Belshazzar. The periods allotted to these several Kings involve in them a great variety of curious and interesting matter, respecting the Jews as well as their own people, which must be especially useful to enable us to understand rightly the several Visions of this Book, as well as the History with which they are so essentially connected. Continual allusions are made to the [respective manners and customs of the different nations ; continual references to the characters, tempers, and habits of the different monarchs. The necessary connection of the sacred with profane history, and the illustration which they do, and ought mutually to afford each other, are obvious ; and the Advocate for Scripture must endeavour to reconcile the part which he undertakes to explain with the History of those Theatres whereupon the transactions were performed, in order to silence the objections of the Infidel. Of the person of Nebuchadnezzar there is no doubt ; and Belshazzar is generally esteemed the Nabonnedus of Berosus, or the Nabonadius of Ptolemy : What therefore may be necessary to be spoken of these Kings we shall refer to those parts of the following work which more properly belong to them. But the learned have been much divided in their opinions concerning Darius the Mede: It will not therefore be improper to enter now into a particular discussion of that inquiry, which at the same time will occasion sufficient Notice of the Person and Character of Cyrus.

* See Jerem. xxv. 1.

INDEED the difficulty of determining the person of Darius has involved the history of Cyrus also in apparent difficulties in the minds of some, and the seeming repugnancy of the account and time of this King's reign to the Canon usually called Ptolemy's, has occasioned a real embarrassment in the minds of most men. Before we attempt to examine the Chronology, it may be proper to attend to the argument from authority, and inquire what assistance can be obtained from contemporary Authors, in order to fix the person to whom this account of Daniel will agree. Now Writers of almost every age have been consulted, and their observations thrown together for this purpose; but the two principal ones, whose works are still extant, and indeed whence almost all the others have borrowed or copied, are Herodotus and Xenophon; the latter of whom has been esteemed of less authority than the former, as his work in many respects has the appearance of a Romance. It would doubtless be a desirable thing to have most or all the different authorities placed together, and also the arguments for the weight of each at one view, as from such a collected arrangement we might be able to form the most competent judgment, and arrive at the most certain conclusions on this difficult point. And I am happy to be able to produce such a Collection from the Labours of that great and good man, the late Dr. THOMAS SECKER, Archbishop of Canterbury; a Name which must be classed in the highest rank of literary eminence and real merit, to whose rare virtues I had the honour to be a witness, near the close of his Life, whilst I served him as his domestic Chaplain, and of whose indefatigable industry and unaffected piety during a long life I have had the most copious and unequivocal proofs since *. This learned Prelate has collected from Vignoles† and others, the various accounts of the several Writers, who have afforded any light upon this interesting subject, has often appreciated the authority of each, and interspersed with great liberality of mind several observations of his own. I shall beg leave to offer the following Result of his Inquiries taken from the first Vol. of his MS. Notes on Daniel, nearly in his own words.

“According to Herodotus‡, Cambyses the father of Cyrus was a private person of a good family, who had Cyrus by Mandane, when Astyages her father was old and had no son. Astyages ordered him to be put to death, and was deceived by Harpagus, whose story is known. Cyrus in due time having been informed of this, made war against Astyages and overcame him ; afterwards took Babylon, and at last was killed by Tomyris, who cut off his head, &c. Diodorus says she crucified him.

“According to Xenophon, Astyages had a son, Cyaxares, older than Cyrus ; and Cyrus never rebelled against Astyages, and died in peace.

“According to Ctesias, Cyrus was not a-kin to Astyages, he overcame him, and gave him a government, married his daughter a widow, and died of a wound he received in the country of the Derbices near Hyrcania.

John Malala from a piece falsely ascribed to Pythagoras saith, he was killed in a sea fight against the Samians. However this were, it is affirmed by many Ancients, and I think denied by none, that he was buried at Pasargada.—

* For a just and impartial character of this truly orthodox Example of primitive Episcopacy, see the Review of his Life prefixed to the first Vol. of his Posthumous Sermons.

† Chronologie Sacre.

‡ Bishop Chandler has observed that Herodotus, lib. i. professes to write according to what some of the Persians had recorded, who did not carry the story of Cyrus beyond the appearance of truth, knowing that there were then extant three other accounts of Cyrus ; and that speaking of his death he says, of many reports he preferred that which in his judgment had the best air of probability.

Justin in the main follows Herodotus, though with some differences, and agrees with Ctesias, that Cyrus gave Astyages the government of Hyrcania. Diodorus who commonly follows Ctesias agrees with Herodotus and Xenophon about the descent of Cyrus. Seneca mentions the story of Harpagus: Plutarch is zealous against the character of Ctesias; Stephens defends it.

“Xenophon intended his Cyropædia in opposition to Plato’s Republic; Plato perceived it and saith, that Cyrus had not the advantage παιδείας ὀρθῆς, and Diogenes Laertius, l. iii. makes Plato de Leg. say, that the Cyropædia is πλασμα. Cicero saith, Xenophon’s Cyrus was written, non ad historię fidem, sed ad effigiem justı Imperii. Diony. Halic. saith, it is εἰκὼν βασιλείως ἀγαθοῦ καὶ εὐδαιμονοῦς. Hermogenes saith, the story of Abradatas and Panthea is μυθικῶς πλασθέν. Ausonius calls the book, votum potius quam historiam. Josephus is the first, who hath supposed it a true history, which he hath done without naming it; only by saying, that Darius was the son of Astyages, and had another name παρα τοῖς Ἑλλήσιν. Jerom and Bede followed him, and the Learned of the sixteenth century followed them. But Erasmus, Ludov Vives, J. G. Vossins, Scaliger, Calvisius, Simson, took it for a Romance. Usher treats it as a History, and is followed by Pezron, Charpentier, Bossuet, Prideaux, &c. They insist it agrees best with Scripture, which though it may be thought no credit to Scripture, that it should agree best with what Antiquity took for a Romance, yet it is not any discredit, as Scripture cannot be imagined to have been taken from this Romance: But Scripture agrees well with the other accounts. Traguier’s Diss. shows it was Xenophon’s design to introduce his maxims of war, policy, morals; He also introduces conversations and repartees, such as he could not have any real information of: And Prideaux owns it, but still insists on the main facts. But it appears otherwise: He names scarce any places but Babylon; only mentioning Susa and Ecbatane at the end of Cyrus’s life:

He names not Euphrates, nor hints at any other river : He names not the King of Assyria, who is killed in the battle according to Xenophon, but by a conspiracy, as all other Authors ancient and modern hold ; nor his Son and Successor, who is killed in taking Babylon : yet these were real persons, and why should he not have named them if he knew their names ? whereas he doth relate different things about them from what other Authors have related ;—Nor the King of Armenia, though he names his two sons, nor even the daughter of Cyaxares that married Cyrus. Yet he affects to name much less considerable Princes and Persons of his own invention. He names Cyaxares, whom Vignoles and others think no real person ; and why might he not as well have named his daughter, or even the King of the Armenians ? His Abradatas could not be as he makes him king of Susiana, and of the Assyrian side ; for it appears by Strabo, that Susiana belonged to the Medes. He distinguishes no years ; and it looks like one campaign till that of the siege of Babylon : Yet in the history of the younger Cyrus nobody is more exact in particulars. The Author of Daniel's Prophecy of the Seventy Weeks explained observes, Part ii. p. 41, that he gives some of his imaginary persons Greek names ; but he had observed, p. 30, from Plato, that the Greeks were fond of doing this even in real persons when there was any affinity.

“ Besides, Xenophon elsewhere owns that the Persians took the empire by war from the Medes * : From whence it should seem to follow, that he did not aim at historical Truth in the Cyropædia. As he must have known the history of Herodotus, it is much he should neither have followed, nor intimated that he did not follow him. But this is a good deal stranger, if he meant his book to be taken for a reality, than if he designed it for a fiction †. Isocrates contemporary with Xenophon, and I believe older, saith, that Cyrus overcame the Medes with a Persian army, and translated the dominion to the latter, and put his mother's father to death. Euag. p. 86, 87, Ed. Batti. Wolfius in his Note saith, that Isocrates affirms this as an orator, παρ' ιστοριαν. By what Cicero cites from Dionysius or rather Dino, who wrote a Persian History soon after Ctesias, Cyrus was forty when he began to reign, and reigned thirty years. Now we have no account that Astyages was married till just before he was King; and Herodotus saith, he had Mandane Cyrus's mother after he was King; and he reigned but thirty-five years. Besides according to Herodotus he was γερων when Cyrus was born, and yet lived to fight Cyrus forty years after. Some pretend therefore that the number forty should be twenty: But it is not likely a private person of twenty should have credit enough to engage the Persians to rebel under his conduct: Nor on the other hand is it likely that an old man of seventy should propose a match to the Queen of Seythia, and make war in person on her refusal. Ctesias writing at the Court of Persia must know if Cyrus was Grandson of Astyages, and would scarce have denied it.

* The Archbishop here alludes to places mentioned in his Notes at Chap. ii. p. 39.

† See Vignoles, p. 560.

"All old Historians and Chronologers make Cyrus King of Persia: And all that enter into particulars make him so before he overcame Croesus, and some before he overcame Astyages. Xenophon in the younger Cyrus must mean the elder Cyrus by the King of Persia who dissolved the empire of the Medes. But in the Cyropædia Cambyses was living till after Cyrus had taken Babylon. Herodotus ascribes to him twenty-nine years' reign: Sulp. Sev. thirty-one, but all other Ancients thirty. He must have overcome Astyages in his tenth year; whether he overcame Croesus, or took Babylon first, is not so certain. But all Authors, so far as I find, place both these things after his victory over Astyages. Cyrus is called by Queen Tomyris, King of the Medes. Isaiah mentions not Persia, but Media and Elam in the siege of Babylon. Jeremiah mentions no name of Persia ; but he mentions the Kings of the Medes, Chap. li. 11, 28, Perhaps it should be King. Ezekiel, however, mentions Persia, Chap. xxvii. 10, in speaking of the siege of Tyre. Thucydides calls the Persians Medes almost constantly. Vignoles, p. 557, thinks, if two Kings are meant by Jeremiah, Cyrus and Astyages are meant ; which last even according to Ctesias was always honoured by Cyrus as his father. There might also have been petty kings, such as Jeremiah, Chap. xxv, reckons several in a state ; where, verse 25, he mentions all the Kings of the Medes and all the Kings of Elam : Only if these were subject to one great King, it is much that he had not mentioned him.

“ But if Astyages was one of the Median Kings that besieged Babylon, why may not Astyages be Darius* the Mede ? The history of Bel saith, Astyages was gathered to his fathers, and Cyrus the Persian received his kingdom : which appears by what follows to be the kingdom of Babylon. Ctesias and Justin indeed dispose of Astyages otherwise, by giving him a government in Hyrcania.

“ As Cyrus is called in Scripture the Shepherd and Anointed of God, who should accomplish his pleasure ; so Nebuchadnezzar is called God’s Servant whom he had sent.

* That Astyages could not be Darius the successor of Nabonadius is evident from this one consideration of his age, for he is said by Herodotus (see before, p. xxi.) to have been an old man when Cyrus was born ; but Darius was only sixty-two years old at the capture of Babylon. Dan. v. 31, and Cyrus was probably not much short of that age at the same time, as it happened certainly not more than nine years before his death according to the Canon, and he is thought to have reached the age of seventy. But Mr. Jackson thinks, see Chron. Vol. I., that Astyages succeeded to the kingdom of Babylon before Nabonadius, and that we should place the reign of Darius the Mede before the seventeen years of this last Monarch, whom he considers as a subordinate Ruler appointed by Astyages. And in order to obviate another difficulty which will here of necessity arise, he will have Laborosoarchod to be Belshazzar, who he thinks was destroyed, not at the final taking of Babylon by Cyrus, but when it was taken before by Astyages. But there are many objections to this opinion, of which I shall mention only one, which appears to me to be insuperable : And this is, that Daniel had the Vision of Chapter viii. in the third year of Belshazzar ; whereas Laborosoarchod reigned not one whole year, as Mr. Jackson allows ; and the proposal of an alteration in the original text both at the seventh and eighth Chapters, and the substitution of Darius the Mede for Belshazzar in both places, is too arbitrary to be allowed on the authority only of the Paschal Chronicle. See also on Chapter v. 26.

“Josephus and the first Christians all thought the Captivity ended the first year Cyrus was King of Persia, whereas he then had not Babylon in his power. The Rabbins thought it was in the first year of his reign at Babylon, but that he reigned only three there, since the Scripture names no more; and Scaliger and Calvisius thought the same; But the Canon, which they knew, should have taught them that he reigned nine years over Babylon.

“Josephus saith, Cyrus knew Isaiah’s Prophecy concerning him, and certainly Daniel had opportunities of showing it to him; at least he saith in his edict, that God had commanded him to build the Temple: So that he must have known it then.”

It would be in vain perhaps to attempt to reconcile all the various accounts of Writers on this subject. There might have been many Princes of the name of Cyrus*: We know of two, one of which died in battle, and the other probably in peace. The different accounts of these different Princes might have been improperly applied to each, and have thereby occasioned sundry errors, which it must now be impossible entirely to rectify. However the two leading accounts that affect the subject on which we are now engaged are those of Herodotus and Xenophon; and it must be confessed that from the authorities collected by the Archbishop, the weight of the argument evidently lies against the Cyropædia. !

But still there are many circumstances of importance that may be thrown in the opposite scale, and which may contribute in this instance to shake the faith of Herodotus: Such are the general belief that Cyrus was buried in Pasargada†, in Persia, and therefore could not have been killed in Scythia by Tomyris; that however Xenophon may be conceived as drawing a Character beyond the Life, yet his whole life, education, and conduct, must convince us that he would not knowingly and intentionally relate direct falsehoods; that Herodotus probably in the course of his travels took many things upon trust, according to general rumour, preferring the opinions that appeared to him the most probable*; and that although both were Greeks, the one an Athenian, and the other born at Halicarnassus, in Caria, yet Xenophon who had resided in Persia had probably far better opportunities of information in Persic History than the other; and many of the embellishments of Xenophon seem to have been founded upon real facts, and all have Truth and Morality for their Design or End; and that he who should amplify and adorn Truth for the sake of advancing and improving Philosophy, could never mean so far to disparage it as to shake and overturn the faith of History; that in his account of the younger Cyrus Xenophon is the historian of his own times, relates events, quæque ipse miserrima vidit,

* Bishop Lowth speaking of the Cyrus of Herodotus says, “he was a very different Character from that of the Cyrus of the Scriptures and Xenophon.” Isa. Notes, p. 86.

† Pasargadas castellum, in quo Cyri sepulchrum est. Plin. Nat. Hist. p. 100.

Et quorum pars magna fuit, ÆN. ii.

and therefore his narrative must be more exact and circumstantial than the history of foreign facts and characters near a century and a half before †. To this may be added, that Jerom not only asserts that the Cyaxares of Xeno-

* See the Note at p. xviii.

† There is a very sensible and judicious Essay on this subject in the Memoires de Literature de l'Academie Royale des Inscriptions et Belles Lettres, à Paris 1729. tom. vi. p. 400, by the Abbé Banier, from which I have extracted the following Remarks.—Je ne crois pas d'abord que Xenophon n'ait eu d'autres vûes que d'écrire l'histoire de Cyrus. Philosophie, comme il étoit, aussi bien que grand capitaine, il conçût un plus grand dessein. Il voulut apprendre aux Princes de son temps et à la posterité l'art de regner, et de se faire aimer malgré l'autorité souveraine. La morale et la politique de Socrate lui parurent propres à exécuter son dessein, et il chercha à en placer les préceptes dans un corps d'histoire. C'est le sentiment d'Aulu-gelle, qui dit que ce Philosophe ayant lû les deux premiers livres de la République de Platon, qui parurent avant que l'ouvrage fût achevé, travailla à sa Cyropédie; opposant ainsi la Monarchie à l'Etat republicain.—Ce phon was Darius the Mede, but confirms his opinion by the authority of Josephus, Trogus, Pompeius *, and other Historians ; so that it appears to have been the generally received opinion in his time, and probably was so in that of Josephus, not more than five or six hundred years after Cyrus †. Besides, the story that Herodotus relates of Harpagus in all its circumstances, and especially in the feast of his son served up to him by order of Astyages, when the parent suppressed every sort of resentment till a convenient opportunity ; and what the same historian relates of Cyrus's childish revenge on the river Gyndes, with some other tales in the same first book have very much the appearance of fictions ‡.

Some circumstances however both Writers agree in, as that Babylon was taken by an army of Medes and Persians, and this by surprise in the night after a day of mirth and revelling, that Cyrus was the son of Cambyses a Persian and Mandane the daughter of Astyages King of the Medes, that he conquered Cræsus King of Lydia with all his auxiliary forces, and thereby very much enlarged the Persian empire, that he added to it also that of the Medes, after the defeat of Astyages according to Herodotus, but according to Xenophon not till after he had in union dessein ainsi formé, Xenophon chercha dans l'histoire des modèles qui pussent en faciliter l'exécution, et n'ayant point trouvé dans l'Antiquité de Prince plus accompli que Cyrus, et dans son siècle de Roi plus modéré qu'Agésilaüs, il entreprit d'en faire leur histoire, avec la liberté d'y faire entrer toutes les réflexions, qui pouvoient le conduire à son but. J'ajoute ces dernières paroles, parce que je ne crois pas malgré toutes les maximes qu'en trouve dans ces ouvrages, que le fond de l'histoire en soit altéré.

* This Historian compiled from the Greek Writers a voluminous History of the World, which Justin abridged.

† Ecquis unquam veterum, ait Scaliger, fecit hujus Darii mentionem præter Danielem ? Æschylus ipse quem appellat, emendatque in Persis,

Μηδος γαρ ην ο πρωτος ηγεμων στρατου.

Medus nam fuit primus Dux exercitus.

Cod. Chis. Note on Chap. ix. 1.

‡ Apud Herodotum patrem historie sunt innumerales fabulæ. Cic. i. de Leg. Certainement s'il y a quelque chose dans Herodote qui doit être mis au rang de ces fables dont Cicéron dit que cet auteur est rempli, c'est une narration si confuse et si bizarre. L'Abbé Banier, ubi supra.

with the Medes conquered Babylon, subdued the remains of the Assyrian empire, and placed his uncle Cyaxares over the united territories of Media and Babylon; after whose death he reigned himself over the whole under the name of the Persian Empire, which reached from India to Ethiopia, and contained all that vast tract of country which is extended east and west from the river Indus to the Mediterranean, and north and south from the Caspian Sea to the Pacific Ocean, from India to Ethiopia, one hundred and twenty-seven * Provinces.

I would also observe farther, that if Xenophon's account of Cyrus be in general admitted, we cannot be at a loss to determine who was Darius the Mede; and if even the defeat of Astyages be received according to Herodotus, and it be placed in the tenth year of Cyrus's reign over Persia Proper, yet there seems no necessity to conclude but that the kingdom of Media might still with the consent of Cyrus be continued to Cyaxares his mother's brother, who might retain it till his death, after the conquest of Babylon, which Herodotus attributes to Cyrus after he had reduced the neighbouring powers.

Upon the whole, that Cyrus was a wise and virtuous Prince there are abundant testimonies in all the Historians, and as to the general tenour of his life and character there is a manifest coincidence between sacred and profane History: If in a few other respects some variations should occur not easily reconcilable, we must attribute it to the great distance of time, the loss of some, and the uncertainty of other, ancient Records; and have much more reason to admire that the scriptural accounts receive such evident Illustrations from ancient Writings, than to object because we cannot altogether ascertain the completest agreement in all respects †.

* Est. i. 1.

† Those who would wish for farther information on this matter may consult Herodotus lib. i. Xenophon's Cyropædia passim, Usher's Annals, p. 80, 81, &c. Prideaux's Conn. p. i. b. 2. 3. Ant. Univ. Hist. Vol. v. which relates the

But before we take our leave of this subject, we must endeavour to obviate one or two Chronological Difficulties; which although they may have been hinted at already, will deserve a more particular attention, as they have been often considered as weighty objections to Xenophon's account. The name of Darius is omitted in the Canon, although he is allowed to have reigned more than one year, if he reigned at all. How shall we then reconcile his History with the Canon? and Where or in what part must this reign be placed? The same answer will serve for both inquiries: The Canon certainly allots nine years' reign to Cyrus over Babylon, of which space the two former years are usually allowed to coincide with the reign of Cyaxares or Darius the Mede by the advocates of Xenophon. Now, as Archbishop Secker has well observed in another part of his MS. Vol. I. "So short a reign as this of Darius, whilst Cyrus was extending his conquests, might well be neglected by the Greek Historians, or perhaps unknown to them: And Berosus might have slighted it as a short-lived nominal reign;" which considerations may fairly account for the silence of the Canon. Some* indeed are inclined to think that Cyrus himself was this Darius; and it must be acknowledged that the name of Darius seems to have been a common name for several of the succeeding Persian monarchs, as also that at Daniel xi. 1. the first year of Darius the Mede is by LXX translated the first year of Cyrus; but if we allow that LXX might have found Cyrus in their original; yet as we have just Histories of Media and Persia, and the Reflections of the Abbé Banier in the Parisian Memoirs already cited in the Note, p. xxiv. and other Essays in the same Collection.

* This seems to be the opinion of the learned Author of Critical Observations on Books (No. 3.) who treating the Cyropædia altogether as a Romance, explodes the idea of making a suppositious Cyaxares to agree with Darius; but still this Gentleman places the first of Cyrus after the capture of Babylon in the third year of his reign according to the Canon, or in the year 536 before Christ, and will have the two former years be given to Cyrus's reign as a kind of nominal King over Babylon. I must confess this mode of reconciling the matter appears to me to be attended with no less difficulty, to say the least of it, than that which is collected from Xenophon.

stated, that the first year of Cyrus according to the Canon is the first of Darius in the usual computation, the terms may thus be considered as coincident, and therefore nothing decisive can from hence be alleged on either side; and though the name of Darius was common to many Persians, yet this is no objection but it might have been given to the Mede we are now speaking of. Beside such particular accounts are recorded of this Prince in Daniel, and he is in one place (Chap. vi, 28.) mentioned together with Cyrus as having been both favourers of this Prophet, and consequently must have been distinct persons, and moreover is expressly said to have been of the seed of the Medes, Chap. ix. 1, which so low as at the expiration of the captivity does not in general seem to have comprehended the Persians*, which are considered by Daniel at least as two distinct nations; that all these united considerations must strongly militate against, if not sufficiently refute, the opinion of those who think Cyrus himself was the King here meant by Darius.

From the close of the fifth Chapter of Daniel we may conclude, that Darius the Mede did not begin his reign till after the capture of Babylon: And this event I am inclined to place in the next year after the 17th of Nabonadius, in the 210th year of the Chaldean Æra, or 538 years before Christ, which was the first of Cyrus's nine years. Whether the defeat of Nabonadius and the taking of the city happened near the same † time I need not determine; but it seems clear from Daniel * as well as from Xenophon, that the King was slain on the same night that the city was taken; and this I apprehend must have happened about the real year of the captivity 67, supposing the 4th of Jehoiakim to agree with the year 605 before Christ, according to Blair; but of this more hereafter †. Now all agree, as far as I have seen, that the year of the Expiration of the Captivity, or the year that Cyrus issued his decree in favour of the Jews, was the year 212 of the Æra of Nabonassar, or 536 before Christ; and there is no doubt but Darius the Mede, whoever he was, reigned according to Daniel from the capture of Babylon till this same first year of Cyrus, or till the commencement of the reign allotted by Scripture to Cyrus the Persian. And to ascertain the person of this Darius, who we have seen could not be Cyrus, a learned and elegant Greek writer has mentioned a person, without any knowledge of our history, that in every respect seems to answer to the character and circumstances of this Prince, and who as a sort of deputed ‡ King presided over the affairs of Babylon for about the term above assigned, and probably not longer; and therefore the conclusion is natural, if not necessary, that however this Writer may have occasionally introduced fictitious embellishments into his work, yet this fact at least is highly credible, that his Cyaxares is a real character corresponding with Darius the Mede: because there is nothing that contradicts this account amongst the unimpeachable testimonies of Antiquity, because it is reconcileable with ancient computations as also with the silence of the Greeks, and finally because it agrees with and serves to illustrate the Scriptures §.

* I believe the Exceptions to this Observation are but few among the Historians; the Poets indeed allow themselves a greater licence for obvious Reasons, and hence that expression of Horace, b. 1. Ode ii. Nec sinas Medos equitare inultos; which is supposed to comprehend the Medes, Persians, and Parthians, but perhaps chiefly to mean the latter, with whom the Romans had tedious wars long after the Medo-Persic empire ceased.

† Josephus says, Ant. x. xi. 4. that not long after Daniel had explained the writing, μετ' ου πολυν χρονον, the King and the city were taken by Cyrus's army: So that there might have been possibly an intermediate engagement in which Nabonadius was defeated. But the language of Daniel, Chap. v. 30, seems scarce capable of being so rendered as to admit of this interval; the defeat therefore more probably happened sooner, perhaps the year before.

* Chap. v. 31.

† See Chap. i. 1.

‡ So Heb. המלך, who was appointed to reign. Chap. ix. 1.

§ “Je ne veux pas faire ici l’apologie de Xenophon, aux dépens des autres Historiens de la vie de Cyrus, mais je pretends faire voir que ce qu’il en a écrit est raisonnable et naturel, plus suivi et plus complet, et beaucoup plus conforme à l’Ecriture sainte, que ce qu’en racontent Herodote et Ctesias, et que par tous ces caractères son histoire doit l’emporter sur celle des autres Auteurs qui ont traité le même sujet.” See the above Memoir, p. 406. The Author illustrates what he here promises in the subsequent part of it. And I must add farther, that another

HAVING discoursed thus far on the Language and Matter of this Book, I must now make a few Observations on the style of it; which is a point I am rather willing to discuss, because it may assist farther in removing the prejudice often conceived and urged against the sameness of the Author, from the difference of the language as well as the subject of his Book. And here let it be premised, that though the Hebrew and Chaldee Languages may be considered as similar, yet they are by no means such in that degree which might be expected from two Eastern Languages, of so early antiquity, used in countries so near each other, and whose variations may have been esteemed the effects of changes in the habits, manners, or modes of speaking of the different inhabitants, rather than founded in any essential discrimination or original distinction. I mean not to advert to the characters of the two Languages, but to their Construction or rather Idiom; which in the Hebrew is simple, easy, and natural, in the Chaldee much more complex, involved, and pleonastic: The latter especially abounds in indeclinable words or particles, some of which have a variety of senses according to the different situations in which they occur, and others are crowded together to express nothing more than what in ordinary use might be denoted by a single word: The inflexion of its nouns and verbs varies much from the Hebrew, and their signification has often a much greater latitude. Indeed so great is the difference* that an attentive observer may soon be convinced of the justice of that Prediction of Jeremiah, Chap. v. 15, that God would bring against the Jews, “a nation whose language they should not understand,” when this nation was the Assyrian or Chaldee.

To this it may be proper to add, that the Style of Hisjudicious Memoir may be found in the same Collection, tom. vii. p. 413, &c. by M. Freret, in which among other interesting particulars many just and accurate dates are assigned to the Life and Transactions of Cyrus.

* Other Peculiarities in the Chaldee will be noted hereafter.

tory must be very materially different from that of Prophecy: The one being a mere narration of past transactions is intended chiefly to inform the understanding, and must be confined to the limits of unmixed truth; the other is within the compass of truth, but is calculated to awaken and affect the imagination by the prospect of things that as yet have no existence, and which strike the mind as forcibly as the objects of a creative fancy, or the fictitious machinery or other ornaments of Poetry.—Now from these considerations it is evident that there must be a diversity of style in the different parts of this Book; and all I would attempt to illustrate is, that where the circumstances will admit, the same marks of uniformity often occur, which might reasonably be expected from dissimilar productions of the same Author.

In general then the words of Daniel are proper, well-chosen, and comprehensive; his diction simple and chaste, yet often strong and nervous; and his whole style is compact, concise, and close, but pure and regular. He seems more anxious about the matter than the manner of his work; and the peculiar circumstances of his situation may furnish one strong reason among others, why he should affect a laconic brevity in his language, and that his words should be few. Not but that he is sometimes diffusive and copious, enlarges an idea, and swells an image to an uncommon pitch of grandeur; for the truth of which I would refer to the description of the Tree in the fourth Chapter,* and to that of the Angel at the fifth and sixth verses of Chapter the tenth. There are also instances of such repetitions as were common amongst the Writers in whose age he lived; in which his fellow-captive Ezekiel very much abounds, and in which respect among others he is thought to resemble his contemporary Homer *. In the historical part of Daniel these repetitions are frequent, and they are also to be sometimes found in the Prophetical, but in a form rather more indirect and disguised. The whole of his work has been judged by the learned Author of the Prelections on the Hebrew Poetry to be altogether prosaic †, and such in general must be its acknowledged character; though it sometimes rises in either part to Poetry of the first size and wonderful sublimity: At least it hath such characters of it, both in measure or rhythm, as well as in greatness and loftiness of sentiment, as is allowed to distinguish the Poetical Compositions of the other Prophets.

* Almost the whole of this Chapter is judged by some to be poetical: the Description of the Angel may be presumed to be real, but whether the circumstances are real or fictitious, if the assemblage is grand, the magnificence is equally admirable.

I shall beg leave to offer a few Instances of this Sublimity in different kinds, taken from both the Historical and Prophetical Parts, that hence may appear in each the same strong features of resemblance. At the beginning of the fourth Chapter the Acknowledgment of the Operations of the Almighty is expressed in a manner extremely simple, but at the same time full of dignity and natural elegance. The lines run into what Bishop Lowth calls the synonymous parallel, and the second part of the distich rises in the strength of its terms above the first:

How great are his signs ‡ !
 And his Wonders how mighty !
 His Kingdom is an everlasting Kingdom,
 And his Dominion from generation to generation.

ver. 3.

At the seventh Chapter, the Prophet describes the * Dr. Clarke vindicates these Repetitions in the following manner, "Suo in loco neque hæc ipsa repetitio arte caret, neque enumerationis simplicitatem in narrando dedecuit. Est enim hoc est eorum genere, quæ ideo simplicissime et sine ornatu dici convenit, ut raptim ac velut in transitu legendi perecurrantur." Note on Iliad ii. l. 495.

† "Totum Danielis Librum e poeticorum censu excludo; Is quidem Parabolicis Imaginibus multum utitur; sed ut Propheta, per visiones et umbras allegoriarum, res et eventa significans, sine ullo styli Poetici colore." De Sacra Poes. &c. Præl. xx. p. 197.

‡ Chald. His signs how great !

Ancient of days with the retinue that attend him in the same sort of parallel, and the like strain of grandeur and sublimity ;

* His Raiment was white as snow,
And the Hair of his head like the pure wool ;
His Throne was flames of fire,
And his Wheels the ardent fire :
Thousand thousands ministred unto him,
And ten thousand ten thousands assisted before him.

And so again with the like majesty of sentiment and the same sort of rhythm is that passage at Chap. xii. ver. 3.

Those that have wisely instructed shall shine as the splendour of the firmament,
And those that have made many righteous as the stars for ever and ever.

In his Descriptions of the Deity, and in his Addresses either of Prayer or Praise to him, the language of Daniel has commonly a peculiar force and energy, that without the least appearance of pomp or design steals upon and strikes the mind with an unexpected lustre or pathos. This remark will be especially illustrated by the concluding part of the two following citations from him ; in the former of which the Author pours forth in admirable strains his gratitude to God for his signal mercies, in discovering to him the King's Dream and the Interpretation of it :

Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever,
For Wisdom and Power are his :
He also changeth the times and the seasons ;
He removeth Kings, and establisheth Kings ;
He giveth wisdom to the wise,
And knowledge to those that improve in understanding :
He revealeth things deep and secret,

* Eusebius speaking of this passage, intimates that the Prophet is ανδρωπινην την θεοστιαν υπογραφων, by which he means, that he describes the Vision ανδρωτοπαθως. Eccles. Hist. lib. i. c. 2.

He knoweth what is in the darkness,
For the light abideth with him.

Chap. ii. ver. 20, 21, 22.

This latter sentiment is beautifully enlarged and amplified by the Psalmist in the 139th Ps. ver. 11, 12.

Though I say, Surely the Darkness shall hide me,
Yet the Night shall be light about me *:
Even the Darkness will not darken from thee,
But the Night shall shine like the Day ;
The Darkness and the Light are alike †.

The other passage alluded to, in which are the like devout acknowledgments of the Power of the Almighty, and at the same time most affecting and pathetic also, is at the latter part of the Prayer in Chapter the ninth.

Harken, O our God ! to the prayer of thy servant,
and to his supplications,
And look propitious upon thy desolated sanctuary,
for the Lord's sake.
Incline, O my God, thine ear, and hear.
Open thine eyes, and look upon
The distresses of us and of the city which is called by thy Name.
O Lord, hearken, O Lord, forgive, O Lord, attend and execute,
Defer not, for thine own sake, O my God,
Since thy City and thy People are called by thy Name.

There is in the latter part of this passage such an ardent pathos, as is rarely to be met with in any composition of any sort. It is at the close of the Prayer ; where the Prophet seems to have summoned together all the forces and * LXX has εν τρυφῇ μου, mistaking the Preposition with the Affix ני for the Noun עני deliciæ.

† Literally, So is the Darkness as is the Light ; but LXX seems to refer to the words night and day in the preceding line, " as is the darkness of the one, so is the light of the other," probably understanding the ה at the end of each word as an Affix.

powers of his mind ; and his conceptions being too large and big for utterance, break forth in single detached words, as the spontaneous overflowings of his heart, calling continually upon God to hear, forgive, execute, and hasten, from motives of the purest and warmest zeal, and the most real and affecting devotion.

Some of these and several other striking passages of Daniel I scarce know whether I must call poetry for this reason, because there may be nothing in them of the novelty of invention, the flights of fancy, or the more splendid decorations of fiction. Nor am I inclined to contend about words or the arbitrary meanings affixed thereunto ; though I fear that Poetry would be reduced to a narrow compass, if it could appear in no other but a novel or fictitious dress. Indeed wherever there is a beautiful assemblage of well-chosen ideas, adorned with just colouring and glowing yet natural ardour, and especially too if expressed in an artificial combination of regular terms or lines, I should esteem such composition of a superior style to mere prose, and to be of a cast truly sublime, if not always strictly poetical ; and with respect to the passage last cited, we may know how highly to estimate this from the general language of a very able Critic, who “ affirms with confidence, that nothing is so magnificent as a natural pathos finely applied, breathing out as it were from an enthusiastic animation and spirit, and giving words something like the force of inspiration *.”

On the Prose of Daniel many observations will be interspersed in the ensuing Notes : I would only observe here, that whether he relates past or future transactions, the same depth of thought manifested by a suitable cast of style pervades the whole. He felt strongly for the afflicted state of his country, and ardently wished the Restoration of the true Worship of God. The grand direction of his thoughts and of his actions looked toward Zion, toward the beloved city. Here he probably expected the Blessing of all Nations, the Redeemer of Israel, who should come to his Sanctuary at the time appointed. Influenced by these considerations he is little solicitous about words, or in what dress to clothe his conceptions. They flow from him naturally, and usually in the most simple and modified form, with no other ornaments than such as a great mind improved in every sort of literature must of necessity give them: However the grandeur of the matters which he relates, together with the importance of his Revelations, must amply supply any deficiency of force or elegance that may be conceived in his style or the manner of his narration.

* It is difficult to express the genuine sense of this fine passage in any other language : it is as follows, Θαρρῶν ἀφορισαμένην ἀν, ὡς οὐδὲν οὕτως, ὡς το γένναϊόν παθὸς ἐνθα χρε, μεγαληγορον ἐστὶ, ὥσπερ ὑπομανίας τινος καὶ πνευματος ἐνδουσιαστικῶς ἐκπνεόν, καὶ οἰονεὶ φρεσῶζον τοὺς λόγους. See Pearce's Longinus, p. 40.

In the Book of Psalms the 120th and fourteen that follow have this title prefixed to each, שיר המעלות, a Song of Degrees, or rather an Ode of Ascents, which however variously interpreted is thus translated by LXX, ὠδὴ τῶν ἀναβαθμῶν, And by Theodoret* they are all indiscriminately applied to the Delivery from Babylon. Whether they were all made on that occasion, or only applied to it afterwards, is uncertain; some of them however seem to have been composed with a view to the deliverance during the Captivity itself; and one or two I am almost inclined to attribute to Daniel; though I know of no authority to support this conjecture except some internal marks. Whoever will compare the Prayer at Chap. ninth, and especially the latter part of it, with Psalm 130th, will probably perceive many striking features of resemblance; such as the conciseness and simplicity of the expression, the earnest repetition of the same sentiment, the frequent invocation on the name of the Lord, the devout acknowledgment of the sins of the people, and the intire confidence in God's mercies. As the Psalm is short, I shall make no apology for offering it here in the following form, submitting to my Reader to make his own judgment concerning the Author of it, or to agree with mine.

* Δηλοῦσι μὲντοι αἱ ἀναβῆσεις, ἡ οἱ ἀναβάθμοι, τοῦ σιχημαλωτευθέντος λαοῦ τὴν ἀπὸ Βαβυλωνος ἐπανόδον. Theod. Ps. 20.

Out of the depths have I called unto thee, Jehovah;
 Lord, hear my voice,
 Let thine ears be attentive to the voice of my supplications.
 Shouldst thou strictly watch iniquities Jehovah; Lord, who shall stand?
 Surely there is forgiveness with thee, therefore shalt thou be revered.
 I wait for Jehovah, my soul waiteth, for on his word do I confide.
 My soul is to the Lord more than the watchmen to the morning, than the watchmen to the morning*.
 Let Israel confide in Jehovah;
 For with Jehovah is mercy, and with him is plenteous redemption:
 So shall he redeem Israel from all his Iniquities †.

To the preceding strictures I will beg leave to add farther the sentiments of the celebrated Professor Eichhorn on this Book in the following Translation of them from the German.

“An intire new World opens itself in the Book of Daniel. Whoever has arrived at the most familiar acquaintance with the other Prophets of the Old Testament, and has

* The allusion is probably to the Watch in the service of the Temple, which was kept in the night as well as the day, and the repetition may possibly allude to the alternate cry of the Watchman, and the person that answered him; the watchword had always some reference to the Deity.

† I am aware that Bishop Patrick and others ascribe this Psalm to David, either after his criminal commerce with Bathsheba, or after an escape from the Persecution of Saul; but many Interpreters fix it rather to the time of the Captivity; and the first words seem to have a peculiar reference to the low and deep situation of Babylon compared with the lofty and eminent Hills of Jerusalem; and perhaps the expression, on his word do I confide, together with the plenteous redemption, may incline us to suspect, it was composed soon after the Revelation at the end of the Prayer, Dan. Chap. 9th.

enabled himself by profound study to enter into their genius, style, and imagery, will find every thing strange here. Fruits will present themselves, which cannot have been the product of Palestine, but of a foreign soil.

“It is plainly discoverable indeed from very many parts of this Book, that the Author of it was a native Hebrew, who had diligently perused the Records of his nation. I will not rest my proof of this assertion barely on those passages in which Moses and Jeremiah are expressly quoted (Dan. ix. 2, 11, 13.) He constantly recurs to their style and imagery, but imparts to them such colouring and shade as would not have been given by any Writer whose residence had been confined to the country of Palestine. Who, for example, can read the ninth Chapter of this Prophet without remarking the same train of ideas and the same modes of expression adopted by the ancient Hebrew Writers? The departure of the Jewish people out of Egypt was effected בִּיר חֹקֶה, agreeably to the language of Moses (Dan. ix. 15, compared with Exod. vi. 1, &c.) Daniel entreats God to be gracious by the phrase הֶאֱר פָּנֶיךָ which the ancient Jewish writers so frequently borrowed from the Pentateuch, (Dan. ix. 17, compared with Numb. vi. 25, &c.) He describes the stars as being צֶבֶא הַשָּׁמַיִם, the Host of Heaven, in conformity with Moses and the old Hebrew Writers, (Dan. viii. 10, compared with Gen. ii. 1). But agreeably to the custom of the Chaldeans, while each Star is made to be inhabited by a Guardian Angel, he calls the Almighty שֶׁךְ הַצֶּבֶא (Dan. viii. 11), and on the same account he assigns to each kingdom its peculiar protecting Angel, (Dan. x. 13, 19, &c.)

“In no part of Scripture do we meet with so singular a prophetic division of time. Sometimes it is expressed by a time, two times, and half a time. Dan. vii. 25, xii. 7. sometimes by 2300 days, Chap. viii. 14, at others by 1270 * days, Chap. xii. 11, 12, and it is the opinion of all the best Commentators on the greater part of the above-mentioned passages, that the numbers are not to be taken in a limited sense. The origin of this Division of time may probably be traced to the Astronomical and Astrological Sciences, into which Daniel as a disciple of the Chaldean Philosophers had been initiated."

* It is probably meant for 1290 days, but in both editions it is as here stated.

I have already given a few hints of my general design with respect to this Book of Daniel: and shall now proceed to a more particular delineation of my plan; though I mean not to enlarge very much upon it, as I have chiefly pursued the steps of others, who have marked out the path before.

In the following Translation of this Book, I have endeavoured as nearly as possible to adhere to our present English Translation, so as very seldom to depart from it without a sufficient reason: At the same time what may be deemed inferior causes, such as the different order of the words or clauses in the original, and a flow of them more harmonious and more agreeable to the ear, have been often considered sufficient to justify such a departure*. In some cases expressions or phrases have been adopted not altogether in common use in our language, in order to give a more just and exact sense to the original†; but yet these expressions will be found justifiable by fair analogy, and custom may gradually render them familiar. Where the literal sense could be retained, it has commonly been preferred, but where it has been once varied, in similar cases the same variation has been observed‡. I have indeed generally endeavoured to make the Translation as literal as possible, consistently * An improper disposition of words in a sentence is little less offensive to the eye and ear than confusion in the ornaments of a building, or disharmony in a piece of music; beside its being productive of obscurity, ambiguity, and even of a false meaning. Dr. Geddes's Letter to the late Bishop of London, p. 39.

† See an instance of this at Chap. vi. 12.

‡ Thus the word hand, is well known to signify power, &c., and this latter sense I have sometimes followed in the expression that so often occurs, was given into his hand, which however proper when applied to a man, seems very inapplicable to a beast.

with the turn and idiom of the languages, the style and spirit of the Author, the alterations of Customs, Manners, and Times: to most of which and the like circumstances I have purposed to pay due attention. An Uniformity of Design has been studiously carried into execution; but yet not so slavishly followed, as to suffer it to supersede perspicuity or natural ornament, which ought doubtless to be consulted in the first place. My grand intention throughout the whole Book has been, to give a just and faithful sense of the original, and, in order to do this, it has been often found necessary, especially in the Prophetical part, to make very considerable variations from our Translation now in use, which was my chief motive, though there were other subordinate ones, for offering to the Public what for distinction sake is called an improved one. It is not my design to offer any Observations on Translations of the Scriptures in general, as this business has already been executed with much skill and judgment*. Let me only add therefore, that I have endeavoured to avail myself of the remarks of others, though I have ventured to deviate from them in several instances; as it is almost impossible that general observations can apply in all respects to that great variety and unusual change of circumstances which is to be found in the compositions of the Sacred Writers.

WITH respect to the Commentary or Notes I must begin with most gratefully acknowledging the assistances I have received, before I proceed to explain any part of my own share. In the first place I consider myself greatly indebted

* The Bishop of Waterford in his Preface to the Minor Prophets has laid down a series of very judicious Rules on this subject; and the Rev. Dr. Geddes in his Prospectus and in his Letter above cited, has offered many sensible Remarks on the same subject, and proposed three useful Canons with respect to Hebraisms, that appear to be founded in Truth and Reason. p. 15. 16.

It is incumbent, says Bishop Lowth, on every Translator to study the manner of the Author; to mark the peculiarities of his style, to imitate his features, his air, his gesture, and as far as the difference of language will permit, even his voice; in a word, to give a just and expressive resemblance of the original. Dissert. on Isa. p. 35. See more on the same subject at p. 52.

to the Judgment and Industry of that most excellent Prelate Archbishop Secker, who has not only left to the Library at Lambeth his own Notes on the Prophets * in a Hebrew Bible, and also in an English interleaved one, but beside this has deposited there under the special care of his successor two small folio Volumes of MS. Notes on the nine first Chapters of Daniel, the latter of which Volumes, as well as a part of the former, is occupied in a large and extensive discussion of the Prophecy of the Seventy Weeks. To these I have had ready access by the permission of his present very worthy Successor; and though I have borrowed very much from the former of them, which is in due place acknowledged, yet perhaps my readers may wish that I had given them more. To my late ingenious and very excellent friend Dr. Woide, of the British Museum, I am indebted for his collations of the Pachomian † MS. in the said Museum on the Book of Daniel; and he had begun to translate for me the Notes of Professor J. D. Michaelis on the said Book, of which I received only those on the first Chapter, his sudden and unexpected death happening soon after, to my great disappointment, and the very considerable loss of the learned world. I could have very much wished for all, or any, assistance that could have been obtained from the labours of that excellent Critic Michaelis; but scarce any thing more had fallen into my hands, till my work was nearly finished, when I met with his Supplement to his Hebrew Lexicon, lately published in four Volumes, of which I have availed myself much, and should probably have made farther and better use of it, if I had seen it sooner.

There was known to be a MS. copy of the Coptic Version of the Book of Daniel in the Royal Parisian Library,

* I say, the Prophets, but, if I mistake not, his Annotations are upon the whole Bible; his Hebrew Bible is the Quarto Edit. of H. Michaelis, printed at Halle, in 1720, to whose short Notes he often refers.

† From Pachomius, a Patriarch of Constantinople, to whom it once belonged.

and another in that of St. Germain de Prez. The late Dr. Woide had obtained a sight of these, and from his desire to promote the knowledge of Oriental Literature and the Scriptures in this country, had taken the pains to transcribe them. These Transcripts were lately purchased among his other Papers by the University of Oxford; and they have been revised and collated with the Vatican copy of the LXX at my particular request by my very learned friend Dr. Henry Ford, Principal of Magdalen-Hall in that University, and Lord Almoner's Professor of Arabic. Several variations are pointed out; some of which it must be acknowledged agree with the Alex. MS. as it was probably from the assistance of that Version, that the Coptic was originally made. There are instances however in which the Coptic differs from it, and some improvements in the present Text, which had been suggested before the discovery of this Version, have received strength and support from it since. The Reader will find considerable use made of this Collation in the following Work; and to the same ingenious Professor I am likewise indebted for a Translation from the German of Professor Eichhorn's Sentiments on the Book of Daniel already given, and of those which gave occasion to the Remarks mentioned near the close of this Dissertation.

I have also received some Criticisms on the Hebrew Part of Daniel from my much-esteemed friend the Rev. Mr. Dimock, of Gloucester, which, with a few other communications, will be acknowledged in the Notes.

My own care has been in the first place to examine minutely the original Text; to compare it with the Versions in the London Polyglott, and such others as I met with occasionally; to observe the different reading of the MSS. as collated by Dr. Kennicott, and those additional ones, as well as editions, of Mr. De Rossi; and from a review of these several helps to endeavour to correct the Text where it has the appearance of being faulty, and to offer in suspected places, and in others where I have scarce entertained any suspicion, the various Readings of the Versions, the Masora *, and the MSS., that the Reader may be enabled to form his own judgment on passages, in which he may be unwilling to confide in the judgment of others, in which he may suspect mistake, or conceive himself plausible improvements. In some few places likewise are suggested emendations founded on probable conjecture, but they are very rare, and indeed by a more attentive and accurate investigation passages, which have been somewhat suspected, have been commonly found reconcileable to a good sense and the general tenour of the Author's manner, although perhaps not altogether conformable to the rules of strict grammar, or quite exempt from every sort of anomaly.

Whilst this attention has been paid to the Text, a variety of Commentaries and Interpretations have been consulted; not only for the sake of a more perfect acquaintance with the general sense and scope of the Author, but for a more exact knowledge of the particular meanings of his Phrases, Idioms, and even words; his language has been compared with parallel passages, similar allusions, and correspondent sentiments in other parts of Scripture; and the profane history has been studied of the period coetaneous with his Book in the several nations to which it has a manifest reference. With this preparation and a desire to collect what I could from every suitable source of information, I trust I have been able to give the literal sense of the Book of Daniel, to explain his Meaning, vindicate his History, illustrate his Predictions, and offer his

* The Variations called Keri-Chethibs, noted at the bottom of some Bibles, are in general, and I believe justly, attributed to the Masoretes, a set of wretched Critics, as Bishop Lowth calls them, that probably lived near the eighth century; but as there have been opinions that have given a much earlier authority to these Variations, I have more usually called them by the name of Keri in the following Notes.

Work in such a form, as may convince the candid and impartial Inquirer, that he was one of “*those * holy Men of God that spoke as he was moved by the Holy Ghost.*”

I have in general attempted likewise to point out such excellencies both in the style and the matter as have occurred, and to illustrate them by similar passages borrowed from other Writers; and moreover to throw light upon the History and Manners alluded to, by parallel Customs, either ancient or modern † collected from the nations of the East, or countries peopled from thence. In explaining the Prophecies, and especially those of the last Vision, it was found expedient to give an epitome of the History of the several kingdoms to which the matters contained therein belong; which has generally been selected from the best and most authentic sources, not without a proper regard likewise to the Comments or Remarks which subsequent Compilers have with due judgment and discretion produced. A great number of books has been consulted for these purposes, and perhaps they might have been more profitably examined, had my situation admitted of it. Every one that has been engaged in a work of this sort must be sensible that it is difficult, after a considerable interval, to return to a train of thinking, that has been once set aside for want of a ready recourse to Authorities and References to elucidate, support, or establish it.

THE general connexion between History and Chronology, and their mutual dependence on each other is in all cases very obvious: but perhaps in settling the Historical parts of the Book of Daniel, the expediency of a due attention to chronological matters can in no respect be more apparent: And yet however expedient it may be, it must be a work of no small difficulty to explore the beginnings of a Science, and in its early state to ascertain the Truth. Scarce two centuries before the Babylonish Captivity, Chronology seems to have been very imperfect, as far as appears, reduced to no system, governed by no precise or accurate rules of calculation, nor dated from any fixed or certain Æra * of Commencement. Men of reflection indeed could not fail to have observed in the earliest times the periodical revolutions of the Sun and Moon, and to have compared them with each other. Hence by considering the annual period of the former, and endeavouring to bring it to some agreement with its own diurnal course, and the more frequent revolutions of the latter, they had readily found that twelve lunar revolutions were nearly equal to one solar; and this agreement had considerable attention paid to it, especially as the number was easy for dispatch in calculation, the consequent division of the year naturally and not very far from truth, and found to be productive of considerable advantages in common life. But although in some countries this lunar year was adopted and prevailed for a time, yet it soon proved very inconvenient from the annual error and loss of about eleven days, and therefore generally yielded to another mode, more ready for dispatch, and much nearer the truth. A method was hit upon of bringing the lunar periods, in themselves uncertain, to one fixed standard nearly agreeing therewith, so as only to vary about the half of a day, and this being in excess would advance so much nearer the Sun's true

* 2 Pet. i. 21.

† I confess myself much indebted for an Illustration of several important circumstances in this Book to a late Publication, intitled, “Travels to discover the Source of the Nile, by James Bruce, of Kinnaird, Esq.” This learned and elaborate work has thrown great light on many parts and passages of the Old Testament, and perhaps no better method could be devised to illustrate the ancient Scripture History, than a careful survey and minute inspection into the customs and habits of those aboriginal nations, who retain the rude simplicity of Eastern manners, and are not yet polished by the softer arts of civilization and refinement.

* Some think the Jews reckoned from their Exit out of Egypt, others from earlier or later events; but the Author of their famous Epoch from the Creation of the World, as well as the time of its establishment, are unknown: and though Scaliger refers the origin of it to the time of the Seleucidae, yet others are of opinion that it was not introduced till after the Babylonish Talmud: Petavius considers it as of later date, but Straucius refers it to the time of Hillel. b. iv. c. 2, period. Thus the year or annual revolution of the Sun was divided into twelve equal parts, called months, as nearly agreeing with so many courses of the Moon*, and these courses were fixed at thirty days each, making in the whole 360 days; so that the error or loss was not more than about half as much as before.

This form of year prevailed almost universally for the purposes of computation in the early ages after the flood. The comparison of a few passages in the Book of Genesis with each other will serve to convince us, that it was in use in the time of Noah. The waters Chap. vii. 24, are said to have prevailed on the earth 150 days, and again, Chap. viii. 3, after the end of 150 days the waters were abated: Now 150 days are just five months of 30 days to each; and accordingly in the account of the flood we read at Chap. vii. 11, that it began in the second month on the 17th day of the month, and at Chap. viii. 4, that on the seventh month on the 17th day of the month the Ark rested on the mountains of Ararat. Thus there were exactly five months, or 150 days, from the notice that is taken of its commencement to that which is fixed for its period; and hence it is clear that the month consisted exactly of thirty days.

That there were only twelve months in the Jewish year is likewise plain from names being assigned to so many, and no more; and it is well known that when in order to supply the deficiency of days which this reckoning must every year occasion, an intercalary or embolismal month was added, it was not called by a new name, but by the name of the month nearest to it, or Ve-adar; which name was given, and the month occasionally introduced, by the direction of the great Sanhedrim, who regulated the time with a view to the moveable festivals. In like manner Sir John Marsham * hath made it appear that this was the mode of reckoning at the time when the Children of Israel came out of Egypt, and that it was observed likewise among the Egyptians themselves, for, as he says, “nondum Ægyptii anno addiderant quinque Dies επαγομενας † or the five additional days to complete the number of the real year. And Strauchius ‡ calls this the Egyptian Calendar, and says, it is very probable that the Israelites followed it.

* So ירח in Hebrew signifies both Moon and Month; μην in Greek is from μην the Moon, and from the mensa spatia of this planet Cicero derives the Latin word mensis. De Nat. Deor. l. ii. Ut annus ad Solis, sic mensis ad Lunæ motus præcipue dirigitur. Beveridge's Inst. Chron. l. i. cap. 7, and at the beginning of the next chapter, Usus obtinuit, ut ex eorum tantum Planetarum, qui nobis majores videntur, Solis et Lunæ, motibus, annus mensuretur.

In later times also we find the plainest footsteps of the same sort of calculation : for at 1 Kings, vii. 4, we read that Solomon had twelve Officers, who provided victuals for the King and his household, each man his month in the year : so that each had a proportionate district assigned him, without any regard to accidental variation ; and in 1 Chron. xxvii. 1, we find twelve legions appointed of the Children of Israel, and a chief commander for each legion, to serve King David in the order of the courses, each for his month, throughout the twelve months of the year ; there being only twelve captains named afterwards, and to each his month is allotted in regular succession, without any provision for an intercalary month, or any interruption of the computation from its ancient form. The house of Judah had the honour of providing a Captain for the first month, and as if a steady adherence was to be paid to the number twelve, each chief Captain presided over twice that number of thousands, or 24,000 men.

That this same sort of year prevailed in other countries has been evinced by several Writers on Chronology, and especially by Mr. Marshall in his Treatise on the Seventy

* P. 183, Fol. Ed.

† Bishop Beveridge tells us, that these were added at the end of the Nabonassarean Year, but that the twelve months still consisted of thirty days each. See Inst. c. 10, and at the next Chapter that the modern Persian year called Yesdegerd, from the last King of Persia, who had that name, and who was slain by the Saracens, is of the same form with the Nabonassarean.

‡ See B. 4, ch. 3, of Breviar. Chron. translated by Sault, third Ed. Lond.

Weeks *. I shall mention only a few instances, and those such as we are chiefly concerned with, namely Persia and Babylon, in both of which that it was commonly received we may perhaps be convinced from the following circumstances. Dr. Prideaux tells us (p. i. b. 4.) that after Darius Hystaspes had subdued India, and made it, according to Herodotus, the twentieth Prefecture of his Empire, he received from it an annual tribute of 360 talents of gold, according to the number of the days of the then Persian year, appointing a talent for each day. In the Book of Esther, Chap. i. 4, we learn that King Ahasuerus made a feast for all his Princes and Servants, the united powers of Persia and Media, when he continued to exhibit the opulence of the glory of his kingdom an hundred and eighty days. There seems no probable reason to be assigned why this number of days should be pitched upon, but that it was just six months † or half a year; and consequently the whole year was 360 days. Both these instances relating to the Persians are below the times of the Babylonish Captivity, and may serve to satisfy us therefore that this form of year was in use amongst that people, lower than the times of Daniel. With respect to the Babylonians, Ctesias observes of Semiramis, that she built the Wall of Babylon 360 furlongs in its circuit, that the number of furlongs might be equal to the number of days in the year. And though Diodorus ‡ makes it 365 furlongs, yet Capellus and others have considered the word πεντε as superfluous. Herodotus, lib. v, shews that a journey of three months is a journey equivalent to ninety days at 150 furlongs a day, or 13,500 furlongs, the distance from Sardes to Susa; so that according to the Asiatic computation in his time the month consisted of thirty days.

* See Part. ii. c. 4, where most of the same arguments are urged which I have here selected, though in a different form. See also Jackson's Chron. Vol. II. where he shews that the Indians, Chinese, and Mexicans, reckon by the year of 360 days, as well as the Egyptians, Chaldeans, and Scripture Writers.

† So Menochius in Pool's Synop. "Duravit sex mensibus;" and the same opinion is entertained by the Jews.

‡ Lib. II. 4.

Now this mode of reckoning being so generally prevalent, it is natural to conclude the Prophet Daniel would make use of it for his computations; for it was not only in use among his countrymen the Jews, but with those nations also where he was detained a captive, and especially by the great King from whom his fellow-captives had received their deliverance, and in whose reign he probably completed and compiled his Book.—But yet the Prophet, who was well skilled in all kinds of literature, was doubtless well versed in chronology, and therefore saw the inconvenience that might arise from calculations formed on different principles, or by a measure of time of an uncertain length. In order to avoid this, he seems to have given to his computation years the name of Times, or periods of calculation then in use, in which he was probably not singular *, instead of calling them by the name of שנים †, which more properly applied to the full annual revolutions of the Sun. At the same time as the word he has adopted is of a more general signification, lest it should be misapplied he seems to have explained it in one place, Chap. xi. 13, making the word שנים Years follow העתים the Times, thus limiting the sort of period to which it belonged. It was doubtless generally known in his age, and probably long before, that there was a considerable difference between years of computation and full solar years, which the intercalary month must sufficiently evince to the Jews; but he might foresee that in future ages this difference would more strongly appear; or rather the evidence would be such as to introduce a method that would supersede computation years entirely; and as his Writings were intended for the benefit of distant Generations, the reason of his adopting the word TIMES is so highly convincing, that we are led from hence to admire the judgment of the Prophet, if not to acknowledge the Prescience of that all-wise Power from whose dictates he wrote.

* In this sense Thucydides, who lived not long after Daniel, uses the word χρόνος in the following passage, lib. i. c. 30. του τε χρόνου τον πλείστον μετα την ναυμαχίαν επεκρατούν της θαλάσσης, thus translated by Duker, Et post illud navale praelium maximâ ejus anni parte maris illius imperium obtinuerunt. For farther illustration of this matter see the Notes where the word occurs, especially at Chapters ix. xii.

† שנים anni, from שנה iterare, wherein the Sun reiterates his course, or returns to the same point from whence he set out, or, according to Buxtorf, in se sua per vestigia semper volvatur et redeat. So the Greek εναντας, from his revolving into himself; and hence the Egyptian Hieroglyphic of a Serpent with its Tail in its Mouth.

I shall conclude these Chronological Remarks with an Argument deduced by the Authors of the Encyclopedie in favour of the authenticity of this Book. After having observed that the Canon of the Sacred Books was formed some ages before the reign of Antiochus, and that since that epoch the Jews have never added a single book, as appears from a constant tradition among them, according to Josephus against Apion, b. i. “they add, there is one farther reflection to this purpose, which the Unbelievers will never be able to answer; According to the Astronomical Remarks of M. Cheseaux on Daniel, this Prophet must have either been one of the most ready Astronomers that ever existed, or have been divinely inspired, to be able to find out those perfect Cycles that he hath directed to. Wherefore this Book must have been written at a time when Astronomy was cultivated with great success among the Chaldeans; but under the reign of Antiochus there was not a single Jew, that was either an Astronomer or a Prophet *;” The Authors refer afterwards to Chap. xii. ver. 7, 11, and 12, for the astronomical Cycles to which they allude. Whatever merit there may be in the calculations, or in the arguments deduced from them, the reasons of these numbers will be attempted to be explained when we come to the passages themselves.

* Il y a de plus une reflexion à faire à laquelle les incrédules ne repondront jamais. Selon les remarques astronomiques de M. Cheseaux, sur le livre de Daniel, il faut ou que ce prophète ait été l'un des plus habiles Astronomes qui ait jamais existé, ou qu'il ait été divinement inspiré, pour trouver les cycles parfaits qu'il a indiqués. Donc ce livre a été écrit dans le tems que l'astronomie étoit cultivée avec le plus de succès chez les Chaldéens; sous le regne d' Antiochus, aucun Juif n'étoit ni Astronome ni Prophète.

IN the following Notes there is frequent mention of the Greek Interpreter; it may be recollected also that at the former part * of this Discourse an allusion was made to an early Translation of Daniel into Greek; as both these points may be elucidated together, I shall now advert to them, and the more readily as the inquiry may lead to some useful Remarks on the Greek Version called the Septuagint.

Whatever opinion the learned now seem to entertain of the Story or Fiction of the seventy-two Interpreters brought down from Judea into Egypt at a very large expence by Ptolemy Philadelphus, it is generally agreed that about the time of this King's reign the Jews of Alexandria found it necessary to translate the Scriptures into Greek. The Law of Moses or the Pentateuch was first entered upon and finished with great care and accuracy; and perhaps it was only this part, that was at first deposited in the royal Library. It appears however that this monarch was a very great lover of Books †, as well as a great encourager of learned men; and from hence it is probable, as well as from the expediency of the thing, that the rest of the Scriptures were soon after translated into the same language, though at different times, and by different persons. It is certain that the whole was translated before the Book of Ecclesiasticus was written, as appears from the Prologue to that Book, and this was above 130 years before Christ: But how long before this period is a point which is not easily ascertained. Isaac Vossius seems of opinion that the whole was completed before the end of the long ‡ reign of Philadelphus; and if the reason that he assigns for it from the account of Josephus § be true, that the King invited learned

* See page x.

† He had in his Library 500,000 Volumes, according to Josephus, in the early part of his reign. Ant. l. xii. c. 2.

‡ He reigned thirty-nine years.

§ Ant. l. xii. c. 2.

Jews continually into his kingdom, we might from hence and for the reasons above hinted be inclined to agree with him, and conclude that translated copies of each of the twenty-two or twenty-four books * according to the Jewish arrangement were placed in his Library.

The learned † Dr. Prideaux thinks a copy of the whole Bible, as soon as it was finished, was put in this Library, and there continued till that noble Repository of Learning was accidentally burnt in the wars of Julius Cæsar. And he observes, that it seems to have lain there in a very obscure manner, none of the Greek Authors now extant, nor any of the ancient Latin, having taken any notice of it. From hence it should seem that the access to it might not have been easy, and the following consideration may possibly incline us to think, it was not much sought after. For the Translation of the Law only at first was in public use, being read in the Synagogues every Sabbath day, till the use of it was interdicted a long time after in the time of the Persecutions under Antiochus Epiphanes; and copies therefore being numerous of this might make the other parts less desired. The Hellenistic Jews, conforming to the customs of their brethren in Judea, after the above interdict, were willing to introduce the public Reading of the Prophets also: but as copies of the Original Translation were not easily to be procured, new or adulterated Translations might be hastily prepared, and, getting by degrees into general use, might obtain such an attachment to them, as religious manuals, however defective or faulty, have been found to gain, whenever sanctioned by public authority, and familiarised by inveterate usage. Learned men, I presume from internal marks, have fixed our present LXX Version of some of the prophets near the time of Antiochus Epiphanes; and perhaps the whole Version which we now have, so far as it regards the Prophetical Writings, will be placed for the same reason at nearly the same age. But still this argument from the internal evidence may go no farther than to prove that there are some marks of resemblance in particular phrases, idioms, or the like, between our present Copy and the Writings of those times, which may be deduced from interpolations or alterations only, and can scarce be sufficiently strong to overturn the opinion, that the greater part of the Version might have been translated more than half a century before.

* Joseph. cont. Ap. l. i.

† Connex. p. ii. B. i.

That there was such an early authentic Translation deposited in the Alexandrian Library, not only the Alexandrian dialect of our present Version may countenance, but the story of the seventy-two Interpreters with all its concomitant and consequent circumstances, must seem to vouch. Many ancient Writers favour this opinion, and Tertullian and Chrysostom both mention such a copy; the latter of whom supposes it to have been preserved there till his time, (see Henry Valesius's Letter to Usher) and that very learned Primate last mentioned thinks there were two* Greek Versions, the one in the time of Philadelphus, the other in that of Ptolemy Physcon, and that the former was the Library Version that was burnt. From all these considerations I think the early Translation of the Bible into Greek may be of some weight in the argument for which it is above alleged; and all that I would mean to infer is, that if the whole was finished within a hundred years from its first reputed commencement, then it affords us a proof that the Book of Daniel was earlier than the time of Antiochus; and if the completion be placed in the reign of Philadelphus, then it will carry us within a few years of the full and final completion of the Canon under the Pontificate of Simon the Just.

* It is certain that there was a Greek Version in common use, called κοινή, or Vulgata, and distinct from the Version of the LXX found in the Hexapla, from which Jerom professes to have translated his Bible. See his Epistle to Sunnia and Fretela.

After all it must be acknowledged, that there is much uncertainty in this matter, and though what I have offered is the result of due reflection, and my best judgment, yet as the first object of all Disquisitions of this sort should be Truth, I would desire the Reader to lay no greater stress upon these arguments than they shall be found to deserve. Considerable light may be expected on this subject hereafter from the labours and disquisitions of an ingenious Gentleman*, who is engaged in the momentous work of collating the MSS. of the LXX Version. For it must be remembered that this Version, however valuable, is in many parts, and especially in the prophetical, defective and faulty: And the faults† were much greater in some of the Prophets than in others. Indeed in the Book of Daniel the defects were so great, that, as we learn from St. Jerom, the whole of this part was rejected, and the Version of Theodotion substituted in its stead. Which rejection is chiefly ascribed to the conduct of Origen; for in his Hexapla, though there were two columns allotted in each of the other Prophets, one for the Version of LXX, and another for that of Theodotion, upon Daniel there was only one, viz. for the LXX, with sundry marks or asterisks in it, denoting supplies or rejections from the authority of Theodotion's, as being accounted much nearer the Hebrew. And in other books of his he professes to follow the Edition of Theodotion in his Citations, and not of the LXX; and hence the LXX as amended by Origen‡ came first to be read in churches, and afterwards the whole Version of Theodotion was adopted for that purpose, and the original LXX Version, being suffered to go into disuse, was by this means

* The Rev. Dr. Holmes, now Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford.

† Many of these faults must doubtless have proceeded from the mistakes of Transcribers, and when these errors are clearly discovered, and a correct edition appears, we can scarce now expect a fairer help to lead us to the knowledge of the original Scriptures in the earliest times of the Canon.

‡ For a just, neat, and well-drawn character of this Princeps Veterum, or Chief of the Ancients, see Concio ad Clerum, published in 1790, by my very learned Friend Dr. John Randolph, Canon of Christ Church, and Royal Professor of Divinity in Oxford.

probably lost. On this account it is that Commentators on Daniel commonly cite the Greek Interpreter, when they refer to what is usually called the LXX in the Polyglotts; and the same rule is generally observed in these Notes; and when the late Roman Edition * is referred to, it is commonly distinguished by some mark, which will be so easily discerned as to need no explanation.

NOR is the want of a LXX the only Version which from the Book of Daniel has been made the Object of Cavil; there is another defect which is charged to it, and in which it is singular from the rest of the Prophets, the having no Targum. When the pure Hebrew language was growing into disuse among the common herd of the Jewish people, and had almost entirely yielded to the Chaldee, or at least a mixed kind of language which had been in use after the return from the Captivity, it was thought advisable to translate the Scriptures into the Chaldee or the Jerusalem tongue †, that they might still be read by the people in the language to which they were accustomed. Onkelos, a learned Jew, undertook to translate the Law, and Jonathan ben Uzziel, another very distinguished one, said to be of the school of Hillel, translated the Prophets, and this very near the time of our Saviour's appearance upon earth. These Translations were called Targums ‡, and in the latter, or among the Prophets, the Book of Daniel is not now found. But we must not certainly conclude from hence that it never existed, as many Targums are upon good authority said to have been lost; and even this of Jonathan was at some times very rarely to be met with before the Art of Printing was known. Besides the greater part of this Book is written in the Chaldee Language, and therefore must make a Translation into that tongue less necessary *: and what is still more, Bishop Chandler has made it appear very probable, that there was a Targum of Jonathan's on Daniel, and very good reasons may be conjectured at least why it came to be rejected; for a Book that so plainly treats of the Messiah would probably meet with little favour among the Jews. Moreover it appears that Jonathan in other parts of his Targum evidently alludes to passages in this Book, and consequently must have been well acquainted with it, as the same learned Prelate has fully shewn †. It is also observed by Dr. Prideaux ‡, that it was long supposed there were no Targums on the two Books of Chronicles; because none such were known till they were published by Beckius at Augsburgh in Germany, that on the first Book in 1680, and the other on the second in 1683. However this argument ought not to affect in the least the authenticity of this Book, as there are irrefragable Proofs that it existed long before the Targums at their earliest date could have been possibly framed §.

* The Editor calls it in his Title-page, Codex Chisianus.

† This mixed Language of ancient Hebrew and Chaldee is called in the New Testament the Hebrew Tongue.

‡ They are also distinguished by the name of the Chaldee Paraphrase, probably from the free and loose manner of rendering, which the latter often uses, agreeably to the didactic complexion of the times in which he wrote. There are other Targums or Versions; for which see Prid. Con. p. ii. B. 3, but these were the chief.

In this Prefatory Discourse I have found it necessary to enter into a great variety of particulars, some of which have been treated with greater brevity than others, as they have already been discussed by much abler Writers. It has been unfortunate for the Book of Daniel, and for the Interpreters of it, that not only many passages therein have been

* For the same reason probably there is no Targum on the Book of Ezra, at least none now appears. Nor is there any known upon Nehemiah; but there may have been one and lost. Elias Levita a Jew of the 16th century, is said to have doubted, whether there ever was such a Book as Jonathan's Targum, the copies were at that time so very rare.

† See his Vindication of the Defence of Christianity, Chap. i. sect. 3.

‡ Connex. P. ii. B. 8.

§ If the Reader is not satisfied as to this point from the preceding Observations, he may consult the Vindication of the Defence, &c. in the part just quoted; and Dr. Samuel Chandler's Vindication of the Antiquity and Authority of Daniel's Prophecies.

the subject of cavil, but the authority of the Book itself has been called in question; that objections of a general as well as of a specific nature, to the whole as well as to the parts, are to be combated, and though often refuted, like a many-headed monster, they have been often revived in different forms. Several forgeries have been palmed upon the world as the work of this Prophet, and from hence his real Works have been unreasonably suspected. If the Author has written in Chaldee as well as in Hebrew, some compositions that are evidently Greek, must be also ascribed to him, and pretended to have had an Eastern original, though that original has never been known. It happened that some of these works, as the Story of Susanna, and of Bel and the Dragon, had found a place in the Translation of Theodotion, had been afterward translated by Jerom into the Vulgate Latin, and from hence obtained the sanction of the famous Council of Trent, and were considered as the 13th and 14th Chapters * of this Book. This opinion is still maintained by the Church of Rome, but deservedly rejected by Protestants: For to mention no other reasons, the play upon the words or names † of the trees in the Greek History of Susanna, and the very absurdity and manifest plagiarism in the latter Tale, must be sufficient to convince us of their spurious origin.

* The History of Susanna in its Apocryphal Title is said to be set apart from the beginning of Daniel; and the History of the Destruction of Bel and the Dragon to be cut off from the end of it. The Song of the Three Children, which like the rest is said to be not in the Hebrew, will be adverted to in its place at Chapter the third. Neither of the three appears to have been ever received in the Jewish Canon, or acknowledged by the Ancients, nor does Jerom give one of them any better Title than the Fables of Bel and the Dragon. Lardner thinks that the Canon of Ephrem the Syrian was the same as that of the Jews; and says, that in his Commentary on Daniel he has taken no notice of either of the above pieces, as Dr. Asseman owns. See Cred. Vol. IV. p. 407. 8vo.

†	υπο σχινον, under a Mastich Tree. The Angel is ordered	} to cut thee in two.
	σχισαι σε μεσον, υπο πρινον, under a Holm Tree. The Angel waiteth πρισαι σε μεσον,

The like correspondence is not found in other Languages. If there are Hebraisms in these pieces, it can only prove that the Author was a Hebrew, or Hellenistic Jew, that wrote in the Greek Language.

But there are other suggestions of greater weight, and from characters of high reputation, which have been in our own times started against some parts of this Book, that have been always received as canonical. The chief of these did not occur to me till I had nearly finished this Dissertation, and therefore though they may have been in some measure answered in the preceding parts of it, yet I must not omit the particular notice of them, lest they should be conceived to be improperly disregarded, or incapable of a satisfactory reply.

That very eminent and able Critic J. D. Michaelis, in the second Volume of his Supplement, p. 921, has the following remark,—“ Hoc argumento non ut certo utor, cum alias ob causas, tum quod possint capita Danielis iii. iv. et v. reliquum librum recipienti suspecta videri aut spuria.” I do not find that his suspicions extend to any more than those three Chapters; but the learned Professor Eichhorn, in his Introduction to the Old Testament, brings forward doubts that advance a step further, and include the sixth Chapter also in the suspicious part. Not that he denies that these four Chapters made originally a part of the Book of Daniel; but he seems to think they were first in a detached form handed down by Tradition before the original Canon was settled, and hence proceeded a double Chaldee Text, one of which has been preserved to us by the Masoretes, and from the other was translated the Greek Version. Each he thinks had its peculiar perfections and faults. A general conformity prevailed in both, but variations in some passages may be discovered. One compressed what the other gave more diffusively: One related some circumstances of which the other took no notice. Yet the present Chaldee Text he allows is sometimes to be preferred before the Greek Version, though at others he gives the preference to the Greek. He confines his exceptions to the former part of the Book*, and produces several variations which tend, as he conceives, to establish his opinion; but he allows the six last Chapters indisputably to contain original pieces of which Daniel was the Author.

In a Posthumous Work of a very able Writer the late learned Dr. Jortin, intitled Tracts Philological, &c. printed at London, in 1790, the following passage appears at p. 390, of Vol. I. “The Book of Daniel hath been attacked by Infidels ancient and modern. It must never be given up by any Christian; for our Saviour cites Daniel’s Prophecies, and when he so often calls himself the Son of Man, he plainly alludes to Daniel vii. 13, 14. But may it not be proposed as a mere speculation, whether the Book of the Prophecies of Daniel doth not begin at the seventh Chapter, and whether the six foregoing, which are historical, were not affixed by some Jewish Writer, at some time, but not long, after the death of the Prophet†? Our Lord hath not cited any thing from them, nor alluded to any thing contained in them. Indeed, the Writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews, Chap. xi. 33, speaking of those who stopped the mouths of lions, and quenched the violence of fire, alludes to the stories of Daniel, Chap. vi. and of the three men, Chap. iii.”

Now though the remarks of these learned men are chiefly intimations of their own doubts, or rather intended some of them to remove those of others by new and ingenious solutions, yet I am willing to give the objection its full force, and as I have often revolved in my mind this whole matter, would beg leave to offer my sentiments upon it in a compendious manner, especially as it may lead to some

* From Chap. ii. ver. 4. to the end of Chap. vi.

† An opinion not unlike this seems to have been entertained by Dr. Halifax in his second Sermon of Warburton Lectures, p. 37, but expressed in a more decided manner; yet he still vindicates the authority of the whole Book.

Observations that may throw light on the substance, as well as strengthen the authority of this Book.

In its fullest extent the united Objection reaches only to the six first Chapters; The six last therefore of this Prophet are out of the question, and to be considered as undoubtedly authentic. Indeed the seventh Chapter is written in Chaldee, but as our Saviour plainly alludes to a passage in it at ver. 13, 14, when He so often calls himself the Son of Man, this, as Dr. Jortin has observed, must establish its authenticity: And whoever carefully peruses this Chapter may clearly discover in it the style of Daniel, and such a similarity and correspondency between this and the later Visions, that notwithstanding the difference of the language there can be no hesitation to whom it ought to be ascribed.

The first Chapter is written in pure Hebrew; and though it relates the History of Daniel and his friends, and speaks of the Author in the third Person, yet this is no material Objection to its authenticity, as the like mode is found in other Books of the Old Testament, especially in Hosea and Ezra; and the favourable light in which the Author represents his own Endowments and Proficiencies, together with those of his friends, is a very fair reason for his adopting the third Person; and the like observation may be applied to similar usages in the other Historical Parts of his Book.

The second Chapter begins with the Hebrew Language, and thus far I presume is unexceptionable likewise. Why the Prophet should leave this language, and introduce the Chaldee, some manifest reasons may be assigned, as that he was writing of matters that chiefly related to the Chaldeans, was stating a conference between the King of Babylon and his Magicians, at the beginning of which conference the language changes ; and moreover the Prophet himself was in the Court of that King, and in a high station in it, probably at the time when he wrote the King's Dream recorded in this second Chapter. The Dream itself has also such an evident agreement between another of Daniel's related in the seventh Chapter, that there seems no reason to doubt of the truth and circumstances of it, or that it was written by Daniel himself who is so much interested in it, or at least at his suggestion. These considerations may sufficiently obviate any exceptions to the two first Chapters, the style and manner of which must strongly plead in favour of their authenticity.

The other four Chapters contain in them some occurrences of a truly marvellous nature, and which have sometimes staggered the faith of cool and philosophical minds. I have endeavoured to obviate this difficulty in my Notes, by quoting parallel instances, either in the sacred or profane Writings, of Escapes or Deliverances, of the Suspension of the ordinary Powers of Nature, of the unrelenting and impetuous Carriage of haughty Rulers, of various sorts of vindictive and cruel Punishments, such as may tend to remove those Difficulties, which would offer themselves upon our first attention to these portions of History. I must also add in general that if the Attestation of the Book which delivers these narratives is well-founded and established, the narratives themselves are surely credible; as there is nothing contradictory or absurd in them, nothing repugnant to those notions which we must admit of the power of that Almighty Being, to whose secret Agency the Deliverances are ascribed.

As to the Language in which they are written let me farther observe, that this is no other than the vernacular one of the country in which the Transactions were performed ; and there may be this additional reason for the use of this Language, that the Almighty Father of all men might be unwilling to leave himself without witness, without verbal witness, even in those countries which did not acknowledge him as the true God; so that by thus gradually making discoveries of his interposition to the Pagan World, he might prepare them for the glorious Manifestation of his Will by his Son, who was to be a Light to the Gentiles, as well as the glory of his People Israel.

Whether this Language is altogether agreeable to the usual style of Daniel, and consequently whether he was the Writer of these four Chapters, I am ready to allow that doubts may fairly arise in the Critic's mind. There is indeed often such a simplicity and energy, the Characteristics of ancient Writings, as must strongly incline us to ascribe the Composition to Daniel, and from a view of these passages * I had once concluded that the whole was undoubtedly written by him. But upon a farther review, I must confess that the diffusiveness and expansion of other parts, the different turn of the sentences, and flow of the language, have made me less sanguine; and though I retain no doubt as to the authenticity of any part of the Book †, or whether it should be received as canonical, yet the conviction is not so strong, at least from the style, that Daniel himself was the Writer of the whole of it. Other Books of the Old Testament have portions in them not written by the persons whose names they respectively bear; The same might possibly have been the case in this. An inattention to Accuracy amongst the Oriental Writers has been often noticed, and is generally confessed; and though not sufficient to occasion mistakes in the sense, may * Compare Chap. iii. 29. with Chap. ii. 5. See the beginning of Chap. iv. and ver. 4. 28, &c. the latter part of Chap. v. and Chap. vi. 16, 21, 22; and where Daniel is introduced as speaking, the Language is properly his. See also the former part of this Dissertation.

† To dispute the real age of Daniel, and the Genuineness of his Book, is arbitrary and unreasonable. Lardner, Vol. II. p. 201.

yet sometimes affect the style, and make it appear less compact, or less flowing. I am not aware of any alarming consequence from the suggestion, that there might have been two Chaldee copies of these Chapters, one from which Theodotion translated, and the other transmitted to us through the Masoretes, and though each might have in many instances varied from the other, yet the Text from which both were originally derived might still have been uniform, and probably in but few respects different from what we have now in use. And whether it was written by Daniel, or at his direction by another person, by one of his Companions, or a Member of the great Synagogue, in any such view there can be no objection to its authenticity, no doubt of its belonging to the original Canon.

It is said Chap. vii. 1, that Daniel wrote his Dream; a part of the Book therefore was undoubtedly written by him; and that the Compilers of the Canon of Scripture should insert traditionary Stories among the indisputed Records of this Prophet, is a position very disparaging to the authority of Scripture, and scarce reconcileable with the doctrine that it was all θεοπνευστος *, or inspired by God. If therefore no probable period can be fixed for the introduction of these suspected Chapters, nor any other marks pointed out that would evince their origin to be spurious, the conclusion seems necessary, that they must be authentic, and if not written by Daniel, at least approved by him, and incorporated with his authority into his Book.

Should the Argument be transferred from Words to Things, or any doubts be started concerning the circumstances of the History contained in these Chapters, it will then assume another form. Whatever may be the sentiments of others, I confess I can perceive no sort of Hiatus in the narrative of the third Chapter at the 23d verse, as related in the present Chaldee Text. Where is the absurdity in supposing that a furious Despot, and conceiving himself insulted, should, after he had ordered a furnace of fire to be heated to the utmost to receive the objects of his resentment, attend himself to the event, and especially when the violence of the fire had destroyed those persons who were executing his commands? That the 22d verse in the Translation of Theodotion is defective, I can clearly discover, but the Chaldee has no such defect; nor do I see any at the 23d verse, but rather the language seems much more agreeable to the Oriental style as it now stands, than with that long Hymn introduced in it, which is foisted into the Greek of Theodotion. However if it be difficult to account for the Monarch's presence at the furnace, the circumstances of his being called thither by the voice of the three men hymning or singing appears to me to assist but little in removing the difficulty.

* 2 Tim. iii. 16.

With respect to the Edict at Chap. iv. whether it was taken from the Chaldee Archives, or written by a Jew, I shall not inquire: But why should any one urge against it the Improbability of its Contents? A haughty and imperious Monarch, flushed with long and constant successes in War, and all the decorations and majestic achievements which the most extravagant Fancy could design in Peace, accustomed to the gratification of his most licentious Passions, and the uncontroled fury of his eager Desires, that such a person, thus bloated with Pride, and on the pinnacle of his Ambition, should be given up to his Phrenzy, fall into a state of the most abject Melancholy, continue therein for a considerable term, and at length be restored to his Understanding and his Kingdom, is surely not a very unnatural process, and by no means surpassing our Faith, when attested by proper records, and conveyed down to us in a Book of such authority as the Bible. If the end of the Edict that declares these facts be not immediately obvious, and yet may be discovered by a small addition which appears in the Alexandrian Version, the most natural and just conclusion is, that the clause, if necessary, must have been lost from the present Chaldee Text, and which this Version will supply. Besides, that Daniel should not be first summoned to interpret the Dream, in preference to the rest of the Magi, may be attributed possibly to the state of the King's mind, which might not be reduced at once to insanity, but the malady might gradually come upon him. Or whatever was the cause, it can scarce seem right to examine questions of this sort at this distance of time with a very scrupulous and nice inquiry; and if we should find some general intimations only* of this Disease of Nebuchadnezzar's in profane History, it might be enough to satisfy candid and impartial minds. I would also add farther with respect to the leading argument, that in this fourth Chapter the Variations of the Chaldee from the Greek of Theodotion are comparatively few, not near so many as in the other three Chapters, nor more than may be discovered in any other Chapter of Daniel of a proportionate length.

With respect to the History of Belshazzar, that Daniel when called in to explain the Hand-writing, after a long and solemn pause, should at length remind the King of his Imprudence, and his neglect of Improvement from his Ancestor's Sufferings, is no more than might be expected from a faithful Monitor immediately authorised by Heaven, to execute a Commission that was a Prelude to the fate of a great Empire, nor can I think such conduct could ever deserve to be characterised under the denomination of unseemly reproaches, or as delivered in an unbecoming manner.—To these considerations I will beg leave to add, that the History of these four Chapters is confirmed by Josephus †, who relates minutely the far greater part of it, and from hence its authority should seem less questionable.

* See the Note at the end of Chap. iv.

† Ant. x. 10.

I have rather dwelt on this subject from an apprehension that the Argument might wear a more equivocal aspect than from the first outset appears to have been stated. Had I conceived it to relate altogether to the nature or form of compositions prior to the adjustment of the Original Canon, I should scarce have thought it necessary to examine it, but must have reckoned the inquiry of too large a nature to fall within the compass of my design. The original Text ought not to be given up in any portion without strong conviction of Error; and to suspect it any where to be an adulterated copy * must have an undoubted tendency to lessen its conviction, and can never be approved by the faithful Advocate for the Writings of Truth.

After all, though I am very much a friend to free and rational Inquiry, yet I cannot but be persuaded, that the Argument from internal notices may in some cases be very fallacious, and that too much confidence ought not to be placed in it. Our own judgments are constantly liable to manifold errors, and often sadly warped by various prejudices: The style of ancient Writers may have been very different at different times, and on different subjects and occasions. The Greek Translation might have been made in a freer manner, or from a defective copy, and by an inferior hand † to that of the other Prophets; and that it differs materially from the Original in other parts as well as † Walton suspects that the Book of Daniel was not publicly read by the Jews, lest it should give offence to the Princes to whom they were subject, since it contains such manifest Predictions of the change and ruin of the greatest kingdoms under which they lived; so many suspect the Apocalypse was not immediately published or received in the Church on this account, because many calamities were predicted in it to the Roman Empire: And that for the same reason perhaps the LXX did not translate Daniel, lest they should offend Ptolemy, but that it was afterwards translated into Greek by some other hand. Proleg. ix. sect. 51.

* To prevent mistakes, the expression is meant chiefly to be understood of considerable interpolations, introduced on mere human authority.

in these Chapters is evident*. Some Errors have crept into the original Text of the Old Testament undoubtedly from the mistakes of Transcribers: Other Variations may possibly have found their way into it from early Versions and marginal References. The sense may not be very materially affected in either of these cases, and the Text itself through the labours of the Learned may by degrees be restored to its genuine purity. Upon the whole, from the constant attention of the Jews to their Scriptures, and the general superintendency of the Providence or Spirit of God on this Divine Code, we may fairly conclude, that the Old Testament is come down to us unadulterated as to any very essential Variation; and that the Book of Daniel, as it now stands, and has stood for many years before the Christian Æra, and as far as appears from within a few years after the final Completion of the Canon, is an important part of this sacred Code.

If some of the Articles herein adverted to may seem to have deserved a more full Discussion, or if there are other general Topics which might claim attention in the consideration of this Book, I can only say, that they must belong more properly to Works of a different nature from the present, and have either had justice done them already, or may expect it from future Inquiries.

* See Chapters ii. 25; viii. 11, 25; ix. 8; xi. 2, 20; xii. 13.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL.

---

CHAPTER I.

1 IN the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of

---

THIS Chapter relates the History of Daniel during the early part of his Captivity, and especially the mode of treatment of himself and some young friends, before they were introduced to the personal attendance on king Nebuchadnezzar.

1. In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim.—Great difficulties have arisen in ascertaining the chronology of this King's reign, in making it agree with Jeremiah's prophecy relating to the seventy years of captivity in his 25th chapter, and with the reign of Nebuchadnezzar the Great. It may not be amiss therefore to enter somewhat largely into this inquiry, as it has engaged the attention of several learned persons, may be useful in fixing a mark whence many subsequent events may be more readily arranged, and will lead to some observations on the history of the times, and of the affairs of the Jews, at the commencement of the captivity.

After the death of the good king Josiah, the people of the land took his son Jehoahaz, and made him king in his father's stead. But this transaction not proving agreeable to Pharaoh-necho king of Egypt, he dethroned this wicked prince, cancelled his short reign of three months, put him in bonds, and took him away into Egypt, where he remained till his death : When he did this, he also made the land of Judah tributary, and set up Jehoiakim as king over it, in the room of Josiah his father, as we learn from the 23rd chapter of the 2nd Book of Kings.

Judah came Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon to Jeru-

---

This Prince, who seems to have been more wicked than any of his predecessors, continued a sort of tributary King for about four years. But in his 4th year, Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, besieged Jerusalem and subdued it ; upon which Jehoiakim became his servant three years, submitted to become his tributary, and to hold his kingdom under him ; whereupon Nebuchadnezzar left him in possession, in order to pursue his conquests over the Egyptians. Soon after the expiration of this term of three years, that is, about the 8th year of Jehoiakim, he rebelled against the king of Babylon, refused the customary tribute, set himself up as the free Sovereign of Jerusalem, and continued in this state two or three years. During which term, the Lord sent against him bands of the Chaldees, and of the Syrians, and of the Moabites and Ammonites, who under the direction of the king of Babylon made war upon him, and committed depredations from various parts, till at length they shut him up in Jerusalem, and having taken him prisoner in his eleventh year they slew him with the sword, and cast out his dead body into the high-way ; thus according to the prophecy of Jeremiah, Chap. xxii. 19, burying him with the burial of an ass, without one of the gates of Jerusalem.

Now some of the Jews and other learned men are of opinion, that by the 3rd year of Jehoiakim, the prophet here means the last year of his reign, or of that term in which he reigned as sole and independent Monarch over the land of Judah ; and it is certain that in the former years he was only a sort of tributary King, first to the Egyptians, and then to the Assyrians or Babylonians. And this opinion has been thought to be favoured by Josephus, Ant. lib. 10. ch. 6. who places the first attack of Nebuchadnezzar against the Jews in the 4th year of his own reign, or the 8th of Jehoiakim's, at least he does not appear to mention any attack before this. But upon a closer attention to this passage in Josephus, it appears that Nebuchadnezzar, when he made this attack on the Jews, demanded a tribute of Jehoiakim, and threatened war on his refusal : whence perhaps it should seem, that there must have been some former attempts on their city, in order to make such tribute due ; for it is from a country conquered, or that hath submitted, that tribute is usually expected. The Historian also takes notice a little before of the expedition against Necho, and the taking of Charchamish, and all Syria to Pelusium, * except Judea; which he places in the 4th of Jehoiakim; and when he mentions the above menace in the 8th, he does not call this a first attempt upon Jerusalem, nor does his account exclude a former attack, if it does not imply it.

But whatever may have been the opinion of Josephus, the above state of the matter cannot be just; for which among others may be assigned the two following reasons; First, it seems incompatible with the very words of Daniel, who being a Jew, and writing here in Hebrew, must follow most probably the Jewish chronology, in which there would be a great void, if the period from the death of Josiah to the 8th of Jehoiakim was wholly disregarded, or if his 8th year should be considered as his first by calling the 11th his third: But farther, the history of Daniel in his 2nd chapter cannot correspond therewith; for he is there said in the 2nd year of Nubuchadnezzar, meaning according to the Chaldee computation, to be brought before the King to interpret his dream; now he must have been three years before this in captivity, and under the instruction and discipline of the Chaldeans; and therefore it is impossible that this introduction to the King could have been in the 2nd Jewish year of Nebuchadnezzar, who began his reign, that is jointly with his father, toward the end of the 3rd year of Jehoiakim according to the Jewish account (Jer. xxv. i.) yet toward the end of his 5th year, according to the Babylonish account, when after his father's death he reigned over the whole empire. And thus the 7th year of Jehoiakim will be the time, when Daniel discovered his dream to Nebuchadnezzar, and acquainted him with the interpretation of it.

It may be proper just to observe in this place, that the Jewish and Babylonish year not commencing at the same time may sometimes occasion an apparent inconsistency; but this will easily be removed by recollecting that both computations are occasionally found in Scripture, and might very probably be used by the prophet Daniel, who wrote during the captivity in both languages, and seems to follow at different times the manners of each people.

Upon the whole, as some time must be allowed for the siege, the * Παρεξ της Ιουδαίας.—Perhaps this expression is only meant to intimate, that Judea was not subdued in so full a manner as the rest of Syria, or as it was afterwards at the end of the second defeat in the 11th of Jehoiakim, or during the short reign of his son.

preparations for it, and the transactions before and after it, and as the King came up in the 3rd year of Jehoiakim against Jerusalem, probably toward the latter end of it, and diverted his army towards Egypt, to prevent any obstructions from that quarter, before he executed his designs on Jerusalem, nay even had a battle with the Egyptians, and besieged and took Charchamish; upon these accounts we may date the commencement of the seventy years' captivity from the completion of the siege in the 4th year of Jehoiakim, when Daniel and his associates were amongst the first of the captives.

I am still aware there is a disagreement amongst Chronologers, where to fix in other æras this 4th year of Jehoiakim, and consequently as to the real time of the commencement and period of the captivity. This disagreement is pointed out by the author of Critical Observations on Books, and a table is drawn up in his 3rd Number, exhibiting at one view the dates of the Chaldean æra, of the years before Christ, and of the Olympiads, to which the 4th of Jehoiakim and the first capture of Jerusalem are supposed to correspond. Dr. Prideaux places them in the 606th year before Christ, or the 142nd of the æra of Nabonassar; but Vignoles and Blair fix the year after this for the 4th of Jehoiakim, and Vignoles thinks the first capture of Jerusalem happened in that year. I rather think the latter are right, and that the captivity did not continue seventy full solar years, but so many years of computation only, or somewhat more than sixty-nine full years; and thus their termination will be at nearly the same period, or some time in the year 536 before Christ.

I will beg leave to make a short addition to this long note, in order to illustrate a passage in the New Testament. Jehoiakim was succeeded by his son Jehoiachin in the kingdom of Judah, who reigned three months, and was taken captive by Nebuchadnezzar, and carried to Babylon, in the 8th year of that monarch's reign, 2 Kings xxiv. 8—12. Now the names of these two Kings are so nearly alike, that they are probably both called by the same name of Jechonias in the first chapter of St. Matthew: the former was the son of Josias, who begat Jechonias, or Jehoiakim, and his brethren about the time of the captivity. Then after they were brought to Babylon, whither Jehoiakim never came, Jehoiachin or Jechonias begat Salathiel, &c. Some have got over this difficulty by supposing there is an omission in the text; and there are copies that read thus, "Josias begat Joachim, and Joachim begat Jechonias;" but the greater number of copies and the Versions favour the present reading; and there seems no necessity for an alteration.

2 salem, and besieged it. And the Lord gave into his hand Jehoiakim king of Judah, with a part of the vessels of the house of God, and he carried them into the land of Shinar to the house of his God, and brought the vessels into the treasure-house of his God.

3 Then the king spoke to Ashpenaz the chief of his chamberlains, to bring in some of the children of

2. And the Lord gave into his hand.—Many MSS. read יְהוָה for אֱלֹהֵי, an alteration often observable; see a note of Bishop Newcome's on Amos, v. 16. "And the Lord gave αὐτῇ καὶ Ἰωακείμ," the city as well as the King. Cod. Chis.

—and he carried them.—That is, the vessels, and not, as some would understand it, the captives also; for Jehoiakim only is mentioned, who died, as we have seen, in the land of Judah. Moreover, the part of the vessels, which Nebuchadnezzar took away, he brought into the house of his God Bel in the land of Shinar; which seems to have been a level country in Chaldea, in the neighbourhood of Babylon, if not in Babylon itself, as Jerom observes, Terra Semaar locus est Babylonis, in quo fuit campus Dura. But Bochart considering the ע in שִׁנְעַר as a strong guttural, takes it to be the same with Singar mentioned by many ancient geographers, (and the Copt. Vers. reads χωνγαρ) which besides Babylon comprehended all the western coast of the Tigris to the mountains of Armenia. See Phaleg. p. 28. Pliny also tells us, that from the distinguished eminence of the capital, for a long time the most famous city in the whole world, the rest of Assyria and Mesopotamia was called Babylonia. Herein he laid up the vessels in the treasury, a place in ancient temples appropriated for the reception of spoils and trophies, that were consecrated to the Deity to which the Temple belonged. For a more particular account of the vessels, see Jer. lii. 17, &c.

3. The chief of his chamberlains.—רֶב סַרְיִסִּין; thus the term is rendered, Esth. ii. 21. Afterwards throughout the chapter it is שַׂר instead of רֶב; but the Greek all along translates, ἀρχιεunuχος, the Governor of his Eunuchs. The Chaldean verb סַרַס signifies castravit, evulsit; see Cast. Lex. and hence the noun סַרִּיס was applied to an eunuch. Persons of this character were employed in high stations by the Eastern princes, especially among the Persians. See Xen. Cyrop. lib. vii. p. 419. Ed. Hutch. but their offices were also conferred on favourites, who had not been qualified for them by any artificial defect: thus Potiphar who had a wife (Gen. xxxix. 1.) is called סריס, the officer of Pharaoh. See also 2 Kings viii. 6. And in Jeremiah xxxix. 3. we read of an officer called רב סריס Rab-saris: Dr. Castell in his Lex. seems to think the expression equivalent to that ancient one among us of Lord-Dane, or perhaps it may correspond with the Magister Aulæ of the Romans, and the Syriac translator has rendered it by præfectus aulicorum. It seems to have been given to the Satraps, or such distinguished men, as had the care of the royal chambers or wardrobe.

Israel, both of the seed royal, and of the nobles;

In Isai. xxxix. 7. the word סריסים may probably signify Eunuchs, and does so in the opinion of Josephus, lib. x. ch. 2. and in order perhaps to evince the particular completion of the prediction at that verse the word seems to have been rendered in the same sense in this chapter. But the prediction will be verified if we render it by Officer or Chamberlain in both passages; and I rather prefer this sense here, not only as the more general one, but because the young men were to be free from blemish in their bodies as well as in their minds; and the Law, as appears from Deut. xxiii. 1. excludes all sorts of eunuchs from the church, or congregation of the Lord.

—both of the seed.—וּמֹרֶעַ. Several MSS. and some edit. drop the Vau. De Rossi.

—of the nobles.—הַפְּרִתִּים. Interpreters differ much with respect to this word, which is only found in this place, and in the book of Esther, chap. i. 3. Th. retains the word φορθομμυ. Sym. reads παρθων. LXX and Aquila translate electos. Some will have it to mean the same as πρωτων among the Greeks, or the Latin Primores; Bishop Chandler derives it from פֶּאֶר lofty, glorious, whence Phraortes, Abradatas, &c. and תָּמַם to teem. Vind. of Def. Ch. i. sec. 2. Others render it by the word Paratimi, which seems to resemble, and probably to be borrowed from, this word; and thus it is considered as equivalent to the ομοτιμοι of the Greeks, persons of equal rank who lived in courts; see the speech of Cyrus at near the end of the 7th book of Cyrop. ὁ Εὐκρατος. των ευγενων. Bahrdt Hex. which I think right. It may be proper just to observe here, that there are instances of resemblance between the Greek and the Assyrian or Chaldee languages in other books, as well as in this of Daniel.

- 4 Young men, in whom was no blemish, but comely in appearance, and ready of understanding in all wisdom, and of skill in science, and expert in prudence, so that they might have ability to stand in the king's palace, and that he should teach them the learning and the 5 language of the Chaldeans. And the king appointed
-

4. —no blemish.—In the word מְאֻסִּים is an Epenthesis of the letter א; though many MSS. omit the א with Keri, and Houbigant thinks it superfluous. The word is applied chiefly to bodily defects, answerable to the Gr. μωμος. See Ephes. v. 27. but by the subsequent characters in the verse it should seem that the young men were to be as complete in every respect, in their mental as well as corporal powers, as was possible. The greatest care seems to have been required as to the accomplishments of their minds, and on this account three several expressions are made use of, the particular force of each of which it may not be easy to ascertain. Perhaps they relate, the former to the best and most excellent natural abilities, the second to the acquisition of the greatest improvements from cultivation, and the third to the communication of our preceptions in the happiest manner to others; and I have accordingly endeavoured as near as I could to follow this sense in the translation. Houbigant remarks, that by the word מְשֻׁלָּלִים notatur præparatio rei, non res; or that the young persons were to be qualified with a due preparation of mind for these acquirements, not already endued with them in any considerable degree. Yet I must confess, that the word appears to be of different import in the latter part of this book, and to denote the greatest advances in wisdom and knowledge. In general the context will determine its precise meaning. Cod. Chis. has καὶ γραμματικούς, καὶ συνετούς, σοφούς, καὶ ισχυρούς.

—so that they might have ability.—Not only might be of a strong constitution to endure the fatigue of long waitings, but qualified for every business in which they might be employed, and to do credit to the situation in which they were to stand.

—should teach them the learning of the Chaldeans.—As Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, so we are not to wonder that Daniel was taught the learning of the Chaldeans; and that he so far excelled in it, as to be placed at the head of the Magi. See Chap. iv. 9.

for them a daily allotment of the king's meat, and of the wine of his drinking, also that they should be nourished three years, and at the end thereof should 6 stand before the king. Now among these were of

5. — A daily allotment.—דָּבַר יוֹם בְּיוֹמוֹ. “The allotment of the day in its day;” an expression often used in the book of Exodus, and of the same import with that of daily bread in the Lord's prayer.

—of the King's meat.—מִפֶּתֶבֶג. Though many MSS. read this word divided, yet it may better be considered as a compound word, not unfrequently occurring in the Old Testament, and according to its proper sense seems to express the former part the quantity, and the latter the quality of the food, or if פֶּת has any reference to bread, frustum panis, it may comprehend the bread and the meat together. And the general idea here designed probably is, that according to the Eastern manners they should be fed with such food and wine as were served at the king's table; “de dapibus suis.” Dathius.

—and that they should be nourished.—וְלִגְדֻלָּם. LXX reads καὶ ἐκπαιδεύσαι αὐτούς, and so Syr. Perhaps it means to make them grow, which the preceding part of the verse and the other versions favour. There is a passage in the Menæchmus of Plautus, which may serve to illustrate this expression, as well as receive light from it.

Illic homo homines non alit, verum educat,
Recreatque, nullus melius medicinam facit.

Ita est adolescens ipsus escæ maximæ.

Act. i. 1.

6. — Now among these were.—Possibly the singular verb וַיְהִי may be used with a particular reference to Daniel above his fellows, as he is mentioned alone at verse 8, though the business or purpose related also to the other three. However this be, it must be evident to persons conversant in the Hebrew language, that it is far from observing a nice discrimination of numbers, genders, and persons.

I am sensible this consideration has been alleged by Le Clerc as an objection to the perspicuity of the Hebrew tongue; and a very fair and candid inquiry into the force of the objection, as well as an answer to it, may be found in the Lord Bishop of Waterford's preface to Ezekiel. The only remark I would add further is, that although we allow the defect, yet the consequence deduced from it is not just; for the variations in general from strict grammatical accuracy the children of Judah, Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and 7 Hazariah. And on them the prince of the chamberlains set names; and he set on Daniel that of Belte-are so small, that it is impossible any person of common understanding and attention should be misled by them.

---

—of the children of Judah.—Of Jewish descent, in opposition to the ten tribes of Israel, who were now also under the Chaldee government, and may all be alluded to in the expression at verse 3, or, perhaps, in opposition to the tribes of Levi and Benjamin. I. D. Michaelis.

7. —set names.—Many persons in the Old Testament had several names, and it seems to have been a general custom to give new names to persons on their admission into new families, favours, or offices: Thus we find our blessed Lord gave new names to several of his apostles; and in the case before us there might be these farther reasons, or at least some of them, assigned for the change; a difficulty of pronouncing, or dislike of, the Hebrew words, a desire to wean these young Jews from the manners of their country, and to bring them to a conformity with the Chaldee usages in all respects.

But whatever might be the motive, it may be difficult to ascertain the derivation and sense of the new, if not of the old, names to any great degree of exactness. Daniel is thought to be derived from דָּן to judge, and אֱלֹהִים God, and to signify whom God hath judged; Hananiah from חַנָּן and יְהוָה, whom Jehovah hath favoured; Mishael from יֵשׁ He is, and אֱלֹהִים the powerful one of God; Azariah from עֲזַר the help of Jehovah; Belteshazzar, Gr. Βελτασαρ, from בֶּל, Bel, טָשַׁח to lay up, and אֶצֶר a treasure; the keeper or priest of the Arcana of Bel: Shadrach from שָׂרַח to pour out (hence English to shed) and מֶלֶךְ a King, a name given to the Sun by the Babylonians, “the inspiration of the Sun;” Meshach, from a Babylonian deity called מֶשַׁךְ, may mean one who belonged to this deity, of the same character with Venus; Abed-nego נֶגוֹ the servant of the shining light, or as Calmet thinks, “de Dieu Nago,” i. e. the Sun, or the Morning Star, unless the word should be written נֶבּוֹ, referring to the idol Nebo, who gave name to several distinguished personages among the Babylonians, as Nebo-chadnezzar, Nebo-zaradan, and others. See Pool’s Syn. It is certain from Herodotus, lib. 1. that the Chaldeans worshipped Jupiter Belus, Venus, and other idols, or the same under shazzar, and on Hananiah Shadrach, and on Mishaël Meshach, and on Hazariah Abed-nego.

- 8 But Daniel purposed in his heart, that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, and with the wine of his drinking; therefore he requested of the prince of the chamberlains, that he might not 9 defile himself. Also God had brought Daniel into favour and compassionate regard with the prince of the 10 chamberlains. And the prince of the chamberlains said unto Daniel, I am afraid of my lord the king, who hath appointed your meat and your drink; for if he shall see your countenances more sad than the young men's who are your equals, then ye shall make me other names, and from these it is probable that the names were given, according to Chaldee usage, to these young men.

8. —that he might not defile himself.—The defilement here alluded to might arise, either from the food being such as was prohibited in the law of Moses, or else what was offered to the idols of the Chaldees, or at least intreated to be blessed in their name. See 1 Cor. viii. 10, 20. and Ezek. iv. 13. Though wine was not prohibited in the Levitical Law, yet Daniel might wish to abstain from it, chiefly from motives of temperance; or rather as it came from an entertainment wherein a libation was probably made to idols, he might think himself obliged to do it on motives of conscience.

9. —compassionate regard.—לְרַחֲמִים, Bowels of Compassion. MS. Pachom. οὐκτιμους. It has a like sense also at Chap. ii. 18. The word is of very strong import, and denotes a kind of parental compassion. St. Paul has an expression somewhat like it, if not stronger, in his epistle to Philemon, verse 12. "Receive him, that is, mine own bowels." And we read of bowels of mercies, &c.

10. —for if he shall see.—אֲשֶׁר לִמְדָּה. See Nold. under אֲשֶׁר § 25. Gr. has μη ποτε.

—your equals. The Chaldee sense of this word גִּל seems the best, and is followed by Gr. Syr. and Ar. one of the same age, and born under the same planet; see Cast. Lex. Probably it may include the condition also; but LXX R. has τοὺς συντρεφεόμενους ἑμιν.

—make me answerable.—Reum facietis, says Houbigant; sc. a

- 11 answerable with my head to the king. Therefore said Daniel to Meltzar, whom the prince of the chamberlains had set over Daniel, Hananiah, Mishaël, and 12 Hazariah; Try thy servants, I beseech thee, ten days, and let them give us of pulse to eat, and water to 13 drink. Then let our countenances be looked into before thee, and the countenance of the young men that eat the portion of the king's meat; and as thou
 14 shalt behold, deal with thy servants. So he hearkened 15 to them in this matter, and tried them ten days. And at the end of ten days their countenance appeared loco movere, non capite plecti; but Castalio prefers the latter sense, and I think rightly, and so the versions.

12. —of pulse to eat.—מִן הַזֵּרְעִים, seems to signify, of fruits or vegetables, or rather according to the Greek interpreter, of seeds in general; at the 16th verse the word is זֵרְעִים, and some MSS. read so in this verse. The sense is doubtless the same in both places, and perhaps may well enough be expressed by that kind of nourishing seed called pulse, απο των οσπριων, de leguminibus, LXX. See Isaiah, lxi. 11.

flava seres mutato sidere farra,

Unde prius lætum siliqua quassante legumen.

Virg. Geo. i. 73, 74.

Pliny in his Natural History, page 380, mentions a kind of pulse that is said to affect the temper of those that feed upon it, and to produce equanimity and gentleness. Various sorts of grain were dried and prepared for food by the people of the East, as wheat, barley, rice, and pulse, of the nature and preparation whereof some curious remarks may be seen in Mr. Harmer's Observations, vol. i. p. 271. Of some of these was the parched corn mentioned in Scripture, and the chief food of the labourers and poorer sort of people. And perhaps something of this kind of preparation might have been the choice of Daniel.

15. —their countenance appeared more comely.—Η οψις αυτων καλη LXX. Three or four MSS. omit the ι in מַרְאֵיהֶם; the noun is מַרְאֵה; and the י if properly belonging to this word seems only substituted for ה. However the versions in Polyglot.

- more comely and more plump in flesh than any of the young men's that did eat the portion of the king's meat. Thus Meltzar continued to take away their portion of meat, and the wine that they should drink, and to give them pulse.
- 17 As to these four young men, God gave them prudence and skill in all learning and wisdom, and made Daniel to have understanding in all visions and dreams. And at the end of the days which the king had appointed to bring them in, the prince of the chamberlains brought them in before Nebuchadnezzar.
- 19 When the king conversed with them, and there was none found among them all like Daniel, Hananiah, consider it as of a plural form ; probably on account of the adjective בריאי that follows after טוב ; which must either agree with לרים, "the young men," or else furnish another instance to confirm the preceding observation of the inaccuracy of the Hebrew language, in distinction of numbers, &c. The good effects of temperance and abstinence are here observable, but they are natural and usual, and the result of the ordinary blessings of God's providence.

16. — Meltzar.—Greek. ὁ μελζαρ Δμελσαδ, qui est a latere, an assistant. But Syr. and Ar. have הַמְנִצָּר, a guardian, or inspector of young men. Yet Michaelis thinks there is no good authority for the change of the ל to נ. It means probably an assistant or deputy to Ashpenaz, of this name.

17. As to these four young men.—The Hebrew is pleonastic ; see the like at Chap. iii. 28, &c. and at Chap. iv. 26. and often in the Chaldee. Literally it is, to these young men, אַרְבַּעַתָּם "to each of them four ;" who were all persons of sagacity and knowledge, and skilled in the literature of the Chaldees, at least in the innocent parts of it ; but Daniel excelled the others in the gift of prophecy, and in his extraordinary skill in interpreting all sort of visions and dreams. See 1 Cor. xii. 10. Houbigant suggests, we must understand, not fortuitous or casual dreams, but such as were sent from Heaven.

19. — none found among them all.—One MS. has not the word מכלם ; but the versions retain it, and it plainly relates to the whole of the young men, alluded to at verse 4 ; whom these four far excelled, when they were introduced to stand before, or minister to, the King.

Misrael, and Hazariah; thus they stood before the 20 king. Also in every matter of the deepest wisdom which the king inquired of them, he even found them ten times superior to all the soothsayers and magicians 21 that were in all his realm. And Daniel continued even to the first year of the king Cyrus.

20. —also in every matter of the deepest wisdom.—Heb. of the wisdom of understanding; but Gr. Ar. and Vul. translate as if they had found a Vau before בִּינָה, and so our English translation.

—ten times superior to all the soothsayers and magicians.—Heb. ten hands above—επαυιδους και μαγους, Th. Hariolos et magos, Vul. Incantatores et Hariolos, Syr. Ten MSS. read, with the versions, ו before הַאֲשָׁפִים, though there is none in the printed text. The word הַרְשָׁפִים seems derived from הֲרַשׁ a style or writing instrument, used by the ancients on their waxen tablets; or it may signify any sort of pencil or tool, by which letters were marked; and hence the word is applied to those soothsayers who marked the natiuities of persons, and excelled in the knowledge of astrology, natural history, the motions of the heavenly bodies, and the like. See Exod. vii. 11*.

As to the other word, “Potest ab הַשָּׂא deduci σοφος. Et potest הַשָּׂא deduci vel a הַשָּׂא crepusculum, vid. Buxt. vel a שְׁפָה eminuit, unde שְׁפָה clivus: Nam astronomis conveniunt editiores loci.” Secker. The reputation of Thales and other Sophi seems to have been great before the times of the Babylonish captivity; and Thales, who was of Ionia, living not far from Syria, might thence acquire the name, which is still retained by the Emperors of Persia. Both words may seem to comprehend those persons in general that were distinguished in the several kinds of learning cultivated among the Chaldees. Of the like character were the Magi in Egypt and Persia, and the other countries of the East, and those wise men that came to our Saviour at his birth. Matt. ii. 1.

21. And Daniel continued.—Heb. was. He lived in a flourishing state in Babylon, till the time of the dissolution of that empire by Cyrus, when the prophecies of Isaiah xlv. 23. and xlv. 1. were fulfilled; till the expiration of the Jewish captivity, which happened in * Michaelis after Mill considers them as the ἱερογραμματεῖς of the Egyptians, or person employed in explaining their Hieroglyphics; and he thinks the Persian Magi might also be called by this name. See Suppl. p. 922.

CHAPTER II.

1 Now in the second year of the reign of Nebuchad-

---

the first year of Cyrus, when Jeremiah's prophecy relating to the term of 70 years was fulfilled also. He was alive afterwards, as it appears, ch. x. 1. in the 3rd year of Cyrus: nor should the particle עַד "until," induce us to think otherwise; see Ps. cx. 1. and cxii. 8. and Nold. p. 534. Perhaps the ה before מֶלֶךְ the last word of the verse has a sort of emphasis to the honour and distinction of Cyrus. LXX R. has, "King of the Persians." Michaelis supposes a word wanting at the end, which he conjectures may be, in Babylon. But M. de Gebelin, a French critic, supposes the word Cyrus does not belong to the text; and that Daniel only meant to observe, that he was at Babylon in the first year of the reign of the King, i. e. Nebuchadnezzar. See Encyclopedie, Theologie, Livr. xxvii. sur Daniel. This last conjecture is ingenious, and perhaps may receive some strength from the verse that follows at the beginning of the next chapter.—"And in the second year of Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuchadnezzar dreamed, &c." But there is no authority for dropping the word Cyrus.

In this chapter Nebuchadnezzar having dreamed, and been much affected thereby, is solicitous to know his dreams, and the meaning of them. He applies in vain to the wise men of his own country for information, and being disgusted at their inability, orders them all to be slain. Daniel is sought after among the number, but on application to God he learns the dream and the interpretation, and arrests the execution of the sentence. He explains the dream to the King, probably as relating to the four great kingdoms of the earth, and the establishment of the kingdom of the Messiah under the fourth: Whereupon the King admires his skill, acknowledges the power of his God, and advances Daniel and his friends to great honours and preferments.

1. Now in the second year of Nebuchadnezzar.—For an account of this second year see the note on Chap. i. 1. But Mr. Jackson, and some other writers, place this dream later in the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, supposing that Daniel was not carried into captivity till the reign of Jehoiakim, and that Nebuchadnezzar was not a complete sovereign till after the first destruction of Jerusalem; yet the plain and obvious sense of the text both here and in the first Chapter militates against this opinion, nor do I see how it can be reconciled with the Canon.

As the affairs of Babylon have so considerable a share in the historical parts of the Book of Daniel, as well as in other parts of Scripture, it may not be amiss to give here a short sketch of the kingdom of Babylon, previous to the reign of this monarch.

Whether the Assyrian empire was of very early date according to some of the Greek writers and chronicles, or whether its commencement was not till a much later period according to modern chronologists, it is agreed on all sides, that the origin of this and of the Babylonian monarchy must be traced from nearly the same source. And accordingly we read in the 10th chapter of Genesis, ver. 10, 11, that Nimrod the son of Cush and grandson of Ham, who seems to have been the first founder of extensive or regal authority, had the beginning of his kingdom in Babel or Babylon in the land of Shinar, as this country was still called in the time of Daniel. Chap. i. 2. Out of this land he went forth into Assyria, or it may be, as most of the versions read, Ashur or an Assyrian went forth, (that is, not one of the sons of Shem, but a person either of that name, or that took his name from the country) and built Nineveh and other cities. The descendants of these people seem for a considerable time to have followed the way of life of their founder, to have lived upon plunder and rapine in a rude uncivilized state, and not to have been much esteemed among the nations; till some potent king of Assyria perhaps collected them together, and settled them in Babylon and the country round about it. Bishop Lowth supposes this King to have been Ninus, and to have lived in the time of the Judges, following the testimony of Herodotus, who is understood to say, that the Assyrian monarchy lasted but 520 years: see his note on Isaiah, xxiii. p. 132. The words of Herodotus in his Clio, p. 40. Ed. Gron. are these, Δασσυριων αρχοντων της ανω Ασσιης επ' ετεα εικοσι και πεντακοσια, πρωτοι απ' αυτων Μηδοι ηρξαντο απιστασθαι, which may be rendered, "When the Assyrians had possessed the supreme command over Upper Asia 520 years, the Medes first began to revolt from them;" Or perhaps, "the Medes were the first that began to revolt from the Assyrians, who enjoyed the supreme power over Upper Asia 520 years." If we follow the latter sense, the continuance of this monarchy here meant may be carried on, if not to the final overthrow of the united Empire, at the death of Belshazzar, at least down to the destruction of Nineveh; and then Ninus must have lived in, or a little before, the time of David; or else, as is most probable, the language of Herodotus must terminate with the revolt of the Medes; and Ninus must have possessed himself of Babylon, which he enlarged and beautified, somewhat more than 500 years before the commencement of the Chaldean æra, in the year 747 before Christ.

The history of Assyria and Babylon from Ninus * to this last named period, is involved in much uncertainty, as we have scarce any authentic evidence to have recourse to, the testimony of the Greek writers wearing for the most part the appearance of fable, and the Scriptures throwing very little light on the matter. We find indeed mention therein of Pul, a king of Assyria, (2 Kings, xv. 19.) who was bribed by Menahem to depart from Israel; whom the compilers of the Universal History, after Sir Isaac Newton, suppose to be the same as Belus, the founder of both the Assyrian and Babylonian monarchies; but their arguments, although plausible, seem not sufficiently convincing to overthrow the faith of Herodotus, however they may serve to invalidate the testimony of the long and numerous race of Kings according to Ctesias and the other writers that have followed him.

The next Assyrian King of the Scriptures is Tiglath-pileser, supposed to have been the son of Pul; and after him follow Shalmanezar and Senacherib: During the reign of one of which monarchs, perhaps the former, the kingdom of Babylon and Chaldea, seems to have revolted, and it is probable from Herodotus, not long after the time that the Medes did, from the Assyrian empire. The first Prince after this revolt, at least the first that we have any certain knowledge of, seems to have been Nabonassar, the founder of the famous æra, that * Mr. Bruce, in his Travels. B. ii. c. 1. speaks of Semiramis, and the immense riches of the Assyrian empire, which Montesquieu thinks proceeded chiefly from rapine and plunder of other nations in war; but which Mr. Bruce more justly imputes to her connexions with India; and that as the commerce with that peninsula was unknown by sea, the whole must have been carried on by land only, and all nations of the continent must have received from her markets a supply of Indian stores. See Prelim. Dis. Upon this principle he accounts also for a passage in Solomon's Proverbs, c. vii. 16. where he says, that he decked his bed with coverings of tapestry of Egypt. Now Egypt had neither silk nor cotton manufactory, nor even wool. Solomon's coverings, therefore, though he had them from Egypt, were an article of bawter with India.

commenced with his reign, and was called by his name. Several other Princes or Kings succeeded him in this kingdom, of whom little more is known than their names, which are recorded by the celebrated astronomer Ptolemy, in the canon above alluded to. But in the 27th year after the commencement of his father's kingdom his son Mardoc Empadus, or Merodach Baladan, began to reign over Babylon, which was the Prince that sent to congratulate Hezekiah king of Judah on his miraculous recovery, 2 Kings xx, and Isaiah xxxix, and probably to enter into an alliance with him against Senacherib, the King of the other part of the Assyrian empire. After this monarch had reigned over Babylon twelve years, he was succeeded by several Princes, who in their turns governed Babylon for a short period of about 20 years; when it became in a state of anarchy for eight years more, and was at length united by Assaradinus or Esar-haddon, the son of Senacherib, to the Assyrian empire. This happened about the 19th year of Manasseh, a wretched Prince, who succeeded his father the good Hezekiah in the kingdom of Judah.

I must not stop to mention the completion of several remarkable events in the history of the kingdoms of Judah and Israel, which took place during the reign of Esar-haddon over Assyria, but must refer the reader to the narratives recorded in the 2nd book of Kings, the prophecy of Isaiah, c. vii, viii, and the book of Ezra, or to Dr. Prideaux and others, who have written the Scripture history. It is sufficient to observe, that the remainder of the tribes of Israel were entirely carried away by this Prince, and irrecoverably sunk among other nations, and that the king of Judah was also carried by him to Babylon though soon after he released him, and restored him to his liberty and his kingdom.

In the 31st year of Manasseh, Esar-haddon died, after he had reigned thirteen years over the Babylonians united to the kingdom of Assyria: he was succeeded by Saosduchius his son, the Nabuchodonosor of the book of Judith, whose successor was Chyniladan, and whose reign commenced in the 51st year of Manasseh, or the 101st of the æra of Nabonassar. From this effeminate and profligate king, Nabopolassar his general seized the Babylonian part of the empire, and reigned over his native country twenty-one years. This revolt took place in the 18th year of Josiah, king of Judah, about twenty-five years after the then Assyrian monarch began his reign; and at length by an union of this king of Babylon with the Princes of Media, that great city Nineveh, the capital of the Assyrian empire, was taken and destroyed, the empire was extinguished, and the nezzar, Nebuchadnezzar dreamed dreams, wherewith his spirit was distracted, and his sleep was broken 2 from him. Therefore the king commanded to call together the soothsayers, and the magicians, and the 3 sorcerers, and the Chaldeans, to declare to the king people reduced under the yoke of Babylon and Media. This union was effected by the marriage of his son Nebuchadnezzar or Nabocolasar, as he is called by Ptolemy, with Amyite, the daughter of Astyages, of the kingdom of the Medes; and this is the Prince of whose history so much is recorded by Daniel, and who, after the death of the good king Josiah in the reign of his sons, carried away so many captives from Judea unto Babylon, at that time the capital of the whole united empire.

—Nebuchadnezzar dreamed dreams, wherewith, &c.—Dreams, or a continued succession of various events: the following verb נִתְפַּעֵם is in Hithpahel, and denotes that his spirit was violently agitated, or in such consternation as to affect his body and disturb his rest; his sleep was done, or broken upon him, which seems the proper sense of the word נִהְיָתָה; but our old English translation has, “his sleep was upon him.” And Syr. renders, was continued or deep upon him. See chap. viii. 27. Houbigant would derive the word from נָהַי, Arab. نَهَى impeding. MS. Pachom. ἀπεγενετο. A fine picture of this sort of perturbation may be seen in Shakspeare’s Dream of King Richard the Third, Act v. scene 5.

2. —the sorcerers.—For the two former words see chap. i. ver. 20. By sorcerers seems to be meant a sort of necromancers, that through diabolical arts pretended to an acquaintance with departed spirits, from נִשְׁכָּר, præstigiis uti, also to fascinate and enchant. Cast. Lex. They were perhaps not very unlike the sortilegi of the ancient Romans, and exercised themselves in various sorts of præstigiæ or enchantments, which were supposed to be performed by the assistance of demons. See an account of their practices in Bishop Lowth’s Isaiah, chap. xxix. 4.

The term Chaldeans has been applied to astrologers by many of the Greek and Roman writers. Diodorus, lib. ii. speaking of the Chaldeans says, they employ their whole time in philosophy and divination, and are trained up to them from their childhood: And Strabo, lib. xvi. makes a distinction, and observes that the word is sometimes his dreams: wherefore they came and stood before the king. And the king said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and my spirit is distressed to know the applied to the nation, sometimes to the sect. Curtius, lib. v. c. 1, describes them thus, Chaldæi siderum motus et status temporum vices ostendere soliti: And Cicero de Divin. p. 3, Chaldæi, non ex artis sed ex gentis vocabulo nominati, diuturna observatione siderum scientiam putantur effecisse, ut prædici posset quid cuique eventurum, et quo quisque fato natus esset. Juvenal, likewise, has this remarkable passage,

Chaldæis sed major erit fiducia; quicquid
Dixerit astrologus, credent a fonte relatum
Ammonis. Sat. vi. ver. 552.

These several passages may serve to shew the opinion that was commonly entertained of this people; and therefore we shall be less surprised to find at verse 4 this word Chaldeans, according to the general sense of it, used for the Magicians of every sort. Thus Arab is sometimes used for a robber, and Chanaanite for a merchant.

—to declare to the King his dreams.—Dreams were often considered as particular intimations of the will of Heaven; and hence the expression of Homer, in his first Iliad, καὶ γὰρ τ' ὄναρ ἐκ Διὸς ἐστί; and in the beginning of his second Iliad, he has by a bold and beautiful prosopopœia conveyed the will of Jupiter to Agamemnon in a dream, investing Ὀνειρος with all the qualities of a divine messenger. Diog. Laert. makes mention of a dream of Socrates whereby he foretold his death within three days; and most of the schools among the Pagan philosophers gave credit to dreams, and considered them as revealing the will of the Gods. Cæsar had a remarkable dream in Spain, wherein he thought he was committing incest with his mother; and the explanation was, that he should become master of the whole earth, the common parent of all men. The knowledge or interpretation of dreams was always esteemed to be a special communication of divine favour. See Gen. xli. 8. Job. iv. 12. And a full account of this whole matter may be learnt from Cicero's first book de Divin. and from various parts and passages of the Old Testament.

3. —I have dreamed a dream.—Or, have certainly dreamed. Gr. Ἡνυπνίασθην, but MS. Pachom. imitates the Hebrew.

- 4 dream. Then spoke the Chaldeans to the king in Syriac, O king, live for ever; Declare the dream to thy servants, and we will shew the interpretation.
- 5 The king replied to the Chaldeans, The matter is
-

4. ———in Syriac.—That is, in the Aramean, or Syrian language, as understood in its largest sense, being what was spoken by the Assyrians, Babylonians, and many of the neighbouring nations, both beyond the Euphrates, as Strabo intimates, lib. ii. and on this side, and is the same with what is called the ancient Chaldee. The prophet Jeremiah has one verse, and one only in Chaldee; see Chap. x. ver. 11. if this verse be really authentic, which Dr. Blayney in his note on the passage with much reason doubts. In this pure language is also written some part of the book of Ezra; and the prophet Daniel uses it in its original purity from this place to the end of the 7th Chapter. Of the whole of which text there is an Hebrew translation in Dr. Kennicott's Bible, at the bottom of the page, taken from his 240th MS. or the 16th of the Roman MSS. found in the Angel: Augustine Library, an account of which may be seen in his general Dissertation: In this MS. the Chaldee text is also found with the Hebrew in a lateral column, in the same character with the Chaldee paraphrase, and it is said to have been written in the year 1327. I scarce need observe that this original Chaldee, as it is found in the books of Daniel and Ezra, was in after-ages much corrupted by the introduction of many Hebrew words by the Jews themselves, and in process of time by more foreign words from other nations with whom the Jews had lived: Hence the Targums which were written long after the captivity are of inferior purity to the Bible text, and the Talmuds and other books are still more adulterated, the farther they are distant from the times in which the sacred writers lived. See a Dissertation on this subject in Bishop Walton's Proleg. xiii. prefixed to his Polyglott.

I. D. Michaelis is of opinion, that there was an old Chaldean language of Scythian or Slavonian origin, which some of the words or names in Daniel, as Nebuchadnezzar, Belschatzar, and the like, scarce to be derived from Hebrew primitives, may seem to countenance; and that this language was derived from the Chalybes, near the Black Sea, and was what Daniel and the young men were ordered to be instructed in. Chap. i. ver. 4. See Spicil. Geog. Heb. T. ii. §. 77—94.

5. The king replied to the Chaldeans.—Chald. answered and said.

gone from me ; if ye will not make known unto me the dream and the interpretation of it, ye shall be cut in pieces, and your houses shall be laid into a dunghill :

Many MSS. read with Keri לְכַשְׂרָאִי in this place and others afterwards, from the plural כְּשָׂרָאִין in its entire form ; but though כְּשָׂרָאִי seems singular, it is likewise plural according to the use of this language, and therefore there is no occasion for an alteration. The word that follows soon after תְּהוֹדִיעוּנִי is of an anomalous form with two characteristics, a mode not unusual in the Chaldee ; see ver. 9 and 18, the same word also occurs at ver. 9, only with the plural ו omitted, which many MSS. supply.

—the matter is gone from me.—i. e. I do not recollect it. Gr. ἀπεσθη. Vulg. recessit. The word מְלֵה in Chaldee is of the same import with דָּבָר in Hebrew, and signifies either word or thing. But Syriac has, “the word is most sure which I say,” or my decree is gone forth and irrevocable. So at ver. 8, “ἀπατα με, ο Συρος ap. Montfaucon. In linguis orientalibus non invenio אָזַר nisi hic, et ver. 8, ubi similiter interpretes. Notat Saadiah ad hoc, אָזַר אֲזַר Talmudistis robur esse. Mich. There is no other proof but from the word אָזַר that Nebuchadnezzar had forgot his dream. Sulp. Sev. understands, But he would not tell it : It seems unlikely he should have forgot it.” Secker. It appears however that he had forgotten it in the opinion of Josephus. Ant. lib. x. c. 10.

—be cut in pieces.—Literally, be made into pieces ; so Syr. i. e. utterly destroyed, according to Th. and Vulg. Thus was Agag hewed in pieces by Samuel, 1 Sam. xv. 33. The like seems to have been the fate of the children of Ammon by the direction of David. 2 Sam. xii. 31. And the Author to the Hebrews mentions this mode of suffering, in Chap. xi. 27, by some of the worthies in the Old Testament, “they were stoned, and sawn in pieces.” To it also our Saviour alludes in St. Luke xii. 46, where he speaks of the wicked servant being cut in sunder. Orpheus is said to have been torn in pieces by the Thracian women. And we find likewise that the same sort of punishment is still used in Abyssinia, of which the reader may see one example among others in the 3rd vol. of Mr. Bruce’s Travels, p. 455.

LXX R. or Cod. Chis. translates, “ye shall be made examples of, and your goods shall be confiscated,” or taken for the King’s use.

- 6 But if ye shew the dream, and the interpretation of it, ye shall receive from me gifts, and a large reward, and much honour; therefore shew me the dream and the 7 interpretation thereof. They answered a second time thus, Let the king declare the dream to his servants, 8 and we will shew the interpretation. The king replied, Of a certainty I know that ye would gain time, because ye perceive that the matter is gone from

This proud King seemed determined to exercise the bitterest acts of cruelty against his magicians, to blot out the very traces of their memory, and make their houses a dunghill, if they did not gratify his unreasonable but anxious wishes. At Chap. iii. 29, we meet with a like denunciation from this haughty monarch. Consult also Ezra, vi. 11, for the latter part of the punishment, which probably was not unusual in later times among the Romans. Livy, l. 2, speaking of the punishment of Sp. Cassius, tells us, dirutas publice ædes: and Valer. Max. vi. 3, observes of the same person, Senatus populusque Romanus non contentus capitali eum supplicio afficere, interempto domum superjecit, ut penatium quoque strage puniretur. Sp. Mælius also suffered a like fate.

6. —a large reward.—נבזבז annua erogatio, from נזבז to spoil, or plunder; it has a like sense in the Chald. Paraph. Jer. xl. 5. So Grot. But Castell has Largitio amplior, lauta exceptio, and derives it from a Persic origin.

8. —I know that ye would gain time.—Ye seek delays, in order to gain time; either that the King's attention to other concerns might make him forget this, or until he might possibly recollect some circumstances, or the whole of the dream. The original word means to buy or redeem time, and is of the like import with St. Paul's expression, Ephes. v. 16. Dathius renders the remainder of the verse thus, siquidem quæ mea voluntas sit, audivistis.

It may not be amiss to observe here, that the pronoun אנני in this verse is read by many MSS. with ה at the end, according to the Hebrew form, instead of נ, which is most agreeable to the Chaldee form, and therefore right. The like variation in the MSS. and in some editions also, from the usual printed text is observable in many other places, but there will be no occasion to take farther notice of it.

- 9 me. But if ye will not make known to me the dream, this is your only decree; since ye have prepared a lying and corrupt discourse to relate before me, till the occasion be changed; therefore declare to me the dream, and I shall know that ye will shew me 10 the interpretation of it. The Chaldeans answered thus before the king, there is not a man upon earth that is able to shew the king's matter; since no king, lord, or potentate, hath asked a thing of this sort of 11 any soothsayer, or magician, or Chaldean. For the matter which the king requireth is momentous, neither is there any one that can declare it before the king but 12 the Gods, whose dwelling is not with flesh. At this
-

9. —this is your only decree, since ye have prepared.—Syr. One and the same will be your lot; but this clause is omitted in the Greek, where the sentence must be understood elliptically. The following Vau may be rendered, since, see Nold. The verb הוּמְנָתוֹן, ye have prepared, is read by Keri in Ithpah. הוּמְנָתוֹן, and very many MSS. and some Ed. favour this reading. The word זֶמֶן signifies time, or rather an appointed time, and is scarcely to be found but in those books that were written after the commencement of the captivity: from this noun comes זָמַן in Pihel, to appoint, prepare, and the like; and the strength of the expression in Ithp. seems to denote, that the magicians had concerted a plan, to utter lies,—till the time could be changed, or the King's temper softened by a new face of affairs. See Cast. Lex.

10. —not a man upon earth that is able to shew.—Ch. upon the dry ground. Many MSS. read with א instead of ה at the end of the verb לְהַחֲוִיָּה, “to shew,” which is more agreeable to the Chaldee form, and is the reverse of the change taken notice of at ver. 8. These variations are observable continually, and another instance occurs at the very next verse in יְקִירָה, rare or momentous; Gr. βαρύς, and so the versions.

11. —but the gods.—Mr. Lowth translates, “except that God, whose dwelling, &c.” and the noun, though plural, is often used singularly; see the next Chapter; yet the affix or pronoun that follows here is plural. Herodotus in his Euterpe, c. viii. speaking of the the king was angry and much enraged, and com-13 manded to destroy all the wise men of Babylon. And when the decree was gone forth, the wise men were slain, and they sought Daniel and his companions to be slain.

14 Then Daniel expostulated concerning the counsel

Egyptians has this passage, Μαντική δε αυτοισι ωδε διακεεται, Ανθρωπων μιν ουδενι προσκεεται η τεχνη, των δε θεων μετεξετεροισι, meaning, that the art of divination belongs only to some of the gods. The allusion is probably in this place to the demons or departed spirits, who were considered as a sort of Internuncii between the deity and mankind; receiving their information from the supreme God, or at least from reputed deities of the highest class, and conveying it during the intervals of slumber to men. See the note on Chap. i. 17.

13. And when the decree was gone forth, the wise men were slain.—
 So most of the versions, and Houbigant: But Ar. reads, And when the decree was published that the wise men should be slain, they sought, &c. Yet it seems probable that the decree was begun to be put in execution by the massacre of some of the Magi; see ver. 18.
 Though some think otherwise from ver. 24 and 48.

14. Then Daniel expostulated concerning the counsel &c.—Recalled the Counsel and the Decree seems the literal rendering of עָשָׂא וְשָׁחַח הַתִּיב. Gr. ἀπεκριβη βουλην και γνωμην. Vulg. requisivit de lege et sententia. If we follow our Eng. translators, we may consider the two nouns by an usual Hendiadys to signify “wise and prudent counsel;” so rage and fury for furious rage, c. iii. 13. and see Rev.
 xix. 15. but I rather think the sense I have given in the translation to be more agreeable to the true use and meaning of the words.
 There is however a still different sense given by De Dieu to this passage, and which agrees tolerably well with the context, “Then Daniel turned away the counsel and sentence of Arioch;” i. e. stopped or checked the decree, so far at least as it affected himself or his brethren. The Chaldee verb הִתִּיב corresponds with the Hebrew הָשִׁיב, and is so translated in Cod. 240, see also Chap. iii. ver. 16.
 And it may be proper here to note that there is a frequent change of letters uniformly observed in the two languages: Thus the Hebrew ש as in the present instance, and at ver. 7, becomes the Chaldee ת; and so again אִתִּי for יש at ver. 26, the י is a ד, as כִּרְבָּה for נוֹבָה

- and decree with Arioch the captain of the king's guard, who had gone forth to slay the wise men of 15 Babylon: He spoke thus to Arioch the king's captain,
 Wherefore is the decree so urgent from the king?
 16 Then Arioch made known the matter to Daniel. So Daniel went up and asked of the king, that he would at ver. 9, דרעוהי for זרעוהי, as three MSS. read at ver. 32, and דהב for זהב; the ז an ע, as in ארעא for ארצה; the ה final almost every where an א, and the א a ך: The א also is often used for the plural ם or ך final: see the note at ver. 5. This observation may perhaps have its use in helping to understand rightly some words that may be found in the books written in, or after the times of the Babylonish captivity.

—captain of the king's guard.—Literally, chief of the King's executioners. Gr. ἀρχιμαγειρω: the chief butcher. The term טבחיא רב may probably mean, the leader of the guard appointed for capital punishments. Nor does this office seem to have been at all infamous; for Arioch had free access to the King, as we find at ver. 25, see also 1 Sam. xv. 33. And perhaps his office might be to execute any of the King's commands on his subjects, whether they related to honour or dishonour, to life or to death. The same title is given to Nebuzaradan, in 2 Kings, xxv. 8, and from the character of the commander, it seems to mean a person of the first authority over the soldiery. Mr. Bruce, in the passage above quoted, at ver. 5, speaks of an officer, called the executioner of the camp, whose business it was to attend at capital punishments; and this officer belonged only to a detachment of the royal Abyssinian army.

15. He spoke thus.—Chald. answered and said: so at Chap. iii. 9, and many other places. But Gr. and Syr. omit these words here, and Gr. reads the next words in the vocative case, Ἀρχων του βασιλεως. Yet MS. Pachom. and some other copies come nearer the Chaldee.

—wherefore is the decree so urgent.—Chald. מהחצפא, hasty and pressing, so Syr. Gr. has ἡ ἀναδης. tam crudelis: Jerom. Atrox decretum: Houbigant. But one MS. reads מהפצא transposing the letters צ and פ, “Why is the law or decree agreeable to the King,” or his delight? which is not a bad sense.

16. So Daniel went up.—That is, either to the palace or throne of the King, as at v. 25; or else the expression may only relate to the allow him time, to shew the king even the interpreta-17 tion. Then Daniel went away to his house, and made known the matter to Hananiah, Mishael, and Haza-18 riah, his companions: That they should implore mercies of the God of Heaven concerning this secret, that they might not destroy Daniel and his companions 19 with the residue of the wise men of Babylon. Then was the secret revealed to Daniel in a vision of the night; wherefore Daniel blessed the God of heaven.

 20 Daniel spoke thus, Blessed be the name of God for 21 ever and ever; for wisdom and power are his. And superior station, in which even the messenger was then considered ; and accordingly MS. Pachom. instead of βασιλεα reads ηξιωσε Αριωχ ; the meaning seems to be, he requested the King through Arioch, or by his intervention.

---

18 —this secret.—The word אר in Chald. seems to have the same sense with μυστηριον in the Gr. Interpreter, and denotes any thing that is unknown. Many useful observations might be drawn from this passage on the nature, the efficacy, and the rewards of devotion, on the power and prevalency of united addresses to heaven, and the important benefits which the piety of a few holy men may sometimes bring down upon a multitude: but though it might be improper to leave altogether unnoticed improvements of this sort, yet they must be so obvious to every attentive reader, that it is sufficient barely to mention them.

20. Daniel spoke thus.—Vulg. Locutus ait, see Deut. xxvi. 5. The idiom of the latter part of this verse is somewhat peculiar: That the auxiliary verb should be used in the infinitive mood instead of the future tense is quite agreeable to the Chaldee manner; but the second particle ַי seems redundant as well as the pronoun at the end, unless we read with many MSS. אר for אר, quæ sunt illi ipsi, by way of emphasis.

In the latter part of this and the three next verses the prophet has celebrated the praises of the Almighty in a simple, but truly sublime and animated strain of warm and unaffected piety, has made especial mention of his wisdom and power, and illustrated the display of those attributes in several instances apposite to the subject and occasion.

- He changeth the times and the seasons ; He removeth kings and establisheth kings ; He giveth wisdom to the wise, and knowledge to those that improve in understanding : He revealeth things deep and secret ; He knoweth what is in the darkness ; for the light abideth with him. Thee, O God of my fathers, I acknowledge and I praise ; for thou hast given me wisdom and strength, and hast now made known unto me that which we asked of thee, for the matter of the king hast thou made known unto us.
- 24 Therefore Daniel went up unto Arioch, whom the king had appointed to destroy the wise men of Babylon ; he went and thus spoke unto him, Destroy not the wise men of Babylon, introduce me before the king, and I will shew the king the interpretation.
- 25 Then Arioch very speedily introduced Daniel before

21. —and knowledge to those that improve in understanding.—Vul. Gr. and Syr. seem to agree in rendering “and prudence to those that are acquainted with discipline ;” those who improve their natural powers will find them blessed and increased ; or we may render, “and skill to those that know understanding,” that is, who have the only true understanding (according to Job, xxviii. 28.) the knowledge and fear of God.

22. —for the light abideth with him.—Syr. and Ar. “the light is in his power ;” or, by light we may understand illumination, and then the sense may be, He knoweth what is in darkness ; for it is in his power to illumine it. See Ephes. v. 13, 1 Cor. iv. 5, and also 1 Tim. vi. 16.

23. —hast now made known unto me.—The discovery was probably made to Daniel only, in a night vision or dream, though at the joint intercession of himself and friends. See ver. 19.

24. —Daniel went up unto Arioch.—Ten MSS. omit the second בָּ in this verse, and one reads בָּ before Arioch. Also one omits, with Gr. and Vulg. the word אַחֲרָיו afterwards ; there seems a redundancy somewhere. Perhaps the true reading should be rendered thus, Daniel went up to Arioch—and thus spoke to him.

25. Then Arioch very speedily introduced Daniel.—So Syr. In the king, and thus spoke unto him, I have found a man of the captives of Judah, who will make known 26 the interpretation to the king. The king answering spoke to Daniel, whose name is Belteshazzar, Art thou able to make known unto me the dream which I have 27 seen, and the interpretation of it? Daniel answered before the king thus, The secret which the king asketh, the wise men, the magicians, the sooth-sayers, 28 the diviners are not able to shew unto the king. But Chaldee the noun for very speedily is derived from the conjugation Ithp. and has a sort of reiterated signification: see Chap. iii. 24. The term Captives in the latter part of the verse is in the original, the sons or the children of the captivity: The like periphrasis, which is common in other languages, is constantly found in Scripture, and has sometimes a sort of elegance or propriety, which may make it expedient to be followed in a translation.

26. — Art thou able.—The latter Jod in דאיתריך seems redundant, and is omitted in many MSS. and among the rest in the ancient Bodleian. The participle כהל is of the same import with יכול or יכול in the Heb. able, and is only to be met with in the present form here, and at the 5th chapter of this book.

27. — the diviners.—Gr. retains the original γαζαρηων. The word גורין from גור to cut, is thought by some to signify either the aruspices, who by cutting open examined the liver and entrails of beasts; or by others those diviners, who by the disposition and combination of numbers made amulets or charms, by which they pretended to foretel future events. R. Jacchiades favours the latter opinion, supposing the aruspices were scarcely known in the East, and thus he thinks the word may be synonymous to the Chaldeans; and one MS. reads כשראין. However, as the word is joined with Chasdim in two or three places afterwards in this book, it certainly has a distinct meaning from it.

Some will derive it from גור discernere, and understand it for the keepers of the decrees: or perhaps it may rather mean from this etymology a sort of diviners by arrows, which was a mode very common in the East; and the practice was thus: Names or words were written on certain arrows without heads kept for the purpose in an idol temple; on one arrow the thing was commanded, on another pro-

there is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets, who hath been making known to king Nebuchadnezzar what is to be in the latter days. Thy dream, or the visions of thy head upon thy bed, is this.

29 To thee, O king, thy thoughts arose upon thy bed, as to what should be hereafter, and he that revealeth hibited, and a third was blank. These were shaken together in some vessel set before the idol; and according to the direction of the first drawn arrow, the measure was taken, whether it commanded or prohibited the matter divined about, or which of two things was first to be done. See Ezek. xxi. 21. Symmach. has θυρας or εβας, intimating that they were the Thyades of Bacchus, and Bochart thinks that the worship of Bacchus originated in Assyria, and thence was spread through Syria and Phœnicia into Greece. See Chan. p. 479.

28. —or the visions—is this.—Two MSS. read ורחוֹם in the sing. “and the vision, &c.” the pronoun at the end of the ver. is singular.

29. —thy thoughts.—רעיוֹנֶיךָ. Recte Masora רעיוֹנֶיךָ ex forma Chald. plural. So לַעֲבָדְךָ ad. ver. 4, et alibi. Houbigant.

—he that revealeth secrets hath made known unto thee what is to be.—Daniel’s great modesty in disclaiming all merit or extraordinary wisdom on his part, and yet his skill and dexterity in preparing the King’s attention, and gradually opening his understanding to the reception of the truth, and the acknowledgment of the one true God, are very remarkable. The expression in this verse, “what was to be hereafter,” or רִגְלָה אַחֲרַי, indicates what was the subject of the King’s thoughts upon his bed, which was afterwards worked up into the following dream. But some will have this expression to be of the same import with that in the former verse אַחֲרֵית יוֹמָיָא, in “the latter days:” and there are perhaps some instances in Scripture, where the latter term seems only to mean futurity in general, as Gen. xlix. 1, Deut. iv. 30. But it is also evident that the latter days mean the times of the Messiah, as in Isai. ii. 2, and indeed this is universally the sense when it is used by the prophets, and Kimchi will understand it so in every other part of scripture. See Bishop Lowth and Mr. Lowth on the last cited passage. If we consider the extent of the following vision, and the manifest allusion therein to the times of the Messiah, and compare the use and connexion of the expression in

- secrets hath made known unto thee what is to be.
- 30 But as to me, not through any wisdom in me above all living was this secret revealed to me, but for the intent that the interpretation should be made known to the king, and that thou mightest know the thoughts of thy heart.
- 31 Thou, O king, wast seeing, and behold a large Image; this Image, which was so great and of eminent splendour, arose before thee, and its aspect was terrible.
- 32 This Image's head was of fine gold, his breast this place with the like usage in other parts of Scripture, and especially in the 24th of Numbers, ver. 14—17, we shall not perhaps hesitate to what times the language ought to be referred in the case before us. The late Dr. Hurd, Lord Bishop of Worcester, has given a very full and just account of the latter times, and the distinctions relating to them in his 7th sermon at the Warb. Lect. p. 211, &c. 2d Ed. and much useful information on this subject may be gotten from Mr Mede's Apostasy of the last Times, Chap. xi. xii.

30. —that the interpretation should be made known.—The verb יְהוֹרְעוּן, although the third pers. plur. active, may be rendered impersonally or passively; see the like at Nehem. ii. 7, Esth. ii. 2, also at Chap. iii. and iv. and several other places in this book; and thus the versions render.

31. Thou, O King, wast seeing, and behold a large Image.—I follow the Chald. literally in rendering, wast seeing, as it indicates the continuance of the vision; the versions render also in the imperfect tense, and so the Heb. MS. 240. Two MSS. have a Vau before צִלְמָא. “And this image,” Sym. ἀνδρίας; but the other Gr. εἰκων.—דָּבָן, “which was so great.” Several MSS. read דָּבָן. Heb. MS. 240, reads דָּבָן, and the passage thus, of the likeness of a man, which was so very great and of abundant brightness, &c. Josephus has given an account of the image and its interpretation in his Ant. x. 10, 4.

32. This Image's head was of fine gold.—In the human frame, enjoying the erect posture, the higher or upper parts have always assigned to them the pre-eminence: Thus in the statue the head being the most excellent is of pure gold; and the other parts are of baser and his arms of silver, his belly and his thighs of 33 brass ; His legs of iron, his feet part of iron, and part 34 of clay. Thou wast seeing until a stone was torn out without hands, and struck the image upon his feet of 35 iron and clay, and broke them in pieces. Then were broken in pieces as at the same time the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, and were like the chaff of the summer threshing-floors, and the wind carried them away, so that no place was found for them ; but the stone which struck the image became a 36 great mountain, and filled the whole earth. This is the dream, and the interpretation of it we will declare before the king.

metals, as we gradually descend toward the feet. I cannot say the poets and later mythological writers have any of them borrowed their fables of the different ages of the world, as some have thought, from this image ; since the notion was received much earlier than these times, and is mentioned by Hesiod ; but they have certainly made them in a great measure to correspond with it, so that the priority of time agrees with the superior and better parts of the image, and the golden has been the earliest age, and the iron the last.

33. —part of iron.—מַגְדָּו, “ Part of them.” Several MSS. agree with Keri in dropping the Vau in this word ; and so at ver. 41.

34. —was torn out.—The verb is in Ithp. and possibly may mean that it forced itself out : For the use of the particles אֵלָּא וְיָדָא, that is not with hands, for, without hands, see Nold. p. 209, and for a similar expression see 2 Cor. v. 1, and Heb. ix. 11. Gr. Vulg. and Ar. translate here as at v. 45, and adopt the term, from the mountain. Houbigant explains thus, Lapis prægrandis qui manu teneri non possit ; He is commonly much happier in his expositions. See Bishop Lowth on Isai. x. 15.

35. —the chaff of the summer threshing floors.—The summer is rather mentioned on account of the greater lightness and more ready dispersion of the chaff in that season. See Isai. xli. 15. Bishop Lowth has given a short but curious description of the several modes of threshing in the East, in his note on Isai. xxviii. 27, 28.

- 37 Thou, O king, art a King of kings, since the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom of power, and 38 strength, and glory. And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field, and the fowls of

37. Thou, O King.—The ה in the pronoun אנתה not only in this place and at ver. 31, but in several others is considered as redundant by Keri and many MSS. I know not whether it might not with greater propriety be here joined to the next word, as somewhat emphatical. Thou, the King, art a King of Kings, a mighty monarch presiding over many of the princes of the earth. See Ezek. xxvi. 7. And this is a title which Mr. Bruce tells us, Vol iii. is given to the Kings of Abyssinia at this day.

Moreover the signification of this pronoun is not to be confined to the person, as Datilius seems to intimate, but rather to intend also the kingdom of Nebuchadnezzar, or the Babylonian empire; and thus in like manner at the 39th verse we read that after thee shall arise another kingdom, that is, not upon the death of Nebuchadnezzar, but at the translation of his empire to the Medes and Persians. And by the word King in general we are, according to an usual metonymy, to understand a kingdom in the prophetic language, as may be learnt from Chap. vii. and viii. See also a whole Chap. of Sir Isaac Newton's on this prophetic language in his Observations upon Daniel.

—a kingdom of power, and strength and glory.—So the Greek. But Vulg considers all the nouns as accusatives, though there is no Vau before חסנא power. Syr. renders a powerful kingdom and glory.

38. And wheresoever the children of men dwell.—The participle דארינ from דיר to inhabit, according to Keri and some MSS. should be read with י instead of א; but there seems no occasion for any alteration in the text, as it only follows the usual mode of adopting the favourite Chaldee letter, which is often assumed in the middle, as well as at the beginning and end of words, wherever there is room for a change; thus we have the word קאם at ver. 31, and again at Chap. iii. ver. 3, קאמין; and this same word at Chap. iv. ver. 1. Two MSS. omit ב in the word ובכל; “And all things, wherein the sons of men dwell, the beasts of the field—hath he given into thy hand,” i. e. all places cultivated or desert within his empire: The the heaven, hath he given into thy hand, and hath made thee to have dominion over all these: Thou art this 39 head of gold. And after thee shall arise another word which we translate field properly signifies, an uncultivated waste, the pasture of wild beasts. Gr. and Ar. add, and the fishes of the Sea; the nouns are all singular collectives. See Jer. xxvii. 6.

---

It was an extensive tract of country over which the Babylonian monarch presided: For not to mention the territories of the Medes and their dependants, &c. with whom he was closely connected by affinities, the Chaldee Historian Berosus tells us, that Nebuchadnezzar held Egypt, Syria, Phœnicia, Arabia, and Strabo adds, Arbela, together with the territories of 'Babylon: The greatest part of the provinces also of the whole Assyrian empire were subject to him, and he is said to have advanced as far as Spain, insomuch that the Babylonian name was at least as widely extended as the Assyrian. See Chron. of Ancient Kingdoms, p. 324.

This being then the first empire was called the Head, and was said to be of gold, partly from the general idea that all things degenerate or sink into a worse state, and partly from the length or duration through which it is said to have continued; which was according to some near 700 years, meaning from its first establishment by Ninus to its end under Belshazzar; During the greater part of which period its wealth and flourishing state were considerable, but especially the grandeur and magnificence of Babylon its metropolis, under Nebuchadnezzar, were very great and astonishingly splendid.

39. And after thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee.—One MS. reads בְּתוֹךְ "in the midst of thee." Vulg. has here the word "argenteum" after the second kingdom, and so MS. Pachom. as the word "æreum" is after the third. This second kingdom was that of Cyrus and his successors, or the Medo-Persic empire, denoted according to Josephus by the two arms of the image. Cyrus was descended from Mandane the daughter of Astyages king of the Medes, and Cambyses the Persian. Both these powers are directed to go against Babylon, Isai. xxi. 2, and their strength united subdued it, and established a second empire on its ruins.

Medus ademit

Assyrio, Medoque tulit moderamina Perses.

Claud. 2 Consul. lib. de Stil. 163, 164.

kingdom inferior to thee, and another, a third kingdom, of brass, which shall have dominion over all the

“These metals were anciently employed to signify allegorically the different values of different men. Plato relates a Phœnician fable to this purpose. Rep. vii. p. 414. Appian (Alex. in Præf.) says, the three great empires, the Assyrians, Medes, and Persians, lasted not 900 years. And Vignoles, Vol. ii. p. 177. on this passage of Appian shews, that according to Herodotus the Median empire lasted above 150 years. The Babylonian monarchy was vastly superior to the scripture Median, if there was one, not only in duration, but probably in extent: and in splendour and greatness of works it was superior even to the Persian.” Secker.

—a third kingdom.—Jackson in his Chron. V. i. p. 393. observes, that the prophet having just mentioned this second kingdom, with great delicacy hastens to the third, because he would not tell the king, that the second kingdom was to destroy his. This third kingdom, or that of brass, is called in Chap. viii. the kingdom of  $\gamma\gamma$ , or Ionia, which was the Grecian kingdom; and so Homer, χαλκοχιτωνες Αχαιοι. It was established by Alexander of Macedonia; who subdued both Medes and Persians, after their empire had lasted about 230 years. This Prince is said by the Author of the first book of Maccabees at the beginning, “to be the first that reigned over Greece, after having smitten Darius the king of the Persians and Medes, to have made many wars, won many strong holds, and slain the kings of the earth; also to have gone through to the ends of the earth, and taken the spoils of many nations.” It is reported of this mighty conqueror, that he built more than seventy cities, twelve of which, or, as Curtius intimates, eighteen, he named Alexandria; that his soldiers, though unarmed, were never afraid, while he was with them, of any armed forces. He engaged no enemy which he did not conquer, besieged no city which he did not take, and made attempts on no nation which he did not entirely subdue. But yet all would not satisfy the vast cravings of his ambition, so that the Roman satirist with great justice observed of him,

Unus Pellæo juveni non sufficit orbis:

Æstuat infelix angusto limite mundi.

Juv. Sat. 10.

See a full account of him in Arrian. l. vii. in Curt. and Joseph. Ant. xi. 8.

40 earth. And a fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron, inasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and beateth down all things; and like iron that bruiseeth, all these shall it 41 break in pieces and bruise. And whereas thou sawest

40. —a fourth kingdom.—מלכוֹ with an Apocope of ת for the femin. מלכות. See Buxt. Lex. The wider the extent of his empire, the greater may be presumed to be the pride of man; and possibly from this consideration, as well as the others, the later empires are said to be inferior, or to resemble metals of inferior value. Brass also and iron are emblems of strength and terror, and used as such in Scripture, and therefore more adapted to the rapid conquests and uninterrupted successes of the third and fourth empires.

This fourth kingdom has by the greater number of interpreters been considered to be the Roman; yet Grotius and those that follow him have explained it of the successors of Alexander, the Seleucidæ and Lagidæ, who are in some respects reckoned to be as one kingdom, however divided. Those who desire to see these different opinions largely stated may consult Pool's Syn. on this place, and those who would wish for a complete refutation of the latter opinion may consult Mr. Mede's works, p. 712. where he supports by several weighty arguments the application of this kingdom to the Roman empire: see also Bishop Newton's 13th Diss.—As we shall have occasion to consider this subject again, and to speak of it more fully as we advance in this vision and in other parts of the book, I would only observe here, that the design of the vision seems to have been not only to shew the instability of human grandeur, but to point at the several powers the Church of God might have to conflict with, until the establishment of the kingdom of Christ; and that as the Grecian Monarchy was divided into four principal parts, the chief of which, as well as of the preceding empires, were subdued by the Romans, this will furnish a very just and proper meaning for the latter part of the verse before us.

—all these.—“אֵלֶּיךָ deest in Th. Syr. Quin et כל in Complut.” Secker. In the original “all these” may relate either to the iron or the kingdom; by the preceding comma I have referred it to the latter, and the versions favour this sense: But perhaps we might refer the word כל (if it should not be rather כָּלָא) to the former clause, and אֵלֶּיךָ to the latter, thus, “and like iron that bruiseeth all things, these shall it break in pieces and bruise.”

the feet and the toes, partly of potter's clay, and partly of iron, the kingdom shall be divided; but there shall be of the stock of the iron in it, inasmuch as thou 42 sawest iron mixed with the testaceous clay: Also the toes of the feet, partly of iron, and partly of clay, so

41. —potter's clay.—The word פֹּחַר is found only in this place in Scripture, but it may be met with in the Targum, Isai. xxix. 16, and corresponds with the Heb. יוֹצֵר the Potter, which is also the word in Cod. 240. The division of the feet, part iron, and part clay, being voluntarily inserted ought to be attended to; but other parts of the description, which the human form requires, are not to be too rigorously insisted on; yet still allowance should be made for the oriental neglect of accuracy.

—but there shall be of the stock.—The word נִצְבָּתָא I have rendered agreeably to the versions, with an allusion to the vegetable kingdom, from the Chald. verb נִצַּב which corresponds with the Heb. נָטַע to plant, and is constantly used for it in the Chaldee: see Cast. Lex. but Aben-Ezra and Saadiah render it “firmness,” or “hardness,” according to Buxtorf, and so it is in the translation of A. Purver. Perhaps the prophet would here allude to the iron in its rude state as it is dug out of the mines; whereas at the end of ver. 43, it must be understood in its wrought or manufactured state, or at least as extracted from the furnace.

The divided nature of this Roman kingdom may be explained either by its government under two consuls, the two legs of the image, one of which chiefly attended to the concerns of war, the other to those of peace; or perhaps may have respect only to the frequent intestine tumults and internal convulsions with which this empire was torn and shaken, and sometimes almost reduced to the brink of ruin; yet still it had always strength to recover, to tread down and subdue all its enemies. The verb לְהוּא in the infin. mood is translated by an enallage in the fut. tense, though strictly we ought to render, “so as to be.” However this sort of idiom is common in Chald. see ver. 43, Chap. iii. 18, and the note at ver. 20, of this Chapter.

42. —the toes.—The nouns here have a reference to the verb in the former verse, “Also thou sawest the toes, &c.” The meaning seems to be, the part of the kingdom that is in union and concord shall be strong and successful, but where it is divided and torn by the kingdom shall in part be strong, and part of it 43 shall be brittle. And whereas thou sawest the iron mixed with the testaceous clay, they shall intermix

---

civil dissensions, the materials will be weak, and the kingdom ruinous: But some explain the verse by the commotions and clashings that were between the secular and ecclesiastical powers, after the kingdom was divided into ten parts, answerable to the ten toes of the image.

43. And whereas thou sawest the iron mixed with the testaceous clay.—The ו is dropped at the beginning of this verse in some editions; but many MSS. and other editions concur with Keri in reading ורי. A finer sort of clay seems to be here meant, more adapted to the work of the potter, of which he might make vases or images. Gr. οστρακω Syr. Transl. has “testa lutea.” The proper signification of חשף is the naked clay as first laid bare from the earth, from חשף nudavit; the word טינט I take to allude to the tempered state of the clay, when moistened and made fit for moulding; and both words together seem to have been used to denote the moulded substance baked and hardened for use; to express which I know of no better word than that which is here adopted. Iron and this brittle substance might be brought into contact or joined with each other, but they could never coalesce.

The alliances and intermarriages of the Romans with the barbarous nations seems to be understood in this verse; the latter were the clay which would not well cohere with the manufactured iron. They intermarried, but did not agree; For, as Tacitus observes, Dominandi cupido cunctis affectibus flagrantior erit. The ties of affinity or even of blood are not proof against the cravings of ambition. Whatever be the fourth kingdom, most writers agree in interpreting this verse of unsuccessful intermarriages: and it is especially observable that in the declining state of the Roman empire the intermarriages with the barbarians were frequent and distinguished, as may be learnt from the histories of the times, and the observations of Calovius; but yet the cement would not hold, so as to form any great kingdom, or prevent the impending fate of the empire.

Archbishop Secker, who commonly saw things in a very comprehensive manner, with their adjuncts, objections, and consequences, has given his sentiments largely on this fourth kingdom, as well as on themselves with the human race, but they shall not adhere one to another, even as iron doth not intermix the kingdom of the stone that follows it. The following extract will serve in some measure to explain his sense of the former, and another at ver. 45. that of the latter. "The kingdom of the Seleucidæ was powerful till Antiochus the Great; and this empire, which extended to India, is probably here meant, if the Roman be not. Alexander, according to the author of the Maccabees, divided his kingdom among his servants, and hence their kingdom was a continuation of his, or at least was thought so then. Arrian Hist. Ind. c. 21. makes the Macedonians and Asiatics reckon by the year of Alexander's reign. Philip Aridæus gave name to the Philippean æra, only known to Astronomers, and that after Ptolemy. Some think that the want of unity makes it necessary to consider the Seleucidæ and Lagidæ as parts of Alexander's kingdom, and not the fourth kingdom: and indeed their frequent wars for above 200 years must make them not to be reputed as one, who lived under different monarchs constantly, unless as from one origin. No heathen author I believe considers the successors of Alexander as constituting a different empire from the Macedonian, but as dividing that empire into parts. Dion. Halicar. in the beginning expressly represents the Macedonian empire from the first to its extinction by the Romans as one. An aggregate kingdom seems probably intended from ver. 43. Indeed the division of the kingdom and the mixing will agree admirably with the Seleucidæ, if confined to this consideration; but the two verses at Chap. xi. incline us to think otherwise; nor did the Seleucidæ, as far as appears, endeavour to make up their quarrels by intermarriages among themselves. Sulp. Sev. applies the interpretation to the Romans in the beginning of his second book, and with him "they shall mix themselves with the seed of men" is understood to mean that they shall become a mixture of nations: thus they gave the jus civitatis to those they conquered; and they were much more mixed by unions afterward with the barbarians. In Exod. xii. we read ערב רב, came up with them out of Egypt; and Nehem. xiii. 3. they separated בל ערב, from Israel, and the same word means "a mingled people," 1 Kings, x. 15. Jer. xxv. 20. and l. 37."

To these considerations it may be added, that Jerom hath plainly referred this kingdom to the Romans, especially on account of its weakness and need of assistance from the barbarous nations in his own

- 44 itself with clay. And in the days of those kings shall the God of heaven raise up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, neither shall the kingdom devolve to another people; it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, but itself shall stand for ever:
- 45 Inasmuch as thou sawest that from the mountain was time. Theodoret is also of the same opinion. Beside, the Seleucidæ and Lagidæ were the thighs of brass, or part of the brazen kingdom, and much weakened by their divisions, and therefore needed not a harder metal to represent them. And indeed the arguments are so powerful and cogent, particularly from the strength of the kingdom compared to iron, from the general consent of ancient writers both before and after the time of Christ for at least 300 years, and finally from the congruity of this opinion with the subsequent part of the interpretation, that we may readily concur with the determination of Mr. Mede, and consider the point as tantum non articulus fidei.

44. And in the days of those kings.—That is, kingdoms. The four kingdoms in allusion to the one image are here supposed to constitute one whole period, and the expression therefore must mean, during the continuance of the last: see ver. 34; where the stone is said to strike the feet of the image, &c. probably alluding to the unfulfilled parts of this vision.

—neither shall the kingdom, &c.—Vulg. Gr. and Ar. read his kingdom, meaning God's, or, as we read in the New Testament, "the kingdom of Heaven:" but it is observable, that many MSS. and among them the ancient Bodl. read מלכותא with א in the end: so that the ך in the present text is probably not an affix, but only the final or terminating letter, and which two MSS. have dropped. This kingdom shall not be transferred like the former ones, but shall be of a very different nature, shall crush all temporal kingdoms, and shall be universal, unchangeable, and eternal. It is remarked by Josephus, that "Daniel told the King what the stone signified," but the Historian adds, that he himself was unwilling to express it, as his intention was, to register things past, and not such as are to come. Ant. l. x. c. 10. Conviction will sometimes force its appearance, however impeded by insurmountable prejudice.

45. Inasmuch as thou sawest, &c.—Those who would understand this fifth kingdom to be the Roman, having explained the fourth of torn out a stone without hands, and it broke in pieces

---

the Seleucidæ and Lagidæ, or the Syrians and Egyptians, seem to labour very much in this part of their interpretation, are forced to allow that the Roman empire was in their sense of the vision a type of Christ, and that it crushes the other Powers and will stand for ever, because the Church of Christ was for the most part seated in this empire. But that the stone mentioned in this verse must mean Christ himself is almost universally admitted by the Jews. He is styled by the Psalmist, "the head of the corner, although the stone which the builders refused." Ps. 118. 22. See also Mat. xxi. 42. Acts iv. 11. Ephes. ii. 20. This idea is also agreeable to the prediction of Isa. Chap. xxviii. 16. "Behold I lay in Zion for a foundation a stone, a tried stone, a precious corner-stone, a sure foundation;" the same is also the stone of Zech. Chap. iii. 9, which is likewise the branch alluded to in the preceding verse. It is the rock too of St. Paul, 1 Cor. x. 4. "And that rock was Christ." This stone may be considered either as literally crushing all the other kingdoms, inasmuch as the preceding ones were subdued under the Roman power, and by crushing that it reduced all the rest; or, in a higher and spiritual sense, it will subdue all things, according to St. Paul's idea, 1 Cor. xv. 24. "Then cometh the end, when he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power, and shall have delivered up the kingdom to God even the Father, who hath put all things under his feet." The kingdom of Christ was first established in the Roman empire; the foundation of which empire was laid after the Romans had subdued the Macedonian power where the third empire originated; and in this empire at its greatest elevation as in a mountain, without any human assistance, by the immediate influence of Heaven, did the Saviour of the world form his spiritual kingdom which was to last for ever; having triumphed over all principalities and powers, and continuing to exercise his sovereignty, till the whole earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord, the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our God and his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever.

"Jacchiades, and I believe all the Jews explain this stone now of the Messiah. Scipio tells the Romans that they would be Masters of the World, if they beat Hannibal, Polyb, l. xv. p. 698, and the same Polyb. saith, l. viii. p. 514, that the whole world was under their dominion, and the Rhodians say the same thing. Jerom ex-the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold :

The great God hath made known to the king what is to be hereafter ; for certain is the dream, and faithful is the interpretation of it.

46 Then the king Nebuchadnezzar fell on his face, and plains “sine manibus,” absque coitu et humano semine de utero virginali:” and the church shall be formed and prevail without human means : Christ’s kingdom was not of this world. Isa. xi. 1 “the rock from whence ye were hewn,” Theodoret understands of Isaac’s descent from Abraham contrary to the course of nature, and that the rock in this case is David’s family.—Mr. Mede considers the kingdom of Christ as θεανθρωπος. See Rev. xi. 15. The distinction of the stone and of the mountain is not apparent in the image or the prophet’s account ; the fall of a stone is very rapid from the top of a mountain, and must have acquired force to break the image ; yet this seems not suitable to the progress of christianity ; It grew considerably before the empire became Christian, and perhaps not in proportion since : And certainly there is room indeed for its growing vastly larger both in outward extent, and above all in inward efficacy ; and it must grow very much before it can fill the whole earth.

The Apostolical Constitutions, l. v. c. 20, having spoken of Christ as the son of man from Dan. vii. 13, speak of him from this Chapter, as the stone growing into a great mountain, and filling the whole earth ; συντριβοντα πολυαρχιαν και πολυθειαν θεων (al. αθων) κηρυσσοντα δε τον ενα θεον, και χειρονοντα (fors. χειροοντα) των Ῥωμαιων μοναρχιαν.” Secker.

—the silver and the gold.—Gr. Ar. and Syr. having connected the former part of this verse with verse 44, make a full stop after the word “gold,” and so Mr. Mede, &c. The word יָמִין in the next clause may be considered as the participle in Aphel from the verb יָמַן, and signifies “credible,” or “faithful.”

46. —fell on his face.—The King highly revered Daniel, and paid him such tokens of profound respect as were consonant to oriental manners ; Or if, as some have thought, he was inclined to worship him by falling on his face, &c., as the Lycaonians were St. Paul, Acts 14, it should seem by the next verse, that Daniel wished, as before, to direct the payment of these honours to that great power to whom alone they were due, and disclaimed all merit on his own part. Vulg.

47 did reverence to Daniel, and commanded to offer an oblation and grateful odours unto him. The king spoke thus unto Daniel, Truly your God is the God of gods, and Lord of kings, and a revealer of secrets, 48 since thou hast been able to reveal this secret. Then the king made Daniel great, and gave him many large presents, and appointed him to preside over the whole province of Babylon, and he was a chief magistrate 49 over all the wise men of Babylon. Moreover Daniel translates the words that follow in the next clause, "et hostias et incensum:" Gr. has "μααα και ευωδίας," or a cake of fine flour and grateful odours. Both perhaps understood it as a kind of sacrifice, which it probably was not: For Mr. Harmer, Vol. ii. p. 72, &c. seems to have placed this matter in a full and satisfactory light, and explained the words that countenance the idea of a sacrifice to mean Tokens or marks of respect not very uncommonly paid to men in the east. The passage is much too long to be cited.

48. —made Daniel great.—Ch. רבי. Syr. amplificavit, or magnificavit, the word is of the form Pahel, and used only in this place.

—many large presents.—Gr. Ar. and V. read many and large, and one MS. favours the Vau: the same versions and Cod. 240, begin the 47th verse with a Vau.

—over the whole province.—One MS. and some versions read מדינות. De Rossi. The Chaldee word מדינת or Medina is a name often in use among the Arabs, and by it the city of their prophet in the desert of Arabia is well known to be called at this day. At this place he was invested with regal power after his expulsion from Mecca, and from his flight to this place in the year of our Lord 622, the Hejra commences. Many places or considerable towns in Spain are still called by this same name, and retain this vestige of the Saracen incursions.

—a chief magistrate.—In this and the former Chapters we read of three chief magistrates, the master of the Eunuchs or Chamberlains רב סריסי, the Master of the Executioners or Captain of the Guard רב סבחי, and here the רב סנני, or Head of the Senators, or High Chancellor. Syr. reads "over all the military commanders and all the wise men."

asked of the king, and he deputed over the care of the province of Babylon Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego; but Daniel was in the gate of the king.

49. — Daniel asked of the king.—His request might be justified on the score of friendship, but more especially for the sake of the church and nation of the Jews, and that he might obtain some faithful associates who should assist him in the high and slippery station to which he was advanced.

The word עבִידֵתָא seems to have respect to agriculture, and the revenues arising from the cultivation of lands: and this was probably the nature of the presidency to which Shadrach, &c. were advanced: while Daniel sat εν τη αυλη του βασιλεως, or according to Theodoret and Syr. in the gate or court of the king, as his High Chancellor, or chief Minister of Justice and of the affairs of the state.

The following passage in Dr. Shaw's Travels may throw much light upon this situation of Daniel; Speaking of the Judicature of the Algerines he says, "all affairs of moment are laid before the Dey, or else when he is absent, or otherwise employed, they are heard by the Treasurer, Master of the Horse, and other principal Officers of the Regency, who sit constantly in the gate of the Palace for that purpose. At all these Tribunals the cause is quickly decided, nothing more being required than the proof of what is alleged, so that a matter of debt, trespass, or of the highest crimes, will be finally decided, and the sentence executed in less than an hour. And on the word "gate," he observes in a note, thus we read "of the elders in the gate;" Deut. xxii. 15, and xxv. 7; and Isa. xxix. 21. Amos v. 10, "of him that reproveth and rebuketh in the gate," &c. Ed. fol. p. 315.

CHAPTER III.

- 1 NEBUCHADNEZZAR the king made an Image of gold, the height of it was sixty cubits, and the breadth of it
-

THIS Chapter contains a History of Nebuchadnezzar's erecting an Image of Gold of an immense size, as an idol to which he expected all his empire to pay worship. Daniel's three friends refusing this worship, are cast into a furnace of fire, and by their miraculous delivery thence, the King is again brought to an acknowledgment of the one true God.

How soon this image was erected after the dream in his second year is uncertain. Gr. and Ar. begin this Chapter with "In the eighteenth year," and Dr. Prideaux agrees with them, though the words are not in the present text: But whether it happened then, or, as some think, later, the design of it probably was to frustrate the exposition, and defeat the end, of the dream; on which account perhaps the image was made wholly of gold, and not of different metals; to make an ostentatious display of the abundance of his wealth, and to obviate the jealousies of his people on account of his favours to Daniel and his friends. Some or all of these motives might probably influence this haughty and inconstant monarch to desert the true God, whom he had so lately acknowledged, and to yield again to the force of those inveterate habits, from which he had been so miraculously recovered.

This statue was probably of Bel or some of the Assyrian deities, as we may collect from verse 14. It is thought to have been hollow within, like the Colossus at Rhodes, whose height exceeded that of the statue by ten cubits: The proportion of the height seems unequal to the breadth, unless the pedestal be included therein on which it was placed. Houbigant, on account of this disparity, thinks it was rather a column or pyramid than of the human form: But Diodorus, l. ii. §. 9, tells us, that Xerxes took away an image of gold forty feet long, when he demolished the temple of Belus in Babylon, which Prideaux six cubits: When he had set it up in the plain of 2 Dura in the province of Babylon, Nebuchadnezzar the king sent to gather together the Princes, the Senators, and the Magistrates, the Judges, the Treasurers, the supposes may have been this of Nebuchadnezzar. The statue of Jupiter also made by Lysippus at Tarentum is said to be forty cubits. The plain of Dura where it was erected was probably near a town called by Symmachus Douzan, and by Ptolemy Doraba; "Ammianus Marcellinus mentions Dura as not far from the place where Julian died; and in D'Anville's map of the Tigris and Euphrates it is on the Tigris, under  $34\frac{1}{2}$  lat. and in Niebuhr's map of his journey (45 of vol. ii.) is Dor." Michaelis. But Jerom considers it as an inclosed place in Babylon, see Chapter i. 2, and LXX. has περιβολον, considering it as an appellative for a sort of circus.

1. — When he had set it up.—Thus the words may be rendered by the assistance of the Vau at the next verse. The like observation may illustrate the rendering in many other places, and especially at the latter end of the third and beginning of the fourth verses, where there is a Vau twice in both places. So Syr.

2. — The Princes, the Senators, and the Magistrates &c.—It must be very difficult at this distance of time, and perhaps impossible, to ascertain with exactness the proper titles and offices of the several characters that are here mentioned. I shall endeavour to give as just a description of them as I can, either from the form of the words, their use in other places, the opinion of commentators, or the allusion they may bear to modern offices of dignity in the East. I take the first word, with Herodotus, to be of Persian, or, rather, with Grotius, of Assyrian origin, to have been derived down through the Chaldeans to the Persians, and to answer to their Satrap, meaning probably the chief of their nobility; see Esth. ix. 3. The next word סַנַנִּיָּא is the same that is used at Chap. ii. 48, and probably means some of the highest officers in the state, which I have therefore rendered by "Senators." The office sustained by these persons seems to have extended to matters both military and ecclesiastical, as Castell observes on the word, and intimates that it signifies a kind of Vice-roy, or one of the first rank in either the military line, or among the Pontiffs: Perhaps it may answer to the Beys. The word that follows is con-

Counsellors, the Presidents, and all the Governors of the Provinces, to come to the dedication of the Image, 3 which Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up. Then were gathered together the Princes, the Senators, and nected with the preceding by a Vau, and we find these words joined but with their order inverted, Jer. li. 23. and again ver. 57. The פחה was probably a Magistrate appointed to preside over a peculiar government: and the word Pacha is still retained in the East, and though varied somewhat in sound, denotes a kind of Bashaw or Governor among the Turks, Arabs, and Persians. The word אדרגוריא R. Nathan translates "Judges;" they seem to have been a kind of Guardians or Directors of the statute laws or decrees of the monarch, and are therefore rendered by the Gr. ηγουμενοι the chief Judges. There is an officer in the Ottoman court called the Caddilaschir, which may seem to answer to this description; the Caddilaschirs are a sort of universal Judges, that extend to all persons or causes whatsoever. The following word גרבריא "the Treasurers," is, as Grotius has observed, the same word that is so translated, Ezra i. 8. and is often found in the Chaldee; and by changing the kindred letter ד for ו, they may be the γαζοφοροι of the Greeks, and may answer to the Ottoman "Defterdars." רתבריא which follows may be derived from רת the law, and ברר to purify, and probably signifies the most distinguished counsellors or professors of the law. The next word תפתיא is omitted by Vulg. but coming from the verb פתה to persuade, is by some supposed to have been given to persons of very high characters for knowledge and wisdom; and the Mufti or sovereign Pontiff among the Turks seems to have derived his name from a similar source in the Arabic language. But Houbigant calls these last "Janitores," which he considers as a very high office, and sustained by Daniel himself. See Chap. ii. 49. R. Jacchiades has illustrated, or rather applied all these characters to similar offices in the Turkish empire; an account of which may be seen in Grotius: see also Habesci's present state of the Ottoman empire.

---

3. Then were gathered together.—The design of calling all these officers of every nation and language in the whole empire together, seems to have been chiefly to ensnare Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego; for those that presided over lesser districts were also summoned to the dedication; εις τα εγκαenia. Th. See John x. 22.

the Magistrates, the Judges, the Treasurers, the Counsellors, the Presidents, and all the Governors of the Provinces unto the dedication of the Image which 4 Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up. And when they stood before the Image which Nebuchadnezzar had set up, a herald proclaimed aloud, To you it is spoken,
 5 peoples, nations, and languages : At the time when ye shall hear the sound of the cornet, pipe, harp, sackbut,

4. —to you it is spoken.—So Syr. See Chap. iv. 31. and the note on Chap. ii. 30. Syr. also connects this verse with the latter part of the preceding, as I have translated.

5. —the sound of the cornet, pipe &c.—Of several of the musical instruments mentioned in this verse, we may form some idea from the correspondency of the original Chaldee words with musical instruments now well known. Thus, קרנא the cornet, משרוקיתא the flute or pipe, from שרק to hiss or whistle, not unlike the Greek σφυζω fistula cano ; קיתרס the same word, and perhaps instrument, with the Cithara, which Dr. Shaw tells us is called Quetara among the Moors, and they have several guitars of different sizes, each of them tuned an octave higher than another ; to some one of the softer sort Horace seems to allude, B. i. Ode 15.

—————Grataque fæminis
 Imbelli cithara carmina divides.

But Secker observes that in the Targ. Isai. v. 12. קתרס answers to תוף. Chandler thinks it might be called Kithar, because of citron wood, whence made, as the next word might be from Sambuc or the elder. As to the two former words, Mr. Harmer has an extract from Dr. Russell, which he thinks may serve to illustrate them. “The music of Aleppo is of two sorts, one for the field, the other for the chamber. The first makes part of the retinue of the Bashaws and other great military officers, and is used also in their garrisons. It consists of a sort of haut-boy, shorter but shriller than ours ; trumpets, cymbals, large drums, the upper head of which is beat upon with a heavy drum-stick, the lower with a small switch : Beside these, they have small drums, beat after the manner of our kettle-drums.” The two first of these in an inverted order he refers to the terms above-mentioned.

The word סבבא, or Sambuca, according to the Greek pronunciation, is of Syrian origin, and means a sort of triangular instrument with four strings in use among the Syrian women, as Grotius thinks. If this be its description, it is more of a kind of lyre than we commonly understand by the sackbut, which is a wind instrument of the trumpet kind, or tuba ductilis, capable of being drawn out in a greater or less degree, according to the tone required, whether grave or acute. Indeed Bochart in Chan. p. 808, tells us, this instrument, the Sab-buca, was called Lyrophœnix, or Phœnician Lyre, as being an invention of the Phœnicians or Syrians. The פסנתרין or Psaltery is thought to have been the נבל or Nablium of the Hebrews; which Josephus says, was an instrument of twelve sounds played upon with the fingers, and turned in playing with both hands; whence Ovid has observed,

Disce etiam duplici genalia nablia palma
Vertere, conveniunt dulcibus illa modis.

De Arte Am. lib. iii.

But some copies read Verrere; according to the expression of Mr. Pope in his Cæcilia, —————And brush the sounding lyre.

Chrysostom and most of the fathers consider the Psaltery as a kind of stringed instrument, and not much unlike the Cithara.—“It occurs nowhere else in the Bible. Cast. doth not mention it as Targ. Talm. or Rabb. word. Syr. omits it, as often hard words; it seems a foreign word. Athenæus, lib. xiv. in Mich. says, its ancient name was Magadis. Its form gave it the name τριγωνον; and there were επταγωνα.” Seeker.

The last instrument that is mentioned is the סומפניה Symphonia, which Castell and others consider as a sort of organ. Servius on the 11th Æn. calls it “tibia obliqua,” sive πλαγυανλος: Others will have it to be a kind of drum played upon with sticks, which according to the different parts that were struck occasioned an agreeable variety of sounds. Dr. Shaw has an observation on the Turkish music, which I cannot forbear transcribing, as it may throw some light on the two last instruments, though I do not conceive it will describe them exactly. “The Turks chiefly make use of two instruments, whereof the one is like a long-necked Kit, played upon with a bow like the Nebebb or Violin of two strings; the other which is in the fashion of our Duleimer, with brass strings, is touched sometimes with the finger, sometimes with two small sticks, or else with a plectrum.”

psaltery, dulcimer, and all kinds of music, ye shall fall down and worship the image of gold which Nebuchadnezzar the king hath set up; And whosoever shall not fall down and worship, in the same hour shall be cast “L’Empereur” interprets it, Symphonia c conjunctis fistulis. Drusius in his fragments of the old versions cites Elias in his interpretation of Chald. words as saying, that it is the name of a musical instrument, called in Italian Symphonia, and in German Lier, i. e. Lyra, from Montf. See Luke xv. 25.—Polybius, lib. xxvi. mentions συμφωνίας as to what Antiochus danced. Ellis in his Fortuita Sacra, p. 372, quotes Isidore with Grotius, and adds, antea dixerat, Tympanum fuisse pellem, vel corium ligno ex una parte extensum. Est enim, ait, pars media Symphonie in similitudinem cribi. Michaelis inclines to the reading of Cethib, ver. 10, and makes it σάφων, possibly from שָׁפַר, 1 Kings vi. 9. But Keri seems preferable.” Secker.

Mr. Bruce, in his first Vol. has two beautiful plates of a sort of Cithara or Harp, which he discovered in a cave of the Troglodytes near or at the situation of ancient Thebes in Upper Egypt. Of these, Dr. Burney in his History of Music has given an account in a letter from Mr. Bruce; but though the Doctor in the same first Vol. has one whole Chapter on the music of the ancient Hebrews, yet he only enumerates the names of these instruments before us, by quoting the verse; and probably in his researches could not meet with sufficient data to explain them in a satisfactory manner.

As to the names themselves, however they may resemble the Greek, and may be supposed to be borrowed thence, yet Bishop Chandler has given us reason to conclude, that they sprung rather from the Asiatic languages, and were adopted by the Greeks therefrom; or if the former opinion be allowed, he has shewn that it may fairly be accounted for without any imputation on the authenticity or early date of this book. See his Vind. of Def. Vol. i. see likewise Shaw’s Travels, p. 270, and Harmer’s Observations, Vol. i. p. 416. Calmet thinks some of the instruments passed from the East into Greece, with their names.

6. —fall down and worship.—Christians are directed to worship with the body as well as the spirit. 1 Cor. vi. 20, 1 Thess. v. 23, so Ps. xcvi. 6. It is agreeable to natural light as well as to the revealed will of God, that the whole man should be holy to the Lord. But

- 7 into the midst of a burning fiery furnace. Therefore at the time when all the peoples heard the sound of the cornet, pipe, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and all kinds of music, all the peoples, nations, and languages, falling down worshipped the image of gold which Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up.
- 8 Immediately hereupon certain Chaldeans came near,
9 and set forth invidious accusations against Jews. They spoke thus to king Nebuchadnezzar; O king, live for 10 ever: Thou, O king, hast made a decree, that every man, upon hearing the sound of the cornet, pipe, harp, Jerom observes, that "falling down" is applied in Scripture rather to Idols than to the true God. See Mat. iv. 9.

7. — Psaltery.—"And Dulcimer" follows, in several MSS. V. Syr. MS. Pachom. and some Edit. of the Greek. I know not whether it be by design or mistake, but this whole verse is omitted in Cod. 240, at the bottom of Dr. Kennicott's Bible.

8. — set forth invidious accusations.—Openly to accuse. Houb. The verb אכל properly signifies "to eat or devour;" but in Chald. when joined with קרן it signifies "to accuse or criminate:" the proper signification of the latter word is "to cut," and also "to nod, or wink with the eye;" and as by these signs it is that false accusers confirm their charges, so the noun is hence used for a false accusation. The like idiom is observable in other languages; proscindere aliquem, and to wound the reputation of a person, are expressions somewhat similar, but perhaps less forcible than אכל קרני, to accuse or devour with invidious and unjust charges. The phrase is often to be met with in the Targum, and recurs at Chap. vi. 24, and is used in this sense in Heb. Cod. 240. See Cast. Lex. and Lev. xix. 16.

9. — O king, live for ever.—See Chap. ii. ver. 4, and on Chap. vi. 21.

10. — upon hearing &c.—Though the verbs are future, yet I have followed Syr. and rendered them in this and the next verse, in the imperfect subjunctive. A. Purver renders here, "and a Concert of all kinds of Music." It is generally thought the ancient Asiatic nations knew nothing of counterpoint; and without it a variety of instruments how great soever can scarce justify the needless introduction of the modern word Concert to express their combined effect.

sackbut, psaltery, and duleimer, and all kinds of music, 11 should fall down and worship the image of gold: And whosoever would not fall down and worship, should be 12 cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace. Here are certain Jews, whom thou hast set over the business of the province of Babylon, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego; these men pay no regard to thee, O king:

11. —burning fiery furnace.—Another cruel method of punishment among the Chaldeans. See Jer. xxix. 22. Burning alive is still inflicted, as Shaw tells us, on Jews and Christians for capital crimes at Algiers. See also Ps. xxi. 9. Mr. Bruce, Vol. i. p. 516, has given us the following narrative: “Phineas, an Arabian Prince from Medina, having beat St. Aretas the governor of Najiran, began to persecute the Christians by a new species of cruelty; by ordering certain furnaces or pits full of fire to be prepared, into which he threw as many of the inhabitants of Najiran as refused to renounce Christianity. Mohammed in his Koran mentions this tyrant by the name of the Master of the fiery pits, without either condemning or praising the execution; only saying, the sufferers shall witness against him at the last day.

12. —pay no regard.—The word טעם properly signifies “the taste,” and in a metaphorical sense denotes, Regard, Counsel, a Sentence, or Edict; see Cast. Lex. The expression should seem here to mean, as at Chap. vi. ver. 13, “they had paid no regard;” so Syr. and Cod. 240, but at ver. 10 and 29 it must mean “an Edict, or Decree;” and even here it may be thought that the same sense which the word has at the 10th verse should belong to it at the 12th; and Gr. Ar. V. and our old Eng. Transl. read, “have not regarded thy decree.” Yet the sense of the passage is not materially affected in either case. See Chap. ii. 14.

In this last cited place the Gr. Interpreter has rendered the word טעם by γνώμη; and both words have probably the same general signification, and may often serve to illustrate each other. And if this be admitted, we may be furnished with a much more forcible as well as satisfactory sense for the Gr. word in 1 Cor. vii. 25, where the Apostle observes, that though he has no command or injunction ἐπιταγή from the Lord, yet he gives his γνώμη, his sentence or decree, as a faithful minister and highly-favoured Apostle of Christ. By this

- they revere not thy gods, nor worship the image of 13 gold which thou hast set up. Then Nebuchadnezzar in rage and fury commanded to bring up Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego; wherefore these men were 14 brought up before the king. Nebuchadnezzar spoke thus to them, Is it insultingly, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, that ye do not revere my gods, nor worship 15 the image of gold which I have set up? Now if ye are ready, that at the time when ye shall hear the sound of the cornet, pipe, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of music, ye fall down and worship the image which I have made, well; but if ye worship not, sense the objection to inspiration, from the occasional exercise of the sacred writer's opinion only, will vanish.

13. —were brought up.—The verb הֵיטִין from אָתָה “to come to,” seems of the active form in Aphel, but according to the punctuation and the Chaldee commutation of א into י it may be considered in a passive sense.

14. —Is it insultingly?—The word הִצָּרָא does not occur anywhere else in Scripture. Some think צָרָא to be of the same signification with the Heb. צָרִיָּה industria, and thus would render “Is it designedly?” Most of the versions render with our present translation, “Is it true?” Others consider the word as expressive of admiration; and thus our old translation of 1599 has, what Disorder? But the Targum uses the word מַצְטַרִי in two places for deriding or insulting, as the Chald. Paraphr. has translated, Prov. xviii. 1, and xx. 3, and therefore I have followed this sense, which seems a very good one, and expressive of the jealousy and fearful apprehensions of the King. “An malo animo?” Mr. Godwin. This last named gentleman, late of Baliol College, has left among his other books to the Bodleian Library an English Bible with his own MS. Notes on various parts of it; whence I have extracted a few remarks.

15. —well.—The ellipsis, though familiar in the Heb. and other ancient languages, is rather beautiful at this verse, and seems to point at the great wrath and overbearing impetuosity of this furious monarch, which is farther denoted at the close of the verse. For a like ellipsis, see Luke xiii. 9, Mat. xv. 5, 6, &c. Glass. has observed

- in the same hour ye shall be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace; And who is the God that shall 16 deliver you out of my hand? Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego answered thus to the king, O Nebuchadnezzar, we are not solicitous to make thee a reply
 17 concerning this matter. Either there is our God, whom we serve, able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and from thy hand, O king, he will 18 deliver: Or if otherwise, be it known to thee, O king, that we will not revere thy gods, nor worship the image of gold which thou hast set up.
 19 Then was Nebuchadnezzar filled with fury, and the aspect of his face was changed toward Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego; therefore he ordered to heat the furnace one seven times more than it was usual to in his Philol. p. 574, that as the punishment is denounced in the latter clause of the sentence, the praise or acquiescence must be implied in the contrary clause that precedes it: and so the old Eng. Transl. reads, "Now therefore are ye &c." without any ellipsis.

16. —not solicitous.—So Cod. 240, but the versions chiefly following the Syriac Etymology render, "we have no occasion, or think it of no use to answer." The word פתגם "matter" at the end of this clause is the same word that occurs at Chap. iv. 17, except that in this latter place there is an Aleph at the end, which seems added by way of emphasis. The word is in appearance a compound, and perhaps of פת frustrum and גם succedit; thus denoting, a detached or decisive portion, or a distinct thing. So פתבג at Chap. i. means a portion of rich food, or of dainties.

18. —thy Gods.—Some render the word singularly, in reference to the one statue, but there might have been several images or hieroglyphics on the statue, and the plural seems more agreeable to the general habit of Pagan worship. Sym. has ἀρδπαντι χρυσω. At the end of the preceding verse Gr. has the word ημας, he will deliver us.

19.—was changed.—Kêri and many MSS. read אשתני, which seems undoubtedly right.

—he ordered to heat the furnace seven times more.—Chald. "he

- 20 heat it. And he commanded men of the greatest strength amongst his forces, to bind Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, to be cast into the burning fiery furnace. Then these men were bound in their mantles, their turbans, and their cloaks, with their vestments, spoke and said :” But eight MSS. with the versions, drop the word ענה, “he spoke.” A. Purver translates, “seven times more than it had been seen to be heated. Gr. and Ar. read, that it might be heated seven times, till it might burn to the utmost “εις τελος.” The like expression occurs, John xiii. 1. Christ having loved his own, loved them εις τελος, “with the warmest affection and most perfect regard,” which he evinced, as it follows, by condescending even to wash their feet. And again, in 1 Thess. ii. 16.

In the next verse most of the versions omit the words די בחילה “among his forces,” or “of his army.”

20. — to be cast.—So two MSS. read the word, למירמא passively. And in the next verse Gr. Ar. and Vulg. understand the verbs in the passive sense ; but Syr. in the active : The MSS. seem rather to favour the passive : they read כפיתו and רמיו or רמיו ; and this seems most agreeable to the idiom of the language, which must require a pronoun to be supplied twice, if the active form is preferred.

21. — their turbans.—Keri and Many MSS. consider the first Jod as redundant in the word פטישיון, and some editions omit it. As to the particulars of the dress of these young men, the first word seems to mean their principal garment, which hung loose and flowing down to their ankles, perhaps not unlike the Roman tunic ; and Montfaucon in his Antiq. Vol. iii. tells us, that the Babylonians according to Herodotus wore two tunics, one linen, that fell down as low as their feet, and the other woollen, which they wore uppermost ; upon these they also wore a Chlanidion, or kind of small cloak. The second word seems to agree in sound with the Greek πετασος, a sort of hat or bonnet : which had for the most part brims or margins, but narrower than those of our modern hats, and such as we sometimes see in those of Mercury, according to Montfaucon ; who tells us from Athenæus, that Alexander the Great wore the Petasus at feasts, and also πεδαλα. The third term according to the versions, must mean their hose or high shoes, but I rather think with some Commentators, and were cast into the midst of the burning fiery furnace.

22 Therefore because the king's word was urgent, and the a hood or cloak may be intended, that hung down from the head over the shoulders, not unlike the Roman pallium, and of which sort probably was our Saviour's Cloak, John xix. 23, which was woven without seam from top to bottom. Shaw tells us, that the mountain Arabs or Kabyles, who retain the primitive manners, have a cloak called a Burnoose, which seems to answer to this latter; and they have also an upper garment called Hyke, which may not much disagree with the former: "This last garment he says was six yards long, and five or six feet broad, and serves for a complete dress in the day, and for a covering at night. The last word being a general term for vestments of all sorts, may be supposed to comprehend their under garments, and all that are not recited before.—Whether the third term be understood as a cloak, or the dress of the legs or feet, Xenophon has given us an actual exhibition in the person of Cyrus of each of the parts of dress here before us in his eighth Book of the Cyrop. p. 460. Edit. Hutch. Επι δε τουτοις, ηδη αυτος εκ των πυλων προφαινετο ο Κυρος εφ' αρματος, ορθην εχων την τιαραν, και χιτωνα πορφυρουν μεσολευκον, και περι τοις σκελεσιν αναξυριδας υσγινοβαφεις, και κανδυν ολοπορφυρον.

22. —was urgent.—Chald. ܩܕܝܫܐ. See Chap. ii. ver. 15. If the furnace was, as is hinted at the note on ver. 11, a sort of fiery pit, we may see the greater propriety of some of the verbs used in this and the next verse, that the men were taken up (the verb is in Aphel from קָם to ascend) and thrown down into the furnace; and hence how easily the eruption might kill the persons who came too near the pit. For a confirmation of this story, and also of Daniel's escape from the Lions, at Chap. vi. see 1 Mac. Chap. ii. ver. 59, 60.

The Hymn of the three children follows after the 23d verse in Vulg. Gr. Cod. Chis. or LXX. and some other Versions, and the verses are marked accordingly; but this is generally now agreed to be a spurious production of much later date; and the necessity or occasion of it seems clearly superseded by the general thanksgiving of the King's at the 28th verse, as well as that at the beginning of the next Chapter. Nor from a review of the hymn, however pious and well designed, can we discover the usual style of Daniel, or any resemblance to the other parts of his book. I should rather refer it to some of the Apocryphal Writers, if it must be accounted ancient,

- furnace heated exceedingly, the eruption of the fire slew those men that had taken up Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego : But these three men, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego were thrown down bound into the midst of the burning fiery furnace.
- 24 Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonished, and rose up very hastily, and thus spoke to his governors, Have we not cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? they answered thus unto the king, Certainly,
- 25 O king. He replied, Lo, I see four men loose walking in the midst of the fire, neither is there any stain upon them, and the form of the fourth is like a son of
- 26 God. Then Nebuchadnezzar approached to the mouth but perhaps it belongs to still later times. Archbishop Seeker notes thus, "Nobilius cites from Polychronius, that this Hymn was neither in the Heb. nor Syr. Bibles: Ephr. Syr. takes no notice of it; and therefore I apprehend it to have been added in that version which he used, since his time. Jerom says it was not in the Hebrew." Mons. D'Herbelot tells us, that in the King's Library, No. 410, is a book that contains traditional predictions of the Prophet Daniel, but which are full of falsehoods, and fabricated by the Mussulmen on the foundation of the real prophecies: Many other forgeries have been attributed to Daniel. See Prelim. Diss. The versions that have received this Canticle, supply a word or two at the next verse thus, "When Nebuchadnezzar heard them hymning he was astonished: So the word תורה astonished, seems used in the Targum for דרר Heb. trepidavit. But the words "heard them hymning" are not in Aquila.

25. —like a Son of God.—Some angelic appearance; see ver. 28, and Job i. 6. "So ὁ translated here, as Jerom observes. Sym. filiorum deorum. The centurion uses the phrase of Christ, Matt. xxvii. 54. Jerom says, that this angel was a type of Christ descending to the furnace of hell, in which the souls of just and unjust were shut up, to deliver those that were in bonds there. Perhaps that notion sprung from this text. Jacchiades also hath "an Angel of God." Seeker. But Munster understanding it of Christ, observes, that he thinks it no wonder that Nebuchadnezzar saw the Son of God, when he appeared to Paul who was persecuting his Disciples. See on Chap. iv. 13.

of the burning fiery furnace, and spoke thus, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, servants of the most High God, go forth, and come near. Whereupon Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego went forth from the midst of 27 the fire. When the Princes, the Senators, and the Magistrates, and the king's Governors, being gathered together had beheld these men, that the fire had not prevailed upon their bodies, neither was the hair of their

26. —of the Most High.—Keri and some MSS. read  $\eta\alpha\lambda\epsilon$  for  $\alpha\lambda\epsilon$ , which is more agreeable to the Talmudists, and is thought by the Masorets to be more emphatical. So at Chap. iv. 17, but no alteration is wanting. The King speaks in the singular number of God, whom he is again brought to acknowledge.

27. —the fire had not prevailed &c.—The several expressions here used are meant to shew, that not the least injury was received from the fire. The expressions rise in fine order, and the climax is beautiful. The fire not only had no prevailing power over their bodies, but neither was a hair of their head burnt, nor their flowing robes singed, nor even the smell of fire had passed on them. Compare this with Isai. xliii. 2. Strabo, lib. iv. intimates, that persons inspired by the goddess Feronia passed bare-footed over burning coals without injury. So Virg. in Æn. xi.

medium freti pietate per ignem
 Cultores multa premunt vestigia pruna.

There is a curious passage in the 21st Chapter of the Koran, which the Commentators seem to have improved with a variety of marvellous fictions, some of which, as well as the story itself, are probably borrowed from the history before us. Abraham is reproving his father's people for idolatry; and though they seem at first convinced from his arguments, they soon relapse to their former obstinacy, and order their teacher to be burnt. "They said, burn him, and avenge your gods; if ye do this, it will be well. And when Abraham was cast into the fire, we said, O fire, be thou cold, and a preservation unto Abraham. And they sought to lay a plot against him; but we caused them to be the sufferers." Sale's Kor. Vol. ii. p. 158.

At the end of this verse MS. Alex. adds, και προσεκνησεν ο βασιλευς ενωπιον αυτων τω θεω.

- headsinged, neither were their mantles changed, nor had 28 the smell of fire settled upon them; Nebuchadnezza, spoke thus, Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Mes hach, and Abed-nego, who hath sent his Angel, and delivered his servants, because they confided in him, and have reversed the king's word, and delivered up their 29 bodies, that they might not serve nor worship any god, but their own God. Therefore I set forth a decree, that whatsoever people, nation, or language, shall speak amiss concerning the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, shall be torn in pieces, and their houses be laid into a dunghill, because there is no other God that can deliver after this manner.
 30 Whereupon the king advanced Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, in the province of Babylon.

28. —their bodies.—"Confer Acts xv. 26,  $\psi\chi\alpha\varsigma$ ." Secker. Gr. and Ar. add  $\epsilon\iota\varsigma\ \pi\upsilon\rho$  "to the fire," which is a good addition, but not necessary, nor in MS. Pachom. By reversing the king's command must be meant disannulling the effect of it.

29. —speak amiss.—Keri and many MSS. read  $\omega\lambda\omicron$  instead of  $\eta\omega\lambda$ ; the word properly signifies "error." Gr. and Vulg. render it "blasphemy:" our Translators seem to have given it the true sense. Though the king was sensible that none of the Babylonian deities could deliver their worshippers, yet he dared not venture so far as to abolish the worship of them entirely.

30. —in the province of Babylon.—"The following addition is in the Gr. and Ar. at the end of this verse, "and he advanced them, and placed them over all the Jews that were in his kingdom."

In several Versions and some Editions, the three first verses of the next Chapter are subjoined to this; and they may not unfitly belong to it, as they are farther expressive of the king's sense of the Power and Goodness of the Almighty, whom he hath been just brought to acknowledge and revere; and which Darius confesses also after a like miracle, Chap. vi. 26. But as they are more usually ascribed to the next Chapter, and are a very proper Preface to the Decree that follows, I shall here close this with our present Translation.

CHAPTER IV.

- 1 NEBUCHADNEZZAR the king to all peoples, nations, and languages that dwell in all the earth, Peace be 2 multiplied unto you. The signs and the wonders which the high God hath wrought towards me it 3 pleaseth me to declare. How great are his signs, and his wonders how mighty ! his kingdom is an everlasting
-

This Chapter contains a Decree of King Nebuchadnezzar's, and the reasons of it ; the King had again dreamed, and was at a loss for the meaning of his dream. Daniel interprets it of the deprivation and recovery of his Royal Authority : After the completion the King acknowledges the truth of the events, and praises and extols the God of Heaven. There is a change of Persons in the Chapter, which may require some little attention to prevent ambiguity. The Decree and the History are delivered in the words of Nebuchadnezzar ; the Interpretation of the Dream in the words of Daniel, and the Completion or Conclusion again in the words of the King.

1. — Peace be multiplied unto you.—Chald. Your peace be multiplied : An usual form of addressing the subjects of this vast empire. See Chap. vi. 25. Cod. Chis. begins this Chapter with “ In the 18th year,” which words Theodotion has prefixed to the last : There are also many other variations, such as omissions of whole verses, and very large additions in this part of that Roman version, insomuch that it has often the appearance of a Paraphrase or Commentary.

3. How great are his signs &c.—The King's repeated experience had extorted from him the sublime confession contained in this verse ; the latter part of which is a fine display of the infinite power and dominion of the true God. I have in these verses, and many other instances, as nearly as I could, followed the order of the original words in my translation, in which there appears to me to be often kingdom, and his dominion from generation to generation.

- 4 I Nebuchadnezzar was at ease in my house, and 5 flourishing in my palace. I saw a dream, which affrighted me, and the thoughts upon my bed, and the 6 visions of my head disturbed me. Therefore I set forth a decree, to introduce before me all the wise men of Babylon, that they might make known unto 7 me the interpretation of the dream. Then came in the soothsayers, the magicians, the astrologers, and the diviners; and when I related the dream before them, the interpretation of it they could not make something so striking, and so expressive of the elegance and character of the Eastern style, that it ought to be preserved.

4. I Nebuchadnezzar was at ease.—The words רענן and שלח "at ease" and "flourishing," denote such a kind of tranquil and secure state as is the usual result of uninterrupted prosperity and abundance. The simplicity and energy of the few words contained in this verse are admirable. The king had finished all his wars, magnificently decorated his imperial city, and was now in the meridian of his highest enjoyments; or settled with the utmost tranquillity in his house, and with the most pompous and flourishing state in his palace; when, as at the next verse, he saw a dream, which affrighted him.

Anna soror, quæ me suspensam insomnia terrent?

Virg. Æn. iv. ver. 9.

6. —I set forth a decree.—Or, I issued a mandate. See Chap. iii. 29, and vi. 26.

7. Then came in.—Ch. עֲלִילִין. Keri and several MSS. consider one of the Lameds as redundant both here, and at verse 8 of Chap. v. But there is no occasion for any alteration if we derive the word from the Chaldee עָלַל, which signifies "to approach, or enter:." From the same root also may come the word לְהִנְעִלָה in the last verse, with both characteristics, of the tense and of the conjugation. It may not be amiss to observe here, that though the Nun is commonly a rejected letter in the Hebrew language, yet it meets with more favour among the Chaldeans, as the sound was probably less ungrateful to their ears.

- 8 known unto me. But at the last came in before me Daniel, whose name is Belteshazzar, according to the name of my god, and since the spirit of the holy God is in him, thus the dream I related before him.
- 9 O Belteshazzar, chief of the magicians, because I

8. But at the last.—וְעַד אֲחֵרֶיךָ. Many MSS. read אֲחֵרֶיךָ with Keri, dropping the Jod. Taylor points out two places, where the word is used for alius in this book. Vulg. renders the word “Collega,” and Secker thinks that Jerom found εταπος for ετερος in his Greek copy, as ai and ε are often confounded. Aqu. and Sym. seem to follow this reading; MS. Pachom. has ετερος; but Gr. Ar. and Syr. rather consider it as an adverb.

—since the Spirit of the holy God.—דִּי “since.” See Noldius. Gr. and Ar. have Θεου in this verse and the next, and the words are capable doubtless of a singular sense; see note on Chap. ii. 11, and many passages in Chap. iii. but Vulg. and Syr. render plurally. However it must be presumed, that this King had now the one true God in his mind.

9. —Belteshazzar, chief of the Magicians.—Belteshazzar according to the name of Bel or Baal; see on Chap. i. 7. That he was superior to, or placed as a governor over all the Magi or wise men, see on Chap. ii. 48, and also on Chap. i. 20.

Whether the religion of the Magi properly so called was received among the Babylonians is perhaps not altogether certain; but I have followed our Translators in adopting the word “Magicians,” as supposing it to comprehend all the enchanters or diviners of every sort. The Magians or worshippers of fire were first established in Persia, and their tenets have been fully explained by Dr. Hyde in his account of the religion of the ancient Persians. Dr. Prideaux likewise speaking of them says, that their sect was propagated only in Persia and India, and that they remain there even to this day. But it is not improbable that their principles were well known also, and partly received, in Chaldea and Babylon, especially as these nations were immersed in all sorts of superstitions; and the name of Magi seems to have belonged to the countries of the East in general. Their chief doctrine of the two principles, one the cause of all the good, and the other of all the evil in the world, or God and the Devil, is what Manes the heretic would have introduced from them into the know that the spirit of the holy God is in thee, and no secret is difficult to thee, declare the visions of my dream which I saw, even the interpretation thereof.

 10 Thus were the Visions of my head upon my bed: I was seeing, and behold a tree in the midst of the earth, 11 whose height was very great. The tree grew and was

Christian religion, it being the principal point which the Manichean Heresy endeavoured to impose on the world. See Prid. Con. B. iii. and again B. iv. and Pearson on the Creed, Art. i. p. 64.

—no secret is difficult to thee.—In Chald. the word ܕܢܝܫ signifies “to press hard,” and is only used in this place, and Esth. i. 8, but is often to be found in the Targum according to this sense. Gr. renders “impossible,” and it plainly means that no secret was perplexing to him, or above his skill.

—declare the visions, &c.—Gr. and Ar. read, “attend to the vision of my dream, which I saw, and declare the interpretation thereof.” This seems the more just sense, but whether there is a word dropped, or the original will allow of such an ellipsis, I cannot determine.

10. —in the midst of the earth.—Meant perhaps as a centre from which the extensive circuit of his empire was described. The Sovereigns of the world are often represented by large trees in the language of other countries as well as in the prophetic language of the Hebrews. Princes are also considered as the branches, the leaves as the soldiery, the fruits as the annual produce, and the shadow as the protection, which men may receive under government.

11. The tree grew.—Or, we may render, “the tree was great and strong;” and by its aspect must be understood its breadth or extent. The description of this tree, as well as the derivation of the word ܐܝܠܢܐ may agree with ܐܠܢܐ or the oak; the Hyperbole at this verse however great, is not unusual. Οὐρανομνηκῆς is a term well known, and Virgil in his description of Fame says,

Parva metu primo, mox sese attollit in auras,
 Ingrediturque solo et caput inter nubila condit.

Æn. iv.

Which is almost an exact copy of Homer's Erys or Discord in the fourth Iliad.

- strong, and the height of it reached to heaven, and the aspect of it to the end of the whole earth:
- 12 The foliage of it was beautiful, and the fruit of it plentiful, and food for all was on it; under its shade dwelt the beasts of the field, and in its branches lodged
- 13 the fowls of heaven, and of it was all flesh fed. I was seeing in the visions of my head upon my bed, and behold, a watcher even a holy one descending from hea-

Grotius takes notice of a dream somewhat similar to this, which Herodotus in his Polyhymnia relates to have happened to Xerxes, who thought himself crowned with the foliage of a laurel, and that the branches of the laurel were extended over the whole earth. But the finest description of this kind to be met with perhaps in any author is, what we read in the Prophet Ezekiel of the Cedar of Libanus, Chap. xxxi. 3, where the images allude to the King of Assyria in their retrospect, but at the same time look forward to the King of Egypt. I shall not transcribe the passage, but refer the reader to Bishop Newcome's Translation and Notes on the place and also to the tenth Prelection on the Hebrew Poetry. "Cedrus illa Libani recta, procerâ, florentissima, nubibus inserens cacumen, sed excisa tandem et derelicta, Regis Ægyptii gloriam et occasum quasi tabula depictum exhibens." In this same Prelection will be found many useful observations on the changes of images, tenses and persons, in the free style of the Scripture Parables and Allegories, which may be necessary to the right understanding of the present vision, as well as several others in this book.

13. — a watcher.—So the word עֵיר is rendered by most of the Versions from עוֹר evigilare; but some Commentators consider the Aijn as put for Tzere, according to Chaldee usage, and translate the word צִיר a messenger. The meaning seems to be that an Angel, described either by his character of watching, or as a divine legate (see Ps. ciii. 20, 21,) came down from Heaven; and the other term וְקָדִישׁ, "even a holy one," or "select one," though often given to the Angels in Scripture, is perhaps here used to denote, that he was one of a higher order, deputed for this purpose; possibly the Angel of the Covenant, who seems to have been meant at Chap. iii. 25. The Greek is εἰρ, from whence Iris according to Jerom. "The word אִיר as it is written in the Hebrew at Job xxxvi. 30, LXX translate in a

- 14 ven : He cried aloud, and thus he spoke, Hew down the tree and cut off its branches, shake off its foliage, and scatter its fruit ; let the beasts wander from under 15 it, and the fowls from its branches ; Nevertheless the stump of his roots leave in the ground, and with a band of iron and brass, with the tender grass of the field by more ancient Alexandrine copy, by τοξον a Bow ; Origen here reads Irin. Scholium Græc. apud Montfaucon docet τους ὁ legisse αγγελος προ ερηγορος." Seeker.

14. — Hew down.—The address may be considered as to any of those creatures animate or inanimate, that are to fulfil the Creator's Will ; or the expressions may mean the same as a denunciation in the future tense, "it shall be cut down, and its leaves shaken off, &c." Yet the stump shall remain, that is, either his proper shape and mind, or rather, his kingdom shall revert to him. See ver. 26.

15. — with the tender grass, &c.—The MSS. labour much at this part of the verse, but scarce help us. The Greek interpreter seems to have found ירַטְבֵּן "he shall lie down," instead of יַצְטַבֵּעַ "he shall be moistened : " I have given the best sense I can of the words as they now stand, but very much suspect the text is faulty. See on ver. 23. Grotius thinks a word is wanting here. Our Translation of 1599 renders, "and with a band of iron and brass bind it among the grass of the field." If there was sufficient authority, I should be inclined to drop the Daleth in the word בִּדְתָאֵס, and read, "with the wild ox of the field, even by the dew of Heaven shall he be moistened." See ver. 25 and 33. Or perhaps the Daleth is part of the particle דִּי, which is often little more than an expletive ; see Chap. v. ver. 2, 3, 13, &c. and twelve or thirteen MSS. read בִּדְתָאֵס or with דִּי at the end instead of אֵס, and the particle דִּי is frequently joined in the MSS. to its following Noun. Cod. Chis. renders, "that with the beasts of the earth on the mountains it may feed upon grass like the ox." This seems to correspond with the idea of his being bound with a chain as in a savage state. Bochart describes the Buffalo or wild Ox as a sullen, malevolent, spiteful animal, attacking the unwary traveller with great fierceness. See Taylor's Concor. on the word תִּאֵס. Though these fierce animals are for the most part found in Africa, yet Pliny observes, p. 142, that wild oxen were to be met with in ancient Scythia, and therefore probably on the Armenian mountains, not far the dew of heaven he shall also be moistened, and with the beasts shall be his portion in the grass of the earth :

 16 His heart shall be changed from the human, and the

---

from Babylonia. The females were probably less shy, and more easily tamed than the males. Mr. Bruce observes, that in Abyssinia the Buffalo is the most ferocious animal in that part of the country where he resides ; and yet that in Egypt it is the only one kept for giving milk ; and that they are governed by children of ten years old without any apprehension of danger, though apparently of the same species with the Ethiopian. Vol. v. p. 32. And Thevenot gives us a curious account of an use that was made of them on the Tigris, which he observed in his voyage from Mosul to Bagdad. I saw, says he, an experiment of the dexterity the people of the country have to cross the water without a bridge. I perceived forty or fifty She-buffles driven by a boy stark naked, who came to sell their milk ; these Buffles took the water, and swam in a square body ; the little boy stood upright upon the last, and stepping from one to another drove them on with a stick, and that with as much force and assurance as if he had been on dry land ; sometimes sitting down upon them.

16. His heart shall be changed.—Chald. let them change. See a like Enallage at Chap. v. 21, and other places. But one MS. omits the word יִשְׁנֶנָּה, and a good sense may be made without it : “ let his heart or mind be ex homine or not belonging to a man, but let the heart of a beast be infused into him.”

It must doubtless be hard to say what the real nature of this transformation was ; the Syriac seems to incline to a change of the mind, and probably it means no more than that his heart, or the nature of his constitution was made savage and brutish, either by a real madness, or by such a slovenly neglect of himself, or deprivation of the proper use of his speech and limbs, as might reduce him to a state like the beasts. “ There is a kind of madness called Lycanthropy, wherein men have the fury of wolves : see Univ. Hist. p. 964. Berosus calls it a languor.” Mr. Godwin. It is said to be a madness of the ferine sort ; and some think Nebuchadnezzar might fancy himself a bull, and eat and digest grass like a beast, while he continued in this distracted state. See the story of Lycaon in Ovid’s Metamorph. lib. i. v. 236.

Calmet has a Dissertation on this Metamorphose of Nebuchadnezzar, heart of a beast be given unto him, and seven times

17 shall revolve over him. By the decree of the watchers wherein he observes, that Lycanthropy is sometimes a natural disease proceeding from a melancholic blood and too great heat of the bowels; but in the present case he considers it as supernatural. The philosopher Heraclitus, according to Diog. Laert. fell into this sort of black melancholy; and thence became a misanthrope. And to a similar cause he ascribes the conduct of Bellerophon in Homer. Iliad vi.

---

—seven times.—Literally, “till seven times be changed upon him:” And this primary and exact sense of the words is agreeable to most of the Versions; but the Hebrew Cod. 240 reads שנים years; and the Syriac by translating “till the revolution of seven times” seems to mean the same. Nor does the space of seven months seem long enough for the growth of the hair and nails as at ver. 33. Cod. Chis. translates επτα ετη, and the Editor notes, that Origen derives ετος from עת het, unde Chald. ערן: S. Ephræm and Theodoret understand by it three years and a half; there is sometimes a difference between ετος and ενιαυτος, but he does not know that the former ever denotes a half year, semestre spatium. However whether we understand here a definite for an indefinite term, or whether we consider the times as so many days, months, or years, is not very material; but it must be of great importance to settle the exact meaning of this term in the future parts of this book, and therefore we cannot pay too much attention to it.

17. By the decree of the watchers &c.—Many MSS. with Keri drop the Vau in אנושא both in this verse and at ver. 16, and the Jod in עליה. See on Chap. iii. 26. For the derivation of פתגמא see on Chap. iii. 16. Vulg. and Gr. regarding the Mem in מאמר, not as a Preposition, but as a formative, render the word in the nominative case, but fifteen MSS. read ובמאמר: yet no alteration is wanting if the מ be a Preposition. The words פתגמא and שאלתא, according to the Arabic sense of the latter in Cast. Lex. seem to signify the same as the Hebrew דבר; as עירין and קדשין both refer to the Angels. But whether the word שאלתא has any allusion to the modes of enacting laws in the Babylonish empire or the countries of the East, or whether any particular revelation might be made to this highly favoured Prophet concerning the plan and counsels of Heaven with regard to the present or future condition of men, and intended to be intimated in this passage, are points on which, either from the distance

- is the matter, even according to the word of the holy ones is the business; to the intent that the living may know that the most High hath dominion in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and the
- 18 lowest of men can set over it. This dream I king Nebuchadnezzar saw, and do thou, O Belteshazzar, declare the interpretation; forasmuch as all the wise men of my kingdom are not able to make known to me the interpretation, yet thou art able, because the spirit of the holy God is in thee.
- 19 Then Daniel, whose name is Belteshazzar, was in a

of time, or the imperfect state of our knowledge, we can at best form but specious conjectures. However the decree of the watchers is at ver. 24 the decree of the most High, and it seems represented as the result of the Council of Heaven, which one more favoured Angel was commissioned to execute; see ver. 13.

“Some think that עִירִין and קְרִישִׁין mean God. Compare ver. 26. Theodoret puts εφ for the former, and Syriac expresses both in the singular. But changing one vowel it will be plural. God indeed is not called עִיר, but he is called שֹׁמֵר יִשְׂרָאֵל, Ps. cxxi. 4, which appears from the other part of the verse to denote “a watchman,” and that sense is fully confirmed by Ps. cxxvii. 1, and He certainly watches over all things. The plural עֲלֵינֵינוּ and other plurals are used of God. See Josh. xxiv. 19, and Prov. ix. 10. Some think by the decree of the watchers is intended, God’s fulfilling the Counsel of his Messengers, see Isai. xlv. 26, where counsel means purpose, that is, his own purpose declared by them. Others think the watchers a higher order of Angels, and the holy ones a lower, but this is without proof: Others the Angels acting with God, to make by the united host a more powerful impression on Nebuchadnezzar.’ Secker.

—and the lowest.—The Greek is very strong and beautiful, καὶ ἐξουθενωμα, “and the nothingness of men he can raise over it.” See 1 Sam. ii. 3.

18. —forasmuch as all the wise men &c.—This clause is entirely omitted in the Coptic Version, but retained as far as I find in all others.

state of astonishment for an hour, and his thoughts disturbed him: when the king spoke thus, Belteshazzar, let not the dream or the interpretation disturb thee: Belteshazzar replied, my Lord, the dream be to those that hate thee, and the interpretation of it to thine

19. —astonishment for an hour.—Many MSS. and some Editions read בִּשְׁעָה with Beth instead of Caph; but the latter seems preferable. It means a considerable space of time, though at ver. 33 the word probably signifies the same as רִנָּע a moment. Instead of “astonished,” Vulg. has, “silently recollected,” but Gr. ἀπηγεωθη.

—let not the dream or the interpretation disturb thee.—Not in Gr. or Ar. but in MS. A.

—the interpretation.—The word פִּשְׁרָא according to the Masora has א instead of the Affix ה; but there seems no necessity for an Affix in the former use of the word; nor for the omission of the Jod according to the same authority in the participle preceding and following the latter use of it, nor perhaps of the א in the word מֵרָאִי; though many MSS. agree with Keri in each of these instances.

—the dream be to those that hate thee.—So 1 Sam. xxv. 22, and Ps. cix. 20, &c. Thus Horace, B. iii. Ode 27,

Hostium uxores puerique cæcos
Sentiant motus orientis auri.

And Virgil, Geor. iii. 513,

Dii meliora piis, erroremque hostibus illum.

This figure is called Euphemismus. Such rhetorical embellishments are pointed at no individuals, have nothing in them of malice or ill-will, are used as marks of respect to the ruling powers, and may be presumed to be free from any imputation of a want of charity.

Having touched upon this subject, I would go on farther to observe, that there are many passages in the book of Psalms, especially a considerable part of the 109th just cited, that have given offence to well-meaning persons, as favouring too much of private resentment, and inconsistent with that charity which peculiarly marks the Christian dispensation. Many attempts have been made to remove this difficulty; and especially a very ingenious one by the late Mr. Peters, author of the Dissertation on the book of Job. See his Posthumous

- 20 enemies. The tree that thou sawest, which grew and was strong, and the height of it reached to heaven, and 21 the aspect of it over all the earth; Whose foliage was beautiful and the fruit of it plentiful, and food for all was on it; under it dwelt the beasts of the field, and on its branches the fowls of heaven had their habitation:
 22 Thou art it, O king, who art grown great and become strong, and thy greatness hath increased and reached unto heaven, and thy dominion to the end of the earth.
-

Discourses, Serm. xvii. But I know of none that more recommends itself to my mind, than considering the verbs in the future tense, I mean the future imperative; so that the passages may be looked upon as so many denunciations of the punishments, that God would inflict on the general or individual adversaries of his church and people; and doubtless He who has a right to inflict punishments has a right also to threaten them. Thus in the 109th Psalm, at the 6th verse, &c.

6. Charge him with malicious wickedness, and let his accuser stand at his right hand.

7. When he shall be judged he shall go forth convicted *, and his prayer † shall be for sin.

8. His days shall be few, and another shall take his office.

9. His children shall be fatherless, and his wife a widow.

10. His children shall be continual vagabonds and beg, and shall be driven out after their desolations. &c.

So LXX. Vul. and Ar. read this last clause by a small change in the verb וַנִּרְשֵׁן for וַנִּרְשֵׁן, which is probably right.

The Apostle St. Peter has applied some part of these denunciations to the traitor Judas, Acts i. 20, and we can scarcely err in applying the tenth verse to the Jews and their posterity, who concurred with Judas in putting to death the Prince of Peace.

22. —thy dominion to the end of the earth.—To the Caspian Sea, to the Euxine Sea, and to the Atlantic Ocean. Grotius. This may * Or, “depart guilty.” So Greek εξελθοι καταδικασμενος. Of the like import is the Latin expression Causa cadere, and our English one “to be cast.” See Psalm i. 5.

† Alluding to the Custom of Confession made by Criminals. See Josh. vii. 19, 20.

- 23 And whereas the king saw a watcher, even a holy one, descending from heaven, and saying, Hew down the tree and destroy it; nevertheless the stump of its roots leave in the ground, and with a band of iron and brass, with the tender grass of the field by the dew of heaven he shall also be moistened, and with the beasts of the field shall be his portion, until seven times
 24 revolve over him: This is the interpretation O king; and the decree of the most High is this, which cometh
 25 upon my Lord the King. Even thee will they drive out from men, and with the beasts of the field shall be thy dwelling; and they shall cause thee to relish grass like oxen, and from the dew of heaven shalt thou be moistened, and seven times shall revolve over thee, until thou knowest that the most High is the Ruler over the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever 26 he will. And whereas they spoke to leave the stump of the roots of the tree, thy kingdom shall be secure for thee, after that thou knowest the ruling powers are of well enough determine the empire from the West to the North East; but other boundaries should be fixed on for the South Eastern parts.

23. —with the tender grass of the field.—One MS. reads here נשטיה before the word בטרל; the like word occurs at verse 33. Whether this was borrowed thence, or whether it belongs to the preceding clause, is uncertain; but it gives a tolerable sense, “let his body be among the tender grass of the field;” and yet after all with only an ellipsis of the auxiliary verb יהי, the sense may be complete, “let him be among the tender grass.” Syriac concludes this verse with “Let his heart be changed from the human, &c.” as at verse 16, but this part of the repetition is omitted in the present original text and the other versions.

25.—they shall cause thee to relish, &c.—The pronouns in this verse are chiefly in the dative case, according to the Chaldee idiom.

26.—ruling powers.—The MSS. vary in the original word, but the greater number seems to read according to the Masoretic punctuation שלטותין, dominatores, or “the ruling powers:” the same word

- 27 heaven. Wherefore O king, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee, and break off thy transgressions by righteousness, and thine iniquities by shewing favour to the afflicted; perhaps it may be a lengthening of thy tranquillity.
- 28 The whole came upon the king Nebuchadnezzar.
- 29 At the end of twelve months as he was walking upon occurs Ezra iv. 20. The sense is by an usual metonymy, that power or dominion is from God. See Luke xv. 18.

27.—break off, &c.—Many of the versions render the verb פָּרַק according to its figurative or secondary sense, “to redeem,” and the word בְּצִדְקָה “by almsgiving ;” and thus the passage is alleged as favouring the doctrine of expiatory merits and the purchase of absolutions and pardons ; but as De Dieu and others have observed, sins are not said to be redeemed in Scripture, but persons ; and the plain sense of the words is, as I have rendered them : So that the counsel given to the King is, that he should do justly and love mercy, should practise those great duties of justice and charity towards mankind, in which he had been hitherto remarkably deficient ; and then as it follows, according to Vulg. Gr. and Ar. “Perhaps there shall be a prolongation to thy tranquillity, or peace ;” that is, his punishment might be postponed, and his felicity continued for a longer term ; not unlike the case of Hezekiah in Isai. Chap. xxxviii. or that of the Ninevites recorded by the Prophet Jonah. See also Jer. xviii. Some think that the King followed the advice of Daniel for a time, and that therefore his punishment did not follow till after twelve months.

28. The whole came upon king Nebuchadnezzar.—This kind of transformation made part of the popular doctrine of Providence : And the belief of it would work strongly on a diseased fancy racked by a consciousness of crimes. Daniel’s prediction of this disgrace shows it to have been the effect of divine vengeance, yet the Prophet’s account seems to show it was inflicted by common and natural means. Warburton’s Div. Leg. b. iii. § 3.

29. — as he was walking upon the palace.—One MS. has a Vau prefixed to the first word of this verse, וְלִקְצֵת. It is well known that the roofs of the buildings in the East were flat or plain, over which the inhabitants used to walk for pleasure. “The palace of

30 the palace of the kingdom of Babylon, The king spoke thus, Is not this the great Babylon which I have built Koscam, says Mr. Bruce, Vol. iv. p. 271, consists of a square tower of three stories, with a flat parapet roof or terrace, and battlements about it." But "the palace of Gondar and all its contiguous buildings are surrounded by a substantial stone wall thirty feet high, with battlements upon the outer wall, and a parapet roof between the outer and inner, by which you can go along the whole and look into the street: The four sides of this wall are above an English mile and half in length." Vol. iii. p. 380. In a situation like one of these was Nebuchadnezzar placed in the passage before us, in order to take a more full view of his city, and to enjoy the fresh air, according to Sir John Chardin, that is, to gratify his ease and pride; when he pronounced the following extravagant soliloquy.

30. —the great Babylon which I have built.—The circuit of this city is said to have been 360 stadia at least, or more than 45 miles, and Pliny extends it to 60 miles. Herodotus describes it as a square, each side of which was 120 stadia, or 480 in circumference; the height of its walls was 50 cubits according to the lowest reckoning, and the breadth of them such that six chariots a-breast, according to Diodorus, might drive along them. It was beautifully situated on the Euphrates, so that a branch of that river ran through the midst of it, over which was a bridge of a furlong in length, with a magnificent palace at each end.

That it is agreeable to Scripture language and the manner of the Hebrews to style that person the builder of a city, who restores it after a state of neglect to its pristine beauty, and improves and adorns it, may be learnt from 2 Chron. xi. 6, and from 2 Kings, xiv. 22, where cities are said to be built by the Kings that repaired, or enlarged and fortified them, although they had been constructed long before. Bochart thinks that Babylon was as much indebted to Nebuchadnezzar, as Rome was to Augustus Cæsar, who used to boast, as Suetonius relates in his life, that he received the city of brick, and left it of marble. See Phaleg. p. 264. Ammian. Marcell. says (xxiii. 20,) mænia quidem urbis a Semiramide constructa fuisse, arcem autem ab antiquissimo rege Belo. But Herodotus says, it was built gradually by several of the Assyrian Kings.

Whatever we read of the original construction of Babylon by Nimrod or Belus, or of its enlargement by Semiramis, yet it was either of

for a royal habitation by the power of my wealth, and 31 for the glory of my Majesty? As the word was yet in the king's mouth, there fell a voice from heaven, To thee it is spoken, O king Nebuchadnezzar; The king-32 dom is passed away from thee: And they shall drive thee from men, and with the beasts of the field shall be thy dwelling; they shall make thee relish grass like oxen, and seven times shall revolve over thee, until thou knowest that the most High hath dominion in the kingdom of men; and giveth it to whomsoever he will.
33 In the same hour the word was fulfilled upon Nebuchadnezzar, and he was driven from men, and did eat grass like oxen, and his body was moistened from the little account, or certainly not as one of the wonders of the world, till the walls with their hundred gates, the temple of Belus, the Monarch's most magnificent palace, the hanging gardens, and other grand works and improvements were added by the King who is here said to have built it. See Joseph. Ant. from Berosus, &c. l. x. c. 11. Some of these great works are said to have been finished by Nitocris, who probably completed the plan which Nebuchadnezzar had begun.

---

Nineveh had been the capital of the Assyrian empire, and was for a long time the most considerable city: According to Diodorus, l. ii. its circuit was reckoned near sixty English miles, or, as the Prophet Jonah describes it, of three days' journey, allowing twenty miles to a day. It is reported by some to have been much larger than Babylon, and to have had the preference given to it in several respects. Nor was it till after the destruction of this city that Babylon came into great repute. Now this happened in the time of Nabopollasar, the father of Nebuchadnezzar, who lived at Babylon, but was not peaceably established in the empire, nor was the seat of empire completely fixed herein, till the reign of his son.

Herodotus relates that the wealth and resources of the Babylonian state were so great, that it was equal to one-third part of all Asia; and that beside the tribute, if the other supplies for the great King were divided into twelve parts, according to the twelve months of the year, Babylon would supply four, and all Asia the other eight. See lib. i. p. 77. Ed. Gron.

dew of heaven, until his hair grew out like the plumage of eagles, and his nails like the claws of birds.

- 34 But at the end of the days I Nebuchadnezzar lifted up my eyes to heaven, when my understanding returned unto me, and blessed the most High, and praised and glorified him that liveth for ever, whose dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom 35 from generation to generation. And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing; and he doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth, and there is none that can check his hand, or say unto him, What doest

33. —eagles.—Gr. and Ar. have, Lions. Jackson tells us, this was the reading of the old Greek Vulg. and the old Latin one, was found in Tertullian's book de Pœnitentia, and in the old Armenian version; and he paraphrases the passage thus, "till his hair was grown long and shagged like the mane of a lion, and his nails like bird's claws." Chron. Vol. ii. p. 397. I do not find that the word נִשָּׂר is ever understood for a lion, nor do I know any word like it of that signification. But the sense is a good one. Λεοντος. MS. Pachom., perhaps שחור שחל for שחל black lion.

34.—lifted up my eyes.—The first indication of the recovery is noted by a reverse of the cause of the fall. At the expiration of the term, or at the end of seven years, Nebuchadnezzar lifted up his eyes unto Heaven, and his understanding or mind returned; he acknowledged against whom he had transgressed by his pride, and looked up unto him when he was restored. The following acts of praise are the suitable returns of a mind truly penitent, and deeply sensible of its faults and of its mercies.

35. —as nothing.—כִּלְהֵ. Many MSS. read with א instead of ה, according to the Chaldee form.

—that can check his hand.—Literally, who can strike on his hand: the versions render the expression somewhat differently, though all seem to have nearly the same meaning. Calvin observes that the word מַחֵ with ב following, signifies in the Syriac idiom, to strike or throw upon any part of the body something that may confine it; and hence in the Talmud the expression is frequently used for, "to check or hinder."

36 thou? At the same time my understanding returned unto me, also the glory of my kingdom, my honour, and my comeliness, returned unto me; for my governors, and my nobles made application to me, and I was established in my kingdom, and more
 37 abundant majesty was added unto me. Now therefore I Nebuchadnezzar praise, and extol, and glorify the

36. —my understanding.—מִנְדַּעִי Chald. αἱ φρενες μου. Gr. Sensus meus. Vulg. Mens mea. Syr. The original noun from יָדַע to know, according to Castell, relates to the mind and understanding, and also to the sense and perception; and perhaps the whole may be meant to be comprehended in it.

—also the glory of my kingdom, my honour, and my comeliness returned to me.—Or, “for the glory” in the dative case; but Noldius, p. 409, considers the word לִיקָר as the nominative case. This clause is not in Syriac nor in the Hebrew Cod. 240. The noun הָדָרִי seems by Gr. Ar. and perhaps Vulg. to be considered as a verb, and to be put by an apocope for הִדָּרִית; yet there seems no necessity for the presumed apocope, as the sense here given is a good one, and the latter part of the verse seems a confirmation of the clause perhaps in each article.

—more abundant majesty.—One MS. reads רְבוּת without an apocope of ת.

37. —praise and extol &c.—The number and variety of the words is meant to express the vehemence of the King’s zeal and affectionate devotion. He was to remain in his transformed state, till he knew that the ruling powers were of Heaven; and in this language of praise he discovers a perfect conviction of the authority and majesty of the supreme God, and, especially in the last clause of the verse, of his own baseness.

This great King probably lived only one year after his recovery; and it might be hoped that during that term he continued in the faith and worship of the true God. But however that was, his death happened about the 37th year of Jehoiachin’s captivity, after he had reigned as sole monarch 43 years. He is said to have been one of the greatest princes that had reigned in the East for many ages before him, and Josephus Ant. l. x. quotes Berosus and Megasthenes as both bearing testimony either to his valour, his wealth, or his magnificence. He was doubtless made use of as an instrument of Providence to inflict the divine vengeance on several nations, and many of the prophecies of Jeremiah and Ezekiel were fulfilled by him. It had been foretold, especially by the Prophet Ezekiel in the 26th and following Chapters, that he should reduce Tyre, and subdue Egypt: the former of which he besieged for thirteen years, and at length took it, after it was nearly depopulated, and the effects of the inhabitants transported to new Tyre, an island not far from the old city, which was afterwards reduced by Alexander. While he was employed in this siege, he executed the wrath of the Almighty on some of the nations in the neighbourhood, as on the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Edomites, and the Philistines: But in a particular manner the Jewish nation often felt the power of his arm under several of their Kings: their city Jerusalem was besieged not only in the reign of Jehoiakim, but again under his son Jehoiakin, and multitudes of persons were sent into captivity to Babylon; so numerous indeed, that scarce enough were left for necessary uses. 2 Kings xxiv. He came afterwards with all his army and pitched against it, and built forts against it, under the reign of Zedekiah, when the siege continued from the 10th month of the 9th year of that King until his 11th year (see 2 Kings xxv. and Jer. lii.) at which time there was a dreadful famine in the city; and the men of war thereof escaping in the night, the army of the Chaldees pursued them, took the King and put out his eyes at Riblah, and carried him to Babylon, where he was kept in prison till his death. Soon after this, in the 19th year of Nebuchadnezzar, about two years before the siege of Tyre, he sent his General Nebuzaradan against Jerusalem, who burnt the temple and palace, and almost the whole of the city; and at length carried off the small remains of the people into captivity, leaving only a few poor stragglers to till the ground. "Thus was Judah carried away captive out of his own land." Jer. lii. 27.

God of heaven, because all his works are truth, and his

---

After Nebuchadnezzar had destroyed Jerusalem, and reduced Tyre, he marched into Egypt, and taking advantage of some civil dissensions in that kingdom, he slew many of the inhabitants, carried away others as captives, enriched himself and his army with a large share of plunder, and made himself master of the country, so that he had now subdued the whole territory from the river of Egypt to the Euphrates. To which may be added, that he had taken the province of Elam from paths judgment, and those that walk in pride he is able to abase.

---

Astyages, agreeably to the prediction of Jeremiah, Chap. xlix. 34, and had placed his throne therein, or fixed his royal pavilion in it, as a token of supreme and sovereign authority. How he employed himself afterwards, in the peaceable part of his reign, in improving and adorning his great city has already been intimated. Most of the events both of war and peace contributed to gratify his lust and to swell his pride; till at length his madness having reached its utmost pitch, he was at once reduced to a level with the beasts of the earth; and thereby made to exhibit an useful example to future generations, of the malignant force of inveterate habits, of the dangerous effects of licentious tyranny, of the weakness of human nature, attended with all the greatest advantages of wealth and power, to govern and conduct itself properly, and of the sovereign controlling power of Providence in the highest and most important affairs of life. From the time of his transformation to his death we know but little of his history. Eusebius, Pr. Ev. ix. 40, gives the following fabulous account from Megasthenes, who collected it from Abydenus; that he was seized by a divine impulse and foretold the fate of the Babylonians; that they were to be laden with a most galling yoke at the coming of a Persian Mule, &c. and that after this prophecy παραχρημα ηφανιστο, statim disparuit, or immediately hereupon he was seen no more: Berosus relates that he fell into an απρωστια of which he died. Scaliger thought that by the former was meant, his being driven out from men, and reduced to a savage state.

Whatever was the fate of this great King, it will be more to our present purpose to observe, that he was succeeded by his son Ilarudam, according to Ptolemy, who is the Evil-merodach of Jeremiah, who married a discreet and prudent woman called Nitocris, from whom was born a son, whose history is the subject of the next Chapter. After the death of Evil-merodach, who reigned two years, Niricassolassar or Neriglissar, who seems to have been the chief of the conspirators against the last king, succeeded him: He had married a daughter of Nebuchadnezzar, and in the course of his reign made a great stand against the growing power of the Medes and Persians; but at length, after a reign of four years, was killed in a battle with them under the command of Cyrus. His son Laborosoarchod succeeded him, and having reigned only nine months, and not reaching a Thoth or beginning of an Egyptian year, he is not mentioned by Ptolemy : However he is said to have been quite the reverse to his father, and after he had exercised many acts of wanton cruelty (see Xen. Cyrop. l. iii. iv.) he was murdered by his own subjects, and succeeded by Nabonadius or Belshazzar.

CHAPTER V.

I BELSHAZZAR the king made a great feast for a thou-

---

Several uses may be made of these historical sketches in explaining various parts of this book : I mean not to advert to them at present, but shall only remind the reader, that as the captivity began in the year 605 before Christ, or one year before Nebuchadnezzar began his reign, so we shall be now advanced as far as the 51st year thereof, at the entrance upon the reign of Nabonadius.

THIS Chapter contains the History of Belshazzar's polluting the sacred Vessels taken from the Temple of God, of the hand-writing against the wall denouncing his consequent punishment, of the interpretation of that hand-writing by Daniel, of the Death of the King, and the Kingdom's being transferred to another People.

1. Belshazzar the king.—The Grandson of Nebuchadnezzar, the Labynetus of Herodotus, and the last monarch of the Babylonian kingdom. This last King is said by Ptolemy to have reigned 17 years, and we read of the third year of Belshazzar, Dan. viii. 1, but Laborosoarchod reigned only nine months, and was killed according to Berosus, παύς ὢν, whereas Belshazzar had wives and concubines. Certain it is from Jer. xxvii. 6, 7, that the kingdom would be continued to the son's son of Nebuchadnezzar, and from 2 Chron. xxxvi. 20, that to him and his sons the sovereignty would be continued until the kingdom of Persia ; and therefore one at least of his grandsons must have reigned in Babylon after Evil-merodach, who could not be the last King, or Belshazzar. And there is very little reason sand of his nobles, and drank wine before the thousand.

---

to doubt from a review of the circumstances recorded in Scripture and by the profane Historians, that the Belshazzar here meant was not the short-lived tyrant above-mentioned, whose cruelties are recounted by Xenophon, and who was the daughter's son; but rather the son's son of Nebuchadnezzar, or Nabonadius the son of Evil-merodach. And this is the opinion of Jerom from Berossus in Josephus, cont. Ap. i. 20. The arguments usually adduced to settle this difficulty may be seen at large in the Univ. Hist. Vol. iv. Note p. 422, &c. as also in Dr. Prideaux, Con. p. i. b. 2.

—great feast.—The primary sense of the original word is bread or food: and the wine was of the strong or turbid sort, either enriched with spices, or inspissated by being reduced in boiling. See Bishop Lowth's Note on Isai. i. 22. Bread and wine are mentioned as the whole ingredients of the feast: and this was probably an usual mode of describing an entertainment in the East, where the people have always been great eaters of bread. So at Gen. xliii. 16, we read that Joseph ordered his servants to slay plentifully and make preparations, because his brethren were to dine with him, and yet it is said at ver. 25 "they understood that they were to eat bread there," and at ver. 31 Joseph orders, "set on bread." And at Exod. ii. 20, Jethro the יִתְרוֹ priest or prince of Midian, sent his daughters to invite Moses "to eat bread." See also 1 Kings xiii. 15. Nor need we be at a loss to account for the place where a thousand lords might have been received and entertained, since Mr. Harmer has informed us in Vol. i. p. 191, that a kind of quadrangular court, within the first or outer gate of the palace, was made use of for this purpose; see the note also on Chap. iv. 29. The reader may likewise find several circumstances explained, relating to the following History of Belshazzar's fatal night, in the observation of Mr. Harmer just cited, to which I must refer him.

—and drank.—Gr. of Th. Ar. and Copt. connect this word with the next verse, thus, "And before the thousand was wine, and when Belshazzar had drunk, he commanded, &c." Vulg. and Cod. 240 render "when he was drunken, or merry with the wine;" and this was a kind of excess, which Curtius tells us, the People of Babylon were much addicted to: Babylonii maxime in vinum, et quæ ebrietatem sequuntur, effusi sunt, lib. v. c. 1. Herodotus, lib. i, and Xenophon Cyrop. lib. vii, both inform us, that the city of Babylon

- 2 Belshazzar commanded, whilst he was tasting the wine, to bring the vessels of gold and silver, which Nebuchadnezzar his father had carried away from the temple in Jerusalem, that in them might drink the king and his nobles, his wives and his concubines.
- 3 Then were brought the vessels of gold which they had carried away from the temple, the house of God in was taken in the night after a great festival, when the people were engaged in dancing and other voluptuous indulgences, according to the former, (p. 77, Ed. Gron.) and when they passed the whole night in drinking and banqueting or revelling, according to the latter, p. 404.

2. —tasting the wine.—So Gr. Ar. and Syr. And the expression seems to allude to that part of the libation which refers to tasting the wine at the time of a sacrifice, or a festal solemnity. Thus Virgil Æn. i. ver. 741, Primaque libato summo tenuis attigit ore.

The feast was perhaps an annual one in honour of some of the Babylonish deities, probably of Bel; which opinion seems countenanced by the words of Cod. Chis. εν ημερα εγκαινισμου των βασιλειων αυτου, “on the day of the dedications of his kingdoms;” and by ver. 4, where it is said, they praised the gods of gold, &c. This impious King, ανοσιος βασιλευς, as he is called by Xenophon (Cyrop. i. vii,) in making the libamina ordered the vessels of Jehovah to be introduced for these purposes, thus impiously prostituting the most sacred instruments of the temple of the true God to the idolatrous services of their pagan superstitions; or if the impiety was not so gross, at least the sacred vessels were applied to common uses, and to the purposes of intemperance and excess.

—Nebuchadnezzar his father.—Or rather his grandfather; as the word בן is applied not only to the immediate parent, but to the ancestor of two, three, or more generations. See Deut. xxvi. 5, 2 Sam. ix. 7, and the note on ver. 1.

3. —the house of God.—The term בית, “which is the house,” is not in the Versions, and is omitted in the preceding verse, but one MS. has it in that verse, and it is found in the margin of another. It has the appearance of a gloss.

Jerusalem, and the king and his nobles, his wives and 4 his concubines drank in them. As they were drinking the wine, they praised the gods of gold and silver, of 5 brass, iron, wood, and stone. In the same hour went forth fingers of a man's hand, which wrote over against the candlestick upon the plaister of the wall of the king's palace, and the king saw the part of the hand
 6 that was writing. Then the brightness of the king's

4. —they praised the gods of gold.—Here is a kind of competition, or the appearance of a triumph of the false gods over the true one, whom still Nebuchadnezzar had honoured and acknowledged, and prohibited by a solemn decree that any one should speak lightly of him. The competition appears much stronger in the Alexandrine and Coptic Versions, which add, “But the everlasting God they praised not.” Such a wanton and sacrilegious insult deserved and called for exemplary punishment.

5. In the same hour went forth.—Chald. נפקן. Several MSS. read נפקה with the Masora, and one or two נפקן, according to the Targum dialect; but no alteration seems wanting, as the noun following and the participle that afterward agrees with it are both plurals, with only the Jod dropped from the termination ין. If one of the twenty-four hours of the day is here intended, it is the first instance of such a division of time in Scripture, unless we except the use of the same word at Ch. iii. and iv. See Mr. Lowth on Chap. iii. 6, who also has some ingenious and useful remarks on various instances of the punishment of sacrilege in heathen story at this verse, and some curious ones concerning the deportations of the sacred vessels from Solomon's Temple in his note on ver. 2.

6. Then the comeliness.—Chald. נירוי. The word is of strong import, and means much more than μορφη “countenance,” such a clear and lively complexion, as is the result of high health and spirits. It is applied to the splendour of the image, at Chap. ii. 31. As to the next word שנוהי, “videtur legendum שנו ut iii. 26, et potuit ex די præced. oriri. Plenius dicitur עליוהי ver. 9, sed aliquando suffigitur pronomen subintellecta præpositione: ut Job. xv. 21. 2 Sam. xvii. 2.” Secker.

The expressions in this verse in a collected view contain such a description of Terror as is rarely to be met with, the dead change of countenance was changed, and his reflections disturbed him; so that the joints of his loins were loosed, and 7 his knees smote one against the other. The king called aloud to introduce the Magicians, the Chaldeans, and the Diviners; when the king spoke thus to the wise men of Babylon, Whatever person shall read this writing, and shew me the interpretation of it, shall be clothed with purple, with a chain of gold about his neck, and shall rank the third in the king-the countenance, the perturbation of the thoughts, the joints of the loins become relaxed, and the knees smiting hither and thither or against each other, are very strong indications of horror.—Horace has, Et corde et genibus tremit; and Virgil, tarda trementi genua labant; but these are far inferior to the picturesque description of Daniel.

7. — the Magicians &c.—For these names see on Chap. i. and ii. Belshazzar like Nebuchadnezzar calls in the assistance of magical arts; and this seems to have been the general resource in unexpected emergencies, not only among the Pagans or Gentiles, but even of some who were worshippers of the one true God. Such was the case of Saul at Endor, and to this the Israelites might probably be inclined, when they so often revolted in the wilderness.

—a chain.—Many MSS. read with Keri הַמַּנִּיחָא with Jod instead of Vau, and the like at ver. 16. This Maniacum is thus defined by Polybius, lib. ii. Χρυσουν ψελλιον ο φορουσι περι τας χειρας η τον τραχηλον οι Γαλαται. Torquis aut monile aureum quod circa manus et collum ferunt Galli. H. Michaelis thinks the Chaldee word originally oriental, and he is probably right, though Castell supposes it derived from the Greek.

—the third.—Chald. תְּלִיתִי, but תְּלִיתָא at ver. 16. The א was probably changed into ה and the ה into י. Grotius considers the King as the first, the son of the King as the second, and the interpreter of the vision to be the third: Or it may mean, that there should be a triumvirate appointed to govern the kingdom; as was the case in the beginning of the reign of Darius, and the interpreter should be one of these. Mr. Bruce speaks of a person, in Vol. iv. p. 32, who was suddenly advanced to a command, the third in the kingdom of Abyssinia for rank, power, and riches; and that at his public investiture he had a circle of gold put upon his head, was

- 8 dom. Then came in all the king's wise men, but they were unable to read the writing, so as to make known the interpretation to the king.
- 9 At this king Belshazzar was very much distressed, and the brightness of his countenance was changed
- 10 upon him, and his nobles were astonished. When the queen on account of the conversation of the king and his nobles came into the banquet-house, the queen spoke thus, O king, live for ever; let not thy thoughts disturb thee, nor the brightness of thy countenance be clothed with a white and blue mantle, and made the King's lieutenant-general in the provinces allotted to him: From whence it should seem that other governors of provinces were likewise of this same rank.
-

8. —the king's wise men.—Eleven or twelve MSS. read “the wise men of the King of Babel.” Some Commentators have thought the characters were abbreviated, as M. T. P. or that the letters standing alone without vowel-points, could not be easily understood in their detached form; or that the words were written in the Samaritan or old Hebrew letters; but as we have now translated, there is no occasion to have recourse to any such solutions.

10. —the queen.—Probably the Queen Mother, the Nitocris of Herodotus, as the King's wives were at the entertainment. Grotius from Josephus, thinks this lady to have been the wife of Nebuchadnezzar, and grandmother of the present King; but, as Dr. Prideaux has justly observed, the last King of Babylon, according to Herodotus, lib. i. was the son of the great queen Nitocris, and therefore must have been her son by Evil-merodach the son of Nebuchadnezzar.

—on account of the conversation.—Chald. “words or affairs.” Eng. Transl. of 1599, “the talke.” This part of the clause is omitted by the Greek interpreter, but supplied in MS. Pachom.

—thy thoughts.—Chald. רעיוןך. The Jod plural is dropped, but eleven MSS. retain it.—In the next word זיין the Masorettes consider the Jod before the Affix as redundant, and a great number of MSS. drop it; but as both forms seem agreeable to the plurals of the Chaldee nouns, no alteration is wanting.

- 11 changed. There is a man in thy kingdom, in whom is the spirit of the holy Gods, and in the days of thy father an enlightened understanding and wisdom, like the wisdom of the gods, was found in him, and the king Nebuchadnezzar thy father appointed him chief of the soothsayers, the magicians, the Chaldeans, and
- 12 the diviners, even thy father the king. Because an enlarged mind, and a discerning understanding, interpreting dreams, and discovering dark sentences, and solving intricate matters, were found in him, even in Daniel, to whom the king gave the name of Belteshazzar: now let Daniel be called, and he will shew the interpretation.

11. There is a man in thy kingdom.—Some persons are apt to wonder that Daniel was unknown to Belshazzar, which others have accounted for from the abandoned and indolent character of the Prince; but there is a farther reason which Mr. Harmer, Vol. ii. p. 166, has hinted from Sir John Chardin, viz. that he was mazouled or displaced at the death of a prior King; since in the East when the King dies, the physicians and astrologers are removed, the one for not having driven away death, the other for not having predicted it. But after all, I am not inclined to think that Daniel was totally unknown, by report at least, to this King; nor must we of necessity infer it from ver. 13, as I have now translated it. However he was probably of no esteem, or employed in no considerable department in the state in the early part of his reign, and therefore not readily recollected.

—an enlightened understanding.—Chald. light and understanding, an extraordinary illumination, as the next words shew. See a like Hendiadys at ver. 12. The last words of this verse “even thy father the King,” are not in Gr. Syr. or Ar.

12. —interpreting dreams.—Some grammatical inaccuracies appear to be in this verse, but perhaps if we were to read מַפְשָׁרָה, all might be right; however for this there is no authority from the MSS. yet the Greek considers the three words מַפְשָׁר, אַחֲוִית, and מִשְׁרָא all as participles and agreeing with the feminine noun שְׂכֵלָתָהּ: It seems also to have found an Affix after רוּחַ; “because an enlarged

- 13 Then Daniel was introduced before the king: when the king spoke thus unto Daniel; Thou art that Daniel of the captives of Judah, whom the king my 14 father brought out of Judea? I have even heard of thee, that the spirit of the gods is in thee, that an enlightened understanding and abundant wisdom are 15 found in thee. And now have been brought before me the wise men, the magicians, that they should read this writing, so as to make known to me the interpretation of it, but they were unable to shew the inter-
 16 pretation of the matter. But I have heard of thee, that thou canst fully interpret, and solve intricate matters: now if thou shalt be able to read the writing, and make known to me the interpretation, thou shalt be clothed with purple, with a chain of gold about thy 17 neck, and shalt rank third in the kingdom. Then Daniel answered thus before the king; thy gifts be with thyself, and thy large rewards give to another;

mind was in him, also a discerning understanding, interpreting, &c." One MS. reads אֲחִירִין with Jod plural; Ænigmas. κρυπτομενα.

13. —was introduced.—Many MSS. read הוּעַל, expressing the Vau, and the like at ver. 15.

14. —the gods.—Several MSS. and some Editions have "the holy gods." קִדְּשֵׁינָּה. De Rossi. Greek renders singularly both here and at ver. 11.

15. —so as.—I have rendered the Vau in this manner more than once, and that it will admit this sense, see Nold. p. 292.

16. —thou canst fully interpret.—Keri and several MSS. read תְּכַוֵּל for תּוֹכֵל, but there seems no need of an alteration, as תּוֹכֵל is the second person singular of the future Kal from יָכַל. The Chaldee is, "art able to interpret interpretations," an usual reduplication. One MS. reads הִלְכִּינָּה, "to interpret dreams." "Quæ explicanda sunt explicare, et nodos solvere." Houbigant.

17. —thy large rewards.—Most of the Versions render here as two words, נְבוֹ-בֵיתֶךָ, the wealth or glory of thy house; but there appears no confirmation of such division among the MSS. In the nevertheless I will read the writing to the king, and will make known to him the interpretation.

- 18 O thou king, the most high God gave a kingdom, and majesty, and glory, and honour, to Nebuchadnezzar thy father. And by reason of the majesty which he gave to him, all peoples, nations, and languages were trembling and affrighted at his presence : whom he would he killed, and whom he would he kept alive, and whom he would he exalted, and whom 20 he would he humbled. But when his heart was lifted up, and his spirit hardened to insolent conduct, he was

Targum the word נַבְּרִיזְנַן is found at Jer. xl. and the additions at the end of the word before us seem only the plural vowel Jod and the Nun changed into Thau. Grotius renders as at Chap. ii. ver. 6, "annual stipends." But see Cast. Lex. Commentators seem puzzled to account for Daniel's rejecting the King's presents here, and accepting them at ver. 29, but the intention at the present verse is only modestly to decline the honours, and to intimate that they could have no influence on his mind, which yet at the King's command afterwards he could not refuse.

18. — a kingdom, and majesty, &c.—Grotius explains these words thus, "a kingdom," that is, a widely extended empire, magnificence or majesty among his subjects, glory from his victories, and honour from the enlargement of the city, the building of its walls, temple, and palace.

19. — he kept alive.—Gr. Ar. and Vulg. "he smote" or wounded, as from מַחֵם, to strike ; but Syriac agrees with our Translation, and three MSS. read מַחֵי, which is the best sense.

20. — hardened to insolent conduct.—Chald. "to act proudly." The expressions here have a peculiar force in marking the haughty insolence of king Nebuchadnezzar. His authority in the last verse was raised to the highest pitch ; and on that account we find here that his heart was elated, and his spirit grown obdurate in proud and arrogant behaviour, instead of ascribing all his honours and advantages to the real Giver of them, the true God whom he had been brought to acknowledge ; and to the neglect of whom and of improvement from his ancestor's sufferings, Belshazzar's fate is by the Prophet so justly and judiciously attributed.

deposed from the throne of his kingdom, and his glory 21 was taken away from him. Also he was driven from the sons of men, and his heart was levelled with the beasts, and with the wild asses was his dwelling; he was made to relish grass like oxen, and his body was moistened with the dew of heaven, until he knew that the most high God hath dominion in the kingdom of 22 men, and whomsoever he will appointeth over it. Yet

21. —was levelled.—Greek seems to have found the like word here as at Chap. iv. 16, the word שׁוּי may be considered as the participle from שׁוּר. One MS. reads שׁוּי, and several in the marginal reading of Keri have שׁוּי, with an Affix; but the present text needs not to be altered. See on Chap. iv. 15.

—wild asses.—The preceding noun חִיּוֹת is generally applied to wild beasts, of which sort is the onager or wild ass. Bochart describes it as a beautiful creature, living in deserts, very timorous and shy, and scarce ever tamed. So Virgil, Georg. iii. l. 409.

Sæpe etiam cursu timidos agitabis onagros.

Job has given us the following beautiful description of this animal, Chap. xxxix. 5, &c.

Who hath sent out the wild ass free?
 And who hath released the bonds of the wild ass?
 For whose mansion I have laid down the waste,
 And his dwellings are the barren desert:
 He scorneth the multitude of the city,
 And regardeth not the cryings of the driver.
 The range of the mountains is his pasture;
 And he searcheth for every green shoot.

Syriac is fuller than the other Versions in repeating here the several instances of Nebuchadnezzar's degradation.

—relish grass.—The Greek is ἐψωμιζον, they made him to lick up grass; the Chaldee also has a reference to the taste; the allusion in both is to the manner in which the ox feeds, which through the assistance of the tongue appears to be very relishing.

—over it.—Chald. עֲלֶיהָ. But many MSS. agree with Keri in dropping the Jod in this word, and so at Chap. vi. 13, &c. The like

- thou his son, O Belshazzar, hast not humbled thine 23 heart, although thou knewest all this. But against the Lord of heaven hast thou exalted thyself, and the vessels of his house have they brought before thee;
 and thou and thy nobles, thy wives and thy concubines have drunk in them; and thou hast praised the gods of silver and gold, of brass, iron, wood, and stone, which neither see, nor hear, nor know; and the God in whose hand is thy breath, and all thy ways are his, hast thou not honoured.
- 24 Therefore from him was sent the palm of the hand, 25 and this writing marked. And this is the writing which was marked, MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHAR-26 SIN. This is the interpretation of the matter; MENE, is observable in קרמיך, "before thee," at ver. 23, but this word is commonly written with Vau or Jod before an Affix; see ver. 24.

22. —not humbled thine heart.—Greek and Arabic add, "before God."

23. —thy nobles.—Chald. רברבניך. Many MSS. with Keri drop the Jod in this noun, but according to Buxtorf it seems to belong to the plural termination. But see on Chap. ii. 29. The Leitotes at the end of this verse is a fine argument of the Prophet's skill and address. Greek seems to read instead of his, "him thou hast not honoured;" and Coptic omits the preceding clause, "All thy ways are his."

24. —the palm.—Chald. פסא, which some render by a joint, articulus; others by, vola manus: Hebrew 240 has כף; the proper sense of the word is a part or portion, and so I have translated פס at ver. 5, but as that part doubtless is meant which is used in writing or marking, I have here given פסא the sense of palm. Two MSS. omit the Jod in the word רשום "marked," and thus seem to consider it as a verb to be referred to the palm of the hand; but I see no reason why כתבא "writing" may not be of the masculine gender, as the א seems only the addition of the favourite Chaldee letter, and not a substitute for the feminine ה; the pronoun רנה has also an א instead of ה in many copies, and may be either masculine or feminine.

26. This is the interpretation—Mene.—Syriac connects this verse

God hath numbered thy kingdom, and finished it.
 27 TEKEL, Thou hast been weighed in balances, and art 28 found deficient. Peres, thy kingdom is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians.

with the preceding, rendering thus, "But as to the writing marked, Mene, &c. this is the interpretation." In the Arabic the three words are considered as participles, Mensuratum, Appensum, Divisum. Mene, מנע to number; that is, to fix bounds to a thing or the period of its continuance. In Isai. xxxviii. 5, an additional number of years is assigned to the fixed period of Hezekiah's life. See also Job xiv. 5. Houbigant rejects the repetition of this word, but it probably was meant to denote a complete numeration, "God hath numbered and finished it." The kingdom was entirely to terminate with this monarch, who must have been therefore the last King of Babylon.

27. Tekel.—Chald. תַּקֵּל, to weigh: corresponding to which is the Hebrew שָׁקֵל. So Job xxxi. 6, "Let him weigh me in the balances of justice." The shekel was a sort of standard weight of silver money reserved or kept as a model in the sanctuary, according to which the common ones were to be framed or valued. The Romans observed a similar practice, and the emperor Justinian ordered the standard weights and measures to be laid up in the churches. The meaning here is, that the Almighty hath weighed, or made a due estimate of, the conduct of Belshazzar, according to the just and impartial measures of his providence, and hath found him light or deficient, a man of no account, unworthy of a kingdom, and a fit object of his vengeance. The scales or balances must remind the classical reader of a like allusion in the 22nd Iliad of Homer, and the 12th Æneid of Virgil, previous to the death of Hector and of Turnus. And so Milton in the war of the Angels in his 6th Book of Paradise Lost,

Long time in even scale
 The battle hung.

The Goddess or Justice of Astræa is said to have been the daughter of Jupiter, and is usually described as holding in her hand a balance: Mohammed seems to have adopted this idea in the 57th Chapter of his Koran, where he observes, that when God sent down the Scriptures, he sent the balance also, that men might observe justice.

28. Peres.—From פָּרַס to divide. Hence Peres, the Persian.

Houbigant thinks Upharsin at ver. 25 should be Peres, but if the latter be a participle passive, the sense will be just the same; the plural active being often in Chaldee used for the participle passive. The kingdom was torn away from the unworthy possessor of it, or, as it was distributed among two powers, it is therefore properly said to have been divided: The Mede Darius enjoying it first, and afterward the Persian Cyrus as a part of the new empire.

—the Medes and Persians.—The kingdom of the Medes seems to have been but of short duration: It probably had its name of Media from מדי Madi, the third son of Japhet, but its first establishment into a kingdom is dated about 150 years before the reign of Cyrus. Sir Isaac Newton reckons up only five Kings. Herodotus (lib. i.) tells us, the first was Deioces, a man of great prudence, and who reigned a long time. Phraortes his son succeeded him, whom Calmet judges to have been the Arphaxad of the book of Judith, but Prideaux is of a different opinion: see Conn. p. i. b. 1. This monarch was followed by Cyaxares, a Prince who widely extended the empire over Asia, and left it to his son Astyages, the father, according to Xenophon, of Cyaxares the second, or Darius Medus. Pliny in his Nat. Hist. p. 100, settles the geography of Media in this manner; It had the Caspians and the Parthians on the East, the Lower Assyria, called Sitacene, Susiana and Persis on the South, on the West Adiabene or the middle parts of Assyria, i. e. Diarbek, and Armenia on the North. Virgil in his 2nd Georg. calls it, ditissima terra, and celebrates it for the production of the Malum Medicum or the Citron: Polybius also, lib. v. takes notice of its great abundance in corn and cattle, and of a multitude of cities and towns in the plains amidst the mountains which divide it from East to West. Its capital Ecbatane, was a very spacious and opulent city, which the Persian Kings used for a summer-residence; and is said to have been fifteen miles in circumference, to have had walls seventy cubits high, and fifty broad. Judith, Chap. i. 2. This place is also much noticed in the book of Tobit, as where his son Tobias was married, to which he retired from Nineveh, and ended his days in it.

Persia whose capital is Persepolis, situated on the South of Media, gives name to the gulf below, which receives the rivers Euphrates and Tigris. It consisted of three parts, Persis, Elymais, whence the Elamites of Scripture, and Susiana, unless the latter should be considered as a distinct region, having had Susa for its capital: But Susiana was added to Persia by Cyaxares the first. This whole tract together with Media and Assyria or Babylon, as also Lydia and other countries,

29 Then spoke Belshazzar, and they clothed Daniel with purple, with a chain of gold about his neck, and proclaimed over him, that he should rank third in the 30 kingdom. In that same night was Belshazzar the were all united under Cyrus, who was the first monarch of this Persian empire, as Darius Codomannus was the fourteenth and last. Enough has been, or will be, observed concerning the Persians in other parts of these Notes, to prevent any occasion of farther enlargement in this place.

---

29. —and they clothed Daniel.—The King was so struck with his superior skill, and conceived himself so bound by the promise he had made before his nobles, that he ordered the Prophet to be rewarded immediately with the honours he had promised him, which he was forced to accept, and which probably prepared him for a more easy reception by the succeeding monarch. “App. de bell. Rom. p. 66. Ed. Steph. says, The Roman Senate gave Phamæas the Carthaginian a purple robe with ornaments of gold.” Secker.

Nor let it be a matter of wonder that Daniel is said to be clothed as it were immediately; for these habits were always at hand for the Eastern Monarchs to reward their friends or favourites with; and Mr. Harmer tells us from Sir John Chardin, that the Kings of Persia have great wardrobes, where there are always many hundreds of habits ready, designed for presents, and sorted. Obs. Vol. ii. p. 87. It seems likewise that on some occasions the great men of the East were accustomed to carry with them on their journeys a variety of habits and vestments, in order to distribute them as presents to those whom they wished to honour and reward. And this will account for the changes of garments which Naaman the Syrian had with him, when he returned from the Prophet Elisha, some of which were given to his perfidious servant. 2 Kings v.

30. In that same night was Belshazzar, the king of the Chaldeans slain.—And from the next verse it appears that the Babylonian or Chaldean kingdom expired with him.

The punishment of Nebuchadnezzar, the death of Belshazzar, and the expiration of the kingdom, may serve to remind us of that fine passage of the wise son of Sirach, which I shall transcribe from the 10th Chapter of the book of Ecclesiasticus. “The beginning of pride is when one departeth from God, and his heart is turned away from his Maker. For pride is the beginning of sin, and he that hath it shall pour out abomination. The Lord hath cast down the thrones of proud princes, and set up the meek in their stead. The Lord hath plucked up the roots of the proud nations, and planted the lowly in their place. The Lord overthrew countries of the heathen, and hath made their memorial to cease from the earth. Pride was not made for man, nor furious anger for them that are born of a woman."

31 king of the Chaldeans slain: And Darius the Mede

---

The fall of Babylon was predicted by Isaiah and Habakuk; and the circumstances of its fall were minutely foretold by the prophet Jeremiah, Chap. li. the 30th and following verses: By comparing this passage with the accounts given by Herodotus, lib. 1, Xenophon in his Cyrop. and the subsequent Historians, we shall probably be inclined to think it affords as fine an illustration of one sort of the oratorical figure, προ ομμάτων ποιειν, as was ever delineated. For the method practised by Cyrus to surprise the city by draining that part of the Euphrates which ran through it, together with many other curious particulars relating to Babylon, see Bishop Lowth on Isai. xiii. 19. Cyrus having entered the city on a festal night, advanced with his army towards the palace, and having by the assistance of Gadatas and Gobryas, as we learn from Xenophon, killed the guards, they entered the room where the King was, and slew him, and those that were with him. It seems not improbable likewise, according to Dr. Blayney's ingenious suggestion on Jeremiah, li. 32, that they burned the houses of the city, or at least the advanced buildings in their progress, and forced the citizens to quit them in the greatest consternation; for they came upon them with such surprise, that, according to Herodotus, "they had passed through the gates, which were left open in this riotous night, and had taken the extreme parts of the city, before those who inhabited the middle parts knew of the capture," lib. i. p. 77. Travellers in general agree that there are no exact traces to be found of this once famous city; and though Geographers have placed it about fifteen leagues from Bagdad, yet what some have thought to be its ruins, others have conceived to have been the remains of buildings erected for a quite different purpose. See Bishop Newton's 10th Dis. 283—286. Prid. Con. p. i. b. 2. Univ. Hist. Octavo, Vol. iv.

31. And Darius the Mede accepted.—So Syr. and Ar. Five MSS.

accepted the kingdom, being about the age of sixty and two years.

---

and Heb. 240 make this verse to begin the next Chapter, and then it may be thus rendered—"When Darius the Mede accepted the kingdom, being about the age of sixty-two years, It pleased, &c."

Josephus records this history in the following manner, Ant. x. 11, 4, "Darius, who with the assistance of his kinsman Cyrus destroyed the Babylonian empire, was at that time in his sixty-second year, was the son of Astyages, and was called by another name among the Greeks: he carried the prophet Daniel with him into Media, and made him one of his three Satraps, whom he appointed to preside over the whole kingdom." The word דָּרְיוֹשׁ Darius, seems of Persian origin; and though some have thought the termination to resemble the Greek Δαριος, yet Michaelis has obviated this objection, by shewing that Strabo has used the word Dariekas or Dariebés, for this word Darieves, and has considered it a barbarous (or Persic) word borrowed by the Greeks. See his Supplem. p. 464.

Jerom notes that for Darius LXX have Artaxerxes, which Seeker says seems to deserve a good deal of notice, though little is taken of it. But Josephus calls the son of Xerxes by the name of Cyrus, whom he observes the Grecians call Artaxerxes; Ant. lib. xi. c. 6, so that the latter seems to have been a Grecian term corresponding to what was understood by Cyrus, or a general name given by the Greeks to the Kings of Persia.

CHAPTER VI.

1 IT pleased Darius to appoint over the kingdom a

---

THIS Chapter contains the History of Daniel's Preferment under Darius, of the Envy which it excited in the principal Officers of the State, and their Conspiracy against him on that account. By their means he is cast into a Den of Lions, but miraculously preserved from Injury; and the punishment is retorted upon his accusers, who are torn to pieces, and the King is brought to the acknowledgment and praise of the true God.

1. It pleased Darius.—That is, Cyaxares, whose father is called Assuerus, in the book of Tobit, Chap. xiv. 15, as he is also by Daniel, Chap. ix. 1, meaning in both places Astyages, or the King of Media that concurred with the Assyrian monarch in the destruction of Nineveh. See Prelim. Dis. &c. Herodotus and Xenophon make mention of an ancient gold coin called Δαρεικος or Daric, as is presumed by many writers, from this King; from the first Darius, according to Suidas, or one prior to Hystaspes. This coin seems to have been called by the like name after the captivity in Ezra ii. 69, and 1 Chron. xxix. 7. Sir Isaac Newton says he had seen one of them, and that it was stamped on one side with the effigies of an archer crowned with a spiked crown, with a bow in his left, and an arrow in his right hand, and clothed with a long robe, that it weighed two attic drams, and was of the value of the attic stater. Chron. of Ant. Kingd. p. 319.

The war with the Chaldeans, that ended in the destruction of Babylon, seems to have commenced originally on the part of the Medes, over whom the Babylonian queen Nitocris, according to Herodotus, had kept a jealous and watchful eye. Jeremiah, Chap. li. 11, 28, mentions the Kings of the Medes only as raised up against Babylon, and so Isa. Chap. xiii. 17, but elsewhere he joins the Elamites with them; and Thucydides, as has been before observed, generally calls the Persians Medes only. However, when Babylon was taken and subdued by the united powers of Media and Persia, Cyrus was pro-hundred and twenty princes, who should be over the bably induced to set over it this King of the Medes, in order to make the union of the two nations more easy, and to prepare matters better for the full establishment of the Persian empire. Cyaxares, as is generally agreed, reigned not more than two years; and during that term being only a sort of Vice-roy, or at least dependent upon Cyrus, the whole period of nine years is ascribed by Ptolemy to Cyrus, and no notice taken of Darius at all. See Prelim. Dis. Some assert that Xenophon assigns only seven years for the reign of Cyrus over the whole empire, from what others think the mistake of a passage in the eighth book of the Cyrop. The passage is this, “μαλα δη πρεσβυτης ων ο Κυρος αφικνεται εις Περσας το εβδομον επι της αυτου αρχης.” Cyrus being now far advanced in years visits the Persians (according to Usher, Prideaux and Mr. Lowth) in the seventh year of his reign or empire; but Mr. Hutchinson has justly observed that the expression only means the seventh time since the commencement of his empire. And yet even in this sense, the argument will amount to the same, if we recollect that Cyrus, according to Xenophon, went to Babylon and spent a considerable time there once in every year, passing the seven winter months of the year in Babylon, three in the spring at Susa, and the two summer months at Ecbatane; so that the seventh time of his going thither after he was possessed of the empire must be the same as the seventh year of his reign.

---

The same Author, at p. 487, informs us, that after the return of Cyrus from the taking of Babylon he left Cyaxares the Mede, who had accompanied him to Media, in possession of the Babylonian government, and appointed him a house and a royal palace for his reception there, which he was to consider as his own, and retire to ως οικεια, as his own domestic property; that Cyaxares in consequence of this sent him his daughter, whom Cyrus, after he had settled in Persia, with the approbation of his parents married, so that Darius became his father in law as well as his uncle, and the whole kingdom of Media, as he had no son, was given in dower with her; and after the marriage and the settlement of his affairs in Persia, which events neither Cambyses nor Cyaxares seems to have long survived, Cyrus departed with her to Babylon.

Now though several of these circumstances, or at least the time fixed for them, may be considered as fictions, yet from what has been already advanced in the Prelim. Dis. we must agree with those writers

- 2 whole kingdom : And over these, three presidents, of which Daniel was one, that the princes might give an account to them, and the king have no damage.
-

who admit the ground-plot or general plan of the Cyrop. to be founded on real facts. Nor does it seem improbable that Cyrus married the daughter of Cyaxares, and that the other embellishments were added by Xenophon : Unless perhaps, and which is as material to our present purpose, the kingdom of Media by a familiar prosopopœia be all that is meant by the daughter, in allusion to the oriental manner, which this elegant Greek must have been well acquainted with. Thus the daughter of Zion and of Jerusalem, Isa. xxxvii. 22, means the inhabitants thereof, and the daughters of cities are the circumjacent towns and villages ; and the reversion of the kingdom of Media, which was perhaps the dearest pledge of Cyaxares' regard, by a fair analogy, might be the whole that was here meant to be given up, as a compensation for the immediate possession of the territory of Babylon. But I offer this as a mere conjecture, which may tend to remove an objection which some have conceived against the Cyrop. from this marriage of Cyrus : Yet I need not be solicitous for the truth of this event, as it is sufficient for my chief purpose, that there was such a person as Cyaxares, born among the Medes, and who presided over Babylon.

This Darius seems to have followed the same plan of Government over the provinces, which Xenophon tells us Cyrus did over the conquered nations, Εδοκει αυτω σατραπας ηδη πεμπειν επι τα κατεστραμμενα εθνη. Cyr. l. viii, see also Esth. i. 1, and Archbishop Usher thinks the plan was first instituted by Cyrus, and pursued by Darius at his suggestion. Annals, p. 82. After the conquest of Egypt by Cambyses, and of Thrace and India by Darius Hystaspes, seven other provinces were added, so that in the Persian empire were 127 provinces at the time of Esther.

2.—presidents.—Chald. סַרְכִּין. Th. τακτικούς. Aq. συνεκτικούς. Targum uses the word for the Heb. שוטרים Officers or Curators. It seems to have been the same sort of office with that conferred on Joseph by Pharaoh, Gen. xli. 41. "See I have set thee over all the land of Egypt." Grotius thinks these Eparchs were like the Præfecti Prætorio in the latter part of the Roman empire.

—no damage.—Chald. "might not suffer hurt or loss." The

- 3 Now this Daniel was superior to the presidents and princes, because a more enlarged mind was in him, and the king designed to appoint him over the whole 4 realm. Whereupon the presidents and princes were seeking to find an action against Daniel on the side of the kingdom; but they were unable to find any action or fault, inasmuch as he was faithful, so that no error 5 or fault could be found in him. Therefore these men said, We shall find no action against this Daniel, unless we find it against him concerning the law of 6 his God. Then these presidents and princes came in a concourse to the king, and spoke thus unto him;

Versions, "might have no trouble." It probably means that the King might be subject to no sort of inconvenience.

3. —the King designed.—Perhaps the verb עָשָׂה in this place is little more than an expletive, like the verb δοκω oftentimes in the New Testament. Thus Gr. and Ar. render, "and the King appointed him." The office in which he was placed seems to have been that of prime Minister, like the grand Visier among the Turks.

4. —an action.—I take the word עֲלֵה to be a kind of forensic term, of the like import with our English word action, or the Greek αῖτια: see John xix. 4, and the crime attempted to be fixed upon Daniel seems to have been a sort of treason, an attack on the constitution of the kingdom, or, as the Romans intimate, "crimen læsæ Majestatis."

—on the side of the kingdom.—Gr. omits this. But MS. Pachom. has ἐκ τῆς βασιλείας, Αλλ. in Montf. ἐκ πλαγιῶν βασιλείας, and Syr. "in the administration of the kingdom."

5. —concerning the law. Chald. "in the law;" in his religious rites.

6. —came in a concourse.—Gr. παρεστησαν, and Syr. קָרְבוּ. Merely "they came." Vulg. "surripuerunt," intimating a kind of stealth and subtlety. But the true import of the verb עָרְבָה seems to be, "they tumultuously met;" see the margin of our English translation. The Princes came in a concourse, and together assailed the King with their proposal, they forced in. The word is read with Jod before Schin

- 7 King Darius, live for ever. All the presidents of the kingdom, the senators and the princes, the governors and the magistrates have consulted together to establish a royal statute, so as to confirm the obligation, that whosoever shall ask a request of any god or man for thirty days, but of thee, O king, shall be thrown 8 into the den of lions. Now, O king, establish the obligation, and sign the writing, that it be not after the full Hebrew form by a great number of MSS. here, and at verses 11, and 15.

7. —a royal statute.—Chald. “a statute of the King.” So most of the Versions, except Syr. which reads the passage thus, “to enter into a league for the honour of the King, and to bind themselves with a bond.”

“Jupiter tells Diana (Callim. in Dian. ver. 34, 35,) that he gives her thirty cities, τα μη θεον αλλον αξειν εισεται αλλα μονην σε. Holofernes in Judith iii. 8, insists that all nations should worship Nabuchodonosor only. Semiramis ανθρωποισι οκοσοι Συριαν οικεουσι νομον εποιεστο, εωυτην μεν οκως θεον ιλασκεθαι: θεων δε των αλλων και αυτης Ηρης αλογεειν. Lucian de Dea Syra.” Secker. The design of these ministers was doubtless to ensnare Daniel, and in order to do this more readily, they would suggest to Darius, that however he might have been represented as worn out with age and infirmities, and as a vassal to Cyrus, yet he was the sole and universal Lord of the empire, would cajole him with the offer of divine honours, so as partly by flattery, and partly by terror, to force his consent. It was a well known practice among the Pagans to deify their heroes in their panegyrics: Horace and Virgil did this to Augustus, and Pliny to Trajan; and the famous Pollio of Virgil in the intention of the Poet was perhaps nothing more than an application to his hero of what he had collected from the Jewish and other predictions, concerning the birth and life of Christ at that time generally expected, and the blessings and benefits that were thence to accrue to the world.

—into the den.—The word דן signifies a pit or lake; and it was probably a place of very great depth, where the Lions were kept, and from which they could not climb up to escape. For the names of the officers in this verse, see on Chap. iii.

- changed, according to the law of the Medes and 9 Persians which faileth not. Wherefore king Darius signed the writing and the obligation.
 10 Now Daniel, when he knew that the writing was signed, went up into his house, where his windows were opened in his upper chamber towards Jerusalem; and at three set times in the day he kneeled upon his knees, and prayed and offered up praises before his 11 God, as he had done aforetime. Then these men

8. —which faileth not.—Chald. “passeth not away;” i. e. is constantly in force, and never fails. Some think that nothing more is meant than written laws, whereas matters were generally determined by the voice or law of the Judge.

10. —was signed.—Many MSS. drop the Jod in the participle, and read םשך as a verb. See on Chap. v. 24.

—in his upper chamber.—Gr. εν τοις ὑπερωοις. Wetstein in his Gr. Test. Acts i. 13, has a note on this term, where he observes from some of the Jewish Rabbins, that the houses of the Jews were generally divided into two principal parts, and that the Υπερωον was often inhabited by a sort of lodgers, or persons different from the proper occupiers of the house: But this could not be the case with persons of any distinction or eminence, as Daniel undoubtedly must have been; with such the upper chambers were reserved for especial purposes, as Oratories, or any other solemn and religious uses. See Mark xiv. 15. Shaw thinks these ὑπερωα were buildings detached from the house, often raised a story higher than it, to which there was a private stair-case. See his Travels, p. 280. In these upper rooms the light was admitted through windows, which in the lower parts was received through the doors; and these windows of Daniel were opened toward the holy city, whither the Jews had long wished and prayed for their return. See 1 Kings viii. 43. Hither he resorted three times a day; as Grotius thinks, at the hours of prayer which the later Jews acknowledged, and which were the third, the sixth, and the ninth, or rather with the Psalmist, in the evening, the morning, and at noon-tide, according to his accustomed manner: Thus following the dictates of his conscience, nor deterred therefrom by the certain apprehension of instant death, but, like Moses, preferring his duty to all the treasures and honours of the land.

came in a concourse, and found Daniel making 12 request and supplication before his God. Therefore they came near, and spoke before the king concerning the royal obligation: Hast thou not signed an obligation, that whatsoever person shall make a request of any God or man for thirty days, but of thee, O king, shall be thrown into the den of lions? The king answered thus, the matter is ratified according to the law of 13 the Medes and Persians, which faileth not. They then replied before the king, Daniel, who is of the captives of Judah, hath paid no regard to thee, O king, nor to the obligation which thou hast signed, but at 14 three set times in the day prefers his petition. Upon this the king when he had heard the report was sadly distressed, and set his heart upon Daniel to deliver him,

12. —signed an obligation.—Here the two clauses of ver. 8 and 9, are expressed in one and by a word borrowed from each. Probably to make the law irrevocable the King's signature was necessary. Moreover not only in the instance before us, but we learn from passages in the book of Esther, and from an account in Diod. Sic. that what the full sanction of the law had once enacted, the King himself could not alter; nor when Darius had ordered Charidemus for execution, though he accused himself of a grievous fault, was it in his power to reverse the sentence. Ου γαρ ην δυνατον το γεγονος δια της βασιλικης εξουσιας αγεννητον κατασκευασαι. Diod. l. 17.

13. —Daniel—hath paid no regard.—The expletive ו is before Daniel; For the word טעם, regard, see on Chap. iii. 12, “prefers his petition,” an usual reduplication: petit petitionem.

14. —was sadly distressed.—The original expression is thus literally translated by Walton, “multum malum fuit super eo.” The verb באש in Hebrew signifies to be rotten or stinking, and hence in Chaldee ביש or באיש is used for such great distress, as may prey upon the mind, and occasion rottenness in the bones; he was very much troubled and sorely displeased with himself, so as to set his heart to deliver him. The word בל heart is by a metathesis the Heb. לב; and the expression here used by the Greek Interpreter is very strong, ηγωνισατο, his anxiety to save him was so great as to

- and till the going down of the Sun he exerted himself
 15 to deliver him. But at the same time these men assembled in a concourse about the king, and spoke unto the king, Know, O king, that the law of the Medes and Persians is, that every obligation and statute which the 16 king establisheth is not to be changed. Wherefore the king commanded, and they brought Daniel, and threw him into the den of lions; when the king said thus unto Daniel, thy God, whom thou servest continually, 17 may he deliver thee. Also a stone was brought and laid upon the mouth of the den, and the king sealed it throw him in an agony. See a like form of expression but with an opposite signification at ver. 23, "He was very happy or much pleased."

— till the going down of the Sun.—Chald. ער מעלי, which Houbigant understands, "till the Sun arose;" but it rather seems to mean "till the goings in or settings of the Sun," from עָלָל ingressus est, ἕως προς δύσματος ηλίου. Αλλ. in Bahrdt's Hexap.

15. — the Medes and Persians.—Some conclude, and not without reason, that the two powers being constantly mentioned together in this book, is a presumption that Darius and Cyrus reigned jointly: and while the sovereignty over Babylon, the residence of the Jews during the captivity, belonged to Darius, the Medes are named first; but afterwards the Persians are first in the book of Esther, Chap. i. 19, when the sole monarch was a Persian.

16. — may he deliver thee.—Chald. "he will deliver thee," and so Vulg. and Gr. but Syr. and Ar. render optatively, which seems best: see ver. 20. In the preceding part of this verse, the words might be rendered by an usual enallage; "and Daniel was brought and thrown, &c." which would prevent the introduction of the pronoun, "they threw him;" but Gr. has αὐτον, and two MSS. read גִּמְלָה.

17. — a stone was—laid—and—sealed.—Chald. One, or a single stone, meaning a large one; so Syr. and MS. Pachom. This must naturally remind us of the like circumstances which happened at the interment of our Saviour, of whom Daniel, in this case at least, has by many been considered as a type. See Mat. xxvii. 60, 66.

with his own signet, and with the signet of his nobles, that the resolution should not be changed concerning Daniel.

- 18 Then the king departed to his palace, and passed the night fasting, nor was a table introduced before him,

The design of the King and of the nobles in sealing the stone was probably different ; the latter feared the King lest he should release Daniel ; the former was apprehensive that some other injury might be done to him beyond the power of the wild beasts. Hence Vulg. renders the conclusion of the verse “ne quid fieret contra Danielelem ;” and indeed the word צְבוּתָא or צְבוּתָא seems to denote not merely a purpose or resolution, but largely the same as דָּבָר, or thing ; Gr. πραγμα ; and the like is the sense of the Syr. and Ar. “that nothing should be changed.”

Archbishop Secker notes from Arrian, l. vi. c. 29, that Alexander ordered the entrance into the tomb of Cyrus to be stopped up with stone and mortar, και επιβαλειν τω πηλω το σημειον το βασιλικον ; and that on his tomb he is called ὁ την αρχην Περσαις καταστησαμενος. This method of securing the sepulchres of illustrious persons was therefore probably not very uncommon in the East ; which consideration will afford an additional illustration to that prediction of Isaiah concerning the death of Christ, Chap. liii. 9, “Though his grave was appointed with the malefactors,

Yet with the rich was his tomb.”

18. ———passed the night fasting.—Chald. בַּת טוֹת. The word בַּת or בוֹת is used in the Targum for לֵון pernoctavit ; and Bochart considers בוֹת in the Phœnician language to signify night, and בוֹתָא the night-owl, and says moreover that the word is well known among the Chaldeans, Syrians, and Arabs. The other word טוֹת, as the Rabbins observe, has the sense of צִם jejunos, and agrees with the Arabic טَوِي ; see Cast. Lex.

———a table.—Chald. דְּרוֹן. Most of the versions render thus, “and food was not set before him ;” which seems to denote, that he was determined to fast, and had given orders accordingly ; and so Josephus understands it, “without repast or repose.” But one MS. reads דְּרוֹן from דְּרוֹה lætari, and our translators have followed the sense of some of the Jewish Rabbins who have derived the word from 19 and his sleep was far from him. At length the king arose early in the morning with the light, and went in 20 haste to the den of lions. And when he came near to the den, he cried to Daniel with a doleful voice: The king spoke thus to Daniel, O Daniel, servant of the living God, hath thy God, whom thou servest continu-21 ally, been able to deliver thee from the lions? Then 22 Daniel addressed the king, O king, live for ever. My that source, or from רחם impulit, and look upon it to mean “instruments of music,” such as had usually been introduced for the King’s evening-entertainment. Some consider the word as of Arabic origin, the same as רחם a sort of perfume or incense, not uncommon among the luxuries of the East; and hence Houbigant concludes, that for ἔδσματα meats, the Gr. Interpreter originally wrote ᾠδσματα, aromatics; “nec allata est suavitas odorum.” It is added, “and his sleep was far from him,” נדר, which denotes a very distant separation as of something unclean. At the close of the verse Gr. and Ar. read, “And God shut the mouths of the Lions, that they did not hurt Daniel.”

20. And when he came near—he cried—with a doleful voice.—Ten MSS. of Kenn. and many more of De Rossi, with many Editions, read the first word of this verse with Beth instead of Caph, which is preferable, as it denotes the instant cry of the King at his approach to the den. Gr. Ar. and Syr. read “with a strong or loud voice,” that is, such as pains the ear; and a great number of MSS. read the participle זעק instead of the verb זעק. “Crying with a doleful voice the King spoke, &c.”

21. —live for ever.—לעלמי in sæcula, or “long live the King:” an usual mode of addressing the monarch. When He in his turn addressed the people, it was, as we have seen, “Your peace be multiplied;” see ver. 25. And when the people saluted one another, it was according to the mode now practised, as Shaw tells us, among the Bedoween Arabs, “Peace be unto you.” Mr. Bruce intimates that when individuals or clans of suspected persons meet each other, if the one party pronounces this Salam Alicum, and it is returned by the other Alicum Salam, it is a sure indication that no evil is intended on either part.

God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the mouths of the lions, that they have not hurt me, inasmuch as before him integrity was found in me, and also before 23 thee, O king, have I done no hurt. At this the king was exceedingly pleased, and commanded to bring up

22. —hath shut the mouths of the lions.—See 2 Tim, iv. 17, and also Heb. xi. 33. In the former passage the Apostle seems to have an eye to the severe edicts and persecutions of Nero; in the latter the allusion is probably to the text before us, and ver. 23. Tertullian, Apolog. cap. 40, intimates that the Heathens imputing the cause of all public calamities unto the Christians, would cry out, “Christianos ad Leones.”

There is a passage in Dion Cassius, and another in Tacitus, which I shall mention here as they seem somewhat to our present purpose. Serapion an Egyptian was ordered to be thrown to a lion, because he had said Antoninus would live but a short time, and Macrinus would be his successor, *επει δε ουκ ηψατο αυτου την χειρα μονον ως φασι προτειναντος εφονευθη* δυνηθεις αν (ως γε εφη) μηδε τουτο παθειν δαιμονων τινων επικλησει, ει μιαν ημεραν εβεβιωκει.* Dio. l. lxxviii. p. 882. Post quum ei manum porrigenti leo pepercisset, ut aiunt, occisus fuerat, quum posset, sicuti dicebat, si unum præterea diem vixisset, invocatis nonnullis dæmonibus, hoc malum effugere. The passage in Tacitus is this, Captus in eo prælio Mariccus ac mox feris objectus, quia non laniabatur, stolidum vulgus inviolabilem credebatur, donec spectante Vitellio interfectus est. Hist. l. ii. 61. The barbarous custom appears from these examples to have been sometimes practised; but that Daniel should be spared, and his accusers destroyed, by the same lions, can leave no doubt of the miracle.

—integrity was found in me.—זכו by an apocope for זכור, see Chap. iv. 36. Gr. has ευθυτης. The Prophet having neither justly offended God nor the King, very truly offers the righteousness of his cause as the reason of the divine interference for his security; not from any ostentatious display of his own merit, but to direct the attention of the King to the power and providence of that great Being who is mighty to save, and whose favour is more to be regarded than life itself.

23. —was exceedingly pleased.—See ver. 14. I would only

- Daniel out of the den, and when Daniel was brought up out of the den, there was no hurt found upon him, because he believed in his God. Moreover the king commanded, and those men were brought who had set forth invidious accusations against Daniel, and were thrown into the den of lions, themselves, their children, and their wives, and they reached not the bottom of the den, ere the lions had the mastery of them, and broke in pieces all their bones.
- 25 Then king Darius wrote to all peoples, nations, and languages that dwell in all the earth, Peace be multiplied unto you. I set forth a decree, that throughout the whole dominion of my realm, ye tremble and fear before the God of Daniel; for he is the God that liveth and is stedfast for ever, and his kingdom shall not perish, and his dominion shall be even unto the end.

observe here, that the word עֲלֹהָי in both places may either denote “for him,” i. e. Daniel, or “within himself.” I have followed the latter sense with Syr. but Vulg. Gr. and Ar. prefer the former, “was exceeding glad for him.” And so Eng. Transl.

24. —the king commanded.—Chald. “spoke:” suitable to the edict of an eastern monarch, and therefore the latter word should be retained, where it can be done with propriety. In Cod. Chis. it then follows, “And these two men were brought, &c.”

—set forth invidious accusations against Daniel.—See a like expression at Chap. iii. 8. There is also a Pleonasm of the Affix, “against him, even Daniel;” and so at ver. 26.

The suffering of the children and families of these false accusers, however it may seem irreconcilable with natural justice, has some examples that may possibly serve to vindicate it in extraordinary cases; but we need not be anxious to vindicate the conduct and practices of eastern despots.

26. —his kingdom shall not perish.—So Eng. Transl. of 1599. The verb is in Ithp. and denotes “shall not corrupt itself, or be destroyed.” The characters of the Deity in this and the next verse, are very just and sublime, and suited to his nature, and were probably

- 27 He delivereth and rescueth, and he worketh signs and wonders in the heaven and in the earth, who hath delivered Daniel from the power of the lions. So this Daniel prospered in the reign of Darius, and in the reign of Cyrus the Persian.
-

such as Darius had learnt from Daniel. Some think that he was a convert to the worship of the true God; and this, together with the favours shewn to the Prophet, may in some measure account for the notice taken of his reign: Many other reasons may also be assigned from a reflection on various parts of this book, and especially at Chap. ix.

27. He delivereth.—The word משיב is written differently in the MSS. and afterward in this verse we find שזיב, which seems more agreeable to the form of the Chald. participle; but many MSS. in the latter case, and, among them, the ancient Bodleian, read שיזב, which is probably the true reading of the verb.

28. —the Persian.—Several MSS. read פרסאה with Keri. D'Herbelot tells us, (Bibl. Orient.) “that Cyrus gave Daniel the government of Syria;” but, if this was true, it does not appear that he ever returned to preside over it; nor probably could his age admit of it.

CHAPTER VII.

1 IN the first year of Belshazzar king of Babylon, Daniel saw a dream, even visions of his head upon his

---

THE Historical Part of the Book of Daniel was finished with the last Chapter; the remaining part of this Book acquaints us with the Visions which at different times were communicated to the Prophet himself. The Interval of Time from the first to the last of these Visions is about one or two and twenty Years, i. e. from the first Year of Belshazzar mentioned at the beginning of this Chapter to the third Year of Cyrus at the beginning of Chapter 10th. The first Vision or Dream is contained in the 7th Chapter, and is the only one that is written in the Chaldee Language; and perhaps the Similarity of it to the Dream of Nebuchadnezzar which the Prophet had related and expounded at Chapter ii. might have been one reason why this same Language was here adopted, and the Benefit designed by it for the impious King in whose reign it was delivered another. What was there prefigured by a large Statue, composed of various metals, is here pointed at by a very different sort of Emblems, each suited to the Disposition or Character of the Persons to whom the Communications were made. Four Beasts are in this Dream, designed to signify the four great Monarchies or Kingdoms, according to the Interpretation of an Angel; and some Circumstances relating to the fourth Beast are probably intended to adumbrate a Series of Events which were to reach to the latest Ages of the World.

1. — Belshazzar King of Babylon.—Gr. and Ar. “King of the Chaldeans.” Many Editions, and some MSS. read “Belashtzar,” as it were deriving the latter part of the word from שם fire, and צר an enemy; according to Grotius denoting “Belum esse ignis hostici,” or to be burnt by an hostile flame; see Jer. l. 2, and li. 44, but a very great number of MSS. and particularly the ancient Bodleian, read the word as it now stands.

bed, at which time he wrote the dream, and related the sum of the matters.

- 2 Daniel related thus, I was seeing in my visions of the night, and behold the four winds of heaven burst

—he wrote the dream.—From hence it appears that the Prophet certainly wrote some of his prophecies; and it seems from Chap. xii. 4, that he was expressly ordered by God to do so. What is advanced therefore from the authority of the Talmudists in Bava Bathra, c. i. is absurd, that the whole of this book of Daniel was written by persons of the great Synagogue. The following clause of this verse, “and related the sum of the matters,” is omitted by Gr. and Ar. and has certainly the appearance of a gloss. Yet MS. Pachom. has αρχη λογων αυτου, και αποκριθεις ειπεν, marked with points; and Theodoret has the same words without the points. See the Note at the close of the Chapter.

2. —in my visions of the night.—The preposition ב has this sense. See Nold. p. 576. The words however are not found in the Greek of Theodotion either here or at ver. 7, but Theodoret has them, and MS. Pachom. and Copt. There is an expression equivalent to this, and very little varied from it, at Chap. ii. 19. That by Visions of the night are meant Dreams we may learn from Job. iv. 13. And of the revelations that were primarily made to Daniel, contained in this latter part of his book, the only instance wherein the divine intelligence is said to be communicated to him in a vision of the night, or a dream, is this before us. See Zech. iv. 1.

—the four winds of heaven burst forth.—Chald. מגידן “erumpentes;” they met with an eruptive vehemence upon the great sea, as the Mediterranean is called, by way of distinction from the lesser seas or lakes in Judea. This description of a tempest is short, but very forcible; and in its simple form perhaps equally impressive with that animated one of Virgil,

Una Eurusque Notusque ruunt, creberque procellis Africus.

Æn. i. 89.

The raging of the waves and the madness of the people have long since been considered as analogous, and the vicinity of the several kingdoms to the great sea, may serve to illustrate farther the propriety

3 forth into the great sea. And four large beasts came 4 up from the sea, different from each other. The first was like a Lion, but had the wings of an eagle: I was

---

of the Prophet's analogy. From the various tumults and commotions, with which the countries around this sea were agitated, the four larger monarchies or empires emerged or came up, as the next verse intimates; and their various ravages, idolatry, and tyranny, sufficiently justify the allusion to wild beasts.

4. The first was like a Lion.—The Chaldee or Babylonian empire compared to the Head of Gold in Chap. ii. 32, 38, is here represented as like a Lion or Lioness; see Jer. iv. 7. Its progress to what was then deemed universal empire was rapid, and therefore it has the wings of an eagle. See Jer. xlviii. 40, and Ezek. xvii. 3. I. D. Michaelis intimates from Megasthenes and Strabo, that this power advanced as far as Spain. When its wings were plucked or torn out, that is, when it was checked in its progress by frequent defeats (and that this is the meaning here intended may appear from a like expression in Cicero's Epistle to Atticus, l. iv, Qui mihi pennas inciderant, nolunt easdem renasci), when it was thus curtailed and humbled, it became more peaceable and humane, agreeably to that idea of the Psalmist, ix. 20.

Bring terror upon them, Jehovah,
 That the nations may acknowledge themselves men.

Some think, that the Prophet alludes here to the changes which Nebuchadnezzar underwent, although he was now dead; and that he was a proper emblem of the future changes of his empire; and especially that his being raised or lifted up from the ground, means his being restored from the prone posture of a quadruped to the erect or human. The Prophet no doubt must well recollect the emblem, and the circumstances relating to it might be so strong in his mind, as to insinuate themselves unavoidably into this part of the present vision.

It may also be proper to observe, that though the dream of Nebuchadnezzar concerning the image, and this of Daniel's beasts, agree in their general sense and interpretation, yet there are circumstances added to the latter, as well as some points more plainly illustrated, than were found in the former. Nebuchadnezzar saw his kingdom seeing till its wings were plucked, wherewith it was raised up from the ground, and it became erect on the feet like a man, and a man's heart was given unto it.

- 5 And behold another beast, a second, like to a Bear, which was raised up on one side, and three tusks were flourishing ; Daniel saw it, when its wings were plucked, and its end approaching. Other particulars will be readily observed by the attentive reader in the subsequent parts of the vision : and especially the stone that became a mountain and filled the whole earth, will here appear to be more fully explained by the Son of Man, who came to the Ancient of days, and was advanced to a kingdom of universal and endless duration.

5. —on one side.—The word שטר signifies either dominion or a side ; in the latter case the ש is read like ס, and nine MSS. of Kenn. with many more of De Rossi, and some Editions, read סטר ; the Versions also favour this reading, and the Heb. Cod. 240, which has לקצת אחד, on one part. Some think the allusion is to the eastern quarter of the world whence the Persians came ; others to the elevation of the Persians above the Medes and Babylonians, which three powers are conceived to be meant by the three ribs or tusks in the mouth of the bear ; but others consider Babylon, Lydia, and Egypt, as the ribs. Jerom refers the allusion to the land of Judea, which was favoured by Cyrus, and whose dominion was established on one side of it ; but I am inclined to think the expression ought rather to be referred to the situation of the former beast, on one side of which, or near to Chaldea, and by conquests over the neighbouring countries, this second empire was established.

—three tusks.—Vulg. has Ordines ; Gr. πλευραι. Heb. 240 צלעות. The original word seems to denote something prominent, or penetrating, either from עלה in altum tendere, or עלל intrare ; the bear is called by Aristotle ζων πμφάγον, a most voracious animal ; and the command given to it in the subsequent part of the verse indicates its rapacious nature. From these considerations I have rather supposed the idea of tusks more natural and agreeable to the sense of the original than the term ribs, which seems far-fetched and rather inapplicable ; insomuch that Houbigant ridicules the notion, and wonders that Arias Montanus and others could discover ribs in the mouth of an animal. He renders the word jaws, and refers to Job in its mouth among its teeth; and thus they spoke to 6 it, Rise, devour much flesh. After this I was seeing, and behold another, like a Leopard, which had four bird's wings upon its back; four heads also had the xxxix. 30. The three tusks may refer to the three different points to which the Persians pushed their conquests: Coming from the East they invaded the western, southern, and northern territories; and thus we read in the next Chap. ver. 4, that the ram pushed westward and northward, and southward. And that great havoc among the human race was made by the Persians may be learnt from Jer. li. 36, and also from the revolt of the Hyreanians, and of Gobryas in the fourth book, and from other parts of the Cyropædia, as well as from most of the historians.

6. —upon its back.—Gr. and Vulg. “upon it.” The word נִבְיָה loses its Jod in very many MSS. as well as in the Masora, yet Syr. seems to retain the plural form, and renders, “on its sides.” As the second beast or the bear answered to the silver in the image, the third or the leopard agrees with the brass. Many fanciful resemblances have been pointed out by various commentators between the second beast and the Persians, and between the third beast and the Grecians or Macedonians. Alexander is especially thought to resemble the leopard, and in many respects doubtless the parallel must hold. His well known reply, to one who asked him how he obtained so many signal victories, of μηδεν ἀναβαλλομενος, is quite consonant with the celerity of the leopard, and the method by which it leaps on its prey; as his daring to engage with Darius and the most powerful princes is illustrative of the leopard's spirit and courage, which will rouse it to a contest with the largest and fiercest wild beasts. See Hab. i. 3. By the four wings on its back or sides seems to be meant the union of the four empires, the Assyrian, Median, Persian, and Grecian; or, as some think, Persia, Greece, Egypt and India; and the rapidity with which they were united under Alexander is fitly denoted by the character of wings. After the death of Alexander, the partition of his kingdom into four parts is probably what is meant by the four heads of the beast; See on Chap. viii. 3. And if we reflect on the small beginnings of this power, the difficulties which it surmounted, and the vast strides it made toward universal empire, extending its conquests as far as the Ganges in so short a space as twelve years, (1 Mac. i. 7.)

- 7 beast, and dominion was given to it. I was seeing after this in the visions of the night, and behold a fourth beast formidable and terrible, and strong exceedingly, we shall not be at a loss to assign a fair interpretation for the last clause of this verse, and to conclude that such dominion was the gift of God.

7. — a fourth beast.—Many MSS. favour the reading of Keri in the word רביעא, and in the omission of Jod in ברגליה with its feet: the MSS. also in the word אמתני read Jod after Aleph, which is most agreeable to the original form of the word from אים formidabilis. Also in the next verse, Keri and some MSS. consider the Vau as redundant in ביניהון among them.

Interpreters differ very much in their opinions of this fourth beast, and the little horn that came up among its ten horns. All however agree that the beast corresponds with the iron in the image; which I have shewed at Chap. ii. must refer to the Roman empire, which spread its arms and terrors to a much greater extent than either of the preceding powers, and whose legs and feet of iron are here the large iron teeth of the beast. Sir Isaac Newton has observed that it conquered the kingdom of Macedon, with Illyricum and Epirus, in the eighth year of Antiochus Epiphanes, an. Nabonassar. 580; and inherited that of Pergamus A. N. 615; and conquered that of Syria A. N. 679; and that of Egypt A. N. 718, or about thirty years before Christ: By which and other conquests it became greater and more terrible than any of the former beasts. Obser. on Dan. Chap. iv. Its devastation, especially in Judea, seems marked in the verse before us; “it devoured and broke in pieces, and trampled upon the remains:” the plunder which could not be converted to their own immediate advantage the Romans gave up to others, thus completely reducing towns and countries. That it was different from all the beasts that were before it is intimated by its having no name, being more cruel and horrid than any sort of beasts whatever; and the Roman power was so multiform, that it could not be pointed out by any one species of resemblance. But its chief distinction consisted in that it had ten horns, which we find, at ver. 24, are ten kings or kingdoms. See also Rev. xvii. 12. Some think this a definite number for an indefinite, and that it relates to the Roman provinces; but, as Secker observes, it doth not appear that any of the numbers in Daniel mean uncertainty.

which had large teeth of iron ; it devoured and broke in pieces, and trampled upon the remains with its feet, and it was distinguished from all the beasts that were 8 before it, for it had ten horns. As I was attentive to the horns, behold another little horn grew up among them, and three of the former horns were torn out before it, and behold eyes like human eyes were in that
 9 horn, and a mouth speaking presumptuous things. I was seeing, till the thrones were placed, and the Ancient Porphyry, as Jerom says, picked out of all the Greek kingdoms ten of the most cruel kings, and assigned these as the ten horns. Grotius and his adherents mention ten kings in the kingdom of the Seleucidæ, the successors of Alexander, who exercised cruelties towards the Jews: Others will have these horns to be the ten persecuting emperors. But Sir Isaac Newton, in his Observations, Chap. vi. has pointed out ten kings in the Roman empire with better success: See on ver. 24. And these are also the ten toes of the image. The empire continued in its greatness till the reign of Theodosius the great, and soon afterwards the partition happened; and the broken form remained, or the ten kingdoms were to be no more united, till the Ancient of days should come. Yet, after all, R. Jacchiades is of opinion, that the time of the ten horns is not yet come, and that the eleventh will perhaps be Gog and Magog.

8. — another little horn.—Some understand by this Antiochus Epiphanes; others one of the first Cæsars; others refer it to the Turkish empire, and will have Egypt, Asia and Greece to be the three horns torn up or reduced by the Turk; but the more general and better opinion refers it to Antichrist, or the papal usurpation. See on ver. 24. The eyes like human eyes indicate the perspicacity and cunning of this power; and the mouth speaking great or presumptuous things is not unlike the character of St. Paul's man of sin, "whose coming should be after the working of Satan, with signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness." 2 Thess. ii. 9, 10. See also Rev. xiii. 5, 6.

9. — the thrones were placed.—Our translation reads, "cast down;" meaning that all the earthly kingdoms were brought to an end; but the word may be rendered "were pitched," or set down, for the

of days sitting: His Raiment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool, his throne was 10 flames of fire, his wheels the ardent fire. A fiery stream trailed and issued from before him: thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand ten reception of the Deity and his assessors the saints; See Matt. xix. 28, and Rev. iv. 4, and this sense the versions follow. “Raymund, pug. fid. p. 276, in Michaelis, cites the Talmudists as saying, that one throne should be put for God, another for David or his Son: And Ps. cx. authorises the notion of an assessor to God.” Secker.

—Ancient of days.—ΑΛΛ. in Bahrtdt’s Hex. ὁ παλαιων τας ημερας. “He that maketh the days old,” and consequently ready to expire or cease. By this term is undoubtedly meant the Deity, the supreme eternal Spirit, whom the Prophet thus describes, if we follow the sense of the versions, to adapt himself to human apprehensions, and to make the following part of his description more intelligible; but no similitude is pointed out, nor ought we from hence to attempt to represent by any figure the invisible God. Image worship was not allowed the Jews under a less perfect dispensation, and therefore must be very ill suited to the spirituality of the Christian service. The purity and sanctity of the Divine Nature are next adumbrated by similar allusions; and if the reader is desirous to see a full illustration of the manner in which the corporal members or certain acts of the human frame are to be understood, when applied in Scripture to God, he may consult Dr. Sam. Clarke’s Sermons, vol. i. Disc. v. on the Spirituality of the Divine Nature, and Archb. Secker’s Lect. on the Catech. vol. i. 8vo. p. 168, &c. The throne and wheels of fire at the conclusion of this verse may serve to denote his dread majesty, that pierces and penetrates all things, summons all to his judgment, and executes in an instant his sovereign will and final determinations. See Rev. iv. 2, &c. and Ezek. i. Grotius observes that the ancient thrones and sellæ curules had wheels.

10. A fiery stream.—Three MSS. omit the first three words of this verse, and the last clause of the foregoing, and seem to read thus, “his throne was flames of fire trailing and issuing from his presence.” MS. A. ειλκεν εκπορευομενος, trailed when issuing.

—thousand thousands.—Many MSS. follow Keri, and read אלפי אלפי with the Chald. termination; and soon after כבבב, the reading of the thousands assisted before him: the Council sate, and the 11 books were opened. I was attentive at this time on account of the voice of the presumptuous words which the horn spoke. I was attentive till the beast was slain, and its body destroyed, and it was delivered up to the burning

---

Masorettes, is supported by several MSS. The allusion in this verse is to the Sanhedrim, or great council of the Jews: Syr. reads, "the judge sate," and by the books that were opened must be meant, those evidences that contained the laws and will of God, whether natural or revealed, those in which the actions of men with all their circumstances of aggravation or extenuation are recorded, those in which the clearest and completest conviction is adduced, in order to render the judgment such as that all shall be obliged to acknowledge it the result of the most perfect truth and consummate justice. See Rev. xx. 12.

11.—I was attentive.—"Spectabam attentus." Grot. The former part of this verse is not in the Syriac Version; and I suspect the second word in the verse should be חיות "the beast:" four MSS. seem to favour this reading by dropping the Jod, and beginning with Cheth instead of He. If this be admitted, we should render thus, "Looking at the beast at this time on account of the voice—I was attentive till the beast was slain." This seems a better sense, and the tautology is avoided.

—and its body destroyed, and it was delivered up.—The former verb is masculine, and agrees with body; the latter is feminine, and must refer to the beast; and though the sense may seem not materially affected in either case, yet the observation will be of use in explaining the next verse.

The final overthrow, or total abolition of this beast, on account of the blasphemies or presumptions of the eleventh horn, is here described; and the reference is probably to that awful reckoning, when the beast and the false prophet were to be cast alive into a lake of fire, burning with brimstone; and to this the fire, the judgment, and the entire destruction of the beast naturally lead our attention. See Rev. xix. 20. The ingenious Author of a late Treatise intitled, "The Revelation of St. John Considered as alluding to certain Services of the Jewish Temple," has the following observation on this vision, p. 372.

- 12 of fire. Also of the rest of the beasts their dominion was made to pass away, but a continuance in life was 13 given them until a limited period or a time. I continued seeing in the visions of the night, when behold in the clouds of heaven was coming one like the Son of

“The Prophecy of Daniel has here reached the fall of the spiritual Babylon of St. John, previous to the introduction of the kingdom of the Messiah : The lake of fire of the one is the same as the burning flame (or burning of fire) of the other, into which the body of the beast was seen to be cast.” See Rev. xiv. 8, &c., and xvi. 19.

12 —the rest of the beasts.—Mr. Mede in B. iv. Epist. 24, 25, understands the word חיותא in the sing. number as applicable to the fourth beast, or the residue of it, i. e. the other parts beside the body, as the ten horns, and the little horn, or the several kingdoms arising out of the fourth empire ; but it appears from the last note that this beast was delivered up to be burnt, as well as its body to be destroyed ; which consideration may serve as an answer to the chief of Mr. Mede’s arguments : And the reference here must rather be to the preceding beasts of this vision ; which, though they had lost their former dignity, were yet suffered to continue in life, and perhaps to retain their names, at least for a certain time, while the other should totally perish and be forgotten.

—or a time.—I take the Vau to be explanatory : The word וָמָן is sometimes used for an appointed season, or a solemnity : See on ver. 25 : here it is confined to the progress of duration by this other word that follows, “that is, a time.” See Chap. ii. 21, and Eccles. iii. 1.

13. —was coming one like the Son of man.—MS. Pach, ερχομενος ην, and so Chald. This, in the opinion of all commentators, corresponds with the stone that struck the image at Chap. ii. verses 34 and 45. The Jews acknowledge that by the Son of man is meant the Messias ; and the description of the coming of the Son of man in the clouds of heaven, is exactly what our Saviour applies to himself, when solemnly adjured by the High Priest to declare whether he was the Christ, the Son of God. Matt. xxvi. 64. See also Psalm civ. 3, and Isa. xix. 1. R. Isaac, l. i. c. 41, intimates, that the Jews call the Messiah Hanani from the term ענני, the clouds, in this pas-

14 man, who advanced even to the Ancient of days : And when they had brought him near before him, He gave him dominion and glory and a kingdom, that all peoples, sage of Daniel. Nor do the heathen seem to have been unacquainted with this idea ; as they have sometimes invoked their deities as veiled in a cloud, tandem venias precamur

Nube candentes humeros amictus
Augur Apollo. HOR. l. i. Od. 2.

Those who have explained the fourth beast to be some of the successors of Alexander, have supposed the Roman people to be meant here by the Son of man ; but this gloss is certainly frigid, and ill-adapted to the language and description contained in these verses, or to the stone which became a mountain, crushed in pieces all the other parts of the statue, and filled the whole earth.

14. And when they had brought him near before him, He gave him, &c.—The original is undoubtedly capable of being rendered in this manner ; and I prefer it, on account of the connexion between the two clauses ; for, whether we refer the former clause, agreeably to most of the versions, to the offering of himself which was made by the Son of man, or to his exaltation at the right hand of God, or merely to the honour of nearer access to Him, and higher dignity, as at Numb. xvi. 5 ; in either sense, the dominion that followed is, and ought to be, considered as the consequent reward. There is a passage in the book of Jeremiah, Chap. xxx. 21, which may throw considerable light on this before us, and which Bp. Chandler thinks is spoken of the Messiah, the prince of the Jews :

“ And his prince shall be of his own race,
“ And his ruler shall go forth from the midst of him ;
“ And when I shall have made him an offering, he shall come near unto me ;
“ For who like this same hath freely pledged himself, that he might come near to me,
“ Saith Jehovah ?”

Whatever relation this passage may have in its primary sense to the governors and princes of Jacob being natives and not foreigners, I can-nations, and languages should serve him ; his dominion is an everlasting dominion which shall not pass away, and his kingdom such as shall not perish.

15 As to me Daniel, my spirit was pierced with horror not but think that, in its more distant view at least, and by a fair and just construction, it has a plain reference to Christ ; and I find this sense adopted in Jonathan's Targum. There appears to be some difficulty in the last line, at the beginning ; but if the particle of similitude Caph be understood, which is very common, it will be removed ; and the expression "to pledge his heart," may mean heartily or freely to offer himself as a pledge or surety.

Now, according to the sense which this passage suggests, the fulfilling of the prophecy will appear to be thus declared in the New Testament. The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree ; Him hath God exalted to be a prince and a Saviour, and set at his own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality and power, and might and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come ; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven and things in earth, and things under the earth : And he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet : Then when all things shall be subdued unto him, shall the Mediator's kingdom cease, and God shall be all in all ; yet still Christ shall reign as God for ever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Acts v. 30. Ephes. i. 20. Phil. ii. 10. 1 Cor. xv. 25. Luke i. 33.

Interpreters have distinguished the kingdom of the Stone into two parts ; one of the Stone, properly so called, the other of the Mountain ; the former hath already appeared after our Lord's resurrection, and the latter is yet to come. The preceding description must be extended to both ; and the Son of man must reign over his Church on earth till he has subdued Antichrist, crushed the usurpations of the little horn of the fourth beast, and trodden down all his enemies : After this, "he shall return in the clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him ; he shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty Angels in flaming fire, when he shall take vengeance on those that know not God, but shall be glorified in his saints, and admired in all them that believe." Rev. i. 7, 2 Thess. i.

15. As to me, Daniel.—Chald. "My spirit, I Daniel." The nomin-in the midst of my body, and the visions of my head 16 disturbed me. I advanced towards one of those that assisted, and inquired of him an exact account concerning the whole of this; which he related to me, and made me acquainted with the interpretation of the 17 matters. These large beasts which are four, are four 18 kings that shall arise in the earth. Yet the Saints of ative pronoun אני is not unusually thus rendered, when the preceding affix points out the case. See Gen. xxvii. 34, and other places in this book, as ver. 28, and Chap. viii. 1 and 15. See also Bp. Newcome's note on Zech. vii. 5, where he observes from Buxt. and Schultens, that there is an elegant emphasis in this idiom.

—my body.—Chald. “my sheath;” by a metaphor; for the body, according to Ab. Ezra, may be considered as the sheath of the mind: but Gr. has, ἐν τῇ ἐξέει μού, in my habit; and Syr. “in my couch, or bed.” J. D. Michaelis suggests, that for בגדו נדנה we may, by a different distribution of the letters, read בגדו נדנה, propter hoc. Vulg. “in his.” See his Suppl. on נדה.

17. —in the earth.—See this sense of מן in Nold. p. 512. So Gr. and Syr. But Vul. Gr. and Ar. read here “four kingdoms,” and some think that by מן ארעא “from or out of the earth,” they are opposed to the kingdom of Christ, or the Son of man, which was from heaven. In this and the next verse is contained the interpretation given by one of the angels, probably Gabriel, which is the substance or epitome of the vision. At the close of this verse the Greek interpreter has αἱ ἀρθήσονται, “which shall be taken away;” and so the Ar. Possibly they might find in their copies די יקחו, but I know of no other authority to support such reading, unless its resemblance to the word that begins the next verse might account for its being dropped; or possibly that word ויקבלון might have been repeated, and be here understood passively, “and shall be snatched away by force” to another Power: However the sense is complete enough without any alteration.

18. —The saints.—This verse is variously understood, according to the different construction of the nouns in the first clause: The word קדשי, “the saints,” not having the particle די before it, nor the noun preceding in the usual form of what is called status constructi, should rather be considered, according to the versions, as the

- the most High shall assume the kingdom, and shall possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever.
- 19 Then I desired an accurate information concerning the fourth beast, which was distinguished from all of them, exceedingly formidable, whose teeth were of iron, and his claws of brass, that devoured, broke in pieces,
- 20 and trampled upon the remains with his feet: Also concerning the ten horns which were on his head, and of the other which grew up when three fell before it, even that horn which had eyes, and a mouth speaking presumptuous things, and whose aspect was more stout
- 21 than his fellows. I was seeing, when this horn made nominative case to the verb; and the adjective following by an enallage of the number, may be referred to the most High God (Gr. ὑψίστου). See Deut. v. 26, and Josh. xxiv. 19. When the earthly kingdoms shall be destroyed, the heavenly or spiritual kingdom of the saints shall commence; they shall enter upon it on earth, but shall retain it in heaven for ever. See on ver. 22, and 27. It may not be amiss to observe farther, that one MS. drops the word קדשי, and then the next word, to be rendered "the high ones," would assume its place; and another MS. reads the word full קדשין, but the present text seems the best.

19. —an accurate information.—Vulg. "diligentius discernere:" Gr. ἐζητοῦν ἀκριβως, and at ver 16, it has ἀκριβευαν: The Chald. word comes from יצב, statuit, constituit, and signifies exact truth. See Ch. iii. 24, and vi. 12.

—all of them.—Many MSS. agree with Keri in considering the ו as redundant in the word כלהוין; and the י as redundant in the words טפריה and ברגליה; but no alteration seems necessary in the two last instances, and the Chaldee usage may seem to justify the first. See ver. 7, 8.

20. —whose aspect was more stout.—Or, more great and magnificent; for, though it was small at first, it at length exceeded all other powers in pomp and pre-eminence, exalting itself not only above all temporal powers, but above every named god, or every sort of worship. 2 Thess. ii. 4.

21. I was seeing.—One MS. omits these words, and the follow-

- 22 war with the Saints, and prevailed over them: Until the Ancient of days came, and gave judgment to the Saints of the most High, when the appointed time arrived, that the Saints should possess the kingdom.
- 23 Thus he replied, The fourth beast shall be a fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be different from all the kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and ing copulative may support the connexion. In the narrative of the dream, at ver. 7, 8, neither the clause in the last note nor the circumstances mentioned in this verse are taken notice of; which may serve to explain the meaning of the Prophet's more accurate inquiry, mentioned at the beginning of ver. 19. The general outline of the character of the little horn was given at ver. 8. "It had eyes like human eyes, and a mouth speaking "presumptuous things;" but here it exalts itself above its fellows, and even makes war with the saints and prevails; till the coming of the Ancient of days, to vindicate their cause, to crush the idolaters, and extirpate the dominion of Antichrist; or until the final judgment, when the saints shall sit as assessors with God, shall be seated on thrones, and reign as kings and priests with God and Christ, and possess the kingdom for ever. Rev. xx. 4 and 6.

23. — a fourth kingdom.—This verse seems to confirm the sense which we have given to the seventh verse of this chapter: Nor do I see how the characters of a fourth beast and a fourth kingdom, distinguished from all the preceding, can possibly apply to the successors of Alexander, the Seleucidæ and Lagidæ, who were still only a part of the Macedonian or Grecian kingdom, and constantly at war with each other: Whereas every article of the description agrees with the characters of the Roman empire, which was of a very different nature from all the preceding kingdoms in its origin, its government, and the extent of its dominion. See on ver 7, and Bp. Newton's 13th and 14th Dissertations. The expression at the latter part of this verse, "thresh it down," or trample upon it, alludes to the mode in the East of threshing by the treadings of Oxen; to which we find frequent allusion in the writings of the prophets; and for the various modes of it see Bp. Lowth on Isa. xxviii. 27.

24 thresh it down, and break it in pieces. Also the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall 24. —the ten horns—are ten kings.—Or kingdoms, as at ver. 17. There are various enumerations of these ten kingdoms in the division of the Roman empire; none of which are reckoned to commence earlier than the latter end of the fourth, or the beginning of the fifth century. Bp. Newton, in his 14th Dissert. has given several lists, by Machiavel, by the learned Mr. Mede, by Bp. Lloyd, and by Sir Isaac Newton; and at last has added one which he has selected from the rest, and which he has placed in the eighth century. His words are as follow: “The principal states and governments then were, 1. of the Senate of Rome, who revolted from the Greek emperors, and claimed and exerted the privilege of choosing a new western emperor; 2. of the Greeks in Ravenna; 3. of the Lombards in Lombardy; 4. of the Huns in Hungary; 5. of the Alemannes in Germany; 6. of the Franks in France; 7. of the Burgundians in Burgundy; 8. of the Goths in Spain; 9. of the Britons; 10. of the Saxons.” Not that there were constantly ten kingdoms; they were sometimes more, and sometimes fewer; but, as Sir Isaac Newton says, “whatever was their number afterwards, they are still called the ten kings from their first number.

---

As to the other horn that should arise after, or behind them, Gr. οπισω αυτων, that is, either unperceived by them, or whose height and dominion should not acquire its summit till long after their establishment, this is generally agreed, by all Protestant interpreters, to be the kingdom of the Pope; which was certainly of a very different nature from either of the former, being first ecclesiastical or spiritual, and afterwards claiming a temporal or civil jurisdiction. The Greek Interpreter adds, that it should be distinguished from the former κακοις, “in evils or malignancies;” and the three kings or kingdoms which it should pluck up by the roots, or as Gr. and Vulg. read, reduce, are pointed out by the same Prelate in the fore-mentioned Dissertation to be, the Exarchate of Ravenna, the kingdom of the Lombards and the State of Rome. In the eighth century the reduction of these states happened, and the epistles and bulls are after that time dated from the years of the commencement of the Pope’s temporal jurisdiction, or advancement to the papal chair; arise; and another shall arise after them, which shall be distinguished from the former, and shall reduce three 25 kings. And he shall speak words against the most High, and shall wear out the Saints of the most High, and shall presume to alter appointed Seasons and the Law,

“and the Pope, by wearing his triple crown, hath in a manner pointed out for himself the person here intended.” See the above 14th Dissert. for a farther illustration of this verse and of the text.

25. —he shall speak words, or discourses, against the most High—So the Versions, and so at Chap. vi. 4, “on the side of the kingdom” means against it. Sym reads, “shall speak words, ως Θεος, as God.” See on ver. 8 and 20, and Chap. xi. 36.

—and shall wear out the Saints—The verb יבלל, according to its sense in the Targum, means, to make to grow old as a garment does by continual wearing; and whether we refer the word קדושי to holy persons or things, this clause has been too sadly illustrated by the papal massacres and inquisitions, or other innovations. Houbigant would read יבלל abolebit, from נבל, and so Syr. נבלל.

—and shall presume to alter appointed Seasons, or solemnities, and the Law.—So Cappellus, “the law and its festivals.” The former term I take to refer to the positive, the latter to the moral duties of religion. The precepts and institutes of both sorts have been often over-ruled and changed by the authority of different Pontiffs. The Chaldee word סבר has different senses, as to think, to hope, to bear up, &c. See Cast. Lex. I have endeavoured to give it a sense most agreeable to its proper meaning, and at the same time suitable to the bold and presuming attempts of this overbearing power. The Author of the Revelation of St. John Considered, has an ingenious observation on this clause, the substance of which is as follows; “The oral law, or the interpretation of the written law of Moses, is called Mishna, which is derived of the word Shna, to iterate, or do over again; and it is remarkable that the angel should make use of the same word in the clause before us, ‘to do over again the solemnities of the law;’ as if he had it in intention to lead the mind of the reader, in a then future age, to a secondary or oral law, a Christian Mishna, to be fabricated by the eleventh horn, and substituted after the disuse, or wearing out, the holy things of the most High.” See p. 370.

which shall be given into his hand until a time, and 26 times, and the division of a time. But the Judgment

---

—which shall be given into his hand.—Either the saints shall be subject to his power, or, as seems more agreeable to the Versions, his influence shall prevail over the solemnities and the law. Possibly both might be meant to be included in the usurpation.

—until a time and times, and the division of a time.—Or, half a time. Syr. and Ar. drop the Vau before times, but the sense is not much affected thereby. By the variation of the number, and the exactness used in marking the limits of the term, some particular species of duration, and not a general one, must be here intended. By a time, it is agreed by interpreters, is meant a year, by way of excellence, as a period the most distinguished; see on Chap. iv. 16, by the plural, or rather the dual times, must also be meant “two years;” and thus the whole term will be three years and a half; and both Josephus and Chrysostom, as Grotius has observed, confirm this acceptation. But on this we shall treat more fully at Chap. xii. 7, where the like expression again occurs. The point I would now ascertain is, whether this term is to be understood literally, or in the prophetic sense of years, according to Ezek. iv. 6, “each day for a year have I appointed thee.” See also Isa. xxxiv. 8.

Now the time that Antiochus plundered the temple, and prohibited the daily sacrifice, is confined by Josephus to three years and a half: See De Bell. Jud. lib. i. c. 1, and it seems not improbable that to this term the Prophet might have an eye, but not to this only or chiefly: Indeed, as Mr. Lowth has observed, this term is thought to have been typical of the longer prophetic period. And as the horn is a kingdom, or a succession of kings to which the above signal characters belong; and as the same language is adopted in the book of the Revelations, Chap. xi. 2, in which “the Gentiles shall tread under foot the court of the temple forty and two months,” equal to three years and a half; and again, “power was given to the beast, which opened his mouth in blasphemies,” for the same term, Chap. xiii. 5, and at Chap. xii. 4, “the woman, or the church, was to be nourished in the wilderness for a time, and times, and half a time,” which at ver. 6 is said to be “a thousand two hundred and threescore days,” or forty and two months, allotting to each month thirty days; and as the prophecies of Daniel commenced within 560 years before Christ; from these and other like circumstances, apparent in these disquisitions, I shall sit, when his dominion shall be taken away, to be 27 wasted and destroyed unto the end. Yet the kingdom and the dominion, and the wide extent of Empire under the whole heaven shall be given to a people the Saints of the most High, whose kingdom is an ever-think we may justly deduce the following positions: That the period of the dominion of the little horn is the same which St. John alludes to in the Apocalypse; that this dominion therefore did not commence till after the times of the Gospel; that a space of three years and a half is too short for a dominion so long predicted, and so solemnly announced in times or years, months, and days, by these highly favoured prophets; that therefore we must understand the 1260 days to be so many years; and that there is no known power to which this term can be so properly applied as to that of Antichrist, who should arise under the times of the latter dispensation within the Roman empire; and would exalt himself as God, and usurp some of the characters and worship of the most High. These conclusions will perhaps be readily allowed, whatever this power of Antichrist may be, or from what period soever we may fix the commencement of his kingdom. Though these points also have been hinted already, or might be collected from the preceding observations, yet I shall no farther insist on them at present, as the subject will be resumed in the latter part of this book.

---

26. But the Judgment shall sit.—The reference seems, ultimately at least, to the future and final judgment; “The destruction of the impious shall be eternal.” Cappellus in loc. But before this shall all the earthly kingdoms be destroyed, Ezekiel’s prophecy in Chap. xxxviii. and xxxix. against Gog in the land of Magog be fulfilled, the kingdom of Christ be restored, and the Church’s ascendancy over all the earth be established; and, as it follows in the next verse, the saints of the most High shall receive a very extensive dominion, which shall commence here on earth, and be continued for ever and ever. See ver. 13, and Rev. v. 10.

27. —a people the Saints.—The latter word does not appear to be in statu constructo with the former, or the genitive case after it. The Saints were the people or subjects of this wide-extended empire, of which the Jewish Theocracy might have been a sort of emblem. The Jews are called God’s saints in Ps. cxlviii. 14, and cxlix. 5.

lasting kingdom, and all the potentates shall be subject and obedient to it.

- 28 Hitherto is the end of the matter. As to me Daniel, my thoughts much disturbed me, and the brightness of my countenance was changed upon me, yet I kept the matter in my heart.

See Heb. xii. 28. Calmet refers this passage to Jesus Christ and his Church, and not to the Maccabees ; although in general a favourer of the narrow and confined interpretation of these prophecies.

28 — my thoughts much disturbed me.—So Chap. viii. 27. Communications from the Deity have generally been attended with a like effect on mankind : Moses hid his face, because he was afraid to look upon God ; Exod. iii. 6, and Ezekiel fell on his face when he saw the glory of Jehovah, and heard the divine voice speaking unto him ; Chap. i. 26. The Disciples also fell on their faces and were sore afraid, when they heard the voice at our Lord's transfiguration. Mat. xvii. 6.

— yet I kept the matter in my heart.—“Rem vero diligentem memoriæ mandavi.” Dathius. He laid it up in his mind, that he might frequently reflect upon it, and faithfully record it. The former part of this verse Theodoret interprets thus ; “The present world shall end in this kingdom of Christ.” And the words may be rendered in this manner ; “Thus far is the final period of things,” taking the last word in a collective sense, so that the reference might be to the consummation of all things.

I have already observed in the Prelim. Diss. that I consider this vision as a sort of summary of those that follow ; and this may account for its being written in a different language, as well as furnish a good sense for the last clause of ver. 1. A general or compendious view of these things might be all that either in prudence or propriety was then expedient to be given to the nations, for their own benefit, or that of the dispersed Israelites that resided among them ; but a more exact and particular prospect might be held out for those highly favoured people, who were to constitute the restored church of God, and from whom was to descend the promised Messiah, who was to be a light to lighten the Gentiles, and to spread salvation unto the ends of the earth.

CHAPTER VIII.

- 1 IN the third year of the reign of Belshazzar the king, a Vision appeared unto me Daniel, after that which 2 appeared unto me in the beginning. And I saw in a
-

THIS Chapter contains the Vision of the Ram and the He-goat ; or an account of the Persian and Grecian monarchies ; the explanation of the Vision by the Angel Gabriel ; the Persecutions of the Jews in the Profanation of their Temple and removal of the daily Sacrifice, and the continuance of the troubles for 2300 days, till the Sanctuary should be cleansed. It is thought also to have a farther reference to the persecutions and profanations of Antichrist.. The Chaldee language is continued no farther, but the Hebrew is resumed, and used to the end of the book.

1. — in the beginning.—The Prophet here alludes to the vision in the former chapter, which happened in the first year of Belshazzar's reign, as this did in the third. Mr. Lowth thinks this word may be rendered, " before," and refers to Chap. ix. 21 for the like usage.

2. And I saw in a Vision.—The four first words of this verse are omitted by Th. but Theodoret has them, and MS. Pachom. Th. likewise omits the words και ειδον εν οραματι after Αιλαμ, which are found in that MS. In this same MS. also are several letters erased after the word Oubal, perhaps ουλα, corresponding with the Heb. אולַי; and the like erasements appear after ουβαλ in the next verse, and at ver. 6 and 16. Syr. reads Abul-Onlai, the gate Ulai of the city. Aq. has Ubal-Ulai, and Sym. paludem Ulai.

According to the Greek of Th. it is directly asserted that the Prophet was at Susa and upon the Oubal ; or, upon the gate of that city. But perhaps the greatest difficulty is to shew how he came there. Some suspect he was sent on an embassy, or engaged in some occasional office or employment, being still in the service of the king of Babylon, as appears from ver. 27. Dr. Blayney thinks Elam was a Vision (and it happened that in my seeing I was in Shushan the Capital, which is in the province of Elam), and when I saw in the vision, I was near the river Ulai.

3 Then I lifted up my eyes and looked, and behold separate province from Persia, and a part of the Babylonish empire; and that Daniel presided over it, and had Shushan for the seat of his government. See on Jer. xlix. 34. But in the Itinerary of Benjamin of Tudela Susiana is reckoned the same province with Elam: And it seems very probable that Elam in its larger sense comprehended the whole country on either side the Eulæus, the one part of which was called Elymais, the other Susiana. Shushan, the metropolis, according to Pliny, Nat. Hist. lib. vi. was placed on this river, or rather surrounded by it, and seems to have been the capital of both parts; and though it might have been subject to Babylon when Daniel saw this vision, having been subdued by Nebuchadnezzar, might afterwards have revolted from it, and joined with the Medes and Persians in the siege of that city. Thus however we may account for Daniel's actual presence at Shushan, by supposing it a Babylonian province, if the Greek Interpreter be right in placing him really there in this third year of Belshazzar.

But the language of the original, and also of the Greek copies above mentioned as agreeing therewith, seems rather to intimate that he was there only in a vision, and the repetition of the terms vision and seeing tends to confirm this opinion. In this one verse we read; that "the Prophet saw in a vision, and in his seeing," or in his visionary idea, "he was at Shushan;" and again, "when he saw in the vision" he was on the Ulai. Cappellus thus translates, "Quum igitur contemplarer hanc visionem, accidit, ut viderer mihi esse Susis urbe regia, quæ est in Elymaide provincia, videbam igitur in illa visione, perinde ac si essem juxta fluvium Eulæum." Also two MSS. omit the word וידי "and it happened;" and the reason why Shushan might be so full in his thoughts was, that the deliverance of his captive brethren was expected from the Persian monarch. Yet Theodoret suggests, as Secker observes, that Daniel must be αἰσῶν, at the metropolis of Persia, in a vision which foretels the destruction of Persia. If his actual presence in Persia be still contended for, then the opinion of Houbigant will appear to me most just, that the Prophet was in Shushan, but in his visionary idea was near the river, so that he there stood before the river a single ram, which had horns, and the horns were lofty, but one was loftier meant to distinguish between his real and imaginary situation in the verse before us. The Author of the Revelation of St. John Considered, p. 376, supposes Daniel to be speaking of Shushan, the capital at the time he compiled his visions, after the third year of Cyrus, when the Persian dominion was established over Asia: But there is no necessity to have recourse to this supposition; as whatever may be the exact meaning of the word הַבִּירָה, Gr. τη βασις. Vulg. castro. Syr. and Ar. “the palace;” it is evident that Shushan was sufficiently distinguished in the third of Belshazzar, to be intitled to either of these appellations.

That the river Ulai or Eulæus is here meant, or that the word preceding it is to be considered as an appellative, denoting a river rather than a gate, is very probable, not only from the situation of Shushan above described, but also from this circumstance, that it was customary for the prophets to see visions, or receive communications from heaven, near the sides, or on the banks of rivers; thus Ezekiel was favoured by the river Chebar, Daniel at Chap. x. near the Hiddekel or Tigris, and John Baptist at Jordan. Pliny in his Nat. Hist. p. 622, mentions (probably from Herodotus) a remarkable circumstance of the waters of the Ulai and Choaspes, which by some are thought to be the same river, that they were so very wholesome, as to induce the Parthian kings constantly to drink of them, and to carry them with them for this purpose on distant expeditions.

3. —there stood before the river.—Many MSS. read the noun הָאוֹבֵל with ו, as at the former verse, and so at ver. 6. It is doubtless the same word that is meant in both places, and the prefix ה seems here to indicate it to be an appellative. Standing before the river is probably an allusion to the ordinary residence of the kings of Persia at Shushan on the Ulai.

—a single ram, which had horns.—Heb. “one ram;” and the Versions rightly retain the word אֶחָד, as it denotes the unity of the empire. The word קַרְנִים horns, the Masoretes have pointed as in the dual number; but the limitation is unnecessary, as the plural can here mean no more than two, and the word שְׁתֵּי is not expressed, as at ver. 7. See ver. 20, and the story of Cipus in Ovid’s Metam. lib. xv. 565, &c.

—one was loftier than the other.—The first or foremost horn was the kingdom of the Medes, the latter that of the Persians, which

- 4 than the other, and the loftiest grew up last. I saw the ram butting westward, and northward, and southward; neither could any beasts stand before him, nor could any one deliver from his power; but he did what 5 he liked, and became great. And whilst I was contemplating, behold a he-goat came from the west over the

was by far the most illustrious, or higher than the other, inasmuch that the kingdom of the Medes was as it were sunk into that of the Persians: and the kings of the Persian empire were possessed of immense riches; so that Curtius relates of Codomannus, that he had 120,000 talents in Persepolis, and 6000 at Pasargada, besides what he possessed in other cities. Curt. lib. v. c. 6. It has been often remarked from Amm. Marcellinus, lib. xix. that a ram was the royal ensign of the Persians; and that rams' heads with horns, one higher, the other lower, are still to be seen on the pillars of Persepolis; and a horn has been frequently noted to be an ensign of royalty, especially among the Phœnicians.

4. —butting westward, and northward, and southward.—Westward, i. e. subduing Babylonia, Syria, and Asia minor, under the reign of Cyrus, and extending to part of Greece under that of his successors, Darius the son of Hystaspes, and Xerxes. Northward; the same Darius, according to Herodotus and Justin, carried his arms into the territories of the Scythians, beyond the Caspian sea; and the Lydians, Armenians, Cappadocians, Iberians, &c. were subject to Persia. Southward; the Persians extended their conquests over Arabia, India, Egypt, and Ethiopia, which last was entered by Cambyses, the son and successor of Cyrus; and the Persian empire was very much enlarged and extended under the victorious arms of its first monarchs.

5.—a he-goat came from the west.—Hircus caprarum. Vir gregis. But two MSS. have not the word דָּעִי, “caprarum;” At ver. 21, it is “the goat, the shaggy one,” or the chief goat. Cappellus thinks the expression in this place alludes to the youth or tender years of Alexander; and, as there seems no occasion for such allusion at ver. 21, this may account for the change. The Macedonians are called Ægeades from Αἴγος; see Just. l. vii. and from the same author we learn, that the goat since their king Caranus was the arms of Macedon. Bp. Chandler, in his Vindication, p. 154, observes, that princes and nations, being of old painted by their symbols, which Procopius calls surface of the whole earth, without touching the ground, and the goat had a conspicuous horn between γνωρίσματα, they came afterwards to be distinguished by writers with the names of their symbols, as by their proper appellations. “Yet Alexander derived himself from Jupiter Ammon, and “he and his successors had two rams’ horns on their coins, the very description of the former beast.” But this happened not till after he had subdued Egypt; when, being lord of Persia, he might adopt her arms or ensigns for his own. In respect of Persia, Macedon or Greece is to the west; but the Greek Interpreter reads απο Λιβος, from the south-west, or Libya; I suppose alluding to the Temple of Jupiter Ammon, which was in those parts, and which Alexander visited, in order to claim his descent from thence. Dr. Newton observes, that Alexander’s son by Roxana was named Ægus, or the son of the goat, and that some of his successors are represented in their coins with goats’ horns. Vol. ii. p. 28.

—without touching the ground.—“Theodoret saith, only some copies have this clause; he saith also, that a like clause was found in the fourth verse. Some understand it of Alexander’s swiftness, for which he hath wings ascribed to him in Chap. vii. Compare Camilla in Virgil. Syr. translates נכר, ‘hurt not,’ and so the word is used Ps. cv. 15, with the same preposition after it as here. And Alexander was a mild conqueror.” Secker.

‡ As the former expression, “over the face of the whole earth,” intimates the great extent of his conquests, so this denotes the rapidity of them, or the short space of time in which the whole were effected. But it should be observed that the words may be rendered more agreeably to the Syriac, “and no one, or nothing, touched, or hindered him in the earth;” i. e. he met with no impediment or material molestation.

—a conspicuous horn.—“קֶרֶן חֲזוּת בֵּין. θεωρητον αναμεινον. Cod. Alex. Ald. Theodor. επισημον αναμεινον. Compl. μεσον. Ed. Rom. Th. insigne inter. Vulg. בית מתחזיא Syr.” τραγω εκεινω κερας εν θεωρητον αναμεινον των—MS. Pachom. Cappellus would give to the word חֲזוּת the signification of winding, sinuosus, or perplexus; but Michaelis derives it from the root חזן, or the Arab. خنز transfixit, and would here, and at ver. 8, give it the sense of acutus, or a penetrating horn, piercing through all things. I have followed the more usual sense. This conspicuous or piercing horn, we read at ver. 21, 6 his eyes. And he came to the ram that had horns, which I saw standing before the river, and ran at him 7 in the heat of his strength. And I saw him coming close up to the ram, when he rushed furiously upon him, and smote the ram, and broke both his horns;

 neither was there any strength in the ram to stand before him, but he threw him down upon the ground, and trampled on him, nor could any deliver the ram is the first king; or rather, as Sir Isaac Newton suggests, Obs. c. ix. p. 116, the first kingdom, continued through the life of Alexander, that of his brother Aridæus, and his two sons Alexander and Hercules. Yet Abp. Secker seems of opinion, that King is meant here in the same sense as at Chap. xi. 3, 4, where the pronoun his refers it to Alexander only.

6. —he came to the ram that had horns.—Heb. “the lord or possessor of horns.” The suddenness and rapidity of Alexander’s invasion of the Persians is pointed at in a most striking manner in this verse, and part of the next. Bp. Newton thinks we can scarcely read these words without having some image of Darius’s army standing and guarding the river Granicus, and of Alexander on the other side with his forces plunging in, swimming across the stream, and rushing on the enemy with all imaginable fire and fury. Vol. ii. p. 31.

7.—and broke both his horns—Subdued the Medo-Persian empire, both parts of which were united in Cyrus. The expression at this verse וַיִּתְמַרְמֶר very strongly indicates the precipitancy and vindictive temerity of Alexander, and the success that attended him; “he rushed furiously” upon him, like a person affected with bile or choler, after all the fences and resistances in his way to him were overpowered and destroyed. He had also several close engagements with the king of Persia, beside that at the Granicus; as at the Straits of Issus in Cilicia, and in the plains of Arbela in Assyria, where he entirely subdued the whole united strength of Persia, and destroyed the castle at Susa by fire. See Diodorus Sic. lib. xvii. and Curtius, lib. v. cap. 7, 8. And at length Darius the Persian Monarch was himself seized, imprisoned, and slain; and thus the kings of Grecia, or the He-goat, threw down the Ram, or the powers of Persia, upon the ground, and trampled on them.

8 from his power. Then the he-goat increased to a very great degree, and as he grew strong, the great horn was broken, and there arose four conspicuous ones 9 instead of it towards the four winds of heaven. And

8. —the great horn was broken.—Intimating a sudden and total demolition. Alexander, as well as several of his nearest relations, died suddenly; he was broken in pieces like an earthen vessel, and this proud Son of Ammon, in the midst of his turgid boastings, was taken off at once, probably of a fever, in Babylon.

—there arose four conspicuous ones instead of it.—A great number of MSS. and some Edit. omit the Jod in תַּעֲלִינָה, “there arose.” MS. Pachom. has τεσσαρα κερατα, and so Vulg. Syr. follows the present text. Th. reads ετερα κερατα τεσσαρα, “four other horns;” perhaps for חזורת he found אֲחֵרֹת. “Michaelis saith, Quaternarius quidem numerus, si historia regni Græcorum spectatur, difficultibus suis non caret. See Phocius’s Abstract of Arrian’s ten books about the division of Alexander’s Empire, and Raderus’s Tables in Rook’s translation of Arrian. Appian in his preface saith, that Alexander’s kingdom exceeded all the former, but for the shortness of its duration was a bright lightning, and when it was dissolved into many satrapies ἐπι πλειστον ἐξέλαμπε τα μερη, ‘the portions long retained the original splendour.’ Then, after describing the wealth and power of the Egyptian kings, he adds, ‘Many things appeared in the other satrapies not inferior to these.’ Secker. He thinks also that the word חזורת “conspicuous” should be understood at Chap. vii. and Chap. xi.

It is certain from ver. 22, that the four horns of the he-goat are four kingdoms, which should arise out of the Grecian empire, after the first horn or kingdom was broken and demolished. Now Grotius will have these to be four Commanders, that after the death of Alexander managed the affairs of the empire; Perdiccas, who had the command of the Macedonian cavalry, Seleucus of the external or foreign; Meleager and Ptolemy, the former of whom presided over the royal guards, the latter over the foot forces. But Grotius certainly confines the signification of the word horns to very narrow limits; “Cornua ubique hic sunt reges,” ver. 7. And yet at ver. 22, the angel interprets them of kingdoms. And we must look therefore after four kingdoms for the right explanation of this place. Jerom names the four monarchs as follow, Ptolemy, Philip Aridaeus, Seleucus, and Antigonus; some put Antipater and his son Cassande from one of these came out a single horn, a small one,

for Philip. And however uncertain and various might be the divisions of this kingdom, and although we find that other lesser sovereignties were set up for a time, and that Demetrius reigned about six years, and wore a crown as well as his father Antigonus, yet after the defeat of Antigonus and Demetrius, and the death of the former at the battle of Ipsus in Phrygia, the four princes or sovereigns by a mutual league were Ptolemy, Cassander, Lysimachus, and Seleucus; the former of whom, according to Sir Isaac Newton, Obs. c. iv. p. 30, and most interpreters, reigned over Egypt, Libya, Arabia, Cœlosyria and Palestine; Cassander over Macedon, Greece, and Epirus; Lysimachus over Thrace and Bithynia; and Seleucus over Babylon, Syria, and the rest of the empire. And these four horns were also the four heads of the Leopard, Chap. vii. 6, and their government reached towards the four winds of heaven; to Egypt on the south, Thrace and the lesser Asia on the north, Babylonia and Syria on the east, and Greece on the west. This division, or these conspicuous horns, continued for several years, having been first established about eleven years after the commencement of the æra of the Seleucidæ, which was dated from the time that Seleucus retook Babylon from Antigonus, or about the year 312 before the vulgar Christian æra; which æra of contracts, as it was also called, was made use of by Jews, and persons of all persuasions throughout the East and continued till upwards of a thousand years after Christ. See Dr. Prideaux's Con. p. i. b. 8. Diod. Sic. l. xx. Polyb. l. v. p. 410.

9. —came out a single horn, a small one.—Two or three MSS. read יצאה to agree with the noun קרן, which is most commonly feminine, and followed by the feminine adjective אחת in this place. From the kingdom of Syria or the Seleucidæ came Antiochus, who is usually reckoned “the single horn, the small one,” מצעירה; but Th. explains the word by ισχυρον, “the strong one,” and Ar. follows him. Perhaps they found in their copies עצומה. The MSS. vary a little, and one especially places the מ at some small distance before the next letter. But the word צעיר is sometimes referred to princes and heroes, as appears from a note of Dr. Hammond's on Matt. ii. 6. Thus at Jer. xlviii. 4, Rabbi Tanchum renders צעיריה, “his princes and governors,” and so the Chald. Paraph. And Ebn Jannahium, a learned grammarian, assigns contrary significations to this word, and cites Zech. xiii. 7, where הצעירים signifies nobles and princes; and the Syr. translates superiors, and the Arab. pastors or rulers. If we which grew exceeding great towards the south, and 10 towards the east, and towards the glorious land: Also it grew up even to the host of heaven, and when it had retain the present sense, we must apply the epithet to Antiochus in the earlier part of his life, as he was a younger brother, a contemptible person, see Chap. xi. and a sort of captive at Rome; and although he was termed Epiphanes, or the Illustrious, afterwards, yet by Polybius he is called Epimanes, or the mad man. He extended his dominion toward the south, where he attacked Ptolemy Philometer, king of Egypt, and took a part of his kingdom; and toward the east, where he conquered Armenia, and penetrated to Persia; ואל צבי, “and to the pleasant land,” or the land of Judea, where was the temple or house of God, and where the Messiah was to appear, called elsewhere “the glory of all lands.” Ezek. xx. 6 and 15. See also Ps. xlviii. 2, and cvi. 24.

“Non valde discrepat צביון א צבי. Conf. ver. 4. Omittit Syr. f. ut alibi quia non intellexit. και προς την δυναμιν Th. fortitudinem; alibi sic reddit צבא.—δυσω, Chrys. Compl. Arab. male.—Judea (as Babylon צבי of the kingdoms, Isa. xiii. 19.) et ארץ צבי Dan. xi. 41, quo modo f. hic legendum. Sed f. etiam ארץ צבי pro ארץ צבי, ut supra חזות pro קרן חזות, et C. ix. 23, איש חמורות pro חמורות, and though Judea is meant in the next verse, yet such repetition is not uncommon in Scripture. Michaelis also observes that his magnifying himself against the host of heaven, or people of God as such, is more than conquering Judea.” Secker.

10. Also it grew up even to the host of heaven.—Th. εμεγαλυνθη. In marg. MS. Pachom. legitur ὁ Αντιχ. Yet it may be proper to observe, that it is still a horn of the same he-goat, or a monarch of the Grecian kingdom. See 1 Mac. i. 10. This clause may be understood as generally pointing out the aspiring nature of this usurping power, that would swell to such a pitch as to exceed all imaginable authority, so as to reach the stars, according to Obad. iv. or to ascend into heaven, above the stars, and to exalt his throne like the king of Babylon, in Isa. xiv. 13. And in the 2 Mac. ix. 10, Antiochus is described as the man that thought he could reach to the stars of heaven.

The language that follows in this verse is, by an usual and familiar metaphor in Scripture, applicable to the Jews, or the then true Church thrown down to the ground some of the host and of the 11 stars, it trampled upon them. Moreover against the

---

of God. Isa. xxiv. 21, "the host of the high ones that are on high," is probably explained by Vitrina of the Jewish rulers and people. God's people have their city in heaven, and shine, οι φωστῆρες, in the world. See Chap. xii. 3, and Rev. i. 20, where the angels or governors of the churches are called stars. The priests and levites, like the angels, were also continually waiting on the service of the King of Heaven in the temple, as of old, in the tabernacle; see Numb. viii. 24, and these were that part of the host, or the holy people, or people of the holy God, as at ver. 24, that were thrown down and trampled on. Spencer, in his treatise de Leg. Heb. l. i. c. 4, p. 202, takes notice that the Scripture often borrows expressions from military affairs, to accommodate itself to the use of the tabernacle; and hence is the frequent use of the term צבא "host." So the people of God are יהודה צבאות; the Levites are said to enter לְצִבָּא "ad exercitum," or according to LXX. λειτουργεῖν; and especially in this and the next verse, "the host of heaven, and prince of the host," he thinks must refer to the body of the priests, who exercised the offices of their warfare under the standards of the Deity. Now Antiochus overthrew some of the most celebrated luminaries amongst the leaders of the Jewish people, and reduced them to the lowest disgrace.

11. —against the Prince of the host was it magnified.—The language is similar to that at the beginning of the last verse, and may possibly mean, that in his own opinion he grew as great as the prince of the host; or, according to 2 Mac. ix. 8–12, he thought himself equal to a god. See Jer. xlviii. 26. But perhaps the expression, in conformity to the metaphor commenced at the latter part of ver. 10, may rather be referred to the high priest of the Jews, whom Antiochus deposed, and substituted the worthless Jason in the place of the good Onias; if the term שר צבא does not rather mean, as also שר שרים at ver. 25, either God himself, according to Jerom and Theodoret, or else Christ, who is called in the Revelations "king of kings, and lord of lords," and is the high priest over the house of God, or the sanctuary. Now God or Christ may be opposed by ill usage of their people, or opposing the designs of Providence. And in this and the next verse the vision seems to look beyond the type to the usurpations of Antichrist.

Prince of the host was it magnified, and from him was taken away the daily sacrifice, and the place of his 12 sanctuary profaned. And a host was set up against —from him was taken away.—Heb. ממנו. Gr. reads δι' αὐτον, by him, and gives a quite different turn to the whole of this verse, and part of the next. I follow Vulg. and Syr. A great number of MSS. concur with the Masora in reading הורם in the passive, and I have followed them in the translation. By the daily sacrifice, or continual burnt offering, Exod. xxix. 42, may be meant the whole customary worship. Antiochus erected in the temple a statue to Jupiter Olympius, deservedly esteemed the abomination of desolation, and thus magnified himself against God, to whom the sacrifice and sanctuary were appropriated. The Gr. Interpreter reads at the beginning of this verse, εως ου ο αρχιστρατηγος ρυσσεται την αιχμαλωσιαν, and MS. Pachom. has the following words before these, και εως αρχοντος της δυναμειως ηδρυνθη. “And he should be hardened, or ferocious, against the prince of the host, until the chief ruler, captain of the host, should deliver the captivity.” It seems evident that both had an eye to one event of the prediction, the deliverance by Christ; and the latter part of the verse has a sense conformable with the beginning; but I know not how the present Heb. Text could be made to agree with the Greek of either copy.

—the place of his sanctuary profaned.—One MS. has והושלך; two MSS. מכון מקום. The passage may admit of this rendering, “And the foundation of his sanctuary was thrown down;” or “the place—was cast off.”

12. And a host was set up, &c.—One MS. reads וצבאו, “And his host,” i. e. of Antiochus. The host probably alludes to the garrison of Antiochus, which he placed in the citadel that he had built near the temple, in order to secure his own Idol-worship, and prevent the worship of the true God. 1 Mac. i. 33—44. Archbishop Secker intimates, that it might be translated, “And the host was placed, on account of the daily sacrifice, in a state of sin:” So Exod. v. 19, “they saw they were ברע in a bad state;” and thus תנתן בפשע here will answer to לתת מרמס at verse 13. See 2 Mac. iv. 14. Grotius renders בפשע “per scelus,” by a daring act of villainy; and I think this the better sense. See on Chap. ix. 24. That צבא masc. should be joined with תנתן fem. H. Michaelis thinks less strange, as the plur. is צבאות.

the daily sacrifice by a bold transgression, and it cast down the truth to the ground, yet it wrought and prospered. Then I heard one Saint speaking, and —it cast down the truth.—Or the law of God. Ps. cxix. 142, for he burnt the books of the law, as appears from 1 Mac. i. 5, 6, and yet while he was employed in his wickedness, Antiochus for a time had prosperous success.

---

I have hitherto explained the little horn as relating to Antiochus, agreeably to the sense of most interpreters, at least of the ancient ones: but there is a modern opinion, and well supported, especially by the Greek copies, that refers it rather to the Roman state, which arose in the north-west part of those nations which composed the body of the Goat, and was very small in the beginning, but became very great afterwards; and this by a power not borrowed from the goat, or not his own power. This little horn of the third kingdom greatly oppressed the saints, or the people of God; and in this respect certainly the three last verses were eminently fulfilled by the Romans. In the following parts of the chapter I shall occasionally have an eye to this sense, which I am convinced is here in some measure intended, and must refer the reader for a more full illustration to the authors that will be mentioned as supporting it.

13. —one Saint speaking, and another Saint said unto that excellent one that was speaking.—Saint means angel, and is the same word that is given to the Eir or watcher at Chap. iv. 13. “Speaking;” that is perhaps, explaining in words some of the things which Daniel had last related. Mr. Lowth intimates that the participle מְדַבֵּר used here twice with respect to this same person, has probably a reference to the Λόγος, or “Word of God;” and the participle in the second place has the emphatic ה prefixed. “To the excellent one.” Heb. לְפָלְמוֹנִי. The word is divided in Ruth iv. 1, where the two words apply to a person; as in 1 Sam. xxi. 3, and in 2 Kings vi. 8, they do to a place unnamed, unless, as Buxtorf and Kimchi think, the word place adjoining should in the last instance confine them to a person. The Gr. has φελομοννι, retaining the original, and so LXX. and Aquila. Vulg. nescio cui. Syr. Ar. and Sym. cuidam. The word seems to denote some extraordinary personage, probably the same as issued his mandate to Gabriel at verse 16; see also Chap. xii. 8. According to its original meaning and the marginal rendering it is, “the numberer another Saint said unto that excellent one that was speaking, How long will be the Term of the vision of the daily sacrifice, and the transgression that maketh desolate, exposing both the sanctuary and the host to 14 be trampled on? And he answered him, until two thousand and three hundred days, when the sanctuary shall be cleansed.

of secrets," or "the wonderful numberer;" from פלא "wonderful," a word attributed to the Messiah, Isa. ix. 6, and מנה "to number." Junius and Tremellius apply it to the Son of God, the eternal Wisdom, and Word of the Father, qui occulta in numerato habet; See Glass. Phil. p. 644, 4to. and the nature of the request seems to justify this interpretation.

—How long will be the Term of the vision. &c.—Literally, to how long, or how distant a period, will be the vision. Mr. Lowth thinks, that agreeably to the Gr. Ar. and Vulg. Versions we may render thus, "For how long a time shall the vision last, the daily sacrifice be taken away, and the transgression of desolation continue?" But although the Versions may seem to favour this rendering, yet there are no words in the Heb. for "taken away" and "continue." I rather think the inquiry is only into the duration of the vision; and that the other words are added by way of explaining what the vision is, namely, "of the daily sacrifice, and of the transgression of desolation (see on verse 11,) and of the sanctuary and host," or its attendant ministers, "being suppressed and trampled on:" This at least appears to be the primary intention of the question. I must beg leave to add, that the Versions join the word תת to the preceding clause, to give the transgression, that maketh desolate; yet I suspect the letters were originally תת, and joined to the foregoing word thus, שמתת, "and the transgression of desolation, and the sanctuary," &c., as I have just explained it.

14. And he answered him.—Heb. אלו answered me, i. e. Daniel; but the Versions read him, and probably found אלו, referring the answer to the angel that asked the question; I think this the best sense, and have therefore followed it.

—until two thousand and three hundred days.—Heb. until the evening (and) morning 2300. I insert the word and because the Vau is found at verse 26, where the expression is repeated, which Mr. Dimock has also observed; nor do I know any place where it occurs

15 Now it happened that when I Daniel had seen the

---

without the intermediate γ, and the Versions here have the copulative. Sym. has 2400 days; and so the Greek Interpreter; but this I suspect is a mistake of τετρακοσιαι for τριακοσιαι, which last word we find in MS. A. in the London Polyglott, and also in MS. Pachom. and Copt. The νυχθημερον of the Greeks is probably the same expression with this before us, and denotes a natural day, or space of 24 hours; see Gen. i. and Matt. xii. 40, and I am inclined to think this vēsp̄ra-mane should induce us to understand these days in the first instance literally, rather than of months and years.

But the great difficulty is to reconcile this term of 2300 days with the period to which it has been usually referred, under the tyranny of Antiochus. The account appears to be very plausible, which refers it to a portion of time that passed between some part of the 145th and 148th years of the kingdom of the Seleucidæ. Josephus allows only three years, or, at most, three years and a half, for the desolation of the temple, and the taking away of the daily sacrifice. See Proem. de Bell. Jud. Sect. 7. and Ant. xii. 5 and 11, and he is thought to refer to that chief abrogation of the sacred rites which is begun, 1 Mac. i. 31, and soon after which followed the erection of the statue and its worship, in the Temple, ver. 54—57. And in order to reconcile this to the time here mentioned, it is presumed that the Nychthemeron must be considered in its divided state, and that the 2300 must refer to the sacrifices, to the evening and morning sacrifice of the Jews, for which 1150 days only would be required; which number divided by 365 will give three years and 55 day. For the three years see 1 Mac. i. 54, and iv. 52, and for ten days, see Chap. i. verse 59, so that from the 15th day of the month Cisleu, in the 145th year, when the abomination was set up on the altar, and to which on the 25th they did sacrifice, were just three years and ten days, till the 25th of Cisleu, in the 148th year, when Judas had cleansed the sanctuary, and directed the sacrifice to be offered according to the law of God, or, as the Hebrew is, “had justified,” or restored it to its proper state and use. Moreover, for the remaining 45 days a space must be allowed after the publication of the order for the first profanation and the execution of it, while the altar was building under the direction of Apollonius, and the daily sacrifice disused: Mr. Mede, by extending this previous time, would carry it back as far as to the six years and upwards, or 2300 full days, that is, a little before Antiochus first went up to Jerusalem, 1 Mac. i. 20. See his Works, B. iii. p. 659.

vision, and had sought information, behold there stood

---

Cappellus reckons the time to commence with the profanation of the Temple by Antiochus, An. U. C. 586. Novemb. 17, Cisleu 15, and to terminate on the day on which Judas Maccabæus conquered and slew Nicanor, An. U. C. 593, Adar or Dystr. 13, Mart. 6, which comprehends, as he says, a space of 2300 days precisely. But Archbishop Secker suggests, that instead of אֶלְפִים it might have been אֶל, before final letters were used, and the remaining י might have been a part of ימים, which might have been put over by way of interpretation of עֶרֶב בֶּקֶר, and have crept into the text, or possibly have belonged to the text, and shortened. Now 1300, reading אֶל, will be between the two numbers of Daniel, Chap. xii. viz. 1290 and 1335. And this at 360 days will be three years, seven months, and ten days, not very far distant from the three years and a half of Josephus. Michaelis agrees with Gejerus, that perhaps we cannot count these days, nor those in Dan. xii. exactly, but in the time of Antiochus they could, when it was most needful. Th. Vulg. and Ar. have the word "days," which tends to strengthen this ingenious conjecture.

It must however be remembered, that many interpreters, and with great reason, understand these days in the same sense in which days are generally understood by this prophet, for years; and thus refer the prophecy to Antichrist, of whom Antiochus was a type. This will carry us on to a still distant time in the Church of God, to the completion of that opposition to the Church of Christ, which has been wished for long since, when the sanctuary will be perfectly cleansed, and to which the 1290 and 1335 years of the 12th Chap. must have a reference. Sir Isaac Newton, Obs. ch. 9, not only reckons the days to be years, but will have the horn to be Rome, and does not refer it at all to Antiochus; and in this he is followed in a great measure by Bp. Newton, who makes the years commence from the time of Alexander's invading Asia, or 334 before Christ, and thus to end with near the sixth millennium of the world: Diss. xv.—To these observations it may be added, that a day is often used both in sacred and profane writings for an indeterminate portion of time. The day of temptation in the wilderness was forty years, Heb. iii. 8, 9. The day of the Lord is the time of judgment: And the apostle St. Paul, speaking of man's judgment, calls it ἀνθρωπινή ημέρα, "the day of man," in opposition, as it should seem, to "the day of the Lord." 1 Cor. iv. 3. So, Opinionum commenta delet dies. And it has been observed, that a

- 16 before me like the appearance of a man. And I heard a human voice over the Ulai, which called aloud and 17 said, Gabriel, explain to this man the vision. Then he came near to me as I stood, and when he came, I fell down affrighted on my face; but he said unto me, Understand, son of man, for to the time of the end will 18 be the vision. Moreover as he was talking with me, I sunk flat into a swoon upon the ground, when he 19 touched me and set me upright. Then he said, behold
 I will explain to thee, what shall be in the latter end good rule to judge what portion of time may be designed by such indeterminate expressions, is to consider what is necessary or proportional to the season spoken of.
-

17. — son of man.—We have the like expression Ezek. ii. 1, and Chap. iii. 1, 3, 4, either to remind him of human frailty, or to denote a person especially distinguished. See Ps. viii. 4.

— for to the time of the end will be the vision.—The most usual sense of this clause is, by an Hendiadys, to understand “the time of the end” for a definite time, when the vision will be accomplished. But the Greek Interpreter has εις καιρου περας, and the Arab. follows him. Possibly the expression is of like import with “the fulness of time,” Gal. iv. 4, or with “the last days,” Heb. i. 1, or “the end of times,” Heb. ix. 26, and may have a reference to the times of the gospel. There is an expression somewhat similar to this, Ezek. xxxv. 5, where LXX render by επ’ εσχάτων. Purver translates, “the end of the vision will be at the time,” and notes, that Pagninus and Munster do the same.

19. — what shall be in the latter end of the indignation.—Perhaps, at its greatest extremity, in the times of Antiochus; see ch. xi. 30. Mr. Lowth would rather read to the latter end (which Syr. seems to favour), and thus interpret it of the whole series of God’s judgments upon his people, to the end of them. MS. Pachom. after the words επ’ εσχάτων της οργης adds, τοis υιοis του λαου σου. The Prophet had doubtless a regard to the captivity in the first place; and therefore beginning from this, the angel hints at a sort of epitome of the evils which would accrue to the posterity of God’s chosen people, till their iniquity was taken away, and their sin purged, when the indignation would be overpast. Isai. xxvi. 20.

of the indignation, for at the time appointed there shall be an end.

- 20 The Ram which thou sawest with horns is the kings 21 of Media and Persia. And the fierce goat is the king of Grecia, whereof the great horn, which was between 22 his eyes, is the first king. But this was broken, and there arose four in its stead, so four kingdoms shall be erected out of the nation, yet not with his strength.
 23 And in the latter end of their kingdom, when iniquities

21. —the king of Grecia.—Rather, “the kingdom,” and so at ver. 20. Heb. יין from Javan the son of Japheth; Gen. x. 2. The whole states of Greece were sometimes called Iaones, and the sea which washes their borders is the Ionian Sea. Yet there seems to have been a distinction made by the Hebrews between the Peloponnesian and the Ionian Greece; but Macedonia certainly belonged to the latter; and Alexander might with the greatest propriety be styled the first king of Ion, as he was the first and chief who subdued the Medo-Persic, and established the Grecian empire.

22. —four kingdoms shall be erected out of the nation, yet not with his strength.—“But not of his blood.” Mr. Godwin; See Gen. xlix.

3. “The verb יַעֲמִדנָה is what the Jews call ανδραγαθια, of which sort Buxtorf hath very few.” Secker. But one MS. reads יַעֲמִדנָה, which is probably right. The Versions read, “out of his nation,” the Grecian; see ver. 8, but Copt. has, de throno ejus. “Yet not with his strength:” the Greek has αυτων, but MS. A. in Lond. Polyg. and MS. Pachom. αυτου. Arab. has “of unequal strength;” far inferior, when divided, was each power to that of the parent state, or the dominion of Alexander the Great.

23. And in the latter end of their kingdom.—When their power was diminishing, and the Roman empire beginning to be established; for Æmilius the consul having subjugated Perscus king of Macedonia, all Greece became subject to the Roman yoke about 166 years before Christ; in which year Antiochus set up the abomination of desolation, within less than three months after this encroachment of the fourth kingdom. See Mr. Mede, p. 654. Now the reduction of Greece, the original and principal seat of the third kingdom, might justify the expression, “in the latter time, or end, of their kingdom;” but it is shall be full, there shall arise a king of an obdurate countenance, and penetrating in mysterious craft :

observable also, that the four horns or kingdoms had long been reduced to two principal ones, Syria and Egypt. Antiochus had attempted to gain the latter, and had marched towards Alexandria to besiege that city, the conquest of which would have made him absolute master of the whole kingdom ; but in order to prevent his success, Ptolemy Euergetes and his sister Cleopatra had sent ambassadors to the Romans to beg their relief ; and when Popilius was deputed by the senate to go into Egypt, he proposed terms to Antiochus, which he was obliged to accept, and obey the commands of the senate. Thus both Syria and Egypt became in some sort vassals to Rome. See Prid. Con. p. ii. b. 3. Archb. Secker observes, that the kingdom of Syria did not last so long after Antiochus as before him : But Mr. Mede has alleged testimonies from the Roman historians themselves, from L. Florus and Vell. Paternulus, to prove that the Roman empire took its rise about the time of Antiochus. Compare his Works, B. iv. p. 797, with 1 Mac. ch. viii.

—when iniquities shall be full.—Gr. πληρουμένων. Comp. Mat. xxiii. 32. But seven MSS. read הפושעים, “the transgressors,” and so Eng. Transl. the sense is much the same. Here is the reason why God suffered these judgments to fall on his people, the iniquity and apostasy of the Jews had risen to a very great height ; and the like reasons may be presumed to be usually productive of the like consequences. For an account of the evils inflicted by Antiochus, see 1 Mac. i, Joseph. Ant. 12, 6, and Prid. ubi supra. Some will have these rebellions of the Jews to be meant by the transgression of desolation or astonishment.

—a king of an obdurate countenance.—This is a very just character of Antiochus, according to Diodorus, Polybius, lib. v, Livy, lib. iv, and all the historians. And such a character may be presumed to belong to Antichrist, who would be “acquainted with all the depths of Satan.” Rev. ii. 24. I must confess that this part of the interpretation appears to me to agree better with Antiochus than with the Romans ; when interpreted of the latter it is understood to mean a warlike and politic state, if it be not rather applicable to the Roman pontificate.

—penetrating in mysterious craft.—“Rex omnis doli peritus.”

24 And his power shall be strengthened, but not with his own strength; yet he shall make astonishing havoc, and shall be successful; wherefore he shall proceed,

Michaelis. And he would derive the word חֲדִידָה from the Arab. حَيْد declinavit, deflexit. I rather think it has some reference also to the ænigmatical or mysterious sense from חֲדָד, whence Chald. אֲחִידָן “ænigmas” at Chap. v. 12. I have rendered here “mysterious craft,” to include both senses.

24. And his power shall be strengthened, but not with his own strength.—The latter clause וְלֹא בִכְחוֹ is not in the text of Theodotion, of the Rom. Ed. or in Iren. but it is in MS. Pachom. and Alex. in the Arab. Copt. and other Versions.

As the character in the last verse seemed to agree best with Antiochus, this verse, on the other hand, is thought to suit best with the Romans; which, though a horn or kingdom of the he-goat, did not derive its chief support from thence, but from Italy. The above Author of the Revelation of St. John Considered says, “the dragon gave him his power, his seat, and great authority.” Rev. xiii. 2. And it is evident from Chap. xvii. 13, that the kings of the earth were to give their power and strength unto the beast. But still, if we consider the passage with respect to the Jewish nation, Antiochus was certainly much favoured in his designs by a factious party of the Jews themselves, by the treachery of the Jewish people, according to Josephus, and, according to Appian, the perfidy of others. Eumenes king of Pergamus and his brother Attalus, being jealous of the Romans, desired to make the king of Syria their friend, and supported Antiochus in his kingdom. The divine displeasure also against the Jews operated to the furtherance of his designs, who was herein an agent of the vindictive justice of God.

—wherefore he shall proceed.—This and the foregoing verb are omitted in Copt. They are joined together at ver. 12, but in an inverted order. Syr. connects this verb with the following clause, and I think very properly. עַם קֳדְשֵׁי at the end of the verse may be rendered “the people of the holy God,” the noun plural being sometimes applied to the Deity; but some think it means only “the common people,” contrasted to the mighty ones, or the superior sort, mentioned just before. Gr. has λαον αγιον. So Iren. and Ar. Grotius observes from Josephus, xii. 7, that men of the greatest reputa-

- and destroy the mighty ones, and the people of the 25 saints. Also the yoke of his policy shall cause even fraud to prosper in his hand, and he shall be elated in his heart, and in times of tranquillity shall destroy multitudes; even against the prince of princes shall he stand up, but without any power shall he be broken

tion and most generous spirit among the Jews paid no regard to Antiochus, and therefore were harassed daily, and died under the most bitter torments.

25. Also the yoke of his policy shall cause even fraud to prosper.—“The Greek Interpreter has, και ὁ ζυγος του κλοιου αυτου, with which Iren. agrees; שכל in Arab. signifies ‘a fetter or shackle.’ Cast. 9th signif. and Th. omits ו in ויהצליו—cause deceit to prosper.” Secker. One MS. omits בידו “in his hand.” The character which Grotius gives Antiochus may serve to throw light on this difficult passage. “He had no regard to piety or integrity, to any true or false God, but measured all things by the rule of his own convenience: He certainly deceived many nations, and by his flatteries and frauds obtained as well as enlarged his dominion, and under the colour of peace or pretended tranquillity he oppressed the unwary, and destroyed multitudes.” See 1 Mac. i. 30.

—even against the prince of princes shall he stand up.—“Gr. has, επι απωλειας πολλων. So Rom. Complut. Alex. Arab.—שר רבים—שררן ושררן. ολοθρευω. sæpe—pro שר שרים. And the next clause Th. reads, ως ωα χειρι συντριψει. ביצה ovum, testiculus, שש testiculus, and according to Schlind. ovum.” Secker. But MS. Pachom. reads the first clause agreeably to the present Heb. Text, and as it affords a most excellent sense corresponding with the vision at ver. 10—12; and the sense of Th. is already contained in the preceding clause, there can be no occasion for an alteration. The like in a great measure may be observed concerning the latter clause; and if it be referred to the sudden and untimely end of Antiochus, 2 Mac. ix. 5, the application will be strongly verified. It is observable also that Polybius and Josephus, as Dr. Prideaux has noted, p. ii. b. 3, both confirm the account which the authors of the books of Maccabees give of the death of Antiochus in a state of madness, from the apparitions and reproaches of spectres and evil spirits. And from this view of his death, after the strong expression at the end of the verse, “with a 26 down. Moreover the vision of the evening and the morning which hath been related is certainly true; but seal thou up the vision, since it is for many days.

27 Also I Daniel was deeply affected and languid for days, yet I arose and did the king's business; and though I was struck with astonishment at the vision, no one perceived it.

nothingness of hand shall he be broken," it probably is, that Mr. Godwin adds, "with melancholy."

26. — The vision of the evening and morning—is—true.—Truth itself, by a metonymy. See on ver. 14, and Chap. x. 1. The truth is certain, but must remain sealed up, or unknown, till the accomplishment. See Isa. xxiv. 22, Jer. xxxii. 14, Ezek. xxxviii. 3. The full accomplishment would probably look forward to a very distant period; and even in the earlier illustration of it which I have given above, it was a term of near 400 years from the first intimation of the vision in the third of Belshazzar, to the cleansing of the Sanctuary by Judas in the time of Antiochus.

I must not forget to observe, that in remembrance of this great mercy which God had shewed to his people, in delivering them from the tyranny and idolatry of Antiochus, a solemn feast was instituted, called Εγκαenia, or the Feast of Dedication, which was annually observed, in consequence of cleansing the Sanctuary and consecration of the Altar by Judas Maccabeus, for the space of eight days from the 25th day of the month Cisleu. 1 Mac. iv. 59. And to this St. John alludes, Chap. x. 22. "It was at Jerusalem, the feast of the dedication, and it was winter.

27. — deeply affected and languid for days.—Gr. εκοιμηθην και εμαλακισθην. concidi et ægrotavi. Michaelis suppl. Possibly the last word, יָיִם, thus situated without an adjunct, may be in the dual number, and mean "two days;" Gr. and one MS. have not the word days, but it is found in Theodoret and MS. Pachom. and two MSS. read "many days." We read in the New Test. δι' ημερων, "after days." Mark ii. i. "And none perceived that I had been thus affected and sick." Theodoret, and so Syr.

In the explication of this vision, I have referred to the usurpations of Antiochus for the primary sense of the ravages committed by the little horn; yet, at the same time, have often hinted that there are

CHAPTER IX.

1 IN the first year of Darius the son of Ahasuerus, a

---

many strong features in the vision, which favour the opinion of those who refer it to later times, under the Roman hierarchy, or the rule and dominion of Antichrist. I am of opinion, that in the spirit of prophecy both applications were meant to be comprehended; and I see no reason for not extending the prophetic visions or revelations to such events, to which by the rules of fair and just interpretation they shall be found applicable. The only sure way of knowing the meaning of a prophecy is by comparing it with the accomplishment; and if successions of events shall in more than one instance be found to agree and square exactly with a single series of predicted circumstances, I should be inclined to make the improvement as extensive as may be, consistently with truth and justice; and to acknowledge the wisdom and prescience of the divine Contriver, who is acquainted with all his works from the foundation of the world, and who could adapt human language in one form to such an admirable variety of purposes, thus “making his own strength perfect in weakness.” For an account of the different senses of prophecies see Bp. Lowth on Isa. xl. and De Sacr. Poes. Heb. Præl. xi. and other writers.

THIS Chapter contains a most affecting and ardent Prayer of Daniel, on a near view of the expiration of the Seventy Years allotted for Judah's Captivity; the success of his Prayer is pointed out at the Conclusion of it, and the Deliverance of his Brethren is communicated to the Prophet in a very extraordinary Revelation by the Angel Gabriel; but the misconduct and ingratitude of the Jews would occasion the utter Destruction of their restored City, after a period, and by reason of an event, which the Prophecy plainly indicates.

1. In the first year of Darius.—See on Chap. vi. 1. The repetition at the next verse seems emphatical. The same date is men-descendant of the Medes, who was appointed to reign

 2 over the kingdom of the Chaldeans; In the first year of his reign I Daniel considered by the books the enumeration of the years, whereof the word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah the prophet, to complete seventy 3 years for the desolations of Jerusalem. Then I looked up to the Lord God to inquire in prayer and supplica-

---

tioned at Ch. xi. 1. This Darius is said to be the son of Ahasuerus, or Astyages; and of the seed of the Medes, and therefore not Cyrus: Some think Ahasuerus was a common name for the kings of Media, as Nebuchadnezzar seems to have belonged to several kings of Babylon, and Pharaoh to many in Egypt. But see the Prelim. Diss.

2. —considered by the books.—Those rolls or records in which the prophecies of Jeremiah were written: And possibly other histories or antecedent prophecies that spoke of the captivity. See 1 Pet. 11, 12. “The enumeration of the years,” MS. A. has “days.” At the latter part of this verse the expression “to complete seventy years” is used, or rather adopted from Jer. Chap. xxv. 12, and again Chap. xxix. 10. “Vignoles, Vol. ii. p. 591, thinks these books were the two parts of Jeremiah, one of which ends Chap. xxv: For LXX place what remains in a different order. And one prophecy of the seventy years is in Chap. xxv. or the first part, and the other in Chap. xxix. Josephus ascribes to Ezekiel two books, and to Daniel several.” Secker. Daniel is calculating the term, doubtless with a view to the end of the captivity, which was now very far advanced. For the seventy years, commencing with the fourth of Jehoiakim, had reached to their fifty-first year, as we have seen at the close of Chap. iv. in the beginning of the reign of Nabonadius; to which, if we add his 17 years, we shall be carried on to the 68th year of the captivity in this first of Darius; and I suppose the whole period of seventy computation years was concluded in less than a year and half from the time of this prayer, that is, in the first year of Cyrus, or his third year according to Ptolemy, being the first that he reigned sole monarch after the death of Cyaxares.

3. —the Lord God.—One MS. has יהוה ארני, and ten read יהוה for ארני. Many MSS. also do the same at the beginning of the prayer in the next verse. And the like is observable in other parts of this chapter. The Prophet may seem perhaps, by the expression at

- 4 tions, with fasting and sackcloth and ashes. And I prayed unto Jehovah my God, and confessed and said, “O Lord, the God great and tremendous, keeping the covenant and mercy toward those that love him, 5 and toward those that keep his commandments; We have sinned, and have acted perversely, and have done wickedly, and have rebelled, so as to apostatise from the beginning of the verse, to be setting his face toward the holy city and temple, the peculiar residence of the Deity; but I rather think is meant, setting it toward heaven, or looking up, in the ordinary posture of devout prayer.

— to inquire, &c.—The Heb. idiom is somewhat peculiar, but the Greek imitates it, τον ἐξηγήσαι προσευχῇ—Houbigant thinks we should read בַּת פֶּלֶה, as at ver. 21, and so Syr.

4. —“O Lord, the God great and tremendous.—The emphatic ה is used before לֵאל and each of the epithets that follow, “the God, the great, the tremendous.” This prayer, which is occasioned by the greatest and most sincere concern for the captive Jews, is the result also of the deepest humiliation, and expressive of the strongest energies and most earnest affections. Jeremiah, at Chap. xxix. 12, had informed the people that if they prayed and sought the Lord in their foreign land, they should be heard; and Daniel performs this duty for himself and his countrymen with the greatest zeal and devotion, especially acknowledging the justice of God and their own unworthiness. See a like prayer, Nehem. i. 5, and at Chap. ix.

5. We have sinned, &c.—The several expressions used in this verse strongly denote the prophet’s deep lamentation for the accumulated iniquities of the Jews: There seems to be a kind of gradation in them, beginning first with sins in general, and rising to rebellion and apostasy. See 1 Kings viii. 47, where occur the three first verbs of this verse; the third הָרַשְׁעָנוּ, “we have done wickedly,” is rendered by Th. ηνομησαμεν, but by MS. Pachom. still stronger, ησεβησαμεν.

—so as to apostatise from thy—ordinances.—Mr. Dimock thinks with Houbigant that LXX and the other Versions read either נִסְוּ or וִסְרֵנוּ; and it is true, they render in the first person plur. after the form of all the preceding verbs; but perhaps the present reading or the infinitive absolute may furnish the true sense without any

- 6 thy commandments and from thine ordinances; And have not hearkened to thy servants the prophets, who spoke in thy name to our kings, our princes, and to 7 our fathers, and to all the people of the land. With thee, O Lord, is righteousness, but with us confusion of face, as at this day, with the men of Judah, and with the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and with all Israel that are near and that are distant, throughout all the countries whither thou hast driven them, by reason of their transgression which they have transgressed
 8 against thee. O Lord, with us is confusion of face, with our kings, with our princes, and with our fathers, 9 because we have sinned against thee. With the Lord our God are mercies and forgivenesses, although we alteration. See Bp. Lowth's note on Isai. xxi. 5. The like is observable at ver. 11 of this Chapter. For the sense here given of the last word of this verse, see the same excellent Prelate's note, Isai. xlii. 1, on the words מִשְׁפָּט and צִדְקָה.

7. —as at this day.—Eight MSS. have בְּהַיּוֹם, “as at this very day.” Gr. “as this day,” or our present punishment and demerit, shews. So at ver. 15.

—that are near and that are distant.—Those Jews and Israelites that withdrew to the neighbouring countries, as well as those that were carried into Assyria.

—by reason of their transgression.—Gr. has, ἐν ἀθεσῖα αὐτῶν ἡ ἠθετησαν. Their idolatry and rebellion against God was their crying sin, in or through which they were driven out.

8. —because we have sinned.—For אָשָׁא one MS. reads כִּי, which is of much the same import generally, but often signifies “although,” as I have rendered it at the next verse. See Gen. viii. 21, Ps. xxv. 11, and Nold. p. 371. It is observable also that Th. begins this verse with, Ὁ ἐν σοὶ Κύριε ἐστὶν ἡμῶν ἡ δικαιοσύνη καὶ, but MS. Pachom. refers the two first words to the last verse, where they are wanting, and omits the others after Κύριε, thus bringing it to the present Heb. text. The nouns in the next verse for “mercies and forgivenesses” are very strong in the Gr. οἰκτιρμοὶ and ἑλεησμοί. Compassions and propitiations. See on Chap. i. 9.

- 10 have rebelled against him ; And have not hearkened to the voice of Jehovah our God, to walk in his laws which he hath set before us by his servants the 11 prophets. Even all Israel have transgressed thy law, so as to revolt from hearkening to thy voice ; therefore the curse is poured down upon us, and the imprecation which is written in the law of Moses, the servant of 12 God, because we have sinned against him. And he hath ratified his words which he spoke against us, and against our rulers which governed us, by bringing upon us a great calamity ; for under the whole heaven

10. —by his servants.—Heb. “ by the hand, or hand-writing, of his servants ;” and so Gr. One MS. omits the word עבדין “ his servants,” but the Versions retain it. Moses must be comprehended among the prophets, as the next verse refers to him and his law. See ver. 6.

11. —the curse is poured down upon us.—The verb תתך is read נתן by two or three MSS. as if derived from נתן ; thou hast given or sent upon us ; and so Syr. but the present text is best. At the end of the verse for לו many MSS. read לך, “ against thee ;” the sense is the same : In the present text the pronoun is referred to the word “ God” just before. For the denunciations and imprecations, see Levit. xxvi and Deut. xxviii.

12. —his words which he spoke against us.—A great number of MSS. and among the rest the ancient Bodleian, concur with the Masora in dropping the Jod in דברי ; but the Versions read plurally, “ his words.” For the last clause of this verse see Ezek. v. 9, and some of the Lamentations of Jeremiah. The devastations and havoc which had been committed at different times in Jerusalem had scarcely been equalled in ancient days, but perhaps we may find some resemblance in more modern times by consulting the Abbe Clavigero’s History of Mexico : Indeed the author himself in recounting the butcheries of Cortez, and the dreadful havoc of the siege of Mexico, reminds his readers of the disasters and slaughters at the siege of Jerusalem, and finally adds, “ it appears that the slain exceeded 100,000 in number, and those who died by famine and sickness, Cortez affirms, were more than 50,000 ;” and that the city appeared one complete ruin. Cullen’s Trans. Vol. ii. p. 192.

- hath not been done like what hath been wrought upon 13 Jerusalem. As it is written in the law of Moses, is all this calamity come upon us, yet have we not deprecated the wrath of Jehovah our God, by turning from 14 our iniquities, and by attending to thy truth. Therefore hath Jehovah closely attended to the calamity, and hath brought it upon us; for Jehovah our God is righteous in all his works which he doeth, and we have not hearkened to his voice.
 15 And now, O Lord our God, who broughtest out thy people from the land of Egypt with a strong hand, and hast made thyself a name as at this day, we have
-

13. —this calamity come upon us.—So Syr. but Heb. “evil.” Several MSS. read  $\text{הבאנו}$  in Hiph. “he hath brought upon us,” as at the next verse. Yet have we not deprecated the anger, or smoothed the face, literally. See Taylor’s Concord. on  $\text{הבאנו}$ .

14. —closely attended to the calamity.—Heb. “watched over the evil.” The expression seems used in opposition to the careless security and inattention of the Jews at the close of the last verse. See the like at Jer. xxxi. 28, and xlv. 27.

15. —who broughtest out thy people from—Egypt.—At Jer. xxxii. 20, 21, the like expressions are used as at this verse. The Psalmist in Ps. lxxx. ver. 8, &c. has improved on this thought, and clothed it with some of those elegant poetic embellishments, which are the favourite style of the ancient prophets;

Thou broughtest up a vine out of Egypt,
 Thou expelledst the nations and didst plant it:
 Thou preparedst an opening before it,
 And when it was deeply rooted, it filled the land:
 The mountains were covered with its shadow,
 And the lofty cedars with its branches;
 She sent forth her shoots to the sea—the Mediterranean,
 And her suckers unto the river—the Euphrates.

In the clause that follows, “hast made thyself a name,” our Eng. Transl. of 1599 paraphrases, “hast gotten thyself renown.” See 2 Sam. viii. 13. Isai. lxiii. 12.

- 16 sinned, we have done wickedly. O Lord, according to all thy promised mercies let thine anger now be turned away, and thine indignation from thy city Jerusalem thy holy mountain; for through our sins, and through the iniquities of our fathers, Jerusalem and thy people have become a reproach to all that are 17 around us. Therefore now hearken, O our God, to the prayer of thy servant and to his supplications, and look propitious upon thy desolated Sanctuary for the 18 Lord's sake. Incline, O my God, thine ear, and

16. — according to all thy promised mercies. — Heb. צדקתך בכל. See on ver. 5. The word seems to mean here the conditional mercies of God, or his truth in fulfilling his promises. Gr. has, ἐν πάσῃ ἐλεημοσύνῃ σου. Some MSS. and Editions seem to read the word singularly by dropping the Jod: But Vulg. and Ar. join these words with the former verse; “We have done wickedly, O Lord, against all thy promised mercies;” and four MSS. of Ken. and seven of De R. read בכל. In the last verse the Prophet mentions the name or renown which the Almighty had procured to himself by his mercies; at the latter part of this he seems to contrast to it the general reproach with which his people had been overwhelmed on account of their sins.

17. — for the Lord's sake. — The Versions, למענך, “for thy sake, O Lord.” But I see no necessity for the introduction of the affix. Several MSS. have ידויה for ידני; and the Prophet seems to refer to the Messiah, the Propitiation, through whom the divine favours are granted. See Ps. lxxx. 15. Several Writers have either referred to this place for the exposition of that psalm, or to the psalm for the illustration of this passage. But the psalm is conceived to convey a very different meaning from that which our Translators in the early or later Version have given it: and as the allegory is extremely beautiful and highly poetical, I shall venture to continue the translation of it from the note at ver. 9, with the striking apostrophe that follows,

Wherefore hast thou broken down her fences,
 So that all that pass along the way crop her?
 The boar from the wood will root her up, hearken, open thine eyes, and look upon the distresses of us and of the city which is called by thy name; for not in our own justifications do we pour out our supplications before thee, but by reason of thy great 19 mercies. O Lord, hearken, O Lord, forgive, O Lord, attend and execute, delay not for thine own sake, O

And the wild beast of the field will devour her.
 God of hosts, return we beseech thee,
 Look down from Heaven *, and attend to this vine :
 The vineyard also, which thy right hand hath planted,
 And because of the son hath strengthened for thyself.
 Though it be burnt with fire and rooted up,
 They shall perish at the rebuke of thy countenance.
 Let thy protection be upon the man of thy right hand, Even upon the son of man, whom thou hast strengthened for thyself.
 So shall we not revolt from thee,
 Make us to live, and we shall call upon thy name.
 Jehovah, God of hosts, restore us ;
 Look propitious, and we shall be preserved.

In this last line is the same expression as in the verse before us is used by Daniel : Heb. “enlighten thy face,” that is, look with a favourable unclouded countenance, as men do when they are kind and disposed to acts of benignity and mercy.

18. — open thine eyes, and look upon.—Many MSS. agree with Keri in dropping the ה in פקח. This is spoken ανθρωποπαθως. Attentively observe (as it were with the pupil of the eye expanded to catch every ray of light) the distresses of the city, “over which thy name is called ;” which is the literal Hebrew, and so the Versions, and the like at ver. 19.

19. — forgive, O Lord.—Gr. λασθητι, “be propitious.” See ver. 9. The language of this verse indicates the greatest fervency ; and the deliverance from the captivity is plainly alluded to.

* I have on the authority of one MS. dropped the word וראה “and see.” Or if it must be retained, I suspect it to be nothing more than a mere pleonasm in the Heb. idiom, and that the meaning of it is fully expressed in the other verbs.

my God, since thy city and thy people are called by thy name."

- 20 And as I was yet speaking, and praying, and confessing my sins, and the sins of my people Israel, and pouring out my supplication before Jehovah my God
21 for the holy mountain of my God: Even as I was yet speaking in prayer, the man Gabriel, whom I had seen in a vision before, swiftly flying, reached me about 22 the time of the evening-oblation. When he brought information and talked with me, and said, "O Daniel, I am now come forth to improve thee in understanding.

20. —for the holy mountain of my God.—The temple, on the rocky mountain Jerusalem; see ver. 16. In this verse the several parts of prayer are recounted, such as invocation, confession, petition, and intercession; and the success is pointed at that usually attends it when uttered with zeal and sincerity. See Isai. lxxv. 24. "Pouring out my supplication" is in the Heb. "making it to fall." Vulg. prosternerem. I follow Syr. It denotes the great humility of the suppliant. So at ver. 18.

21. —swiftly flying, reached me about the time of the evening oblation.—Heb. כָּעָף בִּיעָף "being made to fly swiftly:" The latter word may either come from the verb יָעַף "to be weary," intimating that the flight or expedition was so swift as to occasion lassitude; or else from עָף "to fly," a verb of the second sort of quiescents, assuming the form of the first, and thus will be a repetition, "to fly with flight," or very rapidly; and so Vulg. and Syr. understand it. נָגַע is properly "touched," but Syr. has, "came to, or reached me." See Chap. viii. 7. The time of the evening oblation was the ninth hour, or three in the afternoon, see 1 Kings xviii. 36, and Mr. Lowth's note. Some think this time was made choice of for the following communication, as being the same hour when the Messiah finished his sacrifice on the cross.

22. When he brought information.—One or two MSS. omit the word וַיְבִיֵן. Some of the Versions add an affix, "he instructed me." Houbigant suggests וַיְכִיֵן, "and he established and talked with me." Copt. has, "he erected and taught me."

—to improve thee in understanding.—Prof. J. D. Michaelis in 23 At the beginning of thy supplications the word was issued, which I am come to declare, because thou art greatly beloved; attend therefore to the word, that though mayest understand the Vision.

---

his Supplem. thinks the word בִּינָה to be of strong import both in this place and at Chap. x. 1, equivalent to distincta declaratio. Also at Chap. i. 20, and again at Chap. viii. 15, the import of the word may be nearly the same.

23. —the word was issued.—God's command or edict to the angel, relating to the future fate of Jerusalem; "which I am come to shew." Some MSS. and Versions add לָךְ, "to thee."

—greatly beloved.—Heb. חֲמוּדָה Vulg. Vir. desideriorum. Sym. Vir desiderabilis. Gr. ἀντὶ ἐπιθυμιῶν; intensely beloved. So Mary, Luke i. 28, κεχαριτωμένη. See Chap. x. 11, and on Chap. viii. ver. 9.

—that thou mayst understand the Vision—Some think, the vision of the last chapter, relating to the days, or the continuance thereof: but surely rather the prophecy that follows.

24. A very great variety of interpretations hath been given to the important prophecy contained in the four following verses: Insomuch that there is scarce any point in the whole circle of science that hath more exercised the wit and the pens of the learned than that upon which we are now entering. The learned Grotius, in his note at the conclusion of this chapter, has the following words "Præ plurimis expositionibus hujus loci de hebdomadibus, quas ex Africano, Eusebio, Hippolyto, Appollinari, Clemente, Origine, Tertulliano, Hebræis, Hieronymus recitat, hæc quam posui mihi videtur planissima. Veterum proxime ad verum semper accessit Chrysostomus, lib. ii. adversus Judæos." He himself refers the prediction, with the generality of writers, to the times of the Messiah, and considers the weeks as weeks of years.

Considerable lights have doubtless been thrown on passages in Scripture within these few years, from the collation of Heb. MSS. and a comparison of the original text with the ancient Versions, especially the LXX. This famous passage hath been corrected by the same helps in our own and other countries; and though the attempts discover great diligence and ingenuity, yet the success, in my humble judgment, does not seem to have been answerable. Moreover, the chief difficulty with modern expositors, and indeed with most, has been to ascertain the chronology, and reconcile it with that of profane writers, especially with the invaluable Canon of Ptolemy : Hence have arisen different opinions concerning the beginnings and endings of the times herein mentioned, as well as different modes of calculating them ; but the substance of the matter predicted was with Petavius, Usher, Prideaux, Lloyd, and other writers, foreign as well as domestic, nearly the same. However, a late anonymous Writer, in what he calls a free inquiry into this vision or prophecy, seemingly dissatisfied with the freedoms taken with the text, has pursued a quite different method of interpretation, and confined the weeks altogether to weeks of days : By this means reducing the whole of this prediction to little more than what Jeremiah had foretold already, to a much shorter term than either of the preceding visions in their most curtailed view, and certainly to a point scarce suitable to so long a preamble, so ardent a prayer, and so solemn an interference of a messenger from heaven.

And yet I cannot help agreeing so far with this Writer as to conclude, that the Prophecy hath in part a reference to the event which terminated at the close of the seventy weeks of days, to which he would altogether confine it. From the preface to the prayer, or the reason of it, mentioned at the beginning of the chapter, it is evident that the Prophet was enquiring after the period that would finish the captivity ; throughout the prayer likewise he has an eye to the return of the Jews, to the restoration of the temple-worship at Jerusalem, and to the firm establishment of the true Church of God. Whatever farther views therefore might have filled the mind of this highly-esteemed Prophet, as the spirit of prophecy, which had extended his views so far in the former visions, undoubtedly carried them in the present instance beyond the near approach of this first restoration ; yet, as this appears to have been strongly in his hopes, any interpretation of the prediction, that would not gratify his desires in this respect, must seem defective, as it will not answer the primary expectation which appears to have been in his mind, and which he doubtless wished with a very fervent regard. However it may have been overlooked before, or escaped the notice of others, I am quite of opinion that the prophecy has a plain reference in the first verse of it to the deliverance from the captivity ; and, looking through this, it carries us forward to another more august redemption, the deliverance from sin by the death of the Messiah, and the consequences that would from hence accrue to the Jews. And as the prediction was not fully published, probably till the end of the captivity with the rest of the visions, or after this first part had received its completion, so the satisfaction to be derived from its being fulfilled in the first or typical instance, might prepare and strengthen the minds of those to whom it was immediately addressed, to receive it with confidence in its full completion as to the more distant events likewise.

24 Seventy precise weeks are upon thy people, and upon

---

I can only at present offer these preliminary hints, which will be farther illustrated in the commentary. Nor must I dwell on either ancient or modern expositions; but from a review of many that I have met with, and from the best helps I could collect, I have endeavoured to form an interpretation that approves itself to my best and most dispassionate judgment, which has been already given in the translation, and which I shall endeavour to explain and illustrate with the following observations.

24. Seventy precise weeks.—Fourteen MSS. read the former word שבועים, weeks, and so the Versions; the same is observable in the following verses. The word נחתך is rendered by Th. and Vulg. as a verb in Niphal, “are abbreviated;” from חתך incido, concido. Gr. συντεμνω; and though it is not to be found elsewhere in the Bible, yet in the Chald. Par. on Esth. iv. 5, it is rendered decided,” and in this sense it is used by the Jews. In a like view Mr. Godwin translates it, “cut out,” and assigns this reason, “because they numbered by cutting notches,” which was probably the case in the more early and simple times. Now whether the word be considered as a noun or a verb, that is, for weeks of abbreviation, or that are abbreviated, though I rather prefer the former with the auxiliary verb understood, yet in either case its intention seems to be to limit the period to weeks of days, in contradistinction to those that follow in the next verses, which will appear to be weeks of years, or the usual prophetic weeks of a day to a year, according to Numb. xiv. 34, and Ezek. iv. 6. And thus the passage will convey a direct answer to the primary design of the prayer in the preceding part of the chapter, or a fixed period for the termination of the captivity.

Most writers agree that Darius reigned best part or near the whole of two years; and that he reigned more than one seems implied by the first year of Darius mentioned at the beginning of this chapter, and again by the angel some years after at Chap. xi. 1. Now from some part of this first year, when the Prophet made his inquiry, and thy holy city, to restrain the apostasy, and to put an

the word was issued and communicated to him by the angel, we must reckon seventy weeks, which will carry us far into the second of Darius, or until Cyrus became sole monarch, and published his decree, Ezra. i. 1, for the return of the Jews, and the rebuilding the Temple or the house of the Lord in Jerusalem. By this time their apostasy, their bold transgression, would be checked, their iniquity purged, or in some measure expiated by their punishment, the primitive purity or rules of ancient righteousness restored, the vision of the prophet Jeremiah, or his predictions, sealed or finished, that is, fully accomplished, and the holy things were again to be devoted to their sacred and proper uses. “Peccatum, delictum, iniquitas metonymice dicta puto pro pœna peccati &c. uti sæpe Justitia pro benevolentia et gratia divina, ut Esai. xlv. 1, et xlviii. 18, quæ fuit עלמים temporum antiquorum. Esai. li. 9.” Dathius. And he refers the whole verse to the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity. Moreover Houbigant and others render קדש קדשים Sanctum Sanctorum, or “the most holy-things,” not the Christ, who is called Messiah at ver. 25, 26: The anonymous author, alluded to in the foregoing note, refers it to the setting up the altar of burnt-offering. Ezra iii. 2, 3.

As to the variations in this verse, I follow the printed Editions in rendering the word בלא, “to restrain;” but thirty or forty MSS. read בלה, with the old Versions, our English one, and the Polyglotts and Hexaplars, which is a good sense. The next word פשע is more properly referred to rebellion or outrage, to the crime of apostasy or idolatry, and thus is distinguished from sins in general at the following clause; in which it may be noted, that a great number of MSS. and Versions follow Keri, and להחם with He instead of Cheth, and also the noun חטאת without the ו; so that it may be understood singularly. One or two MSS. drop ו before הנביא, and read הנביא “the vision of the prophet.”

I would observe farther that some, conceiving weeks of years to be intended, have, from the idea of abbreviation or precision, limited these years to lunar ones, which are about eleven days shorter than the solar years, but I believe are never used for computations in Scripture. However, this shews the general sense they entertained of the word נחתך, which I conceive to be of like import in this place with שבועים ימים, at the second and third verses of the next chapter, and one reason that may be assigned why this term is preferred here end to sins, and to expiate iniquity, and to bring in the righteousness of ages, and to seal the vision even 25 of the prophet, and to anoint the holy of holies. Yet know and understand, from the going forth of an edict is, because of the typical meaning intended by the expression, which the limitation of weeks of days might not have so well answered.

---

Thus have I given and explained what I take to be the primary intention of this part of the prophecy. But beside this, I think also it had a secondary reference to the transactions recounted in the latter part; which I conclude from the coincidence of the number of weeks, and also from the language itself of this 24th verse; which by a fair interpretation may doubtless have respect unto the Unction of the most Holy, or, as Syr. Paraphr. has it, unto Christ; from whom remission of sins was expected, who was to promulgate an everlasting gospel of righteousness, and in whom all the legal types were substantiated. And indeed this secondary view appears to have been so full and strong in the Prophet's mind, that some of his expressions in this first verse seem to pass beyond the former deliverance, and to be occupied, I had almost said engrossed, in the latter. "Thus also in the latter part of Isaiah's prophecies, the subject of the great redemption, and of the glories of the Messiah's kingdom, arises out of the restoration of Judah by the deliverance from the captivity of Babylon, and is all along connected and intermixed with it." Bp. Lowth on Isai. xi. See also his note on Isai. xl. at the beginning.

25. Yet know and understand.—Thus I think the former ו should be rendered; not as merely intended to explain the preceding verse, but as introducing a solemn engagement of the Prophet's attention to the fate of his people and city that follows; and thus when our Saviour refers to this prophecy in the gospel, he adds also this general remark, "whoso readeth, let him understand." Matt. xxiv. 15.

—from the going forth of an edict.—Or, word. Some will have the word מִצָּא here to signify "the taking effect," deriving it from a verb that signifies "to find;" but as very many MSS. read מִרְצָא, thus evidently deriving it, with the Masoretes, from יָצָא "to go out," and as the Versions follow this reading, I have rendered it accordingly. What the word or edict is we shall shew presently.

—to rebuild Jerusalem.—Heb. to restore and to build, and so at the latter end of the verse. This sense of the verb שָׁבַב is well known:

to rebuild Jerusalem until Messiah the prince, shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks; it shall

But some chose to understand it as of stronger import in the passage before us, and perhaps with reason. See Chap. x. 20. * One MS. has the word חומת the wall or walls, before Jerusalem; an alteration that must favour the opinion of a later edict than that of Cyrus, or its confirmation by Darius Hystaspes.

—until Messiah the Prince.—Gr. εως Χριστου ηγουμενου. Vulg. usque ad Christum ducem, and so the other Versions; that is, until the awful period when the business of his life was finished, until his hour was come, when he was to glorify his Father, or when he was to be cut off by a voluntary suffering for the sins of mankind; and thereby triumph as a prince over death, and over all his and our enemies. All the circumstances of his life are omitted, or rather comprehended in this final one, when all things that were written of him were accomplished.

At Isai. xlv. 1, Cyrus is called Messiah, “Thus saith the Lord to his anointed, to Cyrus;” But not to observe that in the prediction that follows he is considered as a type of Christ, it should be remembered that the term Messiah or anointed is there limited by the following term, to Cyrus: But in the instance before us it is used absolutely, and with an appellative noun, the prince נגיד, annexed; so that with such attributes as Daniel assigns to it in this vision, the term Messiah was never applied in Scripture to any earthly prince whatsoever.

—shall be seven weeks and threescore and two weeks.—That is, in the whole, sixty-nine weeks of years. Both periods will be remarkably distinguished; the former, or the narrow limit of the times, as it follows in the next clause, is that in which Jerusalem was to be rebuilt; of the other we shall speak at ver. 26. Now that weeks of years are here meant is not only evident from the term of limitation or precision at ver. 24 being omitted, but from the usage of the word העתים “the times,” at the close of the verse, which not only in Daniel, but at similar passages in the Revelations, is to be understood of years. At Chap. xi. 13, the term is explained, “at the end of the times” העתים, the years שנים; and one MS. in this place reads השנים העתים. And thus the literal signification of the expression

* See an account of this Italian MS. No. 249, in Kenn. Gen. Dissert. p. 127.

be rebuilt, the streets and their walls, in the narrow

בצוק העתים (which should always be adopted where it can, in preference to the metaphorical) will be, in angustiâ temporum, or “within the narrow period of the times.” And so A. Purver translates, “in the shortest of the times.” And Encyclopedic, “dans le peu de tems.” That the word week is also understood for a period of seven years, may be learnt from Gen. xxix. 27, where “to fulfil her week” is explained by performing another seven years’ service for Rachael; and in Lev. xxv. 8, seven sabbaths, i. e. weeks of years, are seven times seven years; and this I take to be in general the sense, unless where the context or some parellel passage defines or determines it to days, as in Lev. xxiii. 15, 16, Exod. xxxiv. 22, and here at ver. 24, and in the next chapter; and thus Grotius observes of it very justly, “mos erat loquendi, et manet apud Thalmudicos.” Nor was this mode of speaking in use only among the Jews; for Calmet in his Dissertation on the seventy weeks observes, that Varro, speaking of himself, says, he was entered into the twelfth week of his age, at the close of which he would have been eighty four years old; also that he had written seven weeks of volumes, or in other words 490 volumes. If the reader is desirous of seeing some reasons for the distinction of the number seven among the ancient Hebrews, as for a sabbath of days, of weeks, of months, and of years, and a sabbath of sabbaths, all of which seem calculated chiefly with an eye to the Creation, and for the purpose of preventing idolatry, he may consult Spencer de leg. Hebr. lib. i. cap. 6, p. 118. 4to.

—it shall be rebuilt, the streets and their walls.—That is, Jerusalem or the city, as the verbs are feminine, and the following nouns masculine. רחוב may mean the broad area on which it was to be built, or perhaps the wide spaces within the walls, and therefore be properly rendered street, or rather collectively, streets: The other word חרוץ is derived from a verb, which, according to some, signifies “to move forward,” or “to cut in,” and is thence taken to mean, the wall raised from the selected ruins of the former city, so Gr. and Vulg. or, according to Mr. Mede, p. 700, the ground marked out for the ditch or limits; so MS. Pachom. περιτειχος; and so A. Purver, the streets and ditches, probably to supply the city with water, or for fortifications. Others will have it to be the intersections or lanes between the streets, agreeably to that passage in St. Luke xiv. 21. Go into the streets and lanes of the city, εις τας πλατειας και πυμας, into the broad and narrow streets, including both words, and this is followed by Syr. Dr. Blayney renders the words as gerunds, progrediendo et dilatando. But after all, the proper sense of וְיָרַח is something decided or finished; see Cast. Lex. and perhaps if both the nouns were thus rendered, "the enlargements and their completions," it would not be far from the truth: At least I doubt not but in whatever sense they are taken, they are meant to intend jointly the complete building of the city, and accommodation of its inhabitants. To the last word I have in my translation joined the Vau that follows, which one MS. drops.

Now from these considerations we may fairly deduce a farther argument to prove that these weeks cannot be understood literally for weeks of days: for it must be next to impossible for a few poor exiles, to build completely such a city as Jerusalem in so small a space of time as less than two months; and this too, after they were just settling from a long and tedious journey out of the land of Chaldea.

Besides, we know that the city was not rebuilt long after, see Ezra iv. 21. Nor did the decree of Cyrus, in the first place at least, propose the restoration of the city, but only to build a house to the Lord, Ezr. Chap. i. and this was not built till after the second year of Darius Hystaspes *, Ch. v. 16, nor indeed finished till the third day of the month Adar, in the sixth year of that monarch, Chap. vi. 15.

In the seventh year of Artaxerxes Longimanus Ezra obtained a decree fully to establish the Temple-worship, (see Chap. vii.) which was effected and arranged accordingly. And in the 20th of Artaxerxes an edict was granted to rebuild the city, and Nehemiah was sent up with a full commission for that purpose; Neh. Chap. ii. 6—8. Now I would follow the opinion of those, who from this period, i. e. from the year 445 before Christ, or the vulgar Christian æra, in 303 of Ptolemy's Canon, and 4269 of the Julian period, commence the calculation of these weeks, and from hence date the issuing of the word or edict mentioned in the verse before us. And this is the time fixed for their commencement, as D'Herbelot tells us, by Abulfarage and the oriental writers.

The learned Dr. Prideaux has fixed on a period of seven weeks, or 49 years, for the restoration of the Jewish church and polity, or the full rebuilding the city in a figurative sense; and this he dates from the seventh of Artaxerxes, and finishes with the last act of Nehemiah's reformation, Chap. xiii. from the 23rd verse to the end, which he computes to have taken up a space of just 49 years : See his Connect. p. i. b. 5. The excellent Bp. Lloyd rather chooses to understand this part of the prophecy in its literal sense ; and Mr. Marshall, who has followed him, has shewn several defects in the plan of Dr. Prideaux, and begun the computation of the Bishop from the 20th year of Artaxerxes. From thence the Bishop reckons 49 years to the end of prophecy, or to the Prophet Malachi's writing his book ; but Mr. Marshall, still pursuing the literal sense of the expression before us, finishes the period of 49 years with the full completion of the city. Yet it is to be remembered that they both reckon by years of 360 days only, or of twelve months, allowing to each thirty days ; which indeed are the usual years of computation in the ancient Scriptures, and which I suspect are meant in this passage by the usage of the word " times." This whole matter is well supported by Mr. Marshall, and illustrated by tables, in his Chron. Treatise on the seventy weeks of Daniel, p. ii. c. 4, to which I must refer the reader.

* Most writers agree that there was a space of just seventy years from the destruction of the Temple and City to the rebuilding the Temple in this second year of Darius. See Zech. i. 33, and Bp. Newcome's note there.

We read, Nehem. vii. 4, that the city was large and great, but the people few therein, and the houses not builded ; there were doubtless some convenient habitations for the persons who had been employed in building the Temple, and the ancient site of the city might have been again marked out, and in some measure cleared from rubbish ; but it was some time after the arrival of Nehemiah at Jerusalem before the wall was restored, and before the people were recalled from the cities round about in which they dwelt, and begun to be settled in the new city. The wall, indeed, had its first grand repairing, or running up, in so short a time as 52 days, on account of the apprehensions of the governor and people of interruptions from neighbouring invaders ; but still the parts of it received continued accessions of strength by new works and additional improvements ; the inhabitants multiplied exceedingly, and it was foretold by the prophet Zechariah that they should do so ; " Jerusalem shall dwell in villages, for the multitude of men and of cattle within her. And I will be unto her, saith Jehovah, a wall of fire round about ; And glory will I be within her." Chap. ii. 4, 5. And for the settlement of all its inhabitants, and providing them with suitable houses, if we may judge of the size of Jerusalem from the account which Josephus gives of it at the invasion of the Romans (De Bell. Jud. lib. vi. cap. 9.) when the number of souls in it amounted to near three millions, we cannot think a space of near half a century too much to be allowed for its complete establishment. But see this matter also more fully stated by Mr. Marshall, p. i. c. iv. p. 144, and again in the next chapter, and in his table.

26 limit of the times: Then after the threescore and two

---

De Rossi observes, that one MS. has the word ושבוע "and a week," after the words "weeks seven," which must refer to the one week that follows at ver. 27. But the alteration would introduce a sort of irregularity in the times, as well as confusion in the text.

26. Then after the threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off.—That is, after the sixty-two added to the seven foregoing weeks, or after the termination of 483 years. One MS. has the same word הערים "which concludes the last verse, following the first word of this; "after the times, the weeks threescore and two:" In the present text the letter ה before שבועים determines the reference to the same number in the preceding verse. Aq. and Sym. have, "after the seven weeks, and sixty two."

Dr. Prideaux, joining the two numbers, makes them end with the preaching of John the Baptist, A. D. 26, to which adding the single week that follows in the next verse, he carries the period for the determination of the prophecy to A. D. 33, the year of our Lord's passion; and from the seventh of Artaxerxes, or the year of the Julian period 4256, in the Jewish month Nisan, to the year of our Lord 33, or of the Julian period 4746, and to the passover in that year, which was always in the month Nisan, are just 490 solar years; and thus far he is exact. But neither the date of his commencement of the prophecy will, according to our sense, suit with the language of it; nor can the last week, as will appear hereafter, be determined or ended with the death of Christ. In Bp. Lloyd's scheme the space of 69 weeks or 483 years, reckoning from the Nisan of the 20th of Artaxerxes, or An. 445 before Christ, after the rate of 360 days to a year, will have its period in the month Ijar, or in our May of the vulg. æra 32; after which period, or at the passover that next followed, our Lord was crucified, cut off by an ignominious death, agreeably to the proper sense of the word כרת; see the tables mentioned above. I must beg leave farther to add, that I think with the Masoretes and the generality of interpreters, that the word יכרת must in this place be certainly understood passively, "shall be cut off;" that this form is most agreeable to the pointed expression and laconic weeks shall Messiah be cut off; and though none shall be for him, the people of the Prince that cometh energy of the whole prediction, and that the two following words, to mention no other objection, will not admit of its being rendered in an active or transitive form by a fair or natural construction.

The Coptic Version, both in the Royal Parisian Library, and in that of St. Germain de Pres has, “after seventy two weeks;” possibly by a mistake of seventy for sixty: There are other variations also in other Versions, but no alteration seems wanting.

—and though none shall be for him, the people of the Prince that cometh shall destroy the city and the sanctuary.—The two Vaus that begin this and the next clause may be rendered, “and though.” And I think this the true sense of the passage; and that the former clause relates to the deserted state of the Messiah, who was to be, as Isaiah had foretold, “despised and rejected of men, so that all should be ashamed of him, hiding as it were their faces from him;” and, as we read in the evangelists, the facts were so far verified, that even “all his disciples forsook him and fled.” Yet afterwards when he should come again as a prince, his armies should destroy those murderers, and burn up their city. Matt. xxvii. 7. A great variety of interpretations hath been given to the words לוֹא יִהְיֶה לוֹ: This that I have offered is that of Vatablus, but I do not find that he connects it with the following clause, as I have done. If any doubt should arise, from the construction of these words in other parts of the Bible, I would offer the following rendering, which will amount to much the same with the foregoing, at least will agree equally well with my translation of the other parts of the passage, “and though not his, yet the people of the prince,” &c, that is, though not the people under the immediate subjection of the Messiah, yet those of a future prince, meaning the Romans, should destroy, &c. So we read in Wiclif’s translation, “and it shall not be his people.” Houbigant, following the Gr. of Theodotion, somewhere supplies the word ἵνα, και κριμα οὐκ ἐστιν ἐν αὐτῷ, indictâ causâ damnabitur: and makes “Messiah” the nomin. case to the verb in the next clause, “he shall overturn the city—with the prince that cometh.” Gr. also reads ἐν as a preposition, as do Syr. Hexap. LXX, and many others. Moreover one MS. reads הַנְּבִיָּא agreeably to הַבָּא, ο ἐρχομενος, that follows: thus by the הַ prefixed to each word referring them to each other: And as I shall destroy the city and the sanctuary ; so that they shall cut down as with an inundation, and even to the 27 end of a decisive war shall be desolations. Yet one week believe it to be an invariable rule in the Heb. language, that where an adjective and substantive are thus connected by the prefix to each, they have a mutual reference. The Versions also agree in joining together these words, and whether we refer them to Vespasian, or to Christ through the subordinate agency of Cæsar, they relate to the same event.

—so that they shall cut down as with an inundation.—Gr. εκκοπησονται εν κατακλυσμω. MS. Pachom. και εκκοπησονται ως εν κατακλυσμω. Instances are frequent where the Caph of similitude is implied when omitted ; see 1 Sam. xv. 23. And indeed the expression may be considered as more agreeable to the symbolic language of prophecy, with the particle of similitude omitted, than if it were inserted. Four MSS. read קיצו as a verb in Hiph. That desolating wars are often denoted by inundations ; see Jer. xlvii. 2, Isa. viii. 8, and Dan. xi. 10. See also Iliad. v. ver. 87, &c., several passages in the Æneid, as hinc densi rursus inundant

Troes, Agyllinique ; et pictis Arcades armis Æn. xii. 280.

The devastations committed by Titus and the Romans at the siege of Jerusalem were astonishingly great. “The wrath of God was now to come upon them to the uttermost.” 1 Thess. ii. 16. And the war might justly be termed decisive, as it entirely demolished the city and the sanctuary, not leaving one stone upon another, according to our Lord’s prediction, Mar. xiii. 2, and dispersed the people in such a manner that they have had no settled city or polity since. See Jos. de Bel. Jud. lib. vii, and the note at the end of the next verse. The Gr. has here πολεμον συντετμημενον, which I follow ; but some consider נחרצת as a fem. absolute, and in statu constructo with the word following, decisa desolationum, or the most complete desolations : So Cappellus, “præcisa, vel exquisitissima desolationum.”

27. Yet one week shall make a firm Covenant to many.—The verb הגביר “shall make firm,” may be referred for a nomin. case to the prince, or the people ; and so the verb in the next clause, in which case we should there translate, “And in the midst or half of the week.” I follow Gr. and Ar.

It has been objected, and with reason, to Bp. Lloyd’s exposition of the seventy weeks, that this week is not in continuance with the others; for whereas the sixty-nine weeks were finished a little before our Saviour's passion in the year 33; this he does not begin till 63; not long before the breaking out of the Jewish war, when the Romans were making treaties with other nations, or making a firm covenant with them, that they might without molestation pursue the war with the Jews. In the interpretation here offered of ver. 24, this objection is removed, as the continuance of the time is preserved as far as was needful, which was only to the end of the captivity; and the typical reference may be either in weeks continued or interrupted: They do not commence with the exact termination of the captivity, nor does it seem at all necessary that their term should in no point, or for no reason, be discontinued. However the first sixty-nine weeks from their commencement to the death of Christ are uninterrupted. From this period till the time that the Messiah should come again as a prince, several important events were to take place, such as that his religion was to be established, and his gospel preached unto all the world, or all the chief parts of the then Roman empire, beginning at Jerusalem*: And that some interval must be allowed for this seems intimated in the prediction itself in the word 827, "He that should come," whose coming was not to happen till all things were prepared and ready for it. Besides, the prophecy must naturally bring to our recollection three principal events relating to the Messiah, his birth, his death, and his coming to judgment on the Jews: Now the latter of these, or the commencement of the Jewish war was in the year of our Lord 66; the half of this, or the year 33, was that of his death; and thus perhaps a very good reason may be assigned, why the former period might terminate with the death of Christ, as that was the middle point of the time between his first advent, or his birth, and his second, or his coming to judge the Jews. Or the whole of this may be regarded as one period or advent, about the midst of which the most important event was to take place, and which therefore deserved more especial distinction.

This one week, however, is not to be confined to the Passion, or the

* "It appears in the Epistles, and from the Acts of the Apostles, that Jerusalem, and the society of believers in that city, long continued the centre from which the missionaries of the religion issued, with which all other churches maintained a correspondence and connection, to which they referred their doubts, and to whose relief in times of public distress they remitted their charitable assistance." Paley's Horæ Paulinæ, p. 410. Now this was a strong reason why Jerusalem should continue for a time after our Lord's death, until his religion had taken firm root among men. Nor does his coming seem to have been completed, till the events, with which it was so closely and necessarily connected, were accomplished.

shall make a firm Covenant with many, and the midst of the week shall cause the sacrifice and the meat-publication of the evangelical covenant founded upon it, but is rather the seven years of the Jewish war : During which period many were remarkably preserved, and suffered to escape from the distresses of the siege ; especially at the commencement of it, about the year 66, when the Roman general Cestius withdrew his troops as it were in a panic, whereas had he continued the siege but a little longer, he must have taken the city ; and this Josephus attributes to the immediate power of God, “who being angry with the wicked, would not suffer the wars at that time to be ended.” De Bel. Jud. lib. ii. c. 19, 20.

---

—and the midst of the week shall cause the sacrifice and the meat-offering to cease.—Every sort of offering made by fire, all the expiatory sacrifices, see Heb. x. 6, or rather, the allusion seems to be, according to Exod. xxix. 38, and Numb. xxviii. 3, to the sacrifice of the continual burnt-offering, which according to Josephus (De Bel. Jud. lib. vi. c. 2,) did cease for want of persons to attend it, a little before the taking of the city in the year 70, or in the fourth year of the war. Those that refer this passage to the death of Christ, who by his one oblation of himself once offered did put an end to all sorts of sacrifices, or the ritual of the Jewish worship, fix this event at the end of the 70th week, or nearly at the expiration of those seven years ; and thus render the words, “in the half of the week, &c.,” meaning the latter half, and near the close of that ; but this is so great a latitude, as nothing but the support of a favourite hypothesis could suggest. Yet indeed Dr. Prideaux and Bp. Lloyd have both given this sense to the term חצי שבוע, though referring the verse to different events. The general opinion seems to have been, that the period of this prophecy, so far as it relates to the weeks, closes soon after the expiration of this half week, or with the termination of the sacrifice and meat-offering ; and though I would refer the last week to the seven years of the Jewish war, or from the year 66 to the year 73, yet I conceive that the main business of the war was ended, and consequently the period of the weeks ceased soon after the year 70. And this may perhaps suggest another reason why the word חצי שבוע was used at ver. 24, to denote by its typical reference the abbreviation, and possibly too the discontinuance or separation of this last week. If this be admitted, the propriety and energy of that expression will be much more apparent.

offering to cease; and when upon the border shall be

---

—and when upon the border shall be the abomination of desolation.—Many MSS. have וער instead of ועל; but I prefer the latter. Gr. ἐπὶ τοῦ ἱεροῦ. Vulg. in templo. MS. Pachom. seems to explain by ἐπὶ πτερύγων. Syr. has “over the extremities, or borders.” The temple is properly the holy place, 1 Kings viii. 10, Acts vi. 13, and in many other passages. The Vau at the beginning of this clause, and that in וער at the next, may be considered as connecting the clauses, as I have rendered, “and when &c.” Perhaps instead of the abomination of desolation, see the like expression, Ch. xi. 31, it would be more agreeable to the present text, “the abominations of the desolator:” But the royal Parisian MS. has בְּהִיבֵל יְהִיָּה שְׂקוֹץ. Gr. βδελυγμα; and our Saviour quotes thus, βδελυγμα ἐρημωσεως. Mat. xxiv. 15. By the term שְׂקוֹץ, which is probably right, seems to be meant that sort of abominations or pollutions which proceeds from bodies alive or dead that were unclean; see Lev. vii. 21, Chap. xi. 10, Ezek. viii. 10, כַּנֶּף is properly the wing of a bird spread out in flying, and thence by an easy metaphor denotes the roof or top of any building, especially in the east, and consequently of the Temple, called πτερύγια by St. Mat. and St. Luke. The abominations therefore may here mean the Zealots, who were slain standing on the battlements of the temple, and whose carcases and blood were sprinkled about the sanctuary before its final destruction. See this opinion fully explained in a note in Bp. Kidder’s Demonstr. of the Messiah, p. ii. p. 11. If this sense be admitted, the meaning of the passage will be, and when the city shall be torn with internal butcheries, as well as foreign invasions, then will its entire devastation follow.

Or if this opinion should not be altogether approved, by the abominations may be meant the idolatrous ensigns of the Roman army, what Josephus calls σημαῖα περισχυσαὶ τοῦ αἵτου, signs about the eagle, which he soon afterwards calls Ἱερα, sacred or holy, lib. iii. c. 5, or as Tacitus, in his second book of Annals, calls them, propria legionum Numina. Titus brought these military signs into the ruins of the temple, placed them over against the eastern gate, and sacrificed to them there. De Bell. Jud. lib. vi. c. 6. And if to this we add, from Luke xxi. 20, the Roman armies themselves encompassing Jerusalem, we may come up to the full sense of the abominations here meant. When the beginnings of these evils made their appearance, it was then the abomination of desolation, that which is decided, until the full accomplishment, shall be poured upon the desolate."

---

time for the Christians to fly : And accordingly many took the advice which our Saviour had given them, and fled from Judea into the mountains : At the commencement of the profanation many withdrew to Pella, a town beyond Jordan, and by this means were rescued from the impending fate of the city. Mark xiii. 20, and Luke xxi. 18.

—that which is decided, until the full accomplishment, shall be poured upon the desolate."—The word נְהִרְצָה I take to be a feminine absolute, and with the ך prefixed (which Houbigant deems superfluous) to be equivalent to a substantive of the neuter gender, and the nominative case to the verb that follows : The Gr. has συντελεια. Michaelis thinks the word denotes something "decided by the lot of fate." Suppl. p. 945. See the like word at Chap. xi. 36.

The days of vengeance were now come, when all things which were written should be fulfilled. And that it was a general opinion that the entire destruction of the city was previously determined by Providence, may perhaps be collected from a passage in Josephus, De Bel. Jud. lib. vi. c. 4, which he refers to the temple. "The sentence of God had already determined that it should be consumed with fire ; and now the fatal day, after many years, was come, which was the 10th of the month Loi (or August), the day on which the king of Babylon had fired it once before, yet it was now set on fire by our own countrymen, who were indeed the cause thereof." The latter part of which passage may incline us to believe, that the havoc occasioned by the besieged themselves was a circumstance not unlikely to be alluded to in this prediction. See the former note.

How fully the prediction was accomplished in this last respect must be notorious to every one who has read, or will read, Josephus's history on the Jewish war. The author was an eye-witness of the desolations, and he observes that never any city suffered such things, and that it was so levelled that none who had seen it before could believe it had ever been inhabited. Jerusalem was indeed then trodden down of the Gentiles, and so must remain, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled, i. e. as Mr. Lowth has observed, till the times of the fourth monarchy, spoken of Ch. ii. and vii. are expired. And this is doubtless the meaning of the full accomplishment here in the text :

Its fate was decided, and would be gradually fulfilling, as we see it has been ever since. The word תתך “shall be poured” is a metaphorical term borrowed from the effusion of metals, and is therefore a just symbol of the wretched state of this desolated people, who were to be melted down among all the nations of the earth; yet still to be so far kept separate and distinguished, that their fate might be marked, and their final restoration in God’s due time fully evinced. Vulg. has “perseverabit,” and Mr. Mede, “shall continue.”

Josephus tells us, in the same book above cited, that many of the Jews were afterwards massacred in other cities and countries, especially in Syria and Egypt; and he freely owns “that those calamities and desolations very justly fell upon his countrymen; and that had not the Romans come against these criminals, they would have been swallowed up by an earthquake, or perished by a deluge, or have been consumed by fire, like Sodom; the Jews being more impious than any of those unhappy people that had thus suffered.”

Philostratus also relates, that when the neighbouring nations wished to crown Titus on account of his victory, he told them that he was unworthy of that honour, as he himself had not been the author of such works, but had only lent his hands to the Deity, who was demonstrating his resentment against the Jews. See de Vit. Apollon. lib. vi. c. 14.

During the war 97,000 were taken, and 1,100,000 slain; and the authors of the Univ. Hist. vol. x. p. 683, 8vo, reckon the whole amount of the captives and slain to have been 1,445,000, besides 10,000 slain at Jotapa, and multitudes that died in caves, woods, deserts and exile, of which no computation could be made. The demerits of the Jews, their punishment and the cause of it, seem justly and beautifully intimated in the following lines of Prudentius. Apoth. adv. Jud.

Quid mereare, Titus docuit : docuere rapinis
 Pompeianæ acies : quibus extirpata per omnes
 Terrarum pelagique plagas tua membra feruntur.
 Exiliis vagus huc illuc fluitantibus errat
 Judæus, postquam patriâ de sede revulsus,
 Supplicium pro cæde luit, Christique negati
 Sanguine respersus commista piacula solvit.

What hath been hitherto offered, I trust, may be deemed a sufficient explanation of the true and proper sense of the astonishing prophecy contained in the four last verses. Yet, lest the sense here given should be mistaken, or not duly attended to in this detached form, I will beg leave to recapitulate it, or to state the sense of the angelic message with all due deference in the following summary ; but previously reminding the reader that the original word rendered weeks throughout the prophecy strictly signifies sevens, which word is adopted in Purver's translation, and may be referred either to days or years.

Seventy weeks of precision, or precise weeks, remain upon thy people and upon thy holy city Jerusalem, to restrain their rebellion or apostasy from God, and to put an end to sins and expiate iniquity, or to bring to a conclusion their sufferings and the punishment that occasioned them, and to introduce the righteousness of ancient times, and to seal the vision of the prophet Jeremiah, and to restore the religious rites and holy things to their proper uses. This first deliverance from the captivity shall be accomplished within seventy weeks of days ; but this term shall be typical, or a prelude to another more glorious deliverance, which from its commencement to its full and final period shall be comprehended in the same number of sevens or weeks, yet not of days, but of times or years. And this longer period shall be distributed into three portions, of seven weeks, and then of sixty-two weeks, and lastly of one week, each of which will be distinguished by extraordinary events, as the prophecy now proceeds to shew.

For know and understand, this interesting business induces me thus solemnly to recal your attention, that from the passing of an edict to rebuild your city Jerusalem, that had been destroyed by fire, until Messiah the Prince, or from the 20th of Artax. Long. when this edict will be delivered to Nehemiah, till that important hour, when the Messiah shall be offered up, and thereby triumph as a prince over death and hell and all his enemies, shall be seven weeks and three-score and two weeks, or sixty-nine weeks of years : And the term is thus divided because the former part shall be distinguished by the building of the city, which shall be fully completed with its streets and walls in that narrower limit of the times.

Then after the three score and two weeks, or at the passover next following their termination, shall Messiah be cut off by an ignominious death, and a total desertion. Yet though none shall be for him, or he shall be altogether forsaken at that time, his princely authority will still be manifested : for the people of the prince that shall come, or the Roman army in the service of the Messiah, when his business upon earth is completed, and the gospel fully published, shall destroy both the Jewish city and sanctuary ; and they shall come up against it like an inundation, and shall cut down with a general ruin, and to the end of a war decisive of the nation of the Jews there shall be desolations.

Yet the one week of years that remains to complete the number typified in the former deliverance, this space of seven years shall make firm a covenant of security and protection to many, when those who are in Judea will escape to the mountains; and in the midst of the week the sacrifice and meat-offering, or the whole ritual of the Jewish worship, shall cease: And when upon the borders of the temple, represented by an expanded wing, shall be the abomination of desolation, either the dead bodies of the slain, or the idolatrous ensigns, together with the Roman armies encompassing Jerusalem, then the desolations shall presently follow, and shall continue till a full accomplishment of the decided fate of this devoted people shall be poured upon the desolate, or until the times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled.

I could offer many useful remarks on this extraordinary prediction, especially by way of inference, but for the sake of brevity I shall confine myself to the three following. In the first place, We may from this interpretation collect a fair reason why the reign of Darius the Mede is taken so much notice of by Daniel, as it seems to have been useful, if not necessary, toward limiting the period alluded to in the former part of this prediction. Secondly; From hence may be deduced a sufficient vindication of the doctrine of a secondary sense belonging to prophecy. Yet those who shall be still unwilling to allow a double sense in prophecy, need not object to this interpretation on that account; for if the secondary or typical sense of ver. 24 be dropped, the interpretation of the latter part of the prediction not necessarily depending upon it, may be complete without it. And thirdly, We see the expediency likewise of generally adhering to the original text, or at least of attempting to correct it with the utmost precaution, and upon the justest principles, as this very difficult passage, according to the sense here given, has required scarce any alteration at all.

Archbp. Secker has enlarged very much on this prophecy; and indeed the whole of his second volume of MS. notes, and a considerable part of the first, are upon this subject. Though the limits I have proposed for my work would not allow me to avail myself in any measure of his observations, yet I will just beg leave to mention here an extract that he has made from a posthumous tract on the weeks, of a Mr. Johnson of Cranbrook, printed at London in 1748. "He concludes (p. 378) that if he had hitherto lived an infidel, the

CHAPTER X.

1 IN the third year of Cyrus, king of Persia, a Reve-

---

conviction wrought in him by a just consideration of the certain sense and perfect completion of this divine oracle is so full, that he should think it his duty to do and suffer all that human nature, supported with divine grace, could, rather than forfeit his faith."

THIS Chapter contains the preparatory circumstances to the final Revelation that was made to Daniel in the two last Chapters of the Book. The Vision was to be of great extent, and is therefore ushered in with a Preface of considerable length; in which are pointed out the Humiliation of the Prophet, the attention that was paid to it, the appearance of the divine Messenger, the impression it made on Daniel's mind, the Design of the Vision, and the Strength from Heaven with which he was favoured, in order to enable him to comprehend it, with other circumstances relating to the Angels that make the discovery.

1. In the third year of Cyrus, king of Persia.—That is, after the death of Darius, or the 72nd year from the commencement of the captivity, the 214th of the æra of Nabonassar, and the 5th of his reign, according to the canon: Then, as follows in one MS. ידונה דבר "the word of Jehovah was revealed." By this time the prophet must have been at least 90 years of age, and persons have often been favoured with stronger and farther illuminations a little before their deaths, as was the case of Isaac and Jacob, in the Book of Genesis.

The kingdom of Elam, from the son of Shem of that name, was considerable among the nations, in the time of Abraham, under Chedorlaomer, Gen. xiv. 4, 5, and seems to have continued increasing and flourishing afterwards till it was subdued by the united powers of Media and Babylon: By an union with the Medes it recovered this defeat, so as to become the seat of extensive or universal empire under the name of Peres or Persia, in the first year of Cyrus.

lation was made to Daniel, whose name is called Belteshazzar, and the word was certainly true, but the extent great; yet he attended to the word, and had 2 understanding in the vision. In those days I Daniel
 3 was given up to mourning three weeks of days. I did not eat any delicate food, nor did flesh or wine enter —and the word was certainly true, but the extent great.—Heb. “the word was truth,” וַצִּבָּא גְדוֹל. The word צִבָּא in its proper signification denotes an army or host of men, and not only the collected troops, but by a metonymy the warfare also in which they are engaged, and the time of that warfare; and as human life may be fitly deemed a warfare, so it is used for the period, or appointed term of man’s life. See Job vii. 1, and xiv. 14. In somewhat like this last sense it may be understood in the passage before us, “the warfare is great,” the arrangement extensive, or the period in which the transactions should be comprehended will be long. But it should be observed that most of the Versions understand the word, as meaning the same with δυναμεις power or strength, and apply it to the difficulty and arduous reach of understanding that would be necessary to obtain an insight into the vision: which Daniel was favoured with in a considerable degree, as appears from the next clause, and from ver. 14.

2. —I Daniel was given up to mourning.—The participle is in Hithpahel, and means “that he greatly afflicted himself.” The reason of it seems in general agreed to be, the interruptions that were made to the building the house of God according to the edict of Cyrus two years before; and that some of his brethren chose rather to continue in the land of their captivity, than go up to Jerusalem to hasten and forward that work.

—three weeks of days.—“Full weeks” seems more applicable to weeks of years. Weeks of days are the same as weeks of abbreviation, Chap. ix. 24, and the distinction is perhaps more strongly marked in the latter case than in the former. See Gen. xxix. 14. So “a month of days” at Numb. xi. 20. But the Copt. Vers. omits the word “days.”

3. I did not eat any delicate food.—Heb. לֶחֶם חֲמֻדוֹת “bread of desires,” or “pleasant food,” so the word לֶחֶם is rendered in Agur’s prayer, Prov. xxx. 8. There seem to have been two sorts of fasting among the Jews, either a total abstinence from food of all sorts for at least a whole day, which David observed at the funeral of Abner, my mouth, neither did I anoint myself at all, till three 4 weeks of days were completed. And on the twenty and fourth day of the first month, when I was on the 5 bank of the great river, the Hiddekel; Then I lifted up mine eyes and looked, and behold a man clothed in

2 Sam. iii. 35, or a partial abstinence from the better kinds of food, which lasted for a considerable time, as in the case before us. The prophet made likewise an alteration in his dress, and did not anoint himself as usual after the eastern manner, 2 Sam. xii. 20, Mat. vi. 17, for the Jews never anointed themselves in times of mourning and humiliation; and there is a precept to this purpose in the Mishna, Cod. Joma, c. 7, §. 1, where on the day of expiation, that great day of humbling the soul, they are interdicted meat and drink, and washing, and anointing.

4. —on the twenty and fourth day of the first month.—Nisan, if the Jewish computation be admitted, that is, the month in which was the Paschal solemnity. Hence commentators have observed from this fact of the prophet, that the Jews did not observe their festivals but in their own country, and in the place which God had appointed: but if the Persian computation should be followed, which seems not improbable, as the prophet dates his vision from the third year of Cyrus the Persian, then the first month will be different. The word “first” is omitted in the Copt.

—I was on the bank of—the Hiddekel.—Syr. “the Enphrates;” but Vulg. “the Tigris;” Gr. and Ar. “Tigris-Eddekel:” The Copt. has neither. It was probably near the junction of the two rivers, which was about Seleucia and Ctesiphon, in some part of Susiana, that the prophet was placed. There seems a mistake in the Greek, which is rectified in MS. Pachom. the former has εγω ημην εχομενα του ποταμου, the latter for εχομενα reads επι.

5. —and looked.—Many MSS. read the original full ווארא, as at ver. 8; and also the word for girt חגורים with ו, which seems preferable.

—behold a man clothed in linen.—Gr. retains the Heb. word βαδδων. Syr. “the most magnificent vestments.” LXX. byssinis. Who this איש אהר or certain person was, we may perhaps be at no loss to determine, if we consider him as described in the attire of the high priest, and compare the passage with Exod. Chap. xxviii. and linen, whose loins were girt with the fine gold of 6 Uphaz : Also his body was like the beryl, and his face

xxix. and the description of the Son of man by St. John in the Revelations, c. i. 13. If however he be not the Son of God himself, he was probably an angel of the highest order : But it should seem as if there were several angels, or perhaps the Shechinah, accompanied with one or more angels, that appeared ; as may be collected from ver. 10. and 17.

—fine gold of Uphaz.—Vulg. and Syr. render Uphaz as relating to the quality or excellence of the metal, and not as the name of a place ; but two or three MSS. read אופיר, from whence some derive Africa ; and if we compare this place with Jer. x. 9, and the reading of some of the Versions there, which Dr. Blayney has noted, we shall probably be inclined to agree thus far with Bochart and Calmet that Ophir and Uphaz are the same. Bochart indeed thinks that there were two Ophirs, one in Arabia and the other in India, or the island Taprobanes, now Ceylon. Phaleg. lib. 2, p. 161. But others are inclined to place it on the African coast ; and so Origen on Job xxii. 24 observes, that some interpreters will have Sophir or Ophir to be Africa ; and the ancient navigators touched upon it when they sailed from the Red Sea round the Cape of Good Hope, and returned by the Mediterranean. Mr. Bruce thinks Ophir to have been in Abyssinia, where the mines of Sofala now are, and that some part near this coast was called by Eupolemus in Eusebius Ophri, and also that Tarshish was on the same coast, nearer the Arabian Gulf. Vol. i. c. 4. And in the Abyssinian Annals in vol. ii. he finds the name of Tarshish mentioned as one of the petty kingdoms in the neighbourhood of Adel, and which lay directly in the road from the Red Sea to Sofala or Ophir. But see Bp. Lowth on Isa. Chap. ii. 13—16.

6. Also his body was like the beryl &c.—That is, cærulean, or sea-green, like the beryl or “chrysolite,” as Aq. and our old Eng. Transl. render ; see Ezek. xxviii. 13. His face was as the appearance of lightning, Mat. xxviii. 3, his eyes as lamps of fire, Rev. iv. 5, his arms and his feet, Gr. has, his legs., Vulg. et quæ deorsum sunt usque ad pedes, וּמִרְגְּלָתָיו, and from his feet upwards like the eye or glare of polished brass, see Ezek. i. 7, Rev. x. 1, and the voice—as the voice of a multitude ; Syr. like the din of a large host, powerful to instruct and enforce his communications, and to strike all that hear it with astonishment. See Ezek. i. 24, Rev. x. 3, xix. 6.

like the appearance of lightning, and his eyes as lamps of fire, and his arms and his feet as the resplendency of polished brass, and the voice of his words like the 7 voice of a multitude. Yet I Daniel only saw the vision; for the men that were with me saw not the vision; but great terror fell upon them, so that they
 8 fled into a hiding-place. Thus I Daniel when left alone saw this great vision; but there remained no strength in me, for my vigour was turned upon me
 9 into rottenness, so that I retained no strength. Yet I heard the voice of his words, and when I heard the voice of his words, I sunk down flat in a swoon with 10 my face toward; the ground. When lo! a hand

The Author of the Revelation of St. John Considered, hints that the angel appeared in the habit of the high-priest, to supply the want of the temple-service on the great day of atonement, when the high-priest, after due preparation, on the 10th day of the first month enters into the most holy place, and performs the most awful office in his ministry, p. 433.

8. Thus I Daniel, when left alone, saw this great vision.—The words will bear this rendering, and by it a sort of tautology in this and the preceding verse is avoided. I imagine the word מראה, translated “vision” in both verses, has some relation to the form or aspect of the angelic appearance. The attendants saw no form, but fled away greatly terrified. See Acts ix. 7, Luke xxiv. 16. The prophet also, as appears from ver. 9, overcome with the sound of his words, fainted, and fell on his face. So at Chap. viii. 18.

10. When lo! a hand touched me.—See on ver. 5. The hand that touched him was probably one of the attendant angels; and from Ch. xi. 1 it should seem to have been Gabriel, who spoke what follows. The form of the superior Spirit was scarce visible by Daniel, and therefore it seems likely to have been one of an inferior order, whose hand he could discover as reached out unto him, ver. 18. That the Son of God is seldom introduced to human notice without a retinue of angels, may be learnt from Chap. viii. 15, 16, and xii. 5, Gen. xviii. 2, Zech. Chap. i. ii. iii.

11 touched me, and set me up on my knees and the palms of my hands. Then he said unto me, "O Daniel, a man greatly beloved, understand the words which I speak unto thee, and stand upright, for unto thee am
 I now sent;" and when he had spoken this word unto 12 me, I stood up trembling. Wherefore he said unto me, "Fear not, Daniel; for from the first day in which thou didst set thy heart to get understanding,

—set me up.—Heb. "made me to move;" the verb נָוַע signifies to move in a tottering manner; and the hand that touched him seemed to have gradually restored strength to his joints, and firmness to his feet. At the next verse, the Heb. "stand upon thy standing," where the infinitive mood is used for a noun, means, "stand upright." See Chap. viii. 18, and Nöld. p. 554.

12. —set thy heart to get understanding.—Or, to gain information. Previous to the communication of this and the last vision, we find the prophet waiting for the reception of the divine intelligence with deep humiliation, and a suitable preparation of mind.

At the ninth Chap. he inquired with prayer and supplications; and I rather notice this, as it seems to have been the general mode in which application was made by the ancient prophets, and favourites of heaven, for such information as they wished to obtain from the Lord, for the benefit of his church and people, especially during the times of the captivity. Ezekiel often speaks of inquiries of this kind; and the unpreparedness of the hearts and lives of the Jewish people to make them, is directly asserted by him at Chap. xx. I suspect also that the allusion is to this same point at Chap. xi 3, where the sense of the original text seems to have been generally mistaken, by a wrong distribution of the letters into words. Instead of—לֹא בִקְרוּב בְּנוֹת, which is scarce capable of a tolerable sense, we should read בְּתִים בִּקְרוּ בְּנוֹת—"Inquire not in building houses." The twenty-five men were the persons who suggested this evil counsel, that they should not inquire of the Lord, or of his Prophet, as to the rebuilding the houses of Jerusalem, but should go on to build without regard to former events; since this city was the caldron, and they the flesh; or they were resolved to partake of all its fates and calamities. The paronomasia in these words is obvious, and rather striking.

and to humble thyself before thy God, thy words were heard, and I am come because of thy words.
 13 But the prince of the kingdom of Persia opposed me —to humble thyself before thy God.—Two or three MSS. read יְהוּדָה אֱלֹהֶיךָ. At Isa. lviii. 3, fasting is the same as afflicting or humbling the soul. “When I wept through the fasting of my life,” at Ps. lxxix. 10, is by our translators rendered, “when I wept, and chastened myself with fasting.” The angel intimates, that at the beginning of his prayer and fasting his supplications were heard, and he is now come at his request to give him information from heaven of the state of the Jews and of the world in future times. Gr. “I am come at thy words.”

13. But the prince of the kingdom of Persia opposed me.—“Stood before me.” Purver. And so Jun. and Tremel. referring it to an earthly prince. This is thought by some to be either Cyrus or Cambyses, making opposition to the building of the Temple, and becoming hostile to the people of God: But as this is not at all probable, so soon after passing the decree in their favour, so neither could it be properly deemed resisting an angel. Others have thought there is an allusion in this verse, and at ver. 20, to the guardian or tutelary angels of different countries; which doctrine seems countenanced by several passages in Scripture, and especially by Zechar. vi. 5. Grotius is of this opinion; and Bp. Newcome on the last mentioned place refers to the passage before us. Mr. Lowth has treated this matter very fully, and to his note I would refer the reader; he adds also, that others suppose the contest may be between a good and an evil angel, as in Zech. iii. 1, and St. Jude ver. 9. Which latter opinion is perhaps the most just, as there should seem to be no dispute or contest between the ministering spirits of heaven, who are always obedient to the pleasure of their Lord. And when the Almighty sent a superior angel, Michael, whose name is sometimes given to Christ himself, Rev. xii. 7, his office probably was to assist Gabriel in subduing the prince of the power of the air, the powers of this darksome world, or the spirits that rule over the children of disobedience. The opposition was made twenty one days; and as this was exactly the number of days that Daniel fasted, the contest may possibly have some allusion to this struggle. Daniel was certainly highly favoured, and the Almighty, who delights in hearing and answering the prayer of his servants, directs the angel to apologise (if I may so speak) for

- twenty and one days, when lo ! Michael, one of the chief princes came to assist me, so I left him there 14 amongst the Rulers of Persia : And I came to inform thee what shall happen to thy people in the latter days ; for still the vision is for days.”
 15 Now as he spoke with me according to these words, 16 I set my face upon the ground and was dumb : When his delay in attending to the patient solicitations of the Prophet : The angel also is represented as pleading the difficulty of his task, and another higher power or chief in the regal court of heaven favours his business, and comes in to his assistance. In whatever light this is to be understood, it is a strong and affecting, though less gross, instance of the anthropopathia, or of the Deity's accommodating himself and his measures to the manners of men. See de Sacra Poes. Heb. Præl. 16.

—so I left him.—The present text is גוֹתְרַתִּי, but nine MSS. omit the Vau. Houbigant suggests הוֹתְרַתִּי. But as the sense in Niph. is not very different from that in Hiph. I suspect the Van only is out of its place, and should be at the end of the word. Gr. has καὶ αὐτὸν κατέλειπον. The emendation appears so just, and so agreeable to the context both in the next verse, and at verse 20, that I have translated accordingly.

14. —in the latter days.—Or, in the latter end of the days. See on Ch. ii. 29, and Numb. xxiv. 14.

—for still the vision is for days.—Syr. has “even to the end of the days,” or to the end of time. * Vulg. and Gr. “for days.” Three or four MSS. read לְכַוְעַר, which seems a gloss, but perhaps may rightly explain the sense. The forementioned Author of Revelation Considered, refers it to the two thousand three hundred days mentioned in the vision at Chap. viii. 14, a part of which he thinks has been disposed of, or explained, as to the fate of the Jews, in the seventy weeks at the end of the last chapter ; and this will carry on the history in a more general view from the expiration of the Persian monarchy, which was soon to follow, till the end of the time. This sense is ingenious, and I believe so far just, as it relates to the very remote extent of the following vision. Ar. has “for some days,” but I know of no authority for this word, or the word “many,” introduced before “days” in our Eng. Translation. Copt. omits the clause.

- lo ! one after the likeness of the Son of man touched my lips ; then I opened my mouth in speech, and said unto him that stood before me, “ O my Lord, by the vision my distresses are turned upon me, so that I
 17 retain no strength. And how shall the servant of this my Lord be able to speak with that my Lord ; for as to me, even now no strength remained in me, neither 18 was breath left in me.” Then there touched me again as it were the form of a man, which strengthened me.
 19 And he said, “ Fear not, O man greatly beloved, Peace be unto thee ; take courage, and be strong : ”
-

15. —and was dumb.—Was struck with silence from terror. This is very strongly intimated in the next verse. See also ver. 9.

16. —Son of man.—In the singular. So one MS. Houbigant, and all the Versions in the Polyglots.

—then I opened my mouth.—Copt. has, “and he opened.” MS. A. drops the clause.

—my distresses are turned upon me, so that I retain no strength.—Gr. Ar. and Syr. “my entrails are contracted, or rolled up within me.” The word צִירִי means such wreathing pains or throes as are the effect of travail or labour. See Isai. xiii. 8. The agitation was so violent as to exhaust all his strength.

17. —How shall the servant of this my Lord be able to speak with that my Lord.—Gr. and Ar. read as in the margin, “how shall this servant ;” and then the latter נִי must be the same as talis, or tantus, alluding to the more majestic appearance at ver. 5, but I follow Mr. Lowth, who has pointed out several instances, and might have shewn many more, wherein the pronoun נִי, when doubled, relates to different persons or things. See Nold.

19. And he said.—Gr. and Ar. add—μου. And he said unto me.

—Peace be unto thee.—See Gen. xliii. 23, Judg. vi. 23. Our Lord addresses his disciples in the like form after his resurrection, John xx. 19. And it is used at the beginning of most of the epistles in the New Testament. See on Chap. vi. 21. The words that follow, “take courage and be strong,” in the Heb. is a repetition of the same verb. But we read וְאַתָּה וְאַתָּה in four or five MSS. of De Rossi's : And Gr. has ἀνδρείον και ἰσχυε.

And as he talked with me, I was strengthened, then I said, "Let my Lord speak, for thou hast made me strong."

- 20 Wherefore he said, "Knowest thou for what cause I came unto thee? Now presently will I return and contend with the prince of Persia; and when I am 21 gone forth, lo! the prince of Grecia will come. But yet I will declare to thee what is deeply noted in the writing of truth, although there is no one that supported me in these things, but Michael your Prince.

20. —Knowest thou for what cause I came unto thee?—Or, "thou knowest for what cause, &c." The angel, having strengthened the prophet, presumes that he also understood the general design of his errand. The Greek is Εἰ οἶδας, "surely thou knowest," according to an usual Heb. idiom.

—Now presently will I return and contend with the prince of Persia.—With the tutelar angel that belongs to that kingdom, one of the four spirits in Zech. vi. 5. Soon after this contest shall be ended, when I go forth again from the presence of God, another of the spirits, the prince of Grecia, will come. The angel of Persia would plead all that could be offered in her favour; but when the dissolution of her empire was at hand, the power of Grecia would prevail, and the kingdom or dominion be transferred to a prince who should favour the cause of the Church of God. That Alexander favoured the Jews, see Joseph. Ant. l. xi. near the end.

21. —in the writing of truth.—So Ps. lvi. 8, Isai. lxv. 6, and Mal. iii. 16. The design of the metaphor is obvious, and the decrees are meant as irrevocable. The whole argument will be weighed on all sides, but what follows will be the final result. The prophet uses a like expression at the first verse of this chapter, and again at Chap. xi. 2, where "the truth" seems opposed to the figures or symbols that had been used in the visions of the preceding parts of the book.

—Michael your Prince.—This shews in what sense the word prince is to be understood in the preceding parts of the chapter, and to what order of beings it is to be applied. Michael and Gabriel were probably the tutelary angels of the Jews, and would be their only protectors in the various contests for empire till the coming of Christ. These names do not occur in any books of the Old Testament that

CHAPTER XI.

1 ALSO I in the first year of Darius the Mede stood to were written before the captivity : and it is suggested by some that they were borrowed from the Chaldeans, with whom and the Persians the doctrine of the general administration and superintendence of angels over empires and provinces was commonly received. Castell mentions the names of four that were said to stand around the throne of God, Michael, Uriel, Gabriel, and Raphael ; two only of which seem to be named in Scripture. But whatever may be determined concerning their names, it is certain, from various passages of the Old Testament, that ministering spirits continually attend upon the service of God, and execute the divine commands. In the two last verses these blessed spirits appear to have been intended. We know, and can know, no more of the offices or employments of these celestial agents than what is revealed to us, and therefore it is in vain to indulge conjecture. In general we may conclude, that they will be favourable or unfavourable to any nation or people according to their deserts ; and that all things, and all powers, will work together for good to those that fear and love God.

---

THIS and the following Chapter contain the substance of Daniel's last Vision, or a series of Prophetical Story from the third year of Cyrus to the end of time. The Dominion is soon made to pass from the Persians to the Grecians ; the State of the Greek Empire is continued through various Changes and Revolutions, and particularly with respect to Syria and Egypt, till at length it yields to the Romans. Several particulars afterwards follow that must relate to the fate of the Church of Christ ; and the last Chapter has a peculiar respect unto the time of the end, to the end of all Prophecy, or to the grand consummation of all things.

1. Also I in the first year of Darius the Mede stood to confirm and to strengthen him.—Syr. joins the word נִסֵּן with the preceding verse, thereby transferring to that verse the pleonasm of the affix in

2 confirm and to strengthen him: And now I will declare to thee the truth.

Behold, there shall stand up yet three kings in this. For this sort of pleonasm, see Chap. vii. 15, 28, and Chap. viii.

1. But some would connect the whole verse with the close of the last chapter, and with good reason too, as it doubtless relates to the joint employment in which the same heavenly missionaries were engaged. Gr. Ar. and perhaps Vulg. omit the pronoun לו at the end; and Syr. and one MS. read י, intimating that Michael assisted Gabriel at that time also: But the present reading is capable of a good sense, whether we understand the pronoun לו to relate to Michael or Darius. The Author of the Revelation of St. John Considered would translate, "to confirm and strengthen it," and produces instances wherein the pronoun לו is so rendered, and thus would refer it to the writing of truth, whereof the vision of the seventy weeks is a part. But in this case what was Gabriel to confirm and strengthen? The Scripture of truth, or the Word of God? There seems no need of the strength of an angel to support this. As there is a little variation in the MSS. and more in the Versions, I am almost tempted to suspect the true reading was גל, and that we should render thus, "Moreover as I in the first year of Darius the Mede stood to confirm and strengthen thee (the prophet), so now I will declare to thee the truth: Behold there are yet three kings to stand up in Persia, and a fourth that shall be enriched above all."

Gr. and Ar. read, in the first year of Cyrus the king; meaning most probably the first of his nine years according to the canon, or the same with the first of Darius, at Chap. ix. 1. And to Daniel's conflict and ardent prayer at that time, and the success that followed it, the angel seems to allude: In the establishment of Darius, as well as at the present season, both Michael and Gabriel were friendly to the cause of the Jews.

2. — Behold there shall stand up yet three kings in Persia.—According to the Canon there were nine kings of the Persian empire from Cyrus to Codomannus, besides others who, falling within a year, are not therein mentioned. Interpreters have differed therefore in pointing out the kings that are here meant, or in fixing the commencement of the Scripture of truth. But as the vision was revealed to Daniel in the third year of Cyrus, it is most natural to trace its beginning from that time ; and then the three kings yet to stand up, or after the then reigning monarch, will be Cambyses or the Ahasuerus, and Smerdis or the Artaxerxes* of Ezra (Chap. iv. 6, 7), and Darius Hystaspes ; the second of whom, being a Magian usurper that reigned scarce eight months according to Herodotus, is not in the Canon.

Persia ; and the fourth shall be enriched with abundant

---

—and the fourth shall be enriched, &c.—This is Xerxes, the successor of Hystaspes, who had inherited great riches from his father, according to Æschylus, and had amassed much more. Many great and rich provinces, as India, Thrace, Macedonia, and the Islands of the Ionian sea, were added by Darius to the Persian empire. Xerxes had himself subdued Egypt, and was desirous of extending his conquests, and enlarging his fame. He therefore collected a very large army, with which he designed to subdue the whole realm of Javan or Greece, and to reduce all Europe under his dominion. His army amounted to more than five millions, according to Herodotus, and according to other writers his forces were much greater. “When he is thus become strong” (11 or 12 of Kenn.’s MSS. and many of De Rossi’s read the original word with Beth instead of Caph) “he shall raise up the whole against the realm of Greece.” יעיר הכל, the particle הַא that follows is omitted by one MS. and the Gr. has επαναστησεται πασαις βασιλειαῖς Ἑλλήνων, “He shall rise up over all the kingdoms of the Greeks.” Syr. reads, “he shall stir up all the kingdoms of the Greeks,” some of which were subject to him, others ready to assist him, and Lacedemon and Athens were the chief that opposed him. But still the former rendering seems preferable, as his forces were collected from all quarters, and many millions passed the Hellespont when he led his army into Greece. And this expedition seems to have been the source of that irreconcilable enmity between the states of Greece and Persia, which finally terminated in the overthrow of the latter under Alexander, to which the vision immediately proceeds. A farther reason may perhaps be assigned why these kings of Persia only are mentioned, because they were all that should reign before Artaxerxes Longimanus, by whom the decree was issued, according to the prophecy of the seventy weeks, for the rebuilding Jerusalem.

* So Prid. Con. p. i. b. 3, but there is a considerable diversity of opinion concerning these names.

wealth above all; and when he is grown strong through his wealth, he shall raise up the whole against 3 the realm of Grecia. But a mighty king shall stand up, and rule with extensive dominion, and do accord-
 4 ing to his pleasure. Yet when he shall be established, his kingdom shall be broken, and shall be distributed

3. But a mighty king shall stand up.—The angel at the last verse has just mentioned the kingdom of Ion or Greece, and thence takes occasion to introduce its first monarch and conqueror, Alexander the Great. Enough of the affairs of Persia had been recited for the purpose of prophecy, and historical exactness was not wanted. For the rapidity and success of Alexander's conquests, see on Chap. vii. 6, and viii. 5, 6. This passage, and that just referred to at Chap. viii. were supposed to be shewn by the high-priest Jaddus to Alexander as he was entering Jerusalem. See the Prelim. Dissert.

4. Yet when he shall be established, his kingdom shall be broken.—Many MSS. and some Editions read the first word בעמר with Beth instead of Caph; and so Syr. But the sense seems rather to require the present reading, as the kingdom was not broken or divided till after the death of Alexander; yet still his death was sudden, and when he was just at the height of his successes, εν ακμη, בעמר, cum steterit, Vulg. and so Gr. ως αν στη η βασιλεια αυτου. For the four generals that succeeded him, and their situation, or bearings of their jurisdiction to Macedonia or Greece, see on Chap. viii. 8. As the empire was divided within a few years after the death of Alexander, the power of the lesser princes or generals was certainly far inferior to his; that they excluded his sons and relations is well known; and moreover the kingdom or empire was as it were torn or plucked up, Heb. תנתש. Gr. εκτιλυσεται, forced from his family, distracted by intestine convulsions, and divided among several inferior leaders, besides those that partook each of a fourth share. “Atque ita maximum in terris Macedonum regnum nomenque, inde a morte Alexandri distractum in multa regna est.” Tit. Liv. lib. xlv. These considerations will furnish an explanation for the latter part of the verse; and whoever would wish for more full information on this subject, may consult Arrian, Curtius and Justin, with the other historians, or Dr. Prideaux Con. p. i. b. 8, the Bp. of Bristol's 16th Dissert. and the Univ. History.

towards the four winds of heaven, yet not to his posterity, nor according to the sway with which he ruled; for his kingdom shall be torn up, and be for 5 others beside those. Then shall the king of the south, that is, one of his princes, be strong, yet shall another

5. Then shall the king of the south, that is, one of his princes, be strong.—Meaning one of Alexander's princes; וּמֶן שָׂרָיו: Two MSS. omit the ו before מ; if it be retained, it must be only explanatory, as at Chap. iv. 10, and elsewhere. Though the empire was divided among four, the prophecy has no farther concern but with two, and these as they lay north and south of Judea; the design being to shew the Jews "what should happen in the latter days." The kings of Syria and Egypt therefore will be the only powers of Greece that will claim our attention in the farther parts of the angel's narrative.

Ptolemy, son of Lagus, called Soter, the first king of Egypt, and the first founder of the famous library at Alexandria, had very large possessions: His dominion extended over Libya, Cyrene, Palestine, Cyprus, some Grecian islands and Asiatic provinces: His wealth and strength are celebrated by Theocritus in one of his Idyls, and by Appian the historian. But his kingdom, however great, was considerably inferior to that of another of his princes, Seleucus Nicator, or the Conqueror; who enjoyed not only Syria, and some countries to the north-east of it, but extended his conquests over Asia, beyond the river Indus, built Seleucia on the Tigris, and many other very considerable cities in India, Scythia, Armenia, and various parts of his wide dominions, and was the greatest of all Alexander's successors. He was also, according to Appian, de Bell. Syr. §. 124, a person of such great strength, that laying hold of a bull by the horn he could stop him in his full career; the statuaries for this reason made his statues with two bull's horns on his head; and from hence Prideaux thinks, the æra of the Seleucidæ was called in Arabic Dilearnain, or the two-horned, having derived its origin from this prince. It is in the books of the Maccabees called "the æra of the kingdom of the Greeks," and both books compute by it. See Prid. ubi supra.

At the conclusion of this verse MS. Pachom. has the words εκτος εξουσιας αυτου, which seem a translation of the last word מִמְּשָׁלְתּוֹ, "and shall have a large dominion, beside his proper authority," in allusion to his great conquests: This is a good sense.

6 exceed him in strength, and have dominion, a large dominion will his dominion be. And after some years they shall be united; for the daughter of the king of the south shall come to the king of the north to make alliances; but the arm shall not retain strength, neither shall the offspring thereof be established; but she shall

About this time lived Megasthenes, the historian of India, and also Berosus the Babylonian historian, part of whose works are transmitted to our times by Josephus and Eusebius, but the books themselves are extinct; the fragments contain many valuable illustrations of passages in Daniel, and the other writings of the Old Testament.

6. And after some years they shall be united.—The ancient Bodl. MS. reads the first word וּבְקֵץ with ב instead of ל, “And in the end of years.” Gr. and Ar. seem to have found in their copies שְׁנָיו, “of his years,” after the death of Seleucus; for the union was made by the successors of the two kings, between Antiochus Theus, the grandson of Seleucus, and Ptolemy Philadelphus the son of Soter.

—for the daughter of the king of the south shall come to the king of the north to make alliances.—Heb. מִישְׁרִים “rectitudines,” conditions of agreement; Gr. συνθηκας. Antiochus divorced his former wife Laodice, and married Berenice the daughter of Philadelphus, by whom he had a son.

—but the arm shall not retain strength.—Antiochus had great riches with Ptolemy’s daughter, and from thence came a great acquisition of power, metaphorically represented by an arm; see Cast. Lex. But this arm could not retain its strength (I prefer this rendering, which the words will bear); For he afterwards recalled Laodice with her sons, upon the death of Ptolemy; and she contrived to poison her husband, and fix her son Callineus on the throne, to the exclusion of Berenice and her son, whom she caused to be murdered, together with her partisans, and all that adhered to her cause.

—neither shall the offspring thereof be established.—One MS. reads חֲוָה וּרְעִי, another omits the Vau before the noun, and a third has יַעֲמֹד, which last I take to be the true reading, and is confirmed by Gr. and Vulg. and the alteration is easy, as the ו has only changed its place, it ought to be before ר, instead of after it. I follow the marginal reading and the Versions in rendering הִילָדָה “her son,” be delivered up with her attendants and her son, and whosoever supports her at the times.

- 7 Yet there shall stand up a shoot from her roots on its base, that shall come with an army, and shall enter or he whom she brought forth, as the father seems to have died before the divorce of his daughter.

7. Yet there shall stand up a shoot from her roots on its base.—Instead of מנצר שרשיה, the מ should be prefixed to the latter word, thus, מנצר משרשיה. φυτον εκ της ριζης αυτου. Cod. Chis. Whoever considers a little the words and the sense, will readily admit this easy alteration. MS. Pachom. reads επι της ετοιμασιας αυτου, and thereby supplies the preposition על before בנו as at ver. 20, but על is sometimes omitted before its noun, as may appear from comparing Ps. iii. 8, with 2 Chron. xviii. 23. See Nold. p. 561. Berenice was the daughter of Philadelphus, from whom also descended her brother Ptolemy Euergetes, who was the shoot here alluded to: He came with a great army into Syria to avenge his sister's quarrel: He ravaged Syria and Cilicia, the upper parts beyond the Euphrates and almost all Asia, carrying away with him great plunder and the images of the gods which Cambyses had before taken from Egypt, as the next verse relates, and from hence was called Euergetes. Polybius, lib. v. observes, that he took the city Selencia, which was kept for some years after by the garrisons of the Kings of Egypt, and Justin gives us to understand, that all the fortified cities that had revolted surrendered to him, lib. xxvii. 1, which may serve to explain the expression in this verse, ויעשה בהם, “and shall work on them,” the fortified cities, or shall apply them to his own use. Gr. has ποιησει εν αυτοις. Houbigant suggests, that we should read just before, במעווי in the plural, because of the pronoun בהם, but if the noun is considered as a sing. collective, no alteration may be wanted. Archbp. Usher observes from Josephus, cont. Ap. that after Ptolemy had obtained all Syria, he came to Jerusalem, and there offered many eucharistic sacrifices to God, and dedicated some presents suitable to his victory: and from hence we may collect a sufficient reason why he obtains a part in the Angel's Narrative, as it may in general be observed that the history of the Jews is interwoven throughout the whole of it. See Jerom and Lowth's Comments, Usher's Annals, Prid. Conn. and

- upon the fortifications of the king of the north, and 8 shall work on them, and prevail. And also their gods, even their molten images, together with their precious vessels of silver and of gold, shall he carry with the captivity to Egypt, and he shall be established for 9 years above the king of the north. Thus when the king of the south hath invaded the kingdom, he shall return into his own land.

Bishop Newton's Dissert. from a comparison of which, and other writers on this subject with each other, and with the original historians, the historical part of these Notes is selected.

8. And also their gods, even their molten images.—One MS. has not the preposition עַם; two read וְעַם, and one has a Vau before נִסְבֵּיהֶם “their molten images,” which seems the best reading; see on ver. 5. Six MSS. have Vau before the עַם that follows. Syr. for שְׁנֵי “years” near the end of the verse has הָרִיץ תְּרִיץ duplo. Calmet observes, that there was an ancient marble in honour of Euergetes, of which an inscription was published by Allatius at Rome, in 1631, recording the circumstance mentioned in this verse, Sacris, quæ ab Ægypto Persæ abstulerant, receptis, ac cum reliquâ congestâ gazâ in Ægyptum relatis.

8, 9.—and he shall be established for years above the king of the north. Thus when the king of the south hath invaded the kingdom, he shall return into his own land.—I am inclined to suspect that this latter part of ver. 8 should follow ver. 9, by which means the connection would be much more natural and easy at ver. 10. “But his sons shall engage, &c.” Yet one MS. dropping the latter part of ver. 9, seems to read in this sense, “And he shall be established for years above the King of the North, after he hath invaded the kingdom.”

Ptolemy Euergetes returned with great triumph into Egypt, having brought back 40,000 talents of silver, beside 2,500 images, and outlived Seleucus Callinicus four years. It was this Prince that was the friend and patron of the very learned philosopher Eratosthenes, who was invited by him to Alexandria, and made keeper of his library there; which library is said to have been finally destroyed after the conquest of the Saracens by the Caliph Omar, to the eternal disgrace of that sophistical fanatic, and to the very great injury of literature. Eratosthenes was born at Cyrene, a province of Africa, on the confines of Egypt, and from hence, according to Suidas, was called Cyrenæus. He studied at Athens, and was skilled in almost every sort of learning, but especially in Chronology. There is a work of his which Bishop Cumberland very highly and justly commends, a kind of Laterculus or Series of the Kings of Thebes or Diospolis, in that Nome or province of Upper Egypt, still called the Thebaid; which he collected from the best authorities, and which comes down to us supported with all the evidence of its authenticity which can reasonably be expected. This canon is a continuation of the famous fragment of Sanconiatho, which begins with Protogonus or Adam, and ends with Thoth the great Hermes of the Egyptians in the kingdom of Egypt. From thence Eratosthenes has taken it up, and supplied the Kings that followed to the siege of Troy, and Dicæarchus, a learned historian, contemporary with Aristotle, has observed, that from Nilus the last but one of those Kings were only 436 years to the first Olympiad; that is, to the year of the Julian period 3938 or 776 years before the birth of Christ. A table of these kings may be seen in Bishop Cumberland's Continuation of the Phœnician history; and the whole of this period from the creation to the Olympiads very nearly agrees, as that prelate hath shewn, with the Scripture account; so that the chronology of the Bible is by this means established by corresponding records in the Pagan world.

10 But his sons shall engage in the war, and shall collect

---

10. But his sons shall engage in the war.—Very many MSS. and some Editions read with Keri וּבְנָיו, and also וַיִּתְּנָה near the end of the verse, instead of the plural יִתְּנֻ. In the former case the noun must be plural to agree with the plural verbs; in the latter (which is plainly a mistake copied from the former part of the verse) one person only is alluded to, and the rest of the verbs belonging to it are singular. The two sons of Seleucus, the king of the North, were Seleucus Ceraunus and Antiochus the Great, who both engaged in the war with large forces to recover their paternal territories from Ptolemy; but after the death of Ceraunus by poison, Antiochus alone like an inundation invaded and over-ran the dominions of the king of Egypt, Euergetes being dead, and his son Philopator on the throne. After he a multitude of large forces; and one shall advance with rapidity, and overflow and pass through, and shall again be engaged in the war even at his fortress.

- 11 Whereupon the king of the south shall be greatly exasperated, and shall go forth and contend in battle with the king of the north; and though he shall set in array a large multitude, the multitude shall be delivered into his hand. When having taken away the
- 12

had met with great success in his attempts on the provinces belonging to this effeminate and indolent prince, he returned into Syria, put his army into winter quarters at Ptolemais, and in the following spring passed through Palestine, &c. and made an attack on Raphia, a strong fortified town near the borders of Egypt, thus engaging again in war even on the frontiers. Polyb. lib. v. Keri and four or five MSS. read the last word מעון with the affix ו instead of ה; but there is no need of an alteration, as the latter may be the Chaldee masc. affix, which is often used for the Hebrew.

11. Whereupon the king of the south shall be greatly exasperated.—The Gr. has αγριωθησεται, “shall be made wild or frantie,” at the successes of Antiochus, and the revolt of his friends; and hence shall contend in battle with him, עמו: One MS. drops this word, and another the עו that follows; but both may be retained by an usual pleonasm. The armies of Philopator and Antiochus were each very large: but the turn of the sentence inclines us to understand the great multitude to be that which was delivered up, or the army of Antiochus, consisting of 62,000 foot, 6,000 horse, and 102 elephants, Polyb. lib. v. p. 421, Ed. Casaub. at Paris; yet Ptolemy’s forces were greater viz. 70,000 foot, 5,000 horse, and 73 elephants. A memorable battle was fought near Raphia, the first city in Coelosyria from Egypt after Rhinocorura, wherein Ptolemy was successful, and Antiochus lost great numbers, and retreating with his shattered forces was obliged to sue for peace. Antiochus petitioning for a truce to bury the dead found wanting near 10,000 foot, more than 300 horse, and 4,000 were taken prisoners; Ptolemy’s loss was far less considerable. The whole history of the battle and of the loss on both sides is stated exactly by Polybius in the passage above cited.

multitude his heart shall be elated; wherefore though he shall lay prostrate ten thousands, he shall not

---

12. When having taken away the multitude, his heart shall be elated.—Many MSS. read with the Masora ירום for ורם, which seems a good reading; but if we compare it with the last verb in the verse, and consider נשא as a participle, the present text will probably be preferable. Ptolemy, after he had slain great multitudes, (Heb. “myriads”) did not pursue his victory, but made a peace with Antiochus, on the latter yielding to him Cœlosyria, or that part of Syria that lay between the mountains Libanus and Anti-libanus, and Palestine, or the former inheritance of the tribes of Israel: And this he did that he might return to his former vicious courses, yielding himself up to the most licentious prostitution, and the entire gratification of his lawless passions. The Jews during these wars suffered very much from both parties, and especially from Ptolemy after his victory. In his resentment 40,000 Jews were slain, by all which havoc of his own subjects, however he was elated, yet his strength must be much impaired. Indeed his own people, or the Egyptians, were much dissatisfied with his conduct, and the disorders arising therefrom soon broke out into a rebellion.

The Authors of the Univ. Hist. vol. ix. p. 220, give us the following account of the cause of his indignation against the Jews from Polybius, and the third book of the Maccabees. After his victory he visited the states and cities that he had conquered, and among the rest Jerusalem, where he took a view of the temple, and even offered sacrifices, &c. to the God of Israel. But not being satisfied with viewing it only from the outer court, beyond which no Gentile was allowed to pass, he shewed a great inclination to enter the sanctuary, and even the holy of holies itself. This occasioned a great uproar all over the city; the high priest informed him of the holiness of the place, and the express law of God, by which he was forbid to enter it. But every sort of opposition only serving to inflame his curiosity, he forced in as far as the second court, where while he was preparing to enter the temple itself, he was struck by God with such terror, that he was carried off half dead. On this he left the city, highly exasperated against the whole Jewish nation, and loudly threatening future vengeance.

- 13 prevail. For the king of the north shall return, and set in array a multitude larger than the former, and at the end of the times, the years, he shall come speedily
 14 with a great army and with abundant wealth. And at those times there shall many stand up against the king of the south, also the perverse sons of thy people shall exalt themselves, to establish the vision, but they shall

13. For the king of the north shall return, and set in array a multitude.—Antiochus some years after returned with a much greater army, having put an end to the Asiatic war in which he had been engaged; and after Ptolemy's death took advantage of the infancy of his son, called Epiphanes, to recover his lost provinces, engaging Philip king of Macedon in his interest, and bringing with him great supplies of forces, according to Appian and Jerom, from the East; to which the latter part of the verse seems to allude; יבוא בוא "he shall come with speed" or certainty, "at the end of the times, the years;" the word שנים seems added to העתים evidently by way of explanation, and may serve therefore, as we have already noted, to show the sense of "the times" in the other parts of this book. <sup>a</sup> It was not till near fourteen years after the peace, that Antiochus renewed the war, after he had, by his martial exploits against the Medes, Parthians, and others, acquired a distinguished reputation throughout Asia and Europe, toward which latter country he seems to have intended to turn his arms.

14. And at those times there shall many stand up against the king of the south.—Not only Egypt itself was rebellious, but the provinces that before were subject to it seem to have revolted; Philip had entered into a league with Antiochus, and the Jews themselves favoured his cause. For there were great occasions of discontent in Egypt, the favourites of the late king having usurped the sovereignty, and the people perceiving their artifices, had put the regent Agathoeles and his nearest relations to death: Scopas likewise attempted to seize the kingdom for himself.

—also the perverse sons of thy people shall exalt themselves, to establish the vision.—Heb. וּבְנֵי פְרִיצֵי עַמְךָ—Gr. οἱ υἱοὶ τῶν λοιμῶν τοῦ λαοῦ σου, "the pestilent sons of thy people." The word פִּרְץ

- 15 fall. For the king of the north shall come, and cast up a rampart, and take the fortified cities, even the arms of the south, neither shall the people of his fortifications resist, for there shall be no strength to resist.

signifies to “break away,” or “to revolt.” 1 Sam. xxv. 10. Some would apply the passage to the Samaritans, or the descendants of those nations, which Asnapper had placed in Samaria on the removal of the ten tribes, who joined themselves to Antiochus; but it seems rather to relate to those factious Jews who had apostatized from the law of God, and by their disobedience and refractory spirits would serve to establish this vision, to accomplish the designs of Providence, who makes the wickedness of man turn to his praise. Or it may mean their revolt from their allegiance to Ptolemy, under pretence of fulfilling the sentence which God had denounced against the profaners of their temple, but in fact to gratify their resentment and pride. However their designs did not succeed, for Scopas reduced the revolted cities to their obedience, placed a garrison in Jerusalem, and returned with great spoils: After which, when Antiochus recovered Jerusalem, he punished the prevaricators, as the word is rendered by Vulg. although he rewarded the rest of the Jews that willingly received him.

15. For the king of the north shall come, and shall cast up a rampart, and take the fortified cities, even the arms of the south.—After the success of Scopas, Ptolemy’s general Antiochus returned to give him war; in an engagement the latter was victorious, and Scopas was pursued to Sidon, where he was shut up with 10,000 men, and closely besieged with regular works; for it is observable that the word סללה may either signify the mount or rampart, or the missive weapons or engines that are used in a blockade: See 2 Kings xix. 32. Jerem. xxxii. 24. The fortifications of Sidon were very strong, but after a considerable siege were obliged to yield; and, together with other fenced cities in Cœlosyria, according to Livy, lib. xxxiii. § 23, in Samaria, according to Josephus, xii. 3, and on the borders of Egypt, according to Appian, surrendered to Antiochus. Sidon, Gaza, and the other fortified cities or frontier towns, I take to be meant by “the arms of the south,” and he soon made himself master of all.

—neither shall the people of his fortifications resist.—One MS.

- 16 Also when he that cometh shall have done unto him according to his will, neither shall any one resist him, then shall he stand in the land of Glory, which shall be finished by his hand.

reads the first word ולא, five read יעמודו and two have מבצרו; now the present text stands thus, לא יעמודו ועם מבהריו which I conceive, on the authority of the MSS. ought to be altered thus, לא יעמודו ועם מבצרו. The Versions labour, yet assist but little: The alteration I propose changes but one letter, though it alters the arrangement of another. For the copulative ו being found in the middle of the clause, see on ver. 22. Or we may read with the MSS. ולא יעמודו. The cities were taken by storm, and there seems but little resistance to have been made after the surrender of Sidon; and even here the terms of capitulation were hard, and Scopas and the generals were sent away stript and naked. If this alteration be not admitted, we must understand עם מבהריו to mean some of the chosen forces, the delecti milites, of Ptolemy, sent under his best commanders to the assistance of Scopas.

16. Also when he that cometh shall have done unto him, &c.—then shall he stand in the land of Glory.—After Antiochus had completed his victories over Ptolemy, he was willingly received by the Jews, or in the land of Tzabi. So Gr. σαβει. Copt. Sabir. But LXX. in Bahrđt has ἐν τη γῇ θελησεως. We find the like expression at Chap. viii. 9, which see, and again at ver. 41 of this chapter. See also 2 Sam. i. 19, and Jer. iii. 19, with Mr. Lowth's note upon it. The next word in this verse וכלה has different significations: Some of the Versions render, "and it shall be consumed in, or by, his hand," intimating that Judea would be ravaged and suffer very much in the contests between the two kings, as it lay between the dominions of both: but the words may rather be rendered, "and there shall be a completion by his hand;" that is, the troubles of Judea should for a time at least have an end, and the land be restored to a more flourishing state by his favour: and Josephus informs us, that Antiochus made a decree, that the Jews should enjoy many immunities, should live according to their own rites and laws, and that the work of the temple should be finished: απαρτισθηναι, which is a word of like import with בלה, and may correspond with τελεσθησεται of Th.

- 17 Moreover he shall form a design to invade with obstinate perseverance his whole kingdom, and proposals of alliance shall be with him, wherein he shall succeed; but though he shall give the chief of women to him, to make her corrupt, yet she shall not persist, 18 nor be for him. Afterwards shall he turn his face to the maritime towns, and shall take many; but a

17. Moreover he shall form a design to invade with obstinate perseverance his whole kingdom.—Egypt. The word בַּתְּקָה properly signifies “with strength;” but it also denotes that urgent and persevering resistance which is proof against all obstructions: and thus Antiochus endeavoured by craft and pertinacious stratagem to obtain those ends, which the variety of opponents he had to contend with would not suffer him to accomplish by mere force. But the words may be rendered, “to invade with the strength of his whole kingdom,” that is, of Syria, or with all his forces: And so Gr.

—and proposals of alliance shall be with him, wherein he shall succeed.—The word יִשְׂרִים is probably of the same import with מִיִּשְׂרִים at ver. 6, and are both from the verb יִשַּׁר “rectum, æquum fuit.” Cast. Lex. Matrimonial proposals were offered by Antiochus between his daughter Cleopatra and the young king Ptolemy, now about sixteen years of age, and accepted at Raphia. This lady, on account of her quality, and beauty or youth, is called “the daughter of women,” בַּת יִפְתַּח הַנָּשִׁים Houbigant. Antiochus suspected she would be subservient to his crafty designs and deep laid schemes, thus hoping to make her corrupt; but the event proved otherwise, for she was true to her husband, to the disappointment of her father. Mich. from LXX. Th. Vulg. and one MS. suggests that we should read וְיִשְׂרִים עִמּוֹ יַעֲשֶׂה, instead of וְיַעֲשֶׂה. Suppl. p. 1182. The alteration is easy, and perhaps just: And thus we should render, “and he shall make covenants of alliance with him.”

18. Afterwards shall he turn his face to the maritime towns.—The word אִיִּים sometimes signifies islands, and if thus rendered will furnish a good sense at Isai. xlii. 15, notwithstanding great authorities suggest an alteration, and would read צִיִּים dry deserts: “I will make the rivers islands;” their waters shall be so far exhausted, as to

General shall cause to cease his reproach against him, and beside shall make his reproach to return 19 upon himself. For he shall turn his face to the fortresses of his own land, and shall stumble and fall, and shall not be found.

---

leave only small channels, and the land shall stand out above them in most places. Then it follows in a natural climax, "And I will dry or scorch up the pools."—But this word is also well known to signify not merely islands, but cities or territories on the sea coasts. Antiochus attempted not only the Grecian islands, but several towns on the coast, and seemed to aspire after a considerable part of the country between him and the Romans; which roused their jealousy, and induced them to send not only a large fleet against his, but a great army also, under the command of their general Lucius Scipio, who obtained a decisive victory over him near Magnesia under Mount Sipylus. This was attended with very humiliating circumstances, a great loss of men, a necessary solicitation for peace, the giving up all Asia on this side Mount Taurus, engaging not to set foot again in Europe, the payment of the expences of the war, and a large annual tribute: For the performance of which articles hostages were sent to Rome, one of which was his own son, afterwards called Epiphanes. Thus was the reproach he had offered to the Roman power removed and converted into a far greater upon himself. Or the expression may mean, "so that he shall never be able to return the reproach upon him." The conjunction בְּלֹתִי is capable of either sense, but the former seems best, and most agreeable to the Versions.

19. For he shall turn his face to the fortresses of his own land.—The word מְצוּרֵי is plural, and meant to insinuate that he should return to some of his fortified towns in Syria; and we find that after the defeat he retired to Antioch, and from thence to other distant cities in his kingdom; and at length having formed a design of plundering some of his eastern provinces, he was slain by the multitude at Elymais, as he was seizing the vast treasures of one of their temples; Thus by his imprudence and sacrilege he fell, and was found no more in Syria.

There were probably two rich temples in Elymais, one this of 20 Then shall stand up on his base one that shall send forth an exactor of the glory of the kingdom; but

---

Jupiter Belus, and the other that of Diana, which is mentioned by Josephus, Ant. xii. 13, by Appian in Syriacis, who calls it the Temple of the Elymæan Venus, and by Sulpicius, lib. ii. and Jerom on Daniel. It was the latter that Antiochus Epiphanes attempted to plunder, and was opposed by the multitude, and put to flight a little before his death; see 1 Mac. vi. Aurelius Victor gives a different account of the death of this monarch, but agrees in this, that it was premature, and not in Syria. It is observable also, that during the reign of Antiochus the Great, the Romans began to extend their conquests in the East, and they are by his means imperceptibly, as it were, introduced into the narration, of which they make so considerable a part in the sequel. This prince in many instances favoured the Jews, yet during the whole of his wars was generally the occasion of great distresses among them; and hence we have so long an account of him, from the 10th verse to the 19th. "They are as it were the outlines of Antiochus's picture, and as they resemble none but him, we cannot imagine that they were drawn undesignedly." Univ. Hist. Vol. ix. p. 273. Note.

20. Then shall stand up on his base one that shall send forth an exactor, &c.—Heb. עַל בְּנוֹ, "on his base or bottom;" from בָּנוּ to fit exactly, to dispose. Vulg. "shall stand in his place," or, as I have rendered it at the next verse, "shall succeed him." I have varied the expression, lest the repetition should sound harsh or offensive, though I wished to retain it in the first instance, as expressive of the literal sense of the Hebrew. Seleucus Philopator succeeded his father Antiochus, whose chief business was to raise the tribute of a thousand talents for the Romans; and after he had done this till the last of the twelve years for which it was exacted, and had sent also his treasurer Heliodorus to plunder the Temple at Jerusalem, the glory of the kingdom, he was cut off by the same Heliodorus, and dispatched secretly by poison, without any intestine tumult or open war, after he had reigned but a few, or not more than eleven, years. The original is בְּיָמִים אֶחָדִים "in a few days," or suddenly: Or, rather, "within one year," as the word יָמִים often signifies "a year." See Buxt. Lex. and also Gen. xxvii. 44, xxix. 20, and Lev. xxv. 29.

within a few days he shall be destroyed, yet not in anger, nor in battle.

- 21 And there shall succeed him a contemptible person, on whom they shall not confer the royal dignity, but he shall come in privily, and secure the kingdom by 22 flatteries. Yet the arms of the overflowing land shall be overflowed from before him, and shall be broken;

The adjective seems expressly to limit it to this period; and thus it must refer to the sending forth his exactor, or within a year from plundering the temple; the Divine Providence thus making his sacrilege to recoil upon himself. We still see the history of the Jews, or rather of the Church of God, continually adverted to.

—not in anger.—Copt. has “not in arms,” or with arms. I suspect the original, instead of בַּאֲרָמָה, was בַּאֲרָמָה; This is a good sense.

21. And there shall succeed him a contemptible person.—The scheme of Heliodorus was frustrated by Antiochus, the brother and successor of Seleucus, who returning from Rome, and having his brother's son sent thither in his stead, usurped the crown in his absence on the murder of his father, and on this and many other accounts is deservedly reckoned contemptible, though called Epiphanes or Illustrious, from the usual sarcasm of the times; thus one inglorious monarch was called Callinicus, and another profligate one, Philopator. This unprincipled and artful prince, the whole series of whose life, according to the historians*, shews that he deserved the character here given him by the Prophet, availing himself of the sudden confusion of affairs, though not the right heir to the crown, nor intitled to, or regularly invested with, the honour of the kingdom, yet by promises of friendship and assistance to neighbouring potentates, and crafty insinuations of advantage and clemency to the Syrians, obtained their concurrence, and seated himself securely on the throne of Syria.

22. Yet the arms of the overflowing land shall be overflowed from before

* See the fragments of Polybius, from lib. xxvi. by Athenæus, where is a long account of the mad frolics of this worthless prince; and also Prid. Con. p. ii. b. 3.

23 and also with the Prince of the Covenant, after he hath joined himself in close confederacy with him, shall he practise deceit; so that he shall advance and him.—One MS. reads וזרעות הנגב “And the arms of the south,” which may countenance the explanation I have given to the word הַשְׂטֵף that follows. By the arms of the south may be meant the chief fortresses or frontier towns, as at ver. 15. Whether we retain or omit the word נגב, the expression of the inundation will incline us to believe that the country of the Nile is here meant. And Cleopatra assembled large forces to assist Heliodorus against Antiochus; but with the assistance of Eumenes king of Pergamus and his brother Attalus, he overcame and broke all the powers that united in resisting him, secured the provinces of Cœlosyria and Palestine, and reduced the frontiers of Egypt.

—and also with the Prince of the Covenant, &c.—One MS. reads בנגיד, which I have followed, and connected the words with the following verse, which one MS. begins with ונגב the first word of this clause. The ו prefixed to the first word of ver. 23, is no objection to this connexion, as instances of this sort are not uncommon in the midst of a clause. See Gen. xxii. 4. The like is observable at ver. 36 of this Chapter. Some understand by the Prince or Leader of the Covenant the High-Priest Onias, who was deposed and murdered by Antiochus, and his brother Jason placed in his stead. 2 Mac. iv. 10. But it must rather mean the young Philometor, the son of Cleopatra, the Rex fœderatus, as Michaelis styles him, and produces many authorities in his Supplement for this sense of the word נגיד. With this young Prince his uncle Antiochus had just concluded a peace; but after the league had practised deceit, as immediately follows. The expression ומן התחברות, “even after he had closely united himself by a league with him,” and the Gr. απο των συναναμιξεων, seem very strong, and characteristic of the conduct of Antiochus, as mentioned at ver. 21, for he had no intention to maintain or preserve the peace that he had made, but only did it to lull and amuse the young Prince who depended on it, while he himself was soon after making preparations for war.

23. —so that he shall advance and become strong with a small people by quiet measures.—This seems still to relate to the first become strong with a small people by quiet measures.

- 24 Then into the richest parts of the province shall he proceed, and shall do what neither his fathers, nor his fathers' fathers have done; the plunder, the spoil, and attempt upon Egypt; a few people shall assist him then, or his own forces shall be small, independent of those of his confederates, but by his art, and under pretence of promoting the interest of Philometor, he met with great encouragement in his designs; thus strengthening his cause by quiet measures; for I think the first word of ver. 24, בשלוח should be joined to this clause.

24. Then into the richest parts of the province shall he proceed.—Into the most wealthy and fertile parts of Egypt, which are those within the Delta, or the parts not far from the frontiers. When Antiochus went to examine the southern parts of his dominion, 2 Mac. iv. 21, he sent Apollonius with his retinue into Egypt; but it does not appear that he made an excursion thither himself. This however is certain that he afterwards defeated the forces of the Egyptians between Mount Casius and Pelusium, and thereupon strengthened the barrier in that quarter against any future attempts by Ptolemy, and after this returned to Tyre, and put his army into winter quarters. Thus ended his first campaign.

When he advanced into Egypt the next year, he went farther, even to Memphis, and executed greater achievements, and displayed more extraordinary instances of liberality or profusion than any of his predecessors, courting the Egyptians by large bribes and donations acquired from the plunder, and aiming at the entire sovereignty over that country. 1 Mac. i. 16. He also formed designs upon the barrier or strongest towns, and laid siege to Alexandria, &c., having secured Pelusium or the key of Egypt. It should be observed also, that Gr. and Ar. at the last clause of this verse, instead of “against the fortresses,” read “against Egypt;” having probably found in their copies מִצֻּרִים מִבְּצֻרִים. The two last words of this verse “for a time,” Syr. joins to the verse that follows. One MS. reads קֵץ עַתָּה instead of עַתָּה וְעַתָּה; but no alteration is wanted. The meaning seems to be, either that he should devise his schemes at the properest season, or that their effect shall be but of short continuance.

the wealth shall he disperse among them, and against the fortresses shall he devise his machinations even for 25 a time. For he shall rouse his strength and his courage against the king of the south with a great army, and the king of the south shall engage in battle with an army very great and powerful, yet he shall not stand, because they shall devise plots against him.
 26 Even those that eat the portion of his meat shall

---

25. For he shall rouse his strength—against the king of the south.
 —The Author of the second book of Mac. c. v. 1, expressly speaks of a second expedition of Antiochus against Egypt, and to this I conceive the present verse alludes. Though at his first attempt he had designs upon Egypt, yet he dared not avow them openly: Nor was he bold enough to do this, till settled in the firm enjoyment of his crown, or in about five years from the commencement of his usurpation. He began his reign in the 137th year of the æra of the Seleucidæ, or of the kingdom of the Greeks. 1 Mac. i. 10. And when his kingdom was established, he thought to reign over Egypt, that he might have the dominion of two realms, ver. 16. And after he had smitten Egypt, his return thence was in the 143rd year, ver. 20. It was about the fifth or sixth year of his reign therefore that he made this powerful descent. Ptolemy endeavoured to provide against it, and met him with a very large army, when an engagement ensued, in which the latter was unsuccessful, and obliged to flee before Antiochus. Thus they got the strong cities in the land of Egypt, and he took the spoils thereof. 1 Mac. i. 19.—It may be proper to take notice that there is a sort of hystorologia in the 24th and 25th verses, the consequences of this descent of Antiochus being first declared, before his engagement in the war; but the connexion seems to have required it, and the latter verse is offered as a reason or explanation of the occasion of his conduct in the former. And beside the narrative proceeds at the close of this verse to another subject, to explain the causes of Philometor's disappointment, which were the insidious conduct of his ministers Lennæus and Eulæus, and the treachery of his friends.

26. Even those that eat the portion of his meat shall betray him.— betray him, and his army shall be overflown, and many 27 shall fall down slain. Moreover of both these kings their intention shall be to act maliciously, and at one table they shall speak deceitfully, yet it shall not prosper, for still the end is for the time appointed.

 28 Then shall he return into his own land with great

For the meaning of the term פֶּתַח בִּזְיוֹן buccellam vel portionem cibi ejus, see on Chap. i. 5. Some of Philometor's Governors revolted from him, and his intimate friends forsook him, and by some means or other he fell into the hands of Antiochus. I suspect he was delivered up to him from the passage before us, or at least insidiously persuaded to yield himself up. For instead of יִשְׁבְּרוּהוּ "shall bruise or break him," one MS. reads יִשְׁכְּרוּהוּ, "shall sell or betray him:" "His army also shall be overflown;" so Vulg. and Syr. Twenty-six MSS. likewise drop the Vau in יִשְׁטוּהוּ, and thus read the word passively, "And many shall fall down slain," or as we read in the fore-cited Chapter of 1 Mac. "Many were wounded to death."

27. Moreover of both these kings their intention shall be to act maliciously, and at one table they shall speak deceitfully.—"To act maliciously," לְמַרֵּעַ, the participle in Hiph. for the infinitive, and with ל prefixed used as a gerund, as at ver. 1. There is a pleonasm in the affixes in the Hebrew, which in this instance I have endeavoured to follow in the translation. The conduct of Antiochus toward the Egyptians was courteous and flattering, and on this account at Memphis he treated their king Philometor as his relation and friend; he was admitted to the same table with him; and both made a shew of civilities and obliging behaviour, transferred the blame of their contentions each to other advisers or designs, and spoke lies under the mask of friendship and cordial affection. The real design of Antiochus was to retain the kingdom of Egypt, or the sole disposal of it; that of Philometor, to exclude him entirely, and take his measures accordingly: But the schemes of neither would be successful or prosper; for the end of the dissensions was not yet come, but was reserved for the time that Providence had fixed for it; the indignation against the Jews being not yet accomplished.

28. Then shall he return into his own land—having his heart upon wealth, and having his heart upon the holy Covenant he shall dispatch his work, as he returns into his own land.

29 At a time appointed he shall advance again into the south, but it shall not be as the former or as the latter.

30 For there shall come against him ships of Chittim, the holy Covenant.—The Author of the first book of Maccabees describes his opulence, and the wealth he had acquired from plundering Egypt: In his return to Syria he laid siege to Jerusalem, having been provoked by the apprehension of a rebellion there; and when he had taken that city he slew 40,000 of its inhabitants, and sold as many for slaves, impiously forced himself into the temple, polluted the Holy of Holies, under the conduct of Menelaus the traitorous brother of Jason, the latter having seized the office of High Priest on a report of the death of Antiochus at Memphis: and after having committed many other enormities and sacrileges, he continued his return to Antioch, carrying thither the spoils of Judea and Egypt. See 1 Mac. i. 20. and 2 Mac. v. 21, Joseph. Ant. xii. 6, and the Authors before cited.

29. At a time appointed he shall advance again into the south.—The city of Alexandria had not submitted to Antiochus, but having been offended with the conduct of Philometor, had set up his brother Energetes, or Physcon, as king in his stead. After a short time the two brothers laid aside their mutual dissensions, and agreed to reign jointly, that they might resist with more success the common enemy. Antiochus hastened to oppose this league, and now undertook another expedition into Egypt; but this attempt on Alexandria was not attended with like success with either of the former campaigns. Grotius following the Vulg. Latin thus explains the latter part of this verse, “This second expedition shall not be as successful as the former;” and the original may be rendered, “but the latter shall not be like the former.” However as the Author of the second book of Maccabees considers the expedition at ver. 25 as a second, we should rather reckon this as a third. The former indeed consisted of two campaigns, or two designs upon Egypt, the latter of which might be the second expedition of that writer. Indeed the Ar. and many Interpreters explain this as a third enterprise; and some consider it as a fourth.

30. For there shall come against him ships of Chittim.—Heb. ציים כתיב. One MS. reads צים as the word is in Num. xxiv. 24, and whereby he shall be grievously humbled; therefore two MSS. read כתיים as at Jeremiah ii. 10, but at Ezek. xxvii. 6, the latter word is the same as in the present text, and so Gen. x. 4. The countries peopled by the descendants of Cittim, the son of Javan, the son of Japhet, were probably called כתיים, and by contraction כתיים. Zeno the famous Stoic philosopher was born at a town in the island of Cyprus anciently called Citium, which Josephus thinks was built by this Cittim the son of Javan; and from hence he was called Kitievus. And perhaps the primary intention of the word כתיים might have been to denote the inhabitants of Cyprus or those other islands of the Mediterranean that were nearest Syria; but it was afterward's extended to Cilicia and the coasts of the Great Sea, to Greece, 1 Mac. i. 1, and viii. 5, and also to Italy; See Boch. Phaleg. lib. iii. c. 5. But the learned Vitranga on Isa. xxiii. 1, would confine the Cethiim altogether to the Italians; and of the four sons of Javan, he thinks Elisha means the Peloponnesians, Tharsis the Spaniards, Dodanim or Rhodanum the Gauls, as distinct from the Celts, and Cethiim the people of Italy. Gr. has οι εκπορευόμενοι, and seems to have read יוצאים, or יציים. Και ηξουσιν Ρωμαιοι. Cod. Chis.

The Roman ambassadors that are here alluded to were conveyed in their three-oared gallies, Vulg. trieres*, from Italy by way of Macedonia (which according to Livy, lib. xlv. the Romans had lately conquered), to Antiochus near Alexandria. The purport of their message was to enjoin him to desist from his enterprize against Egypt, which at the request of the two brothers they had undertaken to defend. In consequence of this message, and the spirited behaviour of C. Popilius Lænas, he was sadly mortified and much humbled†, and in his return to Syria vented his rage upon Jerusalem. He detached Appollonius with 22,000 men from his army, who laid the city waste, set fire to it in several places, and built a strong fortress in the city of David that might command the temple, in order to destroy those that came to worship there. He renewed also his connexions with the Jewish apostates, Menelaus and his party, and endeavoured to gain over the whole inhabitants to a conformity with the religion of the Greeks and their heathenish rites. See 1 Mac. i. 41, to the end.

* And so Num. xxiv. 24. צים מיד כתיים. Venient in trieribus de Italia.

† Ταπεινωθησεται. Th. pusillanimis fiet. Michaelis: Suppl. p. 1196.

shall he again have indignation against the holy Covenant, and dispatch his work as he returns, when he shall have intelligence with those that forsake the holy 31 Covenant. But mighty Powers shall stand up from these, who shall defile the sanctuary of strength, —shall have intelligence with those that forsake the holy Covenant. —

So Th. but Aquila, in Bahrdt, et cogitabit, ut deseratur pactum Sanctuarii. Yet the present seems the best sense, and most agreeable to the Heb. Text.

31. But mighty Powers shall stand up from these.—Heb. כְּמִנּוֹ, from the descendants of Chittim. The last expedition of Antiochus into Egypt has been already mentioned, and consequently his last attack on the city and people of the Jews. Another power was introduced at the 30th verse, in the term ‘ships of Chittim;’ and to this the narrative most probably now turns, and by a fair interpretation will be found applicable to the affairs and consequences of this fourth beast or kingdom to the end of the book. A variety of opinions concerning this part of the Prophecy, the reasons of the sudden transition from the Grecian to the Roman power, and the arguments in favour of the interpretation which we shall now follow, may be seen largely treated of at the beginning of Bp. Newton’s 17th Dissertation. Some copies of the Gr. and Ar. Versions read here, ‘arms and an offspring;’ the word זְרַעִים has both senses; and in one MS. it is followed by the word יָם, of the Sea or of the West. These variations tend at least to confirm the application of the passage to the Romans, who springing originally from some of the Grecian coasts migrated to the west, and settled on the borders of the same sea. By “arms” זְרַעִים may be understood military powers of superior strength, fortified troops, or mighty forces. At ver. 15 and 22 of this Chap. I have applied the word זְרַעוֹת to frontier or garrisoned towns, and by an easy metonymy I conceive the term is also applicable to the troops engaged in those garrisons, and from thence to armies or forces detached on any singular expedition. “Des hommes puissans viendront.” Calmet. These powers having first arisen from the side of Greece shall be established therein again; for Paulus Æmilius subdued Macedonia; and the rest of Greece came under the Roman yoke in the reign of Epiphanes. From thence they shall descend upon Syria, and in proand shall remove the daily sacrifice, and set up the 32 abomination that maketh desolate. Now those that impiously disregard the Covenant will dissemble in flatteries, but the people that know their God will 33 firmly retain and practise it. And those that are wise

cess of time imitate Antiochus in ravaging and destroying Jerusalem. The latter part of the verse seems to agree better with this interpretation than with that which refers it to the Grecian Monarch : Though I am inclined to think that the Divine Mind had an eye to both, to the type and the antitype, or to the abuses of Antiochus, of which an account has been given in Chap. viii. and to the more full and fatal havoc under the son of Vespasian. See Ch. ix. 26, 27. After this the type seems only to be lightly glanced at ; and we shall go on to consider the narrative as chiefly pointing at the concerns of the Christian Church to the end of the indignation, or till the purposes and designs of Providence are fully completed and answered.

Why the Temple is called the Sanctuary of Strength, see Ezek. xl. 2. Ps. xevi. 6. But one MS. drops the word הַמִּקְדָּשׁ, and another has it before הַמִּקְדָּשׁ.

32. Now those that impiously disregard the Covenant will dissemble.—The verb יִחְנִיף is singular, and from hence is thought to refer to Antiochus, but it may as well be referred to the new power mentioned in the last verse. However I suspect there is a mistake in the Text, as the Versions Gr. Ar. and Vul. read the verb plurally ; with a very little variation I think we should read יִחְנִפוּ, to which the noun at the beginning will serve as a nominative case, and thus Vulg. seems to have given the true sense, “ Impii in testamentum simulabunt fraudulentem.” The history to which the passage refers is the artifices and alluring promises which the Roman Emperors made use of, to draw away the first Christians from the profession of their faith. Many were induced to dissemble and to apostatise to the ancient idolatry ; but those who were truly sincere and pious adhered steadily to the faith, and practised the duties of the new covenant into which they had been received.

33. And those that are wise instructors of the people shall have understanding in many things.—The two first words of this verse appear to be in regimine, and the participle in Hiph. signifies “to inform or instruct;”

instructors of the people shall have understanding in many things, yet they shall fall by the sword, and by the flame, in captivity, and amongst the plunder of the 34 times. But after they shall have fallen, they shall be relieved with a little assistance, when many shall be 35 fastened upon them through flatteries. Also of those strictly it denotes men of understanding, ingenious persons, whether of natural or acquired abilities; Gr. οἱ συνετοί; and its connexion with the next word should seem to intimate such sort of skill as would contribute to the people's benefit. The verb יבינו must have the intransitive sense as it is followed by ל, and so Gr. συνησουσιν εἰς πολλὰ. The meaning is, that the teachers should be persons of well-informed minds, alluding probably to the communications they would receive from the Spirit of God. But one MS. omits the word לרבים, and nine MSS. read at the end of the verse ימים רבים "many days," which Syr. interprets by "a thousand days." Possibly the word לרבים has lost its place and should be at the end of the verse. Yet the Text is certainly capable of a good sense, as I have now translated it. Rectè ימים sine addito. Houbig.

The persecution under Antiochus lasted a few years, and the conduct of the Jews and their sufferings under it may be seen in the 1st book of Mac. ch. ii. and 2 Mac. ch. vi. and vii. and Josephus Ant. xii. 7. See also on ch. viii. But the language applies very forcibly to the instructions of the first teachers of Christianity, and their consequent sufferings in ten different persecutions under the Emperors of Pagan Rome.

34. But after they shall have fallen, they shall be relieved with a little assistance.—That of Mattathias and Judas Maccabæus and his followers, if the Text be referred to Antiochus; but rather should be meant that of Constantine under the Christian dispensation. The long persecution of Dioclesian was now brought to an end, and the Emperor become the Patron of the Church, which yet was torn by intestine feuds and discordant tenets: and though many were inclined to adhere to the religion of the Prince, yet it was more from sinister designs, and the prospect of advantage, than any real and sincere attachment.

35. Also of those that have understanding shall some fall.—The that have understanding shall some fall, to be proved among them, and to be cleansed, and to be made white, even to the time of the end.

36 For still for an appointed time a king shall even act wisest and best of men, the teachers of the true doctrine, the zealous defenders of the faith; some of these should be involved in the common calamity, to answer the purposes of Providence, “to be proved among them;” בָּהֶם לְצָרוֹף; πυρωσαι εν αυτοις. MS. Pach. Many MSS. read לְצָרוֹף dropping the ו: Thus, according to Vul., the verbs may each assume a passive form. And this occasional suffering by way of proof or purgation will continue “to the time of the end.” Error will abound, and there will still arise fit persons to refute it; whose labours will redound to their own advantage, as well as to the glory of God. Mr. Mede, b. iv. p. 797, understands by “the time of the end,” the termination of the Grecian monarchy, which in the holy account is not extended beyond Antiochus Epiphanes, as no acts of any king thereof are recorded later. See on ch. viii. 23. The Author of Revelation of St. John Considered, understands by the expression that period, when the suffering brethren shall be all brought into the spiritual temple, and as witnesses prophesy in sackcloth. Rev. xi. 2. The like expression is elsewhere to be met with in Scripture, and has different senses according to the different objects to which it must be necessarily referred. At Matt. xxiv. 14, it relates primarily to the destruction of the temple and state of the Jews; but Dr. Clarke in his Paraphrase on the place observes, “In like manner when the Christian religion has made its progress through all the nations of the earth, the end of the world shall come.” Yet in the text before us nothing more seems to be meant by the expression, than the end which Providence shall appoint for the troubles and distresses of his people.

36. For still for an appointed time a king shall even act according to his will.—A king, that is, a state or kingdom under any sort of power or potentate. See Mat. iv. 8. I follow Mr. Mede in thus joining to this verse the latter clause of the preceding. Many passages that follow can have no proper relation to Antiochus, who did not long survive his profanation of the temple and persecution of the Jews: and especially in the 12th Chap. the Prophecy must evidently be extended to the latter times, and to the state of the Church in those according to his will, and shall exalt himself and magnify himself above every god, and against the God of gods shall he speak marvellously, and shall prosper until the completion of the indignation; for the decision 37 is made. Also to the gods of his fathers he shall not times. Moreover if we compare the language of St. Paul in 2 Thess. ii. 4, with the words that we find in the four next verses of this Prophecy, and if we trace the resemblance farther in the 13th and 17th chapters of Revelations, we shall have little doubt but the same character is meant by all three Writers, and that their descriptions can properly belong to none but Antichrist. See this analogy finely illustrated by Bishop Newton in his 3rd Vol. of Dissert. chap. xxvi.

The Cop. Paris. Code reads this clause somewhat stronger; instead of "faciet," shall act, it has "declinabit," shall decline, or turn away.

— and shall exalt himself and magnify himself above every god.—Both these verbs are in Hithpahel and of very strong import. "And against the God of gods" (omitted in Th. but supplied in MSS. Alex. Pach. and Copt.) "shall he speak υπερογκα great swelling words," marvellous or even blasphemous expressions. See on Chap. vii. 25. This arbitrary power shall assume despotic authority over other potentates both in civil and religious matters, and shall occasionally exalt itself above all laws human or divine. Yet it shall prosper, or continue possessed of absolute sway, till the indignation shall be completed, that is probably, till the days of vengeance against the Jews shall be accomplished. See Mr. Mede, p. 667.

— for the decision is made.—So Syr. and thus Mr. Mede, p. 903, "quippe decisio facta est;" which he refers to the time. For the signification of נִחְרָצָה a participle of the feminine absolute, see on Chap. ix. 27, the verb that follows is of the same gender in Niph. One MS. omits כִּי; and if this be dropped, the words may both agree with כָּלָה just before, and we may render, "until the determined accomplishment of the indignation shall be effected." See Chap. xii. 7. Kimchi has observed in his Comment on Obadiah, that when Rome shall be laid waste, there shall be redemption for Israel.

37. Also to the gods of his fathers he shall not attend.—Gr. ἐπι παντας θεους των πατερων, "to all or any of the gods of his fathers;"

attend, nor to the desire of women, nor to any God shall he attend, for he shall magnify himself above all.

---

that is, he shall pay no attention to the religion of his ancestors: For the heathen Polytheism was quite abolished by the Roman emperors, in the time of Constantine: but Vulg. and Syr. render the word אלהי in the sing. num. and in this sense it must mean, that Anti-christ should pay little attention to the established or generally received religion, but corrupt the proper worship of the true God with his own vitiated mixtures.

—nor to the desire of women, nor to any God shall he attend.—The former preposition ἐν is not in the Greek of Th. but it is in Copt. and MS. Pachom. Mr. Dimock proposes an ingenious alteration in the first part of this clause, and instead of נשים “women,” would read גוים “Nations,” so that by “the desire of nations,” might be meant Christ or the Messiah, as at Hag. ii. 7, but as the conjecture is supported by no authority, we must not venture to adopt it; and he allows the present text to be capable of a good sense. Bp. Newton from Mr. Mede interprets it as relating to the conjugal state, the desire or affection for wives. See Cant. vii. 10, Ezek. xxiv. 16, LXX, in Bahrdt, et concupiscentiis mulierum non subiacabit.

By discouraging marriage the Roman emperors did great detriment to human society, and great discredit to the christian religion. This example was followed; celibacy was encouraged in papal Rome, monks and nuns were multiplied, and by degrees the clergy were altogether prohibited from matrimony. See Mede's Works, p. 668. The Author of Revelation of St. John Considered, interprets the word חמדת in a kind of active sense, as the love of women to their offspring, to whom sterility was deemed a reproach; but it should rather be considered as a passive quality, and the proper sense of the word is “desirableness.” Thus Cicero to his wife, En mea lux, meum desiderium. As to the remaining part of the clause before us, “nor to any god shall he attend,” three MSS. drop the Vau in the word אלהי, and the whole is dropped in Cod. Chis. or the Roman LXX. By any or every God may be understood a total disregard of religious obligations of every sort, which this anti-christian power would not scruple to violate. Neither the gods of the nations, nor the God of Heaven, neither the propensities of nature, nor the bonds of civil society, were duly regarded; but dispensations and indulgences of all kinds were granted; and thus he magnified himself above all things, above every tie natural or voluntary, civil or sacred.

38 Yet near to God in his seat shall he honour Mahuzzim,

38. Yet near to God in his seat shall he honour Mahuzzim.—For this signification of the particle ל see Nold. p. 406. Or it may be rendered “before God,” coram Deo, or instar Dei. “Twenty-five MSS. read the first word ולאלוה, and twelve have ידעוהו in the next clause, which is more grammatical.” Mr. Dimock. על כנו “on his seat” or base, or in his place. Gr. επι τουτου αυτου, and so Vulg. and Ar. super sedem suam. Syr. see ver. 7, 20, 21. Gr. and Vulg. retain the word Mahuzzim.—Porphyry and Grotius have interpreted it of the Phœnician Deity Modin: All interpreters, as far as I know, refer it to some Deity: And from the signification of the word, “strengths or forces,” Mr. Amner* seems to think it means Jupiter Olympius. But the whole of the description of this king or kingdom certainly agrees better with Antichrist, than Antiochus, to whom he confines it; and Jupiter Olympius was no other than Baal, or בעל שמי who long before had a Temple at Tyre, and consequently could not be the deity whom his fathers were unacquainted with; for this must be the proper sense of the verb ידע in the next clause. Four MSS. indeed drop this next clause; but as the Versions all retain it, together with the other MSS. and Editions, we may presume the error lies in those four copies, and if we reflect that the former clause and this begin and end with the same words, and that the latter part of the verse after the second יכבר may be fairly enough connected with the former clause, we shall not wonder at the mistake.

The Mahuzzim, protectors or defenders, according to a just sense of the word, are the objects of worship which were established in Christian churches, the saints and angels, that were adored in the same places with the true God, and too frequently instead of him. To these their devotees had recourse for protection in distress: In the very temples and near the altars of the true God or of Christ, whom their pagan ancestors knew not, they did honour to them with costly shrines and images, decorated with superstitious ornaments of the most valuable and expensive furniture. See Isa. xlv. 9. This superstition began as early as the fourth century, and many of the fathers tell us, that even near the God whom his fathers knew not shall he do honour, with gold, and with silver, and with precious stones, and with the most desirable things. And he shall provide for fortresses of Mahuzzim together the worship of Mahuzzim as such, or of saints and angels under that character, was generally established. Also in the year 787, image-worship was fully ratified by the seventh general council, or the second at Nice. For authorities to this purpose see Mr. Mede's Works, b. iii. Sir Isaac Newton on Daniel, Chap. xiv. and Bp. Newton's 17th Dissertation. It is certain that the term מַעֲזֵי "protector," LXX. υπερασπιστης, is applied to the true God in Ps. xxxi. 5, and again at Ps. xxxvii. 39, and therefore we may less wonder if by the same word in the plural number מַעֲזֵיִם should be understood the false or idol deities.

* See his Essay on the Prophecies of Daniel, printed at London, for J. Johnson, 1776.

The Editor of Cod. Chisian. smartly censures Sir Isaac Newton for his opinion on this subject, which in substance resembles what is given above, but does not attempt to refute it, unless by offering what I conceive to be a much more objectionable one of his own. He thinks Mars is the idol here alluded to, and founds his notion on a resemblance between the word מַעֲזֵי, and the Latin Mavors. Thus, Maoz or Maos, by the assistance of the Æolic Digamma Mafos or Mavos, and by the assumption of the letter R, Mavors. Some coins also which he points at in the Musellian and Medicean Museums are conceived to have the figure of Antiochus on one side, and a Mars hasta'us with a bow or whip on the reverse, but the Antiochus of the latter he acknowledges has been taken for Apolle. I neither think his derivation of the word sufficiently accurate, nor the uncertain authority of his two ancient coins sufficiently decisive, nor the illustrations which he produces from the first of Maccabees, from Polybius, and Athenæus, sufficiently in point, to establish the opinion for which he so strenuously contends.

39. And he shall provide for fortresses of Mahuzzim together with God.—One MS. omits the ל before מַעֲזֵי; But Gr. has τοῖς οχυρώμασι. The Council of Constantinople calls images Δαιμονικά οχυρώματα. These fortresses are the shrines, or temples, or strong holds of the tutelar saints: Provision was to be made for them under the same roof in which the true God was adored, as was the case in both the Greek and Latin Communions. Mr. Mede observes, b. iii. p. 674, with God, whom he shall certainly acknowledge; and that the Greeks at this day in their Preces Horariæ thus invoke the blessed Virgin; "O thou Mother of God, thou impregnable Wall, thou Fortress of Salvation (מעוז ישועות Ps. 28,) we call upon thee, that thou wouldest be a Fence to this city."

—whom he shall certainly acknowledge.—נכר אשר הכיר, or as many MSS. read with the Masora, הכיר for יכיר; though there is no necessity for a change, as the distant ו may affect the tense. The word נכר has usually been considered as a noun adjective, and joined with the preceding word, "a strange god," and thus referred to the true God, from whom these false worshippers were in fact estranged, not unlike the unknown god of the Athenians; Acts xvii. 23. But I rather look upon it as the infinitive in Pihel, making with the same verb that follows in Hiph. a reduplication, and to be referred to the Mahuzzim just before. The sense in both conjugations is nearly the same, "to know or acknowledge;" see Job iv. 16, and xxi. 29, and Deut. xxi. 17, and though the word אשר occurs between the two verbs, yet I do not apprehend this to be any material objection, as a word of this sort, especially the negative particle לא, is often introduced between reduplicates. See Jer. xxx. 11.

The Versions read the word that follows וירבה, or perhaps with only lengthening the Jod ורבה, but the sense does not necessarily require an alteration. "He shall multiply the honour, and cause them to have dominion over many." Every country, city, and even town, had a sort of tutelar saint, and the parish churches were dedicated each to its proper patron or protector, to whom vows were made, and religious homage performed. Thus the influence of these Mahuzzim was widely extended, and portions of the land or country were allotted to the Priests, which in time became so large, that whole provinces were at their disposal, were sold out, and subjected to their usurpations and tyranny.

If the reader will turn to the note on Chap. vii. 25, he will find a series of conclusions drawn from the preceding observations on that chapter; the last of which was, that the power there alluded to was Antichrist, who under the times of the Gospel would exalt himself as God, and usurp some of the characters and the worship due to the most High. In our subsequent inquiries several other marks have occurred by which we might be able to ascertain in a great measure he shall multiply the honour, and cause them to have to whom this character of Antichrist belongs, or where the usurpation is seated, which has been so unfriendly to the true church of Christ, and will continue to be so, until it be stripped of its dominion, or until the time of the end. But perhaps we shall find enough for our satisfaction, if beside the general recollection of what has been advanced before, we attentively revise the four last verses, or, at farthest, the part of this chapter from ver. 31, which relates to the Roman empire. Now from the mention of "the sanctuary," and "the people that know their God," and "the skilful instructors," it seems evident that the angel chiefly alludes to ecclesiastical matters, or the state of the church. And it is evident from ver. 33 and 35, that a time of persecution and great danger is pointed at. In this afflicted state of the church then a new power was to arise, to which many distinguishing characters are assigned at the 36th and following verses. It would in the first place be an idolatrous and licentious power, of great and widely extended influence. It was also to demolish the ancient worship of its fathers, and to exalt itself above the ties of nature, and the obligations of every sort of religion; to give into all the extravagancies of superstition, and to subject every thing to its tyranny, usurpation, or avarice.

---

Now about the year of Christ 322, imperial Rome became Christian: Soon after this time errors began to spread themselves in the church; schisms and divisions arose, and in consequence of these great persecutions followed: And thus the little Horn of Daniel, the man of sin of St. Paul, and the beast of the Apocalypse began to increase and prevail. It was not till some hundred years after, that they reached their full strength; but at some part of the 8th century the power which is represented by each of these emblems was so fully established in Rome, that there can be very little doubt to whom it ought to be assigned; and in the 10th and 11th centuries the characters were so marked and glaring, that they were decisively fixed by the writers of those times on the occupiers of St. Peter's Chair. The term of the continuance of this tyranny cannot be ascertained, as we know not where exactly to fix its commencement. Its origin was gradual, and if we may judge from circumstances that now appear, we may conjecture that its decline will be so likewise. "The fall of Antichrist," as Bp. Hurd remarks, Serm. viii. p. 277, "is dominion over many; for the land will he distribute at a price.

40 But at the time of the end a king of the south shall push at him; also a king of the north shall tempestunot a single event to happen all at once, but a state of things to continue through a long tract of time, and to be gradually accomplished." And in some future ages of the world, when the period shall be finished, or the predicted years brought to a conclusion, I doubt not but it will fully appear, that the seat of Antichrist was in papal Rome; and that the characters which Daniel, St. Paul, and St. John, have given of it will be found to have corresponded with the usurpations of the Popedom. For farther illustrations on this interesting subject I must refer my readers to Bp. Newton's 26th Dissertation, Mr. Lowman on Rev. xiii. p. 146, &c. and to the Warburtonian Lectures, especially the 7th and 11th of Bp. Hurd.

40. But at the time of the end a king of the south shall push at him.—In the latter days, υστεροις καιροις, or in the later ages of the world (see Mr. Mede, b. iii. 4.) "a king of the south," not Philometor, unless we can suppose the angel in this concise account of things to repeat what he had detailed before; nor does the monarch of the south always refer to Egypt in Scripture, as the queen of the south is the queen of Sheba on the coasts of the Indian ocean; and Bochart cites from the book that is called Juchasin an application of this kingdom of Jeman, or of the south, to the Saracens: This kingly power "shall push at him," an obvious metaphor from the butting of bulls, the verb in Hithpahel is strong, as is that also in the following clause: But one MS. has not עמו, "at him," which the Gr. also omits, and reads "he shall push at the king of the south;" and thus the allusion may probably be to the holy wars or crusades against the Saracens under Saladine. Yet MS. Pachom. has μετ' αυτου ο βασιλευς του Νοτου. If therefore we retain the present text, we must refer it to the incursions of the Saracens over the western empire. This people came from the south, from Arabia, and under Mohammed and his successors the Caliphs subdued Egypt and Syria, and made great advances over the provinces of Christendom, both in Asia and Africa and even in Europe.

—also a king of the north shall tempestuously rush upon him.—

ously rush upon him with chariots and with horsemen, and with a large fleet, and shall enter into the coun-41 tries, and shall overflow and pass through. He shall
 • enter also into the land of glory, and though many shall be ruined, these shall escape out of his hand,

Shall come as in a whirlwind against him with chariots and with horsemen. After the Saracens had made encroachments on the Grecian empire, the Turks from the north, or the ancient Scythians and Tartars, finished the work of the former invaders, entirely reduced Asia under their dominion, and made considerable advances in Europe. The Prophet has several times in this narrative expressed the progress and havoc of war by the ravages of an inundation, and we find the like allusion at the close of this verse. The transactions of this verse are limited to the time of the sixth trumpet of St. John, Rev. ix. 16, and the description of the army is thought to correspond with what Ezekiel foretels of Gog in the land of Magog. See Chap. xxxviii. 2, and Bp. Newcome's Note upon the place. The retinue accompanying this king of the north agrees very well with the cavalry and fleets of the Turks, when they subdued the eastern empire about the beginning of the 16th century.

41. He shall enter also into the land of glory.—Gr. and Ar. retain the name Tzabi, as in former instances, see on ver. 16, and Chap. viii. 9. Syr. has the land of Israel. Vulg. the glorious land. The Turks under their Sultan Selim recovered from Egypt Palestine, or the Holy Land, which has been subject to the Ottoman empire ever since.

—and though many shall be ruined, these shall escape.—One MS. reads רבבים for רבות; but the following clause will incline us to prefer the present text; so that רבות may be either a feminine absolute equivalent to a neuter, or may agree with ארצות. Edom was a very considerable country about the time of David, who made war with it, destroyed its city, and dispersed its inhabitants, 2 Sam. viii. he smote Moab also and the Ammonites; the two latter peoples were the descendants of Lot, and of the former or Esau it was foretold, that by his sword he should live, which were the dying words of his father. By “the chief of the Ammonites,” or of the sons of Ammon, we may understand either the metropolis Rabbatham, near the Edom and Moab and the chief of the Ammonites.

 42 Yet when he shall extend his power over the countries, 43 the land of Egypt shall not escape: But he shall have dominion over the treasures of gold and of silver, and over all the desirable things of Egypt; and the Libyans

Philadelphia of Ammianus, or the principal cities thereof. The word רַאשֵׁי is applied to Amalek, Num. xxiv. 20. But Syriac, as the Bishop of Waterford observes, reads שְׂאֲרִית, “the remnant of the children of Ammon,” and Cod. Chis. has ἀρχη.

Edom and Moab and the Ammonites are thus joined, Jer. xxv. 21, and we meet with them again together, Isai. xi. 14. They were all to the east or south-east of the Dead Sea, and now make a part of the extensive range of the wild Arabs. Thus Mr. Mede understands the last clause of this verse, as referring to the Arabians, or that part of their country which was never subdued by the Turk; but rather sums of money have been continually paid by the Ottoman power for the safe passage of their caravans through the Desart.

42.—the land of Egypt shall not escape.—Selim obtained a complete victory over Egypt, and put an end to the dominion of the Mamalucs in 1517.

43. But he shall have dominion over the treasures—of Egypt.—This relates to the conquest just mentioned, and the effects and consequences of it. See Bp. Newton’s 17th Dissertation, and the Authors he refers to, p. 183, &c.

—and the Libyans and Ethiopians shall be in his steps.—Many MSS. and some ancient, read לְוָבִים and לוֹשִׁים with the Vau in each word, which is probably right. Gr. reads, “and of the Libyans and Ethiopians in their strong holds,” ἐν τοῖς οὐχυρωμασιν αὐτῶν. Cod. Chis. ἐν τῷ ὄχλῳ αὐτοῦ. Vulg. per Libyam quoque et Æthiopiam transibit, Possibly this word בְּמַצְעָדָיו should be, or may mean, the same with בְּמוֹעֲדָיו at Isai. xiv. 31, which Bp. Lowth translates “among his levies,” and Ar. “in his footsteps;” And thus the French Trans. “seront à sa suite.” In general the countries beyond Egypt in the more southern as well as western parts of Africa, which were confederate with Egypt, (see Ezek. xxx. 5.) these became obedient to the Turk, were either, according to Syr. his auxiliaries, or ready to 44 and Ethiopians shall be in his steps. But rumours shall disturb him from the east and from the north; follow his commands, or, with Mr. Mede, should be at his devotion. But this does not appear to be true of Antiochus, at least Jerom observes, that it is not so recorded in history.

---

By the Libyans must be understood the inhabitants of the desert and the interior countries on the west or south-west parts of Egypt, from לוֹב, a word which has the signification of dry or thirsty. So Lucan, per calidas Libyæ sitientis arenas.

The Cushites were the descendants of Ham, from his son Cush; whose original settlement is said to have been at Chuzestan or Susiana; and his posterity are supposed to have dwelt on the banks of the Euphrates and the Persian Gulf, and thence to have intermixed with the Arabs. But whether from these parts on the other side of the Red Sea, or from Egypt, which was undoubtedly peopled by the race of Ham, it is probable that multitudes of the Cushites migrated towards Ethiopia, that is Arabia Chusæa; and, according to Mr. Bruce, built a city very early at Axum, and pushed their colony down to Atbara and the lower parts of Abyssinia: They studied, as he observes, at Meroe, lived in caves in the mountains, and seem to have had communication with Thebes, the No-Ammon of the prophet Nahum, Chap. iii. 8, above which there are caves in the mountains, inhabited by Troglodytes, as above Meroe. Nahum observes of this famous city, that “Ethiopia and Egypt were her strength, and there is no end to it: Phut and Lubim were her helpers.” Phut may mean the dispersed and scattered Cushites, or the shepherds of Africa, and Lubim the Libyan peasants. These were employed as carriers of goods on camels through the deserts from the earliest ages, and were the chief means of promoting commerce, before navigation and the directing quality of the magnetic needle were well understood.

44. But rumours shall disturb him from the east and from the north.—A great number of MSS. read יְבוֹהֲלוּ with the Masoretes, as also בְּחִמָּה in the next clause with הָ for אֵ, which are probably right. Bp. Newton and Mr. Mede think that this and the next verse remain yet to be fulfilled. The Author of Revelation of St. John therefore he shall go forth in great fury to destroy and 45 devote to utter perdition many. And he shall fix the Considered, has fixed on a remarkable event for this verse, and refers it to the victory of Amurath the IVth. in 1638, over the united forces of the Mengrelians, Georgians, and Circassian Tartars on the north, with the Persians on the east. "The Turk on the report of the union of these nations was apprehensive for his whole dominions; but collecting his forces he crossed the Euphrates, took the city of Bagdad by storm; and having made great havoc over the enemy, returned in triumph to Constantinople, being made complete master of the whole eastern empire." Appen. i. p. 467. Still however it is observable, that some of the words, such as לְהַחֲרִים, Gr. του αναθεματισαι, "to devote to utter perdition," should incline us to think that the war alluded to would be undertaken on a religious account, and as the next verse is allowed by the same Author to be as yet uncompleted, we may readily conceive that both relate to nearly coeval events, and shall both hereafter have a signal accomplishment in the fortunes of the Jews.

45. And he shall fix the tents of his pavilion between the seas.—Gr. and Vulg. consider אֶפְרֶדְנו Aphedno as a proper name; Houbigant says, it is the name of a place on the mountains between the Caspian and Euxine seas. But it seems rather a Syriac appellative, which often occurs in the Talmud, and probably signifies little more than אֶדְלָה; so that the tents of his pavilion may mean "his chief or princely tents." The word occurs in Jonathan's Targum, Jerem. xliii. 10, where the Hebrew word that answers to it is שְׂפָרִירו, a word that in its original sense denotes the beauty and splendour that attends royalty: "to fix his royal military tent" seems to imply certain conquest and peaceable possession; "between the seas" must mean the seas near Jerusalem, probably the Dead Sea and the Mediterranean.

I have followed the Hebrew literally in the periphrasis of Mount Zion, or the mountainous country on which Jerusalem was built. See Ps. xcvi. 9 and ver. 41 of this Chapter. Here, that is, in the Holy Land, the Turk shall fix his encampments, and shall enjoy a temporary triumph: "But he shall come to his end," see Ezek. xxxix. 2, and Rev. xix. 20, 21, "and there shall be no helper." The powers of Russia and Persia united, according to an ancient tradition, tents of his pavilion between the seas in the mountain of the glory of holiness ; yet he shall come to his end, and no one shall help him.

---

may probably prove fatal to the Ottoman empire ; and the fall of it we may expect to happen in the land of Judea, after the return of the people of Israel, that are now dispersed, into their own country : At least this conjecture has been favoured by writers of note. But when these things shall come to pass, or by what precise means, must be left for time to discover. The fortune of the Turk has doubtless been declining for some years ; in the end the ruin of the power that opposes the Church of Christ shall be certain and full ; and “ the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the depths of the sea.” Isa. xi. 9.

Though Calmet confines the latter part of this Prophecy to the persecutions of Antiochus against the Jews, yet he observes at the close of this Chapter, that Theodoret, St. Jerom, and many other interpreters, understand it of Antichrist ; that it is necessary to acknowledge that Antiochus Epiphanes is one of the most sensible and most expressive figures of this enemy of Jesus Christ, and that these things which the angel foretels of Antiochus, will receive a farther accomplishment before the end of the world.

CHAPTER XII.

- 1 MOREOVER at that time shall rise up Michael the great prince that standeth up for the children of thy people: then shall there be a time of trouble; such as never was since the existence of a nation until this time; and in this time shall the people escape, every 2 one that is found written in the book. Then multi-
-

1. Moreover at that time shall rise up Michael.—The 1 at the beginning of this Chapter connects it with the foregoing; and some would join this whole clause to the last verse of Chap. xi. and thus the sense would be, Though none should assist the Antichristian power, or that which was inimical to the church of God, yet Michael should stand up for thy people, to defend the cause of the Jews, and to destroy the enemies of the true religion.

—then shall there be a time of trouble.—When the Jews shall be restored, and the church delivered by the great Archangel who is peculiarly employed in embassies of this sort, there shall be such calamities as no nation hath ever before experienced, since men were formed into civil societies. Tribulations are often mentioned in Scripture as preceding extraordinary events, see Ezek. xxx. 2, 3, and especially as ushering in the kingdom of God, whether that kingdom relate to the first or second Advent of the Messiah. See Isai. viii. 22, Jerem. xxx. 7, Mat. xxiv. 21, at which last place an expression is used of like import with this of Daniel. This unusual and extraordinary time of trouble is supposed to correspond with that represented by St. John, to follow upon the pouring out of the seventh vial. Rev. xvi. 18. Yet the people of God shall escape.

—every one that is found written in the book.—Whosoever shall be registered or arranged in the class of the pious or faithful. At Ezek. ix. 4, the pious are said to be marked with a Thau in their foreheads, like the capital Chi of the Greeks: See Bp. Newcome on tudes that sleep the dust of the ground shall awake, some to life everlasting, and others to reproaches, to the place; see also Phil. iv. 3, Rev. iii. 5, and xx. 15, where the book is called the Book of Life. Rejoice, says our Lord to his disciples, Luke x. 20, that your names are written in heaven, that ye are enlisted under the banners of the Gospel, called the kingdom of heaven, and are thereby entitled to its present graces, and if you persevere with faith and constancy will be rewarded with its future glories.

2. Then multitudes that sleep the dust of the ground shall awake—This is a just and exact translation of the Hebrew; and if there were any doubts before, whether some of the verses immediately preceding should be extended beyond the times of Antiochus, I think this and the next verse must entirely remove them. Even Grotius, after Porphyry, allows a mystical sense to these words, so that they may be understood to point at a resurrection of the just and unjust; a doctrine firmly received by Christians, though in his opinion not to be revealed before the times of the Gospel. The Prophecy as we have seen was brought down to the restoration of Israel, and immediately thereupon proceeds to the general restoration or resurrection of all men, and the final judgment. The Jews themselves believed this doctrine, and had hopes therein founded on the promises of God to their fathers, Acts xxvi. 6, and there is no passage in the Old Testament that more strongly declares this truth than that before us, and which without great force can be applied to nothing else. “Nothing,” says Calmet, “is more express than these words to prove the resurrection of the dead, &c. This is the simple, literal, and natural sense of the place, and it can only be understood in a metaphorical sense of the Jews.”

It has long ago been observed, that the word רבים “multitudes,” ought to be considered as equivalent to “All.” So Rom. v. 15, 19. See also John v. 28, where our Saviour says, “All that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth,” &c. And Mr. Peters in his Dissert. on Job has justly observed, that “the All of our Saviour is in the judgment of the learned a good interpretation of the Prophet’s Many, and must have been esteemed so by those who heard Him speak the one passage, and were well acquainted with the other, its parallel.” The words אֲדַכְתִּי עַפְרָא are joined by a Makkaph

3 confusion everlasting. And those that have wisely instructed shall shine like the splendour of the firmament, and those that have made many righteous like according to the Masora, and ought to be connected : The Versions render as with the preposition  $\text{ב}$  prefixed, but they should rather be considered as in apposition with the preceding participle, and are descriptive of the dead bodies of men. See Job. vii. 21, and xxi. 26. Some of these shall awake to life everlasting, and others to reproaches and confusion everlasting. Gr. εις ονειδισμον και εις αισχυνην αιωνιον. The word  $\text{רָאוֹן}$  is only used in this place, and Isa. lxvi. 24, the sense of the word there seems to be a kind of spectacle, shew, or nausea ; but the Targum renders by  $\text{מסת חזינא}$  “we have seen enough,” deriving from  $\text{די}$  sufficientia, and  $\text{ראה}$  videre ; and indeed one MS. reads  $\text{דִּירָאוֹן}$ , and another prefixes  $\text{ו}$  to the word as it stands in the present text. I know of no English word that answers to it better than “confusion.”

To this concise and energetic description of our future recompence, I will beg leave to subjoin by way of contrast the sensual and gross one of Mohammed, taken from the fourth Chapter of the Koran : “Verily those who disbelieve our signs, we will surely cast to be broiled in hell-fire ; so often as their skins shall be well burned, we will give them other skins in exchange, that they may take the sharper torment ; for God is mighty and wise. But those who believe, and do that which is right, we will bring into gardens watered by rivers ; therein shall they remain for ever, and there shall they enjoy wives free from all impurity ; and we will lead them into perpetual shades.” And again, in Chap. xxxvi. “they and their wives shall rest in shady groves, leaning on magnificent couches ; there shall they have fruit, and obtain whatever they shall desire.”

3. And those that have wisely instructed shall shine like the splendor of the firmament.—Or, as the Heavens adorned with the sun and the other glorious lights. In the Hebrew the first word is the same participle as at Chap. xi. 33, and the whole verse seems intended as an encouragement to those teachers especially, who were to fall and suffer such distresses as in the fore-mentioned passage are described. Cappellus observes of the two clauses of this verse, that one member is εξηγητικον, or explanatory of the other : The splendor of the firmament and the splendor of the stars is the same ; and those that have taught, and those that have justified many, must mean those, that either by teaching, or by good living, have shewed the way to righteousness and life eternal. The Judge of all the earth will certainly do right: He hath given the fullest assurance that there is a reward for the righteous; and it is certain that this reward will be augmented in proportion as men have been more extensively useful, or have advanced the real and best interest of their fellow-creatures. In the last verse the reward and the punishment are expressed generally as to their degree, and merely said to be perpetual in their duration; in this they are exalted to the highest pitch of distinction in their degree, and their duration is pointed out in the strongest form of expressing eternity. Vulg. in perpetuas æternitates. Gr. εις τους αιωνας και επι. The design of which is to convince the eminently virtuous that they are in a more especial manner the favourites of heaven, and may with greater confidence expect their reward. The glories of the future world are adumbrated in Scripture by the loftiest and most splendid images in this; but after all so inadequate is language, and so inferior the conceptions of the human mind to this great subject, that the finest description of the joys of eternity is that negative one of St. Paul, which he hath in some measure borrowed from Isaiah, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." See Bishop Lowth on Isa. lxiv. 4.

- 4 the stars for ever and ever. But thou, Daniel, close the words, and seal up the book, until the time of the end: when many shall have searched diligently, and knowledge shall be increased."

4. But thou, Daniel, close the words, and seal up the book, until the time of the end.—See Chap. viii. 26, and x. 1. The accomplishment of the events is distant, and therefore not to be prematurely and rashly searched into; the writing of truth is finished, and the book that contains it directed to be closed, so that its sense must remain concealed till time shall unfold and discover it; "till the time of the end:" One MS. inverts the order of these words, and reads "till the end of time." Gr. εως καιρου συντελειας. At Rev. xxii. 10, St. John is ordered, not to seal the sayings of the Prophecy of that Book, since "the time was at hand," some of the predictions were near their accomplishment.

—when many shall have searched diligently, and knowledge shall be

- 5 Now I Daniel was seeing, when behold there were two others standing, one on this side at the bank of the river, and the other on that side at the bank of the 6 river: Which said to the man clothed with linen who was over the waters of the river, "At how great a increased."—One MS. reads the first verb with Vau instead of Jod וַיִּשְׁמַר; and Gr. has εως διδαχθωσι πολλοι και πληθυνθη η γνωσις, which is nearly the sense that I have given the words. One cannot help observing here the analogy between God's word and his works: Not only the operations of nature have been unravelled, but every useful art and invention traced out and brought to perfection by the continued labour and successive industry of men. And the like gradual process must be observable with respect to the word of God: In its early communication it was wrapt up in mystery, and surrounded with obscurity, for this among other purposes, to excite the attentive observation of men and engage their diligence; so that by affording proper employment for our active spirits it may serve to train and habituate them to that temper and frame, which will be a suitable qualification for them in the future world; where we shall be continually exercised in improving acts of devotion and praise, and be making constant advances in knowledge, goodness, and happiness.

5. Now I Daniel was seeing, when behold there were two others.—Two other angels stood one on each side (Heb. Lip) of the river Hiddekel or Tigris, Chap. x. 4, 5, and were attendants on that superior one that appeared there in so bright and glorious a form. Gabriel had finished his narrative, and what now follows seems added by way of illustration. Some will have the two other angels to be the guardians of Persia and Greece, and contend from thence that those two empires are the only ones concerned in the preceding Scripture of truth: They were doubtless the principal ones, and their representatives may therefore be alluded to in the passage before us; but it should be remembered that the Roman power was of very small note at the time this prophecy was delivered, and therefore not worthy to be distinguished by a peculiar protector; but nothing certain or decisive can be deduced from reasonings of this sort.

6. Which said to the man clothed with linen who was over the waters.—Heb. "And he spoke;" i. e. one of the angels; but Syr. Ar. Copt. Alex. and some other of the Greek copies read, και ειπον with Vulg.

distance will be the end of these marvellous things?"

- 7 And I heard the man clothed in linen who was over the waters of the river, when he had lifted up his right hand and his left hand towards the heavens, and sworn by him that liveth for ever, that it would be for וְדַמְרָא, and I spoke, meaning Daniel, to the man clothed with linen, Chap. x. 5, "who was above the waters," so the Versions. See Ps. xxix. 10, Matt. xiv. 25, and Rev. x. 2. The inferior angel inquires of the superior after the distant end of these events. One MS. reads לִקְיָן, How long to the end?

7. And I heard the man—when he had lifted up his right hand, and his left hand towards the heavens, and sworn.—This mode of swearing by lifting up the hand is often mentioned in the Old Testament. See Gen. xiv. 22, and Deut. xxxii. 40, and the holding or lifting up both hands toward heaven is an indication of the greater truth and solemnity of what was to be declared. He swore "by him that liveth for ever." Three MSS. read בְּחַיֵּי "by the life of eternity," which will amount to the same sense with בְּחַיֵּי "by Him that liveth for ever." And the expression is parallel with that at the 5th and 6th verses of the tenth Chapter of Revelations: where the mighty angel that appeared with his right foot on the sea, and his left on the earth, and swore by Him that liveth for ever and ever, is Christ; and from whence it is probable that the same Divine Person is also here meant.

—that it would be for a time, times and a half.—See on Chap. vii. 25. It is there "for a time and times and the dividing of a time:" The word in the Chald. is עֵדֶן both at Chapters vii. and iv, which seems to be the Heb. עֵת, with ה changed into its kindred letter ד, and the final ך added. But the word in this place is מוֹעֵד, and hence we may conclude that עֵת and מוֹעֵד like the Greek καιρος and χρονος are often used in the same precise sense. Yet מוֹעֵד strictly signifies "an appointed or limited portion of time," and hence any solemn term or festival according to its annual recurrence. Instances occur in all languages, where by an usual Synecdoche the summer, the harvest, or the winter, is used for a year, and thus any solemnity, as the Passover, or the great day of expiation, may have been considered as intimating the same term, so that by so many a time, times, and a half; and after the accomplishment

---

Passovers may have been understood such a number of years: And thence the word that is expressive of every sort of festival may be readily conceived to have been used for that space of time in which every one usually returns. Grotius tells us that the word χρονος is often used for years by way of excellence among the Greeks, and I am inclined to think he may be readily believed, though he produces no examples of it. It seems, however, very probable that this is the sense of the word in the parable, Luke xx. 9. A certain man planted a vineyard, and let it out to husbandmen, and removed into a distant country, χρονους ικανους, a suitable number of years. Then it follows, Και εν τω καιρω, “and at the season” he sent a servant to the husbandmen for the fruit or produce of the vineyard, whom they ill treated and sent away empty: Then he sent another servant, from his distant residence, and therefore probably at the next season; And he afterwards sent a third, &c. Thus from the drift of the parable, and the return of the seasons, the proper sense of the word χρονους seems here to be “years.” The like seems to be the sense of the term at Luke viii. 27, where we read that the man had been possessed with devils εκ χρονων ικανων “for a number of years:” And that this sense is to be preferred may be learnt from other passages, especially in the Acts of the Apostles, where the singular number is used, ικανον χρονον, when the expression relates to time in general. See Acts viii. 11, and xiv. 3, &c.

The like usage is also observable in profane writers; and thus Herodian speaking of the residence of Severus at Rome, after his return from his conquests, uses the same expression, διατριψας ικανους χρονους εν τη Ρωμη, and the acts that he is recorded by this historian to have done there must have employed him several years. Herod. lib. iii. §. 27, Ed. Oxon. 1678. Plutarch also in his treatise on Educ. tom. vi. p. 36, Ed. Reiske, says, εν δεσμοτηριω πολλους κατεσπατη χρονους, “he pined away many years in prison.” Suicer also gives it this sense in his Thesaurus Ecclesiasticus; He quotes Hist. Concil. Florent. Sect. xi. cap. vii. p. 5, χρόνοι παρήλθον εγγὺς τριακοντα; and observes that Sedulius, carm. Pasch. lib. i. has used “tempora” in the same sense, septenaque tempora lustrans,

Omnibus hirsutus sylvis et montibus errat.

of the dispersions of the holy people, all these things shall be fulfilled.

Mill likewise in his Gr. Test. Ed. Kuster, at the end of St. Mark, points at some MSS. as noting that this Gospel was written μετα χρονους δεκα της του Χριστου αναληψεως, and others that it was written μετα ετη ιβ της του Χριστου αναληψεως. For these two last authorities I am obliged to a very kind and friendly letter from the present Bishop of Waterford. It has also been suggested to me, that the word χρονος seems used by Pindar for a set portion of time. Ολον δ' επειτ' αν χρονον του θαμβεεν Αρτεμης. Nem. iii. 86. And in Phavorinus' Lexicon it is expressly interpreted to mean a year. Χρονος λεγεται, η τε ηλιου κινησις απο του αυτου εις το αυτο, και ενιαυτος και ετος. Moreover to all these considerations we may add the testimony of Josephus who interprets "the times" as "years," and also that of the fathers. And indeed from a comparison of the passage with those parallel ones in the Revelations, there can be no doubt but that the space meant is three years and a half, or forty and two months, or 1260 days, reckoning twelve months to a year, and thirty days to a month. That these days are to be considered as so many years, see what has been noted on Chap. vii. 25, and Chap. viii. 14, &c.

—and after the accomplishment of the dispersions.—Gr. of Th. has not the words that follow יְהוָה יְעֲזְרֵנוּ the power, or band, of the people of holiness. Two MSS. drop יְהוָה. Mr. Dimock suggests, that we should read הַיְעֲזָרָה; perhaps the true reading is נִפְצִי הַיְעֲזָרָה "and after the accomplishment of the dispersions of the holy people." All. in Hexap. inserts after these words, γνωστονται αγιον, και—but there is no authority for this in the Hebrew.

Mr. Lowth has recounted a number of passages in the Prophets, which indicate the restoration of the Jews in the latter days, or when the fourth monarchy shall expire; And the Apostle St. Paul tells us expressly, "that blindness in part," only, "hath happened unto Israel," and this, "till the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." Rom. xi. 25, see also Luke xxi. 24. At this decisive period, or after the 1260 years of the reign of Antichrist, and the addition of another short term for the restoration of the Jews, will be the end of these wonders or marvellous things inquired after in the last verse. The greatest difficulty seems now to be to ascertain the exact commencement of them, which I suspect will be in vain to attempt till after the 8 But when I heard I did not understand; wherefore I said, "O my Lord, what is the latter end of these 9 things?" Then he said, "Go, Daniel, for the words are closed and sealed up even to the time of the end.

 10 Many shall be purified and made white and proved;

full completion. However the reader may find attempts of this sort in several of the writers cited in this and the foregoing Chapters.

8. But when I heard, I did not understand.—The full discovery was not made to the Prophet, but reserved for future ages, till time should bring it to light. The question that follows, "What is the latter end of these things?" alludes to the like expression having been used in the preceding parts of this book, and especially at Chap. x. 14. The inquiry is checked at the next verse, and an intimation given, that it is not so much for the use of the present as of future ages, that this revelation is made. The Prophecy is of distant reference and interpretation; it is necessary therefore, that it should be involved in obscurity. What is delivered may satisfy the minds of the pious and faithful; but it is not meant that the curious should be gratified, that human pride should be indulged, or that the counsels of God should be made subservient to the ambition of princes, or any sinister designs of man.

10. —Many shall be purified and made white and proved.—See Chap. xi. 35, where the same verbs are found but in different order. Prof. Michaelis supposes צָרַף to be a general term, descriptive of the fusion or melting of the metal, בָּרַר to relate to the pure metal or the purification of it, and that הִלְבֵּן refers to the dross or the vitrescent parts; and the meaning he thinks is, many shall be tried by fire, and become either pure silver, or dross. See his Supplem. on לָבֵן. But with all due deference to so great and learned a critic, I cannot help suggesting, that the order of the words in this verse appears to militate with this ingenious interpretation, where the verb צָרַף which he uses for melting is last. I rather think that the words are adopted as of general and ordinary use; or if we would ascertain their import, that the former word is borrowed from wheat which is cleansed from the chaff; the second from cloth which is whitened by the fuller; and the third from goldsmiths, who try and essay the metal, and separate it from the dross; fulvum spectatur in ignibus aurum. Ovid yet the wicked will do wickedly ; but though none of the wicked will attend, those of understanding shall 11 attend. Now from the time that the daily sacrifice

---

And I would refer the whole to the righteous, who shall be cleansed by various tribulations and trials ; but the like discipline shall have no effect on the wicked ; see Rev. xxii. 11, their wickedness will blind their hearts, so that they shall not understand or attend to these predictions, which the prudent, or those of a wise and good heart, shall understand, shall be fully instructed in themselves, and so as to be able to teach them to others. For the sense of this participle המשכלים see on ver. 3, and Chap. xi. 33.

In the essay before cited Mr. Amner has some very sensible and useful observations on this verse, as well as many ingenious reflections on other parts of the Prophecy of these two last Chapters. But his plan of referring and confining the whole of Daniel's Prophecies altogether to the times of Epiphanes, to say no more of it, seems quite repugnant to the general scheme and manner of this Prophet ; who is so close, comprehensive, and concise, in every part, that, according to one of the ancient Commentators, " his words are equal to sentences ; and he often intimates more than he speaks, contracting in a very small compass of language even the most august mysteries." Some of his predictions had doubtless a reference to Antiochus, who perhaps, like Pharaoh, may be said to have been raised up to fulfil the designs of Providence, to be an exemplary type and early illustration of those prophecies, that were afterwards to be fulfilled in a more ample and wonderful manner : And it appears to me in the Vision before us, I mean in the latter part of it, that the Prophet or Angel is so engaged in the prospect of the distant arrangement, that the original reference to Antiochus seems quite deserted and forgotten, and the language incapable of being applied without much force to any other than the times subsequent to the establishment of the Church of Christ ; and this 10th verse whatever regard it might have to particular times, seems strongly to allude to that probation and discipline, which the saints of God will generally experience, in order to prepare and qualify them for the enjoyment of their future and final inheritance.

11. Now from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be removed—shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days.—See on Chap. viii. 14.

shall be removed, to set up the abomination of desolation, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety

---

One MS. omits the Vau before לַתֵּת, “even for the setting up:” So Syr. Copt. has 2290 days, which is probably a mistake. The language is borrowed from the service in the Jewish temple, and applicable to the church of God in a variety of states and forms: That it is here particularly meant to have its illustration during the times of the Christian church must be evident, not only from the whole series of the foregoing remarks, but because the days cannot be taken in their strict sense, but must be understood for so many years. That the days cannot be taken for so many diurnal spaces, Mr. Mede has shewn in a very full method, by demonstrating from history that the events to which they are usually referred do not correspond with the numbers specified in this or the next verse: For from the abominations introduced by Antiochus to the indulgence or the Avroponia granted to the Jews, 2 Mac. xi. 27, instead of 1290 days were not more than 1200 days, not to say that this diploma was granted by Eupator the son of Antiochus, and not by the father himself, to whom it is commonly attributed; and before this time Antiochus died, so that the 1335 days cannot be referred to his death, which the advocates for this exposition pretend. Indeed the space between the death of the father and the edict in favour of the Jews by the son appears to be not more than 13 or 14 days, and by no sort of construction can be extended to 45, the difference betwixt 1290 and 1335. By the days then must evidently be meant years, according to the usual acceptation of the term by this and some of the other Prophets. Mr. Mede reckons the years from the time of Antiochus, before Christ an. 167, and brings us down to the 12th century, when the usurpations of Antichrist were protested against by the Waldenses, Albigenses, and others, and his character was publicly declared and attributed to the papacy; and between the years 1123 and 1168 (a space of 45 years) a great secession was made from the dominion of the Pope; and thus he thinks the Prophecy was unfolded and laid open. It is observable likewise that the same learned writer fixes the first of the above periods in the first year of the Roman Indiction LIV, and at three full Indictions afterwards, or in the beginning of LVII, commences the second period.

But there is no necessity to confine the words at the former part of 12 days. Blessed is he that with patient expectation reacheth the days a thousand three hundred thirty and the verse to the impiety and sacrilege of Antiochus, on which interpretation Mr. Mede seems chiefly to found his argument. The whole passage seems rather to refer to the Christian church, both as to the commencement as well as the termination of the enmity. And though the reign of Antichrist seems here fixed for 1290 years, which is a term of 30 years more than was mentioned at ver. 7, and Chap. vii. 25, this excess in the opinion of some is the time allotted for the collecting of the Jews from their captivity among all nations, or the several countries of their dispersion; and at the close of ver. 7, there does seem to be a farther period alluded to for this purpose, after the time, times, and a half, or the 1260 years. The extension of the term still farther in the next verse to 1335 years may be allotted for a variety of purposes, which the Jews will accomplish in their own country after their recal, in order to their full and quiet settlement in the promised land: Possibly the erection of a temple may be alluded to, which is said to have been forty and six years in building in the time of Herod. Others think, and with much reason, that the whole surplus of 75 years is included within the times of the 7th trumpet, Rev. xi. 15, when Christ's church shall triumph over all opposition, and he will destroy those that have corrupted and destroyed a great part of the world. "It is, I conceive," says Bp. Newton, "to these great events, the fall of Antichrist, the re-establishment of the Jews, and the beginning of the glorious Millennium, that the three different dates in Daniel of 1260 years, 1290 years, and 1335 years, are to be referred," Dis. xxvi. p. 337. But whether the last date is to commence with the former, or not to have its beginning till those are ended, is still amongst the hidden mysteries of providence. Yet I am inclined to think that we must not look for the full completion of the prophecy till the latter ages of the world, till that period approaches, when the kingdoms of the earth shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever. In the mean time we must be contented to remain in ignorance, and leave the illustration of these wonders till their full accomplishment, when we are sure the kingdom of Antichrist, and of every thing that opposeth itself, will be destroyed, and that of the Messiah be fully established in general tranquillity, peace, and holiness.

---

12. Blessed is he that with patient expectation reacheth the days 13 five. But go thou, and to the end be at rest; for thou shalt stand up for thy lot at the end of the days."

---

1335.—When the kingdom of Christ shall be full, and they that have patiently waited for its completion, shall begin to enjoy its blessed rewards. See Rev. xx. 4.

13. But go thou, and to the end be at rest; for thou shalt stand up for thy lot &c.—The Prophet had been making inquiries after the end of these wonders; the Angel had given him all the information that was needful either for himself or future times, and with this he dismisses him, subjoining at the same time a short epitome of his own fate; that, as he was now far advanced in life, he must expect soon to retire from this world; that he should rest in peace to the time of the end, when he should again be raised up, and restored to life, and receive his final allotment from his righteous Judge, before whom he should stand in judgment at the last day, or at the end of days.

Two or three MSS. read הַיָּמִים instead of the final ך, Ar. renders, thou shalt rise again to thy inheritance: the word Lot must here be understood in a good sense, that the Prophet should be ranked among the blessed, and partake of the heavenly inheritance, when the mystery of God shall be perfected. But MS. Pachom. instead of κληρον reads καιρον. After the word "be at rest," the Gr. interpreter inserts this clause, ἐτι γαρ ημεραι και ωραι εις αναπληρωσιν συντελειας, and so Arab. The expression seems to indicate a long space of time; or perhaps till days and hours shall cease. See on Chap. x. 14

INDEX

OF TEXTS OR PASSAGES OF SCRIPTURE

OCCASIONALLY ILLUSTRATED.

CHAP.		PAGE.	CHAP.		PAGE.
	GENESIS.			MATTHEW.
xli. 41	. . . . .	96	i. 11, 12	. . . . .	4
xlili. 25, 31	. . . . .	79	xxiv. 15	. . . . .	161
	EXODUS.		xxvii. 7	. . . . .	167
v. 19	. . . . .	137	— 60—66	. . . . .	101
	NUMBERS.			LUKE.
xvi. 5	. . . . .	117	i. 28	. . . . .	157
	2 KINGS.		viii. 27	. . . . .	232
v. . .	. . . . .	91	xii. 46	. . . . .	21
	JOB.		xx. 9	. . . . .	232
xxxix. 5	. . . . .	87		JOHN.
	PSALMS.		viii. 56	. . . . .	xiv
ix. 20	. . . . .	109	xiii. 1	. . . . .	54
lxix. 10	. . . . .	182		ACTS.
lxxx. 8	. . . . .	153	xvii. 23	. . . . .	218
— 15	. . . . .	154		1 CORINTHIANS.
cix. 6	. . . . .	69	iv. 3 . . . . .	. . . . .	141
cxxx.	. . . . .	xxxvi	vii. 25	. . . . .	51
cxix. 11, 12	. . . . .	xxxiv	xiii. 12	. . . . .	xiii
	PROVERBS.			1 THESSALONIANS.
vii. 16	. . . . .	16	ii. 16	. . . . .	168
xxii. 29	. . . . .	v		2 THESSALONIANS.
	ISAIAH.		ii. 4 . . . . .	. . . . .	120
xi. 1	. . . . .	41	— 9, 10	. . . . .	113
— 9	. . . . .	225		2 TIMOTHY.
xxiv. 21	. . . . .	136	iii. 16	. . . . .	lxiii
xlvi. 15	. . . . .	200	iv. 17	. . . . .	104
xlvi. 1	. . . . .	162		PHILEMON.
liii. 9	. . . . .	102	iv. 12	. . . . .	10
	JEREMIAH.			HEBREWS.
xxx. 21	. . . . .	117	xi. 27	. . . . .	21
	EZEKIEL.		— 33	. . . . .	104
xi. 3	. . . . .	181		REVELATIONS.
xxvii.	. . . . .	vii	xiv. 8	. . . . .	116
	OBADIAH.		xix. 10	. . . . .	xiv
xxvii. 4	. . . . .	135	xx. 4, 6	. . . . .	121
	NAHUM.
iii. 8	. . . . .	223
	ZECHARIAH.
ii. 4, 5	. . . . .	165

INDEX OF PERSONS.

---

- Abarbanel, xi
 Aben-Ezra, 36
 Abraham, 57, 176
 Abulfarage, 164
 Abydenus, 77
 Æschylus, xxv, 188
 Ahasuerus, xlviii, 149, 188
 Alexander, x, 34, 38, 54, 76, 111, 130, 143, 189, 190
 Ammianus Marcellinus, 45, 72, 130
 Amner, 216, 235
 Antiochus Magnus, 38, 195—201, ——— Epiphanes, x, l. lii, 49, 113, 135—145, 203—208, 225
 Appian, 34, 91, 133, 145, 190, 198, 202
 Aquila, x, xv, 6, 56, 127, 138, 166, 179, 210
 Arias Montanus, 110
 Aristotle, 110, 194
 Arrian, 34, 38, 102, 133, 189
 Artaxerxes Longimanus, 164, 174, 188
 Astyages, xviii, xxii, 18, 77, 93, 149
 Athenæus, 48, 54, 203, 217
 Aurelius Victor, 202
 Ausonius, xix
 Bahrdt, 6, 101, 114, 210, 215
 Banier, xxiv, xxv, xxvii
 Belshazzar, iv, xvi, 16, 78—91, 107, 127
 Benjamin of Tudela, vi, 128
 Berosus, xxvii, 65, 73, 75, 78, 191
 Beveridge, xlvi, xlvii
 Blair xxix, 4
 Blayney, iii, 20, 127, 164, 179
 Bochart, 5, 29, 48, 72, 87, 102, 179, 209, 220
 Bruce, xlv, 16, 21, 25, 32, 49, 51, 65, 72, 82, 103, 179, 223
 Burney, 49
 Buxtorf, xlix, 13, 35, 88, 138, 202
 Cæsar Julius, liii, 19
 ——— Augustus, 72, 98
 Callimachus, 98
 Calmet, 9, 49, 65, 90, 126, 163, 179, 193, 210, 225, 227
 Calovius, xi, 37
 Calvin, 74
 Cambyses, xviii, xxi, xxv, 33, 130, 182, 188, 192
 Castalio, 11
 Castell, 6, 18, 22, 36, 45, 48, 50, 66, 75, 102, 123, 186, 191, 200
 Cappellus, xlviii, 123, 125, 128, 130, 131, 141, 168, 228
 Chandler Bp., x, xviii, lvi, 6, 47, 49, 117, 130
 ——— Dr. Samuel, lvi
 Chardin, 72, 84, 91,
 Cheseaux, 1
 Chrysostom, liii, 48, 124, 157
 Cicero, xix, xxi, xxv, xlvi, 19, 109, 215
 Clarke, xxxii, 114
 Claudian, 33
 Clavigero, 152
 Codomannus, 91, 130, 132, 187
 Cetesias, xviii, xxi, xxii, xlviii, 16
 Cumberland, 194
 Curtius, 19, 34, 79, 130, 132, 189
 Cush, 15, 223
 Cyaxares, xviii, xx, 90, 95, 96, 149
 Cyrus, iv, xvi, 13, 33, 77, 90—96, 101, 106, 130, 160—162, 176, 182, 187
 Daniel, iii, 1
 D' Anville, 45
 Darius Medus, iv, xvi, 58, 82, 90, 92, —106, 149, 159, 175, 186
 ——— Hystaspes, xlviii, 96, 130, 162, 164, 183
 Dathius, 8, 22, 32, 126, 160
 David, vii, xxxvii, 21, 177, 209
 De Dieu, 24, 71
 D' Herbelot, 56, 106, 164
 De Rossi, xlii, 6, 42, 85, 103, 110, 154, 166, 184, 188
 Dicæarchus, 194
 Dimock, xlii, 139, 150, 215, 216, 233
 Diodorus Sic., xviii, xix, xlviii, 18, 44, 72, 73, 100, 132, 134, 144
 Diogenes Laert., xix, 66
 Dion Cassius, 104
 Dionysius Halicar., xix, 38
 Drusius, 49
 Eichhorn, xxxvii, xlii, lvi
 Elias, lvi, 49

- Ellis, 49
 Ephraem Syrus, lvii, 56, 66
 Epiphanius, vi
 Eratosthenes, 194
 Esarhaddon, 17
 Eusebius, ix, xii, xxxiii, 77, 179, 191
 Ezekiel, v, vii, xxii, xxxi, 126, 129, 181, 221
 Ezra, vi, 20, 164
 Florus, 144
 Ford, xlii
 Freret, xxx
 Gebelin, 14
 Geddes, xxxix, xl
 Glassius, 52, 139
 Godwin, 52, 65, 143, 147, 159
 Grotius, 22, 35, 45, 46, 48, 63, 69, 82, 83, 86, 99, 107, 114, 133, 137, 145, 146, 157, 163, 182, 208, 216, 227, 232
 Habesci, 46
 Halifax, x, lix
 Hammond, 134
 Harmer, 11, 42, 49, 79, 84, 91
 Herodian, 232
 Herodotus, xvii, xlviii, 9, 15, 16, 23, 34, 45, 63, 72, 73, 79, 90, 92, 94, 130, 188
 Hesiod, 31
 Hezekiah, 17, 71, 89
 Hermes, liv
 Homer, viii, xxxii, 19, 34, 62, 66
 Horace, xxviii, 47, 63, 82, 98, 117
 Houbigant, 7, 10, 12, 18, 24, 25, 29, 31, 44, 46, 85, 89, 101, 103, 110, 123, 128, 150, 156, 160, 167, 172, 183, 184, 192, 212
 Howes, xxvii, 4
 Hurd, 30, 219
 Hutchinson, 95
 Hyde, 61
 Jacchiades, xi, 28, 40, 46, 113
 Jackson, xxii, xlviii, 15, 34, 74
 Jehoiakim, xxix, 2, 5, 76
 Jeremiah, iii, xxii, 20, 76, 149, 158, 174
 Jerom, ix, x, xix, xxiv, liv, lvii, 5, 25, 38, 40, 45, 50, 56, 79, 93, 110, 113, 192, 202, 223, 225
 Jethro, 79
 Johnson, 175
 Jonathan ben Uzziel, lv, lvi, 118
 Jortin, lix, lx
 Josephus, iii, vi, x, xi, xii, xix, xxiii, xxviii, 2, 21, 30, 39, 48, 73, 93, 102, 124, 144, 145, 165, 168, 170, 172, 173, 185, 191, 198, 202, 209, 233
 Isaac, R., 116
 Isaiah, ii, xxi, xxiii, 161, 167
 Isocrates, xxi
 Judith, 17, 90
 Junius, 139, 182
 Justin, xix, xxii, 130, 189, 192
 Justinian, 89
 Juvenal, 19, 34
 Kennicott, xv, xlii, 20, 50, 103, 154, 162, 183
 Kidder, 171
 Kimchi, 29, 138, 214
 Lardner, ix, x, lvii, lxii
 Le Clerc, 8
 L'Empereur, 49
 Livy, 22, 144, 189, 198, 209
 Lloyd, 122, 158, 165, 166, 168
 Longinus, xxxv
 Lowman, 220
 Lowth, Bp., ii, xii, xv, xxiii, xxxii, xl, 15, 18, 29, 31, 63, 79, 92, 121, 148, 151, 161, 179, 222, 229
 Lowth, Mr., 23, 29, 81, 95, 124, 127, 139, 142, 156, 172, 182, 184, 192
 Lucan, 223
 Lucian, 98
 Machiavel, 122
 Maimonides, xl
 Marshall, xlvii, 165
 Marsham, viii, xlvii
 Mede, 35, 39, 41, 116, 122, 140, 143, 144, 163, 173, 213, 215, 217, 220, 222, 223, 224, 236
 Megasthenes, 75, 109, 191
 Michaelis, H., xli, 21, 48, 49, 82, 114, 133, 137, 141
 ——— J. D., xli, lviii, 9, 12, 14, 20, 45, 93, 109, 119, 145, 147, 156, 172, 200, 209, 234
 Milton, viii, 89
 Mohammed, 42, 51, 89, 220, 228
 Montesquien, 16
 Montfaucon, 21, 54, 97
 Moses, xxxviii, 7, 99, 126, 152
 Munster, xiv, 56, 142
 Nabonadius, xvi, xxii, xxviii, 78, 79
 Nabonassar, xxix, xlvii, 4, 16, 112
 Nathan, R., 46
 Nebuchadnezzar, iv, xvi, 2, 14, 18, 33, 56, 59, 65, 71, 74, 75, 86, 107, 109
 Nehemiah, vi, 164, 165, 174
 Newcome, iii, xl, 5, 8, 63, 164, 182, 221, 222, 226, 233
 Newton, Bp., 35, 92, 121, 131, 141, 189, 193, 210, 214, 215, 217, 220, 222, 223, 237
 ———, Sir Isaac, xii, xiv, 16, 32, 90, 94, 113, 122, 132, 134, 141, 217
 Niebuhr, 44
 Nimrod, 15, 72
 Ninus, 16, 33
 Nitocris, 73, 77, 83
 Noldius, 10, 14, 23, 31, 61, 75, 103, 119, 151, 181, 184, 216
 Onkelos, lv
 Origen, ix, xii, liv, 64, 66, 179

- Orpheus, 21
 Ovid, 48, 65, 129, 234
 Pachomius, xli
 Paley, 169
 Paterculus, 144
 Patrick, xxxvii
 Pearson, 62
 Petavius, xlv, 158
 Peters, v, 68, 227
 Phavorinus, 233
 Philip Arideus, 38, 132
 Philostratus, 173
 Pindar, 233
 Plato, xix, xx, 34
 Plautus, 8
 Pliny, xxiii, 5, 11, 64, 72, 90, 98, 128, 129
 Plutarch, xix, 232
 Polybius, 40, 49, 82, 90, 134, 144, 192, 195, 196, 203, 217
 Poole, xlviii, 9, 35
 Pope, 48
 Porphyry, ix, x, 113, 216, 227
 Prideaux, vi, xv, xix, xxvi, xlviii, lii, lvi, 4, 44, 61, 83, 90, 92, 95, 134, 144, 146, 158, 164, 166, 170, 188, 189, 190, 192, 203
 Procopius, 130
 Prudentius, 173
 Ptolemy, see Kings of Egypt
 ——— the astronomer, xvii, 17, 18, 38, 45, 77, 78, 95, 149, 158
 Purver, 36, 50, 54, 142, 163, 174, 182
 Randolph, liv
 Russell, 47
 Saadiah, 21, 36
 Sale, 57
 Sanconiatho, 194
 Scaliger, vi, xix, xxv, xlv, 77
 Secker, xvii, xxvii, xli, 13, 21, 34, 35, 37, 41, 43, 49, 56, 58, 61, 64, 67, 81, 91, 93, 98, 102, 112, 114, 128, 132, 133, 135, 137, 141, 143, 144, 146, 149, 175
 Sedulius, 232
 Selim, 221, 222
 Selencus, see Kings of Syria
 Semiramis, vii, xlviii, 16, 72
 Seneca, xix
 Servius, 48
 Shaw, 43, 47, 48, 49, 51, 55, 99, 103
 Socrates, xxiv, 19
 Solomon, v, viii, xlvii, 16, 81
 Spencer, 136, 163
 Strabo, xx, 18, 20, 33, 57, 93, 109
 Strauchius, xlv, xlvii
 Suetonius, 72
 Suicer, 232
 Suidas, 94, 194
 Sulpicius Severus, xxi, 21, 38
 Symmachus, x, 6, 29, 44, 53, 127, 138, 140, 157, 166
 Tacitus, 37, 104, 171
 Taylor, 61, 64, 153
 Tertullian, liii, 74, 104
 Thales, 13
 Theodoret, xxxvi, 38, 41, 43, 66, 67, 108, 126, 127, 128, 131, 136, 147, 225
 Theodotion, x, xv, liv, lxiv, 6, 59, 108, 127, 146, 167
 Thevenot, 65
 Thucydides, xxii, xlix, 94
 Titus, 168, 171, 173, 211
 Tremellius, 139, 182
 Trogus Pompeius, xxv
 Valerius Max. 22
 Varro, 163
 Valesius, liii
 Vatablus, 167
 Vignoles, xviii, xx, xxii, 4, 34, 149
 Virgil, viii, 11, 57, 60, 62, 68, 82, 87, 90, 98, 108, 168
 Usher, xix, xxvi, liii, 95, 96, 158, 192
 Vitringa, 135, 209
 Vossius, xix, li
 Walton, vi, 20, 100
 Warburton, 71
 Wetstein, 99
 Wicliff, 167
 Woide, xlii
 Xenophon, xvii, 6, 55, 78, 79, 80, 90, 92, 94
 Xerxes, 44, 63, 93, 130, 188
 Zedekiah, iv, 76
 Zeno, 209

INDEX OF THINGS.

---

- Additions in Greek of Th. 58, 62, 88, 103, 119, 122, 137, 151, 191, 214, 238
—— in MS. Alex. 57, 81
—— in Syr. 70, 87, 98
—— in MSS. 50, 71, 83, 85, 101,
159, 166, 176, 178, 182, 210
Address, modes of, 103, 184
Æra, xlv, 134, 190, 206
Algerines, 43
Allegory, 34, 63, 154
Alexander, his history, 34, 111, 130, 189
—— first King of Ion, or Greece, 143
—— his death, 133
—— his relations and successors,
131, 134
Ammonites, 221
Analogy, ii, 230
Angel, 56, 63, 182, 185
—— of the Covenant, 63, 179
Anthropopathia, xxxiii, 155, 183
Antichrist, 118, 121, 125, 141, 148,
214, 215, 219, 220, 225, 233, 236
Ancient Chaldee, or Aramean language, 20, 127
—— very different from Hebrew, xxx
Ancient of Days, 113, 121
Antiochus, Type of Antichrist, 136, 138
—— his History, Character, &c.
135—140, 146, 203, 208, 235
Apocope, 35, 75, 104
Apostasy, 160, 211
Arms of the South, 198, 204
Assyria, see Babylon
Astyages, not Dar. Med. xxii
Αὐτονομία, 236
Babylon, vi, 15—18, 92
—— its extent or greatness, 33, 72, 109 —— period of its empire, 33, 90, 91
—— no traces of it, 92
Babylonians, their excess, 79
Balance, 89
Battles, 195, 201, 208
Bear, 110
Bel, xxii, 44
Belshazzar, who, 78, 89
—— his impiety, 81
Brass and iron, emblems of strength and terror, 35
Bread, 79
Buffalo, 64, 65
Canon of Ptolemy, xvii, xxiii, xxvii,
15, 17, 158, 176, 187
—— of Scripture, xv, liv
Captivity, its commencement, 4
—— its period, 149, 158, 159
Celibacy, 215
Chaldeans or Chasdim, vi, 18
Chaldaisms, 26, 36, 70, 119
Chethubim, xv
Chittim, 208
Chronology, xlv
Climax, 57, 201
Cod. Chis. cited, xxv, 5, 7, 8, 10, 14,
21, 45, 55, 59, 63, 66, 80, 105, 192,
209, 215, 217, 222, 223
Collective sing for plur. 33, 126, 192
Collation of MSS. and Versions, 157
Coptic Version cited, 67, 79, 81, 88,
108, 140, 143, 145, 156, 167, 177,
183, 214, 230, 236
Cushites, 223
Cyropædia, xix, 92, 95, 96, 111
Cyrus, not Darius Med. xxvii
Daniel, Life and Character, iii—vi —— Book, its Language, vi—ix
—— Prophetical Part, ix—xvii
—— Historical Part, xvii—xxix
—— its Style, xxx—xxxix
—— Objections considered and refuted, lv
—— a type of Christ's burial, 102
—— forgeries attributed to him, lvii,
56
Darc, 94
Darius Med. the Cyaxares of Xenophon,
xxix
Days, numbers of, 139, 235, 237
—— for years, 124, 140, 141, 233, 236
Demons, 24
Dilcarnain, see Æra
Divination, or Diviners, 24, 28
Dreams, 14, 19, 34, 63

- Εγκαινία, 46, 147
 Edom, vii, 221
 Egypt, 1, 49, 76, 112, 190, 222
 — Antiochus's attempts upon it, 205, 208, 210
 Elam, 127, 176
 Ellipsis, 52, 70
 Emendations conjectural, 35, 70, 81, 85, 119, 139, 164, 187, 191, 205, 233
 — supported by MSS. or Versions, 44, 54, 64, 85, 86, 102, 106, 115, 120, 134, 137, 139, 143, 156, 160, 166, 168, 171, 183, 184, 191, 193, 198, 201, 204, 207, 211, 212, 216, 221, 231
 Encyclopedic, 14, 163
 Eternal Reward, 228
 Euergetes, his piety, 193
 Eulaeus, 128, 129
 Euphemismus, 68
 Fasting, 177, 182
 Feast of Dedication. See Εγκαινία
 Festivals, 178
 Gate, 43
 Gloss, 108, 183
 Gog and Magog, 113, 125, 221
 Greece, 143, 183, 190
 — its intercourse with the East, vii, viii
 Greek Version of the Old Test. li — deposited in the library of Philadelphus, liii
 Hanani, 116
 Heaven, host of, 135
 — kingdom of, 39
 Hebraisms, 8, 150, 153, 181, 185
 Heb. Cod. 240 cited, 20, 30, 42, 50, 51, 53, 66, 75, 79, 88, 93, 110
 He-goat, 130
 Hendiadys, 24, 84, 142
 Heroes deified, 98
 Honours, 82, 91
 Horns, 112, 122, 131, 133
 Horn, little one, 113, 121—125
 Hours, 81
 Hymn of the Three Children, lvii, 55
 Hyperbole, 62
 Hysterologia, 206
 Idols, 9, 216
 Jerusalem, 163, 164, 169, 208
 — destroyed, 76, 209
 Jews, 1, 145, 150, 168, 173, 196, 202
 — their Restoration, 233, 237
 Image of Gold, 44
 — worship, 114, 217, 218
 Impiety of Philopator, 196
 Inaccuracies of the Hebrew Language, 8, 12
 Indiction, 236
 Infinitive absolute, 150
 Inquiries of the Lord, 181
 Inspiration, 51
 Instruments of music, 47, 48, 49
 Internal evidence, liii
 Israelites of the dispersion, 9, 17, 126
 Judea, land of glory, 135, 199, 221
 Jupiter Ammon, 131, 133
 — Olympius, 137, 216
 Keri-Chethibs, account of, xliii
 King for Kingdom, 32, 39, 122, 131, 143
 Kings of the South and North, 190—208
 — of Babylon, 77
 Kingdoms, 32, 41, 122, 143
 — of the Saints, 120, 125
 Koran, 51, 57, 89, 228
 Languages, Eastern, vi
 Laterculus, 194
 Latter or last days, 29, 183, 219
 Leitotes, 88
 Leopard, 111
 Letter  $\kappa$  favoured in Chald., 32
 Letters corresponding in Chald. and Heb. 24
 Libation, 80
 Libyans, 223
 Lions, 104
 Lot, 238
 Lycanthropy, 65
 Maccabees, 126, 196, 206, 212
 Magian Religion, 61
 Magicians, 13, 82
 Mahuzzim, 216, 217, 218
 Mamalucs, 222
 Manichean Heresy, 61
 MS. Pachom cited, 18, 19, 26, 33, 58, 61, 83, 97, 101, 108, 116, 127, 133, 135, 137, 140, 143, 145, 146, 147, 150, 151, 168, 171, 178, 190, 192, 213, 214, 215, 220, 238
 Mars, 217
 Masoretical Readings rejected, 20, 32, 57, 66, 68, 81, 83, 85, 87, 120, 129, 196
 — approved, 29, 37, — confirmed by MSS., 7, 31, 53, 54, 57, 58, 61, 66, 70, 82, 88, 111, 114, 137, 152, 155, 160, 161, 194, 218, 223
 Mazouled, 84
 Media, 90
 Medes and Persians, 33, 34, 90, 101, — both called Medes, xxii, xxviii
 Medina, 42
 Messiah, 116, 117, 126, 154, 162, 167
 — his kingdom, 40, 41, 118, 226, 237 — passion, 166, 169
 Metaphor, 62, 173, 185, 220, 227
 Metonymy, 32, 71, 147, 210
 Mexico, 152

- Millennium, 237
 Migration Ionic, viii
 Mishna, 123, 178
 Modin, 216
 Names new, 9
 ——— common to Kings, 149
 ——— of Instruments, see Instruments
 Nebuchadnezzar's History, 75, 76
 ——— Transformation, 65,
 66, 71, 109,
 ——— Pride and Insolence,
 lxiv, 72, 86
 ——— Successors in Babylon, 77
 Nile, 204
 Nineveh, vii, 17, 73
 Nycthemeron, 140
 Olympiads, 194
 Omissions supplid by MSS. or Versions, or both, 12, 21, 23, 33, 42, 53, 70, 71, 83, 85, 97, 101
 ——— in Greek of Th. 23, 97,
 108, 127, 145, 220, 233
 Ouager or wild Ass, 87
 Ophir, see Uphaz
 Original Text to be adhered to, 175
 Papal Usurpation, 122, 215—220,
 237
 Parallel synonymous, xxxii
 Parched Corn, 11
 Paronomasia, 181
 Passages shown to Alexander, 130, 188
 Periphrasis, 28, 224
 Persecutions, 212
 Persian Empire, 33, 110
 Phut, 223
 Pleonasm, 12, 105, 119, 186, 195,
 207
 Plurals used of God, 61, 67, 119, 145
 Prayer, 99, 149, 155
 Prophecies obscure, xii, 234
 ——— exact, ix
 ——— gradual completion, xiii
 ——— double sense, 147, 158, 161,
 175, 211
 Prophecies, first sense sunk in the second, 161, 235
 ——— unfulfilled, 223, 224, 237
 Prophets in a larger sense, 152
 Prosopopœia, 96
 Psalm 130 supposed to be written by Daniel, xxxvi
 Pulse affecting the temper, 11
 Punishments, modes of, 21, 51
 ——— Officer for capital ones,
 25
 Ram, 129
 Recapitulation of Prophecy of 70
 Weeks, 174, 175
 Redundancies in Chald. or Heb. 26,
 80, 83
 Redundancies corrected by MSS. 28,
 32, 53, 115, 120, 133, 155, 236
 Repetition emphatical, 148
 Revelation of St. John Considered, the Treatise cited, 115, 123, 129, 145,
 180, 183, 187, 213, 215, 223
 Reverence of Nebuchadnezzar to Daniel not sacrifice, 41
 Resurrection, 227
 Rolls or Records, 149, 226
 Rome Imperial, 144, 174, 202, 209, 210
 ——— Papal, 122, 215, 219
 Roman Empire the 4th kingdom, 35, 36, 37, 39
 ——— the fourth Beast, 112, 121
 Romans, a mingled people, 38
 Roofs of Eastern Buildings, 71
 Samaritans, 198
 Sanhedrim, xlvi, 115
 Saracens, 221
 Sarcasm, 203
 Seven, 163, 174
 Shekel, 89
 Shinar, 5
 Shushan, 128
 Sketches of History, 1, 15, 75, 190
 Son of God, 56
 ——— Man, lx, 116, 142, 184
 Soothsayers, 13
 Sorcerers. Sortilegi, 18
 Spirits of Heaven, 66, 182, 185, 186
 Stone from the Mountain, 40, 118
 Swearing, mode of, 231
 Symbols, 130, 171, 173
 Synecdoche, 231
 Syria and Egypt, 144, 190—208
 Talmud, xlvi, 20
 Talmudists, xv, 108, 114
 Targum, lv, 20, 118, 123
 Tarshish, 179
 Teachers of Christianity, 213
 Tempest, 108
 Temple at Jerusalem, 156, 171, 211, 237
 Temples in Elymais, 201
 Terror, 81, 126, 180, 184
 Thau, a Mark, 226
 Thebaid, 194
 Theban Lyre, 49
 Theocracy, 125
 Third Person plur. act. rendered impersonally or passively, 30, 47, 90, 101
 Thoth, 78, 194
 Threshing with Oxen, 121
 Thrones, 113
 Time, different Computations, 3
 ——— of the end, 142, 213, 229
 Times, 1, 66, 124, 158, 162, 231, 232
 Titles of Honour, 45, 46
 Tomb, 101, 102

- Translation, xl, 59
 Tribulations, 226, 235
 Troglodytes, 49, 223
 Turks, 46, 221, 224, 225
 Tyre, vii, viii, 76
 Variations in Gr. Interp., 23, 42, 87,
     88, 111, 119, 131, 140, 142, 143,
     146, 151, 178, 187, 188, 205, 214
 Version Greek of Daniel, x, lii ——— Cod. Chisian, or Rom. LXX,
     x, lv
 ——— Coptic, xli
 Vestments, 54, 55, 91
 Visions, 107, 108, 126, 127, 142, 147, 157, 176, 183, 186
 ——— of the night, 108
 Visionary station distinguished from real, 128
 Ulai, see Eulæus
 Universal History, xxvi, 16, 65, 79,
     92, 173, 189, 196, 202
 Uphaz, 179
 Ὑπερωον, or Upper Chamber, 99
 Weeks, 70, Prophecy of, xiii, 157—
     176
 Words foreign in Daniel, vii
 Writing of Truth, 185, 187, 229
 ——— on the Wall, 81
 Xerxes, his force and opulence, 188
 Years lunar, xlvi, 160
 ——— of computation, xlvi, 165
 Zealots, 171

INDEX

OF

HEBREW AND CHALDEE WORDS AND PHRASES

TREATED OF IN THE NOTES.

- א may be a masculine termination, 88
 — changed to י, 52, 82
 אב any ancestor, 80
 אדני for יהוה 5, 149, 154
 אפר dust of the ground, 227
 אר-עפר river Ulai, 127, 129
 אור sense doubtful, 21
 איים islands, and towns on the coast, 200
 לו none for him, or not his, 167
 אכל קרצו invidiously to accuse, 50
 אל צב with ארץ dropped, to the land of glory, 135, 199, 221
 אנא or אני pleonastic use after an affix, 119, 186
 אנס to press hard, 62
 אפרנו his pavilion, 224
 ב for כ, 103, 188
 באיש to distress, 100
 אחדים within a year, 202
 בינה its strong import, 157
 בלא to grow old with wearing, 123
 בלתי conjunction, its sense, 201
 במצערי in his footsteps, 222
 בפשא by a bold transgression, 137, 151
 בת טות analogous sense, 102
 הנשים בת הנשים excellent woman, 200
 גיל age and standing, 10
 די different senses and uses, 61, 64, 100
 לא די without, 31
 דחון a table, 102
 דראון confusion, 228
 ה final mistaken for affix, 39
 — emphatic its use, 150, 167
 הצדא Is it insultingly? 52
 הרנש to meet tumultuously, 97
 הטא explained, 24
 ו meaning and uses, 45, 85, 116, 161, 167, 171, 172, 190, 199, 204, 213
 זה doubled, applied to things distinct, 184
 זיר comeliness, or brightness of countenance, 81
 זרעים arms and an offspring, 210
 זמן an appointed time, 23
 הטף and טינא the former the naked, the latter the tempered clay, 37
 המורות κεχαρισμενη, greatly beloved, 157
 טעם or טענה, 51
 י for ה, 11
 יבניו with ל following, intransitive, 212
 ימים 141
 ימים without an adjunct, two days, 147
 — often for a year, 202
 יצא exact truth, 120
 יתמרמר he rushed furiously, 132
 כ particle of similitude omitted, 168
 כלה different significations, 199
 כנף a wing or border, 171
 כרת to cut off with ignominy, 166
 ל prefixed to a nominative case, 75
 להחרים του αναθεματισαι, 224
 לחם food, 177
 להם לצרף to be proved among them, 213
 מהחצפא hasty or pressing, 25
 מדבר referred to the Λογος, 138
 מחא with ב following, to check or hinder, 74
 מישרים or ישרים conditions of agreement, 191, 200
 ממשלתו beside his proper dominion, 190
 מן התחברות strong import, illustrated in the Greek, 204
 מנרע right mind 75
 מעור protector, applied to God, 217
 מעף ביעף made to fly swiftly, 156
 מצר and לצר, against, 97, 123
 מצעירה opposite senses, 134
 מראה Angelic aspect, 180
 משכלים Minds well prepared, or well informed, 7, 212, 228
 נ rejected in Hebrew but favoured in Chaldee, 60
 נבובה Etymology and sense, 22, 86
 ננע to touch, or come to 156

- נדה a distant separation, 103
 נוע to totter, 181
 נחרצת its form and import, 168, 172, 214
 נחתך of abbreviation, 159, 170
 נכה to hurt, according to Syriac, 131
 נכר אשר הכיר a probable reduplication, 218
 נצבתא, the stock, 36
 נצר משרשיה a shoot from her roots, 192
 נשר an eagle, possibly שחר pro שחל a black lion, 74
 נסב to presume, 123
 נסלה mount, or engines, 198
 נר אחריו used adverbially, 61
 נר מעלי till the goings in of the Sun, 101
 נר עת for a time, 205
 נרן and מועד as καρος and χρονος, 231
 נרין and קדישין various senses, 63
 על preposition, omitted, 192
 על כנו on his base, 202
 עלה an action, 97
 עלעין tusks, 110
 עם preposition, of, 108
 עם מבחריו his chosen forces, 199
 מבצרו — the people of his fortifications, 199
 עשית probably an expletive, 97
 פחר the potter, 36
 פלמוני the wonderful numberer, according to its original sense, 138
 פרץ to revolt, 197
 פרתמים nobles, 6
 פתבנ etymology and sense, 8, 207
 פתנס etymology and sense, 53
 צבא host, how applied and used, 136, 177
 צדקתך thy conditional mercies, 154
 ציים כתיים ships of Chittim, 208
 צירי wreathing pains, 184
 צרף, וברר, and לבן their import, 234
 קרן חזות a conspicuous horn, 131
 רבות a feminine absolute, 221
 רבים multitudes, for all, 227
 רב סרים chief chamberlain, 5
 רחוב and חרוץ the streets and completions, 163
 שוב to do again, 161
 שכל a fetter, 146
 שנים explanatory of העתים, 197
 שקוצ abominations, 171
 שר צבא and שר שרים God, or Christ 136
 תקף persevering resistance, 200
 תתך its metaphorical propriety, 173

A LITERAL TRANSLATION
OF
THE PROPHETS,
FROM
ISAIAH TO MALACHI.

WITH NOTES,
CRITICAL, PHILOLOGICAL, AND EXPLANATORY.

BY LOWTH, BLAYNEY, NEWCOME, WINTLE, HORSLEY, ETC.

IN FIVE VOLUMES.
VOL. V.—THE MINOR PROPHETS.

BY WILLIAM NEWCOME, D.D., BISHOP OF WATERFORD; AND SAMUEL HORSLEY, LL.D., BISHOP OF ST. DAVID'S.

A New Edition.

LONDON:
PRINTED FOR THOMAS TEGG & SON, CHEAPSIDE;

R. GRIFFIN & CO., GLASGOW; AND
TEGG, WISE, & CO., LOWER ABBEY STREET, DUBLIN.

MDCCCXXXVI.

AN ATTEMPT
TOWARDS
AN IMPROVED VERSION,
A
METRICAL ARRANGEMENT, AND AN EXPLANATION,
OF THE
TWELVE MINOR PROPHETS.

BY WILLIAM NEWCOME, D.D.

PRIMATE OF IRELAND.

---

Now greatly Enlarged and Improved.

WITH ALL THE PRINCIPAL NOTES, AND A COMPARISON OF THE VARIOUS RENDERINGS OF

DR. HORSLEY, ON HOSEA,

AND

DR. BLAYNEY, ON ZECHARIAH.

---

LONDON:

PRINTED FOR THOMAS TEGG AND SON,

73, CHEAPSIDE.

R. GRIFFIN AND CO., GLASGOW; AND TEGG AND CO., DUBLIN.

---

MDCCCXXVI.

ADVERTISEMENT.

---

THE Editor of this Edition, in apologizing for the delay attending its publication, has only to refer to the anxiety he felt, that so valuable a work might be presented to the public, without those inaccuracies which the Rev. T. Hartwell Horne complains of as defacing the former 8vo. Edition. He has also carefully compared every reference to the works of Blayney and Horsley, and has introduced very many additional Notes and Illustrations, which cannot fail of rendering the present Edition more acceptable and useful to the Biblical Student.

J. HARRISON.

Hoxton, July 13, 1836.

PREFACE.

---

GOD raised up a succession of prophets among his people for many wise and gracious purposes. They were not only designed to retain the Jews in the worship of the one true God ; but to spread the knowledge of him among the neighbouring nations, by the fame of their predictions and miracles. They were a barrier against those prevailing kinds of superstition which consisted in the supposed evocation of departed spirits, and in consulting imaginary local deities, for the purpose of gratifying the natural thirst which all mankind have for the knowledge of futurity. And though the answers which God occasionally vouchsafed to the high priest, by a voice from between the Cherubim, were greatly subservient to these ends ; yet was it expedient that prophecy should pervade the whole body of the people, and that events should be foretold which from their nature could not be the object of inquiry by the sacred oracle, or at a time when idolatry was so general that these solemn applications to God were wholly neglected. It must also be observed, that the attestations given by the prophets to the Mosaic law, their instructions and exhortations, their reproofs and threatenings, were powerful means of preserving the Jews in obedience, and eminent displays of the divine goodness and compassion. Another design in sending the prophets was, that, under the influence of the Holy Spirit, they might* record God's dealings with his people and other adjoining nations and empires; and might thus transmit to after ages a most instructive history of his adorable ways in governing the world. †Josephus asserts that, from the death of Moses to the reign of Artaxerxes, the prophets who succeeded that legislator wrote the transactions of their own times; and that the Jewish historians from Artaxerxes downwards were not esteemed worthy of like credit, because there had not been a regular succession of prophets. This assertion is confirmed by the sacred writers; who mention the names of many prophets as having recorded the affairs of the Jewish nation. A further and most important reason for instituting the prophetic order was, that, by a long series of predictions, the attention of the Jews might be turned to the coming of their Messiah; and that the faith of succeeding ages in that great event might be thus confirmed. -

The writings of these prophets bear plain signatures of their divine authority. Examine the books of the Greek and Roman sages; and observe what discordant opinions they contain on almost every point of theology and philosophy. But in the Hebrew * See 1 Chron. xxix. 29 : 2 Chron. ix. 29 : compared with 1 Kings xi. 29 : 2 Chron. xii. 15 : xiii. 22 : xx. 34 : compared with 1 Kings xvi. 1—7 : 2 Chron. xxxii. 32 : xxxiii. 19.

† Contr. Ap. i. 8.

prophets there is a wonderful harmony of doctrine for above a * thousand years ; unparalleled in the writings of any country. History teaches us that a great number of their prophecies have been accomplished ; and we know that some of them are accomplishing at this day. It also peculiarly deserves our notice, that these holy men entertained the most worthy conceptions of the Deity in the midst of an idolatrous nation ; and inculcated the supreme excellence of moral duties, when all around them, even the few worshippers of Jehovah himself, were solely intent on ritual observances.

The writings which these men of God have transmitted down to us will be eminently useful in every age of the Christian church ; not only as they contain illustrious prophecies of many events, and especially of our blessed Lord's appearance, but for their magnificent descriptions of the Deity, for their animating lessons of piety and virtue, and for the indignation which they express, and the punishments which they denounce against idolatry and vice : which particular topics, among many other instructive and important ones, are treated by them with uncommon variety, beauty, and sublimity, and with an authority becoming ambassadors of the Most High.

The Twelve Minor Prophets, as they are commonly distinguished, have been justly deemed as obscure a part of the Hebrew scriptures as any extant. This obscurity partly arises from the nature of the Hebrew language, which is singularly concise, deals much in asyndeta, has few moods and tenses, often omits the preposition, gives various and nice significations to its particles, and as its remains are comprehended in one book, must of course contain words and phrases, about the meaning of which, as they occur perhaps but once, we can only form conjectures from the context or from analogous terms in the sister-dialects. Other causes of the difficulties with which these prophetic writings abound are, the want of historical records for the illustration of many facts to which they refer ; the nature of those unaccomplished prophecies which occur in them, and which the event alone can distinctly explain ; the peculiar boldness of their figures and abruptness of their transitions ; and, above all, the many corruptions which deform the present text. These errors of transcribers arise either from sources common to all books of remote antiquity, or from some which are proper to the Hebrew language ; such as the similitude of many letters, and the consequence of a mistake in the radical ones, which generally corrects itself in the western languages, and as generally forms a new Hebrew word, because the roots are mostly trilateral and often consist of the same letters differently arranged.

* From Moses before Christ about 1500 ; to Malachi before Christ about 436.

But though patient investigation and critical skill are necessary to combat these difficulties, they are by no means invincible ; as the ignorance of some, and the prejudices of others, have studiously represented them. They are happily counterbalanced by peculiar advantages. As Hebrew derivatives frequently branch off from the leading idea of the root, this property of the language leads to a just and elegant manner of ascertaining their sense. Examples of this perpetually occur in Taylor's Hebrew Concordance: but there is still ample room for the sagacity and industry of every competent inquirer. The characteristic style of the Hebrew poets, who delight in subjoining to one proposition a corresponding clause which has an equivalent or opposite sense, affords frequent explanations of obscure passages by the parallelism. The similar structure of many connected hemistichs occasionally serves to rectify the Masoretic punctuation, and to give the sentence a beautiful turn. The sister languages determine the precise meaning of many words and phrases; and teach us to estimate the force of many daring figures. The ancient translators and paraphrasts open fruitful sources of criticism. Excellent lexicons and concordances facilitate the prosecution of philological inquiries. Many commentators have considered the sacred writings in different views, according to their taste and genius; and though the name has been disgraced by a number of hireling compilers, yet no competent critic has carefully studied the Scriptures for himself without smoothing the ruggedness of the way to those who follow him. It must also be observed, that the sacred books constantly receive new light by the increasing number of authentic travels to the east; where ancient customs are invariably retained. The collation of Hebrew MSS. by the late learned and indefatigable Doctor Kennicott, a fit instrument in the hands of Providence for planning and executing this great work, forms an invaluable accession to our external helps. It will appear in the following notes, that the variations furnished by MSS. are corroborated by the ancient versions; and, therefore, that these principal aids in our critical researches bear mutual testimony to their respective authority. The MSS. make it probable that the versions faithfully represent the text from which they were formed; and the versions tend to prove that the present readings of MSS. are not mistakes of transcribers, but actually existed in certain ancient copies. The various lections, noted in the course of this work as worthy of nice attention, amount to more than one hundred; and of these about forty may be ranked in the class of very material ones; and yet the books explained do not form a fourteenth part of the Hebrew scriptures; and the collations were not minutely examined throughout, but inspected when difficulties arose.

However, there is still abundant reason for extending our helps in so important and difficult a study as that of the Hebrew scriptures. We want a collation of all the Hebrew MSS. in every part: a great * number having been examined by Doctor Kennicott, or his coadjutors, only in select places. It is also desirable that the ancient versions and paraphrases should be collated with all the MSS. extant; that each should be printed apart, with an arrangement of the various readings at the foot of the page; and that a scrupulously faithful interlineary version should be given of those in the eastern languages. In the following pages, the reader will have occasion to observe how materially the Aldine edition and the † Pach-

* 349. See Diss. gen. p. 94—108.

† So called from its ancient proprietor Pachomius, a patriarch of Constan-mian MS. of the Seventy differ from the Alexandrian and Vatican copies: and it will appear, by extracts from Sixtus Quintus's edition, that there are rich treasures in the Vatican library, relating to this venerable translation, which still remain unexplored.

The learned world has been lately informed that the most useful part of Origen's hexapla and tetrapla, in a Syriac version, is now extant in the Ambrosian library at Milan. This MS. contains, of the canonical scriptures, the Psalms, Job, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, the Song of Solomon, Isaiah, Jeremiah and the Lamentations, Ezekiel, Daniel, and the Twelve Minor Prophets. It is written in the Estrangular character; and has all the apparatus of Origen's marks, together with Scholia of Greek and Syriac Fathers, and annotations of various interpreters. There is a preface to almost all the books; which, among other particulars, explains the arguments of the chapters: and to each book is subjoined a well written appendix, the subjects of which are, an account of the author, the fate of the book, and the age of the version. The history of the authors, the ancient music and its instruments, the arguments of the Psalms by Eusebius and Pamphilus, the Hebrew proper names alphabetically arranged, and the life of Origen, are enlarged on in a copious preface to the Psalms. This particular copy of the Syriac version was written in the eighth or ninth century, and was purchased in Egypt, and deposited in the Ambrosian library, by Cardinal Borromeo.

tinople. It is in the British Museum; and is supposed to have been written some time between the tenth and twelfth centuries. See more in Bishop Lowth's preface to Isaiah, p. lxvii.

The version itself was formed, A. D. 617, from the Greek of the Septuagint, and of Aquila, Symmachus, and Theodotian: and sometimes the letter ν occurs in the margin, and denotes the Hebrew text. The Greek copy, which the Syriac translator used, was transcribed, collated, and corrected, by Eusebius and Pamphilus, from the tetrapla and hexapla of Origen in the Cesarean library, at Alexandria. The learned Professor, to whom we are indebted for this * account, has given two extracts from this MS. in a † letter to the Bishop of London; namely, Dan. ix. 24—27, and Isaiah ix. 6, 7; and communicates the following curious information on this subject; “The Syriac Milan MS.—is found to be a second volume of that copy from the first of which Masius published his translation of Joshua. The MS. of Masius has since disappeared, and the recovery of it is an idea more likely to excite our wishes than our hopes. The Pentateuch, I must observe, had before been lost from this faithful Syriac translation; but it is fortunately preserved in the Bodleian library, in an Arabic version of the same Syriac. Of this Arabic version, a collation was indeed made for Dr. Grabe; but so very imperfect a one, as to be highly capable of improvement.”

The publication of these MSS., with a Latin version annexed, would be of singular use for the solution of objections to the scriptures, the illustration of their obscurities, and the discovery of new beauties in the sacred volume: and, I trust, that the natural patrons of biblical learning, I mean societies founded for the advancement of religious knowledge and the higher ecclesiastics, will soon enable every scholar to command this inestimable treasure. The execution of such a work calls for their encouragement; and, indeed, may well be considered as a national object in a Christian country*.

* See Mr. White's sermon on a revival of our English translation. Oxford. 1779.

† Printed at Oxford in MDCCLXXIX, but not published.

Under the head of accessions to our scriptural helps, it may not be improper to suggest the idea of an improved Hebrew lexicon and concordance. To Castell's lexicon, a work of immense labour and learning, might be added a more complete detail of significations belonging to each Hebrew word, a deduction of the subordinate senses from the primary one, and a reference to the roots in the kindred tongues, consisting of † letters equivalent to the Hebrew radicals. The principal defects in Taylor's concordance are, that, in assigning senses to the Hebrew words, he too frequently assumes, as a principle, the exactness of our English version; and that his work consists of references to the text, instead of clauses which would exemplify the grammatical use of the word. It is true, that to dispose of Buxtorf's quotations in his own admirable method, with a Latin rendering, after the * "Mr. Norberg, a learned Swede, who spent some time in biblical studies at Oxford, was induced, by my persuasion, to visit Milan, for the sole purpose of transcribing that volume in the Ambrosian Library. I have since heard that he has completed his transcript." Extract of a private letter from Mr. White. May 5, 1784.

Mr. White's attention to so important a matter cannot be too highly commended. It is much to be wished that this transcript was immediately purchased, and deposited in some public library till the press could be employed about it.

† Thus, under שנה the word חנה should be referred to manner of Romaine's Calasio, and with a precise explanation of the word after the general manner of Taylor, would make a voluminous and expensive work: but I am speaking of a perfect concordance to a book which is an inexhaustible storehouse of divine truths.

And yet I am persuaded that, with every aid which could be furnished, there would still be a necessity for sober conjectural criticism: because there are inveterate errors in the text, prior to our most ancient external help, the Septuagint version; and because many evident errors remain uncorrected by MSS., the oldest of which does not exceed eight hundred years.

The method of translating the prophetical books, according to their supposed measure, is adopted from the learned Bishop Lowth, who has copiously and acutely treated the subject of Hebrew versification in his Academical Prelections, in his brief and larger confutation of Hare's metre, and in the preface to his very able and very useful comment on Isaiah. Many will think that I have carried this hypothesis too far in some parts of my translation, but I followed it when there appeared a remote probability of its truth; and readily grant that some parts may be prosaic to which I have given a metrical form. However, all discerning readers will admit that the Hebrew poets conduct and diversify their distinguishing mode of poetical composition with supreme skill and beauty. The synonymous parallelism, which repeats the sense of a former clause in different words, is considered as one kind of cpiphonema by Demetrius Phalereus, and is placed by him among the embellishments of style. He gives this instance :—

Οἶαν ταν ὑακινθον εν ουρεσι ποιμενες ανδρες
 Ποσσι καταστειβουσι,—χαμαι δε τε πορφυρον ανθος.
 As when a mountain hyacinth the shepherds
 Tread under foot,—and to the ground incline
 The purple flower.

The part which follows the line is superadded, according to this * rhetorician, for the purpose of giving ornament and beauty to the sentence. And, to abate the fastidiousness of some critics with respect to the Hebrew style of poetry, I shall produce a few similar instances, among many which occur in the Æneid itself.

Tum vero omne mihi visum est considerare in ignes
 Ilium,—et ex imo verti Neptunia Troja.
 Trojaque nunc staret—Priamique arx alta maneres.
 Apparet domus intus—et atria longa patescunt.
 Venit summa dies—et ineluctabile tempus.
 Sed si tantus amor casus cognoscere nostros—
 Et breviter Trojæ supremum audire laborem.
 Vulnus alit venis—et cæco carpitur igni.

Nay, there are examples in Virgil resembling the most pleonastic parts of the Hebrew poetry.

Quantum illi nocuere greges,—durique venenum
 Dentis,—et admorso signata in stirpe cicatrix.
Georg. ii. 377.

Postquam res Asiæ,—Priamique evertere gentem
 Immeritam visum superis,—ceciditque superbum
 Ilium,—et omnis humo fumat Neptunia Troja.

* P. 78. § 106 ed. Glasg.

But synonymous parallel hemistichs are most beautiful, when a literal clause is succeeded by a figurative one. As :—

Thou hast shewed thy people hard things :
Thou hast made us to drink the wine of astonishment.

Ps. lx. 3.

Thou hast set our iniquities before thee ;
Our * secret sins in the light of thy countenance.

Ps. xc. 8.

With shouting in the day of battle ;
With a whirlwind in the day of tempest. Amos i. 14.

Instances of this kind occur also in the classical writers. As :—

Ære ciere viros—Martemque accendere cantu. Æn. vi. 165.

Defendit numerus—junctæque umbone phalanges. Juv. ii. 46.

But though I consider the hypothesis of dividing the prophetic books into hemistichs, as founded on analogy, and as very ingenious and probable ; yet, from our imperfect acquaintance with the subject, doubts must always remain, not only as to the division of particular lines which appear to have a poetical cast, but as to passages of some length, whether they resolve themselves into measure or not. To us it often appears mere matter of taste, whether five Hebrew words constitute two lines or one. Thus,

“ Blow ye the trumpet in Gibeah, and the cornet in Ramah,”

* 46 MSS. and three ed. read plurally abscondita nostra, inserting the v before the affix נ.

may perhaps admit of another distribution :—

“ Blow ye the trumpet in Gibeah,
And the cornet in Ramah.”

Hos. v. 8.

And Bishop Lowth thinks the prophet Haggai is wholly prosaic :* but, before this authority was observed, the following translation had been formed on the conjecture that great part of this book admitted of a metrical division.

I have enjoyed the advantage of some particular assistances, in addition to those which the press affords. The notes ascribed to Dr. Durell, Principal of Hertfort College in the University of Oxford, were formerly communicated to me by a late pious, benevolent, and learned friend ; with his permission to transcribe any part of them. The Legatee of the late Doctor Wheeler, Canon of Christchurch, and Regius Professor of Divinity in the University of Oxford, in whose premature death the learned world sustained a great loss, furnished me with his translations of Hosea to chap. x. 5 ; of all Micah, with a rough copy of it to chap. ii. 10 ; of all Nahum, with an improved transcript to chap. ii. 2 ; Zephaniah, chap. i. to ver. 14 ; and of all Habakkuk, with a less correct duplicate. The lines are metrically divided, and very rarely differ in their pauses from those which follow : but the death of this very superior scholar and orientalist has deprived us of his remarks. The present Archbishop of Canterbury has favoured me in the most friendly manner with the use of Archbishop Secker's notes on the books which I have attempted to illustrate : and I am much indebted to the learned Mr. Woide of the British Museum, not only for copying these notes, but for furnishing me with some of Professor Michaelis's observations from his Bibliotheca Hebræa, and with collations of a Coptic* version made in the second century, and of MS. Pachom., as far as my subject required them. The public has also the benefit of a curious communication on Haggai ii. 6—9, from Doctor Heberden ; who is no less eminent for his literary than for his medical abilities, and no less a patron than a judge of learning.

* Omnino prosaicus : Præl. Hebr. xxi. p. 282. ed. 2. 8vo.

One design of engaging in the present arduous province was to recommend, and, in a small degree, to facilitate, an improved English version of the scriptures ; than which nothing could be more beneficial to the cause of religion, or more honourable to the reign and age in which it was patronized and executed. The reasons for its expediency are, the mistakes, imperfections, and many invincible obscurities of our present version ; the accession of various helps since the execution of that work ; the advanced state of learning ; and our emancipation from slavery to the Masoretic points, and to the Hebrew text as absolutely uncorrupt.

I shall subjoin some rules for the conduct of such a work ; which are submitted to the learned with much deference ; and that the wisdom of many may correct the imperfect ideas of an individual. It is expedient that in the first place, a previous plan for a uniform translation should be deliberately adjusted. A committee of learned men should then be appointed by proper authority ; who should invite every scholar to contribute his remarks ; who should have their respective parts assigned them ; and, after the performance of their allotted tasks, should amicably* unite in advancing the whole to its proper degree of perfection.

* See Bishop Lowth's preface to Isaiah, p. 67.

RULE I. The translator should express every word in the original by a literal rendering, where the English idiom admits of it ; and where not only purity, but perspicuity, and dignity of expression can be preserved.

For thus the translator shows how he reads the original text ; and not only the matter of the scriptures, but the peculiar turn of language in them, will be faithfully represented.

Isaiah lxiii. 13, we read :—

מוליכם בהחמזת נסוס במדבר לא יכשלו of which the common English version is : “ That led them through the deep, as a horse in the wilderness, that they should not stumble.” And Bishop Lowth’s :†

“ Leading them through the abyss, like a courser in the plain, without obstacle.”

* The translators in King James’s time took an excellent way. That part of the Bible was given to him who was most excellent in such a tongue ; and then they met together, and one read the translation, the rest holding in their hands some Bible, either of the learned tongues, or French, Spanish, Italian, &c. If they found any fault, they spoke, if not, he read on. Selden iii. 2009.

† This truly learned and ingenious prelate has contributed more than any

As there is a participle, מוליך, in the Hebrew ; leading is preferable to that led : but לא יכשלו, ut ne impingant, is not so well rendered by without obstacle. So in the three following passages I prefer the literal rendering :

“ For the Lord Jehovah is my helper.”

Bp. Lowth. Isa. l. 7

literally,

“ helpeth me.”

“ Who reverseth the devices of the sages.”

Bp. Lowth. Isa. xlv. 25.

literally,

“ Who turneth wise men backward.”

English Version.

“ And Hezekiah was rejoiced at their arrival.”

Bp. Lowth. Isa. xxxix. 2.

literally,

“ because of them. עליהם.

For this rule excludes,

1. Unnecessary paraphrase. As,

“ I Jehovah am the author of all these things.”

Bp. Lowth. Isa. xlv. 7.

“ do.”—Engl. vers. Hebr. עשה 4 MSS. faciens sum.

“ A God that uttereth truth, and granteth salvation.”

Bp. Lowth. Isa. xlv. 21.

for

“ A righteous God and a Saviour.”

writer of the age towards enabling us to understand the sense of the Hebrew scriptures, to taste their beauties, and to restore their integrity by the rules of sound criticism. His exposition of Isaiah is the best commentary extant on any part of the Old Testament. His translation represents the meaning of the original with great judgment and learning. My objections lie, not against his interpretations, but only against the mode of rendering which he has occasionally adopted : and I have freely stated them, because I consider the subject as an important one, and because I feel the weight which a name of such eminence carries with it.

“ And mine arm shall dispense judgment to the peoples.”

Bp. Lowth. Isa. li. 5.

“ shall judge.”—Engl. vers.

“ Then shall we be struck at once with admiration and terror.” Isa. xli. 23.

for,

“ That we may wonder and may fear together.”

In like manner the learned Mr. Blayney has,*

“ A seed of a genuine quality.” Jer. ii. 21.

“ A right seed.”—Engl. vers.

“ Who putteth the righteous to trial.” Jer. xx. 12.

“ That triest the righteous.”—Engl. vers.

“ In an evil, and not in a friendly manner.” Jer. xxi. 10.

“ For evil and not for good.”—Engl. vers.

“ Intentions of peace, and not of hurtful tendency.”

Jer. xxix. 11.

“ Thoughts of peace, and not of evil.”—Engl. vers.

2. The rule excludes defective translations.

The thirty-sixth chapter of Isaiah begins, in Bishop Lowth's version, “ In the fourteenth year of King Hezekiah,” &c. יד “ Now it came to pass” being omitted. The Bishop also leaves לאמר “ saying” untranslated, chap. xxxvi. 21.

3. The rule excludes ungrammatical forms of expression.

* See his elaborate and useful comment on Jeremiah, 4to. Oxford, 1784.

The English version is in general very accurate : but, Isa. xliv. 24, we find, "I am the Lord that maketh all things, that stretcheth forth the heavens alone, that spreadeth abroad the earth by myself:" for, make, stretch, spread. See Bp. Lowth's Grammar, London, 2nd edit. p. 149. And Matt. v. 23, we read, "Therefore, if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath ought against thee;" &c. for, remember.

4. The rule excludes obscure renderings.

I speak rather of obscurities into which translators are apt to fall, than of those unpardonable ones which are owing to a departure from the rules of good writing.

Retaining mere Hebraisms would be one source of obscurity. Thus Ainsworth renders Ps. xcv. 2, "Let us prevent his face with thanksgiving:" but we find in our English version, "Let us come before his presence," &c. Of this kind there are some instances in Mr. Blayney's translation. As Jer. xl. 4. "If it seem good unto thee to come with me to Babylon, come; and I will set mine eyes upon thee." "And I will look well unto thee."—Engl. vers.

"Give thyself no rest, let not the daughter of thine eye stand still." Lam. ii. 18.

"Let not the apple of thine eye cease."—Engl. vers.

Another source of obscurity is, the use of such obsolete, foreign, and learned words or phrases as are for the most part unintelligible. An authorized translation of the Bible should be adapted to the capacity of common readers; and therefore this kind of diction should be avoided, except where the idea is of such a nature that it ought to be conveyed indirectly. Some passages in our version are now of so antiquated a turn as not to be understood by the generality of scholars. As Judges ix. 53: "And a certain woman cast a piece of a mill-stone upon Abimelech's head, and * all to brake his skull;" that is, "utterly, altogether, brake: והיה ויהיה et fregit." And again, Ezek. xxx. 2. "Wo worth the day;" that is, "befal." Worth, esse, fieri. Jun. והיה ויהיה, "væ diei." It must always be remembered that Bp. Lowth's version is designed for the learned: in one for vulgar use sorec for choice vine, hades for the grave, or pit, or place of the dead, maslin for mixed provender, ilex for green oak, coune † for covered carriage, &c. would be clearly inadmissible. In the New Testament, some Greek words are retained, as "phylacteries," Matt. xxiii. 5, which may be rendered "frontlets," or "scrolls," and "anathema," 1 Cor. xvi. 22, to which I prefer "accursed ‡." There are three ways of proceeding as to Hebrew or Hebrew-Syriac words; admitting them into the text, and rendering them in the margin, as our translators do; rendering them in the text, as for "Maran atha," 1 Cor. xvi. 22, "Our Lord cometh;" or both retaining and rendering them in the text, as “Maran atha, that is to say, Our Lord cometh.” I incline to recommend the last way.

* All that he hytte he alto frapped. Archæol. v. 386. i. e. entirely brake in pieces.

† A word formed from the Latin covinus, the root of which is cavus; and therefore corresponding to the Hebrew בֵּץ vehiculum cameratum, vel testudinatum.

‡ Margin, a curse.

In their preface, our translators thus express themselves on this subject. “We have shunned the obscurity of the Papists, in their azymes, tunike, rational, holocauste, prepuce, pasche, and a number of such like, whereof their late translation is full, and that of purpose to darken the sense: that, since they must needs translate the Bible, yet by the language thereof it may be kept from being understood. But we desire that the scripture may speak like itself, as in the language of Canaan, that it may be understood even of the very vulgar.”

5. The rule excludes debased and offensive terms or phrases.

Ezek. xvi. 43, we read, “Because thou hast fretted me in all these things.” The word is elsewhere rendered “provoked.” Isaiah, lxiv. 6, the English version has, “And all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags:” which Bishop Lowth translates, “like a rejected garment;” in more dignified language, as well as nearer to the original. But Isa. xxxvii. 4, the common translation “Wherefore lift up thy prayer for the remnant that is left” [Margin, found] has more exactness and dignity than, “And do thou offer up thy prayer for the poor remains of the people.” Bp. Lowth. Matt. xvii. 15, Doctor Scott renders κακως πασχει “is grievously handled.” With respect to the other part of the rule, Doctor Delany, in his life of David, very properly proposes to translate such passages as occur

1 Kings xiv. 10, "him that watereth against the wall." And Mr. Blayney's translation,

"Jerusalem is become as one [rather, as a woman] set apart for unclean among them," Lam. i. 17.

is preferable to that of our English translators.

An exception to this rule may be admitted, when an ancient custom cannot be expressed in a translation without perplexing common readers. Thus, though the Jews in our Lord's time reclined at their meals ανακλινω and ανακειμαι may be rendered to sit down, and not to lie down.

RULE II. Where the English idiom requires a paraphrase, it should be so formed as to comprehend the original word or phrase; and the supplemental part should stand in Italics; except where harshness of language arises from pursuing this method.

Isaiah i. 4, Bishop Lowth's translation of מורר אחר is, "They are estranged from him, they have turned their back upon him." The Vulgate and the Seventy render more happily: abalienati sunt retrorsum; ἀπηλλοτριωθησαν εἰς τα οπισω. Our translators have, "They are gone backward. Heb. alienated or separated." The root being מור, as about forty MSS. and one edition* read מורי, according to the rule we should translate, "They are estranged from him, they have gone backward." So Luke ix. 53, may be rendered, "Because his face was as though he was going to Jerusalem." Ps. cix. 4, our translators properly suggest an idea of the conciseness in the original, when they render, "But I give myself unto prayer." But where the diction becomes inelegant from the observance of this rule, it may be neglected. Thus, Habakkuk i. 6, many may prefer,

* So Ezek. xiv. 5. twelve MSS. and two ed. read מורי.

"Who go over the breadth of the earth,
To possess dwelling-places not their own ;"

To

————— which belong not unto* them.

RULE III. Where a verbal translation cannot be thus interwoven, one equivalent to it, and which implies the reading in the original, should be substituted ; and the idiom in the text should be literally rendered in the margin.

By observing the second and third rules, the genius of the original languages will be shown ; and the reader unskilled in them will be best enabled to interpret for himself.

Thus Bishop Lowth renders Isaiah v. 1,

"My beloved had a vineyard
On a high and fruitful hill."

"In a very fruitful hill" is the less exact version of our translators. Here the marginal rendering should be, on a horn, the son of oil.

RULE IV. The same original word, and its derivatives, according to the leading different senses, and also the same phrase, should be respectively translated by the same corresponding English word or phrase, except where a distinct representation of a general idea, or the nature of the English language, or the avoiding of an ambiguity, or harmony of sound, require a different mode of expression.

* Heb. it.

In their preface, we learn the sentiments of our translators on this subject; and, from their manner of stating them, may collect that a difference of opinion subsisted about it.

“ Another thing we think good to admonish thee of, gentle reader; that we have not tied ourselves to an uniformity of phrasing, or to an identity of words, as some peradventure would wish that we had done, because they observe that some learned men somewhere have been as exact as they could that way. Truly, that we might not vary from the sense of that which we translated before, if the word signified the same thing in both places (for there be some words that be not of the same sense everywhere), we were especially careful, and made a conscience, according to our duty. But that we should express the same notion in the same particular word; as, for example, if we translate the Hebrew or Greek word once by purpose never to call it intent; or one where journeying, never travelling; if one where think, never suppose; if one where pain, never ache; if one where joy, never gladness, &c.; thus to mince the matter, we thought to savour more of curiosity than wisdom, and that it would rather breed scorn in the atheist than bring profit to the godly reader. For is the kingdom of God become words or syllables? Why should we be in bondage to them, if we may be free? use one precisely, when we may use another no less fit as commodiously?" We might also be charged by scoffers with some unequal dealing towards a great number of good English words. Add hereunto, that niceness in words was always accounted the next step to trifling; and so was to be curious about names too: also, that we cannot follow a better pattern for elocution than God himself: therefore, he using divers words in his holy writ, and indifferently for one thing in nature, we, if we will not be superstitious, may use the same liberty in our English versions out of Hebrew and Greek, for that copy or store that he hath given us."

Other learned men have expressed themselves differently.

"Veterem interpretem Erasmus merito in eo reprehendit, quod unum idemque vocabulum sæpe diversis modis explicet. Atqui in eo ipso quoties peccat? Leviculum hoc est, dices. Ego vero aliter censeo, nisi cum ita necesse est, in his quidem libris in quibus sæpe videas mirifica quædam arcana velut unius vocabuli involucris tegi: ut quo propius abest a Græcis et Hebræis Latina interpretatio, eo mihi quidem magis probanda videatur: ita tamen ut simplicitate illa sermonis servata, quæ in his spiritus sancti oraculis plane divina est et admirabilis, asperum illud et horridum scribendi genus vitetur.

"Verborum proprietatem adeo studiose sum sectatus, ut etiam a synonymis, quoad ejus fieri potuit, libens abstinuerim. Singula Græca vocabula eodem ubique modo exprimere studui, nisi cum diversa fuit significatio, aut peculiaris aliqua ratio incidit: quam et ipsam plerumque notavi.”

Beza in his dedication of the New Testament to Queen Elizabeth. MDLXIII.

“ Quum autem, sicut in Græco sermone una eademque vox retinetur, in Latina quoque interpretatione servatur, ea certe in re multum consuli iis potissimum videtur, qui, cum Græcæ linguæ sint imperiti, Latino acquiescere sermoni necesse habent. Nam inde hoc saltem colligunt, uno eodemque vocabulo Græcum scriptorem uti, ideoque locum unum cum altero conferri debere.”

Henr. Stephani præf. ad Nov. Test. 12mo.
MDLXXVI.

“ Here at one view,” says Dr. Taylor in the preface to his Concordance, “those who shall undertake a new version will see under every word how variously it is rendered in the present version; and so may more easily and exactly judge how just those renderings are, and how far they may be reduced to one and the same rendering, which is much to be preferred where the sense will bear it.”

A more scrupulous exactness may well be required in translating the Scriptures, than in any other translation: and unlearned readers should not be deceived by the needless use of synonymous terms, in their comparison of passages which appear to be parallel, and in their notions about the extent of the original languages, and the copiousness of a writer's style. It may also be shown that not only the sense, but the beauty and force, of many passages depend on a version not deviating from uniformity without a decisive reason.

I therefore propose,

1. That translators should previously agree on the rendering of certain words and phrases. For instance, that יהוה should always be rendered by "Jehovah," and יהוה צבאות by "Jehovah God of hosts."

2. That it should be considered, by the help of concordances, whether the same word can always be rendered in the same manner; and that, when an English word suits every place, it should be invariably used. Our translators often vary their terms, not only unnecessarily, but so as to mislead the reader. Κρατιστος, which occurs four times, is twice rendered "most excellent," and twice "most noble." Πατρια, which occurs thrice, is rendered by "family," "lineage," and "kindred." Ἀναστατω, which occurs thrice, is rendered by "to turn upside down," "to make an uproar," and "to trouble." Within the compass of two verses, αρχιτρικλινος is rendered "governor of the feast," and "ruler of the feast:" John ii. 8, 9 : μαρτυρειν, "to testify," and "to bear witness:" ib. xv. 26, 27 : and διαιρεσεις, "diversities," and "differences:" 1 Cor. xii. 4, 5. Even in the same verse we find μενω translated by "abide," and "tarry:" Luke xxiv. 22 : ελεω by "to have compassion," and "to have pity:" Matt. xviii. 33 : and αιωνιος by "everlasting," and "eternal:" Matt. xxv. 46.

3. That, if the original word cannot always admit of the same rendering, of which there are many examples, the different renderings may be reduced to as few as possible, and those the fittest which the language affords.

4. That different words, which have the same sense or nearly the same, should be distinguished in translating them, when the English tongue furnishes distinct and proper terms. As ἐκπλησσομαι "I am amazed," θαμβεομαι "I am astonished," ἐκθαμβεομαι "I am greatly astonished:" ἀσθενής "sick," ἀρρώστος "diseased;" μαλακία "infirmity," νόσος and νόσημα "disease:" πολυτιμος "very costly," πολυτελής "very precious," βαρυτιμος "of great price." Minute differences in words should be observed by accurate translators. Thus Matt. xxvii. 46. Mark xv. 34. ἀνέβησεν and ἐβησεν are rendered "cried:" but the former word should be rendered "cried out."

5. That parallel passages should be rendered in the same words. But ὑπέρ is differently rendered Mark ix. 40. Luke ix. 50. "He that is not against us is on our part." "He that is not against us is for us." Matt. xxvi. 41, and Mark xiv. 38, exactly correspond in the original, but differ in our translation. "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation: the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak." "Watch ye and pray, lest ye enter into temptation: the spirit truly is ready, but the flesh is weak."

It is observed in the rule, that sometimes the English language requires a different translation of the same original word. Thus, when בהמה is opposed to man, it must be rendered beast : as, “I will cut off man and beast.” Ezek. xiv. 13. But when it is opposed to wild beast, it must be rendered cattle : as Gen. i. 25. Joel i. 18.

Ambiguity is avoided, Amos iii. 6.

“Shall there be evil in a city,
And Jehovah hath not * inflicted it?”

Where if the word done had been used, God might seem represented as the author of moral evil, instead of judicial calamities.

It is also proper to depart sometimes from the strictness of this rule for the sake of the ear: as Hos. ii. 9, where our translators use recover, cover, and discover, in three lines.

As the Hebrew vau, in the sense of and, occurs perpetually, and not seldom at the beginning of many clauses together, as Amos viii. 10, Hos. ii. 19—23, Zech. ix. 3—8, it is often proper to translate it by Now, so, then, &c. and many may think that the same precise rendering is unnecessary, as to some other words which are frequently repeated, and which are not the object of criticism: as, that ἀπερχεσθαι may be indiscriminately rendered by “to depart” and “to go away,” ἐξερχεσθαι by “to depart” and “to go out,” &c.

That many passages of scripture would be placed in a striking light by uniformity of rendering, may appear from the following examples. Isaiah xxxvii. 3. "This day is a day of trouble, and of rebuke, וְיָבוֹחַ, and of blasphemy." "This day is a day of trouble, and of rebuke, and of contumely." Bishop Lowth. It follows, v. 4: "It may be the Lord thy God—will reprove, הוֹכִיחַ, [refute, Bishop Lowth] the words which the Lord thy God hath heard." As the verb in v. 4, alludes to the noun in v. 3, the corresponding terms reproof and reprove are necessary to convey the sense and force of the passage. Rabshakeh has uttered words of reproof against Judah: it may be that God will reprove the words of the Assyrian. So Matt. v. 15, 16. "And it shineth, λαμπει, [not, and it giveth light] unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine," &c. λαμψατω. Rom. i. 19: "Because that which may be known of God is manifest, φανερον, in them; [rather among them] for God hath shewed it, εφανερωσε [rather, manifested it] unto them." Rom. xv. 4, 5: "For whatsoever things were written aforetime, were written for our learning; that we through patience and comfort, της παρακλησεως, of the scriptures might have hope. Now the God of patience and consolation, της παρακλησεως, [rather, comfort] grant you to be like-minded," &c. And again ib., v. 12, 13,—“In him shall the Gentiles trust, ελπiousιν, [rather, hope]. Now the God of hope, της ελπιδος, fill you with all joy,” &c. The beauty of St. Paul’s manner is lost in the common rendering.

* Heb. done.

RULE V. The collocation of the words should never be harsh, and unsuited to an English ear. An inverted structure may often be used in imitation of the original, or merely for the sake of rhyme in the sentence ; but this should be determined by what is easy and harmonious in the English language ; and not by the order of the words in the original, where this produces a forced arrangement, or one more adapted to the license of poetry than to prose.

I cannot, therefore, recommend to the imitation of future translators the manner of placing words which Bishop Lowth occasionally uses. As, “Wherefore my bowels for Moab like a harp shall sound.” Isaiah xvi. 11.

“In Jehovah shall be justified, and make their boast, all the seed of Israel.” C. xlv. 25.

But I approve of such a structure as,

“To the fatherless they administer not justice.”

C. i. 23.

“And the reproach of thy widowhood thou shalt remember no more.” C. liv. 4.

Though I think that the former line may be better rendered according to Rule I.

“The fatherless they judge not.”

In Mr. Blayney’s translation we find frequent instances of a good structure, by judiciously adhering to the Hebrew turn of the sentence. As,

“And mine heritage ye made an abomination.”

Jer. ii. 7.

“And the sword and the famine shall we not see.”

Jer. v. 11.

Our translators also sometimes give a pleasing turn to the clauses by conformity to the order of the words in the original.

As, “Surely with a mighty hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with fury poured out, will I rule over you.” Ezek. xx. 33. “And with their idols have they committed adultery.” Ib. c. xxiii. 37. But they are by no means strict observers of this method ; for in the next verse to the passage last quoted they render, “And have profaned my sabbaths ;” whereas the order in the Hebrew is, “And my sabbaths have they profaned.” They also make use of inversions which are not found in the Hebrew ; as, “And out of their hand I will not deliver them ;” where the original is, “And I will not deliver them out of their hand.” Zech. xi. 6.

RULE VI. The simple and ancient turn of the present version should be retained.

Swift was an admirer of simplicity, and is an example of it. He thinks it “one of the greatest perfections in any language ;” and “the many beautiful passages in the Old and New Testament he takes to be owing to the simplicity that runs through the whole.” Letter to Lord Oxford.

This simplicity arises, in a great measure, from the preference of pure English words to foreign ones.

Thus our translators use keep back for suppress, call upon for invoke, put under for submit, bow down for incline, lift up for exalt, stretch out for extend, cry out for exclaim, put away for divorce, put asunder for separate, cut off for reject, let go for dismiss, fall away for desert, &c. They are even so fond of these Anglicisms, that they often prefer them to single English words: as in the use of turn back for return, go away for depart, let go for release, &c. In this they are generally to be imitated.

But when a latinized word expresses the precise idea of the original, which a term purely English cannot reach, it may be questioned whether propriety should be sacrificed to simplicity. Thus the word tripudiis signifies to show joy by outward gestures, tripudiis et volutationibus: see Cast. lex.; and I am, therefore, disposed to render it always by exult.

Again: this manner of expression should, I think, be rejected when it degenerates into familiar idiom: as, hold thy tongue for be silent, we cannot tell for we know not, to take in hand for to undertake, to be at hand for to draw nigh or to approach, to cast in one's teeth for to reproach or revile, &c. One reason for the disuse of such phrases is, that a translation of the Bible should be a classical book to a foreigner, who would be perplexed by such language.

1. The rule, therefore, excludes such words as dilate, vindicator, fabricator, inanity, rectitude, &c. See Bishop Lowth's Isaiah. And Mr. Blayney has devolve, resolve, relinquish, convoke, deposit, libations, machinations, &c.

2. It also excludes modern terms and phrases, and the pomp and elegance of modern diction.

A few examples will show how much the admission of these would lessen the gravity and majesty so well supported in the received translation. Doctor Priestley has custom-house for receipt of custom. Engl. harmony. Doddridge renders Mark vi. 21: "And a convenient day happened when Herod on his birthday made a supper for his lords, and chief officers, and other persons of distinguished rank in Galilee." Bp. Lowth has "envoy, negociator, plebeians;" "your * soul shall feast itself with the richest delicacies;" "† in suppliant guise address thee;" "‡ disparting rills;" "§ whose antiquity is of the earliest date," &c. In Mr. Blayney's Jeremiah we find "the privy council of Jehovah;" "the environs of Jerusalem;" "the manufacture of the potter;" "|| and the captain of the guards gave him provisions, and a gratuity, and dismissed him;" "¶ cause cavalry to come up;" "⌘ his haughtiness is exceedingly supereminent;"

—"†† they have sinned against Jehovah,
The legitimate fold and recourse of their fathers," &c.

3. The rule supposes that the old inflections should be retained, and the use of the subjunctive mood after certain particles.

4. It also supposes that such Hebraisms should be

* Is lv. 2. † xlv. 14. ‡ xxx. 25. § xxiii. 7. || Jer. xl. 5. ¶ li. 27.

** xlviii. 29. †† Jer. l. 7.

retained as the English language easily admits, or to which an English ear is now accustomed. Of this kind are, the throne of his glory; labour of love; as for Ephraim, their glory shall flee away as a bird: which form resembles Sallust's Plebs urbana, ea vero præceps ierat; and that common Atticism, Urbem quam statuo, vestra est. "The Hebrew idioms run into the English tongue with a particular grace and beauty. Our language has received innumerable elegancies and improvements from that infusion of Hebraisms which are derived to it out of the poetical passages in holy writ. They give a force and energy to our expressions, warm and animate our language, and convey our thoughts in more ardent and intense phrases than are to be met with in our own tongue. There is something so pathetic in this kind of diction, that it often sets the mind in a flame, and makes our heart burn within us." Addison. Spect. N. 405.

RULE VII. The old ecclesiastical terms should be continued: as grace, elect, predestinated, &c.

"We have avoided the scrupulosity of the Puritans who leave the old ecclesiastical words and betake them to other; as when they put washing for baptism, and congregation instead of church."

Pref. to the English translation.

Such words are now part of our theological language; and explanations of them perpetually occur.

RULE VIII. Metaphors are, in general, to be retained; and the substitution, or unnecessary introduction, of new ones should be avoided.

If the original metaphor cannot be transfused, it should be rendered in the margin. The genius of a language, and the nature and customs of a country, will often appear by observing this rule.

Bishop Lowth renders Isa. xliv. 8,

“Is there a God beside me?

Yea, there is no other sure protector; I know not any.”

“Yea, there is no * God;” &c. English version.

I prefer rendering,

“Yea, there is no rock; I know not any.”

See Ps. xviii. 2, 46.

Again: the Bishop renders ch. xlii. 22,

“And are plunged in dark dungeons.”

Hebr.                      hidden

RULE IX. Proper names should remain as they are now written.

So little depends on their orthography in a translation, and they are now so familiarized to the ear, that to alter them may perplex or offend some, and cannot benefit any.

This rule was among King James’s instructions to our translators. “The names of the prophets and the holy writers, with the other names in the text, to be retained, as near as may be, according as they are vulgarly used.” Lewis, 2d. ed. p. 317.

* Marg. Hebr. rock.

Bishop Lowth writes Tsoar for Zoar, Botsrah for Bozrah, Retsin for Rezin, and Amots for Amos: &c. Mr. Blayney also has Jabetz, Jahatza, &c.

It is material that the names of the same persons should be written in the New Testament as they occur in the Old: and that we should read Elijah, Elisha, Isaiah, Noah, Haran, Joshua, &c. for Elias, Eliseus, Esaias, Noe, Charran, Jesus, Hebr. iv. 8, &c.

RULE X. The best-known geographical terms should be inserted in the text, and the original ones should stand in the margin. As Syria, marg. Aram: Ethiopia, marg. Cush, &c.

RULE XI. The language, sense, and punctuation, of our present version should be retained; unless when a sufficient reason can be assigned for departing from them.

RULE XII. The critical sense of passages should be considered; and not the opinions of any denomination of Christians whatever.

The translators should be philologists, and not controversialists.

RULE XIII. Passages which are allowed to be marginal glosses, or about the authenticity of which critics have reason to be doubtful, should be placed in the text between brackets.

RULE XIV. In the best editions of the bible, the poetical parts should be divided into lines answering to the metre of the original.

The common editions would be made too expensive by such a distribution, which would occupy a large space: but this inconvenience may be avoided by placing each hemistich between inverted commas, or by any other proper mark of distinction for the pause.

Dr. Kennicott's words on this subject are: "Si universa in Bibliis Hebræis carmina, more poetico, lineis brevibus, et plerumque fere æqualibus (saltem ubi non fuerint corruptæ), nunc demum imprimerentur; mirum quantum elucesceret statim sacri poetæ mens, idque in mille locis; ubi sub usitata prosæ forma difficillimum est ullam, saltem veram, expiscari sententiam." Præf. ad Vet. Test. Hebr. § xx.

Thus Gen. iv. 23, should be pointed as follows:—

“ And Lamech said unto his wives :
     Adah and Zillah, hear my voice ;
 Ye wives of Lamech, hearken unto my speech.”

And Isa. liii. 2 :—

“ He hath no form nor comeliness, that we should regard him ;
 Nor appearance, that we should desire him.”

See Præl. Hebr.

RULE XV. Of dark passages, which exhibit no meaning as they stand in our present version, an intelligible rendering should be made on the principles of sound criticism.

“ There is scope enough for—the improvement of sacred literature; especially if proper hands were employed in doing the same good office for the Hebrew bible as hath been done for the Greek Testament; I mean, in mending the text a little, by consulting the most ancient MSS. and versions.” Taylor pref. to Hebr. conc. Sect. iv. “ If the translation should sometimes appear to be merely conjectural, I desire the reader to consider the exigence of the case; and to judge, whether it is not better, in a very obscure and doubtful passage, to give something probable by way of supplement to the author’s sense apparently defective, than either to leave a blank in the translation, or to give a merely verbal rendering, which would be altogether unintelligible.”

Bishop Lowth prel. diss. to Isa. p. lxxiii.;
where see p. xxxix. xl.

And the same excellent critic, after making a conjectural emendation of Isa. lxiv. 5, adds: “ This, it may be said, is imposing your sense upon the prophet. It may be so: for perhaps these may not be the very words of the prophet; but, however, it is better than to impose upon him what makes no sense at all; as they generally do, who pretend to render such corrupt passages.”

“ It is manifest,” says * Professor J. D. Michael-* Bibl. Orient. et Exeget. Part. xxi. Communicated by Mr. Woide.

lis, “ that in some of the Minor Prophets the text has been sent down to us in very faulty copies : so very faulty, that the true reading of several passages is wanting in all the MSS. and ancient versions, and that conjectural criticism is necessary.”

Emendations founded on external authority will, of course, be preferred ; and, when there is a choice of them, that particular one which furnishes the best sense, and most resembles the present text. When outward helps fail, recourse can only be had to the exigence of the place.

In printing the best edition of a new version, I propose that the references to parallel places should be retained ; that supplemental words should be distinguished by Italics ; that different interpretations of obscure places should occasionally be given in the margin ; that the paragraphs should be accurately divided according to the sense, and should consist of larger ones, marked ¶, and of smaller, marked ¶ ; that the contents, briefly comprehending the critical sense of the writer, should be prefixed to each large paragraph ; that the chapters should be distinguished in the margin, and the verses, either in the margin, or by a small numerical figure over the line, as in the Louvre edition of the Greek Testament ; that there should be different marks for various readings adopted in the translation, denoting (1.) whether they are founded on the ancient versions and paraphrases ; (2.) on MSS. including the Samaritan ; or (3.) on both these authorities ; or (4.) only on conjecture ; and that a large explanatory index, of difficult terms, throughout their several classes should be subjoined, together with an accented table of proper names, and also a table of the sacred books, in their chronological order; according to which order, it is my opinion, that they should be read in churches.

I trust that these rules have obviated some objections to the proposed undertaking; as, according to them, a new version would be as simple, natural, and majestic, as beautiful, affecting and sublime, as that in present use; with the additional recommendation of being more pure, exact, and intelligible. It is true, that nothing of this kind can be undertaken without temporary offence to the prejudiced and ignorant. But the opinion of these will soon be outweighed by the judgment of the reasonable and well-informed. The real question amounts to this; whether we shall supply Christian readers and Christian congregations with new means of instruction and pleasure, by enabling them to understand their bible better; and let all who can promote a work of such moment consider this question with due seriousness and attention.

MINOR PROPHETS

In their supposed order of time, according to the dates of reigns in BLAIR'S TABLES.

	Before Christ.	Kings of Judah.	Kings of Israel
JONAH	Between 823 and 783.		Jeroboam II. 2 Kings xiv. 25.
AMOS	Between 823 and 758.	Uzziah. Ch. i. 1.	Jeroboam II. Ch. i. 1.
HOSEA	Between 809 and 698.	Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah. Ch. i. 1. But very early in Hezekiah's reign.	Jeroboam II. Ch. i. 1.
MICAH	Between 757 and 698.	Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah. Ch. i. 1. But early in Hezekiah's reign.
NAHUM	Probably between 720 and 698.	Probably towards the close of Hezekiah's reign.
JOEL	Probably between 697 and 660.	Probably in the reign of Manasseh.
ZEPHANIAH	Between 640 and 609.	In the reign of Josiah. Ch. i. 1.
HABAKKUK	Probably between 606 and 598.	Probably in the reign of Jehoiakim.
OBADIAH	Soon after 586.	Between the taking of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, and the destruction of the Edomites by him.
HAGGAI	About 520.	After the return from Babylon.
ZECHARIAH	From 520 to 518.
MALACHI	About 436.

THE BOOK

OF

J O N A H.

---

CHAPTER I.

- 1 Now the word of Jehovah came unto Jonah the son of 2 Amittai, saying; Arise, go to Nineveh, that great city, and cry against her: for their wickedness is come up before me.
- 3 But Jonah rose up to flee unto Tarshish from the presence of Jehovah: and he went down to Joppa, and
-

CHAP. I. 1.—Jonah.—He was of Gath-hepher, in the tribe of Zebulun, a part of Lower Galilee. Josh. xix. 13. He prophesied in the reign of Jeroboam the Second, king of Israel; who began to reign 823 years before Christ, and reigned in Samaria 41 years. See 2 Kings, xiv. 23—25.

2. — Nineveh.—The capital of the Assyrian empire. See the notes ch. iii. 3, iv. 11: and on Nahum; ch. i. 1. iii. 18.

— cry.—Proclaim as a prophet.

— against her.—Or, concerning her. Noldius, Sec. 10.

— for their wickedness.—Or, that their wickedness, &c. Nold. Sec. 20.

3. — to flee.—Jonah might consider this mission as an uncommon, unprofitable, and dangerous one. He certainly thought that his veracity as a prophet would be affected by God's merciful change of purpose, ch iv. 2. This and other parts of his conduct, deserve censure. But men endued with extraordinary gifts of the Spirit, and made the instruments of declaring God's will to mankind, have occasionally been subject to great human infirmities, and have even contracted great guilt. See 1 Kings xiii. 18, 20. Matt. vii. 22. Acts xv. 39. 1 Cor. xiii. 2. Gal. ii. 11.

found a ship going to Tarshish, and paid the fare thereof, and went down into it, to go with them unto Tarshish from the presence of Jehovah.

- 4 And Jehovah sent * forth a great wind upon the sea ; and there was a great tempest in the sea : and it was † 5 thought that the ship would be broken in pieces. Then the mariners were afraid, and cried every man unto his god. And they cast forth the things which were in the ship into the sea, to be lightened of them.

- But Jonah was gone down to the sides of the hold ; and 6 lay, and was in a sound sleep. And the ship-master came near unto him, and said unto him, What ‡ meanest thou, O sleeper ? arise, call unto thy God : perhaps God will think upon us, that we perish not.

- 7 And they said one § to another, Come and let us cast lots ; that we may know for whose cause this evil hath * Hebr. cast forth. † was thought to be broken. ‡ What to thee.

§ every man to his neighbour.

—Tarshish.—Bochart says, that there were two places of this name ; one, Tartessus in Spain, which Stephanus de Urbibus places near the pillars of Hercules ; the other, in the Indian ocean, near Ophir or Taprobana, which island is usually thought to be the modern Ceylon. To this latter men sailed from Eziongeber on the Red Sea. 2 Chron. xx. 36, 37. Geogr. l. iii. ch. vii. p. 171. ed. Lugd. Bat. fol. 1707. Cocceius and Taylor (see רשׁו in each), think that Tarshish may denote a distant country, whether to the east or to the west ; like our Indies. Some derive it from תרׁו to view, and שׁוׁ, to delight ; and thus it may signify a country abounding with desirable productions.

4. — thought.—Houbigant supposes, that the original word should be written at length, חשׁבוּבָה : putabatur fractum iri.

5. — the things.—A general term is used, comprehending wares, tackling, provisions.

— to be lightened.—So Houbigant : להקל : and V. וׁ render the word passively.

— of the hold.—The covered part of the ship.

6.— ship-master.—The Hebrew may be rendered, “ the chief man, even the pilot :” or, “ the chief of the crew :” which latter is the rendering of Syr. and Chald.

7.— cause.—Sake. Secker.

- 8 happened unto us. And they cast lots; and the lot fell upon Jonah. Then said they unto him, Tell us, we pray thee, for what cause this evil hath happened unto us. What is thy business? and whence comest thou? what
- 9 is thy country? and of what people art thou? And he said unto them, I am an Hebrew; and I fear Jehovah, the God of heaven, who made the sea and the dry land.
- 10 Then were the men || exceedingly afraid, and said unto him, Why hast thou done this? For the men knew that he * fled from the presence of Jehovah: for he had told
- 11 them. And they said unto him, What shall we do unto thee, that the sea may be † calm unto us? for the sea

|| Hebr. feared with great fear. * was flying. † may rest from upon us.

8.—for what cause.—כִּי is most naturally understood of things, Gen. xxxiii. 8. Judg. xiii. 17. 1 Sam. xviii. 18. Mic. i. 5. See Nold. sec. 5. note. See also Buxtorf's thes. gramm. p. 392.

The words τινος ἐνεκεν ἢ κακία αὐτῇ ἐστίν ἐν ἡμῖν, are wanting in δ. MS. Vat. and in Sixtus Quintus's edition of δ., where the note is, Τις σου ἡ ἐργασία. Sic quoque in uno alio libro: in cæteris antecedit, τιμος ἐνεκεν ἢ κακία αὐτῇ ἐν ἡμῖν. But δ. MS. Al. ed. Ald. and Arab. retain the clause. If we omit it, all is clear. כִּי refers to a person, v. 7; whom the lot determined to be Jonah: and it naturally follows; "Then said they unto him, Tell us, we pray thee, What is thy business?" &c.

The hint of omitting the clause was suggested by the late Dr. Kennicott.

—comest thou.—In the original the verb is future: which tense has often the force of the present.

9. — an Hebrew.—δ. Arab. render a "servant of Jehovah:" because they read עֶבֶר, contracted for יְהוָה. See Lud. Cappell. comm. p. 19. fol. Amst. and Dr. Kennicott's dissert. gen. Sec. 25, subjoined to his Hebrew Bible.

10. — fled.—ἦν φευγων. δ. and 13 MSS. and one printed edition, in Dr. Kennicott's Bible, read בֹּרַח.

11. — What shall we do?—Moerlius quotes the following passage from Orpheus's Argonautics.

“ Πολλα δὲ μερμηρίζον ἐνὶ φρεσὶ πενκαλιμγσι,
 Ἡ μὲν ἀποφθισωσι, καὶ ἰχθυοὺς κυρμα βαλῶσιν
 Αἰνολεχὴ Μηδεῖαν, ἀποστρεψῶσι δ' Ἐριννυν.

“ And much they doubted in their prudent minds,
 Whether to kill, and cast a prey to fishes,
 Wretched Medea, and avert their fate.”

ver. 1168.

- 12 ‡ grew more and more tempestuous. And he said unto them, Take me up, and cast me forth into the sea; and the sea § shall be calm unto you; for I know that be-
 13 cause of me this great tempest is upon you. Neverthe- less the men rowed || hard to bring back the ship unto the dry land: but they could not; for the sea * grew
 14 more and more tempestuous upon them. And they cried unto Jehovah, and said; We beseech thee, O Je- hovah, let us not perish, we pray thee, for the life of this man; and lay not upon us innocent blood, for thou, O
 15 Jehovah, hast done as it hath pleased thee. And they took up Jonah, and cast him forth into the sea: and the 16 sea † ceased from its raging. And the men feared Je- hovah ‡ greatly; and § offered a sacrifice unto Jehovah, and || made vows.
 17 Now Jehovah prepared a great fish to swallow up Jo- nah; and Jonah was in the * belly of the fish three days and three nights.

‡ went and was tempestuous. § shall rest from upon you. || Hebr. digged.

* went and was tempestuous. † stood. ‡ with great fear. § sacrificed.
 || vowed. * bowels.

— grew more and more tempestuous.—That this is the true rendering, see Taylor's Con. Root 450; n. 27, 32. The Syriac version makes the words part of the address to Jonah: "quoniam mare ecce it et turbat se contra nos: for the sea groweth more and more tempestuous." Many MSS. and some editions, ascertain the participial form by reading רסער.

12.—cast me forth.—Many MSS. and some ed. read ורסילוי; and v. 15, ורסילוי. The points have often excluded the formative letters; which ought to be restored in a correct edition of the text.

13.—rowed hard.—The word signifies literally to dig. Vulg. and Chald. agree with our English translators in understanding it metaphorically of rowing. But ó. Arab. Syr. render it, endeavoured, strove.

—to bring back.—Arab. adds the pronoun it, with our version.

14.—We beseech thee.—Here, and ch. iv. 2, many MSS. read אָמַן.

—innocent blood.—Punish us not as murderers of an innocent man; for we judge from the whole transaction that we are conforming ourselves to thy will.

15.—raging.—Nec horret iratum mare. Hor.

17.—a great fish.—We have but an imperfect acquaintance with the

CHAPTER II.

- 1 THEN Jonah prayed unto Jehovah his God from the *
2 belly of the fish, and said :

* Hebr. bowels.

natural history of fishes. However, it is a well attested fact, that sharks grow to a size capable of swallowing and containing a man. See Boch. Hieroz. p. ii. 743.

The miracle of preserving Jonah served to spread the knowledge of Jehovah. The whole transaction had this tendency : ch. i. 16 : and it also taught Jonah, and in him the whole prophetic order, God's power and determination to enforce his commands. It is probable that Jonah was the most ancient of those whom the Jews call the later prophets ; a constant succession of whom seems to have been sent from the time of Jonah, that they might solemnly admonish the kingdoms of Israel and Judah, while their destruction by the Assyrians and Babylonians impended over them.

— three days and three nights.—This would be true, if understood of one complete day, and a small part of two other days.

The precise time was thus determined to prefigure the period of our Lord's continuance in the grave. Matt. xii. 40. As Christ was the end of the law, Rom. x. 4. those who understand the genius of the eastern nations will easily admit that some actions and events under the Mosaic dispensation might be purposely modified to foreshadow parts of the Messiah's history.

CHAP. II. 1. This prayer hath much more the appearance of a thanksgiving after a deliverance ; and indeed could scarce be used before, whatever change be made in the tenses ; unless we suppose it prophetic of the deliverance. Had it not been inserted in the history, many things in it would have been understood metaphorically, as in the Psalms. It seems very strange, that Jonah's sin should never be mentioned, or hinted at, in it. Seeker.

Upon reading this period, I expected to find the prayer which Jonah had used, when he was in the fish's belly. But to my great disappointment, I found it to be his thanksgiving after the fish had cast him up. How was this to be accounted for ? Why, upon examination it appeared, that the period which is now the tenth was originally the second. I have restored it to its proper place, and with it propriety and sense. A transcriber ages ago omitted it : and when he found out the omission, he wrote it at the end of the thanksgiving, with a reference, no doubt, to the place where it had been omitted, and ought to be inserted. The next transcriber, not observing the reference, let it keep its place at the end of the thanks-

- I called by reason of my distress
 Unto Jehovah, and he hath heard me :
 Out of the belly of the grave I cried; and thou hast heard my voice.
- 3 Thou hast cast me into the deep, in the heart of the sea;†
 And the flood compasseth me about :
 All thy ‡ billows and thy waves have passed over me :
- 4 And I said, I am driven out from before thine eyes :
 Yet shall I again see thine § holy temple.

† Heb. seas.

‡ breakers.

§ the temple of thine holiness giving. And there it has continued from that day to this. Let the reader learn from hence, when he meets with incoherence or absurdity in scripture, not to impute it to the inspired writer, but to the careless transcriber. In my translation of the Psalms, several of these transpositions are noted. Green.

2. — and he hath heard me.—He thanks God that, in consequence of his prayer, his life is wonderfully preserved.

— Out of the belly of the grave—The prophet deemed the belly of the fish to be his grave. But God, in providing the fish, had other purposes to serve, than to find him a grave, or even to preserve his life. He had been ordered to go to Nineveh. Out of frowardness he embarked on a ship for Tarshish, that he might fly the furthest from it. God, to punish his disobedience and correct his frowardness, provided this fish to swallow him, and to carry him the speediest way to it. I collect this from Jonah's continuing three days and three nights, according to the Jewish manner of reckoning, in the fish's belly. Had the fish been provided only to save his life, he might soon have cast him on the next shore. But as he kept him three days in his belly, I conclude he did more than swim about with him. Within that time he probably conveyed him the nearest way from the Mediterranean to the Euxine sea, and vomited him upon the nearest shore to Nineveh. And there it was that he offered up this thanksgiving, and there the word of the Lord came to him a second time, saying, "Arise, go to Nineveh, that great city." c. iii. 1. Green.

3. — All thy billows, &c.—This line occurs Ps. xlii. 8.

4. And I said, &c.—At first I despaired of life; but now I know, by prophetic impulse, that I shall be preserved. Compare Ps. xxxi. 23.

"And I said in my haste,
 I am cut off from before thine eyes."

- 5 The waters have surrounded me to the peril of my life ;
 The deep compasseth me about :
 Sea-weeds are bound about mine head :
- 6 I have gone down to the || bottoms of the mountains :
 The bars of the * earth are about me for ever.
 But thou wilt bring up my life from destruction, O
 Jehovah my God.
- 7 When my soul fainted within me,
 I remembered Jehovah :
 And my prayer came unto thee,
 Unto thine holy temple.
- 8 They that serve false † vanities forsake the source of their mercy.
- 9 But I will sacrifice unto thee with the voice of thanksgiving :
 That which I have vowed will I pay, for my deliverance
 unto Jehovah.

|| cuttings off. * Heb. The earth, her bars. † vanities of falsehood.

5. — to the peril of my life.—See Ps. lxi. 2. He again represents his desponding language, to the second line of v. 6.

6. — bottoms.—Roots, foundations.

— The bars of the earth.—The strong and firm lower parts of the earth are about me, to the destruction of my life.

— But thou, &c.—He returns to the language of security and thanksgiving; as at the close of v. 4. If we translate “hast brought up,” the prophet may speak of that as already and completely done, which God had done in part, and was about to accomplish. But, as the vau is not always conversive, see Joel ii. 18, 19, 20, we may render, “wilt bring up.” V. has sublevabis.

— destruction.—The pit. Secker.

8. — false vanities.—Idols. See Deut. xxxii. 21. Ps. xxxi. 7.

— the source of their mercy.—So Ps. cxliv. 2, the Psalmist calls God his mercy, or the author of mercy to him. See also Ps. lix. 11, 18. Syr. reads “thy mercy.” One reading of Symmachus in Montfaucon’s Hexapla is, “his mercy.”

9. — for my deliverance.—The preposition is often omitted in the Hebrew: as before כִּי־יִצְלָה v. 3. See Hos. vii. 11. Houbigant proposes to read יִשְׁעִי, as δ. MS. Al. have εἰς σωτηρίον μου: with which MS. the Aldine edition of δ. agrees.

May not this mean, “even a sacrifice of deliverance unto the Lord?” Secker.

- 10 And Jehovah commanded the fish; and it ‡ cast out
Jonah upon the dry land.

---

CHAPTER III.

- 1 AND the word of Jehovah came unto Jonah the second 2 time, saying; Arise, go to Nineveh, that great city; and cry unto her § in the words which I shall speak unto 3 thee. And Jonah arose, and went to Nineveh, according to the word of Jehovah.

‡ Heb. vomited.

§ the cry.

---

I would retain the old translation, "Salvation is of Jehovah." See Ps. iii. 8 xlviii. 8. lxii. 11, 12. Dan. ix. 7, 8, 9. Doctor Forsayeth.

יִשְׁעָה is used Ps. iii. 2.

The reader may see this ode distributed into measure by Dr. Kennicott in his Hebrew Bible; and by Mr. Green in his "Poetical Parts of the Old Testament." Cambridge, 1781.

10. — the dry land.—Probably on the coast of Palestine.

2. — unto her.—Three MSS. have עליה "against her:" two read thus originally; and two have the  $\kappa$  on a rasure. The reading of these MSS. is agreeable to ch. i. 2, and V. 6. Ar. Syr.

3. — very great.—For the Hebrew phrase, see Gen. xxiii. 6. xxx. 8. Ps. xxxvi. 6. lxxx. 10. Hos. xiii. 15. Isai. xxviii. 2. xl. 7. Amos iv. 11. Cant. viii. 6. Acts vii. 20. Strabo says that Nineveh was much greater than Babylon. L. xvi. p. 737. marg. Amst. fol. 1707. Diodorus Siculus represents the city as an oblong figure; the two longer sides of which measured 150 stadia, and the two shorter 90. "Ninus," says this historian, "hastened to build a city of such magnitude, that it should not only be the greatest which then existed in the whole world, but that none in succeeding ages, who undertook such a work, should easily surpass it. Wherefore, as the whole circuit was 480 stadia, his expectation has not been deceived. For no one has since built so great a city; both as to the extent of its circuit and the magnificence of the wall." Ed. Wess. l. ii. §. 3. p. 65. marg. Ammianus Marc. says, that the ancient Ninus was civitas ampla, l. xiv. c. viii. And Eustathius has this note on Dionysius's περιηγησις, l. 990, p. 125, ed. H. Steph. "They say that Ninus, situated on the Tigris, which was much greater than Babylon, was wholly destroyed when the

Now Nineveh was || a very great city, a journey of 4 three days. And Jonah began to go through the city, one day's journey; and he cried and said, Yet forty days,
 and Nineveh shall be overthrown.

5 And the men of Nineveh believed God, and proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest of them 6 even to the least of them. For the matter came unto the king of Nineveh; and he arose from his throne, and put away his robe from him, and covered himself with sack-7 cloth, and sat on ashes. And it was proclaimed and * published in Nineveh, by the decree of the king and of

|| a city great unto God.

* Heb. said.

Persian empire was subverted." He adds a report that fourteen myriads were employed for eight years in building this city.

— a journey of three days.—Herodotus reckons 150 stadia a day's journey. L. v. c. 53. p. 398, ed. Wess. He likewise says, that a parasang is 30 stadia. Ib. But a σταθμος, mansio, or day's march, is five parasangs. See Xen. Cyri Exp. l. iv. p. 297, 8. 4to. ed. Hutchinson: and Boch. Geogr. l. iv. c. xx. p. 252.

— forty days.—ó. and Ar. read three. Houbigant thinks that a Greek scribe mistook some abbreviation of τρεσσακοντα. Syr. Chald. Aq. Symm. Theo. read with the Hebrew. And Bochart observes, from Jerom, that forty days is a solemn period of time in scripture, see Ex. xxiv. 18. 1 Kings xix. 8, and that Jonah's denunciation employed three days. Hieroz. p. ii. 746.

5. — believed.—Nineveh might have been threatened at that time by enemies or insurgents; and the fame of the God of Israel, and his prophets, might have reached that city.

6. — the king of Nineveh.—About thirteen years after the death of Jeroboam II., king of Israel, Pul, king of Assyria, invaded Israel. So that Pul, or his predecessor, may have been the king here mentioned.

— ashes.—See, as to this eastern custom, Job ii. 8. Isa. lviii. 5. Jer. vi. 26. Esth. iv. 3. Matt. xi. 21.

7. And it was proclaimed and published.—Και ἐκηρυχθη καὶ ἐρρέθη. ó. Literally: And one cried and said, &c. The nominative אֶחָד, quidam, τις, is often to be supplied. See Numb. xix. 3, 5. 1 Sam. xxiii. 22. 1 Kings xxii. 38. Amos iv. 2. Mic. ii. 4. v. 1. &c. See Nold. voc. אֶחָד §. 7. Bochart, Hieroz. 688, says, Lingua Hebraica ante verbum activum sæpe omittit nomen agentis.

- his † chief men, saying ; Let neither man nor ‡ beast, herd nor flock, taste any thing : let them not feed, nor 8 drink water : but let man and § beast be covered with sackcloth ; and let men cry mightily unto God, and let them turn every one from his evil way, and from the 9 violence which is in their hands. Who knoweth if God will turn and repent, and will turn away from || his hot anger ; that we perish not ?
- 10 And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way ; and God repented of the evil which he had said that he would do unto them, and he did it not.

CHAPTER IV.

- 1 BUT it displeased Jonah * exceedingly ; and his anger
2 was † kindled. And he prayed unto Jehovah, and said ;
I beseech thee, O Jehovah, was not this my saying when † great.      ‡ cattle.      § Heb. cattle.      || the heat of his anger.

* with great displeasure.      † kindled unto him.

— beast.—From the Arab. root obmutuit.

Non ulli pastos illis egere diebus
Frigida, Daphni, boves ad flumina : nulla neque amnem
Libavit quadrupes, nec graminis attigit herbam.

Virg. Ecl. v. 24.

— taste any thing —The eastern mode of fasting was abstinence from food till the evening. 2 Sam. i. 12.

8. — beast be covered.—They thus impressed their minds more deeply, and showed how greatly they humbled themselves.

Bellator equus, positus insignibus, Æthon
It lacrymans. Æn. xi. 89.

Plutarch says, that when the Persian General Masistias was slain, the horses and mules of the Persians were shorn as well as themselves. Aristides, p. 308. 4to. ed. Bryan.

9. — if God will turn.—אם is also omitted, Joel ii. 14. See Nold §. 24.

10. — repented.—See on Joel ii. 13.

2. — when I was yet.—ער, that is, בער.

- I was yet in mine own country? Therefore I ‡ made haste to flee unto Tarshish: for I knew that thou art a gracious and merciful God, slow to anger, and abundant 3 in mercy, and that thou repentest of evil. And now, O Jehovah, take, I pray thee, my life from me: because it
 4 is § better for me to die than to live. And Jehovah said, Doest thou well that thine anger is || kindled?
 5 Now Jonah had gone out of the city, and had sat on the east side of the city, and had made himself a shelter there, and had sat under it in the shade, till he should 6 see what would become of the city. And Jehovah, even God, prepared a plant; and it grew over Jonah, to be a shade over his head, to deliver him from his displeasure.

‡ I was beforehand in fleeing. § Heb. my death is better than my life.

|| kindled unto thee.

—I made haste to flee.—Præoccupavi ut fugerem, V. προεφθασα τὰ φυγεῖν, ὁ.

—for I knew, &c.—Hence we learn how many recent instances of long suffering God had shown.

4. —Doest thou well, &c.—Literally, Num benefaciendo accensa est tibi ira? Jonah seems to have thought that his veracity as a prophet, and the honour of his office, were affected. His impatience here, and v. 8, was highly criminal; and illustrates the general disposition of the Hebrews.

5. —had gone.—That verbs in the preter form have this force, see Gen. xx. 4. 1 Sam. xxx. 1. among very many instances. While Jonah was in this situation, and perhaps expected an overthrow of the city by earthquake or fire in the course of forty days, God's gracious purpose towards Nineveh was revealed to him.

—a shelter.—The word signifies an artificial covert, as a tent or booth: and also a natural one; as Jer. xxv. 38. Job. xxxviii. 40. See Harmer. i. 159.

6. —a plant.—Bochart, Hieroz. ii. 623, and also Hiller and Celsius, say that the ricinus, or palma Christi, is here meant. Pliny calls this plant cici; and its height, which is that of the olive, the largeness of its leaves, which are like those of the vine, and the quickness of its growth, are said to favour this supposition. See Plin. Nat. Hist. l. xv. c. vii. We may justly attribute a miraculous growth to that which shaded Jonah.

—and it grew.—So the versions, and Chald.

—to deliver him.—Houbigant rightly reads להציל; the construction, as it now stands, not occurring elsewhere.

—from his displeasure.—Which he had conceived, v. 1: to abate the

- And Jonah rejoiced * exceedingly because of the plant.
 7 But God prepared a worm when the morning † dawned on the morrow; and it smote the plant, and it withered.
 8 And it came to pass, when the sun arose, that God prepared a still east wind: and the sun ‡ beat upon the head of Jonah, and he was faint; and he asked within § himself to die, and said, It is || better for me to die than 9 to live. And God said unto Jonah, Doest thou well that thine anger is * kindled for the plant? And he said,
 I do well that mine anger is † kindled even unto death.
 10 And Jehovah said, Thou wouldest have spared the plant, for which thou hast not laboured, neither hast thou made it grow; which came up ‡ in a night, and perished § in 11 a night: and shall not I spare Nineveh, that great city, wherein are more than six score thousand persons, who

* with great joy. † Heb. rose. ‡ smote. § his soul. || my death is better than my life. * kindled unto thee. † kindled unto me.
 ‡ was the son of a night. § the son of a night.

heat; and thus to ease his mind, by easing his body. Or to deliver him from his affliction, or distress, on account of the heat.

8. —a still east wind.—Καυσω, ὅ.; a very scorching and suffocating wind in those countries; as deserts of burning sand lay to the east, or south-east. Peritsol, itin. mundi, p. 180, in Sharpe's ed. of Hyde's works, derives the word from דרש to plough; because "ventus ita exarat continentem illum, ut arena ascendat in aërem."

—within himself.—Within, or for, his soul; that is, by a known Hebraism, אצרי, within, or for, himself, Lev. xi. 43, 44. Isa. xlvi. 2. Matth. xxvi. 38.

10. —wouldest have spared.—For this force of verbs in the preter form, see, among many other instances, Numb. xxii. 33. Judges, viii. 19. Ex. ix. 15. which last place should be thus rendered: "For now I would have stretched forth mine hand, and would have smitten thee and thy people with the pestilence; and thou shouldest have been cut off from the earth: but, indeed, for this cause have I continued thee [and have not destroyed thee by the pestilence], to show thee, &c." See the close of v. 29.

Jonah seems to have been grieved that so extraordinary and beautiful a plant perished; as well as for the loss of its shelter.

—in a night.—Some MSS. and editions read שבר and ירב.

11. —six score thousand.—Reckoning those of a tender age at a fifth cannot discern between their right hand and their left hand; and also much cattle?

---

part, the city contained six hundred thousand inhabitants. See Boch. Geogr. 252, 3.

—— and their left hand.—See on Joel ii. 17, for the use of the Hebrew prepositions.

—— much cattle.—In the large circuit of Nineveh, as in that of Babylon, space was probably left for cattle to feed. Quintus Curtius says of Babylon, “Ædificia non sunt admota muris, sed fere spatium unius jugeris absunt. Ac ne totam quidem urbem tectis occupaverunt; per xc stadia habitatur; nec omnia continua sunt: credo, quia tutius visum est pluribus locis spargi: cætera serunt coluntque; ut, si externa vis ingruat, obsessis alimenta ex ipsius urbis solo subministrentur.”

THE BOOK

OF

A M O S.

---

CHAPTER I.

1 THE words of Amos, who was among the shepherds of Tekoa, which * came unto him in a vision concerning * Heb. He saw.

---

1. — Amos.—Though this prophet was of Tekoa, a city in the tribe of Judah (see 2 Chron. xi. 5, 6. and Josh. xv. 20, 59, in the Greek), yet he dwelt in Israel (c. vii. 12), and prophesied chiefly against that kingdom. See ch. ii. 6, &c. He was a shepherd and herdsman, and a gatherer of sycamore fruit; ch. i. 1. vii. 14. But rural employments were general, and honourable, among his countrymen. However, in the words,

“ I was no prophet,

Neither was I the son of a prophet,” ch. vii. 14, he seems to distinguish himself from those who were educated in the schools founded by Samuel. He borrows many images from the scenes in which he had been engaged; but he introduces them with skill, and gives them force and dignity by the eloquence and grandeur of his manner. We shall find in him many affecting and pathetic, many elegant and sublime passages. No prophet has more magnificently described the Deity; or more gravely rebuked the luxurious; or reproved injustice and oppression with greater warmth and a more generous indignation. An eminent judge and master of style pronounces him nearly equal to the very first prophets in elevation of sentiments and loftiness of spirit; and scarcely inferior to any in splendour of diction and beauty of composition. De sacra poesi Hebr. præl. xxi.

— shepherds.—Kimchi says, that shepherds were called נקרים, because some sheep were spotted; Gen. xxx. 32. Drusius, because a mark was stamped on them. Bochart derives the word from a corresponding Arabic one, which signifies an inferior kind of sheep or goats, and the shepherd of such; and hence a shepherd in general. Hieroz. i. 442.

Israel, in the days of Uzziah king of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam the son of Joash king of Israel, two 2 years before the earthquake. And he said :

Jehovah will roar from Sion,
And from Jerusalem he will utter his voice :
And the habitations of the shepherds shall mourn,
And the top of Carmel shall wither.

3 Thus saith Jehovah :
For three transgressions of Damascus,
And for four, I will not turn away the punishment
thereof ;

— Israel.—Ἰσραὴλ, ὁ. Scribitur abbreviate IAHM, et Ἰσραὴλ IAH. Secker.

— Uzziah.—He reigned over Judah from the year before Christ 809, to the year 758.

— Jeroboam.—See on Jonah i. 1.

— earthquake.—This earthquake is referred to, Zech. xiv. 5 ; and probably, as Bishop Lowth thinks, Isa. v. 25. Josephus describes some of its effects ; and attributes it to Uzziah's invasion of the priest's office, recorded 2 Chron. xxvi. 16. Ant. IX. x. 4.

2. — Jehovah—voice.—These two lines occur Joel iii. 16. See also Jer. xxv. 30. The meaning is, that God will soon spread terror, like beasts of prey when they roar, Amos iii. 8 ; in other words, that he will soon display his power in executing judgment. The particular judgment here threatened is a drought. See ch. iv. 6. vi. 12.

— from Sion—His dwelling-place ; where he exhibits his glory between the Cherubim. See Jer. xxv. 30.

— Carmel.—A very fruitful mountain in the tribe of Judah. Josh. xv. 55. Isa. xxxv. 2.

3. — I will not turn away, &c.—For the multiplied transgressions of Damascus, the capital of Syria, I will not rescue it, sc. עם the people, from punishment. See Ps. xxxv. 17. The Seventy here translate the suffix by αυτον, v. 6. by αυτες, and v. 9. by αυτην, referring it to the people, the inhabitants, the city. Or, I will not convert the people. Lament. v. 21. Jer. xxxi. 18. Or, I will not pardon it, sc. פשע the transgression. Or, I will not turn it back, or revoke it, sc. חקי my purpose, or דברי my word. See Numb. xxiii. 19, 20 ; where דברה may be understood. See על דברת, Nold.

“ For three transgressions of Damascus,

And for four, I will not restore it,” Lowth's Prel. v. 2. p. 52.

Because they threshed Gilead with threshing-wains of iron :

- 4 But I will send a fire on the house of Hazael,
 † Which shall devour the palaces of Benhadad.
 5 I will also break the bar of Damascus ;
 And I will cut off the inhabitant from the valley of On,
 And him that holdeth the sceptre from ‡ Beth-Eden ;
 And the people of § Syria shall go into captivity unto Kir, saith Jehovah.
 6 Thus saith Jehovah :
 For three transgressions of Gaza,
 And for four, I will not turn away the punishment
 thereof ;
 Because they led into captivity a full || number of captives,
 That they might deliver them up to Edom :

† Heb. And it.      ‡ or, the house of Eden.      § Aram.      || captivity.

Est Litotes: Certissime puniam, et exequar illud decretum meum. Confer Num. xxiii. 20. Dathius.

— threshed.—This alludes to the threshing-wain described Isa. xli. 15. It moved on serrated wheels, and at once forced out the grain and cut the straw. See Pocock on Micah iv. 13, and Bishop Lowth on Isa. xxviii. 27. If we translate threshing instruments, we suggest a modern idea.

“ו. הדרת הגלעד: ut v. 13.” Secker.

— Gilead.—The fact is recorded 2 Kings x. 32, 33.

4. Benhadad.—He was the son and successor of Hazael, king of Syria, 2 Kings xiii. 3, 24.

5. — the bar.—Perhaps the true reading is בריית the bars. So ו. Syr. and the similar passages, Jer. li. 30. Lam. ii. 9. Nahum iii. 13.

— the valley of On.—This, says Bochart, Geogr. Sac. II. vi. 79, and Beth-Eden, the house of Eden, sedes voluptatis, are other names for the valley of Damascus. On, as we read in ו., may be derived from the Hebr. און robur, opes, or from On, the Egyptian title of the sun. See the learned Mr. Bryant's Mythology i. 16. ed. 1.

— Kir.—Probably a city of Elymais, Isa. xxii. 6. The completion of this prophecy is recorded, 2 Kings xvi. 9.

6. — captives.—This might happen at the time of such incursions as are mentioned, 2 Chron. xxi. 16.

- 7 But I will send a fire on the wall of Gaza,
 * Which shall devour the palaces thereof.
- 8 And I will cut off the inhabitant from Ashdod;
 And him that holdeth the sceptre from Ashkelon;
 And I will turn mine hand against Ekron;
 And the residue of the Philistines shall perish,
 Saith the Lord Jehovah.
- 9 Thus saith Jehovah:
 For three transgressions of Tyrus,
 And for four, I will not turn away the punishment
 thereof;
 Because they delivered up a full † number of captives to Edom,
 And remembered not the league of brethren:
- 10 But I will send a fire on the wall of Tyrus,
 ‡ Which shall devour the palaces thereof.
- 11 Thus saith Jehovah:
 For three transgressions of Edom,

* And it.

† Heb. captivity.

‡ And it.

7. — wall.—Perhaps the true reading here, and v. 10—14, is יִמְנִית walls. See ó. Ar. Syr. Chald.

— Gaza.—Hezekiah smote it, 2 Kings xviii. 8. Pharaoh, king of Egypt, smote it, Jer. xlvii. 1. Alexander the Great' took it, Quint. Curt. IV. vi.

8. — Ashdod.—Uzziah conquered it, 2 Chron. xxvi. 6.

— Ashkelon.—See Jer. xlvii. 5.

— Ekron.—See Zeph. ii. 4. All Syria was subdued by Pharaoh Necho; and again, as far as Pelusium, by Nebuchodonosor, Jos. Ant. X. vi. 1. Berosus also mentions that Nebuchodonosor conquered Syria and all Phœnicia, Jos. contr. App. i. §. 19, 20.

9. — league.—1 Kings v. 12.

10. — a fire.—Nebuchadnezzar took the city of Tyre after a siege of thirteen years, Ezek. xxvi. 7—14. Jos. contr. App. i. 20, 21. Otherwise, he could not have been represented as the conqueror of all Phœnicia. It was also taken by Alexander, Q. Curt. IV. iv. 13; where the words are, "Alexander, exceptis qui ad templum confugerant, omnes interfici, ignemque tectis injici, jubet."

And for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof ;

Because he pursued his brother with the sword,

And § cast off his pity :

And his anger tare for ever,

And he || kept his wrath perpetually :

12 But I will send a fire upon Teman,

* Which shall devour the palaces of Bozrah.

13 Thus saith Jehovah :

§ Heb. destroyed, or corrupted, his compassions. || his wrath, he kept it. *And it.

11. — his brother.—The two nations were descended from Jacob and Esau, who were brethren. It is probable that, before Amos wrote, the Edomites had often distressed Judah and Israel in times of calamity. That this was their custom, see 2 Chron. xxviii. 17. But the words may be spoken prophetically, of the conduct which the Edomites would pursue at the taking of Jerusalem by the Babylonians, Obad. 11—14. Ezek. xxv. 12. xxxv. 5. Ps. cxxxvii. 7.

— cast off.—See שָׁחַת Ezek. xxviii. 17. The Seventy and Ar. add בָּאָרֶץ, in the land, to this clause, “And destroyed his damsels in the land.” See Ch. Vulg. ó. and Judges v. 30.

— tare.—נָסַח et asseravit. Syr. Recte, ut suadent sequentia. Conf. Ps. ciii. 9. At ó. Symm. Th. Ch. Vulg. ut Hebr. Secker.

— for ever.—See Gen. xxvii. 41. Numb. xx. 20.

12. — a fire.—Nebuchadnezzar subdued the Edomites, Jer. xxv. 9, 21. xxvii. 3, 6. Judas Maccabeus obtained a great victory over the remains of them, 1 Macc. v. 3; probably after they had left the Nabatheans in consequence of a sedition, and had settled to the south of Judah. See Strabo xvi. p. 760. marg. ed. Amst. fol. 1707. For I suppose that the Babylonian conquests had compelled them to take refuge in that part of Arabia. Afterwards, Hyrcanus reduced them under subjection; and permitted them to remain in their country on condition that they conformed to the Jewish laws, Jos. Ant. XIII. ix. 1. See on Obad. 2.

— Teman.—A city of Idumea, Jer. xlix. 7, 20. Ezek. xxv. 13. Teman was the grandson of Esau, Gen. xxxvi. 10, 11.

— Bozrah.—A city of Idumca, Isa. xxxiv. 6 lxiii. 1. Jer. xlix. 22. Bochart thinks that there was another Bozrah in the land of Moab, Jer. xlviii. 24. Hieroz. II. xlviii p. 534, and Moab was famous for its flocks, 2 Kings iii. 4. Mic. ii. 12.

For three transgressions of the sons of Ammon,
And for four, I will not turn away the punishment
thereof;

Because they ripped up the women with child of Gilead,
That they might enlarge their border:

14 But I will kindle a fire on the wall of Rabbah;

† Which shall devour the palaces thereof,

With shouting in the day of battle,

With a whirlwind in the day of tempest.

15 And their king shall go into captivity,

He and his princes together, saith Jehovah.

CHAPTER II.

1 Thus saith Jehovah:

For three transgressions of Moab,

† Heb. And it.

13. — Ammon.—From whom the Ammonites were descended. See Gen. xix. 38. Their country lay to the east of Jordan, in the neighbourhood of Gilead. Rabbah was its capital, Deut. iii. 11. 2 Sam. xi. 1. Jer. xlix. 2.

— of Gilead.—The historians of these times, transmitted down to us, are so concise, that we often want authority for the particular facts referred to.

14. — a fire.—The Ammonites were conquered by Nebuchadnezzar, Jer xxvii. 3, 6.

— tempest.—This image is naturally and sublimely introduced. So “Æneas nubem belli, dum detonet, omnem Sustinet.” Æn. x. 809.

15. — their king.—Or, Malchom, their God. So Vulg. Syr. 6. MS. Pachom. and Boeh. Hieroz. II. xxxiv. 358. See Jer. xlviii. 7. xlix. 3. 1 Kings xi. 33.

— he.—“הוא ה' אלהים אמתים. 6. II. [i. e. παντες] אלהים הם אמתים, apud Montf. Cum. sacerdotibus ejus, Syr. Nec male, ut videtur ex Jer. xlix. 3.” Secker. The reading may have been, הוא ובהניו ושריו, or בהניו ושריו.

1. — Moab.—For the origin of this people, see Gen. xix. 37. Their country lay to the east of the Dead Sea.

And for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof;

Because he burned the bones of the king of Edom into lime:

2 But I will send a fire on Moab,

* Which shall devour the palaces of Kirioth:

And Moab shall die with tumult,

With shouting, with the sound of the trumpet.

3 And I will cut off the judge from the midst thereof;

And all the princes thereof will I slay with him, saith Jehovah.

4 Thus saith Jehovah:

For three transgressions of Judah,

And for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof;

Because they have rejected the law of Jehovah,

And have not kept his statutes:

And their † false gods have caused them to err,

After ‡ whom their fathers walked:

5 But I will send a fire upon Judah,

§ Which shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem.

6 Thus saith Jehovah:

For three transgressions of Israel.

* Heb. And it.

† lies.

‡ which.

§ And it.

—burned the bones.—Insulted his remains in a revengeful and savage manner.

2. —Kirioth.—A city of Moab, Jer. xlviii. 24—41. Moab was conquered by Nebuchadnezzar, Jer. xxvii. 3, 6.

3. —the judge.—Probably the title of the chief magistrate. Thus the Carthaginians had their Suffetes. Houbigant reads מקרבו and שריו.

4. —their false gods.—Vulg. idola sua. The next line naturally refers to the idolatries of Judah, with accounts of which their history abounds. Compare Isa. xlv. 20.

5. —a fire.—This refers to the burning of Jerusalem by Nebuzar-adan, 2 Kings xxv. 9.

6. —Israel.—Amos first prophesies against the Syrians, Philistines, Tyrians, Edomites, Ammonites, and Moabites, who dwelt in the neighbourhood of the twelve tribes, and had occasionally become their enemies and

And for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof;

Because they sell the righteous for silver,

And the needy in return for sandals :

7 They bruise the head of the poor in the dust of the earth,

And turn aside the way of the humble :

And a man and his father go in unto the same damsel,

To pollute || mine holy name :

8 And they stretch themselves on garments taken to pledge.
Near every altar ;

|| Heb. the name of mine holiness.

oppressors. Having thus not only taught his countrymen that the providence of God extended to other nations, but conciliated attention to himself by such interesting predictions ; he briefly mentions the idolatries and consequent destruction of Judah, and then passes on to his proper subject, which was to exhort and reprove the kingdom of Israel, and to denounce judgments against it. The reason why that kingdom was particularly addressed seems to have been, that Pul invaded it in the reign of Uzziah, 2 Kings xv. 19 ; and that, in less than half a century after the first Assyrian invasion, it was subverted by Shalmaneser, 2 Kings xvii. 6.

—sandals.—So ch. viii. 6. Even for so inconsiderable a price as that specified.

7. —bruise.—Houbigant says, that the true reading is from שרר terere ; that the  $\kappa$  has been introduced by eastern scribes from the Arabic form ; and that it is marked with a circle above it in MSS. as a suspicious letter. Vulg.  $\acute{o}$ . Syr. render according to the sense of שרר : and, Ps. lvi. 1, 2. lvii. 3,  $\acute{o}$ . translate שרר by καταπατεν, as if it had that sense in the Hebrew. See also Vulg.  $\acute{o}$ . ch. viii. 4. That some verbs are used with כ, see ch. iv. 11. ix. 13. Ezek xviii. 32, compared with v. 23.

—turn aside.—From right and justice. See ch. v. 12. Isai. x. 1. xxix. 21.

—the same damsel.—Houbigant observes, that  $\acute{o}$ . have προς την αυτην παιδισκαην.

—to pollute.—To treat me as if I was not a holy and fearful God, Ezek. xx. 39. Or, by giving occasion of reproach among the heathen, Ezek. xx. 9. For the change from the participle to the preter tense, see Isa. xxix. 21. Amos v. 7, 12. vi. 6.

8. —stretch themselves.—Bow themselves down ; in the force of the conjugation Hithpahel, which this Hebrew verb wants. See. Ps. cxxv. 5.

And drink the wine of men * punished by unjust fines,
In the house of their gods.

- 9 Yet destroyed I the Amorite from before them,
Whose height was as the height of the cedars,
And he was strong as the oaks:
Yet destroyed I his fruit from above, and his roots from beneath.
- 10 Also I brought you up from the land of Egypt,
And led you in the desert forty years;
That ye might possess the land of the Amorite.
- 11 And I raised up of your sons for prophets,
And of your young men for Nazarites.
Is it not even thus,
O ye sons of Israel, saith Jehovah?
- 12 But ye gave the Nazarites wine to drink:
And ye commanded the prophets,

* Or, unjustly *fin*ed.

According to the Greek, Latin, and English versions, et deflectentes se. The sense is, that they recline at an idolatrous banquet. See Spencer de leg. Hebr. iii. ch. vii.

— taken to pledge.—Retained contrary to the law. Ex. xxii. 26, 27.

— punished by unjust fines.—The law allowed of pecuniary amercements in some cases, Ex. xxi. 22. Deut. xxii. 19. But the prophet speaks of wine purchased with money arising from iniquitous mulets.

In this verse the future tense is twice affected by the distant vau.

9. The image is a grand and natural one :

“ Ἡριπε δ', ὡς ὅτε τις ἔρως ἡριπεν, ἡ ἀχέρως,
Ἡε πιτυς βλωθρη, τὴν τ' οὐρεσι τεκτονες ἀνδρες
Ἐξεταμον πελεκεσσι νεηκεσι, νηϊον εἶναι.” II. xiii. 389.

“ Ille, mordaci velut icta ferro
Pinus, aut impulsa cupressus euro, Procidit late.” Hor. Od. L. iv. vi.

So Virgil compares the destruction of Troy to the cutting down of an ancient ornus, or mountain ash; and the fall of Entellus to that of a pine. Æn. ii. 626, v. 447.

The prophet diversifies and continues the image with great beauty.

11. — Nazarites.—Persons separated to God by certain ceremonies: Numb. vi.; and particularly commanded to refrain from wine, Ib. v. 3.

Saying, Prophesy not.

- 13 Therefore, behold, I will press your place,
As a † loaded corn-wain presseth its sheaves.
- 14 And flight shall perish from the swift,
Neither shall the strong establish his force;
And the mighty shall not deliver himself,
- 15 Neither shall he that handleth the bow stand;
And the swift of foot shall not deliver himself;
Neither shall he that rideth the horse deliver himself:
- 16 And he that establisheth his heart among the mighty,
Shall flee away naked in that day, saith Jehovah.

† Hebr. full.

13. — press.—I give נָעַק and הָעַק an active sense; as the word of the same form has in Syr. and Chald. See Cast. lex. See also the Syriac and Chaldee versions of this passage. “Active sumitur in Hiphil, ut et צִק.” Secker.

They are said to weary God, Isa. i. 14. xliii. 24. Mal. ii. 17. But there is no authority for using the word here passively, “I am pressed.” And the next verse being joined to this by ו makes it more natural that this should begin to express their punishment. Secker.

— your place.—See the original word, Ex. x. 23. xvi. 29. Judges vii 21. 1 Sam. xiv. 9. 2 Sam. vii. 10. Hab. iii. 16. Zech. xii. 6.

By a full corn-drag I understand one fully laden, so as to make it weighty.

The pronoun לָהּ may be referred to עֲבִיר : sibi manipulos, i. e. suos manipulos: or we may suppose it redundant, as לִי, Cantic. ii. 11. Hos. viii. 9. Isa. xxxi. 8. לָךְ, ib. xl. 9: or we may suspect its genuineness; as there is no trace of it in the versions or Chald., and as it resembles the close of the foregoing word.

Our marginal rendering is, I will press your place, as a cart full of sheaves presseth. Quod plenum sibi est manipulis. And Houbigant renders, Ego igitur istum locum, ubi estis, ita calcabo, ut calcet manipulos plaustrum plenum

14. — swift.—Here the swift is opposed to the strong; and v. 16, to him that rideth on a swift beast. I suppose that the four last verses of this chapter refer to the inextricable calamities caused by the earthquake. See ch. i. 1.

— among the mighty.—Syr. “as the mighty” מְבַרִּים.

15. — himself.—One MS. supplies נִפְשׁוֹ.

CHAPTER III.

- 1 HEAR this word which Jehovah hath spoken * concerning you, O ye sons of Israel ; even * concerning all the family which I brought up from the land of Egypt ; saying :
- 2 You only have I known
From among all the families of the earth :
Therefore will I † visit upon you
All your iniquities.
- 3 Can two go together,
Unless they meet by appointment?
- 4 Will the lion roar in the forest,
When he hath no prey ?
Will the young lion utter his voice out of his den,
If he have not taken any thing ?
- 5 Can a bird fall into a snare upon the earth,

* Or, against.

† Or, punish.

CHAP. III. 1. — O ye sons.—The Seventy and Arab. read ביה, “O house of Israel ;” which is the reading of many MSS.

— family.—Used also for people or nation, Jer. viii. 3. Micah ii. 3.

2. — known.—Acknowledged by revealing myself to you, and protecting you.

3. Can two, &c.—As a journey, in which two engage, naturally supposes a settled meeting; so the denouncing of God’s designs by his prophets, shows that he has made himself known to them.

— meet.—Γνωρισωσιν ἑαυτοῦς, ὁ. מִדַּע. Secker.

4. — roar.—Naturalists assert that, when the lion sees his prey, he roars before he rushes on it ; and that at this roaring, many animals show great fear. See v. 8. He likewise roars over his prey. The sense seems to be, As the lion roareth on account of his prey, so, by my prophets, I cry aloud against you, because ye are the objects of my vengeance. See v. 8.

5. Can a bird, &c.—So I have prepared destruction against you ; and the enemy shall not depart from you, till he have destroyed you. See the latter part of v. 6.

— Can—will.—Shali—will? Perhaps, Will a snare rise, spring up?

- Where no gin is set for him?
 Will a snare spring from the ground,
 ‡ When it hath not taken any thing?
 6 Shall a trumpet be blown in a city,
 And the people not be afraid?
 Shall there be evil in a city,
 And Jehovah hath not § inflicted it?
 7 Surely the Lord Jehovah doeth nothing,
 But he revealeth his secret
 Unto his servants the prophets.
 8 The lion hath roared: who will not fear?
 The Lord Jehovah hath spoken:
 Who will not prophesy?
 9 Publish it upon the palaces in Ashdod,
 And upon the palaces in the land of Egypt:
 And say:

‡ Hebr. When taking it hath not taken.

§ done.

6. Shall a trumpet, &c.—As the people run together through fear, when the signal of an approaching enemy is made; so let my warning strike the Israelites with terror.

—evil.—Shall the evil of earthquakes, of unfruitful seasons, of hostile incursions, befall my people without my special appointment?

7. —doeth.—The Hebrew future has often the frequentative force: “is wont to do.”

8. The lion, &c.—The awful admonitions uttered by the prophets are as natural a consequence of God’s command, as fear is of the lion’s roaring.

“Fremitu leonis qualis audito tener
 Timidum juvenis applicat matri latus:
 At ille sævus, matre summota, leo
 Prædam minorem morsibus vastis premens
 Frangit, vehitque; talis e nostro sinu
 Te rapiet hostis.”

Sen. Troad. 794.

9. —upon the palaces.—i. c. the flat roofs of the palaces, the usual place of publishing events, Matth. x. 27. See Bishop Lowth on Isa. xxii. 1.

—in Ashdod.—ἐν Ἀσσυροις, בְּאַשּׁוּר. Reete, ut videtur: nam sæpe στυγεροὶ cum מַצִּירִים: et Azoto exidium prædictum fuit; ch. i. 8. Seeker.

—And say.—I suppose this to be extra metrum. See ch. viii. 5.

- Gather yourselves together upon the mountains of Samaria,
 And see great || tumults in the midst of her,
 And the oppressed within her.
- 10 For they know not to do right, saith Jehovah;
 They * treasure up † rapine and spoil in their palaces.
- 11 Therefore thus saith the Lord Jehovah:
 An enemy shall encompass the land,
 And shall bring down thy strength from thee;
 And thy palaces shall be spoiled.
- 12 Thus saith Jehovah:
 As the shepherd ‡ taketh out of the lion's mouth
 Two legs, or a portion of an ear;
 So shall the sons of Israel be § taken out,
 Who sit in Samaria on the side of a bed,
 And in Damascus on the side of a couch.

|| Or, violences.      * Hebr. treasuring up.      † Or, violence.
 ‡ Hebr. rescueth.      § rescued.

— Samaria.—The capital of the kingdom of Israel; situated on a hill, and surrounded by hills, Maundrell, p. 58. 1 Kings xvi. 24. Some of the versions read הר the mountain. See ch. iv. 1.

11. — shall encompass.—Houbigant reads הסביב: hostis circumsidens, vel. circumsidebit. Perhaps יסבב circundabit; which exactly corresponds to the verb in the next line. See Syr. “F. צרו סביב. sequitur ויבאו.” Mr. Woide. Five MSS. have וסבב.

12. — Who sit.—See ch. vi. 4. Who now sit luxuriously on beds and couches, Jer. xxxvi. 15. Esth. i. 6. Harmer, ii. 60, endeavours to show that the corner of a bed was the most honourable place; and by מטה he thinks that we may understand a divan, or a part of a room raised above the floor, and spread with a carpet in the winter, and in the summer with fine mats. A mattress laid on this floor might serve for a bed. See p. 67. He also thinks that רמשק may signify something made at Damascus. p. 67.

— Damascus.—This prophecy may have been delivered when Jero-boam the Second was in possession of Damascus, 2 Kings xiv. 28.

Because רמשק in the Arabic version of Isa. iii. 22. is rendered peplum. Houbigant leads us to translate,

“ Who dwell in Samaria,
 In the extremity of a bed, and in the covering of a couch.”

- 13 Hear [O ye priests,] and testify to the house of Jacob.
Saith the Lord Jehovah God of hosts ;
- 14 || That in the day when I visit the transgressions of Israel upon him,
I will also * visit the altars of Bethel ;
And the horns of the altar shall be cut off, and shall fall to the ground :
- 15 And I will smite the winter-house
Together with the summer-house ;
And the houses of ivory shall be destroyed,
And the great houses shall † have an end, saith Jehovah.

|| Or, surely.

* Hebr. visit upon.

† Or, fail.

According to this conjectural rendering, the sense may be: So a very inconsiderable part shall escape, who hide themselves in the most retired places of their habitations. “Professor Michaelis observes, that MS. 93 reads דַּמִּשׁ, which he renders in latibulo lecti, from the Arab. abdedit, occultavit.” Mr. Woide.

If we suppose the word דַּמִּשׁ properly to signify the covering of a couch, this name may have been given to it because probably it was generally made of a species of silk so called. דַּמִּשׁ in Arab. signifies the threads spun from a silk-worm’s thread ; and the Hebrew word may be formed from it by the substitution of a cognate letter. Dr. Forsayeth.

13. — O ye priests.—The Seventy and Arab. supply this, and there seems to be a peculiar propriety in addressing the priests on this occasion.

— hosts.—The word may comprehend the angelic host ; the sun, moon, and stars, which are the heavenly host ; and the hosts, or armies, of all nations ; but particularly those of the Jews, whom God led forth to battle when his people observed his law.

14. — Bethel.—See 1 Kings xii. 29, 32. Its destruction is also foretold ch. v. 5, and may be referred to Jer. xlviii. 13.

— horns.—See Ps. cxviii. 27. Ex. xxvii. 2.

15. — winter-house.—See Jer. xxxvi. 22.

— of ivory.—Inlaid with ivory in some parts of them.

“ Δωματα ηχηεντα,

Χρυσου τ', ηλεκτρον τε, και αργυρου, ηδ' ελεφαντος.” Odyss. iv. 72.

“ Non ebur, neque aureum Mea renidet in domo lacunar.”

Hor. Od. L. II. xviii. 1.

See Harmer, i. 181, and Bochart. Hieroz. L. II. xxiv. 252.

CHAPTER IV.

- 1 HEAR this word, O ye kine of Bashan,
That are on the mountain of Samaria:
That oppress the poor, that crush the needy;
That say to their masters, Bring, and let us drink.
- 2 The Lord Jehovah hath sworn by his holiness,
That, behold, the days shall come upon you,
When ye shall be taken away with * hooks,
And your posterity, with nets of fishers.
- 3 And ye shall go out at the openings, every one at that which is before it;

* Or, fishing instruments.

CHAP. IV. 1. Hear.—It should regularly be שמענה: and Houbigant suggests that this word may have been originally written שמען, according to Gen. iv. 23.

— O ye kine of Bashan.—Bashan was famous for its flocks and herds, Deut. xxxii. 14. Ezek. xxxix. 18. The proud and luxurious matrons of Israel may be here described. Or if the reader supposes that the men of Israel are addressed, שניע may be construed with פרות κατα το σσημαινομενον, or according to the sense; and אחריתכם may be the reading, v. 2.

— to their masters.—Houbigant reads לאדניהן; and V. Syr. Ar. לאדינכן.

“Masters, or Lords, are husbands.” Gen. xviii. 12. Secker.

2. — ye shall be taken away.—Literally: one shall take you away. See on Jon. iii. 7.

— hooks.—The original word in the masculine is used for thorns; but in the feminine it signifies shields. In Buxt. Lex. Rabb. צנא signifies canistrum, corbis; and is equivalent to טנא in Hebrew, the צ and ט being often changed. So that perhaps a fishing-instrument may be denoted, which, like some now in use, resembled a shield, or a basket, in its form. Our translators render hooks, from their analogy to thorns.

— nets of fishers.—The original word in the masculine is used for thorns, and in the feminine for pots; and the sense of hooks is assumed by the English translators, as before. Perhaps the prophet means vessels of fishing resembling pots, with nets annexed to them.

Those who think that the women of Israel are understood v. 1, may read in this v. עליכן and ארבו.

3. — at the openings.—The apertures of the fishing instrument in

And I will cast it forth, and will utterly destroy it, saith Jehovah.

- 4 Go to Bethel, and transgress ;
At Gilgal multiply † transgression :
And bring your sacrifices every morning ;
Your tithes, every three years.
- 5 And burn a thank-offering of leaven,
And proclaim, publish abroad, free-will offerings.

† Hebr. to transgress.

which ye were caught. Houbigant reads וּבְפִרְצִים, because Vulg. Syr. actually supply the preposition; which in Hebrew is very often understood.

— every one.—אִשָּׁה sc. דוֹנָה fish.

— utterly destroy.—Houbigant proposes הִרְמִים; “et projiciemini in sagenas.” Possibly וְהִשְׁלַכְתֶּם הָרְמִים, “et projiciam eam perdendo eam.” From Chald. Syr. we may collect הָרִי מִנִּי, or הָרִי מִנִּי, “to the mountains of Mini or Armenia.” In v. 2, 3, the image is changed from that of v. 1, in the irregular eastern manner; and I suppose it continued through these two verses, and not interrupted by a second transition.

4. — Gilgal.—See ch. v. 5. That this place, which lay between the river Jordan and Jericho, was the scene of idolatry, appears from the contemporary prophet Hosea; ch. iv. 15. ix. 15. xii. 11. It was so called, because at that place God גָּלַל rolled away the reproach of uncircumcision from the Israelites, Josh. v. 9.

— years.—So יָמִים sometimes signifies. See Ex. xiii. 10. Numb. ix. 22. 1 Sam. i. 3. xxvii. 7. 2 Sam. xiv. 26. See the law of offering tithes at the end of three years, Deut. xxvi. 12.

“לשלישת ימים” means by or on the third day without implying any repetition, Ex. xix. 15. Ezr. x. 8, 9. The tithes of the third year were to be given by the Jews to the Levites and the poor, to be eaten within their gates, Deut. xiv. 28. xxvi. 12; but those mentioned here were brought to the temple, and the third day bears some proportion to the preceding every morning; but three years do not.—Michaelis, whom see, understands days, and all the old versions translate so. Secker.

5. And burn.—V. ὁ. Syr. read וְקָטְרוּ.

— of leaven.—Though of leaven, in contempt of the law, Lev. ii. 11, makes a good sense; yet the Chaldee, by reading מִדֹּחַם, from violence, suggests a better sense.

— proclaim.—Inviting many to feast on these sacrifices. See Spencer de leg. Hebr. l. iii. ch. vii. The sense of these two verses is: With the

For thus ye love to do, O ye sons of Israel,
Saith the Lord Jehovah.

- 6 And moreover I have given you
Cleanness of teeth in all your cities,
And want of bread in all your places :
And yet ye have not returned unto me, saith Jehovah.
- 7 And moreover I have withholden from you the rain,
When there were yet three months to harvest :
And I have caused it to rain upon one city,
And upon another city have I caused it not to rain :
One portion hath been rained on ;
And another portion, whereupon I have caused it not to rain, hath withered :
- 8 And two or three cities have gone
Unto one city
To drink water, and have not been satisfied :
And yet ye have not returned unto me, saith Jehovah.
- 9 I have smitten you with blasting, and with mildew, very much :

punishment denounced, v. 2, 3, impending over you, and notwithstanding past tokens of my anger, v. 6, &c. ; continue to trust in your idols. A severe derision of their folly and impiety.

6. — And yet, &c.—A reprehension which occurs five times in this chapter.

7. — three months.—Some understand this of the rain which fell in April, three months before wheat-harvest : others think that there is a reference to the snow and rains which filled the reservoirs in the beginning of February. Harmer i. 40.

— whereupon I have caused it not to rain.—For תַּמְשִׁיר, V. 6. Ar. read אֲמִשִּׁיר. So does one MS. now ; and a second read so originally, and, perhaps, a third. This reading is, therefore, preferable to תַּמְשִׁיר.

8. — or three.—יְשֻׁלֵּשׁ, Houbigant. V. 6. But Syr. Chald. omit the vau. The rhyme in v. 7, 8, is prosaic : and yet the use of the future for the past, and the repetition at the close of v. 8, are in the poetical manner.

9. — very much.—Hebr. multiplicando. See Prov. xxv. 27. A good sense arises from thus changing the Masoretic division of the sentence, and adding הַרְבֵּית to the former clause. By pointing the word differently we may render, “ Your many gardens,” &c.

- Your gardens, and your vineyards, and your fig-trees,
 And your olive-trees, hath the locust eaten :
 And yet ye have not returned unto me, saith Jehovah.
- 10 I have sent among you the pestilence, after the manner of Egypt :
 I have slain your young men with the sword,
 And ‡ your horses have I led away into captivity ;
 And I have made the smell of your camps to come up into your nostrils :
 And yet ye have not returned unto me, saith Jehovah.
- 11 I have overthrown some of you, like the § great overthrow
 Of Sodom and of Gomorrah ;
 And ye have been as a firebrand plucked out of the burning :
 And yet ye have not returned unto me, saith Jehovah.
- 12 Therefore thus will I do unto thee, O Israel :

‡ Hebr. together with the captivity of your horses.      § overthrow of God.

— the locust.—The verb נִסַּח in Ar. and Æth. and in the Talmudical writers signifies “ abscindere ramos arborum.” See Boch. Hieroz. part. ii. p. 443, 484.

10. — after the manner of Egypt.—See Deut. vii. 15. xxviii. 60. The unwholesome effluvia, on the subsiding of the Nile, caused some peculiarly malignant diseases in this country. For the phrase, see Gen. xix. 31. Isa. x. 26. Ezek. xx. 30.

— into your nostrils.—We may read נִסַּח without the rau, as V. 6. Ar. Syr. Houbigant, and one MS. in which the rau is erased. But Chald. has the rau : “ even unto your nostrils.” The pestilential smell of the dead is meant.

11.— great overthrow.—See on Jon. iii. 3, and the parallel places, Isa. xiii. 19. Jer. l. 40. For the fact, see 2 Kings xiii. 3. xiv. 26.

— of Sodom.—אֵת is sometimes the sign of the genitive case. See Nold. See. 24.

— plucked.—Many MSS. read נִסַּח here, and Zech. iii. 2.

12. — thus.—I will overthrow thee with a great overthrow. Houbigant reads נִסַּח from Chald. and renders :

“ Nunc autem quid faciam tibi, Israel,
 Postquam tibi hæc feci ?
 Para te ad occursum Dei tui, Israel.”

- And because I will do thus unto thee,
 Prepare to meet thy God, O Israel.
- 13 For, behold, he that formeth the mountains, and createth the wind,
 And declareth unto man what is his thought;
 He that maketh the morning darkness,
 And treadeth upon the high places of the earth;
 Jehovah, God of hosts, is his name.

CHAPTER V.

- 1 HEAR ye this word which I * take up against you:
even a lamentation, O house of Israel.

* Or, utter.

— Thus will I do.—This is a common form of imprecation, implying more than he who used it would, or perhaps could, express. Seeker.

13. For, behold, &c.—Prepare to meet him armed with vengeance; for he is a great and powerful God.

— the mountains. בָּרֹאשׁ הָהָרִים, ó. הרעים. Seeker.

— darkness.—ó. Ar. Houbigant, and above twenty MSS. or impressions read יְעִיפָה:

“He that maketh the morning and the darkness;” *

which is a very elegant various lection, and likely to be adopted by many readers. But God’s power of changing day into night is mentioned ch. v. 8: and in both these places there may be an allusion to the black clouds and smoke attending earthquakes which happen during the day. “Des nuages noirs et epais—sont ordinairement les avant-coureurs de ces funestes catastrophes. On a vu sortir une flamme de terre dans ces tremblemens, mais plus souvent de la fumee.” Encyclop. 4to. Art. Tremblemens de terre. See also ch. viii. 9.

— and treadeth.—That is, hath all power and sovereignty; treading under foot the highest and strongest places. See Deut. xxxii. 13. xxxiii. 29. This description of the all-powerful and all-knowing God is very sublime. This line is repeated, Mic. i. 8.

CHAP. V. I. — Hear, &c.—According to Bishop Lowth, Hebr. præl. xxii. p. 292, this verse is a part of the קִינָה, or elegy. It may be divided thus:

“Hear this word
 Which I take up against you;
Even a lamentation, O house of Israel.”

- 2 The virgin of Israel is fallen; she shall not † rise again:
She is stretched out on her land; none shall raise her up.
- 3 For thus saith the Lord Jehovah:
The city which went out by a thousand, shall leave an hundred,
And that which went out by an hundred shall leave ten,
To the house of Israel.
- 4 Wherefore thus saith Jehovah to the house of Israel:
Seek ye me, and ye shall live:
- 5 But seek not Bethel,
And go not unto Gilgal,
And pass not over unto Beersheba.
For Gilgal shall surely go into captivity,
And Bethel shall ‡ come to nought.
- 6 Seek ye Jehovah, and ye shall live:
Lest he § rush like fire on the house of Joseph;

† Hebr. add to rise.    ‡ Hebr. shall be for vanity.    § Or, advance.

I suppose this lamentation continued to the end of ch. vi: though it may be confined to v. 2.

Or, For I take up a lamentation over you. Secker.

2. — Not rise again.—"No more rise." The contrary seems often said, as ch. ix. 15: even though Israel be taken as opposed to Judah. But וְעַד לֹא doth not signify, not for ever, Joel ii. 19. Secker.

3. — went out.—Or, sendeth forth, emittit. For Bochart attributes a transitive sense to the verb in this place; agreeably to Deut. xiv. 22 and Ps. cxliv. 14: "nec sit in eis abortus, nec quæ ejiciat fœtum." Hieroz. L. II. xxx. 295.

5. — Gilgal.—In גִּלְגָּל גִּלְגָּל there is an allusion to the word Gilgal.

— Beersheba.—It belonged to Judah, 1 Kings xix. 3: which circumstance gives a propriety to the phrase, "pass not over." That it was the scene of idolatry, see ch. viii. 14.

— to nought.—See Isa. xli. 29.

6. — rush.—Advance, come. See 1 Sam. x. 6. "Notat צֹלַח irruere, sed cum על vel אֵל: sed pertransire cum accusativo, 2 Sam. xix. 18: ut non opus sit rescribere בְּבֵית אֵשׁ יִשְׂרָאֵל, ut i. 4, 7, 10." Secker.

— like fire.—A strong and natural image. Thus Hector is said to be φλογι εικελος αλκην. Il. Σ. 154.

And it devour the house of Israel, and there be none to quench it:

7 Ye that turn judgment into wormwood, and righteousness into hemlock,

8 That have forsaken him who made the || Hyades and Arcturus;

And who turneth the shadow of death into morning,

And darkeneth the day into night;

Who calleth the waters of the sea,

|| Or, the seven stars.

And Horace describes Hannibal as passing through the cities of Italy, "ceu flamma per tædas."

— the house of Israel.—So ó. Ar. Houbigant: as the parallelism of the clauses requires. One MS. reads לִישְׂרָאֵל. Perhaps the word יִשְׂרָאֵל was written contractedly יֵאֵל. And the best way of accounting for the rendering of ó. ἀγγελων Θεου, Deut. xxxii. 8, is the supposition that the word יִשְׂרָאֵל, in an abbreviated form of writing it, resembled אֵל, God.

7. — into hemlock.—לִרְאֵשׁ. This conjecture is supported by the parallelism, and by ch. vi. 12. Observe too how the verses are divided in Syr.; which translation furnishes authority for removing הָיָה to the next verse. Doctor Durell.

8. — have forsaken.—See the original word, Jer. xiv. 9.

— the Hyades.—So Vulg. Job. ix. 9: where the reader may see at large Schulten's remarks on these astronomical terms. He thinks that Castel's derivation of כִּימָה from חִימָה calefacere is a judicious one: but prefers the Ar. קָאם, conscendit femellam; as thus the word will import, "Sidus calidum genitale." Hyde, on Ulugh Beigh's tables, thinks that the Pleiades are meant. There may be a reference to the spring, when the warmth of the sun promotes vegetation:

"Candidus auratis aperit cum cornibus annum

Taurus."

Virg. Georg. i. 217.

— Arcturus.—So Vulg. Job xxxviii. 31. As the Arab. root denotes seignities, torpor, this idea suits very well the cold and slow car of Boötes.

"Se

Frigida circumagunt pigri sarraca Boötæ."

Juv. v. 23.

— into night.—Several MSS. read לַלַּיְלָה. And V. ó. Syr. Chald. Houbigant. But I must repeat that in Hebrew the preposition is very often omitted.

— calleth the waters.—Either at the creation; or, to punish men by inundations, which often attend earthquakes.

- And poureth them over the face of the earth :
 Jehovah [the God of hosts] is his name :
- 9 Who scattereth desolation over the strong,
 And bringeth desolation over the fortress :
- 10 Ye that hate him who reproveth in the gate,
 And abhor him who speaketh uprightly.
- 11 Forasmuch therefore as your treading is on the poor,
 And ye receive from him a gift of wheat ;
Though ye have built houses of hewn stone,
 Yet ye shall not dwell in them ;
Though ye have planted pleasant * vineyards,
 Yet ye shall not drink the wine of them.
- 12 For I know your manifold transgressions,
 And your mighty sins ;
 Ye who afflict the righteous, who take a bribe,
 And turn aside the poor man in the gate.

* Hebr. vineyards of desire.

— Jehovah.—ó. MS. A. Pachom. ed. Ald. and Arab. add ó Θεός ó παντοκράτωρ, and read in the original אלהי צבאות. Thus the passage closes more grandly :

“ Jehovah, God of hosts, is his name.”

Two MSS. read יהוה צבאות. See ix. 6. “ MS. Copt. reads with ó. MS. A.” Mr. Woide.

9. — scattereth.—I read with ó. הנפילי.

— bringeth.—The versions read יביא : and many MSS. have יבא. These two verses are very sublime.

10. — the gate.—The usual place of administering justice, and of reproof and passing judgment on iniquity. Selden, i. 1312, has this quotation from Maimonides: In urbe qualibet Israelitica constituebant Synedrium minus, cujus sedes in porta urbis. See also Bishop Lowth on Isa. p. 156. “ מִכְבֵּשׁ בִּשְׁעָרִים, Isa. xxix. 21.” Secker.

11. — treading.—Read בְּרִישְׁכֶּם. Calcere vestrum.

— a gift.—See Esth. ii. 18. Jer. xl. 5.

— vineyards.—These are the curses of the law. Deut. xxviii. 30, &c. See Mic. vi. 15. Zeph. i. 13.

12. — turn aside.—Sc. from his right : unjustly overthrow him in the place of judicature, ch. ii. 7.

- 13 Therefore the wise man shall be silent at that time
For it shall be an evil time.
- 14 Seek ye good and not evil, that ye may live:
And so Jehovah, the God of hosts, shall be with you,
As ye have said.
- 15 Hate ye evil and love good,
And establish judgment in the gate.
It may be that Jehovah, the God of hosts, will be gracious
Unto the residue of Joseph.
- 16 Because, thus saith Jehovah, the God of hosts:
Wailing shall be in all the broad places;
And in all the streets they shall say, Alas! Alas!
And they shall call the husbandman to mourning;
And those who are skilful of lamentation, to wailing:
- 17 And in all vineyards shall be wailing:

13. The wise man shall be silent.—The wise and eloquent shall be struck dumb by the judgments of God.

14. — have said.—By your false prophets. Mic. iii. 11.

15. — God.—Eight MSS. omit אלהי, which favours the rhyme.

16. — Jehovah.—The word אדני in this verse is omitted by δ. Ar. Syr. and seven MSS. So ch. iii. 8, 13, this word is likewise omitted in one MS. It is often a gloss on יהוה, denoting how it ought to be read according to the Jewish superstition. Ch. vii. 7, 8 and ch. ix. 1, many MSS. read Jehovah for Adonai. The reader will often have occasion to make this remark.

— husbandman.—On account of the drought which shall prevail, ch. i. 2.

— skilful of lamentation.—See ch. viii. 3, and Jer. ix. 17. “Mercede quæ conductæ flect alieno in funere præficæ.” Lucilius. Which Hor. imitates, Art. poet 431. And Homer, speaking of Hector’s dead body, says,— “Παρα δ’ εἰσαν αοιδους,

 Ἑρηνων εξαρχους, οἵτε στονοεσσαν αοιδην
 Οἱ μὲν ἀρ’ ἐθρηνεον· ἐπὶ δὲ στεναχοντο γυναικες.”

Il. xxiv. 720.

— to wailing.—Read ראל נשפד with V. Syr. Houbigant, and Bishop Lowth, Hebr. præl. xxii. p. 293.

17. — vineyards.—The usual scenes of joy.

For I will pass through the midst of thee, saith Jehovah.

18 Woe unto them who desire the day of Jehovah.

What is this day of Jehovah unto you?

It is darkness, and not light.

19 As if a man fled from a lion,

And a bear met him :

Or went into the house, and leaned his hand on a wall,

And a serpent bit him.

20 Shall not the day of Jehovah be darkness, and not light ?

Even thick darkness, and no shining in it ?

21 I hate, I † despise your feasts ;

And I will not smell on your solemn days.

22 Although ye offer unto me burnt-offerings,

And your offerings of flour, I will not accept them :

And the peace-offerings of your fatlings I will not regard.

† Or, reject.

18. — desire.—Deriding the prophetical predictions. Jer. xvii. 15. Ezek. xii. 22.

19. As if, &c.—The calamities foretold are inevitable.

20. Shall not, &c.—A strong asseveration is beautifully conveyed in this question. The 18th, 19th, and 20th verses, are very sublime. Darkness is naturally put for calamity, and light for gladness. So Hor. Od. IV. iv. 40.

“ Pulcher fugatis

Ille dies Latio tenebris.”

“ We use light to denote knowledge : the sacred writings, with no less propriety and elegance, apply it also to prosperity, honour, wealth, or any kind of happiness.” Tayl. pref. to Cone. Sec. iv. See on Mic. vi. 14.

21. — feasts.—The word may also be rendered sacrifices. See Ex. xxiii. 18. Mal. ii. 3. Ps. cxviii. 27. Spencer de leg. Hebr. 703.

— solemn days.—Days when the people were restrained from the common business of life. Deut. xvi. 8. Taylor in voc. Bishop Lowth on Isa. i. 13. vid. Additions.

22. — accept them.—ó. MS. Al. read ου προσδεξομαι αυτα. As if the text had been אָרַצְתִּי.

— fatlings.—Some think that the buffalo is meant. See Boch. L. II. xxviii. 282.

- 23 Take thou away from me the sound of thy songs :
And the melody of thy viols I will not hear.
- 24 But let judgment roll down as waters,
And righteousness as a mighty stream.
- 25 Did ye offer unto Me sacrifices, and an offering of flour
In the desert during forty years, O ye house of Israel ?
- 26 Nay, but ye bare the tabernacle of your Moloch,

23. — songs—viols.—The usual accompaniments of sacrifices among the Jews and heathen.

“ Sacrifica dulces tibia effundat modos,
Et nivea magna victima ante aras cadat.”

Sen. Troad.

See Spencer de leg. Hebr. 1105.

There is great authority and majesty in this passage, v. 21–24; and the grandeur of the image with which it closes must strike every reader.

24. — let judgment.—Rather, judgment shall. See Isa. xxviii. 27. Secker.

25. Did ye offer unto Me?—Verborum emphasis in מִיִּי שִׁיָּא. Spencer, 744. Did ye offer such sacrifices as were acceptable to ME; such entire and undivided service as I enjoined?

Peters on Job, p. 312, thinks that they are not here reproached with a neglect, which Moses would not have suffered, and that probably they had no cattle to sacrifice; and that therefore Jeremiah, when he saith, vii. 22, 23, God commanded not sacrifice when they came out of Egypt, means that he did not immediately expect it: and that this question is here asked to show that sacrifice is not the chief thing he is pleased with; but that, notwithstanding their offering it, their injustice, v. 24, and their idolatry, v. 26, will provoke him to send them into captivity. Secker.

26. Nay, but, &c.—God is introduced as replying: No: ye sometimes carried about Moloch in his sacellum, ναῖσκος, shrine, or tabernacle. The true reading seems to be מִלְכָּם, See ch. i. 15. ὁ. and Ar. omit the pronoun: and Syr. has מִלְכָּם. See also Acts vii. 43. Perhaps MS. 575 reads מִלְכָּם. Moloch, or Malchom, was probably the name of any famous king worshipped by the heathens. But Spencer thinks that it was oftenest given to the sun. Selden and Grotius observe, that Saturn was thus called by the Phœnicians. See Spencer, 360.

— the tabernacle.—The Carthaginians carried in their camp ἱερὸν σκαηνήν, which was placed near the altar in their camp. Diod. Sic. l. 20.

And the star of your God Chiun ;
Your images which ye made unto yourselves.

ch. 65, with which Wesseling there compares this tabernacle ; as he might also have done Moses's. Secker.

— And the star.—I have ranged the words as in ó. and Acts vii. 43. Their collocation in the Hebrew is unnatural, and points out a mistake in the copies :

“ Nay, but ye bare the tabernacle of your Moloch,
And Chiun, your images, the star of your God,
Which ye made to yourselves.”

MS. 612 places the words thus : Chiun, your God, the star [of] your images.

Probably, the figure of a star fixed on the head of an image of a false God. Drusius on the place quotes the following passage from a Greek scholiast: Erat simulachrum Moabitarum cum gemma pellucida et eximia in summa fronte ad figuram Luciferi. I incline to think that the sin here reprov'd, was not the sin of the Israelites in the wilderness, but of those who lived in the time of the prophet. In the former verse, God appeals to them by the prophet, whether he did not bear with them forty years in the wilderness, notwithstanding their many provocations, although they did not during that time offer sacrifices or other offerings, excepting on particular occasions. In the verse following this, he denounces his judgments on them for their abominable idolatry, notwithstanding their burnt-offerings and their meat-offerings, their hymns and songs in his praise. Doctor Forsayeth.

According to this sense we should render,

“ Ye have even borne the tabernacle of your Moloch,” &c.

— Chiun.—That this was a name for Saturn, see Spencer de leg. Heb. p. 666 : who discusses the place before us at large. The God may have been represented as a star, with certain symbols of distinction. See Selden ii. 396. See also Camp. Vitrina obs. sacr. l. II. ch. 1, p. 233, 4to. The reading of Ψαφαν, in ó. and of Ψεμφεν, Ψαφαν, Ψαφαν, Ψεφφαν, Ψεφα, Acts vii. 43, where the MSS. vary, may be accounted for two ways: כין may have been read כין, there being a similarity in the two initial letters ; or Rephan, the Egyptian name for Saturn, may have been used by translators who lived in Egypt, as an equivalent term to Chiun. See the authors already referred to, and Hammond on Acts vii. 43.

Προσκυνειν in Acts seems supplied by way of interpretation : and one MS. for Βαβελωνος reads Δαμασκον, as Justin Martyr did, according to Beza.

- 27 Therefore will I cause you to go into captivity beyond
 Damascus,
 Saith Jehovah, the God of hosts is his name.

CHAPTER VI.

- 1 WOE unto them that dwell at ease in Sion,
 And that rest secure on the mountain of Samaria:
 That are named after the chief of the nations:

The Æth. version omits the last clause, Και μετοικιω υμας επεκεινα Βαβυλωνος, in v. 43.

27. — beyond Damascus.—To which city it seems probable that Hazeael carried many captives, 2 Kings x. 32, 33. But now the Israelites were to be led away captives into Assyria and Media, 2 Kings xv. 29. xvii. 6.

CHAP. VI. 1. — mountain.—Samaria was situated on a mountain, 1 Kings xvi. 24.

— named after.—The Hebrew word implies an allusion to the custom of marking a name, or character, by punctures. See Bishop Lowth on Isa. xlv. 5. They call themselves, not after their religious ancestors, but after the chief of the idolatrous nations, with whom they intermarry, contrary to their law. See Chald. But this and the next line are very obscure. “נקבי, ωνομασμενοι, Justinus: f. ex. Aq.” Secker.

Persons of name in, or the known ones, אשר נקבו בשמות, of the principal of the nations, and to whom the house of Israel come, i. e. for justice, and to pay court. See Ps. cxxii. 4, 5. Comp. Numb. i. 16. אנשי השם Gen. vi. 4. גיִּים is used of Amalek, Numb. xxiv. 20. ראשית principal of, v. 6. Secker.

I do not find that נקב ever signifies to give or take a name. The participle is six times rendered expressed by name: that is, particularly distinguished by being expressly called over by name. Numb. i. 17. 1 Chron. xii. 31. xvi. 41. 2 Chron. xxviii. 15. xxxi. 19. Ezra viii. 20. None but men of note seem to have been thus distinguished. This inclines me to believe that we should render “who are expressed by name,” i. e. the noted and distinguished persons even “of the chief of the nations.” Dr. Forsayeth.

- And to them the house of Israel resort.
- 2 Pass over unto Calneh, and see :
And go from thence to the great Hamath :
And go down to Gath of the Philistines.
Are they better than these kingdoms ?
Or is their border greater than your border ?
- 3 Woe unto them that remove far from them the evil day,
And hasten the seat of violence :
- 4 That lie upon beds of ivory,
And stretch themselves upon their couches :
That eat lambs from the flock,
And calves from the midst of the stall :

— house.—Syr. and one MS. read בני sons.

— resort.—Sc. for idolatrous and other illegal purposes. See the former part of Hosea vii. 8 and Ps. cvi. 35.

2. — Calneh.—A city in the region of Babylon, Gen. x. 10; and, as it seems, lately subdued by the Assyrians. “Sequor Bochartum, qui libro IV. c. 18, erudite et copiose disputavit Calneh Ctesiphontem esse, pagum antiquissimum et nobilissimum ad Tigrim, in ea Assyriæ parte quæ Chalonitis dicitur, nomine quoque regionis nomini Hebraico urbis coneimente.” I. D. Michaelis spicilegium geographiæ. Goettingæ, 1769. p. 230.

— Hamath.—A Syrian city on the Orontes. It was conquered by Jeroboam, 2 Kings xiv. 25: and by the Assyrians, xix. 13.

— Gath.—Uzziah, in whose reign Amos prophesied, took this city, 2 Chron. xxvi. 6.

— better—greater.—Why then do ye worship their gods? and why are ye not grateful to Jehovah?

3. — remove far.—In their own idea and expectation, notwithstanding the divine forewarning. See ch. ix. 10. Ezek. xii. 22, 27.

— hasten.—Anticipate the day of oppressive judgment, and bring it forward with delight in their own minds. See שבת, 1 Kings x. 19. 2 Chron. ix. 18. “Confer היית כסא, Ps. xiv. 20.” Secker. Or; that wish for the sabbath, to commit violence on men unprepared to resist it. See Syr. 6.

4. — stall.—Bochart, Hieroz. II. xxxi 301, shows that the original word denotes vineulum colli; and that the prophet means, “vitulum qui in vinculis grana triturat, et eorum esu pinguescit.”

- 5 That sing to the sound of the viol ;
That, like David, invent for themselves instruments of music :
- 6 That drink wine in bowls,
 And anoint themselves with the * first ointments :
 But are not pained at the † destruction of Joseph.
- 7 Therefore now shall they go into captivity with the first that go into captivity ;

* Or, choicest.

† Heb. breach.

5. — sing.—Bochart says that כָּרַת signifies “cantiones suas vocibus minutim concisis et sono vibrante et frequentato canere. Unde illud Horatii;—

“Grataque foeminis
 Imbelli cithara carmina divides,” Od. I. xv.

He derives the word bard from this root. Geogr. 666.

—viol.—Ἡ ναβλα, δωδεκα φθογγους εχουσα, τοις δακτυλοις κρουεται. Jos. Ant. VII. xii. 3.

—like David.—V. Syr. Boch. Hieroz. II. xlv. 464 ; and Bishop Lowth on Isa. p. 49, agree with our translators in joining this with the latter clause of the sentence. The construction in the Hebrew is uncertain. Syr. reads כְּדָוִד.

6. — bowls.—This has a reference to the magnificence of the repast. Harmer i. 379.

Διῶλισμενον οινον. “Drink bowls of wine” may be right : for שָׂתָה hath ב after it, Prov. ix. 5 : and the Hebrew is not favourable to the translation in the text. But if any Hebrew word answered to ὄ. I should prefer it. Secker.

—anoint themselves.—Horace has, perfusus liquidis odoribus. Od. I. v. 2. Archbishop Secker thinks that we should render, “And perfume themselves with the chief perfumes.” As our translation, though literal, gives a different idea from what it did formerly. Nine Sermons, p. 68.

—destruction.—Literally, breach. So imperiumque frangat. Hor. Od. I. xxxv.

7. — the first — ראש refers to ראשית in the foregoing verse : and there is a paronomasia in סר and סְרוּחִים.

—banquet.—Kimchi explains בֵּית מִזְבֵּחַ Jer. xvi. 4, by בֵּית אֲבֵל domus luctus: and the Talmud uses the word of banquets in honour of false Gods. Cocceii, lex.

If מִזְבֵּחַ is rightly translated banquet, it must, I believe, be a funeral banquet, as Jer. xvi. 5, 8 : and the sense must be the same with that of Jeremiah : that they who now indulged in all manner of luxury should not be burned with the usual funeral rites. Dr. Forsyth.

And the banquet of those that stretch themselves shall pass away.

8 The Lord Jehovah hath sworn by himself,

Saith Jehovah the God of Hosts :

I abhor the excellency of Jacob,

And I hate his palaces :

Therefore will I deliver up the city, with ‡ all that is therein.

9 And it shall come to pass, if there remain

Ten men in one house, that they shall die.

10 And a man's relation, and he that burneth him, shall take him up,

To carry the bones out of the house :

And shall say to him that is in the § innermost part of the house, Is there yet any with thee?

And he shall say, There is none. Then shall he say,
Be silent.

‡ Heb. its fulness.

§ Heb. sides.

8. —saith Jehovah, &c.—ó. Ar. and one MS. omit this line.

—I abhor.—Read נרעב.

—the excellency.—The power to which I have raised Jacob in his descendants. See ch. viii. 7.

Pride: ó. Vulg. Syr. Sanctuary: Chal. It means the temple, or Zion, Ps. xlvii. 4. The sanctuary is called נאון עזים, speaking to the Jews, Ezek.
xxiv. 21. God swears by נאון יעקב here, ch. viii. 7. נאון ישראל occurs, Hos. v. 5, and vii. 10, and is translated the pride of Israel. Babylon was נאון כשדים, Is. xiii. 19. Seeker.

—deliver up.—Or, shut up. Samaria was besieged three years by Shalmaneser, 2 Kings xvii. 5.

9. —die.—By famine, or pestilence, during the siege.

10. —he that burneth him.—Many MSS. read וישרפו. "Videtur legendum וישרפו et lugens eum. Sed alibi non extat שרף in Pihel. Kings had burnings made for them of spices, Jer. xxxiv. 5. 2 Chron. xvi. 14 : but whether any bodies were burnt I doubt." Seeker.

—Be silent.—The original word is irregular, and formed to express the idea.

Because they set not themselves to mention the name of Jehovah.

- 11 Surely, behold, Jehovah will command,
And will smite the great house with breaches,
And the small house with clefts.
- 12 Do horses run on a rock?
Doth a man plough it with oxen?
For ye have turned judgment into hemlock,
And the fruit of righteousness into wormwood:
- 13 Ye that rejoice in a thing of nought;
That say, Have we not taken to ourselves || dominion
by our own strength?

|| Heb. horns.

— to mention.—See in prayer, or with the reverence due to him, להזכיר. So Judges i. 19. For he [Joshua] did not set himself to drive out, &c. See 2 Chron. ii. 8. ed. Vanderh. 9. xi. 22. xii. 12. xix. 2. Ezra ix. 15. x. 12. Esth. vii. 8. Amos viii. 4. The phrase is entire, 2 Chron. xxvi. 5. ירדתי לירדש: Καὶ ἡν ἐκζητῶν, ὁ. And again Deut. xxxi. 17. See Nold. 5. Sec. 44. Obs. β. p. 414.

This obscure verse seems to describe the effects of famine and pestilence during the siege of Samaria. The carcass shall be burned, and the bones shall be removed with no ceremony of funeral rights, and not without the assistance of the nearest kinsmen. Solitude shall reign in the house: and if one is left, he must be silent [See ch. viii. 3], and retired, lest he be plundered of his scanty provisions.

11. — breaches—clefts.—Universal ruin shall be spread through the city by the enemy. Or the earthquake may be alluded to.

12. Do horses.—The sense may be, The earth shall be under you as a solid rock for barrenness, in consequence of the drought which I shall send as a punishment for your iniquities. The futures in the original have a frequentative sense. The force of the first line depends on the circumstance that horses were not anciently shod. See Bishop Lowth on Isaiah v. 28.

13. — a thing of nought.—Your idols, which are nothing. 1 Cor. viii. 4.

— dominion.—Horns naturally stand for power, as the great strength of some animals is placed in them: and they may anciently have been the hieroglyphical symbol of it. For it has been justly observed that hiero-

- 14 Surely, behold, I will raise up against you, O house of Israel,
 Saith Jehovah, the God of hosts,
 A nation; and they shall oppress you
 From the entering in of Hamath to the river of the desert.

---

CHAPTER VII.

- 1 THE Lord Jehovah thus shewed unto me: and, behold, he formed locusts in the beginning of the shooting up of the latter growth; and, behold, it was the latter
 2 growth after the King's mowings. And it came to pass, glyphics may have been a source of metaphors in the ancient eastern languages.

---

14. — Hamath.—There was a city of this name in the northern part of the tribe of Nephtalim.

— river of the desert.—Elsewhere called the river of Egypt, because it was in the way to that country, Num. xxxiv. 5: i. e. Besor, which emptied itself into the sea not far from Gaza, and was the southern limit of the tribe of Simeon.

The Assyrians are the invaders prophesied of.

CHAP. VII. . 1. — locusts.—Bochart derives גרב from the Arab. غراب e terra emergere; quod locustarum proprium, Hieroz. part ii. iv. 1. 443. Castell on the word גרב furnishes another root; the Arab. غراب secut. גרבי, which is the reading of many MSS. is formed, says Houbigant, as שבי captivity, and signifies agmen locustarum. The true reading may be גרב the locust, collectively: or גרבים written contractedly גרבי.

— mowings.—The falling of rain upon גר, which we render mown grass, is mentioned Ps. lxxii. 6. But here we may understand the mowing of too luxuriant corn: the first cutting of which might be for the use of the king's horses, kept in great numbers, contrary to the law of Moses. The second growth of such corn was called לקט, and the eating of this by locusts was fatal to the crop. See Buxt. Lex. Chald. et Rabb. voc. שחרא, the word here used by the Chaldee paraphrast. The reader may also consult Hai-

- when they had made an end of eating the herb of the land, that I said; O Lord Jehovah, pardon, I beseech thee. Who shall raise up Jacob? for he is small.
- 3 Jehovah repented of this. It shall not be, said Jehovah.
- 4 The Lord Jehovah thus shewed unto me: and, behold, the Lord Jehovah called to a judgment by fire. And it
- 5 devoured the great deep. And it devoured a part; and I said, O Lord Jehovah, cease, I beseech thee. Who
- 6 shall raise up Jacob? for he is small. Jehovah repented of this. This also shall not be, said the Lord Jehovah.
- 7 Thus he shewed unto me: and, behold, the Lord stood upon a wall made by a plumbline: and in his hand was a
- 8 plumbline. And Jehovah said unto me, What seest thou, Amos? And I said, A plumbline. And the Lord said:

Behold, I will set a plumbline in the midst of my people Israel;

mer, ii. 466: who thinks that what we translate mowing may signify feeding down.

“Luxuricm segetum tenera depascit in herba.” Virg.

Houbigant translates, postquam tonsi fuerunt regis greges.

2. — shall raise up.—V. ó. Ar. Syr. Houbigant, and one MS. read קים: which is also the true reading, v. 5.

— small.—Reduced to a low state.

3. — It shall not be.—Sc. הרבה, as Isa. xiv. 24. xliii. 19. lxxv. 6.

— repented.—To affect the mind of the prophet, and by him that of the people, God displays different judgments, and shows his clemency by forbearing to execute them on the intercession of Amos: it being his sole intention to represent these modes of punishment, and not to inflict them.

— deep.—The waters of the sea, Exod. xv. 5, 8.

7. — he shewed.—V. ó. Ar. and one MS. supply Jehovah, agreeably to v. 1. MS. A. and v. 4. MS. Vat. and ch. viii. 1. MS. A. And I think that it should be admitted into the text.

— the Lord stood.—ó. MS. A. Pachom. ed. Ald. ἀνῆλθε ἰσθμὸν; and ארני is wanting in one MS.

8. — What seest thou.—This is said to raise the prophet's attention.

— a plumbline.—The word denotes tin in Syr. and lead or tin in Arab. I will destroy and level Israel, as it were by a line. See 2 Sam. viii. 2. 2 Kings xxi. 13. Isa. xxviii. 17. xxxiv. 11. Lam. ii. 8.

I will not * pass through them any more.

- 9 And the high places of Isaac shall be made desolate ;
And the sanctuaries of Israel shall be laid waste :
And I will rise up against the house of Jeroboam with the sword.

- 10 Then Amaziah, priest of Bethel, sent to Jeroboam king of Israel, saying: Amos hath conspired against thee in the midst of the house of Israel: the land is not 11 able to bear all his words. For thus Amos saith: Jeroboam shall die by the sword; and Israel shall surely go into captivity out of their own land.

- 12 Then Amaziah said unto Amos: O thou Seer, go flee thou away into the land of Judah, and eat bread there, 13 and there prophesy: but † prophesy not any more against Bethel: for it is the king's sanctuary, and the temple of the kingdom.

- 14 Then answered Amos, and said to Amaziah:

I was no prophet;
Neither was I the son of a prophet:

* Heb. add to pass.

† Heb. add not to prophesy.

— I will not pass through them.—So ch. viii. 2. I will make a full end: I will not pass through my people, as Judge and Avenger, any more, Ex. xii. 12. ch. v. 17. I will not punish them by locusts, or by the fire of lightning or by earthquakes; but by hostile desolation and captivity.

9. — Isaac.—I believe the true reading here and v. 16, to be יִצְחָק. Comp. Ps. cv. 9. 1 Chron. xvi. 16, and observe that in the psalm, ten MSS. read יִצְחָק.

— with the sword.—See 2 Kings xv. 8—10. xvii. 5, &c.

10. — bear.—See Jer. x. 10. The people are not able to endure, or support them, through the indignation which they conceive at them.

11. — Jeroboam.—Or, metrically;

“Jeroboam shall die by the sword,
And Israel shall surely go into captivity out of their own land.”

13. — against.—So 6. Arab.

— Bethel.—See ch. iv. 4. v. 5.

— temple.—So Beth-el signifies; the house or temple of God.

- But I was an herdsman, and a gatherer of sycamore-fruit.
- 15 And Jehovah took me from ‡ following the flock ; *
And Jehovah said unto me,
Go prophesy unto my people Israel.
- 16 Now therefore hear the word of Jehovah ;
Thou sayest, Prophecy not against Israel,
And drop not thy word against the house of Isaac.
- 17 Therefore thus saith Jehovah :
Thy wife shall be an harlot in the city ;
And thy sons and thy daughters shall fall by the sword.
And thy land shall be divided by line :
And thou shalt die in a polluted land ;
And Israel shall surely go into captivity out of their own land.

‡ Heb. from after.

14. — an herdsman.—Videtur legendum נִיָּקֵר. Ch. i. 1. 2 Reg. iii. 4. Seeker.

— a gatherer.—Ερευνων, Aquila. בִּלְשָׁ, says Buxt. lex. Chald. et Rabb., respondet frequenter in Targum Hebræo חָפֵשׁ scrutari. As the substantive in Arab. and Æth. signifies a fig, Bochart supposes that the verb may mean, ficans, sycaminans, i. e. colens. Hieroz. L. II. xxxix. p. 384. See Cels. Hierobot. i. 318. “Gr. Κνίζων, quod Hesychius explicat Κεντων ὥστε γενεσθαι πεπειρα. Sycamori enim, inquit Hieron., agrestes afferunt ficus, quæ si non vellicentur amarissimas cariculas faciunt, et a culcibus corrumpuntur. Et Dioscorides l. 1. Fert fructum, inquit, quæ non maturescit nisi vellicetur ungue vel ferro.” Jo. Heinr. Michaelis, Biblia, Halæ. Archbishop Secker refers to this note, and adds ; “Etiam hodie Græci culices pungendis ficubus adhibent. V. Tournefortii itin. apud Miller voc. ficus.”

— sycamore-fruit.—A kind of fig. Celsius.

16. — drop.—Metaphorically for to speak, to instruct. It is equivalent to prophesying, Ezek. xx. 46. xxi. 2, as well as here. See Job xxix. 22, 23. Micah ii. 6, 11, and Pocock on Micah ii. 6.

17. — polluted.—A foreign land, Ezek. iv. 13. Hos. ix. 3. Or, in the land of Israel polluted by blood.

— And Israel.—A repetition of Amaziah's words, v. 11.

CHAPTER VIII.

- 1 THE Lord Jehovah thus shewed unto me : and, behold, 2 a basket of late summer-fruits. And he said, What seest thou, Amos ? And I said, A basket of late summer-fruits. Then said Jehovah unto me ;
 The latter end is come upon my people Israel :
 I will not * pass through them any more.
 3 And the singing-women of the palace shall howl in that day,
 Saith the Lord Jehovah.
There shall be many dead bodies in every place :
And men shall say : Cast forth, be silent.
 4 Hear this, O ye that bruise the needy,
 And set yourselves to make the poor of the land to fail.†
 5 Saying :
 When will the new moon be gone, that we may sell corn ?
 And the sabbath, that we may set ‡ forth wheat ?
 § Making the ephah small, and § making the shekel
 weighty ;
 And || falsifying the deceitful balances :

* Heb. add to pass. † Or, cease. ‡ Heb. open. § Heb. to make.
 || Heb. To pervert the balances of deceit.

---

CHAP. VIII. 1. A basket.—Καλαθος, Symm. αγγος, ὄ. Arab. بن vas, Chald. There is a paronomasia in קין late summer-fruits, and קן the latter end. Harvest, or vintage, expresseth judgment, Joel iii. 13. Mr. Lowth. Secker.

3. — the singing women.—I adopt Houbigant's reading : שוררות, cantatrices.

— cast forth.—לאמר is understood as frequently.

— be silent.—See ch. vi. 10.

4. — bruise.—Read שופים. See ch. ii. 7.

— to make, &c.—See ch. vi. 10. Read להשבית to cause to cease ; that is, to cut off, to destroy. See Hos. i. 4. Deficere facitis, V.

5. — new moon.—See Num. x. 10. xxviii. 11.

— set forth.—Open our repositories of wheat for sale.

- 6 * Buying them that are brought low for silver,
And the needy in return for sandals :
And † selling the refuse of wheat.
- 7 Jehovah hath sworn by the excellency of Jacob ;
‡ Surely I will never forget all their deeds.
- 8 Shall not the land be shaken for this ?
And shall not all mourn that dwell therein ?
And shall not all of it rise up, as the river ;
And be driven out of its place, and sink down, as the river of Egypt ?
- 9 And it shall come to pass in that day,
Saith the Lord Jehovah,
That I will cause the sun to go down at noon,
And will darken the land in the bright § day.

* Heb. to buy. † Heb. that we may sell.

‡ Heb. If I will forget for ever. § Heb. day of light.

6. Buying.—His labour, or his person. See on ch. vi. 10 for the construction, — sandals.—See ch. ii. 6.

7. — excellency.—By the state of exaltation to which he raised Jacob and his posterity. Or, by Jacob's most eminent and incommunicable One. J. Mede. fol. p. 8.

8. — be shaken.—See ch. i. 1.

— as the river.—Five MSS. read ביאר; two read so originally; and perhaps three more. And six MSS. and one edition read ביאר. So ch. ix. 5, eleven MSS. and five editions read ביאר. That the Nile was called the river, by way of eminence, see Præl. Heb. xxiv. p. 325. On יאר Gussetius observes, “Radii lucis e luminari, ut e fonte suo rivi, exeunt. Quapropter et nomen alterum ex altero effectum suspicor.” In Cast. lex. I find that the Arabic word آري signifies fudit.

— And be driven out.—“וּנְכַרְשָׁה non agnoscunt ṣ, nec habetur ch. ix. 5; qu. an נרש an נרע.” Secker. The word is wanting in MS. 96; and MS. 150 reads וּנְכַרְשָׁה.

— sink down.—Sixteen MSS. read with Keri תַּקְעָה. See ch. ix. 5. The rising and falling of the ground with a wave-like motion, and its leaving its proper place and bounds on occasion of an earthquake, are justly and beautifully compared to the swelling, the overflowing, and the subsiding of the Nile. “Le mouvement qu’elles impriment à la terre est tantôt une espece d’ undulation semblable à celle de vagues.” Encycl. 4to. vid. tremblement de terre.

- 10 And I will turn your feasts into mourning.
 And all your songs into lamentation :
 And I will bring sackcloth upon all loins,
 And baldness upon all heads :
 And I will make it as a mourning for an only son ;
 And the end thereof as a day of bitterness.
- 11 Behold, the days come, saith the Lord Jehovah,
 That I will send a famine on the land ;
 Not a famine of bread,
 Nor a thirst for water,
 But of hearing the words of Jehovah.
- 12 And men shall wander from the western-sea to the eastern-sea,
 And from north to south shall they run to and fro,

9. — cause—to go down.—Houbigant prefers the reading of Chald. והחבאתי, and I will hide. That this passage may be understood literally, see ch. iv. 13. It may also be interpreted metaphorically, of changing a prosperous and joyful state into an adverse and mournful one.

10. — baldness. See Bishop Lowth on Isa. xv. 2, and Jer. vii. 29. xlvii. 5. xlviii. 37. Job. i. 20.

“ Ἀς καὶ ἀποφθιμένας πασαι νεοθηγεῖ χαλκῆ Ἀλικες ἡμερταν κρατος εθεντο κομαν.”

Sapph. Epigr. II. Steph. 229.

“ Non mihi te licuit lacrymis perfundere justis,
 In tua non tonsas ferre sepulchra comas.”

Ovid. Epist. Canace. 115.

“ Planxere puellæ
 Naiades, et sectos fratri imposuere capillos.”

Metam. iii. 506.

— it—thereof.—הדבר, this matter, this event, may be understood. If we supply ארץ the land, אבל may be a participle :

“ And I will make it as one that mourneth for an only son :
 And the end thereof as a day of bitterness.”

“ Nunc et amara dies, et noctis amarior umbra est.”

Tib. L. II. iv. 11.

11. — the Lord.—V. ó. Ar. Syr. omit ארני.

— of hearing.—See Ezek. vii. 26. In the calamity which shall befall Israel, there shall be no prophet to direct them.

12. — to south.—The Hebrew is, “from sea to sea,” i. e. from the

To seek the word of Jehovah ; and shall not find it.

- 13 In that day shall the fair virgins,
And the young men, faint for thirst :
14 Who swear by the sin of Samaria ;
And say, Thy God, O Dan, liveth ;
And the || worship of Beersheba liveth :
And they shall fall, and shall not rise up again.

CHAPTER IX.

- 1 I SAW the Lord standing upon the altar ; and he said :
Smite the upper lintel, that the door-posts may shake.

|| Heb. way.

Mediterranean to the Dead Sea, or, from west to east ; “and from north to east.” It is plain that there must have been a mistake of transcribers, though neither versions, paraphrase, nor MSS. remove it. Houbigant proposes מים עד יבין, from the western sea to south, and from north to east. It seems more natural to adopt the word יבין, and likewise to think that a transposition has taken place :

ונער מים עד מזרח
ובצפון ועד יבין יושטטו :

Eight MSS. instead of עד read ויער. And a transcriber's eye might more easily mistake, if each of the transposed clauses began with the same three letters.

13. — for thirst.—From being forsaken by Jehovah ; according to v. 11, 12. The pause is at תרעלפנה.

14. — worship.—Hebr. way : i. e. religious way, Acts xix. 9. ὁ have ὁ θεος σου ; and it is well conjectured that they read צור, thy rock. “ Reponenda vox aliqua quod numen tuum significat. Nescio an פרך : nam פר שור idem, Ps. lxi. 32. Vitulus autem Israelitarum שור, Ps. cvi. 20. Remotius est פחדך. Conf. Gen. xxxi. 53. Putat Lowth ירך notare cultum, Hos. x. 13, ubi vide notam. Sed vix puto הי de cultu usurpari ; sed neque de vitulo fusili.” Seeker.

“ Αἰ ποτε
ἤντα ταῦτα. sc. νομίμα.”

Soph. Antig. 465.

CHAP. IX. 1.—upon the altar.—Or over, or by. Seeker.

—the upper lintel.—The upper part of the door-frame in the temple, which bound the whole together : so called because adorned with knops of

For I will * wound them in the head, even all of them :
 And their posterity will I slay with the sword.
 He that fleeth of them, shall not flee away ;
 And he that escapeth of them, shall not escape into safety.

- 2 If they dig down to the grave,
 Thence shall mine hand take them :
 And if they climb up to heaven,
 Thence will I bring them down :
- 3 And if they hide themselves in the top of Carmel,
 I will search for them, and thence will I take them out :
 And if they hide themselves from † mine eyes in the bottom of the sea,
 There will I command the serpent, and it shall bite them :
- 4 And if they go into captivity before their enemies,
 There will I command the sword, and it shall slay them :
 And I will set mine eyes upon them
 For evil, and not for good.
- 5 For the Lord Jehovah, the God of hosts,

* Or, cut.

† Heb. from before.

pomegranates. This vision denotes the breach and ruin of the kingdom of Israel : and the earthquake may really have produced the effect mentioned.

— I will wound.—Houbigant reads יאבצעם : and this, or רבצעים, is necessary.

— head.—This corresponds to the upper lintel in the foregoing line. “ ראש seems to be the front, as 2 Chron. xx. 27. Mic. ii. 13. אחרית the rear.” Secker.

— flee away.—Observe in δ. διαφυγῆ and διασωθῆ.

3. — top of Carmel.—Which may have abounded in caverns. See Bishop Lowth on Isa. ii. 19.

— the bottom.—The Arabic root in Cast. lex. signifies loco plano incessit.

— There.—See נשם in Noldius.

— serpent.—“ Serpentes in aquis degunt.” Boet. Hieroz. I. iv. 26.

“ Immensis orbibus angues Incumbunt pelago, pariterque ad littora tendunt.”

Virg. Æn. ii. 204.

- Is he* who toucheth the earth, and it shall melt;
 And all that dwell therein shall mourn;
 And all of it shall rise up, as the river,
 And shall sink down, as the river of Egypt.
- 6 He buildeth his upper chambers in the heavens;
 And his storehouse, he foundeth it on the earth:
 He calleth the waters of the sea,
 And poureth them over the face of the earth:
 Jehovah [the God of hosts] is his name.
- 7 Are ye not to me as the sons of the † Ethiopians,

† Heb. Chusites.

5. — melt.—See Ps. xcvii. 5. The frame of nature is dissolved before him. An allusion to the earthquake.

— as the river.—See ch. viii. 8. The prophet repeats this lively image; as his mind was strongly impressed with the dreadful effects which the earthquake would produce.

6. — upper chambers.—Ennius, as quoted by Lively, has Cœnacula maxima cœli. Harmer remarks, from Jer. xxii. 13, 14, that the chief and most ornamented apartments in the king's palace were upper rooms: and that the chief rooms in the houses of Aleppo at this day are those above, v. i. 174. "בעליות. Hic tantum cœnaculum notat. Videtur legendum עלייתו, ut Ps. civ. 3, 13. Prædedit Mem." Secker.

— storehouse.—The verb in Chald. signifies collegit: and in Arab. fornix firmæ compaginis. Houbigant agrees with Cappellus in rendering it penus, apotheca. אנרה "fasciculus, sarcinula, apotheca qua sarcinæ repouuntur." Vid. Cap. and Houb. There may be an allusion to repositories in the lower parts of houses, or to such as were sometimes dug in the fields, Jer. xli. 8. Est in Africa consuetudo incolarum, ut in agris, et in omnibus fere villis, sub terra specus, condendi frumenti gratia, clam habeant. Hirtius: quoted by Bochart, P. ii. L. IV. xxi.

— Jehovah.—We may collect from ô. Ar. Syr. that this line should be lengthened by adding אדוני, אדני, or אלהי צבאות, אלהי. ô. MS. Pachom. read εὖ ὁ ὁ παντοκράτωρ. See on ch. v. 8.

The power and sure vengeance of the Deity are very sublimely described in this and the four preceding verses.

7. — Ethiopians, or Chusites.—Chus was the son of Ham, Gen. x. 6. And that the Chusites inhabited a part of Arabia Petræa and Felix, is shown by Bochart, geogr. sacr. 213, and by Calmet, Dict. in voc. See Numb. xii. 1, compared with Ex. ii. 16. 2 Chron. xxi. 16. Ezek. xxix. 10. Hab. iii. 7. They were, says Bochart, a powerful but despised nation.

O sons of Israel, saith Jehovah?

Did I not bring up Israel from the land of Egypt,

And the Philistines from Caphtor, and § Syria from Kir?

8 Behold, the eyes of the Lord Jehovah are upon the sinful kingdom;

And I will destroy it from off the face of the earth.

Yet I will not utterly destroy

The house of Jacob, saith Jehovah.

9 For, behold, I will command,

§ Heb. Aram.

— the Philistines.—Ἀλλοφύλοι, as ó. often translate the word: and the root in Sam. and Æth. denotes a stranger, an emigrant. See Cast. lex.

— Caphtor.—Bochart contends that this is Cappadocia. But Calmet, with more reason, thinks it Crete. It is called κ, Jer. xlvii. 4: though I believe that this word sometimes signifies the sea-coast of a remote continent. See on Zeph. ii. 11. And these people are called Cherethim, 1 Sam. xxx. 4. Ezek. xxv. 16. Zeph. ii. 5. Bochart says, that the sea-coast of Palestine had this name, Geogr. p. ii. i. xv. But it may have been given it because it was a Cretan colony. That both these and the Cretans were excellent archers, see Boch. ib. and Cast. lex. in voc. “Sunt non pauca sacræ scripturæ loca in quibus κ insulas significare nequeunt. Gen. x. 5. Jes. xx. 6. xxiii. 2, 6. xlii. 15. lxvi. 19. Jer. xxv. 22. Ezek. xxxix. 6. Verbum Arab. κ habitare significat. Jam ergo κ regio habitata. Hanc habemus tanquam genealogiam significationum. 1. habitationes, mansiones, i. e. regiones. 2. regiones earum gentium quæ Hebræis Phœnicibusque barbaræ erant. 3. Regiones transmarinæ. 4. Hospitia maris, sive portus. 5. Insulæ. I. D. Michaelis, Spicilegium Geographiæ.” Goettingæ. MDCCLXIX. 4to.

— Kir.—Aram, from whom Syria had its name, was the son of Shem, Gen. x. 22. Part of his posterity settled in Aram Naharaim, or Mesopotamia. And that a part anciently settled in Kir (whether a city of the Medes, Isa. xxii. 6, or some other of this name), we learn from the passage before us. See Boch. Geogr. p. 293.

The sense seems to be: Trust not in your ancestors, who were so highly favoured by me. Your vices have made you vile in my sight. Trust not in my deliverance of you from the land of Egypt. Other nations have been transplanted into fertile countries, as well as you; and particularly your neighbouring enemies.

8. — sinful kingdom.—God destroyed many sinful kingdoms by the Assyrians: but the kingdom of Israel seems here to be meant.

- And I will sift the house of Israel among all the nations,
 As one that sifteth corn with a sieve :
 And a grain shall not fall upon the ground.
 10 But all the sinners of my people shall die by the sword,
 Who say, Evil shall not draw near, nor come || suddenly, on our account.
 11 In that day I will raise up the fallen tabernacle of David,
 And I will * close up<sup>e</sup> the breaches thereof :
 And I will raise up its ruins,
 And I will build it as in the days of old :
 12 That the residue of men may seek Jehovah,

|| Or, surprise, or, prevent us.

* Or, repair.

9. — sift.—Or shake together, and toss to and fro, so as completely to mingle.

— one that sifteth.—For the idiom see on Jon. iii. 7. “Potest excidisse בר ante vel post בכורה. Sola Vulgata frumentum habet.” Secker.

— a grain.—One signification of the Arabic root in Cast. lex. is frustum rei: 18th sense.

Though I will thus mix the Israelites with distant nations, yet there shall be a general restoration of them to their own land.

10. — all the sinners.—The most secure and presumptuous sinners of the Israelites shall fall by the sword.

11. — day.—When I prevent a grain from perishing. Acts xv. 16, “In that day” is changed into μετα ταυτα. Αναστρεψω και ανοικοδομησω is an Hebraism equivalent to, I will raise up, i. e. I will build again. The second hemistich, “And I will close up the breaches thereof,” is omitted. Και ανορθωσω αυτην is a rendering of רבנייה: and the two following words בימי עולם, as in the days of old, are omitted.

— tabernacle.—Elegantly, for the kingdom of David.

— breaches thereof.—Read with V. ó. Ar. and Houbigant פריצה: and again רחסייה. See the collated MSS. for the insertion of the former ו and of the second י in this latter word.

12. — men.—The true reading is אדם, according to ó. Arab. Acts xv. 17. some MSS. of Syr. and Eusebius. See Kenn. diss. gen. Sec. 67, 81.

— seek Jehovah.—The Alexandrine MS. of ó. has ὁπως αν, and τον Κυριον, as Acts xv. 17: and Ar. has אלהיך τον Κυριον. The Aldine ed. of ó. and MS. Pachom. have ὁπως αεζησμε: and thus discover how the genuine reading has been lost. In the present text אר remains: the

And all the heathen † who are called by my name ;
Saith Jehovah who doeth this.

- 13 Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah,
That the plougher shall draw near to the reaper ;
And the treader of grapes, to the sower of the seed :
And the mountains shall drop sweet wine ;
And all the hills shall melt.
- 14 And I will bring again the captivity of my people
Israel ;
And they shall build the desolate cities, and shall inhabit
them ;

† Heb. over whom my name is called.

Aldine represents אמי : and this, written " אמ contractedly, was substituted for אמ יהוה. See on Jon i. 2.

— doeth this.—There is good external authority, Acts xv. 17, for omitting πάντα.

On the restoration of the Jews after their captivity, the Messiah came, and the Gentiles [or the rest of mankind besides the Jews] were admitted into his church : and on the future grand restoration of the Jews, the borders of the Christian church will be enlarged among the Gentiles, Rom. xi. 12, 15.

13. — draw near to.—It is a lively way of expressing that the harvest and vintage should be copious and long in gathering. Professor Michaelis observes, that 6. MS. A. Ar. and Syr. make this passage parallel to Lev. xxvi. 5. "The threshing shall reach unto the vintage." He proposes to read דריש בברור trituran vindemiatores, giving דריש the Arabic sense terere, conterere. Mr. Woide. I prefer דריש בבציר, assequatur tritura vindemiam ; or דריש בברור, assequatur tritura vindemiatores. Harmer thinks that the perfect quiet and freedom from disturbances in the country are also implied. The corn and grapes shall not be gathered in a state of immaturity, from fear of enemies, ch. i. 90.

— sower.—Literally, the drawer forth of the seed out of the basket.

— mountains—hills.—These were the proper places for vineyards.

"Apertos

Bacchus amat colles."

Vir. Georg. ii. 112.

— sweet wine.—From the trodden grape. See Harmer i. 386. Or, expressed from rich fruits. See Cantic. viii. 2. We have a parallel line, Joel iii. 18.

— melt.—They shall flow, as it were, with the abundance of wine produced on them, Joel iii. 18.

And they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof;

They shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit thereof.

- 15 And I will plant them upon their land;
And they shall no more be rooted up
From the land which I have given them,
Saith Jehovah thy God.

14. — vineyards.—See the contrast, ch. v. 11.

— the fruit thereof.—Read with Houbigant and fourteen MSS. פריהן.

15. — plant.—This image is beautifully taken up from the foregoing verse.

— no more.—This part of the prophecy will receive its completion on the future restoration of the Jews to their land.

— thy God.—ó. Ar. read אלהים, which seems preferable. One MS. read so originally, “Saith the God Jehovah.”

THE BOOK

OF

H O S E A.

---

CHAPTER I.

1 THE word of Jehovah which came to Hosea, the son of Beerî, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and He-

---

CHAP. I. 1. — in the days.—If we suppose that Hosea prophesied during the course of sixty-six years, and place him from the year 790 before Christ, to the year 724, he will have exercised his office eight years in the reign of Jeroboam the second, thirty-three years in the reign of Uzziah, the entire reigns of Jotham and Ahaz, and three years in the reign of Hezekiah : but will not have survived the taking of Samaria.

Hosea is concise, sententious, and abrupt. It is his manner to omit the connexive and adversative particles; an observation which we should recollect when we observe them occasionally supplied by versions or MSS. These are among the causes of that obscurity for which he is remarkable: but the greatest difficulties arise from the corrupt readings which deform the printed text.

He chiefly addresses Israel; but introduces frequent mention of Judah. He not only inveighs against the vices of the people, but sharply arraigns the conduct of their kings, princes, and priests. Like many of the Hebrew prophets, he tempers denunciations of God's vengeance against an idolatrous and vicious people with promises of abundant mercies in store for them: and his transitions, from one of these subjects to the other, are rapid and unexpected.

He abounds with short and lively comparisons: and, like the best Greek and Roman writers, often omits the particle of similitude. These comparisons he sometimes accumulates in the spirit of that poetry which is most admired. See ch. vi. 3, 4. ix. 10. xi. 11. xiii. 3. xiv. 5, 6, 7.

He has often a great force of expression. See ch. i. 7. ii. 3, 18, 21, 22. iv. 2. vi. 5. xi. 4. l. 1. xiii. 1. l. 1.

He is sometimes highly animated. See ch. iv. 14. v. 8. viii. 1. ix. 5, 14. xiii. 10, 14.

Many beautiful passages occur in this prophet; as in the similies zekiah, kings of Judah; and in the days of Jeroboam, the son of Joash, king of Israel.

2 The beginning of the word of Jehovah by Hosea. And Jehovah said unto Hosea:

throughout: in the allegories, ch. ii. 2—20. ch. vii. 11, 12. ch. viii. 7. l. 2, 3, 4. ch. x. 11, 12, 13. ch. xiii. 15: in the pathos, ch. xi. 3. l. 1, 2. and ver. 8, 9: in the figures, ch. xiii. 12. xiv. 2. l. 5.

There are also some parts which are truly sublime: as ch. v. 14, 15. viii. 7. l. 1. x. 8. l. 2, 3. xiii. 7, 8

2. — by Hosea.—Or, to Hosea: as ó. MS. Al. Syr.: and as ב is used ch. xii. 6. But, perhaps, in the passage before us some translators read l. “By or to. Numb. xii. 1—6.” Secker.

“Unto Hosea,” אל הושע—“by Hosea,” בְּהושֶׁע—“unto Hosea,” אל הושֶׁע.

To speak to Hosea and by Hosea (אל and ב) are phrases of different import. To speak to, expresses, that to him the discourse was immediately addressed; to speak by, that through him it was addressed to others; and that the speech, so addressed to others, was not the prophet's own, but God's; God using the prophet as his organ of speech to the people. The different import of these constructions, so manifest in the Hebrew text, has been very judiciously preserved in the Seventy, according to the Vatican, in the Vulgate, in the Chaldee, in Luther's Latin translation, in Calvin's, in our public translation, and in Archbp. Newcome's, but neglected by Castalio, Jun. and Trem., and by Houbigant. It must be confessed, that in some instances, the prefix ב seems used as equivalent to אל; but its most proper meaning is indisputably a mean between the opposite senses of מן and אל, from and towards, denoting “rest, residence, or continuance in.” Hence, “it is the proper preposition of the instrument, as that in which the active power of the first efficient is placed. And in such studied change, from one mode of expression to another, as occurs in this passage, it is reasonable to suppose, that each is used in its distinct and appropriate meaning. Some passages, indeed, have been alleged, in which ב after verbs of speaking to, might be rendered by the Latin cum or the English with, as in Numb. xii. 8. “With him (בְּ) will I speak, mouth to mouth.” But in this, and every instance of the same kind except one, the parties in the discourse, or the supposed discourse, are God and the prophet. And in every discourse of God with a prophet, much more is intended than the prophet's information; the prophet is always the vehicle of a divine message to the people. Even in this text of Hosea, where what is said by God seems immediately to concern the prophet individually, being a command of something to be done by him in the economy of his domestic life; yet the act commanded being of public interest and importance, as it was typical of the case between God and the people of Israel, being com-

Go, take unto thee a wife of fornications, and children of fornications:

For the land hath committed great fornications in departing from Jehovah.

3 And he went and took Gomer, the daughter of Diblaim: and she conceived, and bare him a son.

And Jehovah said unto him:

4 Call his name Jezreel:

manded, for that very reason, as a method of public admonition and denunciation; even in this instance, which, in the first face of it, has much the appearance of a private affair of the prophet's, it was rather by than to Hosea that Jehovah spake; and the change in the original, from אֵל to ב, and back again, is not immaterial, and ought to be preserved in the translation. Horsley.

"By Hosea, was in this manner:" This I take to be the force of the copula ו prefixed to יאמר; and so it is taken by Castalio and Houbigant. The ו is often to be taken as a particle of specification, equivalent to scilicet, nempe, or nimirum. Horsley.

—a wife of fornications.—A wife from among the Israelites, who are remarkable for spiritual fornication, or idolatry. God was, as it were, an husband to Israel; and this chosen nation owed him the fidelity of a wife. See Ex. xxxiv. 15. Deut. xxxi. 16. Judg. ii. 17. Isa. liv. 5. Jer. iii. 14. xxxi. 32. Ezek. xvi. 17. xxiii. 5, 27. ch. ii. 5. See also Rev. xvii. 1, 2. He therefore says with indignation: Go, join thyself in marriage to one of those who have committed fornication against me; and raise up children who, by the power of example, will themselves swerve to idolatry, ch. v. 7.

—For the land.—I may justly use this language. For the land hath committed, or committeth, &c.

"For the land is perpetually playing the wanton, forsaking Jehovah." זונה רונה.—to whore whores. This construction, in which the finite verb is connected with its own infinitive, for the most part expresses the perpetual repetition of the action, as a matter of daily practice and habit. Buxtorf's distinction, that when the infinitive is put first this construction expresses the greater certainty and evidence of the thing, but when the infinitive follows, the continuance and frequent practice, seems to me to have no foundation. I think that, in either position of the infinitive, greater certainty or greater frequency may be expressed, as the subject-matter may require. Horsley.

4. Call his name.—This is agreeable to the genius of a people used to significant and prophetic names. Such, among many others, were Japhet, Abraham, Judah, Joshua, Jerubbaal, Jud. vi. 32, Solomon.

For yet a little while, and I will * visit
The blood of Jezreel upon the house of Jehu :

* Or, avenge, or punish.

— the blood of Jezreel.—Not Jehu's vengeance on Ahab's family, see 2 Kings x. 30 : but his acts of cruelty while he resided at Jezreel, a city in the tribe of Issachar, Josh. xix. 18, where the kings of Israel had a palace, 1 Kings xxi. 1.

"I will visit the blood of Jezräel upon the house of Jehu." Jezräel, the mystical name of the prophet's son, must be familiar to all who are conversant in the Holy Scriptures, as the name of a city in the tribe of Issachar, and of a valley or plain, in which the city stood : the city, famous for its vineyard, which cost the rightful owner, the unfortunate Naboth, his life ; and, by the righteous judgment of God, gave occasion to the downfall of the royal house of Ahab : the plain, one of the finest parts of the whole land of Canaan ; if we may judge from the partiality of the kings of Israel for the spot, who all fixed their residence in one or other of its numerous cities. Modern expositors, entirely forgetting the prophet's son, have thought of nothing in this passage but the place, the city, or the plain. A mistake, into which, perhaps, they have the more easily fallen, by reason of the explicit mention of the place at the end of the subsequent verse. But if the word Jezräel be taken here as the name of a place, the threat of "avenging, or visiting, upon the house of Jehu the blood of Jezräel," will signify, that the family of Jehu was to be punished for blood shed by Jehu, or by his descendants, in that place. Jehu himself shed the blood of Ahab's family, with an unsparing hand, in Jezräel. But this was an execution of the judgment which God had denounced, by his prophet Elijah, against the house of Ahab, for the cruel murder of Naboth. And it may justly seem extraordinary, that this should be mentioned as a crime of so deep a dye, as to bring down vengeance upon Jehu's house. It is true, that when the purposes of God are accomplished by the hand of man (which is the case, indeed, in some degree, in every human action), the very same act may be just and good, as it proceeds from God, and makes a part of the scheme of Providence ; and criminal in the highest degree, as it is performed by the man, who is the immediate agent. The man may act from sinful motives of his own, without any consideration or knowledge of the end to which God directs the action. In many cases the man may be incited by enmity to God and the true religion to the very act, in which he accomplishes God's secret, or even his revealed purpose. The man, therefore, may justly incur wrath and punishment for those very deeds in which, with much evil intention of his own, he is the instrument of God's good providence. But these distinctions will not apply to the case of Jehu, in such a manner as to solve the difficulty arising from this interpretation of the text. He was specially commissioned by a prophet "to smite the house of Ahab his master, to avenge the blood of the prophets, and the blood of all the servants of Jehovah, at the hand of Jezabel." And however the general corruption of human nature, and the recorded imperfections of Jehu's character, might give room to suspect, that in the excision of Ahab's family, and of the whole faction of Baal's worshippers, he might be instigated by motives of private ambition, and by a cruel sanguinary disposition; the fact appears, from the history, to have been otherwise; that he acted, through the whole business, with a conscientious regard to God's commands, and a zeal for his service; insomuch, that when the work was completed, he received the express approbation of God; and the continuance of the sceptre of Israel in his family, to the fourth generation, was promised as the reward of this good and acceptable service. "Jehovah said unto Jehu, because thou hast done well, in executing that which is right in mine eyes, and hast done unto the house of Ahab according to all that was in my heart, thy children of the fourth generation shall sit on the throne of Israel." 2 Kings x. 30. And it cannot be conceived, that the very same deed which was commanded, approved, and rewarded, in Jehu who performed it, should be punished as a crime in Jehu's posterity, who had no share in the transaction. For these reasons, I am persuaded, that Jezräel is to be taken in this passage in its mystical meaning, and is to be understood of the persons typified by the prophet's son—the holy seed—the true servants and worshippers of God. It is threatened, that their blood is to be visited upon the house of Jehu, by which it had been shed. The princes descended from Jehu were all idolaters, and idolaters have always been persecutors of the true religion. In all ages, and in all countries, they have persecuted the Jezräel unto death, whenever they have had the power of doing it. The blood of Jezräel, therefore, which was to be visited on the house of Jehu, was the blood of God's servants, shed in persecution, and of infants shed upon the altars of their idols, by the idolatrous princes of the line of Jehu: and so the expression was understood by St. Jerome and by Luther."

And I will make the kingdom of the house of Israel to cease.

5 And it shall come to pass in that day,

— And I will make.—I will also cut off the kingdom of Israel by the Assyrians. See v. 6 But some say, that the text expresses the ceasing of the kingdom of Israel from the house of Jehu, 2 Kings x. 30: a prophecy fulfilled, 2 Kings xv. 10.

5. And it shall come to pass, &c.—"And this shall be in that very

That I will break the bow of Israel in the valley of Jezreel.

6 And she conceived again, and bare a daughter.

And God said unto him :

Call her name Lo-ruhamah, or, Not-having obtained mercy.

For I will no † more have mercy on the house of Israel ;

† Heb. I will not add any more to have.

day, when I break," &c.—I suggest it to the learned to consider, whether the phrase, so frequent in the prophets, וְיָהוָה בַּיּוֹם הַהוּא is not to be differently taken, according as it is connected, or not connected, with the subsequent clause by the copula ו. I am much inclined to think, that when it is not so connected, יוֹם הַהוּא is to be understood of a time described or marked by some event already mentioned ; and the force of the expression is to notify, that the event of the subsequent clause is to take place at that time. But when these words are connected with the subsequent clause by the copula ו, then, I conceive, that the event of the subsequent clause affords the marks of the time, and gives the date of the event previously mentioned ; so that in both cases a synchronism is described, but with this difference, that in the first case, the event previously mentioned gives the date of the other ; in the second case, the other event gives the date of that previously mentioned ; and the nominative understood of the verb-substantive, should be rendered, in the first case, by the pronoun it ; in the second, by the demonstrative this. Thus, in ch. ii. 16 (18 Heb.), וְיָהוָה בַּיּוֹם הַהוּא נֹאם יִהְיֶה תִקְרָא אִשִּׁי, " And it shall be in that day (saith Jehovah) thou shalt call me Ishi ;" i. e. in the day when Jehovah shall do the things in the preceding verse. These things make the date of the time ; and the calling of Jehovah Ishi is the event referred to that date. But in this passage וְיָהוָה בַּיּוֹם הַהוּא וְשִׁבְרֵתִי ; " And this shall be in that very day, and I break, &c." i. e. and this shall be [the thing last-mentioned, the " demolition of the kingdom of Israel shall take place ] in that day, when I break, &c." Here the breaking of the bow is the event that marks the date ; and to that date, so marked, the threatened excision of the kingdom of the ten tribes is referred. Horsley.

— in the valley of Jezreel.—Here, it is probable, that a remarkable defeat from the Assyrians was sustained. Or, here the death of king Zechariah, the fourth lineal descendant of Jehu, may have happened. 2 Kings xv. 10.

6. — And God said.—Syr. and ó. MS. Pachom. supply the Lord : כִּרְא : Kruptos. So again v. 9.

— no more have mercy.—The Hebrew phrase may be varied : רַחֵם, as

But I will surely take them away.

7 Yet on the house of Judah will I have mercy,
And I will save them by Jehovah their God ;
And I will not save them by bow, nor by sword,
Nor by battle, nor by horses, nor by horsemen.

8 And she weaned her that was called Lo-ruhamah, or, Not-having obtained mercy ; and conceived, and bare 9 a son. And God said :

Call his name Lo-Ammi, or, Not-my-people.

For ye are not my people ;
And I will not be your God.

10 Yet shall the number of the sons of Israel be as the sand of the sea,

Which cannot be measured nor numbered :

And it shall come to pass that, in the place where it was said unto them,

Isa. viii. 5. לֹרְחָם, as Amos vii. 13. וְאֶרְחָם, as Judg. xi. 14. Esth. viii. 3, and אֶרְחָם, as Prov. xxiii. 35. Isa. xlvii. 1. lii. 1. There is an allusion to the names in this v. and in v. 9, 1 Pet. ii. 10. Rom. ix. 25.

"Not beloved." For I will no more cherish with tenderness the house of Israel, inasmuch as to be perpetually forgiving them. Horsley.

7. — have mercy.—For a longer time.

— by Jehorah.—This prophecy is very strongly expressed, and was fulfilled, 2 Kings xix. 35.

— Nor by battle.—"Nor in war by horses." D. Wheeler.

6. MS. A. ed. Ald. and vers. Copt. add οὐτε ἐν ἵπποις. Mr. Woide.

"And I will not save them by bow, nor by sword, nor by battle ;
Nor by chariots, nor by horses, nor by horsemen."

9. — your God.—In the Hebrew there is no word for God ; nor is it supplied by the ancient versions, the Chaldee paraphrase, or MSS. And yet the structure of the sentence most clearly requires it. Houbigant ingeniously conjectures that the true reading is, אֱלֹהֵיכֶם ; whence אֱהִי לָכֶם, consisting of the same letters ; and whence the present reading. Compare Lev. xxvi. 12. Jer. xxiv. 7. xxx. 22. xxxi. 33. xxxii. 38. Zech. viii. 8. Heb. viii. 10.

10. Yet.—God will restore them from the Babylonish captivity.

— measured.—Horace calls Archytas,

"Maris et terræ numeroque carentis arenæ Mensorem."

— was said.—Or, is said. Sc. in their own country ; where God, by his prophet, used [or now uses] this language.

Ye are † NOT-MY-PEOPLE,
 There shall it be said unto them, Ye are THE-SONS-OF
 THE-LIVING-GOD.

- 11 And the sons of Judah, and the sons of Israel shall be gathered together,
 And shall appoint to themselves one head
 And shall come up out of the land :
 For great shall be the day of Jezreel.

---

CHAPTER II.

- 1 SAY ye unto your brethren, * MY-PEOPLE ;
 And unto your sisters, † HAVING-OBTAINED-MERCY.

‡ In Heb. Lo-Ammi.

* In Heb. Ammi.

† In Heb. Ruhamah.

---

11. — one head.—Zerubbabel. After the return from Babylon, the distinction between the kingdoms of Israel and Judah ceased.

— land.—Whither they were dispersed.

— of Jezreel —Here is an allusion to the etymology of the word, God will sow, Isa. lxx. 9 : or, God will plant, Isa. xvii. 10. Great will be the day when God reinstates his people in their land. See ch. ii. 22, 23.

The word Jezræel, though applied in this passage to the devout part of the natural Israel, by its etymology, is capable of a larger meaning, comprehending all of every race and nation, who, by the preaching of the gospel, are made members of Christ and the children of God. All these are a seed of God, begotten of him, by the Spirit, to a holy life, and to the inheritance of immortality. The words Ammi and Ruhamah, and their opposites, Lo-ammi and Lo-ruhamah, are capable of the same extension ; the two former to comprehend the converted, the two latter the unconverted Gentiles. Accordingly, we find these prophecies of Hosea cited by St. Paul [Rom. ix. 24] to prove, not the call of the Gentiles solely, but the indiscriminate call to salvation both of Gentiles and Jews. He affirms that God has called us [i. e. us Christians] vessels of mercy, afore prepared unto glory, οὐ μόνον ἐξ Ἰουδαίων ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐξ ἐθνῶν, “not of the Jews only, but moreover of the Gentiles too.” And it is in proof of this proposition, that he cites the prophecies of Hosea. Horsley.

CHAP. II. 1. Say ye.—To avert my judgments, threatened, ch. i. 6, 9, exhort each other to be worthy of appellations opposite to those prophetic

- 2 Plead ye with your mother, plead :
 For she is not my wife,
 Neither am I her husband :
 And let her put away her fornications from † her,
 And her many adulteries from § her breasts :
 3 Lest I strip her naked,

† Heb. from before.

§ Heb. from between.

ones before denounced against the sons and daughters of Israel, ch. i. 6. 9. So act, that ye may truly say unto, &c. "Although the Israelites in the days of Hosea were in general corrupt, and addicted to idolatry, yet there were among them, in the worst times, some who had not bowed the knee to Baal. These were always Ammi and Ruhamah; God's own people, and a darling daughter. God commissions these faithful few to admonish the inhabitants of the land in general, of the dreadful judgments that would be brought upon them by the gross idolatry of the Jewish church and nation." Horsley.

"Speak to." The verb אמר is comparatively so seldom used otherwise than as equivalent to the English verb to say, with a declaration subjoined of what was said, that I hesitated long about the translation which I venture to give of this passage, in which I take the verb as equivalent to the English word to speak, without immediate mention of the words spoken. But, consulting the concordances, I find many unquestionable instances of this use of it. Horsley.

2. Plead.—Enter, as it were, into a forensic contest with your mother, the house of Israel; disavow her proceedings, and publicly protest against them.

—many adulteries.—The original word may be considered as a frequentative one.

3. Lest I.—See Bishop Lowth's note on Isa. iii. 17. Lest I cause her to be exposed to such ignominy as brutal conquerors sometimes inflict, Ex. xvi. 39. xxiii. 26: and lest I reduce her to the most extreme want. More than fifty MSS, or editions read ושרה for ושרה. It is observable that the punishment of an adulteress among the Germans is thus described by Tacitus: Accisis crinibus nudatam coram propinquis expellit domo maritus. Tac de mor. Germ. Sec. 18, 19.

The verb פשט signifies properly "to flay the skin;" hence, when applied to garments, it signifies "to strip to the bare skin," to divest even of the garments next the skin. ערם is a more general word, and expresses a less degree of denudation. And the two joined together express "to strip perfectly one already half naked." פן אפשיטנה ערמה Ne nudam eam plane

- And set her as in the day when she was born :
 And make her as the desert,
 And set her as a land of drought,
 And kill her with thirst,
 4 Neither have mercy on her sons,
 Because they are the sons of fornications.
 5 For their mother hath committed fornication ;
 She that conceived them hath caused shame :
 For she hath said, I will go after my lovers,
 Who give me my food and my water,
 My wool and my flax, mine oil and my strong drink.
 6 Therefore behold I will hedge up her way with thorns,
 And I will close up her enclosure ;
 That she shall not find her paths.

denudem. Hence the full sense of the passage is, that the disgraced, discarded wanton should be stripped stark-naked, and in that situation exposed to public view. Horsley.

— as the desert.—ו. MSS. Al. and Pachom. have ὡς ἐρημον.

5. — strong drink.—So Dr. Wheeler. See Ps. cii. 9. Seven MSS. read ושיקיי. The word may come from שיק appetere. See Houbigant. Or from its Hiphil form השיק redundare : mine abundance. All my sustenance. Chald. Whatever I require or want. ו. Ar. Syr.

6. — her way.—Read דרכה with ו. Ar. and Houbigant. “הרבה her ways, so Syr.” Horsley.

— with thorns.—See Prov. xv. 19, and the note on Mic. vii. 4.

— her enclosure.—גדרה, the ה being understood as a pronoun.

“A stone fence.” גדר is properly maceria. A low wall of loose stones, laid one upon another, without any cement or mortar. Such enclosures are very common at this day in Gloucestershire, and other parts of this island, where quarries of the stone, fit for the purpose, abound. Horsley.

— shall not find.—This refers to the Assyrian captivity.

— her paths.—נתיבות are pathis worn by the feet, often passing and repassing upon the same line. I think that here the word signifies gaps in a bramble hedge, or stone fence, made by clambering over repeatedly at the same place. The text alludes to a double enclosure, an inner fence of loose stones, a bramble hedge on the outside : both damaged and broken in many places. The hedge is to be made ; the stone fence repaired ; the gaps in both closed ; and all made so firm and strong, that it will be impracticable to find any way out. This enclosure is an admirable image of

- 7 And she shall follow after her lovers, but shall not overtake them ;
 And she shall seek them, but shall not find them.
 Then shall she say :
 I will go || again to my former husband,
 For then was it better with me than now.
- 8 And she knew not
 That I gave unto her
 * Corn, and choice wine, and oil :
 And the silver which I multiplied unto her,
 And the gold, they offered unto Baal.
- 9 Therefore will I turn, and take away
 My corn in its time, and my choice wine in its season :
 And I will take away my wool and my flax,
 That it may not cover her nakedness.

|| Heb. and return. * Heb. The corn, and the choice wine, and the oil.

national difficulty and distress, from which no human policy, or force, can extricate. Horsley.

7. — follow after.—in her mind. For some time she shall remain addicted to her Egyptian and Syrian idols, and to all her former idolatrous and immoral practices: but without carrying her evil wishes into execution.

8. — choice wine.—So called because יין possesses, or inebriates. It was the first expressed juice of the grapes, or that which ran off of itself, from the weight of the clusters laid on each other. See Cast. lex.

. — they offered.—"Confer 2 Chron. xxiv. 7." Secker. ó. Ar. read עשה or עשהה: She offered, or consecrated: but the number may be changed, as it often is.

—Baal.—A name which, according to Servius, the Tyrians gave both to Saturn and to the Sun. Boch. Geogr. 663. It signifies lord; and may be a general term for false gods and lords. See v. 13.

Dr. Wheeler renders :

" And that I multiplied to her the silver
 And the gold, which they wrought for Baal.
 Therefore will I again take away," &c.

חרב. Forte ובהם : sed aurum habent omnes interpretes. Secker,

9. — not cover.—I read with ó. Arab. and Houbigant מכסות,

I think this ninth verse speaks of calamities already begun, and the

- 10 And now I will disclose her vileness in the sight of her lovers ;
And none shall deliver her out of mine hand.
- 11 And I will cause all her joy to cease ;
Her feast, her new-moon, and her sabbath, and all her solemn assemblies.
- 12 And I will destroy her vine and her fig-tree ;
Of which she said, These are mine hire
Which my lovers have given me :
And I will make them † a forest :
And the beasts of the field shall eat them.
- 13 And I will visit upon her the days of Baalim,
Wherein she burnt incense unto them ;
And decked herself with her ‡ ear-rings, and her § jewels,
And went after her lovers,
And forgot me ; saith Jehovah.
- 14 Notwithstanding, behold, I will allure her,

† Heb. for a forest,

‡ Heb. ear-ring.

§ Heb. jewel.

tenth describes the progress and increase of them. It appears from all the prophets, and particularly from Amos and Joel, that the beginning of judgment upon the refractory, rebellious people was in unfruitful seasons and noxious vermin, producing a failure of the crops, dearth, murrain of the cattle, famine, and pestilential diseases. Horsley.

12.—her vine.—I cannot but think the words נֶפֶן and רִמֹּן are used here, by a synecdoche, for plantations of vines and fig-trees. Certainly it cannot be said of a single tree, that it is laid waste or made a forest. Horsley.

—mine hire.—Israel attributed her fruitful seasons to her false gods.

“My pay,” אָחָה. The fee of prostitution. Compare ix. 1 : “her necklace.” Horsley.

13. — Baalim.—There were different idols worshipped under the name of Baal : as Baal-berith, Baal-zebul, Baal-peor.

—ear-rings.—An ornament either for the ear or nose. The latter was worn in the left nostril. See the figure of the Ganges in Dow’s History of Indostan, V. i. p. lxxvii. 4to.

—jewels.—The original word is from חָלָי Arab. ornavit monilibus. See Cast. lex.

14. Notwithstanding.—See Noldius Sec. 6, and Pocock in loc.

—allure her.—Or persuade her. Though the word commonly signifies

And will lead her to the desert,
And will speak || kindly to her.

- 15 And from thence will I give her her vineyards,
And the valley of Achor for a door of hope :
And there shall she sing as in the days of her youth,
And as in the day when she came up from the land of Egypt.

|| Heb. to her heart.

to inveigle, to deceive ; it may be used, by an easy metaphor, in a good sense.

— to the desert.—From the distant countries, to which she was led captive, I will safely conduct her home through the desert.

15. — thence.—Sc. from the desert.

The English word thence renders either “from that place,” or “from that time,” or “in consequence of those things.” And the original word is used in all these various senses. No one of these senses would be inapplicable in this place : but the last, or the first, as figurative of the last, seems the most significant. God declares that through the wilderness lies the road to a rich fruitful country ; i. e. that the calamities of the dispersion, together with the soothing intimations of the gospel, by bringing the Jewish race to a right mind, will be the means of reinstating them in that wealth and prosperity, which God has ordained for them in their own land. Horsley.

— valley of Achor.—This most fertile valley lay to the north of Jericho, not far from Gilgal ; and the restoration of it was an earnest of future blessings. Compare Isa. lxxv. 9, 10. “The Vale of Achor, though a scene of trouble and distress, was a door of hope to the Israelites under Joshua ; for there, immediately after the execution of Achan, God said to Joshua, ‘Fear not, neither be thou dismayed’ (chap. viii, 1) ; and promised to support him against Ai, her king and her people. And from this time Joshua drove on his conquests with uninterrupted success. In like manner, the tribulations of the Jews, in their present dispersion, shall open to them the door of hope ;—‘and there’—i. e. in the wilderness, and in the vale of tribulation, under those circumstances of present difficulty mixed with cheering hope.” Horsley.

— sing.—Literally, answer in the song, sing alternately. See Præl. Heb. xix. p. 236. “Ἀποκριθῆσεται, Theod.” Secker.

— Egypt.—The perpetual allusion to the Exodus, to the circumstances of the march through the wilderness, and the first entrance into the Holy Land, plainly points the prophecy to a similar deliverance, by the imme-

- 16 And it shall come to pass in that day,
 Saith Jehovah, that thou shalt call me, * MINE HUSBAND :
 And thou shalt no more call me † MY BAAL, [or Lord.]
 17 For I will take the names of ‡ Baalim out of her mouth ;
 And they shall no more be mentioned by their name.
 18 And I will make for them a covenant, in that day,
 With the beasts of the field,
 And with the fowls of the heavens,
 And with the creeping things of the ground.
 And the bow, and the sword, and war,
 Will I break from the land :

* Heb. Ishi.

† Heb. Baali.

‡ Or, Baals.

diate power of God, under that leader of whom Moses was the type. Horsley.

16. — thou shalt call me,—Two MSS, read וְקָרָא לִי. The versions read וְקָרָא לִי, she shall call me, twice.

— My Baal.—The very name, though capable of a good sense, as it signifies husband, or lord, should be avoided by them ; because it was also the name of false gods. They should scrupulously avoid idolatry. And this was the fact immediately after their return from Babylon ; and it has continued to this day. “ Ishi, My Husband, is an appellation of love ; Baali, My Lord, of subjection and fear. ‘ God hath not given us the spirit of fear, but of power and of love, and of a sound mind,’ 2 Tim. i. 7. See Jer. xxiii. 27.” Horsley.

17. — be mentioned.—It is in vain to look for a purity of religious worship, answerable to this prophecy, among the Jews returned from the Babylonian captivity. This part of the prophecy, with all the rest, will receive its accomplishment in the converted race in the latter days. Horsley.

18. — a covenant.—Sc. of security from the evils which, in the days of my vengeance, arose from these causes. “ This covenant with the beasts of the field, the fowls of the heaven, and the reptiles of the earth, is the final conversion of the most ignorant and vicious of the heathen to the true faith. The effect of which must be, that they will all live in peace and friendship with the re-established nation of the Jews.” Horsley.

— and war.—“ Armour,” מִלְחָמָה. I think the word is used here for every accoutrement of battle, all offensive weapons and defensive armour. Horsley.

— Will I break.—The Hebrews often use a verb which is applicable to

And I will make them to lie down in safety.

19 And I will betroth thee unto me for ever :

Yea, I will betroth thee unto me in justice, and in righteousness ;

And in kindness, and in tender love :

20 Yea, I will betroth thee unto me in § faithfulness ;

And thou shalt know Jehovah.

21 And it shall come to pass in that day,

I will hear, saith Jehovah,

I will hear the heavens ;

And they shall hear the earth ;

22 And the earth shall hear the corn,

§ Or, truth.

some of the substantives placed after it, but not to all. See Mal. iii. 5. Mic vi. 15. Zeph. i. 17. So Homer:

“ Εδουσι τε πιονα μηλα, Οινον τ’ εξατον μελιηδεα.”

“Conveniret melius אשבת cum ילחמה. Confer Ps. xlv. 10.” Secker.

19. — And in kindness.—Not only allotting what is just and right, but bestowing what is kind and affectionate. “A noun substantive after the verb ארש with ב prefixed, denotes the dowry, or that which the man gives to obtain his spouse of her parents. Christ gave for the espousal of the Church his bride, צדק, his own justice ; נישפ, his perfect obedience to the law ; חסד, exuberant kindness ; רחמים, tender love ; אמינה, faithfulness, steady adherence to his part in the covenant between the Holy Three.” Horsley.

20. — in faithfulness.—There shall subsist an inviolable fidelity.

— know.—Experience the exuberant goodness of Jehovah.

21. — I will hear the heavens.—When they ask, as it were, to send their rain on the earth.

— the earth.—When it supplicates, as it were, for rain.

22. — the corn, &c.—When they wish, as it were, to supply the wants of man.

— Jezreel.—All nature shall hear, and minister to the people whom God shall plant in their own land.

There is an implication in this passage, that the Israelites had lately experienced unfruitful seasons ; as Amos had foretold, ch. i. 2. iv. 7—9. vi. 12.

And the choice wine, and the oil ;
 And they shall hear Jezreel.
 23 And I will || plant her unto me in the land ;

|| Or, sow.

The metaphors in this and the preceding verse are strong ; but not without parallel ones in the best writers of antiquity. Euripides has “ Εργα μὲν ομβροῦ γαῖα.”

And

“ Εργα δ’ ὁ σέμνος οὐρανός, πληρουμένος Ομβροῦ, πέσειν εἰς γαῖαν.”

Quoted by Grot. in loc.

Tibullus thus addresses the Nile :

“ Te propter nullos tellus tua postulat imbres ;
 Arida nec pluvio supplicat herba Jovi.”

El. I. vii. Quoted by Lively in loc.

And Virgil has,

“ Neque audit currus habenas.” Georg. I.

“ And it shall be in that day, I will perform my part, saith Jehovah. I will perform my part upon the heavens ; and they shall perform their part upon the earth ; and the earth shall perform her part upon the corn, and the wine, and the oil ; and they shall perform their part for the JEZRAEL [the seed of God].” The primary and most proper meaning of the verb עָמַד I take to be “ to re-act :” but more largely it predicates reciprocal, correspondent, or correlate action. Thus it signifies the proper action of one thing upon another, according to established physical sympathies in the material world ; or, among intelligent beings, according to the rule of moral order. And in this passage it is applied, first, to the action of God himself upon the powers of nature ; then, to the subordinate action of the parts of nature upon one another ; and, last of all, to the subservience of the elements and their physical productions to the benefit of man ; and ultimately, by the direction of God’s overruling providence, to the exclusive benefit of the godly. In short, it expresses generally one agent performing its proper part upon another. And to this general notion all the particular senses of the word are reducible. Horsley.

23. — will plant.—The original word alludes to, and explains, the word Jezreel as used ch. i. 11, and here in the foregoing verse. “ The myriads of the natural Israel, converted by the preaching of the apostles, were the first seed of the universal church. And there is reason to

And I will have mercy on * HER-WHO-HAD-NOT-OBTAINED-MERCY ;

And I will say to them who were † NOT-MY-PEOPLE,
Thou ‡ art MY-PEOPLE ;

And § they shall say, Thou art MY GOD.

CHAPTER III.

1 MOREOVER Jehovah said unto me :

Go again, love a woman,
Beloved by another, and an adulteress,
According to the love of Jehovah towards the sons of Israel:

* Heb. Lo-ruhamah.

† Heb. Lo-ammi.

‡ Heb. Ammi.

§ He.

believe, that the restoration of the converted Jews will be the occasion and means of a prodigious influx of new converts from the Gentiles in the latter ages, Rom. xi. 12, 15. Thus the Jezraël of the natural Israel from the first have been, and to the last will prove, a seed sown of God for himself in the earth." Horsley.

CHAP. III. 1. — Go again.—It may well be supposed that this injunction was given after the death of Hosea's former wife.

— a woman.—A wife. Dr. Wheeler.

— Beloved by another.—A lover of evil, ó. Ar. Syr. See Gen. xxv. 28. Or, One that loveth another. Or, according to the present pointing, and sixteen or seventeen MSS. which read אהובת, and Vulg., Beloved by another. The attachment of the Israelites to their idols is referred to.

"Addicted to wickedness." I adopt the rendering of the Seventy and Syr., which nothing opposes but the Masoretic pointing. Horsley.

— adulteress—In the spiritual sense of forsaking God.

— according to the love.—God's love to his people is here compared to the love of a husband towards his wife. St. Paul has the same comparison with respect to the love of Christ towards his church, Eph. v. 31, 32.

"After the manner of Jehovah's love for the children of Israel, although they look to other gods, and are addicted to goblets of wine." Children of Israel and House of Israel are two distinct expressions

And yet They turn away to other gods,
And love flagons of * wine :

- 2 And I bought her unto me for fifteen pieces of silver, and 3 an homer of barley, and an half-homer of barley. And I said unto her :

* Heb. grapes.

"The House of Israel," and sometimes "Israel," by itself, is a particular appellation of the ten tribes, as a distinct kingdom from Judah. But "the Children of Israel" is a general appellation for the whole race of the Israelites, comprehending both kingdoms. Horsley.

— towards.—See אֶת Nold. Sec. 8.

— flagons of wine.—To drink wine in the temples of their idols, Amos. ii. 8. Judg. ix. 27. Grapes are used for wine in the following places :

"Poculaque inventis Acheloïa miscuit uvis." Virg. Georg. I.

"Prælo domitam Caleno

Tu bibes uvam."

Hor. Od. I. xx.

"Calcatamque tenet bellis socialibus uvam."

Juv. Sat. V. See Lively in loc.

Others think that the words should be rendered, cakes of dried grapes. See 6. Pocock in loc. and Jer. vii. 18. xlv. 19.

2. — I bought—That is, according to the ancient custom, I paid her dower, Gen. xxxiv. 12 1 Sam. xviii. 25. Iliad II. 178, 190, X. 473.

"I owned her," נָאֵכָרָהּ, from the root נָכַר. See Parkhurst under נָכַר. This was not a payment, in the shape of a dowry ; for the woman was his property, if he thought fit to claim her, by virtue of the marriage already had ; but it was a present supply of her necessary wants, by which he acknowledged her as his wife, and engaged to furnish her with alimony, not ample indeed, but suitable to the recluse life, which he prescribed to her. Calvin observes, that the parsimonious gift, a sum of money which was but half the price of a female slave, and a pittance of black barley bread, typified the hard fare which the Israelites were to expect at the hand of God, in their state of exile. Horsley.

— an homer.—A measure of more than eight bushels.

— and an half-homer of barley.—6. Ar. Symm. Theod. render, and a vessel of wine. The Greek ἀνακταστος seems derived from לָתַךְ by a transposition of letters. And Houbigant reads חֵרִישׁ, choice wine, for שְׁעִירִים. But שְׁעִירִים new wine more resembles the last letters in שְׁעִירִים.

It was observed by Sir J. Chardin in the east, that, in the contracts for Thou shalt abide with me many days :

Thou shalt not commit fornication, and thou shalt not be
for another man :

So will I also be for thee.

4 For the sons of Israel shall abide many days

Without a king, and without a prince ;

And without sacrifice, and without a statue ;

And without an ephod, and without teraphim.

5 Afterwards shall the sons of Israel return, temporary wives, there is always the formality of a measure of corn mentioned over and above the stipulated sum of money. Harmer ii. 513.

3. — Thou shalt abide.—After the ceremony of betrothing, thou shalt continue in my house many days, and shalt show fidelity to me : and then I will become thy husband.

4 For the sons.—Thus the house of Israel shall continue many days in their state of captivity ; without a king, as thou without a husband ; without the means of worshipping me according to the rites of their law ; and yet refraining from idolatry, as thou from unfaithfulness to thy betrothed husband : but, v. 5, shall afterwards observe allegiance to their God, and have an eminent king set over them, in their own land.

The prophets and the people were accustomed to impart and to receive this kind of emblematical instruction.

— many days.—Many years. Dr. Wheeler.

— a statue.—A standing image, or pillar, erected by themselves. They were forbidden to erect such, that occasions to idolatry might not be administered, Lev. xxvi. 1. Observe that the versions read גִּזְבוֹחַ, an altar.

— ephod.—A part of the highpriest's ornaments.

— teraphim.—In Syr. ܬܪܦܝܡ signifies to inquire, and in Arab. to abound with the goods of life. Teraphim may therefore denote images to inquire of, or to bestow good things. Spencer thinks the word equivalent to seraphim, a celestial order ; by the usual substitution of ת for ש in the eastern tongues. See p. 952, &c. Taylor observes from 1 Sam. xix. 13, 16, that they were of the human form, which passage equally proves that they might resemble angels ; the wings being concealed, and the face only appearing. However, my opinion is that teraphim were objects of idolatrous worship. And such, in their state of captivity, the Israelites would not harbour.

“ An ephod seems to have been a garment like a cloak without sleeves, covering the body as low as the pit of the stomach before, and as low as the shoulder-blades behind. It seems to have taken its name from the strait-

And shall seek Jehovah their God,

---

ness of its collar, and the manner in which it was fastened about the person. The ephod of the highpriest was of costly materials, and the richest embroidery; and it made a very principal part of the robes of office. But something of a similar shape, and of the same name, but made of plain linen, was worn by the inferior priests, and occasionally, at least, by other persons. But it appears also, that idolaters, at least the idolatrous Israelites, sometimes dressed up the images of the deities they worshipped, in a gorgeous ephod, resembling that of the highpriest, and made, perhaps, in imitation of it. And this was so principal and so sacred a part of the idol's robes, that the word was sometimes used as a name for the idol itself. The ephod therefore appears to have been a principal ornament both of the true and of the false worship. And when the word is used in the figurative language of prophecy, as it is in this passage, to express in general the external grandeur of public institutions, it is in itself of ambiguous import, and its connections in the context must determine, whether it refers to the approved forms of a pure service or to idolatry. That it refers to the latter in the text, is evident from the connection with statues mentioned next before, and teraphim next after the ephod. For both these will be found to be produced here, as principal articles of the furniture of idolatry."

"We find the teraphim among the faithful, in the patriarchal ages, and among idolaters afterwards. For Laban, who was a worshipper of Jehovah, had his teraphim, and Nebuchadnezzar had his. They seem to have been images made in some resemblance of man. The teraphim of idolaters were probably corrupt imitations of those of the true worshippers; for the ancient idolatry was in every thing a mimicry and misapplication of the patriarchal symbols. The teraphim of idolaters were magical images, used for the purposes of divination; but the patriarchal teraphim were probably emblematical figures, like the cherubim; like those, I mean, of the simpler sort, which were seen in the ornaments of the more open parts of the tabernacle and of the temple. The teraphim I take to have been figures of the like mystic import, but of materials less costly, of coarser work, and certainly upon a smaller scale. I imagine they were used as most sacred ornaments of consecrated chapels, or oratories in private houses. However innocent the use of them might have been in the patriarchal ages, it is certain that in process of time they were so much abused to superstitious purposes, that the use of them was absolutely forbidden to God's people: and long before the time of the prophet Hosea they were considered as a part of the worst rubbish of idolatry, which it became the duty of the faithful to destroy. Hence, I cannot but conclude, that the teraphim, in the text of Hosea, are to be understood of nothing but implements of idolatrous rites, images consecrated to the purposes of magic and divination."

And David their king ;

" I come now to the statue, the first word of the three, which will require no long discussion. This, like the teraphim, had been in use among the true worshippers in early ages, but was so much abused before the giving of the law, that it was absolutely prohibited by Moses. A statue, נִצָּבָה, signifies any thing, more especially of stone, erected or set up as a monument or memorial ; but particularly as a religious monument. That consecrated pillars of stone were in use among the patriarchs, we learn from the history of Jacob. Idolaters, instead of simple pillars, set up images carved in the human or other form, to represent the object of their worship. This abuse was certainly ancient, and gave occasion to the strict prohibition of the Mosaic law. If I may offer a conjecture concerning the difference between these idolatrous statues and teraphim, I would say, that the statues were of large dimensions, set up in public, as objects of popular adoration ; the teraphim were of a smaller size, and for different purposes, kept in the most sacred recesses of temples or consecrated chapels, for magical rites, and rarely, if ever, exposed to public view." Horsley.

5. — David.—Some suppose Zerubbabel to be meant ; and some, the Messiah. But it seems to me that the prophecy remains to be accomplished : and that, on the future return of God's people, an illustrious king of this name and stock will reign over Israel, and transmit the kingdom to his descendants for ever. Compare Jer. xxx. 9. Ezek. xxxiv. 23, 24, xxxvii. 24, 25.

At my request Mr. Woide furnished the following extract from Archbishop Secker's dissertation on David promised in the prophets, which is lodged among his Grace's manuscripts in Lambeth library. The Archbishop's own words are distinguished by inverted commas.

Passages, in which David is promised, Jer. xxx. 9. Ezek. xxxiv. 23. xxxvii. 22, 24, 25. Hos. iii. 5. Doth it mean a particular person called David, or a succession of princes of the house of David ? That nations and tribes are called by the name of the person from whom they descended, is well known. Jacob or Israel (Isaac, Amos vii. 9), Judah, Ephraim, &c. Rachel, Jer. xxxi. 15. Particular families are called by a patronymic name derived from the head of the family, Gen. xxxiv. 7, Israel. Josh. vi. 25, Rachab. Josh. vii. 25, Achan. 2 Kings x. 1, Achab. Amos vii. 9, Jeroboam. Jer. xxix. 32, Schemajah.

Direct instances, where David signifies David's family, 1 Chron. xxviii. 4. 1 Kings xii. 16. 2 Chron. x. 16. " Hos. iii. 5, is by at least 170 years, the first of these passages, where Israel means the ten tribes : for it is distinguished from Judah i. 6, 7, 11, and iv. 15, and it is foretold, that they shall continue many days without a king, and prince, and a sacrifice, and image, and ephod and teraphim, which last is thought by some to mean idols; by others Urim and Thummin: and if it means the latter, the Israelites, who returned under Cyrus, probably forsook idols in their captivity; and we know not that any Israelites are idolaters now. After this they shall seek the Lord their God [they may have been negligent in religion, though not idolaters] and David their king, i. e. that family to rule them, of whom they said, we have no part in David; see to thine own house, David, 1 Kings xii. 16: which agrees with Hos. i. 11, that Judah and Israel should appoint themselves one head. So that this text, which is the leading one upon this subject, suits well with David, being understood of the family of David, Jer. xxx. 9. Ezek. xxxiv. 23, 24. xxxvii. 24, 25."

And shall || fear Jehovah, and his goodness, in the latter days,

|| Or, reverence.

Besides these texts, which promise David shall be their king, there are some, which mention in what state the house of David was to be in times then future, which ought to be considered, Jer. xxxiii. 15—26. Zech. xii. 7—14, and xiii. 1, of which see the notes," Ps. lxxxix. 19—45.

"But a farther inquiry is, whether at least the name David cannot be meant of a single descendant of David, like him, and presignified by him."

"Now, there is no doubt but it may, if that person at his appearance were commonly known in the world by the name David: and without being called so in common speech, Jerusalem is called in prophetic speech Sodom and Gomorrah, Isa. i. 10. But I recollect no other instance of this in the Old Testament, nor any instance of a person called by the name of another there, on account of likeness, unless it be Elias,* the great priest, who shall be sent to the captivity of Israel in the end of the days. And Pocock mentions some Rabbins, who think Elias in person is not meant here; nor do I recollect, that any single person is called by the name of another, on account of his descending from him, unless it be thought, that Rechoboam is called David, in the above cited places of Kings and Chronicles."

—fear.—See Jer. xxxiii. 9. Isa. lx. 5, and Bishop Lowth's note. אל is sometimes transitive, like את and לו. See Nold. "And adore,"—פחדו אל. The construction of פחד, governing its object by the preposition אל, I take to be singular. I apprehend, that when a verb, expressing any affection of the mind, governs its object by this preposition, that construction expresses the motion or effort of the mind, so affected, towards that object. The * Malachi iv. 5, of whom Jonathan, Exod. vi. 13, says, that Phineas is Elias.

CHAPTER IV.

- 1 HEAR the word of Jehovah, O ye sons of Israel :
 For Jehovah hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land :
 For there is no truth nor mercy,
 Nor knowledge of God in the land.
- 2 In swearing, and lying, and killing,
 And stealing, and committing adultery, have they * broken forth ;
 And blood reacheth unto blood.
- 3 Therefore shall the land mourn,
 And every one that dwelleth therein shall languish ;
 Together with the beasts of the field, and the fowls of the heavens :
 Yea, the fishes of the sea also shall be taken away.

* Or, burst.

---

force of this construction here is to denote, that the converted Israelites will make Jehovah and his goodness, the object of religious awe and admiration. The phrase is well paraphrased by the Seventy, και εκστησονται επι τω κυριω και επι τοις αγαθοις αυτου. The English word adore expresses the motion of the mind towards Jehovah and his goodness." Horsley.

Because of Jehovah—because of his goodness. Dr. Wheeler.

CHAP. IV. 2. — broken forth.—The word is sometimes applied to the bursting forth of waters, 2 Sam. v. 20; and V. has inundaverunt. "A metaphor taken from rivers inundating the banks, and bearing down every obstacle to the impetuosity of the waters." Horsley.

— reacheth unto.—There are murders committed without intermission : one overtaketh another.

3. — the land mourn.—See also v. 10. ch. vii. 14. This may refer to the drought foretold by Amos ch. i. 2, or to the locusts mentioned ch. v. 7.

— of the field.—After this, the words ורמש הארמה, and the creeping things of the ground, are added in δ. Arab. but are wanting in V. Syr. Chald. and in the Complutensian edition of δ., says Bochart. Hier. p. 3. See ch. ii. 18.

— taken away.—See אספ, Gen. xxx. 23. Zeph. i. 2, 3.

- 4 Yet no man contendeth,
And no man reproveth :
And as is the provocation of the priest, so is that of my people.

The cattle and the fowls [and even the creeping things of the earth] shall be affected by the scarcity with which God will visit the land : and he will so dispose second causes, that even the fishes of the sea shall not supply the wants of his rebellious people. See on Zeph. i. 3.

4. — no man contendeth.—This is a natural rendering, and gives a very usual sense to the Hebrew future. Pocock in loc. quotes a manuscript Arabic version which considers the words as declarative, and translates thus : “And particularly there is none that argueth, nor doth any man admonish.” See also Syr.

The Arabic of the polyglot reads אִךְ for אִךְ, and furnishes an animated translation :

“How doth no man contend,
And no man reprove !”

— And as.—The English translators render, “For thy people are as they that strive with the priest :” a conduct contrary to Dent. xvii. 12. But Houbigant objects, that it could not be a crime to contend with idolatrous priests : and translates, “Nam populus tuus sequitur rebellionem sacerdotum :” and, word for word, “Nam populus tuus ut rebelliones sacerdotis.” But the word מְרִיבִים does not occur as a plural substantive for rebellions, strivings, contentions. And thy people is abrupt.

ó. Arab. read my people, agreeably to v. 6, 8, 12. And the Berlin MS. n. 150, ascribed by the learned Bruns to the thirteenth century, reads כְּמִרְיָבוֹת; as the contention, striving, provocation. Thus the sense will be, My people are as dead to all sense of duty as their idolatrous priests, whose conduct in departing from Jehovah is peculiarly aggravated.

An elegant reading would arise from transposing the letters in the first word ;

וְכַעַם כְּמִרְיָבֹת כֹּהֵן :

“And as is the people, so is the provocation of the priest.” Or, by a different punctuation of מְרִיבִי we may render,

“And my people is as the priest who contendeth with me.” See Job x. 2, and חורפי, Ps. cxix. 42. שלחי, 2 Sam. xxiv. 13. Buxt. Thes. Gramm. 512.

The guilt of the people, instructed and forewarned by my prophets, is as detestable and aggravated as that of the priest. I have since found that this is in part the rendering of Moerlius :

“Et populus tuus (est) sicut litigans mecum sacerdos.”

- 5 But thou shalt fall in the day :
 And the prophet also shall fall with thee in the night :
 And I will cut off thy mother-city.
- 6 My people are cut off for want of knowledge.
 Because thou hast rejected knowledge,

“ By no means let any one expostulate, nor let any one reprove ; for thy people are exactly like those who will contend with the priest.” This is the natural rendering of the Hebrew words, and the sense agrees well with the context. To contend with the priest, the authorised interpreter of the law, and the typical intercessor between God and the people, was the highest species of contumacy and disobedience, and by the law was a capital offence. See Deut. xvii. 12. Horsley.

5. — thou shalt fall.—The last sentence was addressed to the prophet, “thy people, O prophet.” This to the people themselves: “Thou, O stubborn people.” This sudden conversion of the speech of the principal speaker from one to another of the different persons of the scene is so frequent in the prophets that it can create no difficulty. Horsley.

— in the day.—When it is least probable. Thou shalt fall, when thou thinkest thy state secure and prosperous. Comp. Jer. xxiii. 12. Deut. xxviii. 29.

— the prophet.—The false prophet.

— in the night.—His revelations, to which he pretends in the night, shall be delusive and dangerous ones. Comp. Mic. iii. 6. See Pocock.

— thy mother-city.—So Corn. a Lapide, Cappellus. and Houbigant. Pocock also approves of this sense. See 2 Sam. xx. 19. Samaria is meant. Moerlius leads us to conjecture עַמִּי thy people. Chald. has thy assembly. “The last sentence was addressed to the prophet—‘thy people, O prophet.’ This is to the people themselves: ‘Thou, O stubborn people.’ Jerusalem is intended, not Samaria. For Samaria was the metropolis of the kingdom of the ten tribes, not of the whole nation, the children of Israel in general.” Horsley.

6. — For want of knowledge.—The Hebrew verb יָרַע, and the nouns דַּע and דַּעַת are applied not only to every endowment and acquisition of the mind, which falls under the general notion of knowledge of any kind, but to that sort of conduct also, which may be referred to knowledge and understanding as its proximate cause or motive. And they more frequently answer to the Greek words συνιέναι and συνεσις, than to επιστάσθαι and επιστημη; signifying rather the voluntary application of the mind to the consideration of the practical good, than the mere possession of speculative knowledge. Horsley.

— hast rejected.—Since the person threatened was to be rejected

I will also reject thee from being a priest unto me :
 And because thou hast forgotten the law of thy God,
 I will also forget thy sons.

7 Even according to their multitude † have they sinned
 against me,

I will change their glory into shame.

8 They eat the sin-offerings of my people ;
 And they ‡ set their heart on their iniquity.

9 And it shall be, as with the people so with the priest,
 And I will visit upon them their ways,
 And their doings will I recompense unto them.

† Heb. so have.

‡ Heb. lift up their soul to.

from being a priest, he was a priest, at the time when he was threatened : otherwise he had not been a subject of rejection. The person threatened, therefore, must have been the head, for the time being, of the true Levitical priesthood, not of the intruded priesthood of Jeroboam. This is a proof, that the metropolis, threatened with excision, is Jerusalem, not Samaria ; and that the ten tribes exclusively are not the subject of this part of the prophecy. Horsley.

— I will reject.—Instead of the anomalous word ראמאסך, near one hundred MSS. or editions read ראמאסך.

7. — multitude.—Their defection is general. Their acts of idolatry are in proportion to their number. “ ‘ Were magnified, כרבו. ’ The word is applicable to increase in any way, either in size, numbers, power, or wealth, &c. See Drusius and Luther on the place. But as the priests were greatly magnified in dignity and power, and there is no reason to suppose, that they were multiplied by natural increase, in a greater proportion than the rest of the people, I think the thing intended here is the elevation of the order in civil rank and authority.” Horsley.

8. — the sin-offerings.—Of these they gladly partake, without discouraging the people from the sins which occasion them, Lev. vi. 26. One MS. reads חטאת with V. 6. Ar.

— their heart.—For the phrase of lifting up the soul, that is, setting the heart, see Deut. xxiv. 15. Jer. xxii. 27. V. 6. Ar. Syr. Chald. read נפשם : and this reading is confirmed by one edition, eight MSS. and perhaps one more. Two MSS. read so originally.

The priests are spoken of from “ Because, &c.” in v. 6.

9. — upon them.—עלי i. e. the people. As v. 12.

- 10 And they shall eat, but shall not be satisfied :
 They shall commit fornication, but shall not increase.
 For they have left off § giving heed unto Jehovah :

§ Heb. observing.

9. — giving heed.—Heb. observing. So Virg. Georg. iv. 210.

“ Præterea regem non sic Ægyptus, &c.

Observat.”

See Ps. xxxvii. 37. After referring to the versions, Secker adds, “ Vix puto עוב infinitivum cum ל regere ; vel hominem dici Deum, sed Dei mandata, servare.”

“ Because they have forsaken the JEHOVAH, to devote themselves to chambering and wine, and the intoxicating juice, which take possession of the heart.” With respect to Secker’s second point, it is certain that ירדה never once occurs as the object of the verb לשמר. The other difficulty seems insuperable. “ After a nice examination, I scruple not to assert, that the verb עוב never governs its immediate object, the person or thing forsaken, abandoned, or left off, with the prefix ל. It follows of necessity, that the order of construction cannot be that which our public translation demands. Namely, this, לשמר את ירדה כי עוב, For in this order, the sentence, לשמר את ירדה, is the object of the verb עוב, and connects with the verb by the prefix ל.”

“ The verb עוב always governs its immediate object without any prefix. But when a noun, following this verb, is connected with it by ל, the noun expresses either the person to whom, i. e. to whose possession, use, and advantage, or the thing in return for which, as a more desired object, or the end and purpose for which (the το ἐνεκα του), or the time for which, the dereliction is made, Ps. xlix. 11. xvi. 10. Is. xviii. 6. Mal. iv. 1. Josh. xxiv. 10. 2 Chron. xxxi. 31. Lam. v. 20. 1 Chron. xvi. 37.”

“ These eight texts are the only instances in the Bible, in which a noun, or what stands as a noun, following the verb עוב is connected with the verb by ל.”

“ I have therefore adopted a division of the Hebrew received by some learned Rabbins, and confirmed by a much higher authority than that of the Syriac version, and not contradicted by the Seventy. I make a stop equivalent to a comma at עוב, and expunging the soph-pasuk at לשמר, I take that word in immediate connection with the following words ; so that וית, ויין, and תירש, are accusatives after the infinitive שמר, and I suppose an ellipsis of the pronoun אשר rehearsing the nouns וית, ויין, תירש (than which ellipsis nothing is more frequent in the prophetic style), as the nominative of the verb יקח. Thus, according to this division, “ to give attention to chamberings, &c.” is either the end to which, or the object of preferable choice, for which they forsake Jehovah ; and, as such, is connected with the verb עוב by ל.” Horsley.

- 11 Fornication, and wine, and choice wine, take away their heart.
- 12 My people || ask counsel at their stocks,
And their staff declareth unto them.
For the spirit of fornications hath caused them to err ;
And they have committed fornication, and have revolted from under their God.
- 13 On the tops of the mountains they sacrifice,
And on the hills they burn incense ;
Under the oak, and the poplar, and the green-oak,
Because the shade thereof is good.
Therefore your daughters commit fornication,

|| Or, inquire,

11. — take away.—לקח has this signification, Ezek. xxiii. 26, 29, xxxviii. 13. Joel iii. 5. It also signifies to win, or allure, Prov. vi. 25. Syr. renders by a word signifying portavit, sustulit, abstulit, præcidit : and also supplies the pronoun their.

— heart.—Understanding.

12. — stocks.—Idols of wood. As Jer. ii. 27. Hab. ii. 19.

— staff.—This refers to the divination by rods, or staves, which was anciently practised in the east. On one staff was written, God bids ; on the other, God forbids. See Pocock.

“Let their staff, therefore, give them answers.” יגיד לו נגר as a verb in Hiphil is “to tell, relate, make publicly or manifestly known,” by words, or other signs and tokens, of certain interpretation ; also “to foretell.” And in this sense it is almost an appropriate word of oracular prediction ; and so it is used here. Horsley.

— from their God.—The Hebrew phrase occurs more at length, 2 Chron. xxi. 8. The Edomites revolted from under the hand [power, dominion] of Judah.

13. — mountains.—This was the custom of the nations, Deut. xii. 2.

— oak.—The original word, says Celsius, is from איל, robur : which is the Latin word for the oak, on account of its hardness and strength.

— poplar.—Properly the white poplar, from לבן, white.

— green-oak —Or ilex. See Bishop Lowth on Isa. i. 29.

— Therefore your daughters.—“Since thus it is, let your daughters play the wanton, and your daughters-in-law commit adultery.” This I take to be the force of על כן. The phrase is more emphatical than “therefore,” in the English language, or than the simple copula in the Hebrew.

And your wives commit adultery.

- 14 Shall not I * visit your daughters because they commit fornication?

And your wives, because they commit adultery?

Because they separate themselves with harlots,

And sacrifice with strumpets?

Therefore the people, which understandeth not, shall fall.

- 15 If thou commit fornication, O Israel,

Yet let not Judah offend.

And come ye not unto Gilgal,

Neither go ye up to Bethaven:

And swear ye not, Jehovah liveth.

- 16 For, as a backsliding heifer, Israel slideth back.

* Or, punish. Heb. visit upon.

It refers distinctly to what has gone before concerning the manners of the people, as the ground of God's dealing with them in the manner declared in what follows. Horsley.

14. Shall not I visit.—See לא for לא, Nold. Sec. 3. “I will not visit upon your daughters, when they play the wanton; nor upon your daughters-in-law, when they commit adultery; because themselves separate themselves with harlots, and sacrifice with the women set apart to prostitution.” Horsley.

—separate themselves.—Unnaturally, from those with whom they ought to have united themselves. “פרד est animal ex iis parentibus natum, qui a naturali consorte separantur, ut cum alienis copulentur.” Boch. Hieroz. p. 231.

—strumpets.—Persons consecrated, as it were to flagitiousness.

—fall.—From the Arab. affligere terræ, conjicere in terram. Pass. concidit, prostratus fuit. See Schultens on Job x. 8, who renders the word, Cæcus et præceps ruit.

15. — Gilgal.—See on Amos iv 4.

— Bethaven.—Either a place in the neighbourhood of Bethel, Josh. vii. 2, or rather Bethel itself, ch. x. 5; here called, by way of derision and contempt, Bethaven, The house of iniquity, instead of Bethel, The house of God. Accordingly Chald. has Bethel here, and ch. x. 5.

— swear ye not.—Mixing the worship of idols with that of Jehovah. Zeph. i. 5. “As Jehovah liveth.” Dr. Wheeler.

16. — backsliding.—Untamed to the yoke, and therefore withdrawing from it. “Indocili jugum collo ferens.” Hor. “Truly Israel is rebel-

And now will Jehovah feed them as a lamb in a wide place.

17 Ephraim is joined unto idols:

18 Let him alone: he is gone after their wine:

lions, like an unruly heifer.” כפרה סררה סרר ישראל. I restore the rendering of the Bishop’s Bible and the English Geneva. It was changed into what we now read in the public translation, upon a supposition, that the actions of the restive beast, refusing the yoke, are literally expressed in the original by the word סררה, and that the disobedience of the Israelites is represented under the image of the like action; a notion which the apparent affinity of the roots סרר and סר might naturally suggest.—The fact, however, is, that the verb סרר, or the participle, is in no one passage in the Bible, except this, applied to a brute. It seems, therefore, at least doubtful, whether, in this passage of Hosea, the figure is not rather in the application of the participle to the heifer, than of the verb to Israel.”—It is worthy of remark, that in many passages of Scripture besides this, we read, in our English Bibles, of “backsliding Israel,” or of “Israel’s backslidings.” But the Hebrew word, in all these other passages, is very different, and from quite another root. And that other word, in the sense of “backsliding,” is never, any more than this word סרר, applied to a brute. Horsley.

—will—feed.—As a lamb exposed to wolves, and without a shepherd, 1 Kings xxii. 17. Or, And now Jehovah feedeth them as a lamb in a large pasture. He giveth them plenty, yet they rebel, Isa. xxx. 23. “יָעֹם, sic ὁ. Syr. Vulg. Putaret quis forte legendum יָעֹם, errare sinet eos. Conf. Jer. liii. 6.” Secker. This word נִרְחֵב is never used but in a good sense; and, for the most part, figuratively, as an image of a condition of liberty, ease, and abundance. I agree, therefore, with Grotius, that this is said with bitter irony. “Est hic χλευασμος; irrisio acerba; ex ambiguo. Latè pascere amant agni: Deus Israellem disperget per totum Assyriorum regnum.”

17. Ephraim.—The principal tribe is put for the kingdom of Israel.

—idols.—The original word is expressive of the sorrow and pain which idols caused to their worshippers. See Tayl: Conc. “A companion of idols. חֶבֶר עֲצָבִים. See Ps. cxix. 63. Isa. i. 23.” Horsley.

18. Let him alone.—Leave him undisturbed in his idolatrous course. He is irreclaimable.

—he is gone after their wine.—סר refers to the beginning of v. 16. He is gone after the wine, or banquets, of idols. See v. 11. and ch. iii. 1. Symmachus has ἐπεκλινε συμποσιον.

MS. 93, which Walton thought a very ancient one, and which Dr. Kennicott characterizes as containing very many various lections, and those not

Her rulers have committed fornication continually; they have loved shame;

19 A wind shall distress her in her borders:
And they shall be ashamed for their altars.

rarely excellent, and thinks that it was probably written in the middle of the thirteenth century, reads סבאים in this place; as ó. and Arab. seem to have read; for Grotius thinks that they put Canaanites for Sabeans, one idolatrous nation for another. According to this various lection, we may translate, "He is gone after the drunkards."

"Leave him to himself. Their strong drink is vapid. Given up to lasciviousness, greedy of gifts (O shame!) are her great men." The verb סב, with an accusative after it, without a preposition or prefix, will not bear the sense of "going after," which some have given it in this place. I agree with the interpreters, who take the noun סבא as the nominative of the neutral verb, which makes the construction natural, and the sense most apposite. Horsley.

— Her rulers.—See Ps. xlvii. 9 or 10; where ó. renders Κραταιοι. The word may be the participle in Hiphil, from נָקַן to protect; and nine or ten MSS. have בְּנִייה. Protectores ejus, V. Magnates eorum, Chald. That Ephraim is sometimes feminine, see ch. v. 9.

— lored.—הבו is omitted in three MSS. and in ó. Ar. Syr. It is a repetition of the three last letters in the foregoing word; and if a mistake of this kind was made in an ancient MS. it was not erased, for fear of affecting the appearance of the copy. "Putarem vel expungendum הבו, vel legendum per reduplicationem אהבהבו." Secker.

Dathius proposes אהב אהבו: amando amaverunt: as, scortando scortati sunt.

"Greedy of gifts (Oh, shame!) are her great men" For a long time I thought myself original in this way of rendering; but I have the satisfaction to find, that the learned Drusius was before me in it. Horsley.

19. A wind.—The general idea seems to be, that destruction should come as a mighty wind, Prov. i. 27. Jer. iv. 11, 12, 13. Or, that a parching wind should cause a famine in their land. We may point צָר, angustans.

— in her borders.—See בְּנֶקֶד, Isa. xxiv. 16.

— for their altars.—The preposition בְּ is expressed by ó. Ar. Syr. Chald. It must be understood, if it has not been omitted by transcribers.

The sense, and true reading of this, and the foregoing verse, are very uncertain.

"The wind binds her up in its wings, and they shall be brought to shame because of their sacrifices." An admirable image of the condition of a people, torn by a conqueror from their native land, scattered in exile to the four quarters of the world, and living thenceforward without any

CHAPTER V.

- 1 HEAR ye this, O ye priests;
 And hearken, O house of Israel;
 And give ear, O house of the king.
 For * judgment is denounced against you.
 For ye have been a snare at Mizpah,
 And a spread-net upon Tabor.
- 2 And the revolvers have made deep the slaughter of victims:

* Heb. to you judgment.

---

settled residence of their own, liable to be moved about at the will of arbitrary masters, like a thing tied to the wings of the wind, obliged to go with the wind whichever way it set, but never suffered for a moment to lie still. Horsley.

CHAP. V. 1. — judgment.—The sense in the version is favoured by ὁ πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἐστὶ τὸ κρίμα: by Houbigant, Adest vobis iudicium; and by v. 2, 9.

— at Mizpah.—Probably both a mountain and a city of Gilead, Judges xi. 29. The word is derived from מצפּה, to watch, sc. from an eminence. If a city be meant, we may render to Mizpah: namely, by inducing her to acts of idolatry on the height where she was situated. See ch. iv. 13.

— Tabor.—A beautiful and fruitful mountain in the tribe of Zabulon. On these places ye have ensnared men into idolatry. The image is naturally suggested by the circumstance that hunters and fowlers frequented such places with their nets and snares.

2. — revolvers.—"The revolvers have made deep, i. e. great slaughter." As Isa. xxxi. 6. It may mean either of idolatrous sacrifices or men. Secker.

"Prickers have made a deep slaughter." Prickers, scouts on horseback, attendants on the chase. The priests and rulers are accused as the seducers of the people to apostacy and idolatry; not merely by their own ill example, but with premeditated design, under the image of hunters, deliberately spreading their nets and snares upon the mountains. And their agents and emissaries, in this nefarious project, are represented under the image of the prickers in this destructive chase. The toils and nets, are whatever in the external form of idolatry was calculated to captivate the minds of men; magnificent temples, stately altars, images richly adorned,

Therefore will I bring chastisement on them all.

I know Ephraim,

3 And Israel is not hidden from me.

For now Ephraim hath committed fornication,

Israel is polluted.

4 They will not † frame their doings

† Heb. give.

the gaiety of festivals, the pomp, and in many instances, even the horror of the public rites; all which were supported by the government at a vast expense. The deep slaughter which the pricklers made, is the killing of the souls of men. Horsley.

— have made deep.—Have multiplied their sacrifices. See Isa. xxxi. 6, and ch. ix. 9.

— the slaughter.—A substantive; as 2 Chron. xxx. 17, the · being omitted. Or, the infinitive mood, with the paragogic ה.

— chastisement.—I will be a chastisement to them, as they have been a net and a snare to others. “לכלם, ὁ, ὁ. בלם.” Secker.

3. — I know.—“I have known.” Horsley.

— hath committed fornication.—Houbigant observes that all the ancients read חונה. Two MSS. read חונתה, seortata est Ephraim, ch. iv. 18. See a parallel place, ch. vi. 10.

4. — frame.—Heb. give, as Eccl. i. 13.

“‘Their perverse habits will not permit them to return unto their God; for a spirit of wantonness is within them, and the Jehovah they have not known.’ I take כעללים as the nominative case to the verb ירחק, as it is taken by the Syr. From the root עלה, ‘to ascend, mount upwards, to go or come up,’ we form the reduplicate verb עלל, by dropping the final ה of the primary root, and doubling the middle radical.”

“From this verb עלל, which, as a verb is found only in Hithpaël, I derive our verbal כעללים. This noun is used only in the plural number. It denotes, therefore, something which is in its nature plural; and if it denotes actions of any sort, it must signify, not any individual act, but a set or system of actions; and because it must connect with the sense of the primary root עלה [with which the verb most evidently connects], it must express some set, or system of things, which naturally ascend, mount, get uppermost. Upon these grounds I am persuaded, that the word כעללים denotes the moral or immoral habits of a man, as things coming over him, growing up, and, in the vulgar phrase, ‘getting the upper hand.’”

“As the ascendancy of habit is the principal circumstance which the noun expresses, it is applicable to all habits possessing that ascendancy, good or bad. This indifference of the natural meaning of the word, ap-

To turn unto their God.

For a spirit of fornications is in the midst of them,
And Jehovah they have not known.

- 5 Therefore the pride of Israel shall be humbled to his face ;
And Israel and Ephraim shall fall in their iniquity :
Judah also shall fall with them.

- 6 With their flocks, and with their herds, shall they go pears evidently from the use of it, Prov. xx. 11. That evil is not necessarily implied in it, appears from the application of it, in two other places, to the works of God ; for the most part, however, it denotes evil habits."

"This interpretation of the word, בעלל, as rendering 'habits' is much confirmed by the ancient versions. In twenty-eight of the thirty-nine passages, in which the word is found, the Seventy render it επιτηδεύματα ; which is the word of the Greek language exactly rendering 'habits ;' and by the same word επιτηδεύματα it is rendered by Aquila, in four of the eleven passages, in which the Seventy give another word ; and in a fifth of those eleven by Theodotion."

" 'Habits,' therefore, is the true English rendering of the word ; for which, in some instances, 'manners,' or 'practices,' may be used. But some epithet will generally be wanted, in English, to express the ascendancy ; and in the case of evil habits, the malignant ascendancy, implied in the notion of the original word."

5. — pride of Israel.—"The excellency of Israel." גאון ישראל. The original word, גאון, which the public translation renders "pride," is the same which, in Amos viii. 7, is rendered "excellency." It is never used for pride, in a bad sense, and as an internal quality, though it has been taken in that sense in this passage, and in many others by our own translators and interpreters. But it expresses rather condition, or external appearance, than character ; great elevation in rank and power, brilliant prosperity, splendour and gaiety of ornamental dress ; majesty, pomp, stateliness ; any thing in condition which, in the degenerate mind, may engender pride ; any thing in external deportment, which may be a symptom of it ; and any thing grand and majestic in outward appearance, without any imputation of pride to the person to whom it belongs. The feminine גאיה, besides every thing to which גאון is applied, extends also to the moral, internal swellings of the heart, and renders the vice of "pride," which גאון never expresses. Horsley.

— shall be humbled.—See ענה, Ex. x. 3. Isa. xxxi. 4, and ó. Ar. Syr. Chald. This line is repeated ch. vii. 10, where V. agrees with the versions and Chald. and renders, not respondebit, as in the text before us, but humiliabitur.

"Shall answer." Horsley.

6. With their flocks.—They shall, at length, offer sacrifices to him in vain.

To seek Jehovah :

But they shall not find him : he hath withdrawn himself from them.

7 They have dealt treacherously against Jehovah ; for they have begotten strange children.

Now shall the locust devour their portions.

8 Blow ye the trumpet in Gibeah, and the cornet in Ramah :

Sound an alarm in Bethaven : The enemy cometh after thee, O Benjamin.

7. — strange.—Alienated from Jehovah, idolatrous ; “ Children of strange women ; forbidden, Deut. vii. 3 ; practised after the captivity, perhaps before, Isa. ii. 6.” Pocock. Seeker.

— the locust.—Houbigant reads רעהה יאכל החסל. “ Nunc igitur assumet rubigo [hereditatem ipsorum].” ó. render ηρυσσιβη, the word by which they translate חסל, 1 Kings viii. 37. Ps. lxxviii. 46. Joel i. 4. It is Bochart's sixth name for a locust ; from חסל to consume. Hier. p. ii 445. And the word קמל, in the Arabic version of this place, signifies a kind of locust. Or אכלם העש, “ the worm shall devour them with their portions,” v. 12. Job. iv. 19. “ Forte separandum מ a verbo יאכלם, ut formando nescio cui nomini inserviat.” Seeker.

“ Now shall a month devour them with their portions ;” a very short time shall complete their destruction ; with their portions, i. e. with their allotments. They shall be totally dispossessed of their country ; and the boundaries of the separate allotments of the several tribes shall be confounded and obliterated, and new partitions of the land into districts shall be made, from time to time, at the pleasure of the successive masters. The captivity of the ten tribes was completed soon after Hezekiah's attempted reformation, and the kingdom of Judah not long survived Josiah's. To these things I think “ the month ” alludes. The change of חרש into החסל, proposed by Houbigant, stands upon the single authority of the Seventy (if indeed, upon that,) unsupported by any MS., and contradicted by the Chald. Aquila, Symmachus, Theodotion, St. Jerome, and the Vulgate, who all represent the reading חרש. Horsley.

8. — Gibeah.—Gibeah, Ramah, and Bethaven [see on ch. iv. 15.], were situated in the tribe of Benjamin, Josh. xviii. 24, 25. Comp. Josh. vii. 2. xviii. 22.

— the cornet.—ó. read חצצרי, sound the cornet.

— after thee.—Or, “ Look behind thee.” See Pocock. This verse may very well be understood of the alarm given at the approach of locusts, Joel ii. 1.

- 9 Ephraim shall be † desolate in the day of rebuke.
Among the tribes of Israel I have made known a sure event.
- 10 The princes of Judah are become like those who remove the landmark:
I will pour out my wrath upon them like water.
- 11 Ephraim is oppressed, he is broken in judgment,
Because he willingly walked after vanity.
- 12 Therefore will I be as a moth to Ephraim,

† Heb. for a desolation.

9. — sure.—After נאמנה we must understand some such word as דברה. Bahrdt refers to Matth. xxi. 41. Παρα Κυριου εγενετο αυτη, και εσθη θαυμασθη κ. τ. λ. “A firm decree.” Dr. Wheeler.

“Rulers.” שרי. I prefer the word “rulers” to “princes,” by which our public translation here, and in most other places, renders the Hebrew word; because, in the modern acceptation of the word “princes,” royalty, or at least royal blood, is included in the notion of it. But these שרים were not connected by blood or marriage with the royal family; but the chief priests and elders, who composed the secular as well as the ecclesiastical magistracy of the country. Horsley.

10. — remove the landmark—A great crime, Deut. xxvii. 17. Jarchi and Abarbinel, as quoted by Pocock, interpret this of conforming to the idolatrous worship of Israel. They removed the boundaries between true religion and false, between right and wrong.

11. — oppressed—broken.—He is oppressed with a heavy weight of calamity; he is crushed in his judicial contest with me.

— willingly walked.—הלך may be the infinitive.

— vanity.—See ó. Ar. Syr. Chald. Houbigant, and others in Pol. Syn. who read שוא. Secker mentions this reading, and adds, “Notandum sequi.” But Vulg. reads צאח, or צא, excrementum, a remark which my learned friend Dr. Barrington, Bishop of Salisbury, made to me some time ago; and, agreeably to the translation of Vulg., idols are called גלילים, from גלל stercus; a name expressive of their detestable and polluting nature. See Tayl. Conc.

Professor Michaelis’s note from his Bibl. Orient. et Exeget. is: I pronounce צא. It should be צאח excrementum; but the radical aleph is frequently lost after a littera quiescens, according to the manner of the Syrians and Chaldeans. Communicated by Mr. Woide.

12. — as a moth.—See Job iv. 19. Ps. xxxix. 11. Isa. li. 8.

“A moth in the garment—a worm in the flesh.” Rabbi Tanchum, as he is quoted by Dr. Pocock upon this place, says, that עץ is a worm,

And as rottenness to the house of Judah.

- 13 And Ephraim saw his sickness ;
 And Judah, his wound :
 Then went Ephraim to the Assyrian,
 And sent to king Jareb :
 But he could not heal you ;

breeding in the clothes and eating them ; רֶקֶב, a worm, breeding in old rotten wood. But from the effect ascribed to it in the following verse, which is a sore, running with corruption ; I think the latter word must be understood of a worm, bred in the human body, and eating through the flesh. I have taken the liberty to add the words, “ in the garment,” “ in the flesh,” to mark the distinction of the species expressed by the two words, and to present the image of the original more adequately to the English reader.—“ His holes.” חֳלָיו, made by the fretting of the moth. I take the word as a noun, from חָלַל, to perforate, or make a hole of any sort.—“ His corrupted sore.” מִזְרֵי. The noun מִזְרֵי comes regularly from the root זָרַר, to compress or squeeze, and signifies something that wants squeezing or compressing ; and thus a purulent sore, which wants to have the matter squeezed out, or, perhaps, compressed with a bandage ; but the first notion I prefer. Horsley.

13. — Jareb.—See ch. x. 6. Either the name of an Assyrian king, or of an Assyrian city. On the latter supposition we must render, the king of Jareb. In both places ó. and Ar. read Jarim. For the history, see 2 Kings xvi. 7. “ Videtur יִרְיָה excidisse post רִישָׁלָה, quam vocem subaudiunt recentiorum nonnulli. Vid. Pocock. Nam aliquid facturum Judam verisimile erat, et fecisse patet ex v. 14 : et de utroque dicit Deus לָכֵן vos, ut vi. 4. If Jareb were the person's name, it should be רֶמֶלֶךְ ; and Jareb should be before, not after.” Secker.

According to Castellus, יִרְבִּי is a name of Egypt. In Abulfeda, Garbija is the name of one of the provinces of Egypt near the mouth of the Nile. Dr. Forsayeth.

“ The king, who takes up all quarrels,” יִרְבִּי, is no proper name either of man or place, but clearly a noun, from the verb יָרַב, put here in apposition with מֶלֶךְ, and characteristic of the king, in the manner expressed in my translation. Horsley.

“ When Ephraim perceives his holes, and Judah his corrupted sore, then Ephraim will betake him to the Assyrian, and send to the king, who takes up all quarrels.” I leave a space here, to show that something is wanting to be the nominative case of the verb “ send.” Perhaps “ Judah,” which, however, is not supplied either by MSS. or versions. Horsley.

- Nor did the wound depart from you.
- 14 Surely I will be as a lion to Ephraim,
And as a young lion to the house of Judah :
I, even I, will tear and will depart ;
I will take away, and none shall deliver.
- 15 I will depart, I will return unto my place,
Till they § be treated as guilty, and seek my face :
In their affliction they will seek me early :
Saying :
-

CHAPTER VI.

- 1 COME and let us return unto Jehovah ;
For he hath torn, and he will heal us ;
He hath smitten, and he will bind us up :

§ Or, be punished.

---

— depart.—Houbigant gives this sense from the Arab. and Æth. See Cast lex. But perhaps Chald. supplies the true reading, ירה quiescere fecit. ó. may have read ירה δυνασται. “ ירה in Syriac signifies sedatus est, recessit.” Dr. Forsayeth.

“ Repair the damage—make a cure of.” The words רפה and ירה refer respectively to the moth-eaten holes in the garment, and the sore in the flesh. Horsley.

14. — a lion.—Leo niger. For שחר ; the ל and ר being often exchanged in the eastern languages. Boch. Hier. iii. 1.

“ Non agnoscunt reduplicationem του αυι ó. Syr. Ar. Nescio an Chald.” Secker. It is wanting in one MS.

— will depart.—The image of the lion is pursued, who retires slowly and intrepidly from his prey, and does not fly.

15. — my place.—To my sanctuary, where I display my glory, to heaven.

— they will seek me early.—“ They will rise early to find me.” Dr. Wheeler. “ Read שחרתי.” The Rev. Mr. Henry Dimock.

CHAP. VI. 1. — Saying.—Houbigant observes that ó. Ar. Syr. Chald. supply saying before this verse ; whether they did this as interpreters, which is my opinion, or whether they read לאמר. I shall here observe, once for all, that the frequent omission of saying in the Hebrew Scriptures gives warmth and pathos to many passages, agreeably to Longinus’s well-known remark. Sec. xxvii.

- 2 After two days he will revive us ;
 On the third day he will raise us up ;
 And we shall live in his sight.
- 3 And we shall know, we shall follow after knowing,
 Jehovah :

In three MSS. the sixth chapter begins with the last line of the foregoing verse.

2. After two days—on the third day.—This seems a proverbial manner of describing an event which would soon happen. See Luke xiii. 32. “Of numbers certain for uncertain, see Nold. note 1871. Two for a few, 1 Kings xvii. 12. One and two for a few, Isa. vii. 21. Jer. iii. 14. Two or three for a few, Isa. xvii. 6.” Seeker.

“We shall live in his presence, and attain to knowledge. Our object of pursuit will be the knowledge of Jehovah.” Jehovah, who had departed, will return, and again exhibit the signs of his presence among his chosen people. So the Jews, converted and restored, will live in his presence, and attain to the true knowledge of God, which they never had before. The two days and the third day seem to denote three distinct periods of the Jewish people. The first day is the captivity of the ten tribes by the Assyrians, and of the two under the Babylonians, considered as one judgment upon the nation, beginning with the captivity of the ten, and completed in that of the two. The second day is the whole period of the present condition of the Jews, beginning with the dispersion of the nation by the Romans. The third day is the period yet to come, beginning with their restoration at the second advent. R. Tanchum, as he is quoted by Dr. Pocock, was not far, I think, from the true meaning of the place. “The prophet,” he says, “points out two times—and those are the first captivity, and a second. After which shall follow a third [time] redemption, after which shall be no depression or servitude.” And this I take to be the sense of the prophecy, in immediate application to the Jews. Nevertheless, whoever is well acquainted with the allegorical style of prophecy, will easily perceive no very obscure, though but an oblique, allusion to our Lord’s resurrection on the third day; since every believer may speak of our Lord’s death and resurrection, as a common death and resurrection of all believers. I place Rebhia only at לפני, and remove the Soph-Pasuk to the end of the following word וירעה, with which I make the second verse end; and I begin a new verse and a new sentence with גריפה. Thus, understanding the verb neutrally, I connect the attaining of knowledge with the living in the presence, as the effect with the cause. Horsley.

3. — know.—The sentence rises. We shall know Jehovah, we shall incessantly seek to know him.

His going forth is prepared as the morning;
And he shall come unto us as the rain,
As the latter rain which watereth the earth.

- 4 What shall I do unto thee, O Ephraim?
What shall I do unto thee, O Judah?
For your goodness is as a morning cloud,

— His going forth.—His appearance, as our deliverer, is fixed as the return of the morning; we shall be restored by him from our calamities as certainly as the rising of the sun chases away darkness. Ὡς ὀρθρὸς βεβαία ἡ ἐπιφάνεια αὐτοῦ. Symm.

— prepared as the morning.—“As the morning light his going forth is prepared [fixedly].” Dr. Wheeler.

“His coming forth is sure as the morning.” He had said, he would go to his place, and that they would seek him early, v. 15. Pocock. Secker.

— unto us.—“Upon us.” Dr. Wheeler.

יורה, Καὶ ὥψιμος, ὅ. Sed vel legerunt vel intellexerunt Syr. Chald. יורה, quæ irrigat. Invenitur מלקש absque יורה, Prov. xvi. 15, et alibi.” Secker. We also find et serotinus in Vulg. “As the former rain, and the latter rain, upon the earth.”

The former rain is in autumn, or the corn-sowing; the latter in spring, to fill up the ear. Secker.

“His coming forth is fixed as the morning; and he shall come upon us as the pouring shower, as the harvest-rain, [as] the rain of seed-time [upon] the earth.” The word מלקש is not simply a shower, but a hard, pouring shower. מלקש—יורה. Our public translation gives “latter rain, former rain.” But the Hebrew nouns have nothing of latter or former, implied in their meaning. מלקש is literally the “crop-rain.” That which fell just before the season of the harvest, to plump the grain before it was severed. And the beginning of the season of the harvest in Judea being the middle of March, according to the old style, this rain fell about the beginning of that month, and may properly be called the “harvest-rain.” The other יורה, is literally the “springing rain,” or rather, “the rain which makes to spring;” that which fell upon the seed, newly sown, and caused the green blade to shoot up out of the ground. This fell about the end or middle of October. I call it the “rain of seed-time.” These rains of seed time and harvest are the ὕετος πρώτος καὶ ὥψιμος of St. James. But the apostle’s epithets have reference to the order of the husbandman’s expectations, not to the civil division of the year. Horsley.

4. — goodness.—We translate the adjective godly, good, holy. See Tayl. Conc.

“Piety,” חסד. The various senses of this word are well enume-

And as early dew which passeth away.

- 5 Therefore have I hewn them by the prophets,
I have slain them by the words of my month :

rated by Vitringa upon Isaiah xl. 6. But the general radical meaning of the word is by none so well developed as by Mr. Parkhurst. Exuberance is included in the notion of it in all its applications. In this place I think it signifies that sudden flow of piety, which occasionally comes upon men of very loose lives, if they are not wholly lost to all sense of religion; particularly under afflictions, which produce a momentary penitence. Horsley.

—passeth away.—Three MSS. have ויחלך, with Syr., “which appear-eth in the morning and passeth away.” Twenty MSS. and two editions confirm the present pointing, and read ויחלך; and thirty MSS. or editions, have ויחלך in the parallel place, ch. xiii. 3. “F. ויחלך videtur Syr. legisse ויחלך.” Secker. Houbigant renders, “ Ut adsit vobis misericordia, velut matutina nubes;

Et ut ros, qui mane effunditur.”

And one rendering in Montfaugon's Hexapla is ὁ γὰρ περὶ ἡμᾶς οὐκ αὐτὸς.

5. —hewn them.—That is, wrought earnestly. “Ne me obtundas de hac re sæpius. Ter. Adolph. I. iii. 33. Tractum a fabris, qui sæpe repetunt tundendo aliquid malleo. R. Stephens.

“Therefore have I hewn in pieces the prophets.”

Dr. Wheeler.

“חצבתי, απεθρισα, ὅ. Sæpe reddunt קצר תריזו. Sym. οὐκ εφεισαμην. Aq. Th. ελγισαμην. “ב signifies not after the Hebrew word the thing hewn, but the instrument by which or place where.” Secker.

“Belaboured by the prophets.”—The Seventy, and Syr. certainly take the prophets for the object of the verb חצבתי. And the prophetic order was indeed deeply implicated in the national guilt: insomuch that many of them were promoters of it, and as such are frequently reproved and threatened by Hosea, and by all the faithful prophets that were true to their commission. But I cannot find that this verb, in any instance, governs its object by the prefix ב. I take the prefix therefore for the preposition of the instrument; and I take Ephraim and Judah, rehearsed by the suffix כ, in the verb חרבו, for the object of both verbs. “Belaboured;” the image is that of a hewer of wood laying on heavy strokes with the axe upon a piece of hard timber. Horsley.

—I have slain them.—I have been most importunate with them. Rogitando obtundat, enecet. Ter. Eun. III. v. 6. So Menander. Απολλει με το γένος. J. Cler. p. 240. And Drusius quotes. Occidunt nunc, dum nimis sanctas student apparare nuptias.

And my judgments have been as the light when it goeth forth.

- 6 For I desired goodness, and not sacrifice;
And the knowledge of God, more than burnt offerings:
7 But they, like Adam, have transgressed the covenant.
There have they dealt unfaithfully with me.

“Killed them.” Frightened them to death with terrible threatenings. Horsley.

— my judgments.—Precepts, admonitions, dispensations. Or translate, “And my judgment hath gone forth as the light.” The reading of וְיִשְׁפֹּט כְּאוֹר, which is that of Chald. and the ancient versions, except Vulg. (though Vulg. in many ancient MSS. has meum, see Kenn. Diss. Gen. Sec. 28), was pointed out by Dr. Kennicott, Diss. on 1 Chron. xi. p. 517. Oxf. 1753, who observes that letters were written conjunctively in old MSS. for which fact see also his Diss. Gen. p. 113. note a.

“And the precepts given thee were as the onward-going light.” So I understand the word וְיִשְׁפֹּט. It signifies a fixed principle, or rule, in any thing, to which principle and rule can be applied. Here I take it for the practical rules of a moral and godly life, as delivered by the prophets; and so Calvin expounds it:—“Significat hic Deus se regulam piè et sanctè vivendi monstrâsse Israelitis.—Judicia tua, hoc est ratio piè vivendi.” Horsley.

6. — goodness.—So Syr. translates. See v. 4.

“Charity.” I think, with Calvin, that the word חֶסֶד is used here in a comprehensive sense; signifying both piety towards God, and philanthropy. I can find no single word to answer it but charity. Horsley.

— and not sacrifice.—That is, in preference to sacrifice; as the parallel line clearly shows. The connection of this v. with the foregoing one is: by my prophets I taught them righteousness. For I desired, &c.

7. But they.—וְהֵם. Ar. read עִיבֵר. But they are as a man who transgresseth a covenant, or, as Adam who transgressed the covenant. “Professor Michaelis, Bibl. Orient. proposes as Edom.” Communicated by Mr. Woide.

There.—If בְּ cannot signify, “In respect of the covenant,” we may join this clause with that which follows it. See וְ. Or בְּ may refer to Ephraim and Judah. See v. 10. בְּ, eo in statu, tunc; sicut Arab. هنا. Manger in loc. See ch. xiii. 8. “No probable explication.” Secker. See Zeph. 1. 14, and ibi for tunc. R. Steph. Thes.

“Even in these circumstances.” This I take to be the force of the adverb בְּ, as it is used here, referring neither to place nor time, but to a state of things. The Latin “ibi” might in some degree express it; but we have no one word for it in our language. Horsley.

- 8 Gilead is a city of them that work iniquity :
She is marked with footsteps of blood.
- 9 And, as bands wait for a man, —
 A company of priests murder in the way to Shechem :
 For they have committed presumptuous wickedness.
- 10 In the house of Israel I have seen a most horrible thing :

8. Gilead.—Perhaps for Ramoth Gilead.

She is marked with.—Vestigiata sanguine; calcata a sanguine; i. e. a pedibus sanguinolentis. See Grot. and Pocock. Houbigant has “notata vestigiis sanguinis.”

“Ταρασσοῦσα ὑδῶρ, ὁ, עכרה מים” Seeker.

If Gilead here be put for Ramoth Gilead (and I know not what other city can be meant) it was a city of refuge, Dent. iv. 43., and such also was Shechem, Josh. xx. 7. Both therefore inhabited by priests and Levites. By describing the first of these two cities as polluted with blood, and the high-road to the other as beset with knots of priests, like robbers, intent on blood, and murdering on the whole length of the way, up to the very walls of the town, the prophet means to represent the priests as seducers of the people to that idolatry which proved the ruin of the nation. Horsley.

9. — wait.—One MS. has ירחכו, et sicut expectant.

— in the way to Shechem.—Shechem was a city of refuge in Ephraim, Josh. xx. 7. It should seem that, in this clause, the verb ירחכו should either precede ידור, or follow שכמה. Syr. reads הברו. “The priests combine in the way, they murder towards Shechem.” The sense which I have given to this obscure verse is confirmed by Dr. Wheeler’s rendering :

“And as robbers lie in wait for a man,
 The company of priests murder in the way to Shechem ;
 Because they have practised deceit.”

“And like banditti lying in wait for the passengers, a company of priests, upon the highway, murder unto Shechem.” In taking שכמה for the name of the city with the local paragogic ה, I am supported by the Syr. Seventy, and Symmachus; and by the Vulgate in taking שכח for the name of the place, though not in the construction of the paragogic ה. Horsley.

— have committed.—“Verily they have wrought lewdness in the house of Israel.” In the original I remove the Soph-Pasuk at עשׂי to ישראל, so connecting the two words בבית ישראל with the ninth verse, and making the tenth verse begin with ראיתי. This is supported by the version of the Seventy. Horsley.

10. — a most horrible thing.—Two MSS. read שערורה, and a third

There Ephraim * committeth fornication,
Israel is polluted.

11 Moreover, O Judah, an harvest is appointed against thee,
Among those who lead away the captivity of my people.

* Heb. fornication is with Ephraim.

read so originally. The word occurs in this form, Jer. v. 30. xxiii. 14. Many MSS. and some editions read with Keri, שְׁעָרֶיהָ.

11. — an harvest.—I suppose the idea to be, Thy time of being cut off, as ripe for destruction, is also fixed. See Jer. li. 33. Joel iii. 13. Rev. xiv. 15, 18, 19. “Pocock approves R. Tanchum, that Hosea speaks: also Judah hath set an harvest for thee, [O God:] made himself ripe for the sickle of destruction; and that the latter part belongs to ch. vii.” Secker.

— is appointed.—Hebr. one hath appointed. See on Jonah iii. 7. Καὶ σοι, Ἰούδα, ἀποκείραι, θέρισμος. Symm.

— who lead away.—The participle from שָׁבַח, to lead captive; as Ps. lxxviii. 18.

“Also for thee, Judah, is appointed a harvest,
When I shall turn the captivity of my people.

Dr. Wheeler.

This is a just rendering, according to the Masoretical punctuation; but the context seems to require a threatening of evil, not a promise of good. Or thus,

“Moreover, O Judah, thou hast prepared an harvest for thyself,
When I lead away the captivity of my people.”

Moerlius proposes שָׁח posuisti; explains קָצִיר by judicium grare; and joins the next hemistich with the following verse, Quando cogito de avertenda captivitate populi mei, et de sanando Israele; revelatur, &c. See δ. Syr. where the same punctuation may be admitted, and the same preposition is read before שָׁח and רָפָא.

“Fornications in Ephraim! Israel polluted! Moreover, O Judah, harvest-work is appointed for thee, when I bring back the captivity of my people.” Harvest-work is cut out for Judah at the season of bringing back the captivity. The tribe of Judah is, in some extraordinary way, to be an instrument of the general restoration of the Jewish people. Observe that the vintage is always an image of the season of judgment; but the harvest, of the in-gathering of the objects of God’s final mercy. Horsley.

CHAPTER VII.

I    WHEN I healed Israel,
       Then the iniquity of Ephraim was discovered, and the wickedness of Samaria.
       For they have done deceitfully:
       And the thief entereth in: [and] a band of robbers spoileth without.

CHAP. VII. 1. — healed.—Removed evil from him, and blessed him with prosperity. See v. 15 and 2 Kings xiv. 25, 26, 27. One MS. reads ברפאי. See ö. Syr.

“Would have healed.” ברפאי. At the very time when I was about to heal.—Dum in eo essem ut sanarem. This is the force of the prefix כ, which would be very ill changed into ב; an alteration for which there is no authority but that of a single printed edition, not of any MS. — The particular time alluded to is, I think, the reign of the second Jeroboam, when the kingdom of Israel seemed to be recovering from the loss of strength and territory it had sustained in the preceding reigns, by the encroachments of the Syrians; for Jeroboam “restored the coast of Israel, from the entering of Hamath unto the sea of the plain,” 2 Kings xiv. 25. The successes, vouchsafed to this warlike prince against his enemies, were signs of God’s gracious inclination to pardon the people, and restore the kingdom to its former prosperity. Horsley.

— done deceitfully.—They have acted a false and perfidious part: to me, by idolatry; to men, by wrong and robbery.

“Carried on delusion.” Literally “they wrought falsehood.” The lie, falsehood, or delusion, was every thing that was seductive in the external rites of the false religions. The verbs עשה and פעל are not perfectly equivalent. The verb עשה is simply “to do,” or “make,” without reference to the length of time, degree of labour or thought, necessary to the performance. But the verb פעל is applied to those operations only which require some continued labour of the hand, or long application of the mind, or both. The thing meant here seems to be the carrying on of a premeditated plot or scheme for the subversion of the true religion, and the establishment of idolatry. Horsley.

— spoileth.—ö. consider the word as a participle, εκδιδυσκων. Three MSS. read רפשט, et spoliat, as Syr. Chald.

“Therefore a thief is coming; banditti sally forth in the streets.” The thief, Pul; whose peace Menahem bought, with contributions levied upon

- 2 And they say not in their heart,
That I remember all their wickedness.
 Now their doings have * compassed them about ;
 They are before my face.
- 3 By their wickedness they makè the king glad ;
 And by their falsehoods, the princes.

* Or. beset.

the people. The banditti, the armics of Tiglath-pileser, over-running Gilead, Galilee, and Napthali, 2 Kings xv. 19, 20, 29, and 1 Chron. v. 26. Horsley.

— in their heart.—One edition, seven MSS., originally an eighth, and perhaps a ninth, read בלבב with Ar. Syr. Chald. Vulg. “Say not to. See marg.” Secker.

בל forsan כל. Secker.

“And let them not say unto their heart, that I have remembered all their wicked doings: even still their perverse habits cling around them, they are before my face.” To the same effect Aquila ; και μηποτε επιωσι ταις καρδιαις αυτων, πασαν κακιαν αυτων εμνησθηγν. St. Jerome also, the Vulgate, and Abarbanel take the negative בל as a prohibitory particle. ללבב. The change of the prefix ל into ב, though supported by the reading of the Complutensian edition and seven or eight MSS. of Kennicott’s, and seven or eight more of De Rossi’s, would be much for the worse. When a man thinks within himself what he is afraid, or ashamed, or unwilling, to utter aloud or declare openly ; then he speaks in his heart ; and this is expressed by ב. But when a man pursues his own thoughts without utterance, but without any desire of concealment, more especially when he soothes and consoles himself with hopes and expectations well or ill founded ; when he encourages and incites himself to action ; then he speaks to his heart, and this is expressed by ל. Horsley.

— compassed them about.—In a distressing manner, Ps. cix. 3.

3. בלך, Βασιλεις, ό. Syr. Ar. Secker.

Which suggests this rendering,

“In their wickedness the kings rejoice ;
 And in their falsehoods, the princes.”

— Falsehoods.—“Perfidies ;” towards God, in deserting his service for idolatry. I think the word כחש, as a noun substantive, renders not so properly “a lie,” in the sense of a false assertion, as a “failure” in the truth of a promise or engagement ; a failure in any point of duty, or natural obligation ; in particular, in loyalty to the rightful sovereign, and above all to the Sovereign of sovereigns. Horsley.

- 4 All of them commit adultery :
They are as an oven heated by the baker ;
When he that † raiseth the dough ceaseth from kneading it,
 Until it be leavened.
- 5 On the feast-day of our king, when the princes began to be hot with wine,

† Heb. raiseth it, ceaseth from kneading the dough.

4. — heated.—Or burning. תנור may be both masculine and feminine, like some other Hebrew substantives. Or we may read בער הכאפה, “ They are as the burning oven of the baker.” The hint of thus dividing the words I took from Professor Michaelis’s note, Bibl. Orient., as communicated by Mr. Woide.

— he that raiseth—The raiser. See the margin of the English version. It is supposed that, in the beginning of the clause, אשר, when, and also after נעיר, the raiser, the pronoun it should be supplied. תמצר, which occurs only here in this form, may be considered as a substantive, until its fermentation. The sense of this difficult clause seems to be, Their adultery burns like an oven, when the dough is prepared for baking; and only requires the addition of leaven. See a like image, Ps. xxi. 9. Mal. iv. 1.

“All of them are adulterers; like an oven over-heated for the baker; the stoker desists, after the kneading of the dough, until the fermentation of it be complete.” נעיר, “the stoker,” a noun substantive regularly formed from the Hiphil of the verb עיר. Excitator. The man whose business it is to stir up the fire in the oven. This I take as the nominative case of the verb ישובת. “Until the fermentation be complete.” All this I take to be expressed in the words עד תמצר. And St. Jerome’s rendering, which is also that of the Vulgate, is to the same amount: donec fermentaretur totum. The noun תמצר properly renders the act, or passion rather, of fermentation; the being fermented. To apply the images severally, I take the oven to be the heart; the burning fire, the animal appetites in act; the stoker, or fire-stirrer, the external objects of desire, considered as present to the senses and exciting the appetites; the dough, the sensitive animal frame, or nervous system, considered as the proper object of the immediate action of appetite; the baker, who ought to manage the oven, regulate the heat, superintend the stoker, and conduct every thing aright for the baking of the bread, is reason or intellect, which ought to be the governing faculty in the human soul. The fire gets ahead when this baker takes too long a sleep. As in the sixth verse. Horsley.

5. — our king.—מלכנו. I think there is irrision in the suffix: “this rare king of ours.” Horsley.

He stretched out his hand with the scorers.

6 For they make ready their heart as an oven, when they lie in wait:

All the night Ephraim sleepeth;

In the morning he burneth as a ‡ flaming fire.

7 All of them have heated themselves as an oven;

And they have § devoured their judges:

All their kings have fallen:

There was none among them who called unto me.

‡ Heb. a fire of flame.

§ Or, consumed.

החלי, ηξαντο, ó. Ch. Syr. Vulg. Ar. Secker.

— to be hot.—חמית is the regular infinitive from יחם to be hot. V. ó. Ar. Syr. consider the word as in this form.

— scorners.—Deriders of God and man. Some recent and notorious act of contempt to God, or to his prophets, or to public justice, is here alluded to.

“To scorers.” Instances of the use of the particle את in the sense of the Latin ad, or, which would come to the same thing here, as a sign of the dative case, are to be found in Noldius. Horsley.

6. — make ready.—It is their custom so to do. If we alter the text, the best reading seems to be קדדו, kindle. See ó. Ar. Syr.

“In the inmost part of it, their heart is like an oven, while they lie in wait; all the night their baker sleepeth; in the morning it burneth like a blazing fire.” I take the order of construction thus, כי לבם קרבו [היה] כתנור, I take the suffix ו in the word קרבו, as rehearsing the noun לב, which I understand as the nominative case of the verb substantive understood; and thus I bring out the sense which I have given in my translation. Horsley.

— when they lie in wait.—For the blood of their fellow subjects, see v. 1; or, even of their king, See 2 Kings xv. 10.

— Ephraim.—The text has אפרים, their baker. But ó. Ar. and MS. 93, see on ch. iv. 11, read אפרים, Ephraim. The sense seems to be, Their heart is inflamed with ambition and avarice; they pass the night in sloth, and in the morning they burn with every irregular passion.

7. — their judges.—See on Amos ii. 3.

— kings.—Four kings of Israel were put to death during the life of this prophet:—Zechariah, by Shallum; Shallum, by Menahem; Pekahiah, by Pekah, and Pekah by Hoshea, 2 Kings xv.

— called.—The participle may be of the past, or present tense. If we render as our translators, or with Dr. Wheeler, “None among them crieth

- 8 Ephraim, he hath mixed himself among the nations:
Ephraim is like a cake not turned.
- 9 Strangers have devoured his strength:
And he knoweth it not:
Yea, grey hairs are sprinkled upon him;
And he knoweth it not:

unto me," the words refer to the people. According to my translation, they refer to the kings.

8. — among the nations.—See on Amos vi. 1.

— a cake not turned.—Therefore burnt, and to be cast away.

Ranwolf says, that "travellers frequently bake bread in the deserts of Arabia on the ground, covering their cakes with ashes and coals, and turning them several times, until they are enough." "All along the Black Sea, from the Palus Mæotis to the Caspian Sea, in Chaldea, and in Mesopotamia, except in towns, the people make a fire in the middle of the room; when the bread is ready for baking, they sweep a corner of the hearth, lay the bread there, cover it with hot ashes and embers, and in a quarter of an hour they turn it." Pocock. See Harmer, I. 232. Bochart quotes a saying in the Talmud, "Pauper subcineritium vertit, venit alius, et aufert eum ab ipso" Hieroz. I. 329. ó. have εγκρυφίας here; and ed. E in Montfaucon, ὡς ἄρτος ἐν σποδίᾳ πεσσομενός:

The particle of similitude is omitted, as Isa. xxxvii. 27. Mic. iii. 12. Nah. iii. 12, 13, and frequently in the best Greek and Latin writers. See Boch. Hieroz. p. II. L. II. xvii. p. 248. Thus,

"Cervi, luporum præda rapacium,
Sectamur ultro quos opimus
Fallere et effugere est triumphus." Hor.

Familiar comparisons of this nature repeatedly occur in Homer.

"Dough on one side, burnt on the other. Or eaten before it be turned Ch. Syr. consumed instantly." Seeker.

9. Strangers.—See 2 Kings xvii. 4.

— sprinkled.—So Propert. III. iii. 46.

"Sparselit et nigras alba senecta comas."

His national strength is impaired and decaying, and he acts as if he were insensible of it.

Rome, in the midst of great calamities, is thus described by Claudian:

"Humeris vix sustinet ægris
Squalentem clypeum; laxata casside, prodit Canitiem."

Manger. Comm. in Hos. Campis. MDCLXXXII.

- 10 And the pride of Israel shall be humbled to his face.
Yet they do not return to Jehovah their God,
Nor do they seek him, notwithstanding all this.
- 11 And Ephraim is as a simple dove, without knowledge.
Upon Egypt they call; to Assyria they resort.
- 12 When they resort, I will spread my net over them:
As a bird of the heavens, will I bring them down.
I will chastise them when they hearken to their assembly.
- 13 Woe unto them; for they have fled from me:
Destruction unto them; for they have transgressed
against me:
Though I have redeemed them, yet have they spoken lies against me.
- 14 And they have not cried unto me in their heart;
Though they have howled upon their beds for the corn and for the choice wine:
Yea; they have assembled themselves, they have rebelled
against me.

10. And the pride.—See on ch. v. 5, where this line occurs.

—seek him.—Many MSS. and some editions read בקשורו.

11. —Egypt.—See 2 Kings xvii. 4, and ch. xii. 1.

—Assyria.—See ch. v. 13. viii. 9. xii. 1. Particular instances of this fact are not recorded with respect to the kingdom of Israel; except that an embassy was probably sent to Pul, while he was at a distance from Samaria, 2 Kings xv. 19. “קראו, Sic ó. Vulg. Sed Ch. אתקראו. Sy. אתרי. Videntur uterque legisse קראו, nec male.” Secker.

12. —hearken.—See שמע, Gen. iii. 17. When they are swayed by the counsel of their assembly to seek foreign assistance. However, לעצתם, to their own counsel, suggested by Chald. and Houbigant, furnishes a clear sense. Secker also observes this reading.

“I will chastise them, as they hear it declared in their congregations.” Horsley.

13. —redeemed them.—Out of Egypt, Mic. vi. 4, or, from the hand of their enemies, 2 Kings xiv. 27.

14. —upon their beds.—Though in secret they bewailed themselves for the famine with which I punished them. See ch. iv. 3, 10. v. 7.

—assembled themselves.—The true reading seems to be יתגודרו. One MS. reads thus, and one ed. Another MS. read so originally. One MS. has יתגודרו, and two MS. have יתגודרו. Chald. has בגש, congregate. ó. have 15 And I have chastened them; I have also strengthened their arm:

And they have imagined evil against me.

16 They have turned after that which doth not profit:

κατετεμνοντο, which is another rendering of יתגוררו, agreeably to the Chaldee, Syriac, and Arabic sense of the root. See Cast lex. "Professor Michaelis prefers this reading, and paraphrases it thus: vulnerabant et cædebant se inter preces, 1 Kings xviii. 28." Mr. Woide.

"Put themselves in a stir about corn and wine." In the Hebrew I place the Soph-Pasuk at the word יתגוררו, in the fourteenth verse; and I make the fifteenth begin with יסרו. Then, at the word בי (the second word of the fifteenth verse, according to this division), I place Rebhia; and at יסרו, Athrach; Rebhia again at ורועתם; and the Soph-Pasuk at רע I leave undisturbed. These corrections of the stops are the only alterations I make in the printed text. יתגוררו can be nothing but the third person plural of the future in Hithpael of the verb גרר יסרו, "they turned," is from the root סר, not סרר, which forms the third pers. pl. fut. יסרו. Horsley.

— rebelled. From סרר. "They have taken counsel against me;" יסרו, or rather, יסרו Houbigant.

15. And I have chastened.—Whether I inflicted punishment on them, or showed them favour, they rejected me for their idols.

16. — which doth not profit.—I propose reading לא יעיל, [which may be written יעל.] See Jer. ii. 11. "My people have changed their glory for that which doth not profit." בלא יעיל. Pocock's Arabic MS. has, "they return not to profit," or, "to what is profitable." And R. Salomo has, "But not להעיל להם, to profit themselves." See Pocock in loc. "Εἰς ουδεν, ὁ, לא יעילו, ανωφελες, Jer. ii. 8. Sic et Is. xlv. 10. εἰς ουδεν, Jer xiii. 10. Ut essent absque jugo. Vulg. leg. על. Syr. Nulla de causa. Ch. Non quod malum ei fecerim. F. על, vel saltem ער, ut Joel ii. 12. Amos iv. 6, 8." Seeker.

They fall back into nothingness of condition." ישובו לא על. The verb שוב signifies either "to return," or "to turn away from," or "to turn towards." But properly and most frequently "to return," in reference to a former place or condition. In the sense of returning, or of turning towards, it usually governs the place to which, by the detached preposition אל, or the prefix ל. But either of these may be omitted; and the verb will appear as a verb transitive, governing the place or condition to which, as its object, without a preposition; like some verbs of motion in particular connections in the Latin language: urbem adii; domum redii; Roman profectus sum. This construction in the Hebrew language is very rare, but this passage is one clear instance of it. For על לא (whatever it may mean), stands as the place to which, and as the accusative after the transitive שוב.

They have been as a || deceitful bow.

Their princes * fall by the sword, for the rage of their tongue.

This shall be their reproach in the land of Egypt.

|| Heb. a bow of deceit.

* Or, shall fall.

The word על has been very differently taken by different interpreters. I consider none of their opinions as deserving of attention, but those which attempt to ascertain the meaning of the word as it stands, without the aid of conjectural emendation. These all take it in one or other of three different ways: 1. as a noun adjective; 2. as a noun substantive; 3. as an adverb. But, whichever way it is to be taken, על לא is something described by privation of the thing signified by על, whatever it may be. According to the sense given in my translation, על is taken either as a noun substantive, rendering “height;” or as an adverb, rendering “on high;” and it is not material which way it be taken. For if it be an adverb, still על לא stands as a noun, after the verb שׁוּב, and expresses that which is the privation of height. But the height, whether expressed by the noun or by the adverb, is to be understood figuratively of height of rank, or condition. Horsley.

— a deceitful bow.—See the same expression, Ps. lxxviii. 57. Virgil has, Perfidus ensis frangitur.

— rage of their tongue.—See Isa. xxx. 27. “His lips are filled with צַעַר, indignation; where the words are spoken of Jehovah. Here the unworthy speeches against Jehovah are meant.

“They are become like a deceitful bow.” Horsley.

— reproach.—Or, matter of derision; when the people whose princes fall by violence, take refuge from the Assyrians in Egypt, ch. viii. 13. ix. 3, 6. Egypt was a country in which kings were held in great reverence. See Virg. Georg. IV. 210, quoted on ch. iv. 10. Thither many of the ten tribes seem to have fled when the Assyrians invaded them. “This shall bring derision upon them in the land of Egypt.” Horsley.

CHAPTER VIII.

- 1 SET the trumpet to thy * mouth :
 As an eagle the Assyrian cometh against the house of
 Jehovah :
 Because they have transgressed my covenant,
 And have trespassed against my law.
- 2 They shall cry unto me, O God of Israel, we know thee.
- 3 Israel hath removed good far from him : the enemy shall pursue him.
- 4 They themselves have made kings, and not from me :
 They have made princes, and I knew it not.
Of their silver and their gold have they made them idols ;

* Heb. the roof of thy mouth.

CHAP. VIII. 1. — As an eagle.—Chald. supplies so shall the king come up with his army. I suppose Shalmaneser meant, 2 Kings xvii.3,6. “Subaudi hostis irruit.” Bahrdr.

“As an eagle [shall he hover] over the House of the Lord.” Dr. Wheeler.

Rapidity is admirably expressed by the imperfect sentences in the original. Ellipses of this kind are common ; as “There is a voice of thy watchmen ; they lift up their voice ;

 They shout together.” Isa. lii. 8.

—house.—See ch. ix. 15. Family, heritage. “The people of God are his house, Numb. xii. 7.” Secker.

2. — O God of Israel.—Houbigant thinks the word Israel misplaced in our present copies, and that this is the true order. ó. Ar. Syr. and MS. 96, omit Israel. But for “My God, we know thee,” we should expect, as Syr. translates, “Our God, we know thee.” Or,

—“O my God, we know thee.

Israel, even Israel, hath removed good far from him :
 The enemy shall pursue him.”

“O my God, we acknowledge thee.” Israel, speaking collectively, uses the singular pronoun and the plural verb. Horsley.

4. — kings.—See 2 Kings xv. 10, 14, 25, 30.

“They have set up kings of themselves.” Sponte. This I take to be the force of the pronoun הם. See v. 9. Horsley.

That they might be cut off.

5 Remove far from thee thy calf, O Samaria :

Mine anger is kindled against them.

How long will they not endure innocency in Israel ?

6 And as for him, the workman made him ;

And he is no god :

— cut off.—The versions and Chald. and the MS. Arab. version mentioned by Pocock, represent יכרר ; a necessary reading, unless Israel may be supplied from v. 3.

“ Their silver and their gold have they wrought for themselves Into idols, that they might be cut off.”

Dr. Wheeler.

“ Their silver and their gold have they made to themselves idols.”
Secker.

5. Remove far from thee.—Αποθησον, Aquila. Απορρίψαι, Theod. Αποσφαι, ό. and in some other copies, απορρίψον, says Montfaucon.

“ Thy calf, O Samaria, has cast thee off.” Here God himself, who is the speaker, turns short upon Samaria, or the ten tribes ; and, in a tone of dreadful indignation, upbraids their corrupt worship, by taking to himself the title of Samaria’s calf. I, whom you have so dishonoured, by setting up that contemptible idol, as an adequate symbol of my glory ; I, who have so long borne with this corrupt worship, now expressly disown you. Horsley.

— endure.—Through hatred of it. See יכל, Ps. ci. 5. Isa. i. 13. Joel ii. 11.

— in Israel.—ό. and Ar. read בישראל, or בני ישראל, and join the words to the foregoing clause. “ MS. Copt. reads בני ישראל, filii Israelis.” Mr. Woide.

“ How long will not the sons of Israel endure innocency ? How long will they bear antipathy to pure religion ?” Bear antipathy. This is the true sense of the phrase, לא יכל. See Ps. ci. 5. Isa. i. 13, and compare Amos vii. 10. For נקן, the Complutensian and four other printed texts, with forty-four MSS., among these some of the very oldest and best, give נקן, which is certainly the true form of the word. It signifies purity or cleanness generally. Hence moral purity, innocence. But here, I think, it particularly denotes “ pure religion,” or the purity of worship. “ Pure religion” and “ undefiled,” in opposition both to the superstitious practices of idolaters, and to the false show of hypocrites. Horsley.

6. And as for him.—“ For he is from Israel,” or, “ made by the

For the calf of Samaria shall be † broken in pieces.

7 For they have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind.

The stalk hath no bud :

† Heb. fragments.

Israelites," is the sense of the words as they now stand. Syr and Chald. read הוא. Dr. Wheeler's translation stands thus :—

"For from Israel came this [calf] הוא :
The workman made it, and it is no God ;
For the calf of Samaria shall become fragments."

"Even this" הוא. The ו is highly emphatical, aggravating the accusation. Even a thing so abominable as this was his own invention. Horsley.

Forse legendum cum Syro, הוא והוא. Secker.

— the calf.—It is well known that animals of this species were worshipped in Egypt; the Apis at Memphis, and the Mnevis at Heliopolis. As they are employed in tilling the ground, they may have been used as symbols of one who had anciently introduced or improved the art of agriculture. Males of this kind were dedicated to Osiris; and females, to Isis. The Israelites may have originally borrowed this superstition from the Egyptians, and may have afterwards revived it; imputing the great fertility of Egypt to the deity thus represented.

The people procured it, or contributed to it, as to Aaron's calf. Secker.

— broken in pieces.—In Chaldee, שבב is to break. Schultens derives the word from a similar Arabic one, which signifies fragmenta, quibus ignis foveri potest. Animadv. Phil. p. 479.

שבבים, forte legendum שברים. Secker.

7. — sown the wind.—See Job iv. 8. Prov. xxii. 8. Eccl. v. 16. ch. x. 13. Hab. ii. 13. They have served their idols in vain, and they shall reap the bitter fruits of their idolatry.

"Verily a wind shall scatter him abroad, a whirlwind shall cut him down." "To sow the wind and reap the whirlwind," may certainly be a proverbial expression for measures of bad policy, ending in ruin, and disappointing the statesman's expectations. But instead of taking the verbs זרעו and יקצרו as plurals, of which the plural pronoun of the third person understood, rehearsing Israel collectively, is the subject; I take the verbs in the singular number, and the final ו as the affixed pronoun of the third person singular, rehearsing Israel; and the nouns רוח and סופרה I take as the subjects of these verbs respectively; and thus I bring out the sense expressed in my translation. Horsley.

— The stalk.—Houbigant also places the stop after נצח, bud. "There

- It shall not yield flour :
 If so be it yield, strangers shall swallow it up.
 8 Israel is swallowed up.
 Now are they become among the nations
 As a vessel wherein is no pleasure.
 9 For they have gone up to Assyria:
 Ephraim is like the solitary wild ass :
 They have hired lovers.
 10 But because they have hired among the nations,
 Now will I gather them together, shall be no stem belonging to him ; the ear shall yield no meal ; what perchance it may yield, strangers shall swallow it up." Horsley.

8. — no pleasure.—Despised, and cast out, Ps. xxxi. 12. Jer. xxii. 28. xlviii. 38.

9. — gone up.—For they are gone up of their own accord to Assyria." Of their own accord ; this I take to be the force of the pronoun, הֵמָּה. And this is generally its force, where it appears, as in this place, pleonastic. See v. 4, and ch. ix. 10. Horsley.

— to Assyria.—Not only for alliance, but also for idolatrous commerce.

— solitary wild ass.—לֹדִי is redundant. See Amos ii. 13. But δ. MS. Pachom. read εἰς Εφραϊμ, that is, לֵי for לֹדִי. Ephraim is to me like the solitary wild ass. Odit hominum frequentiam et habitationem. See Boch. Hieroz. 871. Job. xxxix. 5—8. He is as untamed to the yoke, and traverses the desert as earnestly in the pursuit of idols, as the onager in quest of his mates. It may be said of this animal, Mentem Venus ipsa dedit. See Jer. ii. 24. Plin. Nat. Hist. VIII. xxx. "Ephraim is as a wild ass, traversing alone." Dr. Wheeler.

"A wild ass all alone for himself is Ephraim." The pronoun "for himself," after "alone," is highly emphatical: it expresses the selfishness which belongs to an animal savage in such a degree, as not only not to be tamed for the service of man, but frequently not disposed to herd with its own kind. "Though wild asses be often found in the desert in whole herds, yet it is usual for some one of them to break away, and separate himself from his company, and run alone at random by himself; and one so doing is here spoken of." Pocock. Horsley.

— hired.—Nothing could be more flagitious than that the hire should be given by the adulteress. See Ezek. xvi. 23.

10. — gather them together.—That they may go into captivity.

"Will I embody them." אֶקְבֹּץ. The verb קָבַץ signifies to collect, into one mass, things naturally separate and dispersed. Hence, more par-

And they shall soon be pained by bearing the burden of the king and of the princes.

11 Because Ephraim hath multiplied altars to commit sin,
He hath altars to commit sin.

12 I have written unto him many things of my laws;
But they have been accounted as a strange thing.

ticularly, to form or assemble armies. God threatens that he will press into his own armies against the Israelites, those very bands of foreign mercenaries whom the Israelites themselves, to the great mortification of the kings and the rulers, when the error of the measure appeared by the event, had paid at a dear rate. Horsley.

— soon.—See Nold. Sec. 2.

— and of the princes.—So the versions, Chald. Aquila, Houbigant, nine MSS., one impression, two MSS. originally, and perhaps two more. They shall be severely galled by the yoke of the Assyrian king, and of the princes set over his several provinces.

“And ere long they shall sorrow on account of the burden, the king and the rulers.” Ere long the king and the rulers will lament the impolitic expense incurred in gifts and presents to their faithless allies, and the burden of taxes for that purpose laid upon the people. Horsley.

11. — He hath altars.—He shall have them erected by others, in those idolatrous countries to which he is led away captive, Deut. iv, 28. Jer. xvi. 13. See Pocock.

לחטא, 20. ηγαπημενα, ό. επλημμελημενα, ed. Compl. Secker.

“In as much as Ephraim hath multiplied altars, altars are (counted) sin unto him; I will write upon him sins.” I punctuate the original thus: over the first מִזְבְּחֹת, in verse 11, I place Rebhia, or the semicolon; and at the second מִזְבְּחֹת, in the same verse, I place the Soph-Pasuk; that the second לחטא may be thrust forward into the subsequent verse, where it stands as the object of the verb transitive אֶכְתֹּב; expressing what God will write or inscribe upon Israel; namely, that he is the property of sin. Inuram ei notas, “Peccati mastigia.” Horsley.

12. — many things of my laws.—Πληθος νομων μου, Symmachus; and V. ό. Syr. read רִירוֹת plurally. Or, many things of my law, reading רַב־הַרְתָּ, with Keri, or great things. But I suspect that the true reading is רַבְרִי, the words of my law.

“The masters of my law are accounted, as it were, an alien race.” Horsley.

— a strange thing.—Foreign to Israel, and with which they had no concern. “So, strange incense, strange fire.” Secker.

[or, רַב־רִיבֹו לֹו רִיבֹו]

תִּירוֹתִי[ותִירוֹתִי] כִּמוֹ זֶר נֶחֱשָׁבֹו.

- 13 They sacrifice gifts appointed unto me, and eat flesh.
Therefore Jehovah accepteth them not.
 Now will he remember their iniquity, and will visit their sins.
 They shall return unto Egypt.

“ I have written against him his suit ;
 My laws have been accounted as a strange thing.”

Or,

“ I have written against him a suit ;
 But my laws have been accounted as a strange thing.”

Dr. Forsayeth.

13. — gifts appointed unto me.—Such sacrificial oblations as my law required that they should offer unto me ; the affix signifying passively. See the note on Gen. iv, 23, 24 ; Heb. præl. p. 50. Suppl. ad sec. ed. 8vo. and Pocock on Hosea xi. 7 ; where this important remark is illustrated by many curious instances. See Gen. xvi. 5. Jer. li. 35. Joel iv. 19. Hab. ii. 8, 17. Isa. liii. 11. Ps. cxxxix. 17. Isa. lvi. 7. Ps. v. 7. Thus also in the Latin language, Nam neque negligentia tua, neque odio id fecit tuo, i. e. in te. Ter. Phorm. V. viii. 27. Catilinam non modo invidiæ meæ, verum etiam vitæ, periculo, sustulissem, i. e. in me, qua mihi invideretur. Cic. in Cat. II. Sec. 2. See Westerhovius and Muretus in loc.

— and eat flesh.—Syr. reads רבשר יאכלו.

“ They have sacrificed the choicest sacrifices, and have eaten flesh.
 Jehovah taketh not delight therein.”

Dr. Wheeler.

Vel transponenda רבשר et יאכלו ; vel ו priori non posteriori præfigendum, vel delendum ; vel saltem intelligendus propheta, quasi sic scripsisset. Secker. Or point thus with ó.

“ I have written unto him many things of my laws :
 But the gifts appointed unto me have been accounted as a strange thing.
 They sacrifice flesh, and eat [sc. idolatrously :]
 Jehovah, &c.

They sacrifice [sc. unto idols] gifts appointed unto me, and eat flesh.

But Dr. Forsayeth paraphrases thus, “ They offer sacrifices to the Lord, as a people observing his laws ; but on account of their iniquities he accepteth them not.”

Therefore Jehovah.—Vulg. Syr. and one MS. prefix ו ; but the asyndeton is very strong.

יִשְׁבְּרוּ. Addunt ó. Καὶ ἐν Ἀσσυρίοις ἀκαθάρτα φαγονται, ex ch. ix. 3. Secker.

— unto Egypt.—See ch. vii. 16.

- 14 For Israel hath forgotten his Maker, and hath built temples.
 And Judah hath multiplied fenced cities :
 But I will send a fire upon his cities, and it shall devour his palaces.

CHAPTER IX.

- 1 REJOICE not, O Israel :
 Exult not as the * nations.
 For thou hast committed fornication in departing from thy God :
 Thou hast loved hire at every corn floor.
 2 The floor and the vat shall not feed them :

* Heb. the peoples.

14. — temples.—Hence we learn that, at this time, Israel was more idolatrous than Judah.

— his palaces — ó. MS. A. and ed. Ald. Vulg. Syr. and one MS. originally, read ארמנותי ; to which Houbigant gives his sanction.

CHAP. IX. 1. Rejoice not.—Imitate not their idolatrous festivities.

אל גיל. Sic Job iii. 22. Sed ó. Ch. Syr. Vulg. ne אל, quod futurum postulat. Secker. The word גיל signifies, in the Arab., circumagere in gyrum; whence saltare; whence great joy expressed by outward gestures. See Cast. lex.

“ With joyous exultation,” אל גיל, exultationem usque. גיל is a noun substantive, signifying, “leaping and dancing for joy,” after the preposition אל; not as some have taken the word, the imperative Hiphil of the verb גיל, constructed with the prohibitory particle אל: for it is contrary to the invariable rule of the Hebrew language, that the imperative mood should prohibit; or, in other words, the prohibitory particle must be constructed with a future tense, never with an imperative mood. Horsley.

— hire.—“Fee of prostitution,” ארנן. At this word I place the Sopl-Pasuk. Horsley.

— at every corn floor.—Attributing plenty to thy idols, and rejoicing before them at the ingathering of thy corn, Isa. ix. 3. ch. ii. 5, 12.

And the choice wine shall deceive them.

3 They shall not dwell in the land of Jehovah :

But Ephraim shall return unto Egypt ;

And in Assyria shall they eat polluted things.

4 They shall not pour out an offering of wine unto Jehovah ;

Neither shall they please him.

Their sacrifices shall be unto them as the food of mourners :

2. — choice wine.—"Must," חרירש. The word often signifies "new wine;" but its primary and proper meaning seems to be, "must in the vat," under the process of fermentation. When this process miscarries, the must never turns to a sound wine. Horsley.

Bahrdr observes that Syr. reads יצהר, oil, for חרירש, choice wine. The vat, says he, is mentioned in the preceding clause.

— deceive them.—All the versions and Chald. read בם, them, for בה, in her : and it is highly satisfactory to find this reading confirmed by twenty-one MSS., one impression, three MSS. originally, and perhaps two more.

The word may be rendered, shall lie unto them. So Horace has Fundus mendax, Od. III. i. 30; and Spem mentita seges, Epist. I. vii. 87.

4. — wine.—See Ex. xxix. 40. Lev. xxiii. 13. Numb. xv. 5. 10.

— please him.—Another punctuation may very well be introduced with Syr. Ar.

"And their sacrifices shall not please him.

They shall have as it were the food of mourners."

Accordingly Dr. Wheeler renders :—

"Neither shall their sacrifices be pleasing unto Him :

As the bread of affliction shall be their bread ;"

לחם Sic. 6. Ch. Syr. Omittit Vulg. F. leg. לחם. Seeker.

Their bread for their soul, i. e. the expiation of it; so Chald., for לחם signifies even flesh sacrifices. Or, their bread shall be for themselves; it shall not, &c. Seeker.

Mr. Dimock proposes to render, "Their bread shall be as the bread of mourners;" and conjectures that we should read לחם for לחם.

"For their sacrifices are not pleasant to Him: they are to them as the meat of mourners." I take away the Zakeph-katon from לו, and instead of it place Rebhia at צבחה, taking that noun as the nominative of the verb יעריבו. Horsley.

— of mourners—See Ezek. xxiv. 17. "And eat not the food of

All that eat thereof shall be polluted.

Surely † their pleasant food shall not come into the house of Jehovah.

5 What will ye do on the day of the solemn assembly ;
And on the day of the feast of Jehovah ?

6 For behold they go away from before the destroyer :
Egypt shall gather them, Memphis shall bury them.

The desirable places purchased ‡ with their silver, nettles shall possess them.

† Heb. food to their desire.

‡ Heb. for.

wretched men." It was customary for neighbours to take food into the houses of those who mourned for the dead, that they might abate their grief, and recruit their spirits, by inducing them to partake of it. But such food contracted pollution by being in the same place with a dead body, Numb. xix. 14. See Spencer, 1148.

— pleasant food.—The verb נפש sometimes signifies to refresh ; and the substantive נפש, desire. See Tayl. Conc.

"To themselves;" so Abarbinel expounds the word לנפש, and after him Grotius. "Cibus eorum ipsis erit —" ipsorum tantum usibus servire poterit ; quasi dicat, οὐαί τοι. Horsley.

6 — go away.—Out of the holy land ; where alone they could sacrifice, and observe feasts fully. Seeker.

— the destroyer.—See Isa. xvi. 4. This is a lively way of expressing that the Assyrians should soon lead them into captivity. "Behold all are gone ! total devastation." Horsley.

— gather them.—Some think that to their people is to be supplied. "The same with bury. See Jer. viii. 2. Ezek. xxix. 5." Seeker.

— Memphis.—"Nomenclaturas urbium ex Hebræa lingua desumptas Græci ad suæ typum sic effinxerunt, ut viderentur apud se natæ. Ita ex Moph fecere Memphis." Boch. Geogr. p. 345. The Arabs call Cairo Menoph at this day. See on ch. vii. 16.

— with their silver.—Three MSS. read לנפש, What was pleasant to their soul, i. e. to them ; which makes the passage very clear. Houbigant understands the place, as now read, of precious furniture hidden in the ground.

Forte legendum מנכר כסף, τα επιθυμηματα, Aq. Symm. Seeker.

"Their valuables of silver ! The nettle shall dispossess them, and the thistle, in their dwellings." מנכר is a noun substantive, signifying generally whatever, for its value or beauty, is most desired. In the word לכסף, the prefix ל denotes that כסף is the material, in which these va'u-

The thorn shall spring up in their tabernacles.

7 The days of visitation are come :

The days of recompense are come. *

Israel shall know that the prophet was foolish,

That the man of the spirit was mad :

For the greatness of thine iniquity, and thy great hatred.

ables were wrought. And when two words are connected, as these two are here, a pronoun, suffixed to the latter of the two, very often belongs properly to the former, which I take to be the case here. So that מְחַמְּרֵם לְכַסֵּפִים may properly be rendered, "Their valuables of, or in, silver." The two words מְחַמְּרֵם לְכַסֵּפִים stand as a nominative absolute, expressing the principal subject of the sentence following; a figure of speech frequent in all the prophets, and in which Hosea particularly delights. The verb יִרְשֶׁם is the third person singular future of the verb יָרַשׁ, in the Hiphil conjugation, with the pronoun plural of the third person suffixed. The nominatives of this Hiphil verb are the nouns קִינִי and חִזְוִה. And בְּאֵהֱלֵיהֶם is to be taken as connected with both these nouns. Thus the exact rendering will be, "Their valuables in silver—the nettle, the thistle in their dwellings shall dispossess them." Horsley.

7. The days.—Venit summa dies, et ineluctabile tempus. Virg.

— the prophet.—The false prophet who rose up among them. So again, v. 8. Mic. iii. 5. Zeph. iii. 4. Jer. ii. 8. v. 31. xiv. 14. xxvii. 14. xxix. 8, 9. Lam. ii. 14. Ezek. xiii.

— the man of the spirit.—See Zech. vii. 12. Mic. ii. 11.

— hatred.—Towards me.

"The days of visitation are come! The days of retribution are come! Israel shall know it. Stupid is the prophet! The man of the spirit is gone mad. In proportion to the greatness of thine iniquity, great also is the vengeance!" The title of prophet seems to have been given to all of the prophetic order; that is, to all who had been educated in the schools of the prophets, and professed a life of retirement and religion; because they were usually the persons to whom the gift of prophecy was imparted, though it was by no means given to all, or even to the greater part of them. Some, perhaps, among them pretended to it, who had never received it at all; and others, to whom it was in some degree given, temporized in the use of it by profane accommodations to the humour of the people, the religious opinions, or the political measures of the court. Of the latter, in particular, we have a remarkable instance in those prophets of Israel who encouraged Ahab to the expedition against the Syrian, for the recovery of Ramoth-Gilead, which proved fatal to himself. That the gross imposture of pretences to inspiration, by persons that had it not at all, was actually practised, seems to be implied in Micah ii. 11, and Jer.

8 The watchman of Ephraim taketh part with my God :

The prophet is as the snare of the fowler

In all his ways.

They have made deep their hatred against the house of my God :

xxiii. 31, 32. That those who had the extraordinary gift, pretended, upon some occasions, to visions which they had never seen, and to commands which they had never received, is certain from the very memorable story of the imposition practised by the old prophet who dwelt in Bethel, at the time of the schism of the ten tribes, upon the man of God of Judah, who had prophesied against Jeroboam's altar. But the more frequent crime was certainly that of temporizing, in the manner of delivering messages of warning, which had been really received. The persons guilty of this conduct were deeply implicated in the guilt of the nation, and were promoters of the idolatry to which the kings and the people were so much addicted ; and they are reprov'd and threatened in every page of the prophetic writings. These are the persons who, in the text of Hosea, under the title of prophets, are taxed with stupidity and madness. Horsley.

"In proportion to." This is the force of על ; "—according to." Horsley.

8. The watchman.—The true prophet, that watcheth Ephraim, Ezek. iii. 17. xxxiii. 7.—

— with.—See עַם, Judges ii. 18.

— my God.—Aut אלהי legendum, aut in utroque membro, quod convenientissimum esset, אלהים rescribendum. Innumera prostant in collationibus codicum exempla του ם omissi in fine linearum vel in ך mutated. Bahrdt.

— In all his ways.—In all the ways of Ephraim. He is a perpetual snare to the people.

[Spread] upon all his ways. Dr. Wheeler.

— of my God.—So two MSS. and a third at present. 6. Ar. Syr. read without any affix, of God ; and these two readings may be reconciled by supposing that אלהי was written contractedly for אלהים. See Bishop Lowth on Isa. v. 1. li 4.

"The watchman of Ephraim is with his God. The prophet!—the snare of the fowler is over all his ways. Vengeance against the household of my God!" The watchman is here evidently a title, by which some faithful prophet is distinguished from the temporizers and seducers. But who in particular is this watchman, thus honourably distinguished, and how is he "with his God?" I think the allusion is to Elijah and his miraculous translation. "Elijah, that faithful watchman, that resolute

9. They have corrupted themselves, as in the days of Gibeah.
He will remember their iniquity, he will visit their sins.
- 10 As grapes in the desert, I found Israel;
As the early fruit on the fig-tree in its beginning of bearing, I saw your fathers.
But they went after Baal Peor, and separated themselves unto shame;

opposer of idolatry in the reign of Ahab and Jezabel, is now with his God, receiving the reward of his fidelity in the enjoyment of the beatific vision. Horsley.

I have changed the punctuation with Houbigant; according to ó. Arab. in the line

“They have made deep their hatred against the house of my God [or, God.]”

9. They have corrupted themselves.—See Deut. ix. 12. The word דעמיקו, according to the analogy of other places, requires a substantive, or a verb in the infinitive mood, to be placed after it. “Sensus: modum excedunt in sceleribus suis. Vulg. bene: profunde peccaverunt. Jon. optime: ad fastigium perduxerunt perversitatem.” Bahrdt.

We may therefore render,

“Even hatred in the house of my God.

They have deeply corrupted themselves,” &c.

— Gibeah.—See Judges xix. 16, &c. and ch. x. 9.

— He will remember.—Syr. supplies נכיל, “Now will he remember, &c.,” and one MS. and five editions have ערה, now.

10. As grapes.—Acceptable as grapes to a traveller in the desert.

— the early fruit.—Figs of the first season, and the earliest of that growth. See Jer. xxiv. 2. Mic. vii. 1, and Bishop Lowth on Isa. xxviii. 4.

— Baal Peor.—See Numb. xxv. 3. Ps. cvi. 28. Selden and Pocock think that this god was so called from the mountain on which he was worshipped, Numb. xxiii. 28. So Jupiter had the additional name of Olympius, and Mercury, of Cyllenius. Others refer to the signification of פער, aperuit, retegít; and suppose an allusion in the name to the shameless manner in which this God was represented, and in which he was worshipped. See Spencer, 332.

— separated themselves.—The word here is different from that used ch. iv. 14, and imports that they became Nazarites, and probably consecrated their hair, to idols. See Spencer, 697.

— unto shame.—Shameful idols; such as their worshippers ought to be ashamed of, and as finally would cause shame to them. See Jer. xi. 13. “And consecrated themselves to shame.” Dr. Wheeler.

And became abominable as the object of their love.

11 As for Ephraim, their glory shall fly away as a bird :
So that there shall be no birth, no carrying in the womb,
no conception.

12 Yea, if they bring up their children, I will destroy them from among men.

For surely woe unto them, when I depart from them.

13 As I have seen Ephraim planted on a rock in a desirable place,

So likewise shall Ephraim bring forth his sons to the murderer.

“To that obscenity.” Luther takes the word בִּשְׁת for the name of an idol. For rendering the passage: Et sanctificaverunt se turpi idolo, he adds this note: Boshet autem sine dubio appellat idolum Peor, turpem et fedam statuam. Horsley.

— abominable.—F. שְׁקִרְיָהִם כְּאִהֲלֵיהֶם, idola eorum [numero] prout tentoria eorum. Confer Jer. xi. 13. Secker. “And as [my] love of them so were their abominations.” Horsley.

11. — their glory.—Prov. xiv. 28. Secker. “Their fruitfulness,” Gen. xlix. 22, 25. Dr. Forsayeth.

— So that.—Dr. Wheeler confirms the rendering of this verse:—

“They shall not bring forth, nor bear in the womb, nor conceive.”

12. — destroy.—See Deut. xxxii. 25. So Syr. “I will consume them from the sons of men.” Compare Mic. vi. 14 with this and the foregoing verse. “Or, They shall become childless among men; as 1 Sam. xv. 33.” Secker.

— depart.—Three MSS. and one ed. read בִּסְרִי, and the w is on a rasure in another MS. So V. Chald. And Aquila has εκακλιαντος μου απ’ αυτων.

13. — planted.—Ephraim is feminine, ch. v. 9.

— on a rock.—Aquila and Symmachus render ὡς ακροστομον; reading כְּצֹר. Theod. has εις πετραν. See לארץ, on the ground, Job. ii. 13.

— in a desirable place.—I read בְּנוֹאִה, with V. and Chald.

The situation of Samaria on a mountain was both strong and pleasant. See on Amos iii. 9.

— So likewise.—See Numb. i. 19, and Nold. vau. Sec. 16.

— bring forth.—The full phrase occurs, Deut. xxxi. 17. וְיָרִידָהּ לְאֵכָל, et erit ad devorandum.

— his sons.—We have here a change in the gender from שְׂחֻלָּה, plantata; and we have another change in לָהֶם, to them, v. 14. See v. 16.

- 14 Give them, O Jehovah—What wilt thou give?
Give them a miscarrying womb, and dry breasts.
- 15 All their wickedness in Gilgal is before me :
For there have I hated them.
For the evil of their doings I will drive them from mine house :
I will no longer love them :
All their princes are revolvers.
- 16 Ephraim is smitten : their root is dried up.
They shall not yield fruit.
Moreover if they bring forth,
I will slay the § beloved children of their womb.
- 17 My God will reject them, because they have not
hearkened unto him :
And they shall be wanderers among the nations.

---

CHAPTER X.

- 1 ISRAEL is a vine which casteth its grapes.

§ Heb. the desires.

---

15.— in Gilgal.—Chald. supplies, is revealed before me ; and R. Tanchum in Pocock, I remember. קרני, before me, or לפני, in my sight, may be understood. “If we suppose ראיתי followed רעיהם, from the similarity of the sound we may conceive it not unlikely that a transcriber dropped it.” Dr. Forsayeth.

— mine house.—See ch. viii. 1.

— love.—The infinitive with the paragogie ה ; or, as Taylor, “I will not add the love of them.”

16. — is smitten.—“Blighted.” The allusion is evidently to a tree killed by what is called a blight. The verb נכה is often used in the particular sense of blighting. Horsley.

— not yield.—Many MSS. and editions read בל with Keri.

CHAP. X. 1. — which casteth its grapes.—Or, “emptying itself.” See Taylor’s Conc. Instead of בוקק, five MSS. leave the word more at large by reading בקק ; which may be the participle Pahul, emptied, barren ; answering to the Chald. vastata ; as נבן is masculine, 2 Kings iv. 39.

He laid up fruit for himself :

But according to the multitude of his fruit, hath he multiplied altars ;

According to the goodness of his land, hath he made goodly images.

2 Their heart is divided : now shall they be found guilty.

He shall break down their altars, he shall destroy their images.

3 For now they say, We have no king :

Houbigant derives the word from the Arab. בִּק, to be fruitful in children, to bud, or to spread forth as a tree. See the lexicons, and Pocock in loc ; which idea suggested the rendering of V. 6. Ar. Syr. The sense will be, that the wickedness of Israel was punished by unfruitful seasons ; or, that he was as a fruitful vine ; but his prosperity corrupted his heart.

— laid up.—See שָׁחַ, Ps. xxi. 5. lxxxix. 19. Formerly, he was a fruitful vine. “He stored up dried grapes in an even, orderly, manner.” Tayl. Conc.

Syrus, quæ fructus suos fecit. Suspicio cum legisse יִשְׂרָאֵל pro יִשְׂרָאֵל. Bahrtdt.

— he made.—One MS. has הִיטִיב ; as V. 6. Ar.

“Israel was a yielding vine ; his fruit was answerable to his vigour. According to the increase of his fruit, he increased in altars ; like the beauty of his land, he made the beauty of his images.” The root בִּיק, or בִּק, signifies properly to empty a vessel of its contents. Hence “vastare.” But a vine “emptying itself” must be a vine pouring forth its internal strength in abundance of fruit. All the ancient versions, except the Chaldee, agree in rendering the participle as expressive of luxuriance. Horsley.

2. — is divided.—In Pual ; as Amos vii. 17. Zech. xiv. 1. between the true God and false ones.

— He shall break down.—“He himself shall rase their altars, shall destroy their pillars.” Dr. Wheeler. “God himself.” Horsley.

3. For now.—For they have rejected both Jehovah and legal government. There was anarchy in the kingdom of Israel for nine years, before Hoshea began to reign. See Usher’s and Blair’s Chronology.

“And as for a king, what shall he do unto us ?”

Dr. Wheeler.

“To us,” or, “for us.” Seeker. “This very moment shall they say, we have no king, because we feared not the Jehovah ; and a king, what could he do for us !” Horsley.

- For we fear not Jehovah :
 And what shall a king do unto us ?
- 4 They spake empty words, when * they sware ?
 And falsehood, when † they made a covenant :
 And now judgment springeth up, as hemlock
 In the furrows of the field.
- 5 Because of the calf of Bethaven
 Shall the inhabitants of Samaria fear.
 For his people shall grieve for him ;
 And his sacrificers shall be pained for him ;

* Heb. in swearing.

† Heb. in making, &c.

4. — empty words.—This resembles the Latin phrase, verba dare It should seem that they refused submission to Hoshea, contrary to their oath and covenant.

“Negotiate—swear false oaths—ratify a treaty.” Negotiate alliances with one power and another—make a treaty with the Assyrians—bind yourselves to it with an oath.—Break your oath, and make a new alliance with the Egyptian. In spite of all measures of crooked policy, all acquisitions of foreign aid and support, judgment is springing up. Horsley.

— springeth up.—In these times of confusion judgment has changed its nature, and has become destructive.

5. — calf.—So ὁ. Ar. Syr. One translation in Montfaugon’s Hexapla has τὸν μόσχον; and Rabbi Tanchum in Picoek has עֵלֵי, calf.

— Bethaven.—See ch. iv. 15.

— inhabitants.—The versions read שְׂכָנֵי.

— shall grieve.—I suppose that the original word is the participle Benoni, אֲבִיבִל.

— sacrificers.—The root signifies incaluit, atratus fuit, in Hebrew, and abscondit in Chaldee; and accordingly the sacrificuli are supposed to be named from their ardent zeal, or their employment in burning incense, or from their dress, or from their recluse life. Selden observes, that the word is used always in the Targum for the hierophants of idolaters.

Hence the Roman word Camillus, i. e. “minister Flaminum, or ministra Flaminicarum.” Pacuvius has this address to Medea:

“ O cœlitum Camilla, expectata advenis :
 Salve, hospita.”

See Serv. Æn. XI. 543. Macr. Sat. III. viii. Boch., Hier. p. f. L. III. i 717, proves that ל and נ are often changed.

— shall be pained.—חִילֵי, which is Cabnet’s conjecture, or חִילֵי, shall

Even for his glory, because it is departed from him.

- 6 Moreover he himself shall be carried into Assyria,
As a present to king Jareb.

Ephraim shall receive shame,
And Israel shall be ashamed of his counsel.

- 7 As for Samaria, her king is cut off
As the foam on the surface of the waters.

- 8 And the high places of Aven, the sin of Israel, shall be destroyed :

The thorn and the thistle shall come up on their altars :

lament, which is Houbigant's, is required by the exigentia loci, though these readings are unsupported by external authority. "F. יחלו, sed non construitur cum על." Secker.

"Verily there shall be mourning over it, of its people and of its priests, who exulted over its glory." יחלו, exulted. The future, even without the conversive ו, is often used for the preterite, according to Kimchi, as he is quoted by Buxtorf. Frequentissima est temporum enallage—præteriti pro futuro, et futuri pro præterito, tum per se et simpliciter in prophetis, tum propter præfixam literam ו. Horsley.

6. —shall be carried.—Heb. portans erit quis; by a change of the points. See on Jonah iii. 7. It was the custom of the easterns, and also of the Romans, to carry away the gods of conquered countries. See Bochart. p. I. L. II. c. xxxiv. p. 357.

—Jareb.—See on ch. v. 13. Or, as a learned friend suggests. יריב, qui contendet, a hostile king.

—shame.—F. בישא, ut Mic. vii. 10. Secker.

"Ephraim shall be overtaken in sound sleep, and Israel shall be disgraced by his own politics." I take the word בשנה for the substantive שנה (heavy sleep), with the prefix. I know not how it can be regularly formed from the root בוש, to signify shame. Horsley.

7. —As the foam.—So Vulg. Chald. and Symmachus has επιζεμα. Many of her kings have rapidly passed away by assassination: and Hoshea shall soon be cut off by the king of Assyria. Mr. Woide proposes to point and render thus, "Samaria is cut off: [part. fem. Niphal] her king is as the foam on the surface of the waters." Perhaps we should read בולכך.

"Thy king, O Samaria, is cut off," &c.

8. —Aven.—The word signifies INIQUITY; and is used for Bethaven. Chald. has Bethel.

—the sin.—The cause of sin, Deut. ix. 21. 1 Kings xii. 30. Isa. xxxi. 7.

And they shall say to the mountains, Cover us ;
And to the hills, fall on us.

9 More than in the days of Gibeah hast thou sinned.
Israel stood in array there.

Did not the war overtake them in Gibeah ?

10 I came against the sons of iniquity and chastised them.
And the ‡ nations shall be gathered together against them.

When they are chastised for their two iniquities.

‡ Heb. peoples.

— And they shall say.—This sublime description of fear and distress our Lord had in view, Luke xxiii. 30 ; which may be a reference, and not a quotation : however, ó. MS. A. have the same order of words which occurs in the evangelist. The parallelism makes the passages more beautiful than Rev. vi. 16 ; and Isaiah ii. 19, wants the animated dramatic form. That there is a reference to the caverns which abounded in the mountainous countries of Palestine, see Bishop Lowth on Isa. ii. 19.

9. More than. So many render. Thou hast been guilty of more atrocious crimes than that committed at Gibeah. Manger conjectures בניי. As in the days, &c. See ch. ix. 9.

— stood.—Against the Benjamites, as justice required.

— overtake.—In a calamitous manner.

10. I came.—I read with Houbigant בארתי. ó. have ηλθε, or ηλθεν, MS. A. ed. Ald. and Bretinger. See also Arab. “This is the reading of MS. Copt.” Mr. Woide. As I then chastised the idolaters, so will I now ; but by a foreign enemy. Mr. Dimock also proposes בארתי, I came ; and עוונות, iniquities, or the calves in Dan and Bethel.

— iniquity.—Many MSS. and some editions read עילה.

— chastised.—V. ó. Syr. Ar. agree in deriving the word from יסר, to chastise ; and justify reading ברוסרם in Niphal. One MS. has באוסרם, when I shall chastise them. Or we may read בוסרם, “in castigare me eos.” See Deut. iv. 36.

— two iniquities.—The calves in Dan and Bethel. Keri has עוונות, and twelve MSS. or editions.

“It is in my desire, and I will chastise them ; and the peoples shall be gathered together against them, when they are tethered down to their two furrows” In the word באסרם, אסר is the infinitive mood of the root אסר in its proper sense of finding, tying to, fastening to or upon, or in some respect confining, restraining. The suffixed pronoun ם expresses the persons who are the objects of such binding, &c. ; and the noun following, under the prefix ל, must denote that to or upon which those persons are bound, &c.—

- 11 And Ephraim shall be a trained heifer, loving to tread out the corn ;
 And I will cause her neck to pass under the yoke.
 Ephraim shall tread out the grain, Judah shall plough,
 Jacob shall break his clods.
- 12 Sow to yourselves in righteousness,
 Reap in the fruit of loving kindness :

It is supposed that the word עֲנִיָּה, the plural of עֲנִיָּה, may render furrows in a ploughed field. The noun מַעֲנֵה, from the root עָנָה, certainly signifies a furrow. Hence it is concluded that the verb עָנָה may signify to make a furrow; and if this be admitted, the noun עֲנִיָּה or עֲנִיָּה, may signify a furrow. If this be the true sense, I am inclined to think the being bound or confined to their two furrows may be a proverbial expression, describing the situation of a person fluctuating in his choice between two things, of which he must choose one. In like manner the situation of extreme difficulty to which the Israelites were reduced under their latter kings, without any human means of relief but in the choice of one of two alliances, that of Assyria and that of Egypt, may be represented under the image of an animal tethered by a short rope in such a manner that its utmost liberty of feeding is but the breadth of a single ridge between two furrows. Horsley.

11. — loving.—Houbigant remarks that the ם in אֶהְבֵּתִי is superfluous. Of the paragogic ם see Præl. Heb. iii. p. 34. “That loveth. Because they were not muzzled, Deut. xxv. 4.” Secker.

— to pass.—I read הַעֲבֵרְתִּי, by conjecture, and adopt Houbigant’s conjecture of מִיֹּט, yoke, for טִיב, good.

Suspicio genuinam lectionem esse

הַעֲבֵרְתִּי עַל עַל טִיב צִיָּאָרָה

“Transire faciam jugum super collum ejus formosum.”

Bahrddt.

— tread out the grain.—I read יָרַךְ, calcabit. See Jer. li. 3. The construction requires a verb which suits the two following, arabit, occabit.

The sense of the verse seems to be, that the descendants of Jacob should be employed in servile offices by their enemies.

“I delighted in treading out [grain]. Therefore I myself for good have crossed her neck.—I will make Ephraim carry me—Judah shall plough, Jacob shall harrow for himself.” Horsley.

12.— in the fruit.—I read לִפְרִי with ὁ. Arab. See the following verse. “ὁ εἰς καρπὸν ζωῆς, לִפְרִי חַיִּים; et לִפְרִי forsā recte. Confer v. 13.” Secker.

Break up to yourselves the fallow-ground of knowledge :
That ye may seek Jehovah,
Till he come and rain righteousness upon you.

- 13 But ye have ploughed wickedness, ye have reaped the punishment of iniquity :

Ye have eaten the fruit of falsehood.

Because thou hast trusted in thy way, in the multitude of thy mighty men,

- 14 There shall arise a tumult among thy § people ;

And all thy fortresses shall be destroyed,

Like the destruction of Zalmunna by the hand of Jerub-baal.

§ Heb. peoples.

— of knowledge.—For יָדַעַת I read יָדַעַת, with ó. Arab. From these alterations arises a most beautiful allegory. If ye sow goodness, ye shall reap the divine mercy ; if ye cultivate the knowledge of Jehovah, he shall pour on you the rain of righteous benignity. On the other hand ye have ploughed, &c.

13. — the punishment of iniquity.—So עָוֶן, Lam. iv. 6 ; חַטָּאָה, Isa. xl. 2. Lam. iii. 39. Zech. xiv. 19 ; and אָשָׁם, Hos. v. 15. Hab. i. 11. See Bishop Lowth on Isa. xl. 2. This particular metonymy of the cause for the effect was natural among the Jews, whose law abounded with temporal sanctions, which God often inflicted.

— thy way.—V. Syr. and four MSS. read בִּרְכִיכָה, thy ways. But ó. (MS. Al. and ed. Ald.) and Arab. and also Jerom and Cyril, read in thy chariots, בִּרְכִיכָה ; which suits the place remarkably well, and is one instance among many, how easily similar letters are confounded.

בִּרְכִיכָה, εἰ τοὺς ἀμαρτημασὶ σου, ó. Vat ; sed Al. ἀμαρσι, recte, בִּרְכִיכָה, quod melius. Vid. prol. ed. Grabe ; quæ docent τοὺς ó. בִּרְכִיכָה vertisse ἀμαρτια, ἀνομια, κακια. Secker.

MS. Copt. also reads ἀμαρσι. Mr. Woide.

14. There shall arise.—Five MSS. read יָקָם. But see Præl. Heb. xxviii. p. 373. Some think that קָם, and the like substitutions of ק for י in the Arabic form, are corruptions of the Hebrew text introduced by scribes well versed in the Arabic language. See on Amos. ii. 7. Houbigant connects this line with the foregoing by a comma. So Syr.

— Zalmunna.—This is the reading of Grotius and Houbigant. Vulg. and ó. MS. Al. have Jerubbaal, a reading mentioned by Jerom. See the history of Gideon's or Jerubbaal's defeat of Zalmunna, Judges viii. It is referred to Ps. lxxxiii. 11. If we read "As Shalman destroyed Beth-Arbel," reference is made to a fact not elsewhere recorded ; possibly to

In the day of battle, the mother and || the children shall be dashed in pieces.

- 15 Thus shall it be done unto you,
O house of Israel, because of your wickedness,
In a morning the king of Israel shall surely be cut off.

|| Heb. together with.

Shalmanezzer's laying waste a city of that name. "ארבל, possibly Arbela in Mesopotamia; said to be so called from Arbelus, a king and god of Assyria. If such a deity was worshipped there, it might be called בית-ארבל." Dr. Forsayeth.

"As Shalman destroyed Betharbal." The sense of the passage is as clear as it could be if the history were known. The allusion is to a military exploit, well known, we may be sure, in Hosea's time, in which the conqueror spared neither sex nor age, and the Israelites are threatened with an equal calamity. Upon the subject of such emendations, as they are called, as have been proposed in this place, Pocock says, "By the same reason every one, for introducing any where such a meaning as pleased him best, might alter the words as he pleased, of which there would be no end, and it would be a matter of very ill consequence; we must fit our meaning to the words, and not the words to our meaning." Horsley.

15. — shall it be done.—Faciens erit quis; Heb. See on Jonah iii. 7.

— house of Israel.—So ó. Arab. See on Amos v. 6.

— your wickedness.—ó. MS. Al. and ed. Ald. read απο προσωπου κακωγ υμων. So Arab. a facie deformitatis vestre. Whence, I conclude, that כפני רעתכם, or רעתכם, is the true reading.

— In a morning.—V. has "Sicut mane." And three editions and ten MSS. have כשחר. Three other MSS. read so originally; and, perhaps, this is the reading of two more. The sense is the same. "As in a morning, &c.," i. e. Hoshea, king of Israel, shall be suddenly cut off by the Assyrians.

"As the morning is brought to nothing, to nothing shall the king of Israel be brought." The force of the word דמה, when it is used as here, to signify a total destruction, is very often what cannot be adequately expressed in any word, hardly in any two or three put together, of the English language. From its leading sense of assimilation, it may naturally signify, the making of a thing all alike, inside and out, from top to bottom: hence the obliterating of all features and distinctions; the resolution of any organized substance into the promiscuous mass of unformed, undistinguished atoms, of which it is composed; the not leaving of a vestige of a form behind; the reducing of a thing to its ύλη πρώτη. We

CHAPTER XI.

- 1 WHEN Israel was a child, then I loved him ;
And out of Egypt I called my son.
- 2 * When I called, † then they departed from me :
They sacrificed to Baalim, and they burned incense to graven images.

* Heb. As.

† Heb. so.

express much the same sort of destruction, but with less force, and much less propriety, by the verb to annihilate. Horsley.

CHAP. XI. 1. — And out of Egypt.—In his youth, see ch. ii. 15. I showed my love to him by calling him out of Egypt. In the same manner God showed his love to his son Jesus; both preserving him in Egypt, and calling him thence. So that the same language is applicable to both events, Matt. ii. 15.

— my son.—For this reading we have Vulg. Syr. Aq. Symm. Theod. For לבני, his sons, ó. Arab. “But MS. Copt. reads τον υιον μου.” Mr. Woide.

— קראתי לבני. — ל is used, not only when giving a name is meant, as Gen. i. 10, which Chald. and some Rabbins understand here, supplying him; but when fetching is meant, as Gen. xxxi. 4; פֹּעַ. Secker.

Although the son here immediately meant is the natural Israel, called out of Egypt by Moses and Aaron, there can be no doubt, that an allusion was intended by the Holy Spirit, to the call of the infant Christ out of the same country. In reference to this event, the passage might be thus paraphrased: “God, in such sort, set his affection upon the Israelites, in the infancy of their nation, that so early as from their first settlement in Egypt, the arrangement was declared of the descent of the Messiah from Judah, and of the calling of that son from Egypt.” See Gen. xlix 10. Numb. xxiii. 22. xxiv. 8, and Deut. xxxiii. 7. Horsley.

2. When I called.—I read with ó. Ar. Syr. and Houbigant, בקרא. This reading will not increase the number of letters, if we suppose the כ represented by a letter which resembles it, the preceding י in the word לבני.

— from me.—I place the stop after מפני, and begin the next branch of the sentence with והם. So ó. Arab. Houbigant. Syr. have, “so they departed from me, and sacrificed, &c.” “Professor Michaelis also divides the words in this manner. Bibl. Orient” Mr. Woide.

— graven images.—The graven image was not a thing wrought in metal by the tool of the workman we should now call an engraver; nor

- 3 And I taught Ephraim to go,
Taking them up in mine arms :
And they knew not that I healed them.
- 4 With the cords of a man I drew them, with the bands of love :
And I was unto them as one that raised the yoke on their cheek :

was the molten image an image made of metal, or any other substance melted and shaped in a mould. In fact, the two are the same thing under different names. The images of the ancient idolaters were first cut out of wood by the carpenter, as is very evident from the prophet Isaiah. This figure of wood was overlaid with plates, either of gold or silver, or sometimes, perhaps, of an inferior metal. And in this finished state it was called a graven image (i. e. a carved image), in reference to the inner solid figure of wood, and a molten (i. e. an overlaid or covered) image, in reference to the outer metalline case or covering. And sometimes both epithets are applied to it at once: "I will cut off the graven and molten image." Nahum i. 14. "What profiteth the graven and molten image." Hab. ii. 18. Horsley.

3. — taught Ephraim to go.—I read הרגלתי, with Houbigant. ὁ. Ar. Syr. Chald. suppose a verb in the first person: "I directed the feet of Ephraim." "Lege הרגלתי." Bahrdrf.

— Taking them.—Vel legendum, אקחם, vel sumendum קח, pro præterito. Secker. V. Ezek. xvii. 5.

— in mine arms.—I read בזרעתי, in mine arm, or בזרעתי, in mine arms, with the versions and Houbigant. One edition has the former reading, and one MS. had it originally. And Abuwalid, and R. Tanchum, in Pocock, read in mine arms. "Quasi nutritius Ephraim portabam eos in brachiis meis," is the rendering of Vulg. and Acts xiii. 18; some copies read ερροφοφορησεν αυτους, he bare them as a nurse.

ורעתי, Codex Lilienthalii posterior. Dathius.

4. — the cords of a man.—The explanation in the Chald. is just and beautiful, "As beloved children are drawn, I drew them by the strength of love," "2 Sam. vii. 14. Yoke, Lev. xxvi. 13." Secker.

"But they would not know, that I preserved their health amid the grievous plagues of men." The plagues of Egypt which touched not the Israelites. The verb רפא is rendered in the lexicons to heal, and so it usually signifies. But it also signifies to preserve health, or, when God is the agent, to give health, as well as to restore it. I render בהבלי amidst grievous plagues, and place the Soph-pasuk at ארם. The version of the Seventy, rightly pointed, gives the same sense, και ουκ εγγωσσαν, οτι ιαμαι αυτους εν διαφορα ανθρωπων. Horsley.

— one that raised.—Vulg. ὁ. Ar. Syr. Chald. read in the singular

And I inclined unto him, I bare with him.

5 He shall return to the land of Egypt :

And the Assyrian shall be his king :

Because they have refused to return unto me.

6 And the sword shall fall grievously on his cities ;

And it shall consume because of him ; and it shall devour for their counsels.

number בָּרִים. MS. three read בָּמַיִם, originally. It is very probable that the words refer to the custom of raising the yoke forward, to cool the neck of the labouring beast. See Salamo Ben Melech in Bishop Lowth on Isa. i. 3. See also Pocock in loc. who quotes Columnella, "Cum ventum ad versuram est, in priorem partem jugum propellat, et boves inhibeat ; ut colla eorum refrigerant, quæ celeriter conflagrant nisi assidue refrigerentur ; et ex eo tumor, ac deinde ulcera invadunt." "Pro בעל, f. בעל." Secker.

— inclined.—Or, turned. See Numb. xx. 17. 1 Sam. viii. 3. Symmachus in Jerom is rendered Et declinavi. See Montfauçon's Hex. But ó. Ar. read ראבית, and I looked on him.

— I bare with him.—ó. Ar. read אוכל לו, or, אוכלו, δυνεσθαι αυτω, taking לא, for which they read לו, from the next verse. I have the pleasure of finding this criticism confirmed by Bahrdt and Manger in loc., except that they read אוכל לו, cibum præbebam ei. See Isa. i. 13. Ps. ci. 5. So ετροφοφορησεν αυτους, Acts xiii. 18 ; which is the common and best supported reading. "Professor Michaelis prefers the reading of אוכל לו, which is confirmed by three MSS. Bibl. Orient." Mr. Woide. The translation would then be

"And I inclined unto him, I led him."

"And I spread provender before him." Horsley.

5. He shall return.—Agreeably to ch. vii. 16. viii. 13 ix. 3, 6, and v. 11. The negative particle in our version, and in Vulg. Syr. Chald. creates, what appears to me, an invincible difficulty.

We may translate, Shall he not return to Egypt? Dr. Forsayeth.

— to return unto me.—To be converted. See Isa. vi. 10. Ezek. xiv. 6.

6. — shall fall grievously.—So we render חלל, Jer. xxiii. 19. Shall fall and rest on, Kimchi in Pocock. Vulnerabit, Symm. Houbigant, from חלל.

— because of him.—See בדי in Noldius.

"And the sword shall weary itself in his cities, and consume his diviners, and devour because of their counsels." Diviners are called בָּרִים, from the

- 7 And my people shall hang in doubt, because of their turning away from me :
And though they call on him together because of the yoke, he will not raise it.
- 8 How shall I give thee up, O Ephraim? how shall I deliver thee up, O Israel?
How shall I make thee as Admah? how shall I set thee as Zeboim?
Mine heart is changed within me :
At the same time my repentings are kindled.
- 9 I will not execute ‡ mine hot anger,
I will not turn to destroy Ephraim utterly ;
For I am God, and not man ;

‡ Heb. the heat of mine anger.

root בדר, because they affected a solitary, ascetic life. This sense of the word בדר, seems of all the most apposite to the context. The word is certainly capable of other senses, and has been differently taken, in this place, by different interpreters ; among those, I mean, who adhere to the Hebrew text, as we now read it. The Seventy, and the Syriac, certainly represent a different reading : בדיר, instead of בדר. Και ησθενησεν ῥομφαία ἐν ταῖς πόλεσιν αὐτοῦ, καὶ κατεπαύσεν ἐν ταῖς χερσὶν αὐτοῦ. “The sword is weakened in his cities, and is become inactive in his hands.” Horsley.

7. — hang in doubt.—They shall be μετεωριζόμενοι, in a state of anxious suspense, Luke xii. 29. See Deut. xxviii. 66.

— turning away from me.—So the Arab. MS. in Pocock. See on ch. viii. 18 “Till my returning.”

— raise it.—See v. 4. Syr. seems to read, “and if they call on God.” ועל אל יקראו. ó read על יקראו יחר, “and God will be angry at their precious things.”

“For they were called to a high degree—All of one mind, they would not be exalted.” As the word רחמים, literally rendering bowels, is used figuratively for the feelings of compassion, with which, when vehement, the viscera are sensibly affected. I am persuaded, the word נחמי here pays back what it borrows, and signifies bowels. Horsley.

8. — Admah.—See Gen. xiv. 8.

— Mine heart.—“My heart is turned upon me, by bowels yearn altogether.” Horsley.

— At the same time.—Συμμεταπαχθῶ, ó.

The Holy One in the midst of thee, and not a frequenter of cities.

10 They shall walk after Jehovah, when he shall roar as a lion :

When he shall roar, then shall their sons hasten from the west :

11 They shall hasten as a bird, from Egypt ;

9. — and not a frequenter of cities.—I inhabit my holy place, and do not, like men, appear in places of public concourse ; “ Et non qui ventito in urbem.” Heb. See this curious explanation in Præl. Heb. xix. 241. “ Professor Michaelis points the word differently, and compares it with the kindred Syriac word which denotes ferus, immitis ; and with the Arabic one which denotes iratus, and particularly ira in Deo. Bibl. Orient.” Mr. Woide. See בער, Cast. lex. I have sometimes thought that we should read בער, that is ביער, burning, or consuming all before me. See Mal. iv. 1.

Putat Vitr. in Jes. x. 34. p. 297, legendum בער, ut hostis. Vide Is. xl. 10. Jer. xv. 8, vel forsàn recte בער in persona hostis, en ennemi. Conf. Exod. vi. 3 et Nold. in ב sign. 20. Or, a holy one is—not come in enmity. Secker.

10. They shall walk.—They shall refrain from idolatry, when he shall display his power in their behalf.

—hasten.—In Cast. lex. חרר is rendered trepide accurrit, festinavit. So :

“ Dum trepidant alæ, saltusque indagine cingunt.”

Virg. Æn. iv. 121.

See more in Pocock for the sense of moring without fear ; where 2 Kings iv. 13, is quoted. No doubt, many of the ten tribes returned from the west, from Egypt, and from Assyria, in consequence of Cyrus’s decree. “Trepidi accurrent. So Ch. Syr. understand it.” Secker.

“ After Jehovah they shall walk—Like a lion he shall roar—verily he himself shall roar ; and children shall hurry from the west.” It is to be observed that the roaring is mentioned twice. It will be consistent with the style of the prophets, to take this as two roarings, and to refer the hurrying of the children from the west to the first ; the hurrying from Egypt and Assyria to the second. The times of the two roarings are the first and second advent. The first brought children from the west ; the renewed preaching of the gospel, at the second, will bring home the Jews. And perhaps this second sounding of the gospel may be more remarkable even than the first, a roaring of Jehovah in person. Horsley.

11. They shall hasten.—“ They shall hurry like the sparrow from Egypt,

And as a dove, from the land of Assyria :

And I will place them in their houses, saith Jehovah.

12 Ephraim hath § compassed me about with falsehood ;

And the house of Israel, and of Judah, with deceit :

But hereafter they shall come down a people of God,

Even a faithful people of saints.

§ Or, beset.

and like the dove from Assyria ; and I will settle them in their own houses, saith Jehovah.” כצפור, like the sparrow. As a particular species of bird (the dove) is connected with Assyria, a particular species also must be connected with Egypt. Therefore I take צפור in its specific, not its general sense. I render the sparrow and the dove ; because the Hebrew nouns, though in the singular number, certainly are to be taken here for the species, not for a single bird of each kind ; a flight of sparrows, and a flight of doves. The sparrow and the dove are both birds of very quick motion. Horsley.

12. — compassed me about.—See Ps. xxxii. 7. cix. 3. ch. vii. 2.

— and of Judah.—So ס. Ar. Syr. Judah cannot be praised at this period, as in the English version. See ch. v. 5, 12. vi. 4. xii. 2.

— they shall come down.—From Babylon. Vulg. reads ירד. Syr. reads רדת, or ירד, and יונאנן, “a holy and faithful people.” If we read ירד and ער, we may render: “Hereafter they shall come down people of God,” or, “a people of God shall come down.”

ס. and Ar. lead us to read

עתה ידעם אל

ועם קדשים נאמר :

“ But now will God know them,

And they shall be called a people of saints.”

se. at their restoration to their own land.

“ Professor Michaelis also reads עם, a people. Bibl. Orient.” Mr. Woide.

“ Ephraim hath compassed me about with treachery, and the house of Israel with deceit. But Judah shall yet obtain dominion with God, and shall be established with the Holy Ones.” קדושים, “the Holy Ones,” the Holy Trinity. By the use of this plural word the prophecy clearly points to the conversion of the Jewish people to the Christian faith. Even the Jewish expositors, R. Tanchum and Kimchi, understand this plural word in this place as signifying God : although the former disapproves not altogether the opinion of those who would understand it of “angels.” Among Christian expositors, Lyra, Oecolampadius, Munster, Mercer, Vatablus, understand it as I do of the Persons of the Godhead. Horsley.

CHAPTER XII.

- 1    EPHRAIM feedeth on the wind, and followeth after the eastwind.
       Every day he multiplieth falsehood and robbery.
       And they have made a league with Assyria:
       And oil is carried into Egypt.
- 2    Jehovah hath also a controversy with Judah;
       And he will set himself to * visit Jacob according to his ways;
       According to his doings will he recompense him.
- 3    In the womb he took his brother by the heel;
       And by his strength he had the power of a prince with God:
- 4    Yea, he had the power of a prince with the angel:
       And he prevailed by might; and he made supplication unto him:
       In Bethel he found him, and there he spake with him.

* Heb. to visit upon.

CHAP. XII. 1. Ephraim.—He not only adopts empty counsels, but dangerous ones. See Job xv. 2, and the addition in ó. Prov. ix. 12.

— eastwind.—Which was parching and noxious.

— robbery.—ó. read רשע, and vanity.

2. — According to his doings.—Seven MSS. three editions, the versions, and Chald. read וּבְמַעֲלָלָיו, And according to his doings, &c.

3. — by the heel.—The action denoted that he would supplant him in the right of primogeniture. See Gen. xxv. 26. xxvii. 36. “And in his adult vigour he had power with God.” Horsley.

4. — the angel.—Who represented the invisible Jehovah, John i. 18.

— by might.—Instead of בְּכֹחַ, he wept, of which we read nothing, Gen. xxxii. Houbigant conjectures that we should read בָּכָה, i. e. בָּכָה.

“Even matched with the angel he had power, and was endued with strength. He had wept, and made supplication.” “Matched with the angel.” This I take to be the exact force of the Hebrew אֵל מְלָאךְ, προς τον αγγελον. Horsley.

— spake with him.—עָנֵה. So. ó. MS. A. Ar. Syr. Houbigant.

“With us.” עִמָּנוּ. It is perhaps a question that has never been accu-

- 5 And Jehovah God of hosts, Jehovah is the name appointed for a memorial of him.
- 6 Therefore turn thou unto thy God;
Observe loving-kindness and judgment;
And hope in thy God always.
- 7 He is a trafficker; in his hand are the balances of deceit;
He loveth to oppress:
- 8 And Ephraim hath said, surely I am become rich;
I have found myself substance.
All his labours shall not be found profitable unto him, rately discussed, in what cases the suffix ך may be taken as the pronoun of the third person sing. mase.; whether, when attached to any other words than the infinitives and third persons sing. future of verbs. If to any other words, whether to undeclinables. Horsley.
-

5. — memorial.—The name by which he is remembered and distinguished, Ex. iii. 15.

7. — a trafficker.—We may render the word, a Canaanite. See Susanna, v. 56.

“O thou seed of Canaan, and not of Judah.”

“Canaan the trafficker.” God says to the prophet, “Instead of turning to me, and keeping to works of charity and justice, he is a mere heathen huckster. Thou hast miscalled him Jacob. He is Canaan. Not Jacob the godly, the heir of the promise. Canaan the cheat, the son of the curse.” The Hebrew word כנען, is both a proper name and an appellative, rendering a merchant. And to preserve the ambiguity in my translation, I join the appellative and the proper name together. By giving the proper name without the appellative, or the appellative without the proper name, the whole spirit of the original would be lost to the English reader. All the ancient versions, except the Chaldee, give the proper name. Horsley.

8. — found myself substance.—Perhaps we should read יח, Inventis miser abstinet. Hor.

— his labours.—I read with ṣ. Ar. יעִר: or יעִר his labour: and לוֹ, unto him; and I suppose a preposition to be understood before עֵן; which is a very common construction.

— be found.—He shall not possess, or enjoy, the fruit of them. “לא ימצא לי may mean, suffice me not. See Josh. xvii. 16.” Seeker.

I translate לא ימצא לי, have not been sufficient for me. See Josh. xvii. 16; and render the latter part of the verse thus: Yet all I have acquired by my labours [see Ps. cxxviii. 2. Isa. xlv. 14] has not been sufficient for

For the iniquity wherewith he hath sinned.

- 9 And Jehovah thy God, who brought thee up out of the land of Egypt,
Will again make thee to dwell in tents, as in the days of old.
- 10 Yet have I spoken unto the prophets;
And I have multiplied vision;
And by the † prophets have I used similitudes.
- 11 Verily in Gilead there is iniquity;
Surely they are become vanity.

† Heb. hand of the prophets.

me, by reason of the iniquity wherewith I have sinned. I read הַטְּרִי, the א being omitted, as Job xxxiii. 18. Ruth ii. 9, &c. Dr. Forsayeth.

To preserve the turn of the original, we should render, "found sufficient for him."

יִיִּם sunt opes laboribus partæ, et invenire alteri aliquid est sufficere ad aliquid. De isto usu verbi נָצַח, V. Jos. xvii. 16. Judg. xxi. 14. Num. xi. 22. Bahrdt. "Nevertheless Ephraim shall say, Although I became rich, I acquired to myself [only] sorrow; all my labours procured not for me what may expiate iniquity." Horsley.

9. — who brought thee up.—I supply הַמַּעֲלֶה with הוּא. Ar. Syr. Chald. See on ch. xiii. 4.

— of old.—Chald. and MS. Arab. in Pocock have קָדִם. And MS. 245, supposed to be written about A.D. 1290, has עוֹלָם.

I will deprive you of your habitations, and will cause you in your captive state to inhabit tents, as ye formerly did in the desert. See Mic. iv. 10. If we read נִדְוָה, the feast of tabernacles must be meant.

נִדְוָה, as in the days of the appointed time: alluding to the forty years; during which, on account of the frequent provocations of the children of Israel, God had determined that they should dwell in the wilderness, Numb. xiv. 34. Dr. Forsayeth.

10. — similitudes.—Comparisons, or parables; and typical representations. I have endeavoured to avert thy punishment, by sending a succession of prophets. Chald. reads אֲשֶׁלָּה, I sent.

11. Verily in.—Syr. has בְּגִלְעָד, and perhaps read עִם, "with Gilead." Chald. has בְּגִלְעָד אִם. Perhaps the preposition ב is understood in the text. אִם f. אִךְ. Secker. "I have spoken [coming] upon the prophets, I have also multiplied vision; and by the ministry of the prophets, I have shown similitudes." Horsley.

- In Gilgal they sacrifice oxen :
 Moreover their altars are as heaps
 In the furrows of the field.
- 12 And Jacob fled into the country of Syria ;
 And Israel served for a wife ;
 And for a wife he kept sheep,
- 13 And by a prophet Jehovah brought up Israel out of Egypt,
 And by a prophet was he preserved.
- 14 Ephraim hath provoked ‡ most bitterly :
 Therefore his Lord will leave his blood upon him,
 And will recompense to him his reproach.

‡ Heb. with bitteresses.

— oxen.—In Gilgal the princes sacrifice. ó. They read שרים.

— as heaps.—As common as heaps of stones. See Isà. v. 2. Palestine was a stony country.

12. — kept sheep.—Houbigant suspects that the order is disturbed ; and observes the want of connection, about which he thinks all the commentators unsatisfactory. Pocock supposes the best connection to be, That Ephraim was much degenerated from his ancestors, who in a fugitive and low state relied on God's providence, and when slaves in Egypt willingly submitted themselves to Moses as God's minister. After the word kept, there may be an omission of some words. If we suppose that there followed a reference to Gen. xxxi. 3, that Jehovah appeared to Jacob in a vision, instances of the divine goodness in v. 12, 13, will be opposed to the ingratitude of Ephraim in v. 14 ; as v. 10, stands opposed to v. 11.

"Kept watch." שמר, excubias egit. In the office of a shepherd. Horsley.

14. — leave his blood.—Will not cleanse him from the guilt of blood shed by him.

— his reproach.—The reproach shown by him to his God.

"Therefore his murders shall be upon him—He shall be forsaken—and his master shall requite unto him all his blasphemies." His master, that is, his conqueror, who shall hold him in servitude, and be the instrument of God's just vengeance. Horsley.

CHAPTER XIII.

- 1 WHEN Ephraim spake trembling,
He exalted himself in Israel;
But when he offended in the matter of Baal, he died.
- 2 And now they * sin more and more,
And have made to themselves a molten image;
Of their silver by their skill have they made idols:
All of it is the work of the artificers:

* Heb. they add to sin.

CHAP. XIII. 1. — trembling.—The original word may be a participle, רָחַח. See its sense in Chald. Syr. and Ar. in Cast. lex. expressive of fear and its effects: tremuit, exterruit, imbecillus fuit, impeditus lingua fuit.

“Vox faucibus hæsit.” Virg.

Compare Isa. lxvi. 2. When Ephraim spake humbly, and trembling at my word. ô may have read כִּירָה, “according to the law,” which makes a good sense. See Houbigant, — He exalted himself.—We may read נָשָׂא, he was a prince. The god may have been formerly supplied by a point. This reading will answer exactly to Syr. See also Chald.

— he died.—He was consigned to destruction from his enemies. “When Ephraim spake, there was dread: he was exalted in Israel. But he offended in Baal, and died.” Horsley.

2. — Of their silver.—ô. MS. Pachom. and ed. Ald. read ἐκ χρυσίου καὶ τοῦ ἀργυρίου: and one MS. and two ed. add נִמְצָהבם.

— by their skill.—Reading בְּתַבְנִיתָם. Another good reading is, כְּתַבְנִיתָם “according to the similitude.” See V. ô. Ar. Syr. Chald. and the many MSS. and editions which read כ for ב.

“And have made to themselves a molten image of their silver;

According to the similitude of idols; all of it the work of the artificer.”

כְּתַבְנִיתָם Recte: licet תַּבְנִית exemplar denotet. Secker.

“In their great wisdom.” So I render כְּתַבְנִיתָם. Pro sua scilicet sapientia” Observe, that the reading כְּתַבְנִיתָם, instead of בְּתַבְנִיתָם, is confirmed by a great number of the old editions, by thirty-one MSS. of Kennicott’s collation, and by eighty-five in all of De Rossi’s. Horsley.

— All of it.—כֻּלָּם, all of them, is the reading of four MSS. and of two more originally. There is still better authority of MSS. for reading כָּלָו. But after כָּלָה we may understand דְּבָרָה.

They say concerning them,
Let the men who sacrifice kiss the calves.

- 3 Therefore shall they be as the morning cloud ;
And as the early dew which passeth away :
As chaff driven by a whirlwind from the threshing-floor ;
And as smoke from the chimney.
- 4 But I am Jehovah thy God,
Who brought thee up out of the land of Egypt :

— concerning them.—לָהֶם, f. ex præced. לֹה et seq. הֵם. Secker.

— the men who sacrifice.—See Isa. xxix. 19.

אֲכִיזֵי אָדָם, the poor among men. See also Mic. v. 5.

— kiss.—See 1 Kings xix. 18. Thus Cicero describes a statue of Hercules as having “ rictum ejus ac mentum paulo attritius, quod in precibus et gratulationibus non solum adorare, verum etiam osculari, solebant.” In Verr. Act. ii. L. iv. Sec. 43. The margin seems better. “ The sacrificers of men.” Secker.

“ And now they repeat [their] sin: and, in their great wisdom, they have made to themselves molten images of their silver; idols, the workmanship of artificers. Their finishing is, that they say, ‘ let the sacrificers of men kiss the calves.’ ” This verse briefly describes the progress of idolatry among the ten tribes, from the time of the introduction of the worship of the Syrian Baal in the reign of Ahab, which may be reckoned its commencement. From this time they were daily multiplying their idols, and adopting all the abominations of the heathen rites. The earlier worship of Jeroboam’s calves was the least part of their guilt, for it was not properly idolatry, it was a schismatical worship of the true God, under disallowed emblems, and by a usurping priesthood. But, at length, superstition made such a progress among them, that human sacrifices were made an essential rite in the worship of the calves; and this was the finishing stroke, the last stage of their impiety, that they said, “ Let the sacrificers of men kiss the calves.” Let them consider themselves as the most acceptable worshippers, who approach the image with human blood, “ Kiss the calves,” i. e. worship the calves. Among the ancient idolaters, to kiss the idol was an act of the most solemn adoration. Horsley.

3. — from the chimney.—Ἀπο καπνοδόχης. Theod.

“ Ut calidis fumus ab ignibus Vanescit.” Sen. Troad. Act. ii.

4. — Who brought thee. Here again, as ch. xii. 9. ὁ. Ar. Syr. Chald. supply a verb: and, it is very remarkable, that two MSS. have הַמַּעֲלֶה, qui ascendere feci te; as the word is written, Deut. xx. 1. Ps. lxxxi. 10.

- And thou hast known no God but me ;
 And there is no Saviour besides me.
- 5 I knew thee in the desert,
 In the land of great drought.
- 6 In their pasture they have been filled :
 They have been filled, and their heart hath been exalted :
 Therefore have they forgotten me.

— known.—Experienced the power and goodness of no other God.

— but me.—See בלתי, Isa. x. 4.

There is a remarkable addition in ó. as in Prov. ix. 12, 18, and other places. They read to this effect:—

ואנכי יהוה אלהיך
 נטה שמים ובורא ארץ.
 ירי עשו כל צבא השמים
 ולא הראיתך אותם ללכת אחריהם :
 ואנכי כעלהך מארץ מצרים וגו'

" But I am Jehovah thy God,
 Who stretched out the heavens and created the earth :
 My hands have made all the host of the heavens :
 And I showed them not unto thee that thou shouldest walk after them.
 And I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt," &c.

The omission in the Hebrew text may have arisen from the carelessness of transcribers, who passed from one ואנכי to the other.

5. — knew thee.—"The versions, except the Vulgate, and Chald. read ריעיתך, fed thee. Professor Michaelis. Bibl. Orient." Mr. Woide.

"Sustained thee." ירעיתך, i. e. literally, I knew thee, i. e. I acknowledged thee as my peculiar people by my watchful care of thee ; I was attentive to thee, protecting thee in all dangers, and supplying all thy wants. Horsley.

— great drought.—In Arab. لااب is sitivit: whence Libya. See لااب and لوب, Cast. lex.

6. In their pasture.—I propose reading במרעיתם, and suppose the vau removed from the beginning of the sentence, and joined to the verb, as Gen. xxii. 4. Numb. xxx. 8. Jer. xxiii. 39. Syr. and Chald. may read ישבעו שבע, When I fed them. Or, we may read with ó, MS. A. Saturati sunt saturando. "Εἰς πλησμονην, ó. quasi legissent, לשבע. Sequitur." Secker.

"In their pasture they have been satisfied to the full, and their heart hath been exalted."

"In the land of parching thirst, as in their own pastures: and they were fed to the full. Fed to the full, and their heart was lifted high;—

- 7 And I will be unto them as a lion ;
As a leopard in the way will I observe them :
8 I will meet them as a bear bereaved of her whelps :
And I will rend the caul of their heart :
And there will I devour them as a lioness.
A beast of the field shall tear them.

for that very reason they forgot me." "Parching thirst, תלאיבת. The root לאב occurs nowhere in the Bible, nor any of its derivatives except this noun ; nor this noun, except in this place. I take the noun to be plural, and the correct orthography to be תלאיבות. If the root לאב signify to be thirsty, this noun, with the initial heemantic ת, must be from the Hiphil of the verb, and must signify causes of thirst ; and a land of such causes must be a land which, from the nature of the soil and other circumstances, affording no water, produces excruciating thirst in animals. The plural number is used only to give intensity to the signification, which I have endeavoured to express by the epithet parching. Horsley.

7. — observe.—Fix the eye on them, to take the surest occasion of seizing them. "Insidunt pardi condensa arborum, occultatique earum ramis in prætereuntia desiliunt." Plin. apud Boch. p. 788. Or, "in the way to Assyria. As ó. Ar. Syr., which rendering gives a force to שם, v. 8.

"By the way side I will lie upon the watch." על דרך, close by the way, not in or upon it.—אשר, the first person singular, future kal, of the verb שרר, insidiabor. Horsley.

8. — bereaved.—A circumstance which adds a particular degree of fierceness.

"Citius me tigris abactis Fœtibus, orbatique velint audire leones."

Stat. See Boch. 813.

They never venture to fire upon a young bear when the mother is near ; for, if the cub drop, she becomes enraged to a degree little short of madness ; and if she get sight of the enemy, will only quit her revenge with her life. Cook's Voyage, 1784, V. iii. p. 307.

— heart.—The seat of the blood, with which wild beasts love to glut themselves. Boch. 740.

— A beast.—Syr. Ar. prefix And. And ó. ed. Ald. agree with Ar. and have Kai θηρια. So nine MSS. and one ed. have דומה.

"The wild beast shall tear them limb from limb." The margin of our English Bible gives beast of the field as a more literal translation of the Hebrew דומה השדה. But I think wild beast renders the idea of the original more adequately. For the beast of the field, i. e. of the open country, is so called as distinguished from the tame domesticated, that lives in enclosures 9 I have destroyed thee, O Israel: for who † will help thee?

10 Where is thy king? in what place?

† Heb. for who is in thine help.

and stalls, and associates in towns and houses with man. The distinction of the savage character is better expressed by the epithet wild, than by the substantive of the field. תבקעם, cleave them, or rip them. The verb expresses a violent distraction and severing of united parts in any manner; and it is to be differently rendered, with regard to the particular agent and patient. When the agent is a wild beast, and the patient the beast's prey, it must be tearing limb from limb; tearing by itself is inadequate. Horsley.

9. I have destroyed thee.—Syr. reads שחיתך: and for בי בי, this version reads בִּי. 6. and Ar. also read בִּי. One MS. omits בִּי. Houbigant highly approves of the reading in Syr. “Michaelis also reads בִּי.” Mr. Woide. “Reading for בִּי בִּי only בִּי, as 6. Syr. it would be, Thou art destroyed [one hath destroyed thee], O Israel; who shall help thee; for so ב, Ps. cxviii. 7. 1 Chron. xv. 26. Dent. xxxiii. 26 Or changing the points it may be, thou hast destroyed thyself. See Isa. xiv. 20. Ezek. xxviii. 17. Or, שחיתך. Comp. vi. 1.” Secker. “שחיתך est infinitivus nominascens. Perditio tua adest, O Israel.” Bahrldt.

— will help thee.—Here we may suppose the Arabism, which makes in auxiliante equivalent to auxilians. See Pol. Syn. Judg. xviii. 1. Robertson's Clavis, Ex. xviii. 4, and Nahum iii. 9.

“It is thy destruction, O Israel, that upon me [alone it lies] to help thee.” The proper name Israel is evidently a vocative, and is to be taken apart by itself. The four other words form a sentence, with the verb substantive understood. The three words בִּי בִּי בעורך, with an ellipsis, which must be supplied, make a clause which stands as the nominative case before the verb substantive understood; and שחיתך is a noun substantive, with an affix, which stands as a second nominative after the verb substantive understood. The supply of the ellipsis in the nominative clause is obvious and easy, and the order of construction of the complete sentence will be this: בִּי בִּי [היה כל אשר] בעורך [היה] שחיתך ישראל. “That in me is [every thing which is], for thy help [is], thy destruction, O Israel.” Horsley.

10. Where.—Read איה with V. 6. Ar. Syr. Chald. Houbigant, one MS. and perhaps another. See Kennicott's Diss. on 1 Chron. xi. p. 514. “Professor Michaelis also adopts this reading.” Mr. Woide. “Rather: where is thy king now to save thee? See איה אפוא, Judg. ix. 38. Isa. xix. 12. Job xvii. 15, where now?” Secker.

That he may save thee in all thy cities.
 And where are thy judges, to whom thou saidst,
 Give me a king and princes?

11 I gave thee a king in mine anger;

And I will take him away in my wrath.

12 The iniquity of Ephraim is treasured up, his sin is laid up in store.

13 The pains of a travailing woman shall come upon him:

And this is an unwise son;

For now he would not else have tarried in the place of the breaking forth of children.

14 Yet I will redeem them from the grave, I will deliver them from death.

O death, where is thine overthrow?

— to whom.—Here may be a reference to what passed on the appointment of king Hoshea, after some years of anarchy.

11. — a king.—Hoshea, 2 Kings xvii. 1.

12. The iniquity.—Or we may render, “The iniquity of Ephraim is bound up in my treasures, his sin is hidden in my stores.” Bound up, hid, or laid up in some safe or secret place; that, when occasion shall require, they may be produced. Poeock: who refers to Deut. xxxii. 34, 35. Job. xiv. 17; on which latter place see Schulzens.

13. — And this.—Eight MSS. read וְהַזֶּה.

— For now.—Instead of עַתָּה, a time, V. Syr. read עַתָּה, now: which is also the reading of ó. ed. Ald. and MS. Pachom. εἰς τοῦτο νῦν οὐ μέν. The son begotten increases the pangs of the mother; and prolongs his own birth, as it were unwisely. The prophet compares Ephraim to a travailing woman whose pangs are great and protracted. “נִשְׁבֵּר” is something relating to birth, probably the os uteri, 2 Kings xix. 3. Now he shall not. ó. Syr. Vulg. עַתָּה. עַתָּה scarce signifies long. It may be, It is time he should not stay.” Seeker. “Fractio liberorum est locus e quo erumpunt infantes: i. e. matris.” Bahrdt. “He is of the thoughtless race, for it is the critical moment, when he ought not to stand still;—the children are in the aperture.” Horsley.

14. Yet I will redeem.—However, I will at length be their God, and they shall triumph over death and destruction. I will fulfil my promise to their forefathers.

— where.—We should read twice אֵינֶה, where, for אֵינִי, I will be. So ó. Ar. Syr. Aquila. 1 Cor. xv. 55. Heubigant See Kennicott, quoted v. 10.

— overthrow.—Very many MSS. and some editions read דְּבִרָךְ; and

O grave, where is thy destruction ?

Repenting is hidden from mine eyes.

- 15 Though he was fruitful among his brethren,
 There shall come an eastwind, a ‡ mighty wind shall come up from the desert ;
 And his spring shall become dry,
 And his fountain shall be § dried up.

‡ Heb. a wind of Jehovah.

§ Or, exhausted.

דבר in Hebrew is to destroy, to subdue, and דבאר in Arab. is exitium, mors, as Vulg. See Cast. lex. The word in ó. is δαῖς, which reading Ar. confirms by rendering punishment, from עקב. Syr. has victory : from זכא : which is equivalent to the Hebrew דבר. Houbigant supposes that St. Paul [or, perhaps some ancient Greek translator used by him] may have read דרבנך, thy sting, for דברך. The reader will observe that the idea of sting does not occur in Chald. where we find the general terms of killing and destroying. Mr. Dimock also thinks that we should read דרבנך for דברך.

— thy destruction.—The destruction inflicted by thee. Here Syr. has stimulus, from עקס, and Ar. spina, see Cast. lex. שך, and Vulg. morsus : but how they read קטבך, the true notion of which, according to Cast. lex., is excisio, confractio tua, I cannot conjecture. Perhaps they transposed the clauses. νικος, or νικη, victory, is a general idea implied in קטב.

St. Paul naturally applies to the resurrection what the prophet says of future natural happiness.

“From the power of hell I will redeem them. From death I will reclaim them. Death! I will be thy pestilence. Hell! I will be thy burning plague.” In this passage death and hell are personified very remarkably. And the two persons are threatened each with an incurable disease, causing speedy death to be inflicted by God the Saviour. Horsley.

— Repenting.—Change of purpose ; my veracity being concerned.

15. — was fruitful.—One MS. reads יפרא : and the true reading may have been יפרה. The word אפרים is derived from פרה, to be fruitful. The versions either read יפרר, separated ; or, as Pocock thinks, gave פרא the sense of the Arab. פري, secuit. Because Ephraim set up a different worship, there shall come, &c. But the former reading makes the passage much more beautiful.

— There shall come.—“ó. legebant, “ביארו, επαξει Κύριος.” Secker.

— And his spring.—V. ó. Ar. Syr. render :

“And shall dry up his spring,
 And shall exhaust his fountain.”

As to him, the treasure of all his || pleasant vessels shall be spoiled :

16 Samaria shall be made desolate ; for she hath rebelled against her God.

They shall fall by the sword ; their infants shall be dashed in pieces ; and their women with child shall be ripped up.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 TURN, O Israel, unto Jehovah thy God ;
For thou hast fallen by thine iniquity.

2 Take with you words,
And turn unto Jehovah,
Say unto him all of you :
Pardon iniquity : let us receive good :
That we may render the fruit of our lips.

‡ Heb. Vessels of desire.

Seventeen MSS. and one edition read ירִבֵּשׁ, which may be pointed in Hipbil, as may also יִרְחִיב.

— him.—Ephraim.

— his pleasant vessels — ó. Ar. supply the pronoun, and read חֲמִדָּתֵי, of his desire. “Cum in oriente rarissimæ essent aquæ vivæ et seaturientes, fons aquarum poetis erat imago summæ felicitatis et abundantiae rerum optimarum.” Bahrddt.

“Nay in truth he is run wild among savage beasts. The east wind shall come. Jehovah is raising up the blast from the wilderness ; and he shall dry up his fountain, and lay dry his spring shall he. He shall plunder the storehouse of all goodly vessels.” Horsley.

CHAP. XIV. 1. — iniquity.—Ten MSS. and two editions read בְּעִוְיָךְ, as ó.

2. — Say.—Five editions and many MSS. read with V. Syr. וְאָמַרְוּ.

— all of you — This is Houbigant's way of pointing the sentence.

— let us receive.—Houbigant reads נִקְחָה. See Chald.

— the fruit of our lips.—The phrase, as it stands, is not Hebrew ; because פְּרִי, the calves, should be in statu constructo. Jos. Mede, p. 282,

- 3 Assyria will not save us :
 We will not ride on horses :
 And we will no more say, Ye are our Gods,
 To the work of our hands.
 For * from thee the fatherless obtaineth mercy.
- 4 I will heal their turning away from me, I will love them freely :
 For mine anger is turned away from him.
- 5 I will be as the dew to Israel :
 He shall blossom as the lily :

* Or, by.

and Le Clerc on Heb. xiii. 15, read משפתי פרי, fruit from our lips. ó. Ar. read the fruit of our lips, and Syr. the fruit of your lips, as if they omitted ב. See Heb. xiii. 15.

“Bullocks, our own lips.” Lips are here put for praises and thanksgivings uttered by the lips. This kind of metonymy, which puts the cause or instrument for the effect, is very frequent with the sacred writers. By calling devotions bullocks, the phraseology shows that this form of supplication is prepared for those times when animal sacrifices will be abolished, and prayer and thanksgiving will be the only offering. Horsley.

3. — We will not ride.—Three editions and many MSS. read ועל, and upon, with Syr. The kings of the Israelites were forbidden to multiply horses, Deut. xvii. 16. See Isa. xxxi. 1.

— from thee.—So Noldius. A te auctore.

— the fatherless.—Such might the Israelites be justly called in their captivity.

4. I will heal.—From these words to the end of v. 8, Jehovah graciously answers the prayer of his people, supposed to be addressed to him during their captivity. And the dramatic turn, from v. 1, to the close of the chapter, is very beautiful.

— turning away.—V. ó. read plurally their turnings away, משבירתם. This was done by the captivity. The Jews have not been idolaters since. “Michaelis reads משבירתם, fracturam eorum.” Mr. Woide. “I will restore their conversion. I will love them gratuitously; for mine anger is departed from me.” I take conversion as a collective noun, for converts; like captivity, for the captives, and dispersion, for the dispersed. The converted nation God promises to restore to his favour, and to a situation of prosperity and splendour. Horsley.

And he shall strike his roots as Lebanon.

- 6 His suckers shall spread,
And his glory shall be as the olive-tree,
And his smell as Lebanon.
- 7 They that will sit under his shadow shall return :
They shall revive as corn :
They shall break out as a vine,
The † scent of which shall be as the wine of Lebanon.
- 8 What hath ‡ Ephraim to do any more with idols ?

† Heb. memorial.

‡ Heb. Ephraim, what hath he to do.

5. — strike.—ὁ βαλεῖ. See also Ar. Syr. and Cast. lex. Nonbigrant ingeniously conjectures יר, and he shall extend. The sense is, He shall be as firmly rooted as a mountain. Sub ipsis radicibus montium consedit. Sal. B. Cat. Sec. 57.

“ Mare montis ad ejus Radices frangit fluctus.”

Lucretius, of Etna, vi. 695.

6. — shall spread.—“ His suckers shall spread farther and farther.” יכלו, shall go on. I think the image is the increasing vegetation of the forest by the branches of the parent tree reaching quite down to the ground, where, resting upon the moist soil, each strikes a new root, or more than one, and each root sends up a new tree. Horsley.

— as Lebanon.—Though cedars have a fragrant smell, I prefer reading כלבנה, as frankincense, with Chald.

7. — as corn.—Perhaps כרן, which, when committed to the ground, seems to die. ὁ. have ζησονται και μεθυσθησονται σιτω, which may be considered as a double rendering; one translator having read ירו, and another ירו. This latter reading suggests כן for כן: “they shall be watered as a garden.” The exigence of the place seems to require a comparison. One MS. adds ירוש. “They shall live on corn and choice wine.”

— wine of Lebanon.—Il seroit difficile de trouver ailleurs du vin plus excellent que celui qu'on nous presenta; ce qui nous fit juger, que la reputation des vins du Liban, dont il est parlé dans un Prophete est, très bien fondé. La Roque Itiner. Syr. & Liban. p. 18. Quoted by Manger loc. “They shall return. Sitting under his shadow, they shall abound in corn. They shall germinate like the vine, [and] be famous as the wine of Lebanon.” Horsley.

8. What hath Ephraim.—I read יר, ei, for י, *mih*i, with ὁ, Arab. لی.

I have heard him ; and I have seen him as a flourishing fir-tree.

From me is thy fruit found.

9 Who is wise, that he may understand these things?

And prudent, that he may know them?

For the ways of Jehovah are right,

And the just will walk in them :

αὐτῷ, ὁ. לו, recte." Secker. "Lege לו, ὁ. At Jon. et Syrus יאמר supplent. 'Ephraim dicet: quid mihi, &c.' " Bahrdt.

"Ephraim! what have I to do any more with idols?" An exultation of Jehovah over idols. Ephraim! Even he is returned to me. I have no more contest to carry on with idols. They are completely overthrown. My sole Godhead is confessed. Horsley.

— I have heard him.—We may better read the Hebrew thus: עֲנִיתִי אֲשֶׁרֹנִי. "I have heard him, I have seen him," &c. as ὁ. MS. A. For the punctuation see Syr. Chald.

I have answered him. And I will make him flourish like a green fir-tree. From me thy fruit is supplied." I take the word יאשרוני, as the first person fut. sing. Kal of the verb אָשַׁר, to prosper, or to make prosperous, as it is taken in all the ancient versions. Houbigant observes, that the verb in Arabic is specifically applied to the prosperous growth of trees. The Vulgate seems to have taken the verb in this sense here—"et dirigam eum ego ut abietem virentem"—dirigam—I will lead him up straight and tall. Horsley.

9. — wise.—"Wise—intelligent—shall comprehend." The three words חָכָם, בֵּן, and יָדַע, are so nearly allied in signification, that they are often used promiscuously one for the other, especially the two first. Each, however, has its own strict sense different from the strict sense of either of the other. The root חָכָם, speaks of wisdom merely as a power in the mind. To be endowed with the power or powers of wisdom. בֵּן speaks of that power in action, actually exercised in observing and noticing the differences of things, and passing a judgment of distinction between them. This wisdom energizing, we call in our language, understanding or intelligence; in the popular not in the metaphysical sense of the word intelligence. Lastly יָדַע, although it speaks of knowledge of any sort, and by whatever means acquired; and has many senses which belong not to the English word to know, for it renders the Latin noscere, and all its compounds; yet strictly it is to know that knowledge which is acquired by בֵּן. Horsley.

— and the just.—"For straight and even are the ways of Jehovah, and in them shall the justified proceed, but revolvers shall stumble." צַדִּיק is properly a forensic word, and signifies a person found not guilty, acquitted, and justified upon a trial. Hence, in a theological sense, it is a person found innocent in the sight of God. The plural צדיקים, except where the matter of the discourse is relative to mere secular transactions, signifies "the justified," those that are justified by faith in the Redeemer coming, or to come, and clothed with his righteousness. פשעים expresses a degree and enormity of disobedience far beyond any thing contained in the notion of transgressors, prevaricators, or any other denomination of guilt, by which the word is rendered in our English Bible. It denotes rebels in the highest sense of the word. Such as rise in opposition to the authority of a sovereign by right, because he is by right a sovereign. And in a religious sense such as wilfully with premeditation disobey God from the hatred of his authority. חטא is a fault committed through inadvertence. עון is iniquity resulting from a perverse, wayward disposition. מרד or מרה, generally rendered rebellion, is rather provocation, wilful disobedience, in particular instances, either of doing something forbidden, or neglecting something commanded; and this often repeated; but proceeding rather from a reluctance of obedience, with respect to some particular command, than a general settled aversion to what is good. But נשא is beyond all these. It is bold avowed rebellion or revolt, disowning the authority of the sovereign, and having for its end the overthrow of his sovereignty. Horsley.

But transgressors shall fall in them.

---

—fall in them.—They shall stumble and fall in the midst of that light, those directions or commandments, which ought to have guided them.

The five last lines are spoken in the prophet's own person; and form an apt conclusion to his prophecies.

THE BOOK OF MICAH.

CHAPTER I.

- 1 THE Word of Jehovah which came to Micah the Morasthite, in the days of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah : which * came unto him in a vision concerning Samaria and Jerusalem,
- 2 Hear, O ye † people, all of ‡ you :
Hearken, O land, and all § that are therein.

* Heb. he saw.

† Heb. peoples.

‡ Heb. them.

§ Heb. and her fulness.

---

CHAP. I. 1. — Micah.—Of the kingdom of Judah, as he only makes mention of kings who reigned over that country. I suppose that he prophesied further on in the reign of Hezekiah, than Hosea did; though ch. v. 5 was written before the captivity of the ten tribes, which happened in the sixth year of Hezekiah. It is plain, from ch. i. 1, 5, 9, 12, 13, that he was sent both to Israel and to Judah. Like Amos and Hosea, he reproves and threatens a corrupt people with great spirit and energy. See ch. ii. 1, 2, 3, 8, 9, 10. iii. 2, 3, 4. vi. 10—16. vii. 2, 3, 4.; and, like Hosea, he inveighs against the princes and prophets with the highest indignation. See ch. iii. 5—7, 9—12. vii. 3. And the reader will observe, that these similar topics are treated of by each prophet, with remarkable variety and copiousness of expression.

Some of his prophecies are distinct and illustrious ones, as ch. ii. 12, 13. iii. 12. iv. 1—4, 10. v. 2, 3, 4. vi. 13. vii. 8, 9, 10.

We may justly admire the beauty and elegance of his manner: ii. 12, 13. iv. 1, 2, 3, and particularly the two first lines of v. 4.

His animation: i. 5. l. 3, 4. ii. 7. 10. l. 1. iv. 9.

His strength of expression: i. 6, 8. ii. 3. l. 3, 4. iii. 2, 3, 12. vii. 1, 2, 4. l. 1, 19. l. 2.

His pathos: i. 16. ii. 4.

His sublimity: i. 2, 3, 4. iii. 6, 12. iv. 12. l. 3, 13. v. 8. vi. 1, 9—16. vii. 16, 17.

— Morasthite.—See v. 14, 15. Maresha is placed in Judah, Josh. xv. 44. 2 Chron. xi. 8.

— which came.—Which was delivered to him in a vision. Dr. Wheeler.

2. — land.—Of the Hebrews.

And let the Lord Jehovah be witness against you;
Even the Lord from his || holy temple.

3 For, behold, Jehovah will go forth from his place;
 And he will come down, and will tread on the high places of the earth.

4 And the mountains shall be * molten under him;
 And the valleys shall cleave asunder;
 As wax before the fire,
 As waters poured down a † steep place.

5 For the transgression of Jacob is all this;
 And for the sin of the house of Israel.

What is the transgression of Jacob? is it not that of Samaria?

And what are the high places of Judah? are they not those of Jerusalem?

|| Heb. the temple of his holiness.      * Or, dissolve.      † Heb. a descent.

— the Lord.—Two MSS. omit the former אדני, and four MSS. read אלהים instead of it. For the second אדני twenty-six MSS. read יהוה.

— witness.—Let him bear testimony against you, and forewarn you of your danger, by me his prophet. See Ps. i. 7.

— temple.—Where he manifests his glory.

3. — from his place.—He will elsewhere display his glorious majesty, by punishing the guilty.

— high places.—See this line Amos. iv. 13.

4. — be molten.—All nature shall confess his presence. See Amos ix. 5.

— As wax.—This image often occurs in the classics.

“Quasi igni

Cera super calido tabescens multa liquescat.” Lucr. vi. 512.

5. — sin.—Twenty-three MSS. and three editions read רבחטאת, and for the sin; as 6. Ar. Chald.

— What.—See on Jonah i. 8. Noldius also proposes to translate Where.

— Samaria.—See Hos. viii. 5.

— high places.—see 2 Kings xvi. 4. The two chief cities are infected with idolatry. “במקד.” Sic Vulg. sed ἀναρχία, 6. Syr. Ch. Legerunt חטאת: recte.” Secker. This is the reading of one MS. and of another in the margin; and, from the turn of the sentence, appears to be the true reading:

- 6 Therefore will I make Samaria an † heap of the field, a § place for the plantings of a vineyard;
 And I will pour down her stones into the valley, and I will discover her foundations.
- 7 And all her graven images shall be beaten to pieces;
 And all her hires of idolatry shall be burned in the fire;
 And all her idols will I || destroy.
 For from the hire of an harlot hath she gathered her
treasures;
 And to the hire of an harlot shall they return.
- 8 For this will I wail and howl;
 I will go spoiled and naked;
 I will make a wailing like the * foxes;

† Heb. for an heap. § Heb. for a place. || Heb. make a desolation: * Or, jackals.

“ And what is the sin of Judah? is it not that of Jerusalem? ”

But that there were high places near Jerusalem, see 1 Kings xi. 7.

6. — vineyard.—Samaria was situated on a hill, the right soil for a vineyard.

7. — from the hire.—Her idols and sacred ornaments sometimes arose from the rewards of harlots, appropriated for that purpose; and they shall return to the spiritual harlot, Nineveh. See Dent. xxiii. 18. Spencer, p. 564. Or, She imputed her wealth to her spiritual harlotry; and her conquerors shall distribute it as the reward of harlots in the literal sense.

8. — I will go —Many MSS. and one edition read אֵלֶכָה.

— spoiled.—Many MSS. and three editions read שָׁלָל, which may literally be rendered a spoil. “Barefooted.” Dr. Wheeler.

— naked.—That is, without an upper garment. His dress would be neglected, like that of eastern mourners.

— foxes.—The desert is the habitation of חֲמִשָּׁה, Mal. i. 3. The word may signify “a kind of wild beast like a dog, between a dog and a fox, or a wolf and a fox; which the Arabians call, from the noise which they make, Ebn Awi, [filius Eheu] and our English travellers, jackals; which, abiding in the fields and waste places, make in the night a lamentable howling noise.” Pocock in loc. See also Shaw’s Travels, 4to. 174, 5 and Bochart, l. iii. c. xii, who quotes Busbequius, as saying, “Narrant mihi esse ululatum bestiarum quas Turæ Ciacales vocant, ut Persæ Scigal;” and an Arabic writer, as comparing “ululatum filii Awi infantis vagitui” I suppose that the word in this sense comes from חָמַר, iterare; and, when it

And mourning, like the daughters of the ostrich.

9 For her wound is grievous :

For it is come to Judah,

It hath reached to the gate of my people, even to Jerusalem.

10 In Gath tell it not.

Weep ye not with loud weeping.

In Beth-Ophrah roll thyself in the dust.

signifies the whale, or serpent kind, that it is derived from the same root in the signification of duplicare, complicare.

— ostrich.—So Aquila and Symmachus. Bochart says, “Nota in struthione feminam appellari יונה vel. בת יונה; quasi clamosam dices, vel filiam clamoris. Clamosum enim est animal.” Hier. l. i. c. ix. p. 65. “It is affirmed by travellers of good credit, that ostriches make a fearful, screeching, lamentable noise.” Pocock in loc. “During the lonesome part of the night, they often make a very doleful and hideous noise. I have often heard them groan, as if they were in the greatest agonies; an action beautifully alluded to by the prophet Micah.” Shaw, 4to. p. 456. See Job xxx. 28, 29.

9. — her wound.—The versions and Chald. read נכרה. Six MSS. and one ed. read נכרה, and one MS. omits the ך.

— It hath reached.—The versions and Chald. lead us to read נגעה. Or thus:

“The stroke hath reached to the gate,” &c.

If we read בא, we have this rendering:

“For the stroke is come to Judah;
‘To the gate of my people, to Jerusalem.”

— Jerusalem.—This city will soon be distressed by the Edomites, Philistines, and Assyrians, 2 Chron. xxviii. 16—21.

10. — tell it not.—From 2 Sam. i. 20.

— Beth-Ophrah.—Ophrah is mentioned, Josh. xviii. 23, as in the tribe of Benjamin. Houbigant prefers העפרה.

— roll thyself.—Seven MSS. read הרפליש, and three read so originally, agreeably to Keri in Vanderhooght. יושבת, O inhabitress, may be understood. Or we may read הרפליש, roll yourselves, with V. Syr. 6. Ar.

— in the dust.—Here the word עפר, pulvis, alludes to the etymology of Beth-Ophrah, which signifies domus pulveris.

“Ah! nimis ex vero tunc tibi nomen erit.”

Ovid. See Præl. Hebr. xv. 138. n. 1.

11 Pass on, thou inhabitress of Saphir, naked and in confusion.

The inhabitants of Zanan went not forth to wailing.

O Beth-Ezel, he shall receive of you the reward of his station against you.

“ Επωονυμφ δε καρτα Πολυνεικη λεγω.”

Æsch. Septem in Theb. 664. Eurip. Phœn. 1500.

That this reference to the meaning of names was natural among the Hebrews, see on Hosea i. 4. It also served to imprint prophecies on the memory of those to whom they were delivered.

The paronomasia, a figure likely to strike a rude people, often occurs in the Hebrew writers. See Boeh. Geogr. III. i. 148. Bishop Lowth on Isa. v. 7.

This particular way of expressing grief is often mentioned in the classics.

“ Αυλης εν χροιτσι κυλινδομενος κατὰ κοπρον.”

Il. xxiv. 64.

“ Canitiem immundo deformat pulvere.”

Virg. of Mezentius.

“ Pulvere canitiem genitor, vultusque seniles,
Fœdat humi fusos.”

Ov. Met. viii. 528.

The old versions vary. Perhaps there were originally three places mentioned here, and three paronomasias. Secker.

בכר I imagine is corrupt, and that here was the name of some place. Dr. Forsayeth.

11. — Saphir.—Houbigant says that Eusebius places this city, the name of which signifies fair or elegant, in the tribe of Judah between Eleutheropolis and Ascalon.

— naked.—See on Hosea ii. 3. Observe the opposition to the meaning of Saphir. For לבכ, vobis, in this line Houbigant reads לך, tibi, with Syr. “Naked to thy shame.” Dr. Wheeler.

— Zanan.—In the tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 37. There was no burial of her dead with solemn mourning, out of the precincts of her city; but she was besieged, and put to the sword.

— Beth-Ezel.—Near Jerusalem, Zech. xiv. 5.

— station.—The standing, or encamping [1 Sam. xvii. 3] of an army against a city: and hence the effect of such encampment, or the plunder arising from it. Chald. seems to read הכינרת:

“ O Beth-Ezel, he shall receive from you his pleasant portion.”

- 12 Surely the inhabitress of Maroth is sick unto death.
Surely evil hath come down from Jehovah unto the gate of Jerusalem.
- 13 Bind the chariot to the swift beast,
O inhabitress of Lachish.
She was the beginning of sin to the daughter of Zion :
For in thee were found the transgressions of Israel ;
- 14 Therefore shalt thou give presents to Moresheth-Gath.
The habitations of Achzib † shall deceive the kings of Israel.
- 15 Moreover I will bring an heir unto thee, O inhabitress of Mareshah :
He shall reach to Adullam, the border of Israel.

† Heb. shall be a lie to.

Thus we shall have an allusion to the name of the city ; as אצל signifies reponere.

12. — Maroth.—A city of like name is placed in the tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 59.

— unto death.—For לשוב, unto good, Houbigant reads למות, unto death, from 2 Kings xx. 1. למר, unto bitterness, or bitterly, will furnish a paronomasia.

Observe צאן and צאן, r. 11 : and in the following verse, לכיש and רכש.

13. Bind the chariot.—We may read רחמה מרכבה : The inhabitress of Lachish hath bound the chariot, &c.

— Lachish.—In the tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 39. Sennacherib possessed himself of it, 2 Kings xviii. 14.

— the transgressions.—The idols of Israel were first adopted by Lachish. Houbigant reads אתה, thou, for היא, she, in the foregoing line : but if any alteration is necessary, which may well be doubted, בה, in her, for בך, in thee, would be a more easy one in the following line.

14. — presents to Moresheth-Gath.—To Moresheth of Gath, to the Philistines of that country, for safety and protection.

— Achzib.—This name is derived from כזב, to lie. Perhaps we should read בית אכזב. Beth-Achzib shall be a liar, &c. ; shall repeatedly frustrate the expectations of her kings, and become an easy prey to the invader.

— the kings.—Perhaps למלך, to the king. Yod follows.

15. — Mareshah.—The word is derived from ירש, to inherit.

— the border.—For בבויר, the glory, I read with Chald. גבול, the border

- 16 Make thee bald, and cut off thine hair, for thy delicate children :
 Enlarge thy baldness as the eagle :
 For they are gone into captivity from thee.

CHAPTER II.

- 1 WOE unto them who devise iniquity,
 And who work evil on their beds :
 When the morning is light they practise it,
 Because it is in the power of their hand.
 2 And they covet fields, and possess them by violence ;
 houses, and take them away :
 And they oppress a man and his * house ; a great man,
 and his heritage.

* Or, family.

Adullam was a fenced city in Judah, 2 Chron. xi. 7. Eusebius places it twelve miles from Eleutheropolis to the eastward : which answers to the situation in De Lisle's posthumous map, where it is placed about midway between Eleutheropolis and Jerusalem.

16. Make thee bald.—"O inhabitress of Mareshah," may be understood. For the custom, see on Amos viii. 10.

— as the eagle.—When he sheds his plumage, Ps. ciii. 5. Aves callescere dicuntur cum deplumes sunt. Boch. Hieroz. p. 14. There is also a species of eagle, called the bald eagle, from the whiteness of its head.

CHAP. II. 1. — work evil.—In their imagination.

— in the power.—Houbigant refers to Prov. iii. 27. אל, power, is written more fully לאל. See לאל in Noldius.

2. — houses.—Eight MSS. read בתים : which is elegant, and agreeable to the Hebrew manner.

— a great man.—So פא sometimes signifies. Many MSS. and four editions read פא. So V. 6. (MS. A. and ed. Ald.) and Arab. The omission of the vau in both clauses better suits the usual turn of the sentence in Hebrew poetry.

- 3 Therefore thus saith Jehovah :
Behold against this family do I devise evil,
From which ye shall not remove your necks :
Neither shall ye go haughtily :
For it shall be an evil time.
- 4 In that day shall a proverb be † taken up against you ;
And a grievous lamentation shall be made :
Saying : “ We are utterly laid waste :
He hath changed the portion of my people :
How hath he departed from me,
To bring again him that divided our fields ! ”
- 5 Surely there shall not ‡ remain unto thee
One that stretcheth out a line by lot.
- 6 In the congregation of Jehovah prophesy not,
O ye that prophesy :
They shall not prophesy unto these :

† Heb. shall one take up.

‡ Heb. be.

3. — family.—See on Amos iii. 1.

— haughtily.—Heb. in altitudine. It shall be an inextricable yoke ; and one that shall bow you down.

4. — a proverb.—See Præl. Heb. iv. p. 45, and the same author on Isa. xiv. 4.

— And a grievous.—Et lamentando lamentum conficietur : supposing נדה the infinitive mood and נדיה the Niphal of ניה, fuit. The ניה here answers to קנה Amos v. 1.

— changed.—The original word is rendered removed, Ps. xlv. 2. And נאז in Arab. signifies commoveri, agitari, conturbari. Cast lex. Another reading is, ניד, is measured, or, he hath measured. See 6. Ar. Syr.

— from me.—Literally, to me : the pronoun being redundant. A mourner of Israel speaks.

— To bring again.—The Assyrians had ravaged Israel and Judah before their final destruction. See 2 Kings xv. 29, xviii. 13.

אשר, who, is to be supplied with Vulg. before יהלק, divided.

5. Surely.—Ye shall be wholly removed from your possessions.

6. — O ye that prophesy.—I understand אשר, who, before ישיפון : and for the construction refer the reader to such passages as ch. iii. 3. Amos v. 7, 10, 12 : where a verb in the third person plural, with אשר understood, is used vocatively. Μη σταλαζετε σταλαζοντες, Aquila. But the word may be a various reading of the foregoing or following verb. See on Hos. iv. 18.

“ Drop no longer your instruction.”

“ Let them that instruct instruct no longer such as these.”

Dr. Wheeler.

For he shall not remove from himself reproaches.

7 Doth the house of Israel say,

“Is the spirit of Jehovah straitened?

“Are these his doings?”

Are not my words good

With him who walketh uprightly?

8 But of old my people hath risen up as an enemy.

Ye strip the mantle § off the garment,

From those who pass by securely, the captives of war.

9 The women of my people ye cast out from || their delightful habitation :

§ Heb. from off.

|| Heb. the habitation of her delights.

— he shall not remove.—The true prophet will subject himself to public disgrace by exercising his office. “Very obscure. None of the ancients make the addition which our translators do; but understand the second word as a noun or participle.” Seeker.

7. — say.—Four MSS. read ראניר. See V. Chald. And ó. Ar. read ראניר, which is equivalent.

— straitened.—Confined to a few, such as Micah.

— his doings.—So dishonourable to his attributes, and to his people.

— Are not.—Jehovah answers, Do not my words administer good to the righteous, who pay attention to the chosen prophets sent by me?

— my words.—ó. Ar. read his words.

— walketh uprightly.—Pocock says that the literal rendering is, “with him that is upright walking.” See Ps. xv. 2. Prov. xi. 13. Eighteen MSS. and one edition read דלך, which may be gerundive, eundo. Perhaps, “with him that walketh in uprightness.” See Isa. lvii. 2 and v. 11.

8. — of old.—See Isa. xxx. 33. ó. render by εμπροσθεν. For the truth of the assertion, see Hos. x. 9. xi. 2.

— an enemy.—Against me their God.

— off the garment.—This enmity ye show by acts of cruelty and robbery. Noldius renders גזל, a, desuper; but without any other example. Perhaps we should read גזל. Houbigant justly observes that אירה is the word which elsewhere occurs for the upper garment.

— the captives.—One MS. reads שבי, the captivity. Houbigant conjectures שבי. ó. give a good general sense, στυγμιμον πολιμου. Breaking your truce with them, by thus spoiling them.

9. “גזי, αρχοτες. ó. גזיא.” Seeker.

— ye cast out.—By your sins ye cause them to go into captivity.

- From * their children ye take away my glory for ever.
- 10 Arise ye and depart; for this is not your resting-place:
Because it is polluted, it shall be destroyed; and the destruction shall be great.
- 11 If a man, walking in the spirit of falsehood and of lies,
Prophecy unto thee for wine and for strong drink;
He shall be the prophet of this people.
- 12 I will surely gather, O Jacob, all of thee:
I will surely assemble the residue of Israel.
I will put † them together as sheep of Bozrah,
As a flock in the midst of their fold:
They shall make a tumult from the multitude of men.
- 13 He that forceth a passage is come up before them:
They have forced a passage, and have passed through the gate, and are gone forth by it;
And their king passeth before them, even Jehovah at the head of them.

* Heb. her.

† Heb. him.

— my glory.—The glory which I had bestowed on them by becoming their God, by placing them in a pleasant land, and by protecting and blessing them when they adhered to me, Ps. xc. 16. Ezek. xvi. 14. The pronouns seem to agree with נָא distributively: “from the delightful habitation of each: from the children of each.”

10. — this.—We may understand אֶרֶץ before this pronoun, and before מְנוּחָה. A more exact representation of the Hebrew is, “For this land is not the place of your rest.”

11. — and of lies.—I read with Syr. שֶׁקֶר וְכֹזֵב, and with Houbigant דְּשָׁרָה, or דְּשָׁרָה, as many MSS. insert the Yod. This reading is favoured by ó. Ar. Syr.

13. He that forceth a passage.—“He that breaketh way,” according to our idiom. The preparer and leader of the journey.

— the gate.—Of the conquering city, where the Israelites were to be in captivity.

— Jehorah.—He conducted them in effect.

The connection may be this: “Ye shall depart from your land; and it shall be defiled and desolate, v. 10. This is not the language of your false prophets; or the way to be received as a prophet among you, v. 11. However, a true prophet may foretel your prosperous state after your punishment, v. 12, 13. See ch. iii. 12. iv. 1.

CHAPTER III.

1 I ALSO said :

Hear, I pray you, O ye heads of Jacob,
And ye leaders of the house of Israel.
Is it not for you to know judgment ?

2 Ye who hate good and love evil :
Who pluck their skin from off them,
And their flesh from off their bones :

3 Who also have eaten the flesh of my people,
And have flayed their skin from off them,
And have broken their bones :
And have divided them asunder as flesh in the pot ;
And as meat * within the caldron.

* Heb. in the midst of.

I much suspect, that we should understand the twelfth and thirteenth verses as spoken by the false prophet. In the following verse Micah gives notice that he speaks in his own person ; and then, in contradiction to the vain promises of the false prophet, denounces vengeance on the Jews in general for their cruel oppression of the poor, and on the false prophets for their lies. Dr. Forsayeth.

There are strange mixtures in Micah, as well as in Hosea and others, of promises with complaints and threatenings. Some will say they were added afterwards. Some interpret v. 12 as the words of the false prophet, v. 11 ; and some think 12, 13, a threatening that God will shut them up to be besieged and led captive. But Jer. xxxi. 10, which is very like v. 12, is a promise. See also here iv. 6. And so is Isa. lii. 12, which is like the end of v. 13. Indeed, the latter part of v. 12 is obscure, and for פָּרַץ, the breaker, פָּרַק would be the deliverer. Christ broke down the partition wall. Pocock. Or פָּרַץ is the increaser. Isa. ix. 7. xi. 1. Comp. ch. iv. 10. Secker.

CHAP. III. 2. — them.—Jacob, or Israel, as Hos. x. 1, 2. Or, my people ; from the following verse.

3. — have eaten—have flayed—have broken—have divided.—These verbs may be rendered in the present tense. See Amos v. 10. ch. iv. 12.

— divided.—I read וּפְרָסוּ.

— as flesh.—Instead of בָּשָׂר, read with ó. Ar. Chald. Houbigant and Bishop Lowth on Isa. iii. 15, בָּשָׂר.

- 4 Then shall they cry unto Jehovah,
But he will not hear them :
He will even hide his face from them at that time ;
According as they have been evil in their doings.
- 5 Thus saith Jehovah
Unto the prophets who cause my people to err ;
Who bite with their teeth, and cry, Peace ;
But as for him that putteth not into their mouths,
They will prepare war against him.
- 6 Wherefore there shall be night unto you, so † that ye shall have no vision :
And there shall be darkness unto you, so that ‡ ye shall have no divination.
And the sun shall go down upon the prophets,
And the day shall be § dark upon them.
- 7 Then shall the seers be ashamed, and the diviners confounded ;
Yea, they shall cover the || mouth, even all of them :
For God will not answer.
- 8 But I truly am filled with power ;
With the Spirit of Jehovah, and with judgment, and might ;
To declare unto Jacob his transgression, and unto Israel his sin.
- 9 Hear this, I pray you, ye Heads of the house of Jacob,
And ye leaders of the house of Israel :

† Heb. from a vision.    ‡ Heb. from divining.    § Or, black, or, gloomy.
|| Heb. the upper lip.

5. — bite with their teeth.—Put into their mouth : as the opposition shows. Famine is expressed by cleanness of teeth, Amos iv. 6.

— and cry, Peace.—And proclaim peace. The versions and Chald.

— prepare.—Properly sanctify, or, prepare for a holy purpose, Exod. xix. 10, 11. Hence, to prepare in general, to appoint, to set apart.

7. — cover the mouth.—With part of the long eastern vesture. This action was a sign of being put to silence ; of disgrace and dejection, Lev. xiii. 45. Exod. xxiv. 17, 22.

8. — With the spirit.—For the form of expression, see Ex. i. 7.

- Ye who abhor judgment,
 And pervert all that is right :
- 10 Who build up Sion by blood, and Jerusalem by iniquity.
 11 The Heads thereof judge for reward ;
 And the priests thereof teach for hire ;
 And the prophets thereof divine for silver :
 And yet they lean on Jehovah,
 Saying :
 Is not Jehovah in the midst of us ?
 Evil shall not come upon us.
- 12 Therefore because of you Sion shall be ploughed as a field ;
 And Jerusalem shall become heaps ;
 And the mountain of the * temple † as high places of a forest.

CHAPTER IV.

- 1 BUT it shall come to pass, in the * latter days,
 That the mountain of the † temple of Jehovah shall be * Heb. house. † Heb. for. * Heb. end of days. † Heb. house.

10. Who build up.—Raise magnificent palaces. See the opposition, v. 12. The verb may be in the infinitive mood absolute. See Bishop Lowth on Isa. xxi. 5. The versions seem to read בני in the plural, building up ; and twelve MSS. have בניה.

11. — for hire.—Beyond what the law of Moses prescribes.

12. — heaps.—In the parallel place, Jer. xxvi. 18, we find עיים : which is the reading of three MSS. now, and was originally that of three more. It is also found in the Bab. Talmud. One MS. has לעיים. For עיי, see Præl. Heb. iii. p. 37.

— high places.—As hills in a forest. One MS. reads לבהמות, for cattle of the forest. See ch. v. 8.

CHAP. IV. 1. But it shall come to pass.—These four verses contain a prophecy which was to be fulfilled by the coming of the Messiah, when the Gentiles were to be admitted into covenant with God, and the apostles were to preach the gospel, beginning at Jerusalem, Luke xxiv. 47. Acts ii.

Established on the top of the mountains,
And it shall be exalted above the hills:
And the † people shall flow unto it.

† Heb. peoples.

14, &c.; when Christ was to be the spiritual Judge and King of many people, was to convince many nations of their errors and vices, and was to found a religion which had the strongest tendency to promote peace.

Bishop Lowth, on Isa. ii. 2, thinks that Micah took this passage from Isaiah. It is true that he has improved it, after the manner of imitators. Or, the Spirit may have inspired both prophets with this prediction; or, both may have copied some common original, the words of a prophet well known at that time. It will be useful to compare the parallel places, as they now stand.

ISAIAH II.

2. והיה באחרית הימים
נכון יהיה הר בית יהוה
בראש ההרים
ונשא מנבעות
ונהרו אליו כל הגוים :
3. והלכו גוים רבים ואמרו
לכו ונעלה אל הר יהוה
אל בית אלהי יעקב
ויוורנו מדרכיו ונלכה בארחתיו
כי מציון תצא תורה
ודבר יהוה מירושלם :
4. ושפט בין הגוים
והוכיח לעמים רבים
ונחתו חרבותם לאתים
והניתתיאם למזמרות
לא ישא גוי אל גוי חרב
ולא ילמדו עוד מלחמה :

MICAH IV.

1. והיה באחרית הימים
יהיה הר בית יהוה
נכון בראש ההרים
ונשא הוא מנבעות
ונהרו עליו עמים :
2. והלכו גוים רבים ואמרו
לכו ונעלה אל הר יהוה
ואל בית אלהי יעקב
ויוורנו מדרכיו ונלכה בארחתיו
כי מציון תצא תורה
ודבר יהוה מירושלם :
3. ושפט בין עמים רבים
והוכיח לגוים עצמם עד רחוק
ונחתו חרבתיאם לאתים
והניתתיאם למזמרות
לא ישאו גוי אל גוי חרב
ולא ילמדון עוד מלחמה :

— shall be established.—Two MSS. read as the words are placed in Isaiah, נכון יהיה. Sion shall be raised above the mountains in true eminence; shall be placed, as it were, on their top.

— it shall be exalted.—הוא is wanting in three MSS; and in Isaiah the margin of one MS. has it.

— the people.—Five MSS. and Syr. supply כל ; and one MS. has כל הגוים.

- 2 And many nations shall go, and shall say :
 Come, and let us go up unto the mountain of Jehovah,
 And unto the § temple of the God of Jacob :
 That he may teach us of his ways, and that we may walk
 in his paths.
 For from Sion shall go forth a law,
 And the word of Jehovah from Jerusalem.
- 3 And he shall judge between many || people,
 And he shall convince strong nations * afar off :
 And they shall beat their swords into plough-shares,
 And their spears into pruning-hooks,
 Nation shall not lift up sword against nation,
 Neither shall they any longer learn war.
- 4 But they shall sit every man under his vine,
 And under his fig-tree : and none shall make them afraid.
 For the mouth of Jehovah God of hosts hath spoken it.

§ Heb. house.

|| Heb. peoples.

* Hebr. to afar.

— shall flow unto it.—Eleven MSS. and one ed. read אֵלַי ; and another MS. read thus originally.

2 — nations.—Two MSS. and Talm. Bab. have עַמִּים.

— And unto the temple.—Two MSS. read אֶל בֵּית. But in Isaiah sixteen MSS. and two editions read וְאֶל ; MS. 3 read so originally ; MS. 130 perhaps reads so ; and MS. 150 reads so now, agreeably to ó. Ar. Syr. Vulg. But Chald. wants the conjunction, and has only לְבֵית. See Bishop Lowth.

— in his paths.—In both prophets together, three MSS. and three editions read the Hebrew word with the regular plural termination ת.

3. — many people.—Two MSS. want רַבִּים.

— afar off.—This, as Bishop Lowth observes, is added in Isaiah by Syr.

— their swords.—Twenty MSS. and two editions read חַרְבֹּתֵיהֶם ; and two MSS. read חַרְבוֹתֵיהֶם.

— And their spears.—Twenty-one MSS. and two editions read וְחַרְבֵּיהֶם. See the reverse of this beautiful and classical image, Joel. iii. 10 and the quotations in Bishop Lowth, Isa. ii. 2.

— lift up.—Four MSS. read יָשָׂא.

— learn.—Seven MSS. read יִלְמְדוּ.

4. But they shall sit.—See, on this elegant and beautiful addition to Isaiah, Bishop Lowth on Isa. ii. 2.

- 5 Although all the † people walk
Every one in the name of his God :
Yet let us walk in the name of Jehovah
Our God, for ever and ever.
- 6 In that day, saith Jehovah,
I will gather her that ‡ halteth, and her that is driven out will I assemble :
And her whom I have afflicted.
- 7 And I will make her that § halted || a residue,
And her that was removed afar off, * a strong nation :
And Jehovah shall reign over them in mount Sion,
From henceforth even for ever.
- 8 And thou, O tower of Eder,
O fortress of the daughter of Sion, thy time shall come :

† Heb. peoples.      ‡ Or, that is disabled.      § Or, that was disabled,
|| Heb. for a residue.      * Heb. for a strong nation.

5. — in the name.—Or profession of Jehovah, who has such mercies in store for us.

6. — that halteth.—Zeph. iii. 19 is a parallel place. See also צלע, Ps. xxxv. 15, xxxviii. 18. The word צלע signifies in Arabic, inelinavit, propendit, declinavit; and one of its derivatives, curvus et claudus a natura, in latus propendens. See Golius. The ideas of suffering, of weakness, of being broken or subdued, are given by the old versions.

Though I have broken the power of my people, removed them into captivity afar off, and afflicted them; yet will I restore them to their country, I will send them the Messiah, and will be always their King.

7. — a residue.—A part of them shall be preserved; in whom the future designs of my providence shall be accomplished.

הנהלה. Eadem voce reddunt ṣ. Syr. Ch. qua והנהלה, v. 6: quæ igitur forte hic legenda est, cum verbum הלא in cod. Heb. alibi non occurrat.—Quæ laboraverat, V. f. הלאה. Secker.

— for ever.—This will be fulfilled at the future restoration of the Jews.

8. — Eder.—A tower in or near Bethlehem, Gen. xxxv. 21. Or, as some, a tower near the sheep-gate, in Jerusalem, Neh. iii. 1, 32. The word signifies a flock.

— O fortress.—See mention of Ophel, Neh. iii. 26, 27. xi. 21. 2 Chron. xxvii. 3. xxxiii. 14. Isa. xxxii. 14.

— of the daughter of Sion.—Possibly, belonging to the tribe of Judah.

— thy time.—I read with Syr. עריך for עיר.

And the former dominion shall return,
Even the kingdom, to the daughter of Jerusalem.

9 And now why dost thou cry out † loudly?

Is there no king in thee?

Hath thy counsellor perished?

For pangs have seized thee, as a woman in travail.

10 Be in pangs, and bring forth, O daughter of Sion, as a woman in travail:

For now thou shalt go forth from the city, and shalt dwell in the field:

And thou shalt go even unto Babylon; there shalt thou be rescued:

There shall Jehovah redeem thee from the hand of thine enemies.

11 And now many nations are gathered against thee:

Who say, Let her be defiled; and let our eye see its desire on Sion.

† Heb. crying out.

Syr. legerunt עָרַךְ. Confer vii. 12. Secker.

— dominion.—On the return from Babylon. Or, on the coming of the Messiah, and the future grand restoration, if Bethlehem be spoken of.

This verse seems to say, that to the family of David, denoted first by the place from whence it sprang, then, by the place where it settled, the former dominion should come and arrive, the kingdom to [or of, for so Syr. Chald.] the daughter of Sion. This agrees well with what is said of Christ, Luke i. 32, 33. ó. add that this kingdom shall come from Babylon. See v. 10. Secker.

9. And now.—ó. Ar. Chald. Houbigant, five MSS. and a sixth originally, read יַעֲרֹךְ. But see ch. v. 1.

— loudly.—Six MSS. and three editions read רָעַע, which may be the infinitive clangendo, as בָּין Prov. xxiii. 1. The word may be used in a middle sense for any cry; whether arising from danger, sorrow, or joy.

— no king.—Jehovah is thy king, Jer. viii. 19.

10. — bring forth.—See Ps. xxii. 10.

— in the field.—See Hos. xii. 9.

— there.—Eight or ten MSS. and Syr. read שָׁמָּה, and there, twice in this v. And ó. translate the second שָׁמָּה, καὶ ἐκεῖθεν.

11. — many nations.—The Idumeans, Ammonites, Moabites, Philistines, Babylonians.

— eye see.—So Ps. liv. 7. lix. 10. Two MSS. and two editions read עֵינַי with V. Syr. Chald.

- 12 But these know not the thoughts of Jehovah,
Neither understand they his counsel :
For he hath assembled them as a sheaf to the threshing-floor.
- 13 Arise and tread out the grain, O daughter of Sion ;
Thine horn will I make iron,
And thine hoofs will I make brass.
And thou shalt beat in pieces ‡ many § people :
And thou shalt devote the gain from them unto Jehovah ;
And their substance, unto the Lord of the whole earth.

---

CHAPTER V.

- 1 BUT now assemble thyself, O daughter, in * troops ;
They have laid siege against us :
They have smitten with a rod upon the cheek

‡ Or, mighty.

§ Heb. peoples.

* Heb. a troop.

---

12. — know not.—See Isa. x. 7. All these are instruments in the hand of Jehovah, and shall be destroyed in their turn.

13. — O daughter of Sion.—Some of these nations were subdued by the Maccabees, 1 Macc. v. 3, 6.

— horn.—With which thou shalt push thy enemies. It is part of the allegory, which is beautifully taken up from the last line of v. 12.

— thou shalt devote.—The versions and Chald. read ויהררבת.

— the gain.—And thou shalt devote unto Jehovah their treasure. Dr. Wheeler.

CHAP. V. 1. But now.—Houbigant observes, that Ar. read ועתה ; so does one MS.

— O daughter.—ó. MS. Al. and Ar. add. of Ephraim ; and Chald. renders per turmas.

— They have laid.—Or, siege is laid. See on Jonah iii. 7.

— upon the cheek.—A great indignity. ὅταν ἐπι κορῆς. Demosth. in Mid.

The Judge of Israel.

- 2 And thou, Bethlehem-Ephrata,
Art thou too little to be among the leaders of Judah?
 Out of thee shall come forth unto me

— The Judge.—Hoshea may be supposed to have suffered such contumely, when Samaria was taken, 2 Kings xvii. 6; or, Zedekiah, on the taking of Jerusalem, ib. xxv. 7.

2. And thou.—Some: art thou? but no old version. Pocock in porta Mosis says, Fors, quæ minor fuisti quam ut, &c., which seems the meaning of ó. But I find not ó in this sense, though ó often. Parum est, te numerari. Cocceius. It may be translated: thou shalt, or art to be small. For ó is sometimes instead of a future. See Nold. Pocock proposes, after some Jews of great character, that עיר may signify here, the contrary to its usual meaning; as he shows many words, especially in Arab., have the contrary meaning. But this might lead those Jews who wrote Arabic to think so here too easily.—On the whole, there seems but slender proof of this contrary signification. Secker.

— Ephrata.—The Greek translator, quoted by St. Matthew, seems to have read Bethlehem-Judah, as Judg. xvii. 7. Or, in the haste of writing, a transcriber may have anciently substituted Judah for Ephrata; each word being properly and naturally subjoined to Bethlehem. See the Greek, Josh. xv. 59.

— Art thou too little.—See Syr. which may be pointed interrogatively, Parva tu quæ sis? The question implies the negative, which is inserted Matth. ii. 6, and also in the Arabic version. “MS. Copt. ουκ, non, addit.” Mr. Woide. Houbigant conjectures that we should read עיר לא היית, nequaquam minima es. This reading is favoured by the Arabic, non parva es. The note on ολιγοστος, in Sixtus Quintus’s edition of ó. Romæ, MDLXXXVII, is “Alii vero libri habent μη ολιγοστος, quod est apud Terullianum et Cyprianum.” And vers. ant. Itala has “nequaquam minima.” Kenn. Diss. Gen. Sec. 77. So Origen and Justin, ib. Sec. 80. 2. See also Dr. Owen on the Septuagint, p. 15. ó. ed. Pachom. have also μη ολιγοστος, on which rendering it must be observed, that μη may be interrogative, as Matth. ix. 15.

Both the Hebrew, the Vulg., and the Greek, as they now stand, are capable of being pointed interrogatively.

— among the leaders.—The vau in אלפי may easily have been omitted, as Jer. xiii. 21. Gen. xxxvi. 30. Or, “among the thousands,” the large bodies governed by Chiliarchs. See Cappellus and 2 Chron. i. 2. “באלפי. Heads of thousands in Israel, several times in Numb. and Josh. See also 1 Sam. xxiii. 23. x. 19.” Secker.

— Out of thee.—Two editions of St. Matthew, Erasim. 1. and Ald.

One who is to be a Ruler in Israel :

And his goings forth have been from of old, from the days of hidden ages.

3 Therefore will he † deliver them up, until the time when she that bringeth forth hath brought forth :

† Heb. give.

read ἐκ σου μοι. Then follows in the gospel a double translation of מְשַׁל, ἡγούμενος and ὅστις ποιμανεῖ, and a periphrasis of בִּישְׂרָאֵל, in Israel.

ὧ omittunt Matth. Syr. Præfigunt γὰρ Matth. Arab. Secker.

— his goings forth.—See Hos. vi. 3. His appearance ; his displays of power. See John i. 1. Col. i. 16. “אָ, used of a people coming originally from such a place, Deut. ii. 23 : of a person's setting out from a place to found an empire, Gen. x. 11. Here it must have one or both of these two meanings. מְצִיאָתוֹ—אָ signifies nativity, Gen. xxv. 25, 26. xxxviii. 28, 29. Is. xxxix. 7. Gen. xvii. 6. xxxv. 11. 2 Chron. xxxii. 21. Here it seems related to the preceding אָ. May it then signify the person's original descent from Bethlehem being ancient, i. e. in David's time? This depends partly on the following words ; and, taking them to signify only antiquity, it may be said of all men thus, that their מְצִיאָתוֹ are ancient, i. e. from Adam. But ancestors of no name are counted for none. But it is observed, that one going forth is spoken of as future and another as past, which suits none but Christ, who being λογος του Θεου, is properly מְצִיאָתוֹ אוֹ שְׂפָתָיו. But qu. where the scripture hints him to be so on any such account. מְצִיאָתוֹ thus joined means only words in the common sense, or intentions expressed. Chald. expresses the word thus, ‘Whose name has been spoken, or foretold :’ ὁ ἐξῆδος Syr. singularly. If it signify simply nativity, the plural perhaps may denote the eminence of Christ's eternal generation. See Bp. Chandler's Defence, p. 153, 154.” Secker.

מְקָדֵם. God is said to be מְקָדֵם, Hab. i. 12, and מְשִׁילֵם, Ps. xc. 2. But he is never said to be מְצִיאָתוֹ אוֹ מְשִׁילֵם, either מְצִיאָתוֹ or מְשִׁילֵם. He is said to have formed a thing מְצִיאָתוֹ, 2 Kings xix. 25 ; and as that doing was only purposing or foretelling, some think the מְצִיאָתוֹ of this person was his being foretold מְקָדֵם. But we rightly translate that, of ancient time ; which this phrase signifies Lam. i. 7, Isa. xxiii. 7, and in this prophet, vii. 20, and never any thing else ; and so מְצִיאָתוֹ, Ps. xlv. 2, and מְצִיאָתוֹ, Isa. li. 9. And מְקָדֵם signifies the same, Ps. lxxvii. 11, and exliii. 5. Isa. xlv. 21. מְצִיאָתוֹ is only here. But מְצִיאָתוֹ, Isa. lxi. 9, 11, mean former time, and מְצִיאָתוֹ as in former time, in this prophet vii. 14, and Amos ix. 11. Nor does מְצִיאָתוֹ ever signify more. God indeed is said to be מְצִיאָתוֹ, Isa. xliii. 13. Secker.

3. — will he deliver them up.—Sc. God. Arab. reads تَرْكُهُ, “ wilt thou deliver them up.”

And until the residue of their brethren shall be converted, together with the sons of Israel.

4 And he shall stand, and shall ‡ feed his flock, in the strength of Jehovah;

In the § majesty of the name of Jehovah his God;

And they shall be converted: for now shall he be great Unto the ends of the earth:

5 And He shall be peace.

When the Assyrian shall have come into our land,

And when he shall have trodden in our palaces;

Then shall be raised up against him seven || rulers,

‡ Or, rule.

§ Or, loftiness.

|| Heb. shepherds.

— their brethren.—So ó. Ar. Chald.

— together with.—See עַל, Nold. Sec. 9. The sense is, God will not fully vindicate and exalt his people, till the virgin-mother shall have brought forth her son; and till Judah and Israel, and all the true sons of Abraham, among their brethren the Gentiles, be converted to Christianity.

All the Jews whose writings we have, apply this text to the Messiah; though it seems by Theophylact on Matt. ii. that some Jews formerly understood Zerubbabel. Poc. Secker.

4. — he shall stand.—The ruler, mentioned v. 2.

— feed.—Instruct and govern his followers.

— they shall be converted.—The Jewish people. וְיִשְׂרָאֵל one MS. See V. Syr. Chald. Here is an instance in which a MS. differs from the Masoretic punctuation, which I have not observed elsewhere.

— shall he be great.—By the extent of his kingdom. ó. Ar. read יִגְדֹּל, shall they be great: i. e. the Jews, at their final restoration.

5. — peace.—The cause of peace and reconciliation.

And this man shall be [our] peace. Dr. Wheeler

— When the Assyrian.—After the illustrious prophecy relating to the Messiah, in the three foregoing verses, the prophet passes on to the subversion of the Assyrian empire.

Transponitur בִּי, Ps. cxviii. 10, 11, 12: et cxxxviii. 2. Secker.

— shall be raised up.—ó. read וְהָקָמוּ, i. e. וְהָקָמוּ, και ἐπεγερθησονται.

— seven rulers.—eight princes.—Perhaps a definite number for an indefinite, as Eccl. xi. 2. Job v. 19. The prophet means the chiefs of the Medes and Babylonians, the prefects of different provinces who took

And eight princes of men :

6 And they shall devour the land of Assyria with the sword,

Even the land of Nimrod in the entrances thereof:

And they shall deliver us from the Assyrian, when he shall have come into our land,

And when he shall have trodden in our borders.

7 Also the residue of Jacob shall be among the nations,
In the midst of many * people.

As the dew from Jehovah,

As the showers upon the grass;

* Heb. peoples.

Nineveh, whose number may have been what is here specified. "Seven and eight may be for an indefinite number, as Eccl. xi. 2." Secker.

— princes.—Anointed, Ps. ii. 6.

6. — with the sword.—Videtur leg. בפתחה. Notat פתח, gladium stringere. Secker.

— of Nimrod.—See on Nahum i. 1.

— they shall deliver us—So Houbigant, who reads והצלונו, and observes that Chald. and Syr. read the affix נו us. The reading of Chald. and Syr. was והצלונו; in which word the vau after ל may have been supplied by a point, as it often is. Or we may render, "And one shall deliver us," that is, And we shall be delivered. See on Jonah iii. 7.

— in our borders.—Fourteen MSS. and five editions read the original word plurally, with the versions and Chald.

It is very observable, that two MSS. read בארמנותי, in our palaces; and a third ארמנותי; two of them making this line an exact repetition of what occurs, v. 5, which is what a reader, acquainted with the manner of the Hebrew writers, would naturally expect. See v. 7, 8.

7. — among the nations.—במים is supplied by the 6. Ar. Syr. and by MS. 154, a very ancient and excellent one. The following verse shows that it is the genuine reading.

— As the dew.—The Jews contributed to spread the knowledge of the one true God during their captivity. See Dan. ii. 47. iii. 29. iv. 34, 35. vi. 26.

The gospel was preached by them, when the Messiah appeared, and it shall again be propagated by their future glorious restoration, Rom. xi. 12, 15.

- Which tarrieth not for man,
 Neither waiteth for the sons of men.
- 8 And the residue of Jacob shall be among the nations,
 In the midst of many † people,
 As a devouring lion among the cattle of the forest,
 As a young lion among the flocks of sheep:
 Who, when he passeth through, treadeth down,
 And teareth, and none delivereth.
- 9 Thine hand shall be lifted up over thine adversaries,
 And all thine enemies shall be cut off.
- 10 And it shall come to pass in that day, saith Jehovah,
 That I will cut off thine horses from the midst of thee,
 And I will destroy thy chariots:
- 11 I will also cut off the cities of thy land,
 And I will throw down all thy strong holds.
- 12 I will also cut off the sorcerers from thy border;
 ‡ And thou shalt have no soothsayers.
- 13 I will also cut off thy graven images and thy statues from the midst of thee;
 And thou shalt no longer bow down thyself to the work of thine hands:

† Heb. peoples.

‡ Heb. And soothsayers shall not be unto thee.

—Which tarrieth not.—Which grass springeth up without the attention and culture of men.

—of men.—Of so mean and humble a creature as man. “Of mortals.” Dr. Wheeler.

8. —As a young lion.—Eighteen MSS. and two editions read גִּבְעוֹרִים, “And as a young lion;” two read so originally; two read so now; and perhaps three more. This is also the reading of the versions and Chald.

The victories of the Jews under the Maccabees, and those which will hereafter be reaped by them, are foretold in this and the next verse.

12. —the sorcerers.—ó. read בְּשִׁפְיָם, thy sorcerers. So does MS. 383.

—from thy border.—So י is sometimes rendered. See Ezek. xlviii. 1. Chald. has מִבֵּינֶךָ, from within thee, and probably read with two MSS. מִקִּרְבֶּךָ, from the midst of thee. Houbigant renders, “Ego auferam amuleta de manibus tuis;” reading מִיָּדֶיךָ, from thine hands, with ó. Ar. Syr. and five MSS.

- 14 And I will root up thy groves from the midst of thee.
I will also destroy thine enemies :
15 And I will execute vengeance, in anger and in fury,
Upon the nations which have not hearkened unto me.

---

CHAPTER VI.

- 1 HEAR ye now what Jehovah saith :
Arise, contend thou before the mountains ;
And let the hills hear thy voice.
2 Hear ye, O mountains, the controversy of Jehovah ;
And ye strong foundations of the earth.
For Jehovah hath a controversy with his people ;
And with Israel he pleadeth.
3 O my people, what have I done unto thee ?
And wherein have I wearied thee ? Testify against me.

---

14. — thy groves.—The usual scenes of idolatrous practices.

— thine enemies.—So Chald. agreeably to the Hebrew.

15. — hearkened unto me.—See 6. MS. Al. εἰσηκούσαν μου.

“So MS. Copt.” Mr. Woide. And one MS. perhaps reads שמעתי.
The ancients agree in the rendering proposed.

The Babylonians shall rout your armies and take your cities, v. 10, 11.
See v. 1. They shall cut off your false prophets, and destroy the objects of your worship, v. 12, 13, 14. The nations hostile to you shall experience my anger, and shall be themselves subdued, v. 14, 15.

CHAP. VI. 1. — before the mountains.—אֶת־, apud, coram, ad. Nold.
Contend publicly, in the face of the creation.

2. — strong.—Many MSS. and four editions read והאיתנים. Houbigant prefers the reading of 6. והעמקים:

“And ye valleys, the foundations of the earth.”

Videtur legendum האיתנים sequitur העמקים, Houbigant, male. Seeker.
According to this conjecture, the rendering would be,

“And hearken, ye foundations of the earth.”

- 4 For I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt;
And out of the house of slaves I redeemed thee.
And I sent before thee Moses, Aaron, and Miriam.
- 5 O my people, remember now
What Balak the king of Moab consulted;
And what Balaam the son of Beor answered him;
From Shittim even unto Gilgal:
That ye may know the * righteousness of Jehovah.

* Heb. righteousnesses.

3. — wearied thee.—By unnecessary burdens, or undeserved calamity.

4. — Miriam.—She was a prophetess, Ex. xv. 20. Numb. xii. 2.

5. O my people.—The structure of the words is such in the original, that the English language cannot represent what we may suppose to be the true measure of this passage; but the Vulg. may be thus distributed,—

“Popule meus, memento quæso quid cogitaverit
Balach rex Moab;
Et quid responderit ei
Balaam filius Beor,” &c.

Balaam was called to curse Israel; but by my impulse he blessed them.

— consulted.—Purposed. Secker.

— answered.—Some think what Balaam answered here means his advice, Numb. xxxi. 16, how Balak should seduce Israel in their passage through Shittim to Gilgal. Chald. supplies, Did I not perform great things from Shittim to Gilgal? No one interpretation is probable. Secker.

— From Shittim.—From the encampment at Shittim, Numb. xxv. 1, on the way to that at Gilgal, Josh. iv. 19. Balaam gave different answers in the interval between these places. We may suppose that the encampments of Israel advanced slowly to that part of Jordan which was opposite Gilgal.

According to Chald. there seems an omission in the text,

“Were not great things done for you
From Shittim even unto Gilgal?”

See Josh. iii. 1, iv. 20. Thus, there will be a reference to the miraculous passage over Jordan.

— even unto Gilgal.—Many MSS. and two editions read יעד. So Syr. יעדמא.

— the righteousness.—“The great righteousness.” Dr. Wheeler. We may often observe that the original word includes the notion of mercy.

- 6    Wherewith shall I † come before Jehovah?
Wherewith shall I bow myself unto the ‡ High God?
 Shall I § come before him with burnt-offering;
 With calves of a || year old?
- 7    Will Jehovah be well pleased with thousands of rams;
 With ten thousands of rivers of oil?
 Shall I give my first-born for my transgression;
 The fruit of my * body for the sin of my soul?
- 8    He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good:
 And what doth Jehovah require of thee,
 But to do justice, and to love mercy,
 And to be humble in walking with thy God?

† Heb. prevent Jehovah.

‡ Heb. the God of height.

§ Heb. prevent him.

|| Heb. the sons of a year.

* Heb. belly, or womb.

7. — rivers of oil.—Or, fatted sheep, if we read רחלי with V. 6. Ar. Houbigant.

— first-born.—The dearest of my offspring. It is well known that the Phœnicians, and their descendants, the Carthagenians, sacrificed their children to Saturn. And some of the idolatrous Jews and Israelites imitated this horrid practice.

8. He hath showed.—V. Ar. Syr. read הרא, I will show. 6. ed. Ald. have Ει απηγγειλε, instead of Ει ανηγγειλη, the reading of MS. Vat. and Alex.

— justice.—Right, just dealing. See Pocock.

— mercy.—Goodness, kindness, beneficence. Ibid.

— to be humble.—Submissive to God's laws, resigned to his will, acquiescing in his revelation of himself. Ibid.

Prov. xi. 2, צנע is opposed to pride. See Schultens. The Arab. root signified paravit, didicit; and hence, say Schultens and Taylor, a well-informed, well-managed mind. In Chald. the root denotes abscondere; whence retiredness, modesty, humility.

The manner of raising attention in v. 1, 2, by calling on man to urge his plea in the face of all nature, and on the inanimate creation to hear the expostulation of Jehovah with his people, is truly awakening and magnificent. The words of Jehovah follow in v. 3, 4, 5. And God's mercies having been set before his people, one of them is introduced in a beautiful dramatic form, as asking what his duty is towards so gracious a God, v. 6, 7; the answer follows in the words of the prophet Micah, v. 8, if we

- 9 The voice of Jehovah crieth unto the city:
And there is sound wisdom with them that fear his name:
Hear, O ye tribes, him that testifieth.
- 10 ARE there yet in the house of the wicked the treasures of wickedness;
And the † scant measure which is abominable?
- 11 Shall I count her pure with the ‡ wicked balances, † Heb. the ephah of leanness. ‡ Heb. the balances of wickedness.

read הַנִּיר, he hath showed thee; or, perhaps, in the words of Jehovah, if אֲנִיר, I will show thee, should be thought the true reading; though, according to this latter reading, it may well be supposed that the prophet replies in his own person.

Bishop Butler thinks that we have here the demand of Balak, and the answer of Balaam. Ser. vii. p. 121. Bishop Lowth adopts this idea, and adds, "Mire congruit cum cæteris Balaam monumentis res, dictio, constructio, forma ipsa et character compositionis." Præl. Heb. xviii. p. 229, ed. 2. 8vo. And Mr. Peter says, that we have a sort of dialogue between Balak and Balaam represented to us in this prophetic way. The king of Moab speaks, v. 6. Balaam replies by another question, in the two first hemistichs of v. 7. The king of Moab rejoins, in the remaining part of the verse. Balaam replies, v. 8. Sermons, xiv. 8vo. p. 333.

9. — them that fear.—Four MSS. read יִרְאִי, and three in the margin. MS. 2 reads so at present, and MS. 99 has the ה on a rasure. V. 6. Ar. Syr. also read יִרְאִי. It must likewise be observed that V. 6. A. suggest the reading of וְהוֹשִׁיעַ אוֹתָם וְהוֹשִׁיעַ.

"And there is safety to them who fear his name."

Or,

"And he will save them," &c.

— his name — שְׁמִי, 6. A. Syr.

— O ye tribes.—Reading מִטְבֵּית with V., which scarcely differs from מִטְבֵּית, and מִי with Syr.

— him that testifieth.—עִיר, testari is often used in Hiphil both without the formative ם and with the ה paragogic. D. Durell translates,

"Him that testifieth against her:"

sc. the city. See 1 Kings xxi. 10, 13.

10. Are there.—The words of Jehovah follow, to the end of v. 16.

One MS. reads דָּיִשׁ, which is the true reading; and Chald. represents it. Many MSS. and some editions read הָאִישׁ. Thus 2 Sam. xiv. 19, where we have אִישׁ for the verb substantive יִשׁ in the text; four or six MSS. read יִשׁ, and many MSS. אִישׁ.

- And with the bag of § deceitful weights?
 12 Whose rich men are full of || violence;
 And her inhabitants have spoken falsehood;
 And their tongue is * deceitful in their mouth.
 13 Wherefore I will begin to smite thee,
 To make thee desolate, because of thy sins.
 14 Thou shalt eat, but shalt not be satisfied:
 And it shall be dark in the midst of thee:
 And thou shalt take hold, but shalt not carry away:
 And that which thou carriest away will I give up to the sword.
 15 Thou shalt sow, but shalt not reap:
 Thou shalt tread the olive, but shalt not anoint thee with oil:
 And the grape of the choice wine, but shalt not drink the wine.
 16 For thou hast kept the statutes of Omri,

§ Heb. weights of deceit.

|| Or, rapine.

* Heb. deceit.

13. — begin.—Seven MSS. and four editions read הִחֲלִי, as Deut. ii. 31. 1 Sam. xxii. 15, from חָלַל, in Hiphil, to begin. So V. ḡ. Ar. Syr. We may render I have begun; or the verb may be converted into the future by the distant ran; which common Hebraism affected St. Peter's Greek, 2 Pet. iii. 10, if, as in some editions we read καυσομένα τηκεται.

“ I also am wearied in smiting thee,
 In making [thee] desolate for thy sins.”

Dr. Wheeler

14. Thou shalt eat.—This threatening occurs, Hos. iv. 10. l. 1.

— And it shall be dark.—Read חֹשֶׁךְ with ḡ. Ar. Houbigant. Darkness is often put for calamity. See Job xviii. 6. Isa. lix. 9. Amos v. 20.

— take hold.—The true reading is, וַתִּשָּׂא, as one MS. and three editions read; or וַתִּשָּׂא, as two MSS. read. Compare Hosea ix. 11, 12, with this and the foregoing line

15. Thou shalt sow.—En queis consevimus agros! is the language of the husbandman's bitter complaint. Virg.

16. — thou hast kept.—Read וַתִּשְׁמֹר, with V. ḡ. Ar. Syr. Houbigant. Chald. has וַתִּשְׁמֹר, for ye have kept.

— Omri.—An idolatrous king, 1 Kings xvi. 25.

And all the works of the house of Ahab ;
 And ye have walked in their counsels ;
 That I should make her † a desolation,
 And her inhabitants ‡ an hissing :
 And that ye should bear the reproach of my people.

CHAPTER VII.

- 1 WOE is me, for I am become
 As the gatherers of late figs, as the gleaners of the vintage :
There is no cluster to eat :
 My soul desireth the first-ripe fig.
- 2 The good man is perished from the land,
 And there is none upright among men.
 All of them lie in wait for blood :
 They hunt every man his brother for his * destruction.

† Heb. for a desolation.

‡ Heb. for an hissing.

* Or, with a net.

— the works.—ô. Ar. Chald. read בעשי.

— ye have walked.—V. ורחלך, And thou hast walked.

— make her.—Syr. reads אורח, sc. the city, v. 9, 12.

— of my people.—Which will fall on my people, when their enemies subdue them.

CHAP. VII. 1. — late figs.—The word קץ, which is sometimes used for summer-fruits in general, see Amos viii. 1, 2. Isa. xvi. 9. Jer. xl. 10. xlviii. 32, may here be opposed to the early ripe fig of superior quality. See on Hos. ix. 10. ô. read קץ, stubble.

— gleaners.—The women who glean, &c. See Zech. ix. 17.

2. The good man.—As the early fig of excellent flavour cannot be found in the advanced season of summer, or the choice cluster of grapes after vintage ; so neither can the good and upright man be discovered by diligent searching in Israel. The comparison is beautifully implied.

— destruction.—The preposition ל is understood, as very frequently.

- 3 Their hands are ready for evil to do it earnestly :
 The prince asketh a bribe ; and the judge decideth for reward ;
 And as for the great man, he uttereth the wickedness of his † soul : and they do abominably.
- 4 Their good man is as a briar, their upright man as a thorn hedge.
It is the day of thy watchmen : thy visitation cometh,

† Or, desire.

3. Their hands.—Perhaps the true reading is בפרהם, as the versions and Chald. read.

— to do it earnestly.—“Thoroughly, effectually. To good it.” Tayl. Conc. Or, “they do no good.” Et non beneficientes sunt. Syr. Chald. We may read לא היטיב, they do no good ; or לא היטיב, not for doing good.

“ [Their] hands are [bent] on iniquity, to execute it fully.”

Dr. Wheeler.

— uttereth.—See היא, at the end of a sentence, v. 18, and היא, Nahum ii. 8.

— the wickedness.—The versions read אית, the desire. “Qualia dona illi accepta sunt.” Moerlius.

— and they do abominably.—Reading, according to Syr. and Arab. ויהעביו. Houbigant reads ויהעבירו, and men abominate him, sc. the great man. Vulg. reads ויעמרה, and they trouble it, sc. the land ; unless, as Pocock thinks, they take the Arabic sense of עבת, miscuit.

“And the great man uttereth the iniquity of his soul,

Even he, because he hath perverted it.”

Dr. Wheeler.

He reads ריעבתה.

4. Their good man.—The ה may be taken from the foregoing word, and we may read הטובם ; though grammarians object to this form. But there are repeated instances of it, as Josh. vii. 21. viii. 33. 2 Kings xv. 16. See Guarini Gramm. Heb. 4to. 421.

— their upright man.—Reading with Dr. Durrell, ישרם משיכה. Houbigant reads כסוכה ; but the particle of similitude is often understood. “Videtur legendum ישרם משיכה, vel כמשיכה. Vid. Prov. xv. 19.” Secker. For the image, see Numb. xxxiii. 55. Josh. xxiii. 13. Ezek. ii. 6. xxviii. 24. Hos. ii. 6. Harmer i. 452.

— watchmen.—These were to be diligent on the approach of danger, Isa. xxi. 11.

— thy visitation.—ó. Ar. prefix to this word דרי דרי, alas ! alas ! and one MS. prefixes בהנה, behold.

- Now shall be their perplexity.
- 5 Trust ye not in a friend:
Put ye not confidence in a guide:
From her that lieth in thy bosom keep the doors of thy mouth.
- 6 For the son shall dishonour the father:
The daughter shall rise up against her mother; the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law:
A man's foes shall be the men of his household.
- 7 But I will look unto Jehovah;
I will hope in the God of my salvation: my God will hear me.
- 8 Rejoice not over me, O mine enemy:
Though I am fallen, yet shall I rise;
Though I sit in darkness,
Yet shall Jehovah be a light unto me.
- 9 I bear the indignation of Jehovah,
Because I have sinned against him:
Until he plead my cause, and execute judgment for me;
Until he bring me forth to light, until I see his righteousness.
- 10 Then she that is mine enemy shall see it, and shall be covered with shame:

5. — Put ye not confidence.—Seven MSS. and four editions read ואל, et non, with the versions and Chald.

— guide. — אלוף. Husband is called the אלוף of the wife's youth, Prov. ii. 17; and perhaps is meant here. A whisperer separateth אלוף, Prov. xvi. 28. Chal. Syr. translate it in the text by קרוב. Secker.

6. — The daughter.—Our Lord has this passage in view, Matt. x. 35, 36; and accommodates it to the times of persecution.

7. But I.—The people led captive are introduced as using this language.

8. — enemy.—Assyria and Babylon.

— shall I rise.—ó. render και αναστησομαι, and thus show that they read וקמתי.

“ Ergo ne nimium nostra lætere ruina, Restitui quoniam me quoque posse puta.”

Ov. apud Moerlium.

Who said unto me, Where is ‡ Jehovah thy God?
 Mine eyes shall see their desire upon her:
 Now shall she be § trodden down, as the mire of the streets.

11 In the day when thy walls shall be built,
In that day the decree against thee shall be removed afar off.

12 And in that day they shall come unto thee
 From Assyria and the fenced cities;
 And from Egypt even unto the river;
 And from sea unto sea, and from mountain unto mountain:

13 For the land shall become || a desolation

‡ Heb. Where is he. § Heb. for a treading down. || Heb. for a desolation.

11. — the decree.—Sc. of God for thy captivity. Possibly חק, or חוק, as eight MSS. and two ed. read, may be considered as a repetition of the close of the foregoing verb, under a different form; and the verse may be a continuation of the enemy's speech. See Syr.

“The day when thy walls shall be built,
 That day shall be removed afar off.”

Qu. an conjungi debeat ירחקק, reduplicatione in aliis verbis usitata. Secker.

12. — they shall come.—Thy restored inhabitants. In the various lections of the famous edition of the Hebrew Bible at Mantua, on which consult Kennicott, note 300, יבוא, they shall come, is found; with which ó. Ar. Chald. agree.

— unto thee.—One MS. reads עריך. That the vau is sometimes removed from the beginning of the sentence, see on Hos. xiii. 6.

— fenced cities.—One MS. reads מבצר.

— Egypt.—For which the word is sometimes מצרי. See Isa. xix. 6. Boch. Geogr. L. IV. c. xxiv. 258. “Probably it should be, ‘even unto Egypt, and from Egypt even unto the river.’ See Isa. xix. 23 and xi. 16.” Secker.

— from mountain.—Reading מחר with V. ó. Ar. Houbigant. From Egypt to the Euphrates; from the Red Sea to the Mediterranean; and mount Libanus to mount Seir. See Cappellus.

Videtur pro יערי legendum יערי, et forte pro יבוא יערי, legere satius erit עריך יבוא, hostes tui venient. Secker.

13. For.—Thy people shall return unto thee from all parts; for the sentence of desolation is passed on the land, and shall soon be executed.

- Because of its inhabitants, for the fruit of their doings.
- 14 Feed thy people with thy crook, the flock of thine heritage,
That dwell solitarily in the forest.
In the midst of Carmel let them feed,
In Basan and Gilead, as in the days of old.
- 15 As in the days when he went forth out of the land of Egypt, I will show unto him wonderful things.
- 16 The nations shall see, and shall be confounded because of all their might:
They shall lay their hand upon their mouth; their ears shall be deaf:
- 17 They shall lick the dust as the serpent;
As the creeping things of the earth, they shall tremble from their close places:
Because of Jehovah our God they shall stand in awe;
and they shall fear because of thee.

14. Feed.—This may be an address to the governors of the people on their return from captivity.

— solitarily.—Without a shepherd.

— forest.—Habitantes solitariè sylvam. A figurative description of the captivity. See יר, Hos. ii. 12. Bashan and Gilead were famous for fertility and pasturage.

Dr. Wheeler gives the following beautiful turn to this passage, “ Church. Feed thy people with thy sceptre;

The sheep of thine inheritance, dwelling in the solitary grove.
Jehovah. Let them feed in the midst of Carmel,
In Bashan and Gilead, as in the days of old.”

To him I owe the hint of rejecting the Masoretical punctuation.

15. — he went forth.—Houbigant reads צארי, and Syr. Chald. translate “they went forth,” “show them,” and therefore may have read צארי, people being understood. “A like change of persons is in v. 19, and Jer. xvi. 14, 15.” Secker.

16. — their ears.—Sixteen MSS. and three editions read with Chald. Syr. ראוניהם, and their ears.

If the expressions in v. 15, 16, 17, are thought too strong for the events which happened under the Maccabees, they may likewise have a reference to the times of the future restoration.

- 18 Who is a God like unto thee, pardoning iniquity,
And passing by transgression, in the residue of his heritage?
And who keepeth not his anger for ever,
Because he delighteth in mercy?
- 19 He will turn again, he will have compassion on us, he will cover our iniquities.
Yea, thou wilt cast all our sins into the depth of the sea :
- 20 Thou wilt shew faithfulness unto Jacob, and mercy unto Abraham ;
Which thou swarest unto our fathers from the days of old.

— passing by.—Passeth over. Secker.

18. — delighteth in mercy.—Θελητης ελεους εστι, ό.

19. He will turn again.—He will again have compassion on us.

Dr. Wheeler.

— cover.—This is the Chaldee sense of כבש. Syr. reads כנחם, colliget.

— thou wilt even cast.—Syr. reads ודשליך, and he will cast.

“ Tradam protervis in mare Creticum Portare ventis.”

Horace.

— our sins.—‘Αμαρτιας ήμων, ό. Syr. Vulg. Secker.

THE BOOK OF N A H U M.

---

CHAPTER I.

I CONCLUDE, from ch. ii. 2, that Nahum prophesied after the captivity of the ten tribes. Josephus places him in the reign of Jotham, and says, that his predictions came to pass one hundred and fifteen years afterwards. Ant. IX. xi. 3. According to our best chronologers, this date would bring us to the year in which Samaria was taken. And I agree with those who think that Nahum uttered this prophecy in the reign of Hezekiah, and not long after the subversion of the kingdom of Israel by Shalmaneser.

The conduct and imagery of this prophetic poem are truly admirable.

The exordium grandly sets forth the justice and power of God, tempered by lenity and goodness, ch. i. 2—8.

A sudden address to the Assyrians follows; and a prediction of their perplexity and overthrow, as devisers of evil against the true God, v. 9—11.

Jehovah himself then proclaims freedom to his people from the Assyrian yoke, and the destruction of the Assyrian idols, v. 12—14. Upon which the prophet, in a most lively manner, turns the attention of Judah to the approach of the messenger who brings such glad tidings, and bids her celebrate her festivals, and offer her thank-offerings, without fear of so powerful an adversary, v. 15.

Ch. II. In the next place, Nineveh is called on to prepare for the approach of her enemies, as instruments in the hand of Jehovah; and the military array and muster of the Medes and Babylonians, their rapid approach to the city, the process of the siege, the capture of the place, the captivity, lamentation, and flight of the inhabitants, the sacking of the wealthy city, and the consequent desolation and terror, are described in the true spirit of eastern poetry, and with many pathetic, vivid, and sublime images, v. 1—10.

A grand and animated allegory succeeds this description, v. 11, 12, which is explained and applied to the city of Nineveh, in v. 13.

Ch. III. The prophet denounces a woe against Nineveh for her perfidy and violence, and strongly places before our eyes the number of her

1 THE prophecy concerning Nineveh. The book of the vision of Nahum the Elkoshite.

chariots and cavalry, her burnished arms, and the great and unrelenting slaughter which she spread around her, v. 1—3.

He assigns her idolatries as one cause of her ignominious and unpitied fall, v. 4—7.

He foretels that No-Ammon, her rival in populousness, confederacies and situation, should share a like fate with herself, v. 8, 9, 10, 11; and beautifully illustrates the ease with which her strong holds should be taken, v. 12; and her pusillanimity during the siege, v. 13.

He pronounces that all her preparations, v. 14, 15, her numbers, her opulence, her multitude of chief men, would be of no avail, v. 15—17.

He foretels that her tributaries would desert her, v. 18.

He concludes with a proper epiphonema; the topics of which are, the greatness and incurableness of her wound, and the just triumph of others over her, on account of her extensive oppressions, v. 19.

To sum up all, with the decisive judgment of an eminent critic, “Ex omnibus minoribus prophetis nemo videtur æquare sublimitatem, ardorem, et audaces spiritus Nahumi: adde quod ejus vaticinium integrum ac justum est poema; exordium magnificum est et plane augustum; apparatus ad excidium Niniwæ, ejusque excidii descriptio et amplificatio, ardentissimis coloribus exprimitur, et admirabilem habet evidentiam et pondus.” Præl. Heb. xxi. p. 282.

It must be further observed, that this prophecy was highly interesting to the Jews, as the Assyrians had often ravaged their country, and, I suppose, had recently destroyed the kingdom of Israel.

CHAP. I. 1. The prophecy.—The word נִשְׂא has the general signification of prolatum, effatum, pronunciatum, from נָשָׂא, to take up, or, to utter, Exod. xx. 7. Deut. v. 11. 2 Kings xix. 4. It is equivalent to דְּבָרִים, words, Prov. xxxi. 1; where it may be translated prophecy, in the sense of speaking to edification, 1 Cor. xiv. 3. 2 Kings ix. 25 may be rendered, “Jehovah uttered this prophecy concerning him.” See that which follows, v. 26. Compare v. 36.

It is translated burden, as if it signified “gravem prophetiam, quæ dura pronunciat atque comminatur.” See Cappellus on Hab. i. 1. And accordingly Chald. on Nah. i. 1, has “Onus calicis maledictionis.” But Pocock observes, on Mal. i. 1, that it rather signifies a message; and quotes Lam. ii. 14, where the flattering prophecies of false prophets are so called, and where the word may have the sense of effatum, as above.

Because ὁ render the word by φῶτα, 1 Chron. xv. 22, 27, Houbigant says, Forte נִשְׂא indicat signum cantoribus datum, cum alte extollitur

2 Jehovah is a jealous and avenging God :
Jehovah avengeth, and is wrathful :

---

manus ad cantus moderandos." Perhaps we may infer from these places, that prophecies were sometimes sung to musical instruments. See 2 Kings iii. 15. 1 Sam. x. 5.

Taylor interprets the phrases, to lift up a word, Amos v. 1, to lift up a proverb, or parable, Job xxvii. 1, of speaking with an exerted voice, of pronouncing with spirit and earnestness. But, without including this circumstance in its definition, he thus explains נָאֵר, "A prophecy, or burden, containing things of eminence, weight, and importance, taught by man, or revealed by God. The word is plainly ambiguous, and sometimes signifies a heavy judgment." Conc. voc נָאֵר.

Bishop Chandler, Defence, &c. p. 10, quotes authority to show that the word Sibylla comes from נָאֵר, to bear, δια την θεοφοριαν; and adds, "So נָאֵר, to bear, or carry, Numb. xxiv. 3. xxiii. 7, 18. Jon. Targum to speak a parable. See Isa. xiv. 28. Prov. xxxi. 1. Lam. ii. 14. 2 Kings ix. 25; comp. with v. 36."

Some commentators, particularly Drusus, are of opinion, that in this chapter the prophet foretels, first the destruction of Sennacherib's army, and then of Sennacherib himself. There seem to me to be so many allusions to the history of these events in this chapter, that I am much inclined to subscribe to their opinion. Rabshakeh had represented his master as invincible; nay, as more powerful than the true God worshipped at Jerusalem. In answer to this the prophet asserts, 2-6, the justice and irresistible power of God, and represents him as avenging himself of his enemies (whether Jew or Gentile), and thus insinuates, that Sennacherib ought not to assume to himself, but ascribe to God, whose instrument only he was, the overthrow of the nations he had reduced: and as God had overthrown them, and had also afflicted for their sins his own people, so now he would have mercy on his own people, v. 7, and punish the Assyrians. Compare v. 4 with Isa. xxxvii. 24, 25, and v. 9, and v. 11, with Isa. xxxvii. 23. He foretels the destruction of Sennacherib's army, v. 8, 9, 10, 12; the immediate cause of it, v. 11; and the consequence of it, latter part of v. 12 and 13. The fall of Sennacherib himself is foretold, v. 14. The prophet then proceeds to announce the joy this should cause among the Jews, and the utter destruction of the Assyrian empire that should speedily ensue. Dr Forsayeth.

— Nineveh.—Nimrod, the third in descent from Ham, went forth out of the land of Shinar into Assyria, to wage war against the descendants of Shem, and built Nineveh. For so I understand Gen. x. 10, 11, agreeably to our marginal rendering, and to Bochart, Geogr. Sacr. v. ii. p. 229. And therefore the land of Assyria is called the land of Nimrod, Mic. v. 6. He

Jehovah avengeth his adversaries :

And he reserveth indignation for his enemies.

- 3 Jehovah is slow to anger, yet great in power;
But Jehovah by no * means cleareth the guilty.
His way is in the whirlwind and in the storm;
And the clouds are the dust of his feet.
- 4 He rebuketh the sea, and maketh it dry;
And † drieth up all the rivers.

* Heb. clearing will not clear.

† Or, exhausted.

might assign this city to his son, and call it נִינֻס, from נֵן, a son and נִס, an habitation. Still we may allow that another Ninus made conquests throughout a great part of Asia, and in that sense founded the Assyrian empire, during the time of the Judges; as otherwise Herodotus's assertion cannot be true, that the duration of the Assyrian monarchy was five hundred and twenty years. See Bishop Lowth's note on Isa. xxiii. 13.

— Elkoshite.—So called, says Jerome, from a village in Galilee.

Vitringa, Es. p. 25, thinks the parts of this verse transposed. Seeker.

2. — jealous.—קִנְיָא occurs only here and Josh. xxiv. 19. Here eight MSS. and three editions omit the vau, and in Joshua fourteen MSS. omit it, — reserveth indignation for.—See Lev. xix. 18. Or, observeth with an angry eye. The Arabic word signifies vidit, contemplatus est. See 1 Sam. xx. 20, where the substantive from this verb is rendered a mark.

The ל in this v. is twice transitive, like אָת. See Hos. i. 6. x. 1. Zeph. i. 17. Jer. x. 18.

3. — But Jehovah.—וְ. divide thus. I find that this is also Dr. Wheeler's punctuation. See Ex. xx. 7. xxxiv. 7. Numb. xiv. 18. Jer xxx. 11.

— His way.—In the whirlwind and storm he displayeth his power or his vengeance; he treadeth on the clouds, as on the dust. Another Hebrew word for clouds is עָנָן, which also denotes small dust. The verb עָנָן signifies comminuere; and Castel says that clouds may be called עָנָן ob tenuitatem.

These two lines are very sublime; but the Psalmist is still more sublime.

“Who maketh the clouds his chariot:

Who walketh upon the wings of the wind.” Ps. civ. 3.

4. — the sea.—As the Red Sea, Ex. xiv. 21.

— the rivers.—As the Jordan, Josh. iii. 16. He also drieth up all of

- Bashan languisheth, and Carmel :
 And the flower of Lebanon languisheth.
- 5 The mountains shake at him, and the hills are molten.
 And the land is laid waste before him ;
 Yea, the world, and all that dwell therein.
- 6 Who shall stand before his indignation ?
 And who shall rise up in his ‡ hot anger ?
 His fury is poured out like fire ;
 And the rocks are § cast down by him.
- 7 Jehovah is good : he is a || strong hold in the day distress :
 And he knoweth them that trust in him :
- 8 But with an overflowing torrent he will make a full end of those who rise up against him :

‡ Heb. the heat of his anger.

§ Or, broken down.

|| Heb. for a strong hold.

of them, sc. very many of them, by visiting a sinful people with drought,
 1 Kings xvii. 7.

“ He rebuketh the sea, and drieth it up ;
 And parcheth up all the rivers.” Dr. Wheeler.

The collocation of the original words is exquisite in the three first hemistichs of v. 2 ; in the two first of v. 3 ; and in two last of v. 4.

5. — shake.—As Sinai, Ex. xix. 18.

— are molten. Possibly an allusion to bringing water out of the rock, Numb. xx. 10. Or, rather, this and the foregoing clause refer to God's power shown in storms and earthquakes.

— is laid waste.—Reading תשמה with Chald. and Houbigant.

— Yea, the world.—On considering this line, I conjectured that we should read תכל, as more elegant and agreeable to the usual turn of the Hebrew poetry, and I observed that vau preceded תכל, and נפני. On examination I found my conjecture supported by the omission of vau in ä. Syr. and six or seven MSS. Dr. Wheeler saw this ; for his version stands,

“ And the world,” &c.

6. — hot anger.—So Exarsere ignes animo. Æn. ii. 575.

— like fire.—Widely and irresistibly. See Amos v. 6.

— rocks are cast down.—Lightning, or subterraneous fire, or earthquake, may produce this effect.

8. — an overflowing torrent.—Here may be an allusion to the manner in which Nineveh was taken. “ The Euphrates overflowed its banks,

And darkness shall pursue his enemies.

9 What do ye imagine against Jehovah?

He will make a full end :

Distress shall not rise up a second time.

10 For while the princes are yet perplexed,

And as drunken with their wine,

They are devoured as stubble * fully dry.

11 From thee hath gone forth one that imagined evil against
Jehovah ;

A † wicked counsellor.

* Heb. dry to fulness.

† Heb. A counsellor of Belial.

deluged a part of the city, and overturned twenty stadia of the wall ; in consequence of which the desponding king burned himself, his palace, and treasures." Diod, Sic. ed. Wess. p. 140. L. ii, Sec. 27.

— a full end.—Ἡ Νύξ μεν ἀπολωλεν ἡδὴ, καὶ οὐδὲν ἰχνος ἐστὶ λοιπὸν αὐτῆς. Luc. Dial. Contemplantēs.

— of those who rise up against him.—Houbigant proposes reading בקיני, as Jer. li. 1. 6. join the word to the next clause, and may read בקיני, or בקיני, which latter reading I prefer.

"Those that rise up against him, and his enemies, darkness shall pursue."

Aquila has ἀπο ἀνισταμένων. Theodotion, consurgentibus ei. V. ed. a consurgentibus illi. See Montfaucon.

— pursue.—So as to overtake and involve them. See Deut. xxviii. 22, 45.

"And his enemies will he pursue to darkness." Dr. Wheeler. Agreeably to Chald.

9. — He will make.—"He himself will make," &c. Dr. Wheeler.

10. — the princes.—Syr. and Chald. read שרים, and two MSS. and one ed. have כרים.

— yet perplexed.—Reading עיר—סבוכים. The Arab. (see שבר, Cast. lex.) signifies perplexa fuit res, irretitus fuit.

— And as drunken.—Men, fluctuating and staggering in their counsels, are beautifully said to be as it were intoxicated with wine. I consider the present reading as preferable to the reading of Syr. and of one MS. יבסבא, et in vino suo.

11. — hath gone forth.—That is, thou hast produced. Such were Pul, 2 Kings xv. 19 ; Tiglath-pileser, ib. 29 ; Shalmaneser, ib. xvii. 6 ; and Sennacherib, 2 Kings xviii. 17, &c. xix. 23.

— wicked.—Of Belial. Some, as Tayl. Conc. Supplement, derive this

- 12 Thus saith Jehovah :
 Though the Ruler of many waters
 Have thus ravaged, and have thus passed through ;
 And I have afflicted thee ;
 I will afflict thee no more.
- 13 For now will I break his yoke from off thee,
 And will burst thy bonds in sunder.
- 14 And Jehovah will command concerning thee, word from בלי, without, and על, a yoke : but בל יעיל, one that profiteth not, that is, one who is dangerous and destructive, is a better etymology. Αχρειος has this sense in Greek, and inutilis in Latin. See Merrick on Ps. xviii. 1. 12.

12. — Though the Ruler.—I propose reading,

אם מישל מים רבים
 כן נול וכן עבר
 וענתוך לא אענך עוד :

אם occurs in the text. ם. read מישל מים רבים ; a just and beautiful periphrasis for Nineveh, which was situated on the great river Tigris. See Ezek. xxxi. 4. Syr. has דמו ועברו, quæ rapuerunt et elapsæ sunt ; but I prefer the singular number on account of his yoke, v. 13, though Houbigant, Syr. and Arab. read מישל, rulers ; and, retaining כן, twice, I form a conjectural reading as nearly as I can to the text, which is manifestly corrupted. וענתוך rests on the authority of fourteen MSS. two ed. Syr. Chald. and Vulg.

“ Thus saith Jehovah : If retributions come,

“ According as they are many, accordingly shall they be cut off, and pass away.

“ If I have afflicted thee, I will not afflict thee more.”

Or,

“ Though they are at peace, and also mighty,

“ Still shall they be cut off, and pass away.”

Dr. Wheeler.

Though they be perfect [in health and strength] and thus numerous, even so shall they be cut down [as grass] and he [Sennacherib] shall pass away [fly to his own home] Dr. Forsayeth.

13. — his yoke.—thy bonds.—The Jews paid tribute to the Assyrians, 2 Kings xviii. 14 ; and the Israelites were under actual captivity among them at this time.

‡ That thy name shall be no more scattered abroad.

From the house of thy God I will cut off the graven image and the molten image;

I will appoint thy sepulchre; for thou art become vile.

15 Behold upon the mountains

The feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace.

Keep, O Judah, thy feasts; perform thy vows.

For he shall no § more pass through thee:

The wicked is wholly consumed, he is cut off.

CHAPTER II.

1 HE that * scattereth is come up before thee:

Guard the fenced place; watch the way:

Strengthen the loins; confirm might greatly.

2 For Jehovah restoreth the excellency of Jacob,

‡ Heb. There shall not be sown of thy name any more.

§ Heb. shall add no more to pass.

* Or, breaketh in pieces.

14. — scattered abroad.—That no more of thy colonies be transplanted to other countries.

— become vile.—Thy enemies have subdued thee. See a like apostrophe to this city, ch. ii. 1.

15. — upon the mountains.—Which surrounded Jerusalem.

— good tidings.—That Nineveh is destroyed. Compare Isa. lii. 7.

— The wicked.—See 2 Sam. xxiii. 6.

— wholly consumed.—Houbigant renders with é. perit, excisus est. We may render, consummatione vel consummando excisus est. Six MSS. in the text or margin, read כָּלִי, all of him. The Assyrian is meant.

CHAP. II. 1. — scattereth.—The army of the Babylonians and Medes. “The destroyer.” Dr. Wheeler.

— the loins.—Compare Ps. lxi. 23. Thus clumbis signifies weak.

2. — restoreth.—I suppose that we should read כִּי יִשָּׁב for כִּי יִשָּׁב. The versions and Chald. give the force of Hiphil to the verb.

As the excellency of Israel :

For the wasters have wasted them, and have destroyed their branches.

3 The shield of his mighty men is made red :

The valiant men are clothed in scarlet :

The chariots are as the fire of lamps, in the day when he prepareth them :

And the horsemen spread fear.

4 In the streets the chariots madden :

They run to and fro in the broad places :

Their appearance is as lamps, they run as lightning.

5 He recounteth his mighty men : they cast down in their march.

— of Israel.—In the manner suitable to the excellency of a prince prevailing with God, according to the etymology of the word Israel.

That by the excellency of Jacob, either Jerusalem, or the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin are to be understood, see Drusius on the place. Dr. Forsayeth.

— the wasters.—The Assyrians have wasted Israel, and led her into captivity.

3. — is made red.—As the preparation for battle is described, we may suppose it customary among those who fought against Nineveh to carry red shields, and to wear scarlet. Scuta lectissimis coloribus distinguunt. Tac. de Mor. Germ. c. 6.

— as the fire of lamps.—δ. Houbigant, one MS. and one edition read, כבוד, as many MSS. and some editions read, is a plain mistake for לפרות. See v. 4.

— when he prepareth them.—Or, when he prepareth himself. His scythed chariots, burnished for war, resemble flames of fire.

— horsemen.—V. δ. Ar. Syr. read ורפרשים.

— spread fear.—I suppose the verb to be in Hiphil.

And the axle-trees of fir are in dreadful commotion. Dr. Wheeler.

4. — madden.—So Homer. Π. Θ. III.

“εἰ καὶ ἐμὸν δόρυ μαινεται ἐν παλαμῇ.”

— Their appearance.—Houbigant's reading of מראיהם is confirmed by three MSS.

5. — they cast down.—I suppose the verb to be in Hiphil, as 2 Chron. xxv. 8.

- They hasten to the wall, and the covering is prepared.
- 6 The gates of the rivers are opened:
And the palace melteth with fear, and the fortress.
- 7 She is taken into captivity, she is † brought up:
And her handmaids are carried away as with the voice of doves, ‡ Smiting upon their breasts.
- 8 And the waters of Nineveh are as a pool of water:

† Or, caused to go up.

‡ Or, tabering.

— to the wall.—Murum versus; the ה being local.

— the covering.—Vulg. umbraculum; ὁ προφυλακή. It denotes the tortoise, or shed, under which the besiegers covered themselves.

6. The gates.—Houbigant understands this metaphorically of the natural or artificial banks which kept in the river. There is an allusion to the fact quoted from Diodorus Siculus in the note on ch. i. 8.

— the palace.—The Hebrew word is probably derived from an Arabic one, which signifies magnus fuit. See Cast. lex.

— melteth.—Syr. has נ, and seems to read נמש, is shaken, removed, cast down, overthrown.

— fortress.—I read מצב, which is rendered mount, Isa. xxix. 3, and sometimes garrison. Vulg. has miles. Chald. has מצב, ministrans; which suggests the reading of והצב, and the host. ὁ. have ὑποστασις, which will answer to a noun from יצב, constituere.

7. — she is brought up.—She is caused to go up to Babylon.

— Smiting.—Or, by a figure, tabering. Eleganter usurpatur מיתפפות, de plangentibus et pectus tundentibus; quasi Gallicè dicas, battans le tambour sur leur poitrines. Cappellus. "As the tabret is beaten with the fingers, and those fingers are applied to a skin stretched over a hollow hoop, the description gives great life to the words of the prophet Nahum, who compares women beating on their breasts, in deep anguish, to their playing on a tabret." Harmer. i. 482.

— breasts.—See לבב, Ex. xxviii. 30.

"Tunsæ pectora palmis."

Virg. Æn. i. 485.

8. — her waters.—Literally, Et Nineveh, aquæ ipsius, &c. See the note on Micah vii. 3, to show that the pronoun is sometimes placed at the end of a clause.

— a pool of water.—The inundation of the river mentioned in the note on ch. i. 8, assisted by the channels and receptacles for water which the Ninevites formed to make their city inaccessible to the enemy, produced

And they flee and men cry, Stand, Stand; but none looketh back.

- 9 They spoil the silver, they spoil the gold:
And there is none end of the § glorious store,
Because of all kinds of || pleasant vessels.
- 10 She is void, empty, and desolate:
And the heart melteth, and the * knees smite together;
And there is great pain in all loins;
And the faces of them all gather blackness.
- 11 Where is the habitation of the devouring-lions?
And that which was the feeding-place of the young-lions?
Whither the devouring-lion, and the lioness, went;

§ Heb. the preparation of glory. || Heb. vessels of desire,

* Heb. there is smiting together of knees.

this effect for some time. See Cyril on ch. iii., and the quotation from him, Boch. Geogr. L. IV. xx. p. 254.

9. — of the glorious store.—Reading תכונת כבה with Cappellus. Or thus,

“And there is none end of the store:

There is glory [costliness, splendour, magnificence] from all pleasant vessels.”

Dr. Wheeler renders:

“It is precious beyond all desirable vessels.”

ו read תכונתה and כבדו.

“And there is no end to her store.

“They are heavy from all pleasant vessels.”

10. She is void.—The three words in the original are of like sound, and increase in the number of syllables. Observe טרף and טרפה, v. 12. בלק in Arab. signifies cito ivit, obstupuit; and one of its derivatives is used for desertum, solitudo. See Cast. lex. and Gol.

— gather blackness.—See a parallel line, Joel ii. 6. The versions and Chald. in both places suppose the word to mean blackness as of a pot, nigricantem pallorem. Mercer.

11. — and the lioness.—Houbigant reads ולביא. Vulg. ו. read לבוא, ut ingrederetur; and this was the original reading of one MS.

“Whither the devouring lion went, to enter in there.”

And the whelp of the devouring-lion; and none made them afraid.

- 12 The devouring-lion tare for his whelps,
And strangled for his lionesses;
And filled his dens with prey,
And his habitations with rapine.
- 13 Behold I am against thee, saith Jehovah God of hosts:
And I will burn thy chariots in the fire;
And the sword shall devour thy villages;
And I will cut off thy prey from the earth;
And the fame of thy deeds shall be heard no more.

The allegory is beyond measure beautiful. Where are the inhabitants of Nineveh, who were strong and rapacious like lions?

— and none made them afraid.—See the intrepidity of the lion well illustrated, Boch. Hieroz. L. III. c. ii. p. 724. Both Aristotle and Ælian say that he never flies, but retires slowly.

“Λειπε δε νεκρον
Εντροπαλιζομενος, ωστε λις ηϋγενειος,
’Ον ρα κυνες τε και ανδρες απο σταθμοιο διωνται
Εγχεσι και φωνη. του δ’ εν φρεσιν αλκιμον ητορ
Παχυνται, αεκων δε τ’ εβη απο μεσσανλοιο.”

II. p. 108.

13 — against thee. See אַל, Nold. Sec. 6. contra. Syr. Chald. and one MS. have עַלֶיךָ, and Syr. Chald. Ar. ch. iii. 5.

— thy chariots in the fire.—We may read באש מרכבה. See Chald. understanding מרכבה as a noun of multitude. Or, we may read מרכבך, thy chariots.

“Thy chariots.” Vulg. Chal. “thy multitude.” ὁ. “thy troops. Syr.” Secker.

— thy villages.—בפריך, one MS. See also Chald. oppida tua. So Ezek. xxxviii. 13, renders “the villages thereof” Two MSS read בפריה.

— of thy deeds.—Reading מלאכתך. See Syr. ὁ. Arab. τα εργα σου. Vulg. reads מלאכך. “And the voice of thy messengers, &c.” I suppose the allegory to end at v. 12. Houbigant continues it through this verse, and reads מרכבך or רכבך, which he renders sedile tuum; but, I think, without authority. ὁ. read רבך, thy multitude.

The curious reader may see in Josephus a paraphrase of the last six verses of this chapter. Ant. L. IV. c. xi. p. 501. ed. Haverc.

CHAPTER III.

- 1    WOE to the city of * blood !
       She is all full of falsehood and of violence :
       The prey departeth not.
- 2    A sound of the whip is there, and a sound of the rattling wheels :
       And of the prancing horses, and of the bounding chariots,
       and of the horseman mounting.
- 3    The flame of the sword is also there, and the lightning of the spear ;
       And a multitude of slain, and a heap of dead bodies ;
       And there is no end to the carcasses ; they stumble upon their carcasses.
- 4    Because of the † many whoredoms of the harlot,

* Heb. bloods.

† Heb. multitude of the whoredoms.

1. — violence.—The Vargi among the ancient Gauls were a kind of soldiers so called from the word פָּרַק, rapina, used here and Obad. 14. Boch. Geogr. 668.

“ Woe to the bloody city, she is all deceit ;
 Full of devastation,” &c.

Dr. Wheeler.

See 6. Ar. Syr.

“ She is all lies, and full of.” Secker.

2. — prancing.—One sense of the word in Arab. is swift.

— bounding.—Subsultatque alte similisque est currus inani. Ovid of Phaëthon.

— and of the horseman.—V. 6, and also Ar. Syr. in the original, have the copulative.

3. — lightening.—See Hab. iii. 11. Homer has “ Τηλε δε χαλκος

 Λαμφ', ὥς αστεροπη πατρος Διως.”

Il. x. 154.

Ad

“ Πας δ' αρα χαλκῳ
 Λαμφ', ὥς αστεροπη πατρος Διως αἰγιοχοιο.”

Il. xi. 65.

— their carcasses.—The carcasses slain by them. These three verses are a description of Nineveh, as it was in the time of the prophet.

*Who is well-favoured, and mistress of enchantments,
Who trafficketh in nations by her whoredoms, and in tribes by her enchantments;*

5 Behold I am against thee, saith Jehovah God of hosts;
And I will uncover thy skirts before thy face;
And I will shew the nations thy nakedness, and the kingdoms thy shame.

6 And I will cast upon thee † abominable filth;
And I will dishonour thee, and will make thee as dung.

7 And it shall come to pass that every one who seeth thee shall flee from thee;

And shall say, Nineveh is laid waste.

Who will bemoan thee?

Whence shall I seek comforters for thee?

8 Art thou better than No-Ammon, that is situated among the rivers?

Waters are round about her:

† Or, ordure.

4. — enchantments.—By which she fascinates others to worship her gods.

— trafficketh in.—Heb. selleth. Hath them at her disposal, as the Israelites, whom probably she first seduced to adopt some of her idolatrous rites.

5. — before thy face.—Te ipsa vivente et vidente. See the phrase, Lev. x. 3, and the note on Hos. ii. 3.

6. — as dung.—The word ראי, for a gazing stock, occurs only here. The Jews understand it of dung, and explain מראה, ingluvies, by ניקים ראי, locus sordium. See J. Buxt. lex. manuale. Perhaps the true reading occurs Isa. xxxvi. 12. קרי, or קראי, or קוראי; see the various lections; which word, however read, in Keri is explained by the softer term צאת or צאת. In Arab. קרא signifies deponere alvum.

8. — No-Ammon.—A city in Egypt. See Ezek. xxx. 14, 15. Jer. xlv. 25. Bochart thinks it Diospolis near Mendes, which appears, from Strabo, to have been situated near lakes. See Geogr. Sacr. L. I. c. i. p. 6. Herodotus says, that the Egyptians called Jupiter by the name of Ammon. L. II. c. 42.

— rivers.—Channels of water from the Nile may have passed through this city.

The sea is her § rampart; waters are her wall.

- 9 || Ethiopia is her strength, and Egypt; and there is no end to it:

Put and Libya * are her help:

- 10 Yet shall she be † carried away: she goeth into captivity:

Yet her little ones shall be dashed in pieces

At the ‡ top of all the streets.

And for her honourable men they cast lots;

And all her mighty men are bound with chains.

- 11 Thou also shalt become an hireling; thou shalt hide thyself;

Thou shalt seek a refuge from the enemy.

- 12 All thy strong holds shall be like figtrees with the first ripe figs:

§ Heb. whose rampart is. || Heb. Chus. * Heb. in her help.

† Heb. Yet she for a carrying away. ‡ Heb. head.

—The sea.—Lakes are thus called by the Hebrews, Josh. iii. 16. xii. 3.

—wall.—Bochart, ubi supra, quotes Isocrates as saying that Egypt was fortified by the everlasting wall of the Nile; and Heliodorus, as observing that robbers used the river as a wall.

“And waters are her wall.” Syr. ó.

9. Ethiopia.—Or Chus. See on Amos ix. 7, and Ezekiel xxix. 10.

—Put.—פוט, and פיר, spargi, are the same by a common change of letters. The African Nomades are meant. Boch. ubi supra, p. 296.

—Libya.—Or Lubim. See on Hos. xiii. 5.

—her help.—בְּעִזְרָתָהּ, ó. Syr. Houbigant. See on Hos. xiii. 9.

10. —shall be dashed.—The original word may have the force of the present tense, are dashed; and Nahum may refer to a past taking of No by Sennacherib, as Prideaux supposes; see Isa. xx. 4; or, as I rather think, he may predict the taking of it by Nebuchadnezzar, Jer. xlv. 25. Ezek. xxx. 14. See Prid. Ann. 713.

—lots.—Prædæ ducere sortes. Virg. Æn. ix. And Andromache calls her happy, “Quæ sortitus non pertulit ullos.”

Ib. iii. 323.

11. —shalt become an hireling.—Shalt hire thyself out. Pretio emêris, vel mercede conducta eris. Houbigant. See 1 Sam. ii. 5. Thou shalt be reduced to a state of slavery, after having in vain endeavoured to escape.

12. like figtrees.—See Rev. vi. 13, which is very sublime. And here

- If they be shaken, they fall into the mouth of the eater.
- 13 Behold, thy people are as women in the midst of thee :
The gates of thy land are set wide open unto thine
enemies:
The fire devoureth thy bars.
- 14 Draw thee water for the siege ; fortify thy strong holds :
Go into the clay, and tread the mortar ; repair the brickkiln.
- 15 There shall the fire devour thee :
The sword shall cut thee off, it shall devour thee as the locust.
Increase thyself as the locust, increase thyself as the numerous-locust :
- 16 Multiply thy merchants more than the stars of heaven :
Yet the locust hath spoiled, and hath flown away.
- 17 Thy crowned princes are as the numerous-locust, and thy captains as the grasshoppers ;

the image, though a common one, is very lively and expressive. See Prael. Heb. xii. p. 138.

13. — women.—Αχαιῖδες, ουκ ετ' Αχαιοι. Hom. Vere Phrygiæ, neque enim Phryges. Virg.

14. — for the siege.—Or, for the fortress, or citadel. And even with respect to the city, though its wall bordered on the river, it might not be safe to water there within reach of the enemy's missile weapons and engines.

— the clay.—An allusion to the bricks of clay, used for building in those countries. In Xenophon we have πλινθοι κεραμοι, and πλινθινον τειχος. Αναβασις. p. 236, 7. ed. Hutch. 4to.

15. There.—Where thou fortifiest thyself.

— as the locust.—In a manner equally unsparing.

— Increase thyself.—Six or seven MSS. add the התכבד, and two MSS. omit התכבד. And then the clause would stand, “ Increase thyself as the locust, as the numerous-locust.”

The idea is beautifully continued from the preceding clause.

16. Multiply thy merchants.—I conjecture הרבי את. Yet shalt thou fall a prey to an enemy as devouring as the locust.

17. — as the grasshoppers.—A word which, though not accurate, we are obliged to use for variety. The Hebrews have many names for the

Which encamp in the fences in the cold day ;
But, when the sun ariseth, they depart, and their place is not known where they are.

18 Thy shepherds slumber, O king of Assyria ; thy nobles
dwelt in sloth :

Thy people are spread on the mountains, and none
 assembleth them.

19 There is no healing of thy bruise ; thy wound is grievous :

locust. 6. Ar. Syr. read only one word for grasshopper. I consider the present reading in the text as an instance, either of a double reading inserted where the scribe had a doubt which was the true reading, or of a mistaken repetition not expunged. We may suppose "גרב", the contracted plural for גרבים.

— cold day.—Or, in the day of cold. On such days, in the sense of νυχθημερα, they lie inactive in the enclosures of fertile spots ; but on the shining of the sun, which dries their wings and enables them to fly, they disappear. Locustæ sol accidit, et abiit. Alcamus. Boch. Hieroz. p. ii. L. IV. ii. 458.

— where they are.—We have in this verse a plural and a singular participle, and a singular and a plural pronoun ; and גרב, a noun of multitude, may cause this difference.

18. — shepherds.—Rulers, as the parallelism shows.

— dwelt in sloth.—Quiescunt. Schultens. Anim. Phil. 513. Cappellus conjectures גרבי, decumbunt : and Secker גרבי, dormiunt.

The tributary princes deserted Nineveh in the day of her distress, and did not collect an army to succour her. See Herod. p. 52. l. 13, 14. Ed. Wess. for the conduct of the Assyrian allies in the first siege ; and Diod. Sic. L. II. p. 140. Sec. 26 ed. Wess. who, speaking of the siege in which Nineveh fell, says, that when the enemy shut up the king in the city, many nations revolted, each going over to the besiegers for the sake of their liberty ; that the king despatched messengers to all his subjects, requiring forces from them to assist him ; and that he thought himself able to endure the siege, and remained in expectation of the armies which were to be raised throughout his empire, relying on an oracle, that the city could not be taken till the river became its enemy.

— are spread.—See Hab. i. 8. Or, we may read נפרצי.

19. — healing.—So 6. and כהה in Chald. is repressit. But Syr. and Chald. read גאב.

“ None grieveth because of thy bruise:”

All that hear the report of thee clap their hands over thee :
For upon whom hath not thy wickedness passed continually ?

---

— thy wickedness.—Thy tyranny and cruelty, in the height of thy dominion.

Herodotus places the city Ninus on the Tigris, L. ii. p. 178, L. i. p. 91, and says that Cyaxares the Mede, the son of Phraortes, the son of Deioeces, besieged Ninus twice ; before the irruption of the Scythians, and after it ; and that he took the city on the second siege, L. i. p. 52, 53. [Astyages was the son of Cyaxares ; and Mandane, daughter to Astyages, was the mother of Cyrus.] He assigns the period of five hundred and twenty years to the dominion of the Assyrians over Upper Asia, L. i. Sec. 95. p. 49.

Fuit et Ninus, imposita Tigri, ad solis occasum spectans, quondam clarissima. Plin. Nat. Hist. vi. 13.

So Arrian, Hist. Ind. Sec. 42. 357. ed. Gronov. The Tigris flows from Armenia by the city Ninus ; once great and flourishing.

Strabo says that Ninus built Ninus or Nineveh, and his wife Semiramis, Babylon ; that the Syrian or Assyrian empire ended with Sardanapalus, and was afterwards transferred to the Medes ; and that the city Nineveh was soon totally destroyed after the subversion of the Assyrians, L. xvi. p. 1071. ed. Casaub.

Josephus thus begins the fifth chapter of the tenth book of his antiquities, “ Necho, the King of Egypt, raised an army, and marched to the river Euphrates to make war against the Medes and Babylonians, who had overturned the empire of the Assyrians.” And in his account of Hezekiah’s reign he writes thus, “ It happened at this time that the empire of the Assyrians was overturned by the Medes.” Ant. L. X. c. ii. Sec. 2. ed. Haverc.

Justin assigns one thousand three hundred years to the Assyrian empire, and says that Arbastus, a prefect of the Medes, conspired against Sardanapalus, and waged war against him ; in consequence of which Sardanapalus burned himself in his palace, and Arbastus was made king, and transferred the empire from the Assyrians to the Medes, L. 1. c. iii.

Velleius Paterculus writes that the Assyrians had the sovereignty of Asia one thousand seven hundred years ; and that Pharnaces the Mede conquered Sardanapalus, the thirty-third in succession from Ninus and Semiramis, L. i. c. v

We find in Diodorus Siculus that the Assyrian kings continued for thirty generations to Sardanapalus ; in whose reign the empire of the Assyrians was transferred to the Medes, after it had lasted, according to Ctesias, more than one thousand three hundred and sixty years, L. II. p. 135. ed. Wess. He then mentions that Arbaces a Median, and Belesys a Babylonian, stirred up the Medes, Persians, and Babylonians to a revolt, p. 137, 8; that the revolt was unsuccessful in three battles, and afterwards obtained as many victories; and that Ninus was besieged and taken in the third year, in the remarkable manner mentioned on ch. i. 8.

We read in Tobit, ch. xiv. 15, that Nineveh was taken by Nabuchodonosor and Assuerus. And Drusius asserts that Assuerus and Cyaxares are the same person.

Jackson, in his chronology, undertakes to show that Nineveh was destroyed by Cyaxares, or Assuerus, King of Media, assisted by Nabo-Pul-Asar, prefect of Babylon, and father to Nebuchadnezzar, in the year before Christ, 606, L. 307, 343.

Nineveh was standing in the reign of Josiah, 2 Kings xxiii. 29. Zeph. i. 1. ii. 13. And Blair places its destruction in the third year of Jehoiakim, and before Christ, 606.

THE BOOK

OF

J O E L.

---

CHAPTER I.

- 1 THE Word of Jehovah which came to Joel the son of Pethuel.
- 2 Hear this, ye old men ;
And give ear, all ye inhabitants of the land.
Hath * this happened in your days :
Or even in the days of your fathers ?

* Or, such an event.

CHAP. I. 1. — Joel.—Joel prophesied while the kingdom of Judah subsisted, ch. ii. 1, 15 ; but, I think, not long before its subversion, as his words, ch. iii. 1, seem to imply that its captivity was approaching. See 2 Kings xxi. 10—15. I am, therefore, disposed to favour the conjecture of Drusius, that he lived under the long reign of Manasseh, and before his conversion, 2 Chron. xxxiii. 13 ; that is, some time from before Christ 697 to (suppose) 660.

The very able author of the Hebrew prelections thus characterizes him. Imprimis est elegans, clarus, fusus, fluensque ; valde etiam sublimis, acer, fervidus. Ostendit capite primo et secundo quid valeat in descriptionibus poesis prophetica ; quantum amat metaphoras, comparationes, allegorias. Nec minus clara est rerum connexio, quam dictionis color : malorum amplificatio ; hortatio ad pœnitentiam ; pœnitentibus promissio bonorum cum terrenorum tum cœlestium ; rerum Israeliticarum instauratio ; de adversariis sumpta supplicia. Verum et hic et alibi elocutionis perspicuitatem et compositionis nitorem laudantes, non negamus magnam interdum esse rerum obscuritatem ; quod in hujusce vaticinii fine subiunde notari potest. Præl. xxi.

2. — this.—חֲרִיבָה is understood. See on Amos vii 3.

- 3 Tell ye your children of it; and let your children tell their children;
And their children tell another generation,
4 That which the grasshopper † left hath the locust eaten;
And that which the locust † left hath the devouringlocust eaten;
And that which the devouring-locust † left hath the consuming-locust eaten.
5 Awake, ye drunkards, and weep,
And howl, all ye drinkers of wine,
For the sweet wine; because it is cut off from your mouth.
6 For a nation hath gone up on my land,

† Heb. the residue of.

3. — your children.—Quod poetæ verbis dixeris, Et nati natorum, et qui nascentur ab illis. Æn. iii. See Bochart, p. II. L. IV. ch. iv. Hieroz. where the reader will find many curious remarks on this prophet.

4. — grasshopper.—Different species of locusts are here recounted. נֹזֵחַ in Syr. Æth. Ar. signifies incidere, reseca; and נֹזֵחַ in Chald. is locus ubi ramus est abscissus. See Cast. lex. לֵךְ may be derived from the Hebrew root, which signifies lumbere. Or, it may come from the Arab. أبيض, albus. White locusts abound in Morocco, ib. and Boch. ib. c. 1. Wings are attributed to לֵךְ, Nah. iii. 16. Ray says that there is a Spanish locust three inches long, and an African, four. On Insects, p. 63.

5. Awake.—From the long sleep occasioned by your intoxication. That the depredations of locusts injured the quality of wines for many years, see Harmer i. 388.

6. Ar. and two MSS. omit the ו in וְהִלֵּלוּ.

6. — a nation.—Locusts, poetically so called. See Prov. xxx. 25, 26. See many instances of the same language in the best poets, quoted by Bochart, where we find from Orpheus

“ Ακριδος απλετον εθνος.”

And from Virgil, in his Georgic on bees:

“ Totiusque ordine gentis
Mores, et studia, et populos, et prælia dicam.”

Georg. iv. 4, 5.

— hath gone up.—A future event, which might be averted by repentance, ch. ii. 12, &c., is spoken of as having already taken place, to enliven

Who are strong and without number :

Their teeth are as the teeth of a ‡ lion,

7 And they have the jaw-teeth of a lioness.

§ They have destroyed my vine, and have made my figtree a broken branch.

They have made it || quite bare, and cast it away: the branches thereof are made white.

8 Lament, as a bride, girded with sackcloth,
For the husband of her youth.

9 The offering of flour is cut off, and the drink-offering, from the house of Jehovah.

‡ Heb. devouring lion. § Heb. They have set my vine for a desolation, and my figtree for a broken branch. || Heb. In making bare have they made it bare.

the description by setting the images before the eye of the reader. See Præl. Heb. xv. 184.

7. — have destroyed.—Here, and v. 10, 15, instances of the paronomasia occur.

— a broken branch.—Vulg. has decorticavit. But ó. have εἰς συγκλασμον; Syr. ad divulsionem; Ar. ad discriptionem; and the Arabic root signifies to break, whence קצפה, a broken branch of a tree. Boeh. and Cast. lex. “And thy figtree a foam, or swelling; meaning either the viscous matter that appears on the leaves of trees, where caterpillars or other insects have laid their eggs, or the swelling of the leaves which they sometimes occasion.” Dr. Forsayeth.

— cast it away.—Se. the smaller branches, which they gnaw off.

— are made white.—ó. and Syr. read הלבין, dealbavit. But the present reading may be justified by Ps. li. 7. Isa. i. 18.

8. Lament.—אלי must have, O earth, or, O daughter of Sion, or, O congregation of Israel, as Chald. understood before it, and its root must be אליה, in the Chald. and Syr. signification of ejularit. One MS. reads אבלי. Perhaps we should read אלי, Lament ye; the א and י being often confounded. ó. repeat אלי.

— as a bride.—The commentators say, that the original word is ætatis non integritatis nomen. See Gen. xxiv. 16. Judg. xxi. 12. Its root may be from the Arab. separavit, segregavit; because marriageable women were secluded in the east. Or, the word may be used largely; as virgo in Virg. Ecl. vi. 47, 52. Georg. iii. 263.

ó. Ar. read מבחילה, or, על בחילה, “more than a bride.”

9. — is cut off.—In the masculine. So v. 13.

Mourn, O ye priests, ye ministers of Jehovah.

- 10 The field is laid waste, the ground mourneth :
For the corn is laid waste, the choice wine is * dried up,
the oil languisheth.

- 11 Be ashamed, O ye husbandmen ; howl, O ye vinedressers ;

For the wheat and for the barley ;
Because the harvest of the field is perished :

- 12 The vine is withered, and the figtree languisheth ;
The pomegranate, the palmtree also, and the quince :
All the trees of the field are withered.
Surely joy is withered from among the sons of men.

- 13 Gird yourselves with sackcloth, and mourn, O ye priests :
Howl, O ye ministers of the altar :
Come, lie all night in sackcloth, O ye ministers of my God.

For the offering of flour, and the drink-offering, is with-holden from the house of your God.

- 14 Appoint † ye a fast, proclaim a ‡ solemn day :
Gather the elders, and all the inhabitants of the land,
To the house of Jehovah your God ;
And cry unto Jehovah.

- 15 Alas [alas], for the day !

* Or, withered. † Heb. sanctify. ‡ Heb. a day of restraint.

— Mourn.—ó. Ar. render imperatively, agreeably to the form of the verbs, v. 5, 8, 13.

10. The field.—ó. supply כִּי. For the field, &c.

— is dried up.—See v. 12 and Zech. x. 11, for the force of the verb in this form.

12. The vine.—We have here a reason why the vinedressers should mourn ; as in v. 11, why the husbandman should be confounded. Bochart, ubi supra, observes, that it is a transposition ; like what occurs Cantic. i. 5, where the sense is, “ I am black as the tents of Kedar ; but comely as the curtains of Solomon.”

13. Gird yourselves.—Syr. and one MS. add with sackcloth.

— of my God.—ó. Ar. read אלהים, of God ; and perhaps “ אלהי, was written contractedly. Four MSS. read יהוה.

15. Alas.—Syr. repeats the interjection twice, and V. ó. Arab. thrice. The measure is incomplete without a repetition.

- Because the day of Jehovah is near,
 And as destruction from the Almighty shall it come.
 16 Is not our food cut off before our eyes?
     Yea, joy and gladness, from the house of our God?
 17 The seeds have perished under their clods:
     The store-houses are laid desolate, the garners are destroyed:
     For the corn is withered.
 18 How do the cattle groan,
     How are the herds of oxen perplexed,
     Because they have no pasture!
     The flocks of sheep also are destroyed.
 19 Unto thee, O Jehovah, do I call:

— the day of Jehovah.—Of divine vengeance.

— as destruction.—The same words occur Isa. xiii. 6. “Not like an ordinary calamity, but like destruction inflicted by the Almighty.” “Perhaps, ‘as a destruction from him who is able to destroy.’ This would, in some measure, preserve the paronomasia; but would be too great a liberty.” Secker.

Syr. adds and say to the end of v. 14. But I rather attribute v. 15 to the prophet Joel.

16. — Yea.—Και ἐξ οἴκου, ὁ. MS. Pachom.

17. — have perished.—The word seems best derived from the Arab. siccum evasit. Gol. lex. 1513. Pocock. A drought is foretold, as well as a plague of locusts, see v. 19, 20; and Chandler in loc. observes from Bochart, and this writer from Pliny, that a great increase of locusts is occasioned by heat. See Bochart, Pocock, and Pol. Syn. on the three ἀπαξ λεγόμενα which occur in this line. I shall only observe further, that a kindred word to what we translate seeds has the same signification in Chald. and Syr., see Cast. lex; and that the word translated clods may as easily signify massa terræ convoluta as אֶמְרִיק signifies manus convoluta.

— The store-houses.—Perhaps subterraneous repositories, Jer. xli. 8. Bochart, p. II. L. IV. ch. xxi. p. 595. See on Amos ix. 6. Neither these nor other receptacles for the fruits of the earth were repaired, because there was nothing to treasure up in them.

18. — destroyed.—The Hebrew word imports destruction, or punishment, in consequence of guilt.

19. — do I call.—The prophet carries on the beautiful hypotyposis, by representing himself as a sharer in the calamity.

- For a fire hath devoured the pastures of the desert,
 And a flame hath burnt all the trees of the field.
 20 Moreover the cattle of the field cry unto thee :
 For the streams of waters are dried up ;
 And a fire hath devoured the pastures of the desert.

---

CHAPTER II.

- 1 Blow ye the trumpet in Sion :
 And sound an alarm in mine * holy mountain :
 Let all the inhabitants of the land tremble :
 For the day of Jehovah cometh, for it is near :
 2 A day of darkness and of gloominess ;

* Heb. the mountain of mine holiness.

---

— pastures.—There were spots in the desert, where flocks and herds might feed, Ps. lxxv. 12. ch. ii. 22.

20. — desert.—Eight MSS. and two ed. read נִדְבָר, as v. 19.

CHAP. II. 1. Blow ye the trumpet.—Danger is thus proclaimed, Amos iii. 6. Hos. v. 8. Ezek. xxxiii. 3, 5.

— And sound an alarm.—And is omitted in Vulg. δ. Arab. Chald. and five MSS. There is more energy in the passage without it.

Natural means were used to prevent the devastations of locusts ; pits and trenches were dug, bags were provided, and combustible matter was prepared and set on fire. Shaw's Travels, 4to. 187. Sir Hans Sloane's Nat. Hist. of Jamaica, Intro. lxxxi.

2. — of darkness.—Solem obumbrant, says Pliny of locusts. Nat. Hist. xi. 29. Laborabat eo tempore pabuli omnis generis et annonæ inopia Syria, ob locustarum nusquam hominum memoria tantam visam multitudinem ; quæ, densæ nubis instar, die in media luce obscurata, volitantes, agrum circumquaque depastæ sunt. Thuanus, L. lxxxiv. vii. p. 364. tom. v. ed. Buckley. Suddenly there came over our heads a thick cloud, which darkened the air and deprived us of the rays of the sun. We soon found that it was owing to a cloud of locusts. Adanson's Voyage to Senegal, p. 127. Dublin, 12mo. 1759. See more in Bochart on the tenth verse of

A day of clouds and of thick darkness.
 As the dusk spread upon the mountains,
Cometh a numerous people and a strong.
 Like them there hath not been of old time ;
 And after them there shall not be,
Even to the years of † many generations.

- 3 Before them a fire devoureth,
 And behind them a flame burneth :
 The land is as the garden of Eden before them,
 And behind them a ‡ desolate wilderness :
 Yea, and nothing § shall escape them.

† Heb. of generation and generation.      ‡ Heb. a wilderness of desolation.

§ Heb. escape shall not be unto them.

this chapter, and in Chandler, ib.; where Hermanus is quoted as saying, that locusts obscure the sun for the space of a mile; and Aloysius, for the space of twelve miles.

— As the dusk.—See Bishop Lowth on Isa. viii. 20. And Pocock in loc. shows that Abu Walid, Abarbinel, and Montanus, gave the sense of darkness to the original word, one certain sense of which is nigrum esse. The punctuation of this clause is that of V. ó. Ar. Chald. Or point thus,

“ A day of clouds and of thick darkness;
 As the dusk spread upon the mountains.
 A numerous people and a strong cometh ;
 Like them,” &c.

Spread upon the mountains like the morning. ó. Ch. But perhaps only for morning put darkness, or twilight. Secker.

— of old time.—It is said, Ex. x. 14, “Before them there were no such locusts, neither after them shall be such.” But commentators restrain this assertion to the land of Egypt.

3. — a fire.—They consume like a general conflagration. “They destroy the ground not only for the time, but burn trees for two years after.” Sir Hans Sloane’s Nat. Hist. of Jamaica, i. 29.

Wheresoever they feed, their leavings seem as it were parched with fire. Ludolphus, Hist. of Ethiopia, L. I. c. xiii. Multa contactu adurentes. Pliny. xi. 29.

— nothing shall escape.—Sc. which the ground produces. Sunt quæ pestem et calamitatem satorum omnium totis regionibus afferant, illataque fame antiquos agros deserere sæpenumero gentes coegerint. Marcellus Virgilius in Bochart, P. II. L. IV. 1. After devouring the herbage, with the

- 4 Their appearance shall be like the appearance of horses,
And like horsemen || shall they run :
5 Like the sound of chariots, on the tops of the mountains shall they leap :

|| Heb. so shall.

fruits and leaves of trees, they attacked even the buds and the very bark. They did not so much as spare the reeds, with which the huts were thatched. Adanson, ubi supra. Sometimes they enter the very bark of trees ; and then the spring itself cannot repair the damage. Ludolphus, ubi supra. Omnia morsu erodentes, et fores quoque tectorum. Plin. xi. 20.

“ Καθαπερ δε ὑπο των ακριδων κατοπιν ὕλην εστιν ιδειν εφλωμενην ἀπασαν.”
Jos. B.

J. l. 4. c. 9. Sec. 7. p. 1199. Of the devastations of locusts in Transylvania, 1747, 1748, and of their darkening the sky, see Ph. T. N. 491. p. 30. &c.” Secker.

“The locusts in Languedoc were about an inch in length, of a grey colour. The earth in some places was covered four inches thick with them, in the morning, before the heat of the sun was considerable ; but as soon as it began to grow hot, they took wing and fell upon the corn, eating up both leaf and ear, and that with such expedition, by reason of their number, that in three hours they would devour a whole field ; after which they again took wing, and their swarms were so thick that they covered the sun like a cloud, and were whole hours in passing. After having eaten up the corn, they fell upon the vines, the pulse, the willows, and even the hemp, notwithstanding its great bitterness. After this, these insects died, and stunk very much.” Phil. Trans. N. 112, A. D. 1686. Dr. Molyneux has given a curious account of the devastations occasioned in Connaught by the Dor, or Hedge-chaffer, A. D. 1697. “The grinding of the leaves in the mouths of this vast multitude all together made a sound very much resembling the sawing of timber.” “The Septuagint and Vulgate give this beetle the name of βρουχος, or bruchus, from βρυχω, strideo, intimating the remarkable noise it makes both in its eating and flying, whence the French name Hanneton, from Aliton, quasi alis tonans.” Phil. Trans. 234.

4. — of horses.—Many writers mention the resemblance which the head of the locust bears to that of a horse ; whence the Italians call them cavalette. Caput oblongum, equi instar, prona spectans. Ray on Insects. Sec Rev. ix. 7. and Bochart in loc.

5. Like the sound of chariots.—See Rev. ix. 9. Nahum iii, 2. Et grandiores cernuntur, et tanto volant pennarum stridore, ut aliæ alites credantur. Plin. xi. 29. And Remigius, quoted by Bochart in loc. says,

Like the sound of a flame of fire which devoureth stubble.
They shall be like a strong people set in battle * array.

6 Before them shall the † people be much pained;

All faces shall gather blackness.

7 They shall run like mighty men;

Like warriors shall they climb the wall:

And they shall march every one in his ‡ way?

* Heb. arrayed for war.

† Heb. peoples.

‡ Heb. ways.

Magnum sonitum faciunt, quando mittantur; in tantum, ut a sexto milliari possit audiri sonitus eorum. Quand ces insectes volent en société, ils font un grand bruit. Elles s'élèvent avec un bruit semblable à celui d'une tempête. Elles engloutissent, devorent, écorchent, rongent, et pelent toute la verdure des champs avec un si grand tintamare, qu'elles se font entendre de loin. Encycl. voc. Sauterelle. But the sound of their hinder legs in leaping, feminum attritus, taken notice of by Aristotle and Pliny, is here meant. See Boch. ib.

— leap.—La plupart des sauterelles sautent plus qu'elles ne volent; et leur saut est tel, qu'ils s'élancent en décrivant, dit-on, un espace qui à deux cent fois la longueur de leur corps. Encycl. ib. And hence some of its Greek names: αττακης, from αττειν, to leap; and αττελαβος, quasi αττελαφος, cervus saliens. Boch. ib. 448.

— the sound of a flame of fire.—Cyril says of them that, while they are breaking their food with their teeth, the noise is like that of flame driven about by the wind. Boch. in loc.

6. — All faces.—See Nahum ii. 10.

Shall tremble before them, or be much afraid of them, as Jer. v. 22. Secker.

7. — like mighty men.—The particles of similitudes here, and v. 4. 5, show that real locusts are described, and not the Assyrian Army. Quis Assyrios dixerit ut equites fuisse, cum revera equites fuerint, iique magno numero? Boch. in v. 4. Notandum hunc qualemunque exercitum non jam dici populum, sed ut populum. Id. in v. 5.

— in his way.—Many writers mention the order of locusts in their flight and march, and their manner of proceeding directly forward, whatever obstacles were interposed. Jerom, who had seen them in Palestine, says, Tanto ordine volitant, ut instar tessellarum, quæ in pavimentis artificis finguntur manu, suum locum teneant; et ne puncto quidem, ut ita dicam, ungueve transverso declinent ad alteram. See more authorities in Bochart.

- Neither shall they turn aside from their paths :
 Neither shall one thrust another :
 They shall march each in his road :
 8 And if they fall upon the sword, they shall not be wounded.
 9 They shall run to and fro in the city, they shall run upon the wall, they shall climb up into the houses :
 They shall enter in at the windows, like a thief.
 10 Before them the earth quaketh, the heavens tremble :
 The sun and the moon are darkened ;
 And the stars withdraw their shining.
 11 And Jehovah shall utter his voice before his army :

— Neither shall they.—Seven MSS. read ולא. They shall not turn aside, &c.. But the versions and Chald. have ולא.

— turn aside.—So V. ó. Ar. Syr. and Bishop Lowth's pref. to Isa. p. xiii. ; which is giving עבט the sense of עיר, to pervert, with which it agrees in sound. See Pocock. We must observe also that עבר signifies to turn away.

Μη εκκλινουσι τας τριβους αυτων, ó. Literally, Shall not turn aside from their way. Secker.

8. — upon the sword.—בער. F. בעל. Sed qu. Secker.

— they shall not be wounded.—Many MSS., three editions, the versions and Chald. read ולא.

“And they shall fall on the sword, and shall not be wounded.” בצע signifies to cut, in Chald. and Syr. Houbigant says, Omnino פצע, vulnerabuntur.

This refers to the scales with which locusts are covered, as with a coat of mail.

“Cognatus dorso durescit amictus :
 Armavit natura cutem.”

Claudian de locusta. Epigr. 3. See Bochart.

9. — into the houses.—See Ex. x. 6.

— like a thief.—John x. 1.

10. Before them.—The first hemistich expresses great consternation and calamity. The two other hemistichs may well have a literal sense, see on v. 2 ; or they may denote, in the strong eastern manner, devastation spread through a whole country.

11. — shall utter his voice.—God is sublimely introduced as animating his army by his voice.

For his camp is very great :
 For he is strong that executeth his word :
 For the day of Jehovah is great,
 And very terrible. And who shall be able to bear it ?

- 12 Yet even now, saith Jehovah,
 Turn ye unto me with all your heart ;
 With fasting, and with weeping, and with mourning :
 13 And rend your hearts, and not your garments ;
 And turn unto Jehovah your God :
 For he is gracious and merciful,
 Slow to anger, and of great kindness,
 And repenteth him of evil.
 14 Who knoweth if he will turn and repent,
 And leave § a bountiful gift behind him ;
 An offering of flour and a drink-offering unto Jehovah your God ?

§ Heb. a blessing.

12. — With fasting.—V. δ. MS. Ar. and ed. Pachom. Ar. Syr. Seven MSS. and one edition read בצום.

δ. leg. יהוה אלהים. Bahrdt. So also Arab.

13. — garments.—It was customary among the easterns, and other nations, to rend their garments in token of sorrow or fear, Jer. xxxvi. 24 So Virgil:

“ It scissa veste Latinus.”

“ Rend your heart, rather than your garments.”

Or,

“ And not your garments only.”

See Chandler.

A strong and beautiful manner of exhorting to contrition and repentance.

—repenteth.—God is said to repent, when humiliation and amendment make it unfit that he should inflict the punishment threatened by him.

14. — if he will turn—See Jonah iii. 9, for the omission of אם.

—a bountiful gift.—A blessing, or ground of blessing. The word denotes a gift, 2 Kings v. 15; and abundance, Mal. iii. 10; which is one of its senses in Arabic. See Cast. lex. “ברכה est copia bonorum (ut εὐλογία in N. T.) hoc loco frugum.” Bahrdt.

—your God.—δ. MS. A. and Arab. read our God.

- 15 Blow ye the trumpet in Sion ;
 || Appoint ye a fast, proclaim a * solemn day ;
- 16 Gather the people, sanctify the congregation, assemble the elders ;
 Gather the children, and those that suck the breasts :
 Let the bridegroom go out of his chamber, and the bride out of her closet.
- 17 Let the priests, the ministers of Jehovah, weep
 Between the porch and the altar :
 And let them say, spare thy people, O Jehovah,
 And give not thine heritage to reproach ;
 That the nations should † rule over them.
 Wherefore should they say among the ‡ people, Where is their God ?
- 18 Then will Jehovah be jealous for his land,
 And will pity his people.
- 19 Yea, Jehovah will answer and say unto his people ;
 Behold, I will send unto you
 Corn, and choice wine, and oil ; and ye shall be satisfied therewith :

|| Heb. sanctify.

† Or, use a by-word against them.

* Heb. a day of restraint.

‡ Or, heathen.

15. Blow ye the trumpet.—Numb. x. 7.

16. — the children.—Let not the attendants on these plead their charge in excuse for absence.

— bridegroom.—On the day of marriage, or during the time of the marriage feast.

17. — and the altar.—See Gen. i. 6. Lev. xx. 25. Mal. iii. 18. Jonah iv. 11, and other instances of ל after ב in Nold. 5, Sec. 14.

The altar of burnt-offerings stood before the porch of the temple, 2 Chron. viii. 12 ; and the mid-space in the open court was naturally a place of great concourse, that the prayers of the people might accompany the sacrifice.

— rule over them.— This translation may be supported ; because, when they were distressed by the locusts, they would be an easier prey to an enemy. But to make a proverb of them is the more natural translation. על משל is used in that sense, Ezek. xvi. 44. Here the particle is ב, which is used in the phrase of cursing or blessing any one : and the phrase is here of the same nature. Secker. See Bishop Lowth's Isaiah, p. xxxviii.

And I will no longer make you a reproach among the nations.

- 20 But I will remove far from you the northern army ;
 And I will drive him into a dry and desolate land :
 His van towards the eastern sea,
 And his rear towards the western sea ;
 And his smell shall come up, and his ill savour shall come up,
 Though he have § done great things.

§ Heb. magnified to do.

20. — northern army.—Or enemy, nation, people ; that is, the locusts, which might enter Judea by the north, as Circassia and Mingrelia abound with them. See Thevenot quoted in the City Remembrancer, i. 22. Or, the locusts may be thus called, because they spread terror like the Assyrian armies, which entered Judea by the north. See on Zeph. ii. 13.

Some of these locusts were to be driven by the wind into the desert; some into the Dead Sea, which lay eastward of Jerusalem; and some into the Mediterranean or western sea. קרם is the east, or fore part of the sky where the sun rises; and that by the hinder sea is meant the Mediterranean, see Deut. xi. 24; and Chald. has the evening [or western] sea. Gregatim, sublato vento, in maria aut stagna decidunt. Plin. See Ex. x. 19.

— his smell.—That a strong and pestilential smell arises from putrified heaps of locusts, whether driven upon land, or cast up from the sea in which they have perished, appears from the testimony of many writers. Among various other authorities to the same effect, Jerom is quoted by Bochart as saying, that in his time those troops of locusts which covered Judea were cast by the wind in mare primum et novissimum; and that, when the waters threw them up, their smell caused a pestilence. Thevenot says of them, They live not above six months; and, when dead, the stench of them so corrupts and infects the air, that it often occasions dreadful pestilences. City Remembr. i. 123. There came such a stench from those which appeared at Novogorod in 1646, as not only offended the nose, but the brain; it was not to be endured; men were forced to wash their noses with vinegar, and hold handkerchiefs dipped in it continually to their nostrils, ib. 125. In Ethiopia, when they die and rot, they raise a pestilence. Mead. i. 36. Edinburgh, 12mo. 1763.

— ill savour.—So the radicals of the Hebrew word signify in Chald., and all the versions have an equivalent word, if, with Drusius, we read βρωμος for βρομος in ε΄.

- 21 Fear not, O land, exult and rejoice ;
For Jehovah hath || done great things.
- 22 Fear not, O ye cattle of the field ;
For the pastures of the desert spring up,
For the tree beareth its fruit,
The figtree and the vine yield their strength.
- 23 And, O ye sons of Sion, exult
And rejoice in Jehovah your God :
For he giveth you the former rain in just proportion,
And causeth showers to come down upon you,
Even the former rain and the latter rain as aforetime.
- 24 And the threshing-floor shall be full of corn,
And the vats shall overflow with choice wine and with oil.
- 25 And I will restore unto you the years
Which the locust hath eaten,
The devouring-locust, the consuming-locust, and the grasshopper ;

|| Heb. magnified to do.

— done great things.—Committed great devastation. But two MSS. read יגדיל יהוה.

“For Jehovah hath done great things.” See Ps. cxxvi. 2, 3. The Rev. Mr. Wintle, Rector of Brightwell, in Berkshire, very obligingly communicated to me this remark, together with some others on the prophet Habakkuk.

בי הגדיל לעשות. Sic ó. Sed forte ortum habent hæ voces ex v. seq. Secker.

See a like repetition, v. 26, 27. and i. 19, 20.

21. — Jehovah hath done.—In removing such an army of locust.

23. — giveth.—נתן may be a participle, as קרא, v. 32.

— the former rain.—It fell after autumn ; and seems to be so called from ירה, jecit ; because its season was post jactam sementem. “את המורה, βρωμαρα, ó. Sic bis reddiderunt בריה ; et sequitur hic מורה” Secker. But fourteen MSS. read יירה.

לצדקה. Perhaps, bountifully. See Nold in ל. Secker.

לצדקה cum sit liberalitas, לצדקה, verito large. Bahrdr.

— the latter rain.—This fell about harvest, towards the end of April. Hence its name, from לקש, collegit.

— as aforetime.—Read כראשון, with V. ó. Ar. Syr. and one MS. Chald. has, in the month Nisan. See Harmer. i. 34—40.

- My great army which I sent among you.
 26 And ye shall eat * in plenty and be satisfied,
 And shall praise the name of Jehovah your God,
 Who hath dealt † wondrously with you :
 And my people shall never be ashamed.
 27 And ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel :
 And that I am Jehovah your God, and none else :
 And my people shall never be ashamed.
 28 And it shall come to pass afterward
That I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh :
 And your sons and your daughters shall prophesy ;
 Your old men shall dream dreams ;
 Your young men shall see visions :
 29 And also upon the men-servants, and upon the handmaids,
 In those days will I pour out my Spirit.

* Heb. eating and being satisfied.

† Heb. done with you so as to act wondrously.

25. — My great army.—We have here a key to the grand and beautiful description which runs through these two chapters. And if we consider the note on v. 7, and the propriety of the adjuncts, as applicable to locusts, and often to locusts only, there can remain no doubt but that the prophet is to be understood in a literal sense as foretelling a plague of locusts. Every reader of taste must be struck with the poetical and sublime manner in which the allegory is conducted. There is not a more splendid piece of poetry extant.

26. — never be ashamed.—Provided they continue to serve me.

28. — afterward.—But God has infinitely greater blessings in store for his people. The words אַחֲרַי כֵּן are very indefinite, and therefore admit of the rendering, or paraphrase, Acts ii. 17, in the last days, where codex regius Parisinus, Cyril of Jerusalem, and the Apostolical constitutions, add μετα ταυτα.

—upon all flesh.—Though the Jews only are enumerated, there is a latent reference to the effusion of the Spirit on the Gentiles also, in the times of the gospel-dispensation.

The two last hemistichs in this verse are transposed, Acts ii. 17.

It is more poetical to omit the copulatives, with the Hebrew, in the two last hemistichs ; though in 6. Ar. Syr. Acts ii. 17. they are twice prefixed, and V. Chald. prefix them to the last hemistich.

- 30 And I will shew wonders in the heavens and in the earth;
 Blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke.
- 31 The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood,
 Before the great and terrible day of Jehovah come.
- 32 But it shall come to pass that whosoever shall call on the name of Jehovah shall be delivered:
 For in mount Sion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance,
 As Jehovah hath said;
 Even among the remnant whom Jehovah shall call.

CHAPTER III.

- 1 * FOR behold in those days, and at that time,

* Or, surely.

29. — servants—handmaids.—ó. MS. A. and Ar. have my servants, my handmaids, as in Acts; and V. has servos meos. Syr. and Chald. agree with the Hebrew. Possibly, "העבד" was written contractedly for the plural העבדים; and thus led to the rendering of my servants. For the fact, see 1 Cor. xii. 13.

— my Spirit.—In the Acts, the words, and they shall prophesy are added. But Beza's MS. and Jerom omit them.

30. — in the heavens and in the earth. Some authority may be seen in Wetstein and Kuster for omitting αὐτῶ and κατῶ in the Acts.

— Blood.—Very great slaughter, and the burning of many towns, and even of a part of Jerusalem itself, preceded the destruction of the city and the temple, and the total subversion of the Jewish polity, by the Romans.

31. The sun.—These expressions must be understood of "the fearful sights and the great signs from heaven," Luke xxi. 11, which alarmed the minds of the Jews before the taking of Jerusalem by Titus.

32. — shall be delivered.—This refers to the safety of the Christians during the Jewish and Roman war. "For among the inhabitants of Mount Sion and of Jerusalem, that is, by a synecdoche of the part for the whole, among the Jewish people, shall be deliverance; as Jehovah hath spoken by me and by other prophets."

CHAP. III. 1. For.—As an earnest of this, my people shall be restored to their land, and their enemies shall be humbled.

- When I shall bring again the captivity of Judah and of Jerusalem,
- 2 That I will assemble all the nations,
And will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat;
And there will I execute judgment upon them for my people;
And for mine heritage Israel, whom they scattered among the nations,
And then divided my land:
- 3 Yea, they cast lots for my people;
And † gave a boy for a harlot,
And sold a damsel for wine to drink.
- 4 And what have ye also to do with me, O Tyre and Sidon,
And all the borders of Palestine?
Do ye requite me with retaliation?
Now, if ye retaliate upon me,
Soon and swiftly will I bring again your retaliation on your own head.

† Or, bartered.

2. — all the nations.—This must be restrained to the neighbouring nations. See v. 12.

— the valley of Jehoshaphat.—A valley in which a battle was to be won, most probably by Nebuchadnezzar, which would utterly discomfit the ancient enemies of the Jews, and resemble the victory which Jehoshaphat obtained over the Ammonites, Moabites, and Edomites, 2 Chron. xx. 22—26.

— execute judgment.—See 2 Chron. xxii. 8. Ps. ix. 19. I will discomfit them before their enemies. There is an allusion to the word Jehoshaphat, which signifies Jehovah judgeth.

3. — for wine.—“In Mingrelia they sell captive children for provisions and for wine. Sir John Chardin, in Harmer ii. 374.

4. — O Tyre and Sidon.—When the Babylonians, the appointed instruments of my vengeance, afflict my land, why do you also, and the bordering nations, assist them? Do you take this occasion of avenging the former victories of my people over you? If so, this your act of revenge shall be speedily punished.

— Soon and swiftly.—See Isa. v. 26. Pocock understands both the words adverbially.

- 5 Because ye have taken my silver and my gold,
And have brought into your palaces my desirable and goodly things;
- 6 The sons also of Judah, and the sons of Jerusalem,
Ye have sold to the sons of the Grecians,
That ye might remove them far from their border;
- 7 Behold, I will raise them out of the place
Whither ye have sold them;
And I will bring again your retaliation on your own head;
- 8 And I will sell your sons and your daughters
Into the hands of the sons of Judah;
And they shall sell them to the Sabeans, to a nation afar
off:
For Jehovah hath spoken it.
- 9 Proclaim ye this among the nations:
‡ Declare ye war, raise up the mighty ones;
Let all the warlike men draw near, let them come up:
- 10 Beat your ploughshares into swords, and your pruning-hooks into spears:
Let the weak say, I am strong.

‡ Heb. sanctify.

6. — Grecians.—Descendants of Javan, Gen. x. 2, 5. They trafficked with Tyre and traded in slaves, Ezek. xxvii. 13. “Homerus passim, πλες Αχαιων.” Bahrtdt.

7. — I will raise them.—Grotius in loc. mentions that Alexander and his successors set at liberty many Jews who were slaves in Greece. Many also, on occasion of Cyrus’s decree, might return to their country from such parts of Asia Minor and the Ionian Islands as were subject to that monarch.

— on your own head.—Ezek. xxv. xxvi. will furnish a comment on this passage. Nebuchadnezzar conquered the several countries there enumerated. See Jer. xxv. 15—29. The sea-coasts of Palestine were also invaded by Alexander the Great.

8. — sons of Judah.—This might happen on occasion of Judas Maccabeus’s victories, 1 Macc. v. 3, 7, 15, 21.

— afar off.—See Jer. vi. 20. Matth. xii. 42. So Babylon is called a far country, Isa. xxxix. 3.

10. — the weak.—Let even the unwarlike arm themselves on this occasion.

- 11 Collect yourselves and come, All ye nations round about;
And assemble yourselves together; yet there doth Jehovah bring low thy mighty ones.
- 12 Let the nations rise and come up
To the valley of Jehoshaphat;
For there will I sit
To judge all the nations round about.
- 13 Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe:
Come get ye down, for the wine-press is full, the vats overflow:
For their wickedness is great.
- 14 Multitudes, multitudes, in the valley of excision:
For the day of Jehovah is near in the valley of excision.

11. — doth Jehovah bring low.—Literally “hath Jehovah brought low.” What he will do, is spoken of as done. הנחה, descendere fecit; in Chald. and Syr. dejecit, humiliavit.

— thy mighty ones.—Syr. renders, “your mighty ones,” and Chald. “their mighty ones.”

12. — To judge.—To punish by a signal overthrow.

13. Put ye in.—שליחו, immittite. So πεμψον το δρεπανον σου, Apoc. xiv.

15. Bahrtdt.

— get ye down.—Houbigant observes that ó. render πατετε, דרכו, “tread the grapes.” This beautiful reading is confirmed by Ar. Syr. Chald.

“Spumat plenis vindemia labris.

Huc, pater O Lenæe, veni nudataque musto

Tinge novo mecum direptis crura cothurnis.”

Virg. Georg. ii. 6.

πατετε, ó. Chald. דרכו, recte. Vide Thren. i. 15. Sed vid. Pocock. Secker.

— their wickedness is great.—This explains the figurative language which precedes. They are ripe for excision. Let the wine-press of my wrath be trodden. נר is the calcatorium; יקב, the lake, ὑπολημιον. See Bishop Lowth on Isa. v. 2.

14. Multitudes, multitudes.—That is, very great multitudes.

— of excision.—I attribute to חרץ the sense of to cut, to cut off. See Lev xxii. 22. Job xiv. 5. The word may mean decided vengeance; or, it may refer to the threshing instrument which forced out the grain and at the same time cut the straw.

- 15 The sun and the moon are darkened,
And the stars withdraw their shining.
- 16 Jehovah also will roar from Sion,
And from Jerusalem will he utter his voice;
And the heavens and the earth shall shake:
But Jehovah will be a refuge to his people,
And a strong hold to the sons of Israel.
- 17 And ye shall know that I am Jehovah your God,
Dwelling in Sion mine § holy mountain:
And Jerusalem shall be || holy,
And strangers shall no longer pass through her.
- 18 And it shall come to pass, in that day,
That the mountains shall drop down sweet wine,
And the hills shall flow with milk;
And all the torrents of Judah shall flow with water:
And a fountain shall come forth from the house of
Jehovah,
And shall water the valley of Shittim.
- 19 Egypt shall be a * desolation,

§ Heb. the mountain of mine holiness.

|| Heb. holiness.

* Heb. for a desolation.

15. The sun.—That is, great revolutions shall happen in the vanquished nations.

16. — will roar.—See on Amos i. 2.

— from Sion.—This may refer to the conquests under the Maccabees.

17. — no longer.—But my people shall return from Babylon. If we render, no more, we must suppose a reference to Jerusalem on its establishment.

18. — in that day.—After the return from Babylon.

— sweet wine.—Incultisque rubens pendebit sentibus uva. Virg. See Amos ix. 13.

— milk.—Flumina jam lactis, jam flumina nectaris ibant. Ovid.

— Shittim.—In the plains of Moab, near Jordan, Numb. xxxiii.

49. Josh. iii. 1. In this verse either the times of the Messiah are described; or we have a description of Jerusalem after its final restoration, when a golden age shall commence among its inhabitants, and when the knowledge of God and of his Christ shall a second time be widely diffused from it. See Ezek. xlvii. 8. Zech. xiv. 8.

19. Egypt.—There shall be a signal difference between Egypt and

And Edom shall be a † desolate wilderness :
 For their violence against the sons of Judah ;
 Because they shed innocent blood in their land :

- 20 But Judah shall dwell for ever,
 And Jerusalem shall remain ‡ from generation to generation :
 21 And I will avenge their blood which I have not avenged ;
 And Jehovah will dwell in Sion.

† Heb. for a wilderness of desolation.

‡ Heb. to generation and generation.

Idumea, whose people shall be lost in the mass of other nations, and whose sovereignty shall not be restored, and Judah and Jerusalem, whose inhabitants shall be reinstated after their captivity, and on their future return, shall dwell for ever in their land; Jehovah displaying his glory among them.

21. — avenge.—I will, as it were, declare it pure and innocent, by punishing their unjust and cruel adversaries. “ó. Syr. videntur legisse ונקמר.” Secker.

It is uncertain whether we have the key to this difficult chapter, which may not be fully understood till Jerusalem is rebuilt, and till the prophecies, Ezek. xxxix. 5, 11. Rev. xx. 8, 9, are accomplished.

For the valley of Jehoshaphat may be rightly explained, v. 2, and may be used in an inferior sense; as Tyre, Sidon, and Palestine are mentioned, v. 4, and the Grecians and Sabeans, v. 6, 8; and yet it may take its primary and proper sense, v. 12, and refer to a great † still future; and such an event as will give due emphasis to v. 13-1

THE BOOK
OF ZEPHANIAH.

---

CHAPTER I.

- 1 THE Word of Jehovah, which came unto Zephaniah
the son of Cushi, the son of Gedaliah, the son of Amariah, the son of Hizkiah, in the days of Josiah, the son of Amon, king of Judah.
- 2 I will * utterly take away all things
From off the face of the land, saith Jehovah.
- 3 I will take away man and † beast;
I will take away the birds of the heavens, and the fishes of the sea;

* Heb. in taking away I will take away.

† Heb. cattle.

---

CHAP. I. 1. — Josiah.—That is, from before Christ, 640 to 609.

2. — utterly.—Surely. Dr. Wheeler.

3. — beast.—Of the tame and domestic kind.

— birds—fishes.—I will bring judicial and extraordinary desolation upon the land, which shall extend itself even to the birds and fishes. See Hos. iv. 3. Jer. iv. 25.

“ Ipsis est aer avibus non æquus, et illæ Præcípites alta vitam sub nube relinquunt.”

Virg. Georg. iii. 546.

It is known that birds are affected by pestilential disorders arising from putrified carcases. They fall dead, when they alight on bales of cloth infected by the plague.

“ Jam maris immensi prolem, et genus omne natantum,
Littore in extremo, ceu naufraga corpora, fluctus Proluit.”

Virg. ib. 541.

And the stumbling-blocks of the wicked.

And I will cut off man from the face of the land, saith Jehovah.

4 And I will stretch out mine hand upon Judah,

And upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem :

And I will cut off from this place the residue of Baal,

The name of the sacrificers with the priests :

5 And those who bow themselves on the house tops to the host of heaven ;

And those who bow themselves, and who swear by Jehovah, and who swear by Malchom :

6 And those who have turned back from ‡ following Jehovah ;

And those who have not sought Jehovah, neither have inquired of him.

‡ Heb. after.

Commentators observe, that such collections of water as the Hebrews sometimes call seas, might be made destructive to fishes by blood and carcasses.

— the stumbling-blocks.—The idols. אֵת is sometimes the sign of the genitive case. But Houbigant reads וְהִכְשִׁילֵהוּ, and I will overthrow, and observes, that ó. read וְיִכְשִׁלוּ, et infirmabuntur, or, et cadent.

And the stumbling-blocks, even the wicked. Dr. Wheeler.

— of the wicked.—See Lowth ; i. e. idols, which make them stumble. Secker.

4. — The name.—The versions, Chald. eleven MSS. and three editions read שֵׁם יְהוָה, and the name.

— sacrificers.—See on Hos. x. 5.

5. And those who bow themselves.—The original word in the second hemistich of this v. is omitted in ó. MS. A. and Arab. and ó. MS. A. read וְהִנְשָׁבְעוּ, And who swear. “MS. Copt. reads only jurantes per Molochum regem.” Mr. Woide.

— on the house tops.—Where altars were raised for the worship of the heavenly host in their brightness. See 2 Kings xxiii. 5, 12. Jer. xix. 13. xxxii. 29.

— Malchom.—See on Hos. iv. 15, and on Amos v. 26. “Hos. iv. 5.” Lowth. “2 Kings xvii. 33.” Secker.

6. — inquired of him.—Many MSS. read וְלֹא שָׁאֵל. Have not con-

- 7 Be silent before the Lord Jehovah ;
 For the day of Jehovah is near :
 For Jehovah hath made ready a sacrifice, he hath § appointed his guests.
- 8 And it shall come to pass, in the day of the sacrifice of
 Jehovah,
 That I will || visit the * chief men, and the sons of the king,
 And all that are clothed with strange apparel.
- 9 And I will visit every one that leapeth on the threshold in that day ;
 Who fill the house of their master by violence and deceit.
- 10 And it shall come to pass in that day, saith Jehovah,
That there shall be the noise of a cry from the Fish-gate,
 And of an howling from the Second city ;
 And of a great breach from the hills.
- § Heb. sanctified.      || Heb. visit upon.      * Heb. princes.

sulted God by the high priest, or by prophets, to learn his will. Or, we may render,

“ Neither have inquired for, or after, him.”

Dr. Wheeler translates,

“ Nor searched after him.”

7. — guests.—The Babylonians. Here is a beautiful allusion to the custom of a feast on a sacrifice. See Bishop Lowth on Isa. xxxiv. 6.

8. — sacrifice of Jehovah.—One MS. reads “ in this day, saith Jehovah ;” inserting for ובה, the words יהוה נאם ; and two other MSS. have יהוה.

— strange apparel.—Used for idolatrous purposes. See Deut. xxii. 11. “ Strange, foreign, i. e. idolatrous.” See Lowth. Secker.

9. — leapeth. Invadeth the house of his neighbour, joyfully bounding on the threshold. Cappellus. This sense is favoured by what follows.

— on the threshold.—Or, over. See Lowth. Master's, Lord's. ó. Vulg. understand it of God. Secker.

10. — Fish-gate.—Mentioned Neh. iii. 3. It was opposite to Joppa, according to Jerom.

— Second city.—A part of Jerusalem mentioned, 2 Kings xxii. 14. 2 Chron. xxxiv. 22.

— breach.—Συντρυμιος, ó. A great breaking in of the Chaldean army from the hilly part of Jerusalem.

- 11 Howl, Ye inhabitants of the lower city :
For all the trafficking people are cut off,
All the bearers of silver are destroyed.
- 12 And it shall come to pass, at that time,
That I will search Jerusalem with lights,
And I will † visit the men that are settled on their lees ;
That say in their hearts, Jehovah doeth no good, neither doth he evil.
- 13 And their substance shall become ‡ a spoil, and their houses § a desolation :
And they shall build houses, but shall not dwell in them ;
And they shall plant vineyards, but shall not drink the wine thereof.
- 14 The great day of Jehovah is near ;
It is near, and hasteth much,

† Heb. visit upon.

‡ Heb. for a spoil.

§ Heb. for a desolation.

11. — lower city.—A valley in Jerusalem, which divided the upper from the lower city. Cast. lex. This is agreeable to the etymology of the word, which signifies a hollow place, a mortar. Εν τῷ βαθεῖ. Theod. In torrente Cedron. Chald.

— the bearers of silver.—Two MSS. read נטלי, and Syr. has נטלי, portantes. נטלי may be the participle in Niphal from נטל, and may be rendered laden. The rich merchants in general, or the money-changers in particular, may be meant. “All the weighers of silver. נטל, Syr. pondus quoddam. נטל, grave fuit.” Dr. Forsayeth.

12. — that time.—“After הריא, MS. Copt. adds, dicet Dominus.” Mr. Woide. See Syr. and v. 10.

— with lights.—Thoroughly and diligently. See Luke xv. 8.

— settled on their lees.—The thoughtless tranquillity of the rich is compared to the fixed unbroken surface of fermented liquors. See Jer. xlviii. 11. Amos vi. 1.

13. — build houses.—Amos is more expressive.

“ Though ye have built houses of hewn stone,
Yet ye shall not dwell in them :
Though ye have planted pleasant vineyards,
Yet ye shall not drink the wine of them.”

Ch. v. 11.

- The report of the day of Jehovah is bitter :
 Then shall the mighty man cry out.
- 15 That day is a day of wrath ;
 A day of distress and of anguish ;
 A day of desolation and of destruction ;
 A day of darkness and of gloominess ;
 A day of clouds and of thick darkness :
- 16 A day of the trumpet, and of shouting,
 Against the fenced cities,
 And against the high towers,
- 17 And I will distress men, and they shall walk like the blind,
 Because they have sinned against Jehovah :
 And their blood shall be poured out as dust, and their flesh shall be as dung.

14. — The report.—See Gen. xlv. 16.

— is bitter.—Or, Lord is bitter ; the mighty man shall cry there, or then. See Lowth. Secker, — Then. See כֵּן, Nold. Sec. 6.

— cry out.—The word in Arab. signifies, valde exclamavit, ita auxilium imploravit. Cast. Lex. Schultens renders it, auxilium inelamabit. Animadv. Phil. p. 528.

15. — of desolation.—The form of the Hebrew words would be preserved by rendering :—

“ A day of wasteness and of devastation.”

16. — towers.—Properly such as were erected at the angles of walled cities.

The topic of approaching calamity from Jehovah is often insisted on in the prophets ; but no where, I think, with such a beautiful amplification as in the 14th, 15th, and 16th verses.

17. — men.—That ל is used for אָנָּה, see on Nah. i. 2.

— like the blind—See Deut. xxviii. 29. Isa. lix. 10, in each of which places the image is heightened by the circumstance of groping, or stumbling, like the blind, even at noon-day. The general sense is, they shall be in a state of anxiety and danger.

— dust.—This is said to be poured out Lev. xiv. 41.

— flesh.—So the original word signifies in Arabic, as Houbigant observes. See 6. and Mal. i. 7. After flesh, a verb, as רָשַׁךְ, shall be cast forth, must be supplied. See on Hos. ii. 18.

- 18 Moreover their silver || and their gold,
 Shall not be able to deliver them,
 In the day of the wrath of Jehovah :
 But by the fire of his jealousy shall the whole land be devoured.
 For a full end, and also a speedy one will he make
 With all the inhabitants of the land.

CHAPTER II.

- 1 GATHER yourselves together and assemble, O nation not desired :
 2 Before the decree be * executed, that your day pass away as chaff :

|| Heb. moreover.

* Heb. bring forth.

18. — and also a speedy one.—So V. ó. Ar. Aquila, Symmachus. Or, and also a terrible one. See Syr. For a like turn of expression, see Isa. x. 23. xxviii. 22.

CHAP. I. 1. — assemble.—Many MSS. and some editions read רָקַצְו. Vulg. has congregamini, and Symmachus συλλεγησθε. ó. translate συνδεσθητε, and Ar. Syr. to the same effect. Chald. may have read רָקַרְבו, and draw near. Houbigant proposes רִכְנְשׁו; but the Hebrew word כָּנַס is congregare, colligere, actively.

— not desired.—That is, hated.

2. — be executed.—The figure of a decree bringing forth is unusual, and seems harsh. Chald. may have read לְכַת, prodeat; but the common and regular word would be צִאָה, exeat. ó. read in the London Polyglot, בְּכִיָּו בְּטָרִם לֹא תִהְיֶה כְּצִיָּו עֵבֶר; from which Syr. only differs in reading בכיו.

“ Before ye become as the flower [Syr. as the chaff] which passeth away.”

But if we consult the Aldine edition, and that of Sixtus Quintus, we shall find another reading; προ του γενεσθαι υμας ως ανθος παραπορευομενον ημερα f. ημερα. And MS. Pachom. has ημερα.

- Before the † hot anger of Jehovah come upon you;
 Before the day of the anger of Jehovah come upon you.
- 3 Seek ye Jehovah, All ye lowly of the land,
 Who have executed his ‡ judgment, who have sought righteousness, who have sought lowliness:
 It may be, ye shall be § protected in the day of the anger of Jehovah.
- 4 Surely Gaza shall be forsaken, and Ashkelon || a desolation:
As for Ashdod, she shall be driven out at noon-day: and Ekron shall be rooted up.
- 5 Woe unto the inhabitants of the sea coast, the nation of the Cherethites:
 The word of Jehovah is against you.
 O Canaan, land of the Philistines,
 I will destroy thee, that there shall be no inhabitant.

† Heb. the heat of the anger.

§ Heb. hidden.

‡ Or, ordinance.

|| Heb. for a desolation.

3. — Who have executed.—This transition from the second person to the third is not uncommon. See Amos v. 12. But Houbigant omits אשר, with ó. and renders the three verbs imperatively. “Execute his judgment, seek righteousness, seek lowliness.”

— judgment.—Bishop Lowth’s note on Isa. xlii. 1, shows in what latitude this word is used.

— protected.—See Deut. xxxii. 38. Ps. xxxii. 7. cxix. 114.

4. Surely Gaza.—The prophet digresses to foretell the fate of some cities and nations bordering on Judea and hostile to her; and he then enlarges on the destruction of Nineveh, a city which had carried the ten tribes into captivity, and had often struck Jerusalem with terror, v. 4—15. See on Amos ii. 6. For the paronomasia, which occurs twice in this verse, see on Micah i. 10: and Michaelis on Præl. Heb. xv. p. 81. 8vo. And for the history, see on Amos i. 7, 8.

— at noon-day.—Commentators refer to Jer. vi. 4. xv. 8. Force in the open day may be meant; or that greater degree of distress and disgrace which would attend a public expulsion in the heat of the day.

5. — Cherethites.—See on Amos ix. 7.

— I will destroy thee.—The rau may be merely conversive, as Obad.

- 6 And Cherith, on the sea coast, shall be
The habitations of shepherds, and folds for flocks :
7 The coast shall also be for the residue of the house of Judah :
Thereupon shall they feed ; in the houses of Ashkelon shall they lie down in the evening :
For Jehovah their God will look * upon them, and will turn again their captivity.
8 I have heard the reproach of Moab,
And the revilings of the sons of Ammon,
Wherewith they have reproached my people,
And magnified themselves against their border.

* Heb. visit them.

v. 8. But ó. Ar. Syr. read והאבירתיכם ; which leads to this most eligible rendering.

“The word of Jehovah is against you, O Canaan, land of the Philistines ;
And I will destroy you.” &c.

6. And Cherith.—ó. have Κρητη, and Syr. קרטה, Creta, as v. 5 ; and for the people of Crete. Thus Cherith may signify the tract where the Chere-thites dwelt, and the construction will be good, if we place כרת before נחל, with ó. “Alibi non extat כרת, et forte notat patriam נחל כרתים.” Secker.

Many MSS. and three editions read כרות, fossiones, caves ; a word which occurs only here. If we adopt this sense, we must read והיה, and render :

“And the sea coast shall be sheep cotes,
Caves for shepherds, and folds for flocks.”

Two MSS. read נחל ; and the Greek in the Complutensian polyglot, as Bochart observes, has ποιμνίων, not ποιμνιστων. “Perhaps, And the sea coast, even Cherith, shall be dwellings for.” Secker.

7. The coast.—ó. Ar. Syr. read חבל הים, the sea coast.

—Thereupon.—ó. MS. A. has ἐπ' αὐτου, עליו.

—shall they feed.—צאן, sheep may be understood from the foregoing verse. But see ch. iii. 13.

This happened in the time of the Maccabees, says Cappellus. See Macc. v. 21. 22.

8. —Moab—Ammon.—See on Amos i. 43. ii. 1, 3.

—magnified themselves.—Boasted, spoken proudly. See Ezek. xxxv. 13

- 9 Therefore as I live,
 Saith Jehovah God of hosts, the God of Israel,
 Surely Moab shall be as Sodom,
 And the sons of Ammon as Gomorrah :
 A deserted place for the thorn, and a place of digging
for salt,
 And a desolation for ever.
 The residue of my people shall spoil them,
 And the remainder of my nation shall possess them,
 10 This shall happen unto them for their pride,
 - Because they have reproached, and have magnified themselves
 Against the people of Jehovah God of hosts.
 11 Jehovah will be terrible against them :
 For he will † famish all the gods of the earth ;
 And all the islands of the nations
 Shall bow themselves unto him, every one from his place.
 12 Ye also, O ‡ Ethiopians,

† Heb. make lean.

‡ Heb. Chusites.

6. Arab. read גבלי, my border : which answers to the preceding clause. The Samaritan Yod and Mem bear some resemblance.

9. — A deserted place.—The root נשק probably signifies reliquit. See Cast. lex.

— the thorn.—The paliurus of the ancients, or the Christ's thorn. See Celsius.

— my nation.—Fourteen MSS. and one edition read בני.

10. — magnified themselves.—Many MSS. and seven editions read וגדלו, as v. 8.

11. — famish.—See Deut. xxxii. 38. The sacrifices to them will be withdrawn, and they will, as it were, perish with leanness. Spencer, p. 47.

— islands.—By the earth the Jews understood the great continent of all Asia and Africa, to which they had access by land ; and by the isles of the sea they understood the places to which they sailed by sea, particularly all Europe. Sir I. Newton on Daniel, p. 276.

The prophet foretels the gradual fall of idolatry ; and its deep, and, at length, deadly wound by the spreading of the gospel.

12. — Ethiopians.—See on Amos ix. 7. Nebuchadnezzar subdued them. See Jer. xlv. 2, 9. Ezek. xxx. 4, 10.

Shall yourselves be slain by the sword.

13 And he will stretch out his hand against the north,
And will destroy Assyria;
And will make Nineveh § a desolation, even a dry place
as the desert.

14 And flocks shall lie down in the midst of her;
Yea, all the beasts of the earth.
Both the pelican and the porcupine shall lodge in the carved lintels thereof.

A cry shall resound in the window: the raven shall be in the porch:

§ Heb. for a desolation.

— yourselves.—Here we have חמָה for אָחָם, if the reading be genuine. Houbigant thinks that we should read חָרַח, shall be. One MS. omits the word with the versions and Chald.

13. — north.—The Assyrians; so called because they used to invade Palestine through Syria from the north. For the same reason the Babylonians are spoken of as a northern enemy. Jer. i. 14. xlv. 6, 10, 20, 24. Ez. xxvi. 7.

— a dry place.—Notwithstanding her many waters, Nahum i. 12, her situation shall become dry; the artificial channels being obstructed, and the waters of the river returning to their course. See Nah. ii. 8.

14. — beasts.—On חִיָּוִי, with the paragogic vau in the poetical form, see Præl. Heb. iii. 34.

— of the earth.—ὁ. Ar. read אָרֶץ. “ברא, agri. Chald.” Secker. Houbigant reads כָּל נִי חִיָּוִי, All kinds of beasts. It is to be observed that ὁ. Ar. V. Syr. read רָכַל. So that we may divide thus,

“And flocks shall lie down in the midst of her, and all beasts.

The — and the pelican and the porcupine,” &c.

Thus for נִי we may read דִּיה the vulture, Isa. xxxiv. 15, or some such word.

— pelican.—From קָאָה, vomere, quoniam conchas jam absorptas revomit, postquam calore ventris apertæ sint; ut ex iis esculenta legat. Boch. P. ii. l. ii. c. xxiv. p. 294. Perhaps, because it casts up fish or water from its membranaceous bag. These birds fed in the Tigris, and made their nests in the deserted ruins of the city.

— porcupine.—From קָפֵר, prævidere, sc. morsu. See Boch. p. i. l. iii. c. xxxvi. Or rather from קָפֵר, Syr. horruit. Animal solivagum et φειδερημον. Boch.

— the raven.—עֵרֵב is the reading of ὁ. Ar. Houbigant.

For he hath laid bare her cedar work.

- 15 This is the rejoicing city, that sat in security;
That said in her heart, I am, and there is none besides me.
How is she become || a desolation, a place for beasts to couch in!
Every one that passeth by her will hiss, and will move his hand.

CHAPTER III.

- 1 WOE to her that is rebellious and polluted, to the oppressing city!
2 She hath not obeyed the voice;
She hath not received instruction:
In Jehovah she hath not trusted;
To her God she hath not drawn near.
3 Her princes in the midst of her are roaring lions:
Her judges are evening wolves:

|| Heb. for a desolation.

— her cedar work.—This reference to the former elegance of the city is finely introduced; and in the next verse the grand and affecting description of her desolate state is beautifully contrasted by her late festivity and pride.

15. — rejoicing.—Κρησσων Νινου ευφραινουσης was a proverb.

— That said.—This line and the two preceding words occur Isa. xlvii. 8.

See Isa. xxxiv. 11—17, a like topic of a great city laid waste, pursued in a train of images full of sublimity and terror.

CHAP. III. 1. — rebellious.—I read בַּרְרָה, the participle Benoni from בָּרָה, to rebel, and in Hiphil to provoke; whence V. has provocatrix. The prophet here addresses Jerusalem. I consider this chapter as an elegant part of prophetic poetry.

3. — roaring lions.—As devouring lions, who roar in the act of seizing their prey.

— evening wolves.—So Virgil of the wolf,

“Nec gregibus nocturnus obambulat.”

Georg. iii. 538.

They wait not until the morning.

- 4 Her prophets are light, they are * treacherous men :
Her priests have polluted the sanctuary, they have violated the law.
- 5 But Jehovah is just in the midst of her :
He doeth not iniquity :
† Every morning he bringeth his righteousness
To light, he faileth not.
Yet the ‡ wicked knoweth not shame.
- 6 I have cut off nations ; their towers are destroyed :
I have laid waste their streets, so that none passeth through ;
There cities are § thrown down, so that there is no man,
so that there is none inhabitant.
- 7 Then I said, Surely thou wilt fear me, thou wilt receive instruction :
That her habitation might not be cut off,

* Heb. men of treacheries.

† Heb. in the morning in the morning.

‡ Heb. iniquitous.

§ Heb. hunted.

— wait not.—יִרְכּוּ from רָכַח, to wait, seems the true reading. It is proposed by Houbigant, and is agreeable to the renderings of Ar. Syr. to expect, to remain ; and of Chald. to prolong. Like wild beasts, they shun the light. “They break not, or gnaw not, the bones until the morning. All night they prowl about destroying ; but they devour not till the morning, when they consume their prey in their dens.” Dr. Forsayeth.

— Her priests.—The words her priests to the law are the same Ezek. xxii. 26, only the order is inverted, and my added to קָדֵשׁ and חִוּרָה. Seeker.

5. — Every morning.—The metrical division of the Hebrew is,

“Every morning his righteousness
He bringeth to light, he faileth not.”

The sense is, Not a day passes, but we see instances of his goodness to righteous men, and of his vengeance on the wicked.

6. — nations.—Syria, Israel, [see גִּי, Isa. i. 4.] those referred to Isa. xxxvi. 18, 19, 20. “Proud, ó.” Seeker.

— are thrown down.—In Syr. and Chald. the original word signifies to be laid waste. One MS. has נִרְצָו, an usual word.

7. — cut off.—ó. read נִעְרִיָה. So the translation will be, And all that I have visited upon her, i. e. all my corrections, shall not be cut off from her eyes ; which makes an easier construction. If כֹּל can be taken

After all the punishment with which I had || visited her.
Nevertheless they * diligently corrupted all their doings.

- 8 Yet wait for me, saith Jehovah,
Until the day when I rise up to the prey.
For my decree is to gather the nations, to assemble the
kingdoms ;
To pour upon them mine indignation,
Even all the heat of mine anger :
For with the fire of my jealousy
Shall all the earth be devoured.
- 9 Surely I will then pour out upon the † people a pure ‡ language,
That they shall all of them call on the name of Jehovah,
That they shall serve him with one § consent.

|| Heb. visited upon.

* Heb. they rose early, they corrupted.

† Heb. peoples.

‡ Heb. lip.

§ Heb. shoulder.

for ככל, and פקר signify to determine about, the latter of which I doubt, it may be, And their dwelling shall not be cut off, according to all that I determined (i. e. conditionally) about them. See Nold. note 792. Secker.

8. Yet wait for me.—It is implied, in the foregoing verse, that the consequence of universal corruption among the Jews was their fall. Here they are taught to expect mercies from God after he has taken vengeance upon them.

—to the prey.—6. Syr. Aq. Symm. Theod, &c., render, for a testimony. The Hebrew may be rendered, for a witness, in testem. See Mal. iii. 5.

—the nations—the kingdoms.—Those which were to be conquered by Nebuchadnezzar.

9. —then.—Used largely, for afterwards; unless we confine the passage to the Jews on their return from Babylon.

—will then pour out.—I read אשפך with Houbigant. But thirteen MSS. and three editions read אהפך in Hiphil.

—upon the people.—Or, peoples. The Gentiles, who shall be converted to Christianity. The words all of them cannot refer to such proselytes as the Jews made before the coming of Christ. But if peoples can be applied to the Jews, as 1 Kings xxii. 28, Joel ii. 6, we may understand v. 9, 10, of that freedom from idolatry for which the Jews were remarkable after the captivity; and the rest of the chapter may refer to the blessings which were then bestowed on them.

—consent.—Heb. shoulder; a metaphor from the joint efforts of

- 10 From beyond the rivers of || Ethiopia
My suppliants among my dispersed shall bring mine * offering.
- 11 In that day thou shalt not be ashamed
For all thy doings, wherein thou hast transgressed against me :
For I will take away from the midst of thee them that rejoice in thy † pride ;
And thou shalt no longer ‡ exalt thyself in mine holy mountain.
- 12 And I will leave in the midst of thee an humble and lowly people ;
And they shall trust in the name of Jehovah.
- 13 The residue of Israel shall not commit wickedness, Nor shall they speak falsehood,
Neither shall a § deceitful tongue be found in their mouth.

|| Heb. Cush.

* Heb. offering of flour.

† Or, greatness.

‡ Heb. thou shalt not add to exalt thyself.

§ Heb. a tongue of deceit.

yoked beasts. See the same phrase in the Chaldee paraphrase, Zech. xiv.

9. Servient coram Domino humero uno.

10. — of Ethiopia.—Bochart is positive that Arabia Chusæa is meant, and says that the rivers are Besor, which flows into the Mediterranean; Rhinocorura, which flows into the lake Sirbonis; Trajanus amnis, which flows into the Red Sea; and the Corys. Geogr. p. 212. See a parallel place, Isa. xviii. 1, where Bishop Lowth mentions the eastern branches of the Nile, the boundary of Arabia towards Egypt; but doubts whether the parts of the upper Nile towards Ethiopia may not be meant. That Arabia was a distant country, in the estimation of the Jews, see Joel iii. 8. And beyond the rivers of Ethiopia, may denote both Africa and the southern Arabia.

— among my dispersed.—I read with ó. בנפוצי, εν διεσπαρμενοις μου, and suppose that in this verse either the conversion of the Jews is meant, or their freedom from idolatry.

11. — thou shalt not be ashamed.—Thy guilt and thy punishment shall cease.

— in thy pride.—Thy idolatrous exalting of thyself against me. See Isa. xiii. 3. “Thy rejoicers in pride.” Secker.

And they shall feed and lie down, and none shall make them afraid.

14 Sing, O daughter of Sion ; shout ye, O Israel ;
Be glad and rejoice with all thine heart, O daughter of Jerusalem :

15 Jehovah hath taken away thy judgments, he hath turned aside thine enemies.

Jehovah, the king of Israel, is in the midst of thee ;
Thou shalt no longer see evil.

16 In that day it shall be said to Jerusalem, Fear not ;
And to Sion, Let not thine hands be slack.

17 Jehovah thy God will be in the midst of thee, the Mighty
One will save thee.

He will rejoice over thee with gladness, he will || renew his love :

He will exult over thee with singing.

18 I have taken away the afflicted among thee from the solemn assembly :

|| Heb. be renewed in.

13. — and none shall make them afraid — These words occur, Mic.
iv. 4.

14. Sing.—ó. MS. Pachom. ed. Ald. and Arab. add σφοδρα, and read נאמר.

15. — thine enemies.—The versions, Chald. the Babylonish Talmud, and eighteen MSS. read אֵיבִיר. V. renders פנה avertit. It is equivalent to הִסִּיר.

— in the midst of thee.—Displays his interposition in thy deliverance, or, in thy prosperity ; if the passage has a reference to the future restoration of the Jews. This verse is otherwise divided by Syr. Chald. and with much elegance,

“ Jehovah hath taken away thy judgments :
The King of Israel hath turned aside thine enemies :
Jehovah is in the midst of thee : thou shalt no longer see evil.”

16. — be slack.—In rebuilding the city and temple ; or, figuratively, in serving thy God.

17. — renew.—ó. Syr. point out the reading of יהרש, renovabitur.
So Houbigant and Bishop Lowth on Isa. xli. 1. For the punctuation of the verse, see ó.

They are taken away from thee, even from causing a reproach against thee :

19 Behold I will work with thee for thy sake at that time :

And I will save her that * halteth, and her that is driven out will I assemble ;

And I will make them a † praise, and a ‡ name,
In every land § where they have been put to confusion.

20 At that time I will bring you again :

And, at the time when I assemble you,
Surely I will appoint you a || name and a praise
Among all the people of the earth :

When I turn back your captivity before your eyes, saith
Jehovah.

* Or, is disabled. † Heb. set them for a praise. ‡ Heb. for a name.
§ Heb. of their shame. || Heb. for a name.

18. I have taken away.—The word saying is to be understood before this verse.

—the afflicted among thee.—I read נניך with ó. and Houbigant; and suppose that the prophet means such as deplored their captivity, and prayed for a restoration, in the solemn assemblies of the Jews at Babylon, Zech. vii. 5. The rest of the verse I translate as Houbigant, who reads עלִיךְ with Syr. The humiliation and affliction of the Jews furnished matter of reproach to their enemies. Or read במוֹעֵד, 'and transpose it, with ó. Ar. Syr.—With singing, as in the solemn assembly. See Houbigant. "Qui impediverunt in te tempora solemnitate tuæ, expellam a te. Chald. Videtur legisse מועֵד הַיּוֹם אֵלָּה, removit." Dathius.

19. —with thee for thy sake. I read with ó and Cappellus אֶתְּךָ לְמוֹעֵד. See Ezek. xx. 44.

—halteth.—See on Micah iv. 6, where we have a parallel place.

20. —before your eyes.—This may be understood as an intimation that some of the Jews, who were led captives to Babylon, should survive the period of the captivity, and return to their own country. Syr. and Houbigant read לְעֵינֵיהֶם, before their eyes, sc. of the nations.

THE BOOK

OF

H A B A K K U K.

---

CHAPTER I.

- 1 THE Prophecy which Habakkuk the prophet saw,
- 2 How long, O Jehovah, have I cried, and thou hast not hearkened!

*How long do I * cry out unto thee, There is violence ;
and thou hast not saved !*

* Or, exclaim.

CHAP. I. 1. — Habakkuk.—It seems probable that Habakkuk lived after the taking of Nineveh; as he prophesies of the Chaldeans, and is silent on the subject of the Assyrians. We have also reason to conclude that he prophesied not long before the Jewish captivity. See ch. i. 5. ii. 3. iii. 2, 16—19. He may therefore be placed in the reign of Jehoiakim, between the years 606 and 598 before Christ.

The prophet Habakkuk stands high in the class of the Hebrew poets. The beautiful connection between the parts of his prophecy, its diction, imagery, spirit, and sublimity, cannot be too much admired. See Bishop Lowth's Hebrew prelections, xxi. xxviii., and the learned Mr. Green on ch. iii. 3—10.

Vaticinia quæ edidit Habacucus ex afflatu divino. Grammatici Hebræi שמא explicant per נבואה aut חזון. Symm. Theod. ut ὁ λημμα, sermo a Deo acceptus. Bahrtdt.

2. How long.—In the opening of this prophecy there is an indignant spirit against vice, like that so much admired in Juvenal.

—There is violence.—Or, because of violence. Syr. and Chald. supply על. “And violence lifteth up her voice. For so נא, Isa. xlii. 2, 11.” Secker.

3. — cause me to behold.—Syr. reads אביט.

“And why do I behold,” &c.

- 3 Why dost thou shew me iniquity, and cause me to behold wickedness?
And why are spoiling and violence before me;
And why is there contention, and why do men raise strife?
- 4 Therefore the law faileth,
And judgment never goeth forth:
For the wicked compasseth about the righteous:
Therefore perverted judgment goeth forth.
- 5 See, ye transgressors, and behold, and wonder, and perish:
For I work a work in your days,

— wickedness.—Labour, sorrow, distress, caused by wickedness.

— raise.—Heb. excitat quis. See on Jonah iii. 7. See גָּזַח, Ex. xxiii. 1. Ps. xv. 3. But ó. Ar. Syr. and at first one MS. read יִנְרֵן, “And why doth the Judge receive a reward?” MS. Copt. adds “כִּי־נִים, faciem, after יִשָּׂא.” Mr. Woide. “And the judge accepteth persons.”

4. — never goeth forth.—Or, goeth not forth unto victory, or purity, or truth, or perfection. See Isa. xlii. 3.

“And judgment proceedeth not to victory.”

Dr. Wheeler.

— compasseth about.—So circumvenire is to oppress, to deceive. Multitudine superat. Arab. Cast. lex.

“Because the wicked circumventeth the righteous.”

Dr. Wheeler.

5. — Ye transgressors.—For בְּנֵי־מַלְכוּת, among the nations, read, as Cappellus and Houbigant have suggested, בְּנֵי־מַלְכוּת, which, as Houbigant observes, ó elsewhere also translate, καταφρονῆται. See Prov. xiii. 15. Hos. vi. 7. Zeph. iii. 4. v. 13 of this chapter, and ch. ii. 5. Ar. and Syr. agree with ó. See also Acts xiii. 41.

— and behold.—In Acts xiii. 41, nine MSS. and three editions have καὶ ἐπιβλέψατε after καταφρονῆται, agreeably to the Hebrew.

— and perish.—One MS. reads וְתִמְחָר, with V. Syr. But the reading of ó. and of Acts xiii. 41, καὶ ἐφάνισθητε, supposes וְתִמְחָר, or וְתִמְחָר, in the text. See Cappellus. There is a double rendering in ó. The former is καὶ θανάσαστε θάναστα, according to which the reading may have been וְתִמְחָר, that is, וְתִמְחָר, cum admiratione.

— in your days.—Hence it follows, that the Chaldeans invaded Judea while those were living whom the prophet addressed.

Which ye will not believe though it be told you.

- 6 For behold, I will raise up the Chaldeans,
That bitter and swift nation ;
Who † go over the ‡ breadth of the earth
To possess dwelling-places which belong § not unto them.
7 They are terrible and dreadful :
Their judgment and their excellency proceed from themselves.
8 Their horses also are swifter than leopards :

† Heb. which goeth.

‡ Heb. breadths.

§ Heb. to it : and onwards in the singular number, to the end of v. 11, except their faces.

Which ye will not believe.—In Acts. xiii. 41, the common editions have εργον, “a work which ye will not believe.” But there is very good authority for omitting this word. St. Paul plainly accommodates this passage to his own purpose.

6. — the Chaldeans.—See Gen. xi. 28, 31. xv. 7. Job i. 17. Isa. xxiii. 13, and Bishop Lowth’s note. They are supposed to have been so called from Chesed the son of Nahor. Gen. xxii. 22. Eustathius, in his notes on Dionysius’s περηγησις, says, that they derived their name from Chaldeus, the fourteenth king after Ninus, and the founder of Babylon, l. 765, p. 101. ed. H. Steph. Xenophon mentions the Chaldeans as a warlike nation of Armenia. Cyropæd. l. iii. p. 148. 8vo. ed. Hutchinson. These were anciently called Chalybes. See Hutchinson’s note.

—bitter.—Arabice radix بربر ad robur et virtutem usitatissime transfertur. Schultens, Anim. Phil. p. 517.

7. — Their judgment.—Their authority to execute judgment, and their dignity and elevation among the kingdoms of the earth, arise from their own valour in revolting from the Assyrians.

8. — swifter than leopards.—Leopards tamed, and taught to hunt, are, it is said, made use of [in Palestine] for hunting ; and seize the prey with surprising agility. When he leaps, he throws himself seventeen or eighteen feet at a time. Harmer ii. 438.

“ Non segnior extulit illum
Saltus, et in medias jecit super arma catervas,
Quam per summa rapit celerem venabula pardum.”

Lucan l. vi.

“ Ωκυτατον θειναι και τ’ αλκιμον ιθυσ ορονει.
Φαιης, οπισσ’ υειο, διερευνη φορεσσαι.”

Opp. Cyn. l. iii.

And they are || fiercer than evening wolves.

And their horsemen shall spread themselves; they shall come from far;

They shall fly, as an eagle hastening to devour.

9 All of them shall come for violence:

The supping up of their faces shall be as an east wind:

|| Heb. sharper.

“V. et Syr. legerunt קלי sine vau, quod ego quidem præferrem. Et posterior præterea pro כנשרים, legit כנשרים, aquilis velociores: quam lectionem non minus nostræ præferrem.”

Arab. also omits the vau; and MS. 4 originally read כנשרים.

Alterum פרישי omnino delendum. Bahrldt.

—fiercer. Bochart refers the word to the spirit of horses and wolves.

“Genus acre luporum.” Virg.

“Ascanius mediis in vallibus acri

Gaudet equo.”

Virg.

See Hieroz. III. x. 826.

—shall spread themselves.—See Chald. and Syr. on the word, Nahum iii. 18: where they explain it by ברר, dispersit. Here Chald. has ירבין, multiplicabuntur, and V diffundentur.

—they shall come from far.—The word פרישי, which stands before this clause in the Hebrew, is omitted by o. Ar. Syr. and by three MSS.

Mr. Green's note on this passage is, “The Hebrew word rendered by our translators, and they shall spread themselves, is a faulty writing of the word foregoing, which the transcriber would not put out for fear of blotting his copy. The Syr. has it not, and the Seventy knew not what to make of it.” His translation is:

“And their horsemen sharper than evening wolves,

Their horsemen shall come from afar,” &c.

Poetical Parts of the O. T. p. 23.

—from far.—So 2 Kings xx. 14. Jer. v. 15. See on Joel iii. 8.

—to devour.—Thirty MSS. and three ed. read לאכל, which may be rendered ad eibum, to the prey. See Syr. Chald.

“They shall fly, as an eagle hasteth to the prey.”

Dr. Wheeler.

9. All of them.—Two MSS. read כלו, and three read so originally. This is regular, and agrees with כלי, v. 6. Houbigant reads כלם יבאו, as Syr. Vulg. Chald.

—The supping up.—This is our marginal rendering, and that of Peters on Job, 8vo. 2d. ed. p. 137. Their enemies shall be absorbed, or

- And they shall gather * captives as the sand.
 10 They shall also scoff at kings,
 And princes shall be a laughing-stock unto them.
 They shall laugh at every strong hold :
 And they shall heap † earth and take it.
 11 ‡ Then shall their spirit be changed, and they shall pass away, and shall be § treated as guilty.
 This is their strength with their God.
 12 Art thou not from everlasting ?
 O Jehovah, || my God, mine Holy One, we shall not die.

* Heb. captivity.

† Or, dust.

‡ Or, afterwards.

§ Or, shall be punished.

|| Or, mine holy God. Heb. The God of mine holiness.

rapidly destroyed, by them ; as the blasting pestilential east wind spreads destruction. See on Jonah iv. 8. Symmachus renders ἡ προσοψις του προσωπου, which agrees with Syr. ; as if the reading had been נִכְנָר. “Before their faces, &c.” Houbigant reads נִקְרָם, Before.

10. — earth.—See Gen. xxvi. 15. Isa. ii. 10, 19. V. ó. Chald. understand the word of mounds heaped up, according to the usual way of taking fortresses. Others render the word dust, and think the meaning to be, They shall take every strong hold with ease, and as it were in sport.

11. — be changed.—Præteribit. This may be spoken of the Chaldee nation at large ; whose disposition should degenerate, and who were to be punished by Cyrus. An ironical epiphonema follows, Such is their boasted strength derived from their idols. לֹא־אֱלֹהִי. Two MSS. originally. See v. 7—10. 15—17.

— pass away.—“Pass over. Transgress.” Secker. “Hebræis spiritus transire sive transgredi dicitur, quoties intra modestiæ fines se non tenet.” Bahrdt.

12. Art thou not.—There is great beauty in this sudden address to Jehovah, as opposed to the false god of the Chaldeans.

“O God of mine holiness.” Sic videtur legendum. Secker.

— we shall not die.—We shall not utterly perish by the Chaldeans ; though we shall suffer severely from them. But this seems a cold sense, and unworthy of so animated a poem. Houbigant conjectures אֱלֹהֵי אֱמֶת, O God of truth ; which is interwoven in the Chaldee paraphrase ; and, I think, ought to be admitted into the text. “Let us not.” Secker.

“Art not thou from everlasting, O Jehovah, my God, mine Holy One ?

O Jehovah, God of truth, thou hast appointed them for judgment.”

- O Jehovah, thou hast appointed them for judgment,
 And thou hast founded them as a rock, to chasten us.
- 13 Thou that art of purer eyes than to behold evil,
 And canst not look on wickedness ;
 Why dost thou look on transgressors,
And art silent when the wicked swalloweth up the man that is more righteous than he ?
- 14 And why makest thou men as the fishes of the sea,
 As the moving * things which have no ruler over them ?
- 15 They take up all of them with the hook ;
 They collect them in their net, and gather them together
 in their drag :
 Therefore they rejoice and exult :
- 16 Therefore they sacrifice to their net, and burn incense to their drag :
 Because by them their portion is fat, and their food plenteous.

* Heb. thing which hath no ruler over it.

Another conjectural reading is, לאמנוח, “ for faithfulness, or truth, in thy denunciations of punishment.”

“ For faithfulness, O Jehovah, for judgment thou hast appointed them.”

— as a rock.—Houbigant renders, In hostem validum fecisti, ut eum coargueres.

“ As a flint thou hast set him to reprove [chastise].” Ezek. iii. 9. Thou hast given him firmness, and resolution, or hardness of heart, to punish. Dr. Forsayeth.

13. — more righteous.—The just or good man mentioned, ch. ii. 4.

15. They take up.—Heb. One taketh up : one collecteth them. The Chaldeans are meant.

— all of them.—Houbigant prefers כלו ; and this is the reading of three MSS. and of a fourth in the margin.

16. — sacrifice.—They boast themselves in their strength ; and deify themselves for their valour.

17. Shall they therefore.—V. ó. Ar. Syr. read על כן, therefore. Houbigant conjectures ועל כן, and therefore. All omit the interrogation.

The meaning of the verse, if read interrogatively, is,

“ Shall the wicked, therefore, be never stopped in their career ?”

- 17 Shall they therefore empty their net ;
And continually spare not to slay the nations ?

CHAPTER II.

- 1 I stood on my watchtower,
And set myself on the bulwark :
And I * looked to see what he would speak by me ;
And what I should reply to my arguing with him.
2 And Jehovah answered me, and said :
Write the vision, and make it plain upon the tablets ;
That he may run that readeth it.

* Or, watched.

which is agreeable to the expostulations, v. 13, 14. Without the interrogation, the sense may be, Therefore, sc. because their portion is thus made fat, they are intent on filling and emptying their net.

— And continually.—This line explains the allegory. Syr Ch. and Houbigant read תמיד, continually without the vau, and join the word to the former clause. Observe that vau precedes.

“ ——— empty their net continually
And spare not ———.”

CHAP. II. 1. I stood.—Stabam. Houbigant.

— on my watchtower —I was earnestly looking for God’s word ; as a watchman intent on his office. Prophets are compared to watchmen, Ezek. iii. 17.

— I should reply.—To my own satisfaction, and that of others, as to the difficulties raised, ch. i. 13—17, why the idolatrous and wicked Chaldeans, and their king, are to be prosperous and triumphant.

Syr. and Houbigant read ישיב, he would reply ; and Chald. has respondet, I should be answered.

“ And will look attentively to see what he will say to me,
And what he will answer for my conviction.”

Dr. Wheeler.

2. — the tablets.—ô. here, and Vulg. ô. Isa. xxx. 8, render tablets of box, which were firm and durable.

— may run.—Let the characters be so legible that one who hastily passes on may read them ; which may have been a proverbial manner of

- 3 For the vision is yet for an appointed time ;
 But at the end it shall speak clearly, and shall not † lie.
 If it delay, wait for it
 For it shall ‡ surely come, it shall not tarry long.
- 4 Behold § his soul is lifted up, it is not upright in him :

† Or, deceive.

‡ Heb. coming it shall come.

§ Heb. it is lifted up, his soul is not, &c.

expression. Houbigant renders, “ut, qui leget, expedite legat;” and several others understand the word run figuratively of rapid reading.

— that readeth it.—Two MSS. read כל קרא, every one that readeth.

3. — the vision.—Or prophecy ; which follows v. 4—20. Secker.

— an appointed time.—The destruction of the Chaldeans by Cyrus is, at a somewhat distant period of years, determined in my counsels.

— speak clearly.—The word is used in Hiphil, with a case after it, for uttering, Prov. vi. 19. xiv. 5. And it is used in Kal for aspirare, Cantic. ii. 17. iv. 6, until the day break ; or breath, as it is rendered in the margin.

— and shall not lie.—Thirteen MSS. read לא for ולא ; as if the true reading were לקצי לא.

“But at the end thereof it shall speak clearly, it shall not lie.

It shall not be later than its season.” Dr. Wheeler.

— it shall not tarry long.—So Houbigant. All the versions, Chald. twenty-two MSS. and six editions read, “And it shall not,” &c. ולא. See also Hebrews x. 37, where the sacred writer follows, though not exactly, the mistaken Greek translation of this hemistich ; for בא is in the infinitive used gerundively, not the participle, and is written בוא in six MSS. The clause therefore is an apt accommodation, taken from a version in frequent use among the Hellenistic Jews ; a remark which I extend to the former clause of v. 4.

4. Behold.—Two MSS. read ורנה. And Arab. has Et si ; and Heb. x. 38, we read Kai εαν. ó. have Εαν. Thus the Greek translator may have read ואם, or ואם.

— lifted up.—This rendering furnishes a good sense, if we understand the passage of the Chaldeans, who, as appears from ch. i. 7, 12, 15—17, may be addressed in the singular number throughout this chapter ; though I allow that Nebuchadnezzar and Belshazzar, Dan. v., may be alluded to at the same time. But the idea of elation of mind does not occur in the ancient versions or paraphrase. On the contrary, ó. have εαν ὑποστειλῆται, and Ar. Si tadio afficiatur ; which suggests the reading of עילפה ; his mind is cast down, or fainteth ; and one MS. reads thus ; and another had עילפה

But the just shall live by his faith.

originally, which may possibly be rendered, there is dejection, but not defectio, in the sense of falling off from the faith.

— his soul.—ó. Ar. Heb. x. 38, and at first MS. 17, read נפשי, my soul.

— is not upright in him.—Cappellus supposes that ó. translate from the Arabic sense of ישרה; the word in the Arabic version being from שרר latus, hilaris fuit. They may have read רצה or רוצה the participle, or רצתה or הרצה.

— But the just.—ó. MS. A. and ed. Ald. and the Arabic version represent the reading of צדקי, my just one. And one MS. originally and some versions and Fathers read so Heb. x. 38. Rom. 17. See Wetstein.

— by his faith.—So Vulg. Aq. Symm. Theod. and ed. v. vi. vii. in Montfaugon. But ó. MS. V. and Heb. x. 38. one MS. Vulg. and some Fathers represent באמינותי, by faith in me, as MS. 320 seems to read; and this reading Mill approves of. Proleg. Sec. 932. One Hebrew MS. reads באמינות.

There is an ambiguity in the Hebrew, as well as Rom. i. 17. Gal. iii. 11. Heb. x. 38.

“ But the just shall live by his faith.

by faith.

by faith in me.”

Or,

“ But the just by his faith, shall live.

by faith.

by faith in me.”

I prefer the former sense. The meaning of the prophet is, The good, or righteous, man, who believes in my prophets, and obeys their directions, shall live at the time of the Babylonish invasion. See Jer. xxi. 9. xxxviii. 2, 17, 18. xlii. 7, &c. In the New Testament the words are accommodated.

The English word faith is only used here and Deut. xxxii. 20 in all the O. T. And the Hebrew word אֱמוּנָה, which is here used with a suffix, denotes many times an attribute of God, but never a quality in man, except 1 Sam. xxvi. 23, where it means fidelity; a אִישׁ אֱמוּנָה is a man of truth, Prov. xxviii. 20; and there is no אֱמוּנָה in them, Deut. xxxii. 20. With a suffix it denotes also a charge or office, 1 Chron. ix. 22. 2 Chron. xxxi. 18; but with or without a suffix, it never means faith, or credit given to a testimony. But the verb האמין doth, as in the noted place, Gen. xv. 6. It may be translated here, by his faithfulness. Compare ch. i. 13.

5 Moreover, as a mighty man transgresseth through wine,
He is proud, and remaineth not at || rest :

* He enlargeth his desire, as the grave ;
And he is as death, and cannot be satisfied ;
And gathereth to himself all the nations,
And assembleth to himself all the † people.

6 Shall not ‡ all these
Take up a parable against him,
And a taunt and proverbs concerning him ?
And they shall say :

Woe unto him that multiplieth that which belongeth
not unto him !

|| Heb. at home. * Heb. Who. † Heb. the peoples. ‡ Heb. these all of them.

ὁ. have ἐκ πίστεως μου, But Grabe μου ἐκ πίστεως. Syr. hath no pronoun. Πιστις in ὁ. never, I think, signifies belief, but faithfulness ; nor πιστος believing, but faithful. Secker.

5. — a mighty man.—I read גבור with Houbigant and Green. See Ps. lxxviii. 65. The vau may have been supplied by a point.

— through wine.—I read כבין, with Chald. See כ thus compounded, 1 Sam. xiv. 14. Gen. xxxviii. 24.

יֵאָדָּבִי, I understand not this particle. There seems an ellipsis of אִישׁ before יֵן. See examples in Michaelis. A drunkard is a transgressor, a proud man. Or, He is a drunkard, a, &c. Secker.

— remaineth not at rest.—Perhaps the true reading is יֵיָדָּבִי. Unseemly. Dr. Wheeler. From אִדָּב in Niphal.

— and cannot be satisfied.—This is the reading of Vulg. and Chald. But ὁ. Ar. Syr. one MS. and Green, Poetical Parts, &c. pref. p. xi., read לא for וְלֹא.

“ He enlargeth his desire, as the grave ;
And, as death, he cannot be satisfied.”

Mr. Wintle also observed this reading in MS. 154, and approves of it.

This verse describes the Chaldeans, and their ambitious king.

6. — a taunt and proverbs.—Syr. reads וְחִירָה, and proverbs. Perhaps the true reading is, וְחִירָה, et irrisioem proverbiorum ; or, as Vulg. et loquelam ænigmatum. “ A sentence of derision.” Dr. Wheeler. “ Omit-tunt van Syr. Ch. : recte, ut videtur.” Secker.

— And they shall say.—Literally, And one shall say : that is, And it shall be said.

- How long will he lade himself with many pledges ;
 7 Shall not they suddenly rise up, that will bite thee :
 And shall not they awake, that will harass thee ?
 And shalt thou not become § a booty unto them ?
 8 Because thou thyself hast spoiled many nations,
 All the residue of the || people shall spoil thee :
 For the * blood of men, and violence done to the land,
 To the city and to all the inhabitants thereof.
 9 Woe unto him who † coveteth an evil covetousness for his ‡ house ;
 That he may set his nest on high :
 That he may be delivered from the § power of evil !
 10 Thou hast || consulted shame to thine * house
 By cutting off many † people ; and thy ‡ soul hath sinned,

§ Heb. for booties.                      || Heb. peoples.                      * Heb. bloods.
 † Or, gaineth an evil gain.    ‡ Or, family.    § Heb. hand.    || Or, devised.
 * Or, family.                      † Heb. peoples.                      ‡ Or, thou hast sinned.

— will he lade himself.—Syr. Chald. and one MS. read נכביר without the rau.

— many pledges.—Kimchi derives the original word from עבט, to pledge, as סגריר, a heavy rain, from סגר ; and thinks that the repetition of the third radical intends the signification. There may be a reference to the frequent rapines of the Chaldeans, and to the pledges and hostages taken by them for the payment of stipulated sums. See Fuller Misc. Sacr. i. v. c. 8. “ ladeth, loadeth—borroweth ; thick clay, wealth.” Secker.

7. Shall not they.—“ Shall they not. Shall not thy creditors.” Secker.”

— bite thee.—A metaphor taken from the hunting of wild beasts.

— unto them.—The Medes and Persians.

8. — residue. All that remain from thy devastations. Syr. omits כל.

— the blood of men.—Shed by thee.

— land—city.—Land of Judea ; city of Jerusalem. “ Of the land ; or, against, as Joel iii. 19. Obad. 10.” Secker.

9. — for his house.—Which Nebuchadnezzar strove to aggrandize ; and which Cyrus cut off. See Dan. v. 2, 30.

“ Woe unto him that procureth wicked gain for his family.”

Dr. Wheeler.

10. — consulted.—Devised. See on Isa. ix. 6. Secker.

— hath sinned—Perhaps חטא.

- 11 Surely the stone from the wall crieth out ;
And the § beam from the timber answereth it :
Saying :
12 “ Woe unto him who buildeth a town by || blood,
And establisheth a city by iniquity !”
13 Are not these things from Jehovah God of hosts,
*That * people should labour for the fire,*
And nations should weary themselves for a vain thing ?

§ Or, fastning.

|| Heb. bloods.

* Heb. peoples.

11. — the beam.—From the Syr. כפס, connexuit. συνδεσμος, Symm. Theod. Lignum, V. Bochart has a dissertation on this word, Hieroz. P. II. L. IV. c. xxvi., and says that the Talmudists use it for a brick of certain dimensions ; a sense which he prefers. He quotes, “ Jumenta loquentur,

Et canis, et postes, et marmora.” Juv.

The passage is very poetical, and may refer to the great buildings erected by Nebuchadnezzar in Babylon. The stones and wood, which were to be overturned, should proclaim the woe that follows. Mr. Wintle refers to Luke xix. 40.

“ על נפשך, Jon. Lectio קצית, concidisti, sine dubio præferenda. Bahrdt.

13. — these things.—For הנה, behold, V. ó. Ar. read אלה, these things. Syr. has כל אלה, all these things. But Chald. has הנה, behold.

— for the fire.—By which great part of Babylon will be consumed. See ברי, for, Nahum ii. 12.

And nations.—Nebuchadnezzar employed great multitudes in erecting his works,

The original here is,

יגעו עמים ברי אש
ולאמים ברי דיק יעפו

And Jer. li. 58, we read,

יגעו עמים ברי דיק
ולאמים ברי אש ייעפו

“ And the people shall labour for a vain thing ;
And nations for the fire, and shall be weary.”

But Syr. omits the י in ייעפו, and so do ó. Ar. though they translate widely. The reading also of one MS. is יעפו. That the true reading is יעפו,

“ And the nations shall weary themselves for the fire,” appears from the turn of the sentence in Jeremiah, and the juxtaposition

- 14 Surely the earth shall be filled
With the knowledge of the glory of Jehovah,
As the waters cover the sea.
- 15 Woe unto him who maketh his neighbour drink,
Who putteth his flagon unto him, and also maketh him
drunken;
That he may look on their nakedness!
- 16 That art filled with shame instead of glory:
Drink thou also and uncover thy foreskin:
Unto thee shall be turned the cup from the right hand of
Jehovah;
And foul shame shall be on thy glory.
-

of the places. It is very observable that in Jeremiah six MSS. make the two passages exactly parallel, by inserting אש in the former hemistich, and רע in the latter.

— for a vain thing.—For what God shall bring to nought.

14. — the earth shall be filled.—God's power and providence shall be widely displayed in the destruction of Babylon, in the humiliation of Nebuchadnezzar, Dan. iv. 37, and in the captivity and restoration of his people. See also Dan. ii. 47. iii. 29. vi. 26. There is a parallel place, Isa. xi. 9.

— With the knowledge.—See מלא used with ל, Dan. ix. 2.

— cover the sea.—The verb כסה is used with על in many places, Deut. xiii. 8. Neh. iv. 5. Job xxi. 26. Ps. xlv. 19. cvi. 17. Prov. x. 12. Ezek. xxiv. 7. xxxi. 15, and perhaps, Mal. ii. 16.

The curious reader will observe the Masoretic point at הארץ; introduced, as it should seem, merely to show the proper pause in the measure. See Bishop Lowth's Isaiah, Preliminary Dissertation, p. xxv.

15. — Who putteth his flagon.—Vulg. and Symm. favour Houbigant's reading, המחמי. The word ספה in Chald. signifies abundare fecit, and in Arab. fudit.

— his flagon.—Or, his gull, his poison.

— their nakedness.—V. Chald. have, his nakedness.

16.— and uncover thy foreskin.—ו. Ar. Syr. read והרעל, “and be seized with trembling or astonishment.” A remarkably apposite word. See Ps. lx. 3. Isa. li. 17, 22. Zech. xii. 2. ו. ed. Ald. and MS. Pachom. read και διασαλευθητι.

— the cup.—See Ps. lxxv. 8. Jer. xxv. 15, 27. This shall come round to you, in its turn.

— foul shame.—“Shameful pollution.” Dr. Wheeler. Six MSS.

- 17 Surely the violence done to Lebanon shall cover thee,
And the destruction of † beasts shall make thee afraid:
For the ‡ blood of men, and violence done to the land,
To the city and all the inhabitants thereof.
- 18 What profiteth the graven image,
That the § maker thereof hath graven it?
And the molten image and the teacher of lies:
That the || maker of his work trusteth therein,
To make him dumb idols?
- 19 Woe unto him who saith to the wood, Awake;
To the * silent stone, Arise.
Shall it teach? Behold, it is laid over with gold and silver;

† Heb. cattle.

‡ Heb. bloods.

§ Or, fashioner.

|| Heb. the fashioner of his fashion.

* Heb. stone of silence.

divide the original word and read וְקִי קָלֶן, which may be equivalent to וְקִיא קָלֶן, et vomitus ignominiae. Or, there may be an intensive repetition of the first radical in the root קלה.

Grotius justly observes, that v. 15, 16, contain an allegory. The Chaldeans gave to the neighbouring nations the cup of idolatry and of deceitful alliance; and in return they received from Jehovah the cup of his fury.

Suspicio olim lectum fuisse וְקִיא קָלֶן Repete תשובה e membro priori. Bahrdt.

17. — shall make thee afraid.—I read וְחָתַךְ, in Hiphil, with ה. Ar. Syr. Chald. Mr. Wintle also proposes this reading.

18. — And the molten image.—Dr. Durell proposes to remove the י from יצַר, and add it to מַסְכָּה. Two MSS. read וְמַסְכָּה, which Green approves of. But the hemistich is very elegant, and in the poetical manner, without the vau. There are many such passages, as Isa. xlii. 10. l. 1, 2. 22. l. 3, 4. xliii. 19. l. 3, 4. Ps. cxiv. 1. See v. 19. l. 1, 2.

— the teacher of lies.—By oracles, which the statue was supposed to give; but which in fact were given by the artifice of the priest. “The image teaches lies, gives false notions of the Deity.” Secker.

— the maker of his work.—I suspect that יצַר, or יצָר, is superfluous; as both may be participles. See Syr. Chald. They seem to be different readings. “MS. Copt. omits ὁ πλασας.” Mr. Woide.

19. — silent stone.—אבֶּן is feminine, and therefore דְּבִימָה must be a substantive, lapidi silentii. See Isa. xlvii. 5. Sit thou in silence.

— Shall it teach?—So Vulg. יָעַר is understood.

- Neither is there any breath in the midst thereof.
 20 But Jehovah is in his † holy temple :
 Be silent before him, All the earth.

---

CHAPTER III.

- 1 [A prayer of Habakkuk the prophet upon Shigionoth.]
 2 O JEHOVAH, I have heard thy * speech ;
 I have feared, O Jehovah, thy work,
 As the years approach, thou hast shewn it ;

† Heb. the temple of his holiness.

* Heb. hearing.

---

— laid over.—I supply עץ, the wood. “Laid hold of,” that is, “enclosed,” says Tayl. Conc.

— any breath.—Sciendum, in quibusdam Heb. voluminibus non esse additum omnis, sed absolute spiritum legi. Jerom, quoted in Kennicott's Diss. Gen. Sec. 84. 13. And Syr. omits כל.

CHAP. III. 1. A prayer.—The title seems a Jewish annotation of a later age, and the insertion of it interrupts the connection.

— Shigionoth.—The word is probably derived from the Syr. שִׁגְיוֹן, mutavit, variavit, and thus may denote a musical instrument of great compass, with which the Jews accompanied this piece of poetry.

2. — thy speech.—Which thou hast communicated to me, ch. i. 5—11. ii. 4—20. See Obad. 1.

— thy work.—I have been struck with fear, because of the judgments denounced against Judah and Jerusalem, ch. i. 5—11. ii. 4, 5, 8, 17. One MS. reads בפעלך, because of thy work.

“Jehovah, I have seen thy work.” Dr. Wheeler.

He reads, רִאִיתִי, I have seen. ó. have κατενόησα, and in MS. Pachom. and ed. Ald. we find Κυρίε, κατενόησα.

— approach.—Cappellus prefers the reading of ó. and Aquila, εν τω εγγιζειν, εν τω παρειναι: בקרוב.

— thou hast shewn it.—Cappellus ingeniously conjectures חִידוֹ, show it. I prefer חִידִית, thou hast shown it. ó. have ζῶων, which word represents חִידִית. One MS. has at present חִידוֹ, another perhaps חִידוֹ, another חִידִית, which reading Jerom also found. Kenn. Diss. Gen. Sec. 84. 13.

As the years approach, thou makest it known,
In wrath thou rememberest mercy.

- 3 God came from Teman,
And the Holy One from mount Paran: [Selah.]
His glory covered the heavens;
And the earth was full of his praise.
- 4 His brightness was as the light:
Rays streamed † from his hand;

† Heb. to him from his hand.

— thou makest it known.—One MS. reads נִתְּנָהּ, notum facies id.

— thou rememberest.—Observe the topics of consolation, ch. ii. 4, 14, and the several woes denounced against Babylon.

3. God came.—Bishop Lowth observes that this is a sudden burst of poetry, in the true spirit of the ode; the concealed connection being, that God, who had formerly displayed such power in delivering the Israelites from Egyptian slavery, might succour their posterity in a like wonderful manner; and the enthusiasm of the poet leading him to neglect all obvious ways of entering on his subject. Præl. Heb. xxviii. v. 3—7, contain a sublime description of God, when he conducted his people to the land of Canaan. The grandest circumstances are selected, and the diction is as splendid as the subjects.

“The captivity brought to his mind the Exodus, and that he who had delivered could deliver. Lowth, p. 257.” Secker.

— Teman.—First, perhaps, the name of an encampment, and afterwards of an Idumean city, Numb. xx. 21. Jer. xlix. 7. Job. ii. 11.

— Paran.—See Deut. xxxiii. 2. A part of Arabia Petræa, Gen. xxi. 21.

— Selah.—See Pol. Syn. Ps. iii. 6. render the word διαψαλμα, which, says Suidas, is μελούς εναλλαγή, cantus immutatio.

— glory.—On mount Sinai, and in the pillar of fire.

— praise.—On account of his majesty and power. Bishop Lowth, ubi supra, renders the word splendour; and Green’s version is,

“And his glory filled the earth.”

The verb הָלַל, in Hiphil, signifies to shine,

“And his praise filled the earth.” Dr. Wheeler.

4. His brightness.—6. Ar. Syr. Chald. Houbigant read וְהוֹרָא, et splendor ejus V. has splendor ejus. The vau may be considered as converse of הָרָא, and may be omitted in an English translation.

— Rays.—The verb קָרַן signifies to shine, Ex. xxxiv. 29, 30, 35, and a

And there was the hiding-place of his power.

5 Before him went the pestilence :
And flashes of fire ‡ went forth after him.

6 He stood, and measured the land ;
He beheld, and dispersed the nations :

‡ Heb. at his feet.

pencil or cone of rays, issuing from a point, diverges in the shape of a horn. See Deut. xxxiii. 2 :

“ From his right hand issued streams of light :”

The original word being אֲדִירִית, from אָדַר, in Syr. and Chald. to pour forth. See the learned Dr. Durell’s note on the place. Twenty MSS. and one ed. read יָקָרִית, and rays.

— And there.—In the place whence the light proceeded he gloriously concealed his presence. Three MSS. originally, and V. Chald. read שָׁם, there.

— of his power.—Keri, many MSS. and some editions, read עָו, or עָוּ, ισχυρος αυτου, ó.

Cappellus understands the verse of the lightning on Mount Sinai ; but I rather refer it to the brightness which occasionally issued from the Shechinah, Ex. xvi. 7, 10.

5. — the pestilence.—See Numb. xi. 33. xiv. 37. xvi. 46. It was occasionally inflicted on the Israelites, for their guilt.

— flashes of fire.—רָשַׁף, quicquid volando adurit et inflammat. Cast. lex, Ardor vibrans ac coruscus. Schultens on Job v. 7. See also Gussetius, who, by comparing Ps. lxxviii. 48 with Ex. ix. 29, collects that רָשַׁף has the nature of אָר, fire ; but thinks it id, quod in igne vehementiori sese vibrat ; flamma rubens. Lev. x. 2. Numb. xi. 1. xvi. 35. the Israelites were consumed by a fire which went out from Jehovah. And Lev. ix. 24, the burnt-offering was consumed by a fire which came out from before Jehovah.

— after him.—As it is translated, Gen. xxx. 30. 1 Sam. xxv. 42, is quite parallel. Secker.

6. — measured.—“ Divided it out, like a conqueror, Ps. lx. 6.” Green. ó. have εσαλευθη, and Chald. מוּע from מוּע, movit. Hence Cappellus conjectures מוּדַד, and Houbigant, מוּרַד, et concussit, or מוּרַדַּד, et subjecit. Possibly מוּרַד, and moved.

— dispersed.—One signification of the Arabic root in Cast. lex. is sparsit dispersit ; and in Syr. Chald. Arab. the word signifies defluxit decidit. It may, therefore, be rendered in Hiphil, defluere, vel decidere, fecit.

And the everlasting mountains were broken asunder;
 The eternal hills bowed down:
 The eternal paths § were trodden by him.

7 Thou sawest the tents of Cushan || in affliction:

The * curtains of the land of Midian trembled.

8 Was the anger of Jehovah kindled against the floods?

Was thy wrath against the floods?

Was thine indignation against the sea,

When thou didst ride on thine horses, and on thy chariots of deliverance?

§ Heb. were his.

|| Heb. under.

* Or, tent-curtains.

— the nations.—All who opposed his people, and particularly the seven nations.

— mountains—hills.—This may be understood of cleaving the rock for water, Ex. xvii. 6. and of God's wonderful display of his power on Sinai, when the mountain shook, Ex. xix. 18.

— eternal paths.—Literally, God occupied the summit of the eternal mount Sinai, and led his people over the eternal mountains in Arabia Petrea. And this sense is preferable to the figurative one; that his ways, or doings, are predetermined from everlasting.

7. Thou sawest.—"I saw," supposing the prophet to speak, seems harsh. And therefore I propose רָאִיתָ, Thou sawest, addressed to God, as v. 12—15.

— in affliction.—If חַרַת אֵין cannot signify in affliction, or, under the punishment of iniquity, we must have recourse to conjecture. Houbigant and Green adopt חָרַתִּים; which may signify struck with terror. "Sub peccato esse reddi potest, puniri, succumbere scelerum affectibus." Bahrdr.

— Cushan.—That is, some say, of Chus or Midian. Compare Numb. xii. 1. Exod. ii. 16, 21. Numb. xxxi. 7, 8, &c. Others think that Judg. iii. 10, vii. 1, &c., are referred to. Perhaps for חַרַת אֵין we should read עַי בְּרִישׁוֹן, and for חַרַת, בְּרִישׁוֹן.

"Thou sawest the terror of Og;

The tents of Bashan trembled;

The curtains of the land of Midian." Numb. xxi. 33. xxxi. 3.

— The curtains.—V. pelles, δερμας, vetustissimus liber majoribus literis exaratus. See the notes on this chapter in S. Quintus's edition of ὁ. That is, the coverings of their tents, made of skins.

8. — floods.—If the Red Sea only is referred to, and not Jordan, we should render, the floods, Ps. lxi. 6. Jon. ii. 3. Otherwise, translate rivers.

— and on thy chariots.—Many MSS. supply the vau twice, וַיַּכְבִּירוּךָ; and V. ὁ. Ar. Syr. represent it the beginning of the word.

- 9 Thy bow was made bare,
According to the oath unto the tribes even the promise.
 [Selah.]
- 10 Thou didst cleave the streams of the land :
 The mountains saw thee and were in pangs :
 The overflowing of waters passed away :
 The deep uttered its voice :
It lifted up its hands on high.
- 11 The sun and the moon stood still in their habitation :

God is described as a mighty warrior, attended by his chariots, even thousands of angels, Ps. lxxviii. 17.

9. — made bare.—Nudatione nudabatur, i. e. e theca educebatur, say some; and others, nudatione excitabatur. And Harmer informs us, from Sir I. Chardin, that the oriental bows were wont to be carried in a case hung to the girdle, ii. 513. If ער does not signify nudare, we may read הער from ערה. Houbigant adopts the reading of V. suscitans suscitabis, הער הער. And ó. MS. A. and ed Ald. have ευσεισταν ευσεισταν.

— the oath.—The preposition is very often understood in the poetical parts of scripture. Here ל may be supplied, if we read with the greatest number of MSS. שבועת, oaths. Sixteen MSS. read שבועת; which, in statu constructo, may signify the oath unto the tribes, as Ps. lxxxix. 39. ברית עבדך signifies the covenant with thy servant,

— the promise.—See אמר, Ps. lxxvii. 8.

The question, asked in a very bold and poetical manner, v. 8, is answered, v. 9; that God displayed his power to deliver his people, according to his faithful word, Gen. xxii. 16. xxvi. 3. Ps. cv. 9, 10. v. 13. l. 1, 2.

The passage through the Red Sea having been beautifully mentioned in an indirect manner, v. 8; the prophet continues his magnificent description of the Deity, v. 10, 11, 12; and adds the reason why such power was displayed, in the two first hemistichs of v. 13.

10. — the streams.—When Jordan was divided.

— The mountains.—ó. Ar. suggest another reading, עמים, the people. But see Ps. cxiv. 4.

— The overflowing.—The lower streams of Jordan, whose banks were then overflowed, passed away toward the Dead Sea, Josh. iii. 15, 16.

— voice.—The upper waves stood on an heap, not without roaring. See Green.

— on high.—לרם for לרם. So, Ps. xcvi. 8, we have, “The floods clap their hands.”

11. — and the moon.—V. ó. Ar. Syr. Chald, ten MSS. and two ed. read ירח, and the moon; and two other MSS. read so originally. But see

By their light thine arrows went abroad;
By their brightness, the lightning of thy spear.

12 In thine indignation didst thou march through the land;
In thy wrath didst thou † tread the nations.

13 Thou wentest forth for the deliverance of thy people,
Even for the deliverance of thine anointed ones.

Thou didst wound the head out of the house of the wicked:

Thou didst lay bare the foundation to the rock: [Selah.]

† Heb. thresh.

the omission of the connexive particle defended by instances, Boeth. Hieroz. 844, who refers to Exod. xxii. 30. Deut. xxiv. 17. 2 Chron. xviii. 30.

— in their habitation.—Perhaps וּבֵיתָם, or וּבֵיתָם; the ה and ב being easily mistaken. See Syr. Chald.

— By their light.—Or, in light—in brightness—furnished by their shining.

— thine arrows.—Calvin says that the arrows and spears of the Israelites are called those of God, under whose auspices his people fought. Or, the instruments of destruction which God employed, Josh. x. 11, may be metaphorically called his arrows and spear.

— lightning.—See Nahum iii. 3.

12. — tread.—Crush them, as corn by the drag.

13. — thine anointed ones.—Houbigant reads בְּשִׁמְחָתְךָ, and refers to ó. MS. A. and τοὺς ἐκλεκτοὺς σου in Montfaugon's Hex A MS. referred to in S. Quintus's edition and MS. Pachom. have also τοὺς χριστοὺς σου, and two Hebrew MSS. read plurally, and perhaps two more. See Ps. cv. 15. "Plur. χριστοὺς, MS. Copt." Mr. Woide. "Rather, for the salvation of thine anointed. For תּוֹ is often for the genitive case. See Nold. Or עָרַךְ may be a verb." Secker.

— Thou didst wound.—The ardour of the prophet having led him to begin in the midst of his subject, v. 3; he here returns to what passed in Egypt before the dividing of the Red Sea, the mention of which astonishing miracle he repeats, v. 15.

— out of the house.—Or, So that there should be no house. The prophet returns to the transactions in Egypt; and here refers to the destruction of the first-born.

— Thou didst lay bare.—The verb is in the infinitive, Laying bare. ó. V. Syr. and ed. v. in Montfaugon read עָרַךְ.

— to the rock.—Cappellus, Houbigant, and Green read עָרַךְ, „To the

- 14 Thou didst pierce with thy rod the head of his villages.
 They rushed as a whirlwind to scatter us :
 Their rejoicing was, as if they should devour the poor secretly.
- 15 Thou didst march through the sea with thine horses ;
Through the heap of mighty waters.
- 16 When I heard thy speech, my bowels trembled :
 At the voice my lips quivered :
 Rottenness entered into my bones, and I trembled in †
 my place ;
 Because I shall be brought to the day of trouble,

† Heb. under me.

rock on which the foundation rested." The death of the first-born is figuratively called the utter overthrow of the Egyptian houses.

14. — with thy rod.—Houbigant and Green read בַּמִּטָּר. Three MSS. read בַּמַּי, which resembles the conjecture proposed.

— of his villages.—Many MSS. five editions, and Keri, have פְּרוֹי. The first-born are called the heads of the Egyptian villages; and these God smote with the rod of his anger.

The word פְּרוֹ is derived from the Arab. segregavit, see Cast. lex ; because the houses are separated ; and not joined together as in cities.

Dr. Wheeler conjectures פְּרִישִׁי.

" His horsemen, when they came as a whirlwind to scatter us."

— to scatter us.—I follow Green's excellent conjecture, לְהַפִּצֵּץ.

— Their rejoicing.—Thirty MSS. read עֲלִיצוֹתָם, their rejoicings. The Egyptians rapidly followed the Israelites, and in imagination devoured a defenceless people. Whereas the Israelites entered the land of Canaan armed, and struck the inhabitants with great fear, Josh. iv. 13. v. 1.

16. — I heard.—See on v. 2.

— Rottenness.—The learned Schræder observes, that ḡ. Ar. Ch. Syr. read רָטַו, tremor, and that Lilienthal found this reading in the margin of a Hebrew MS. Diss. Philol. ad Cantic. Chabacuci, Groningæ. 1781.

— I trembled.—Palluit, et subito genua intremuere timore. Schræder. Ovid. Met. ii. 180.

— I shall be brought.—One MS. reads אָנָה, which may be the future in Niphal from נָחַה ducere ; a verb, indeed, not elsewhere used in that form. Or, we may read הָבִיאוּ, he hath brought me, from נָחַה, ducere ; or, he hath left me, from נָחַה, agreeably to Chald., where we have דִּשְׁבַּקְנִי, quoniam reli-

To go up captive unto the people who shall invade us with their troops,

- 17 But although the figtree shall not flourish,
And there shall be no produce in the vines;
The fruit of the olive shall fail,
And the fields shall not yield food;
The flocks shall be cut off from the fold,
And there shall be no herd in the stalls;
18 Yet will I rejoice in Jehovah,
I will exult in the God of my salvation.
19 The Lord Jehovah is my strength;

quit me. Syr. also expresses the pronoun I. רָחֵמֵי, et ostendit mihi. The prophet may speak in the person of the Jews who would be then living.

“If so be I might have rest in the day of affliction,
When he goeth up against his people, and harasseth them with his troops.”
Dr. Wheeler.

17. But although.—Or, For, and v. 18, But I—. תְּפִירָה, καρποφορησει, ó. quasi legissent תְּפִירָה. Non malè: nec enim floret ficus. Sed germinare etiam notat פִּירָה. Vid. Cast. in voc. Or, for; or, when.” Secker.

It is observed that some of the oldest versions never translate פִּירָה, flowering; and that it is distinguished from צִיץ, a flower, Numb. xvii. 8. And indeed it seems rather to signify shoots than flowers, Job. xiv. 9. Ps. xcii. 7 or 8. Prov. xi. 8. Isa. v. 24. lxvi. 14. Epict. l. i. c. 15. p. 86, says of a figtree, Αφες ανθησεν πρωτον, ειτα προβαλϋ τον καρπον, ειτα πεπανθη Secker.

—The fruit.—As פֶּרֶה signifies to produce, as a tree or a field, see Gen. i. 11, 12. Ps. i. 3, תְּפִירָה will naturally denote fruit. Hence ποιουν καρπον in the New Testament, Matt. iii. 10, &c.

—fields — yield.—Read עָשָׂה.

—shall be cut off.—One cut off; or, He, God, cut off. Or read, in the participle passive, כָּטוּעִים.

—stalls.—The Arabic root of the original word signifies fregit, comminuit, stramen. The places where the herds were fed with cut straw. “Bubile. Alludit Arabicum רֶפֶת scænum.” Boch. Hieroz. 305.

19. The Lord.—This verse is an imitation of Ps. xviii. 33. Twelve MSS. and one ed. transpose the two first words of this verse, and read אֲרֵכִי יְהוָה.

“Jehovah, my Lord, is my strength.”

Dr. Wheeler.

And he will make my feet like hind's feet,
 And will cause me to tread on mine high places.
 [To the chief musician on my stringed instruments.]

---

— cause me to tread.—Eight MSS. read as in the psalm, עָמִידִי, “Thou shalt cause me to return with strength and swiftmess from the land of my captivity, and to possess its fastnesses. See Deut. xxxiii. 29. xxxii. 13.

The state of the land during the captivity may be described, v. 17; or the prophet may declare that such circumstances should not shake his confidence in God. And v. 19. he may speak in the person of his people, who were to be restored.

— chief musician.—From נָצַח, præfuit, superavit. Cast. lex. See 2 Chron. ii. 18.

— my stringed instruments.—From נָנָה, pulsare musice. 6. Ar. Syr. read his stringed instruments; which reading I prefer, as this seems a Jewish annotation. “My may be the king’s word, and this his direction. Lowth.” Secker.

THE BOOK
OF O B A D I A H.

---

CHAPTER I.

- 1 THE vision of Obadiah. Thus saith the Lord Jehovah concerning Edom.

We have heard a * report from Jehovah.

And an ambassador is sent among the nations :

Saying :

“ Rise ye : and let us rise up against her to war.”

- 2 Behold I have made thee small among the nations :
Thou art greatly despised.

* Heb. a hearing.

---

CHAP. I. 1.—Obadiah.—I suppose that he prophesied between the taking of Jerusalem, which happened before Christ 587, and the destruction of Idumea by Nebuchadnezzar, which latter event probably took place a very few years after the former. Usher places the destruction of Jerusalem in the 588th year before Christ, and the siege of Tyre in the year 585 before Christ. This siege lasted thirteen years; in which interval Usher says that the Sidonians, Moabites, Ammonites, and Idumeans, seem to have been subdued by the Babylonians. Josephus says that Nebuchadnezzar began to besiege Tyre in the seventh year of his reign; but Cappellus proposes reading the seventeenth. Blair places the taking of Tyre in the thirty third year of Nebuchadnezzar.

— sent.—Jer. xlix. 14. we have שָׁמָעָה. Compare the passages.

2. — small—despised.—Compare Jer. xlix. 15. Idumea was a country if compared with the dominions of flourishing states, very moderate in extent, and inconveniently situated. “The land of Moab occupied the eastern part of the sea of Sodom. Next to this country Idumea turned towards the south; though it did not border on all Canaan southward, but

- 3 The pride of thine heart hath deceived thee.
 He that dwelleth in the clefts of the rock, in his † high habitation,
 Hath said in his heart, Who shall bring me down to the ground?
- 4 Though thou exalt thyself as the eagle,
 And though thou set thy nest among the stars;
 Thence will I bring thee down, saith Jehovah.
- 5 If thieves had come unto thee,

† Heb. the height of his habitation.

only on its eastern part. The rest lay open to Arabia Petraea, by which Idumea was situated southward, made a part of it, and went far into it." Vit. on Isa. xxxiv. 6. "The country of the Idumeans was properly circumscribed by that mountainous tract which enclosed Canaan to the south, near the sea of of Sodom, as appears from the whole sacred history; whence mount Hor, situated there, is said to have been on the edge, border, or extremity, of the land of Edom, Numb. xx. 23. It is true that, about the time of Solomon, the Idumeans occupied some part of the Elanitic gulph of the Red Sea; whence a tract of that coast was called the land of Edom, 1 Kings ix. 26. But all the prophets who speak of Edom about these times restrain their lands to mount Seir, in the tract which I have marked out." Vit. on Isa. xxi. 1. However, that part of Idumea partook of the qualities of the land of Canaan appears from Gen. xxvii. 39. compared with v. 28; and Numb. xx. 17. the fields and vineyards of the Idumeans are mentioned.

3. — He that dwelleth.—שָׁכֵן, with the yod paragogic, occurs also in the parallel place, Jer. xlix. 16. See Præl. Heb. iii. p. 34.

— clefts of the rock.—There were many habitable caverns, difficult of access, in the mountainous country of Idumea.

— in his high habitation.—ó. Vulg. מְנַבְיָהּ לְשִׁבְתָּהּ ut alibi מְנַבְיָהּ לְשִׁבְתָּהּ ut alibi Secker.

If we read שִׁבְתְּךָ and בְּלִבְךָ, and V. has in corde tuo, we render :

"O thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock, in thine habitation;
 Who sayest in thine heart," &c.

4. — eagle.—Which builds in high rocks.

— thou set.—Houbigant reads תָּשִׁים with the versions. "ó. Syr. Ch. Vulg. quasi legissent תָּשִׁים. Sed vide omnino Num. xxiv. 21." Secker. שָׁם may be rendered is set, positus est. See Job xx. 4. If we suppose this prophet the imitator, he has finely improved Jeremiah xlix. 16, in the hemistich before us.

If robbers by night ;

Would they not have stolen till they had enough ?

If grape gatherers had come unto thee,

Would they not have left gleanings of grapes ?

6 How art thou cut off !

How is Esau searched out !

How are his hidden things inquired after !

7 All the men of thy confederacy

Have brought thee to the border :

The men ‡ who were at peace with thee, and who ate bread with thee,

Have deceived thee, and have prevailed against thee :

They have spread a snare under thee.

‡ Heb. of thy peace, of thy bread.

5. If thieves.—Compare Jer. xlix. 9 ; where, I think, we should render :

“ If grape gatherers had come unto thee,

Would they not have left gleanings of grapes ?

If thieves by night, would they not have destroyed till they had enough ?”

6. How art thou cut off.—This clause is usually thrown into a parenthesis after the words, if robbers by night, in v. 5. Le Clerc places it at the beginning of v. 5. It may very well make a part of v. 6. Thieves and robbers would have stolen till they had satisfied themselves. Grape gatherers would have left gleanings after them. But the Babylonian invaders have destroyed thee utterly. See a like opposition, Jer. xlix. 10.

— searched out.—ó. Ar. Syr. Chald. read נחפש. See a similar passage, Isa. xlv. 3. “ Professor Michaelis proposes נחששו, made bare, from Jer. xlix. 10.” Mr. Woide.

7. — the border.—Thy own border, where they delivered thee into the hand of thy enemy. Or, to the border of their once friendly country, whither thou hadst fled for refuge ; thus dismissing thee ignominiously.

— who ate bread.—Enmity was not to be expected from such, according to the customs of those countries. Syr. reads ולחמך, “ the men of thy peace and of thy bread.” ó. MS. Pachom. render οἱ συνεσθιοῦντες σοι ἄθην. “ Ante לחמך repetendum videtur ἀπο κοινοῦ אכש.” Moerlius. “ Ante לחמך omittunt ó, et sane potuit a præcedenti לחמך oriri.—Etiam אכלי—facile potuit inter præcedentem לחמך et sequentem ל absorberi ; vel forte legendum לחמך, nam לחם comedere notat.” Secker.

— a snare.—V. ó. Ar. Syr. Chald. have this idea ; and seem to have read נצור, for נזר. “ To place a wound under a person,” seems a harsh expression.

- There is none understanding in thee.*
- 8 Shall I not in that day, saith Jehovah,
Destroy the wise men from Edom,
And understanding from the mount of Esau?
- 9 Shall not thy mighty men, O Teman, be dismayed;
That every one may be cut off from the mount of Esau?
- 10 For slaughter, and for § oppression, of thy brother Jacob,
Shame shall cover thee, and thou shalt be cut off for ever.
- 11 In the day when thou stoodest on the other side;
In the day when strangers carried away captive his forces.
And when foreigners entered into his gates,
And when they cast lots on Jerusalem;
Thou also wast as one of them.
- 12 But thou shouldest not have looked with delight on the day of thy brother, on the day when he became a stranger;
Nor have rejoiced over the sons of Judah, in the day
when they were destroyed:
Nor have magnified thy words in the day of distress.
- 13 Thou shouldest not have entered into the gate of my people, in the day of their calamity:

§ Or, violence against.

— understanding.—For which the Idumeans were remarkable. See Jer. xlix. 7.

8. Shall I not.—"דלוזא omittunt ó. Syr." Seeker. It is also wanting in MS. 96.

— the mount of Esau.—Mount Seir.

10. For slaughter.—The versions point thus. This conduct of the Idumeans is referred to, Amos i. 11, where see the note.

— for ever.—See Ezek. xxxv. 9. They never recovered possession of Arabia Petræa. See on Amos i. 12.

11. — his gates.—שערי, many MSS. some editions, Keri, and the versions.

12. — thou shouldest not have looked.—That the future has this force, see Gen. xlv. 8. Lev. x. 18, 19. Numb. xxxv. 28. Ex. xxii. 2. Jonah iv. 11. So Æn. xi. 112. Nec veni, nisi fata locum sedemque dedissent. Pro Nec venissem. Servius.

- Nor have looked with delight on his affliction, in the day of his calamity :
- Nor have put forth thine hand on his substance, in the day of his calamity :
- 14 Nor have stood in the cross-way, to cut off those of his
that escaped :
- Nor have delivered up those of his that remained, in the day of distress.
- 15 For the day of Jehovah is near upon all the nations.
As thou hast done, it shall be done unto thee :
Thy dealing shall return upon thine own head.
- 16 For as ye have drunken upon mine holy mountain,
All the nations round about shall drink :
They shall drink and shall swallow down; and they shall be as though they had not been.
- 17 But upon mount Sion shall be || those that escape :
and it * shall be holy :
- And the house of Jacob shall possess their possessions.
- 18 And the house of Jacob shall be a fire,

|| Heb. an escaping.

* Heb. holiness.

13. — thine hand.—I think that יד should be supplied with Chald. and that the true reading is, יד יד. There is a like omission, 2 Sam. vi. 6, where יד, or יד, the hand, or, his hand, is supplied by all the versions, and by Chald. Another reading may be יד אל יד. See Judg. v. 26. For the phrase see Gen. iii. 22. xxii. 10, 12. See Le Clerc. יד precedes.

14. — cross-way.—The root in Arabic signifies, divisa se obtulit via. Cast. lex.

15. — Thy dealing.—See Ps. cxxxvii. 8. The manner in which thou hast served us.

16. — as ye have drunken.—The prophet addresses his own people, to whom he uttered this prophecy.

— round about.—ô. Ar. read יד, wine; which reading is noted by Cappellus and Le Clerc, and adopted by Houbigant. But twenty-seven MSS. and eight editions read יד, round about, which suits the place extremely well. See Jer. xxv. 9.

17. — those that escape.—Here the return from Babylon is foretold.

— their possessions.—"בניהם pro participio habent ô. Vulg. Ch. Syr.; recte. Confer Jer. xlix. 2." Secker. The rendering of the versions is "those who possessed them." But it seems more accurate to render "those who drove them out."

And the house of Joseph a flame ;
 And the house of Esau for stubble :
 And they shall kindle them and devour them ;
 And there shall not be any remaining of the house of Esau.

For Jehovah hath spoken it.

- 19 And they of the south shall possess the mountain of Esau ;
 And they of the plain, the Philistines :
 And they shall possess the field of Ephraim,
 And the field of Samaria :
 And Benjamin shall possess Gilead.

- 20 And the captivity of this host of the sons of Israel,
 Which is among the Canaanites, shall possess unto Sarepta.

And the captivity of Jerusalem, which is in Sepharad,
 Shall possess the cities of the south.

- 21 And deliverers shall go up to mount Sion
 To † rule the mount of Esau :
 And the kingdom shall be Jehovah's.

† Heb. judge.

18. — for stubble.—This refers to the conquest of Edom by the Maccabees, 1 Macc. v. 3, 4, 5, 65. 2 Macc. x. 15—23, and again by Hyrcanus, Jos. Ant. XIII. ix. 1. p. 659. Haverc.

19. — they of the plain.—From Eleutheropolis to the sea. See Le Clerc. Zech. vii. 7. Jer. xvii. 26.

— Gilead.—Edom lay to the south ; the Philistines to the west ; Ephraim to the north ; and Gilead to the east. Those who returned from Babylon were to extend themselves every way. ó. read, “ And Benjamin, and Gilead.”

20. — this host.—Three MSS. read החיל. But Houbigant ingeniously conjectures that we should read יגלוהו הלוה, And this captivity.

— among the Canaanites.—Houbigant and Chald. read בכנענים.

— Sepharad.—Lightfoot's conjecture, that this was part of Edom, is the most probable of any that I have met with. Those who were captives among the Canaanites should possess the country of the Canaanites ; and those whom the Edomites had enslaved, should possess the cities of their masters. See Mr. Lowth's Commentary.

21. — deliverers.—The Maccabees. ó. read גזעיהם, servati, meaning the Jews who were to be restored.

THE BOOK

OF

H A G G A I.

---

CHAPTER I.

- 1 IN the second year of Darius the king, in the sixth month, on the first day of the month, came the word of Jehovah by * Haggai the prophet unto Zerubbabel the son of † Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and unto Joshua the son of Josedech the high priest, saying :
- 2 Thus saith Jehovah God of hosts, saying :
This people have said, The time is not come,
Even the time that the House of Jehovah should be built.
- 3 But the word of Jehovah hath ‡ come
By § Haggai the prophet, saying ;
- 4 Is it time for you, O ye people,

* Heb. by the hand of.      † Otherwise, Salathiel.      ‡ Heb. been.
§ Heb. By the hand of.

CHAP. I. 1. — Haggai.—The first prophet sent to the Jews, after their return from the Babylonish captivity.

— Darius.—The son of Hystaspes, king of Persia. Blair places the second year of his reign 520 years before Christ.

— Zerubbabel.—Son of Salathiel, son of Jechoniah, king of Judah, Matt. i. 12. “זר. לעגור. עיפון פרס. ה.” Secker.

— Joshua.—Son of Josedech, son of Seraiah, high priest when Jerusalem was taken, and slain at Riblah, 1 Chron. vi. 14. 2 Kings xxv. 18—21.

4. — O ye.—Houbigant conjectures אנה. An venit vobis tempus? &c. Possibly ענה, now. “An vestrum tempus est, ut domos vestros contabulatas habitetis? Sana sunt omnia. Solent nempe Hebræi in sermone concitatori repetere pronomem ejusdem personæ quæ præcedit. Confer Gen. xxiv. 27. Deut. xviii. 14, &c.” Dathius.

To dwell in cieled houses :

And shall this House lie waste ?

5 And now thus saith Jehovah God of hosts :

|| Consider your ways.

6 Ye have sown much, and the increase is little :

Ye eat, but not till * ye be full :

Ye drink, but not † in plenty :

Ye clothe yourselves, but not ‡ so as to be warm thereby.

And he that earneth wages, earneth § them for a bag with || holes.

7 Thus saith Jehovah, God of hosts :

* Consider your ways.

8 Go up to the mount, and bring wood,

And build the House ; that I may have pleasure therein, And be glorified ; saith Jehovah.

9 Ye look for much, and behold it cometh to little :

And when ye have brought it home, I have blown upon it.

|| Heb. Set your heart on.

* Heb. to fulness.

† Heb. to.

‡ Heb. to warmth.

§ Heb. wages.

|| Heb. pierced through.

* Heb. Set your heart on.

— cieled.—ᾠροφωμένοις, Aquila. Laqueatis, Vulg.

— waste.—Its foundations had been laid perhaps fifteen years before, in the second month of the second year after the return of the Jews from Babylon, Ezra iii. 8.

6. — the increase.—Literally, id quod proveniens est. But the versions seem to have read הביא, ye have brought in.

— Ye eat.—The verb, and also אכלו and לכבוש, and בנה, v. 9, are in the infinitive mood, used as a noun-substantive. There is to eat, or, There is eating.

— for a bag with holes.—They are soon required of him. The present scarcity demands them.

8. — the mount.—Mount Moriah, on which the temple was built.

Jon. conscendite montes. Capiendum est collective. Nam de Libano aliisque montibus petenda erant ligna, unde templum extrueretur. Bahrdt.

9. — brought it home.—This line may very well be translated,

“ And ye have brought an offering to the House, and I have snuffed at it.”

Why? saith Jehovah God of hosts.

Because of mine House, which lieth waste ;

And ye run every man to build his own house.

10 Therefore over you

The heavens are stayed from dew ;

And the earth is stayed from her produce.

11 And I have called for a drought upon the land, and upon the mountains ;

And upon the corn, and upon the choice wine, and upon the oil ;

And upon whatever the ground bringeth forth ;

And upon man, and upon † beast ;

And upon all the labour of the hands.

12 Then Zerubbabel the son of ‡ Shealtiel, and Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, and all the residue of the people, hearkened unto the voice of Jehovah their God, and unto the words of Haggai the prophet, according as Jehovah their God had sent him : and the people

13 feared before Jehovah. Then spake Haggai, the messenger of Jehovah, by a message from Jehovah, unto the people, saying :

† Heb. cattle.

‡ Otherwise Salathiel.

See ch. ii. 14. Ezra iii. 3, 8, 10, 11. v. 2, and the verb, נפח, Mal. i. 13, where Houbigant has rejicitis. It seems to be a metaphor taken from beasts when they refuse provender. According to our English version of the text before us, נפח must signify to blast, or, blow away.

10. — over you the heavens.—For your sake the heaven. Secker.

כטל. Sic ó. Syr. Vulg. Ch. ; cum tamen alias semper כלא activam coercendi significationem obtineat, quin et in hoc ipso versiculo. Videtur ortum a כ praecedente. Secker.

11. — the mountains.—See 2 Sam. i. 21. The clouds, which usually rest on them, supply them with moisture.

— whatever the ground.—ó. MS. Pachom. read και επι παντα όσα with Syr. Ar. Chald. fourteen MSS. and another in the margin.

“And upon every thing which the ground bringeth forth.”

12. — unto the words.—שמע is used with על, Jer. xxiii. 16. It is also used with אל, את, and ב.

כאשר. Videtur Syr. legisse אשר. Secker.

I am with you, saith Jehovah.

- 14 And Jehovah stirred up the spirit of Zerubbabel the son of § Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and the spirit of Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, and the spirit of all the residue of the people; and they came and || did work in the House of Jehovah Lord of hosts,
- 15 their God: on the four and twentieth day of the month, in the sixth month, in the second year of Darius the king.

CHAPTER II.

- 1 IN the seventh month, on the one and twentieth day of the month, came the word of Jehovah by * Haggai the
- 2 prophet, saying: Speak now to Zerubbabel, the son of † Shealtiel, governor of Judah; and to Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest; and to [all] the residue of the people; saying:
- 3 Who is there left among you
That saw this House
In its former glory?
And what do ye see it now?
Is it not as nothing in your eyes?
- 4 Yet now be strong, O Zerubbabel, saith Jehovah:

§ Otherwise Salathiel.

|| Or, executed.

* Heb. the hand of.

† Otherwise Salathiel.

CHAP. I. 2. — all the residue.—So ó. Ar. Syr. and one MS.

3. — left.—Seventy years elapsed from the destruction of the former temple, before Christ, 587, to its complete restoration, about four years after the time when this prophecy was delivered. See Ezra vi. 15 and Blair's tables.

— as nothing.—An elegant Hebraism. Sicut illud [sc. templum posterius], sic nihil. See Nold. כ, Sec. 17. Ten MSS. and four editions read בנייהו. Josephus says that this temple, through the poverty of its builders, was inferior to the former. Ant. XI. iv. 2.

And be strong, O Joshua, son of Josedech, the high priest :

And be strong, O all ye people of the land, saith Jehovah ;

And work : for I am with you,

Saith Jehovah God of hosts ;

5 According to the word which I covenanted with you
When ye came out of Egypt :

And my Spirit remaineth among you : Fear ye not.

6 For thus saith Jehovah God of hosts :

Yet once more, in a short time,

I will shake the heavens and the earth,

5. According to.—See אֲתָא, Nold. Sec. 19. God promised to be with Moses, Exod. iii. 12. See ch. i. 13.

— remaineth.—By my prophets. “Stood.” Secker.

6. — Yet once.—I suppose בָּעֵת, which is often feminine, see Eccl. vii. 23, to be understood after אַחֶרֶת : adhuc unâ vice : and likewise עַתָּה, tempus, which is sometimes feminine, see Joel iii. 1, to be understood after נֶעֱשֶׂה : parum temporis hoc tempus est. When the law was given on mount Sinai, the whole mountain quaked greatly, Exod. xix. 18.

אַחֶרֶת is ten times semel in Nold. for בָּעֵת אַחֶרֶת, which occurs several times.—עַתָּה נֶעֱשֶׂה has always וְ after it, and signifies, Yet a little time, and, Ezek. xvii. 4. Isa. x. 25. xxix. 17. Hos. i. 4. Jer. ii. 33. Ps. xxxvii. 10. No word, I believe, is elsewhere interposed as here, between עַתָּה and נֶעֱשֶׂה, or between נֶעֱשֶׂה and וְ. אַחֶרֶת agrees with עַתָּה understood. Heb. xii. 26. translate אַחֶרֶת, עַתָּה, ἔτι ἀπαξ, and omits נֶעֱשֶׂה אַחֶרֶת. With this description of time compare רַעַת קָטָן, Isa. liv. 7. Secker.

— I will shake the heavens.—The political or the religious revolutions, which were to be effected in the world, or both, are here referred to. Compare v. 21, 22. Matt. xxiv. 29. Heb. xii. 26, 27, 28. The political ones began in the overthrow of the Persian monarchy by Alexander, within two centuries after this prediction ; and if the Messiah's kingdom be meant, which is my opinion, this was erected in somewhat more than five centuries after the second year of Darius ; a short period of time when compared with that which elapsed from the creation to the giving of the law, or from the giving of the law to the coming of the Messiah's kingdom.

It must be observed that the word אַחֶרֶת, once, has a clear sense, if understood, of the evangelical age ; for many political revolutions succeeded, as the conquest of Darius Codomannus, and the various fortunes of Alexander's successors, but only one great and final religious revolution.

And the sea and the dry land :

7 And I will shake all the nations ;

And the † desire of all the nations shall come ;

And I will fill this House with glory ;

† Or, desirable things.

7. — the desire of all the nations.—I think that the true reading is חמדות ; and that the vau has been omitted because it was supplied by a point. Thus ó. render τα εκλεκτα, and Ar. electa, exquisita, see חיר, optionem fecit, in Cast. lex. The word is used plurally, with the force of the singular, like deliciæ or spes in Latin, Dan. ix. 23, where five MSS. read חמדות for חמדות, and V. ó. Ar. rightly supply איש, vir desideriorum, ch. x. 3, 11, 19. Cantic. v. 16. we have ויכלו מחמדים, et ipse totus desideria, for desiderabilis. Catullus uses amores of a person :

“ Acmen Septimius, suos amores, Tenens———.”

And Cicero thus addresses Terentia and Tulliola : Valete, mea desideria. Ad Fam. xiv. 2.

However, there is a difficulty in applying חמדות to a person ; and we should expect to find in the text ויבאה חמדת, et veniet desiderium. If this difficulty could be surmounted, it is easy and natural language to say that he, towards whom the desire of all nations ought to be turned, should come. Compare 1 Sam. ix. 20, and see the parallel prophecy, Mal. iii. 1 and Luke ii. 10. Syr. seems to have read ויבאו, that they may bring, רגתא, cupiditatem, the desirable things of all nations ; the gold and silver, the αυθηματα, Luke xxi. 5, with which this temple was enriched. Chald. follows the Hebrew in its ungrammatical form, וייתו חמדות, et venient desiderium.

Houbigant's note is “ Et advenient pretiosa quæque omnium gentium, quæ templum decorabunt muneribus maximis, ut in summo honore sit apud omnes gentes : quo in honore fuisse sub Onia Sacerdote, narratur in libro Machabæorum : propterea Deus hæc addit, meum est argentum et aurum.” “ Explicat hæc cel. Mich. de donariis gentilium templo Hierosolymitano illatis ; quod etiam ab aliis factum est, cum Judæis tum Christianis.” Babrdt. Apparatus criticus. Lips. 1775. The objections to this interpretation are, the great solemnity of the introduction, v. 6, and the beginning of v. 7, and the impropriety of the language, “the desirable things of all nations shall come :” when it should rather be said, “the desirable things of all nations shall be brought.” See Bishop Chandler's Defence, &c. in loc.

חמדה is used twelve times as a genitive after land, or vessels, or some

Saith Jehovah God of hosts.

8 The silver is mine, and the gold is mine;

desirable thing. The three remaining times it is used are 2 Chron. xxi. 20. 1 Sam. ix. 20. Dan. xi. 37, where a Deity so called seems to be meant; and if so, a person is called חמדות in this one place of Daniel, but no where else unless in the text. חמדות is used nine times in all, and sometimes written חמדות. Daniel is twice called איש חמדות, and once barely חמדות; and these are the only times it is applied to a person. When applied to things, it is always a genitive governed by those things, except Dan. xi. 38, 43, where it stands absolutely, for desirable things,—חמדות is used several times, of things and of persons. All these words, when used of things, commonly denote things of value or price. I think the word here should (be pointed so as to) be read חמדות, which is no where in Scripture; or חמדות, which is never found without one ו elsewhere, because of the plural verb. Bishop Chandler thinks that בא cannot be used of things, but persons only. Yet it is used of days perpetually, and of the ark, 2 Sam. vi. 9; and of mounts coming against Jerusalem, Jer. xxxii. 24; and of trees coming to adorn the temple, Isa. lx. 13; and probably of the wealth of the gentiles, v. 5, for compare lxi. 6; and of silver and gold coming into the temple, Josh. vi. 19. And so μητι ο λυχνος ερχεται, Mark iv. 21. Why doth incense come to me? Jer. vi. 20.—חמדות, and all the words of that root, signify delight as much as desire. So that חמדות כל הנדב may be translated, deliciæ humani generis. כבוד sometimes signifies wealth, Gen. xxxi. 1; compare xiii. 2. Esth. v. 11.—But no other כבוד is said to fill the temple but ידוה כבוד, which filled the tabernacle, Ex. xl. 34, 35; Solomon's temple, 1 Kings viii. 10, 11; Ezekiel's, Ezek. xlv. 4.—Indeed ידוה is not added here; and so the meaning is not quite determinate, especially considering what precedes and follows. But still this doth naturally imply much more than wealth, though not necessarily. And the Lord was to come suddenly to his temple, and, or with, the Angel of the covenant, in whom, or which, they delighted, Mal. iii. 1. Now the second temple had not this Lord's presence, this ידוה כבוד, unless in Christ. But still the glory of the Lord in the temple means in O. T. only the cloud, which was the symbol of his presence." Secker.

—fill—with glory.—By the presence of the Messiah. Compare Ex. xl. 34. 1 Kings viii. 11.

8. The silver is mine.—Predictions of spiritual and temporal blessings are often blended together in the prophetic writings. We have here a reference to the contributions towards the rebuilding of the temple, Ezra vi. 8. vii. 15—20; and to the donations by which it was to be adorned, 2 Macc. iii. 2. Jos. Ant. XII. ii. 4. XV. xi. 3. B. J. V. xiii. 6. Bahrdt explains the passage thus, "Non opus est ut ornetis hoc templum argento

Saith Jehovah God of hosts.

9 Greater shall be the glory et auro. Ornamentum novi templi supra commemoratum sufficit ad augendum ejus splendorem. Nam ubi Deus aliquid suum esse dicit, se eo indigere negat. Ps. l. 10."

Bishop Chandler after Michaelis, who learnt it from others, see Pol. Syn., cites Ps. l. 9—12 to show that the manner of speaking here is to prove that God made no account of silver and gold, and intended a glory of another nature for this latter house. Now in both places he asserts his property; and proves from it, Ps. l., that he wanted not the Jews to give him sacrifices: but why may he not still prove from it here, that he can give them ornaments for their temple? And what other purpose do these words so properly serve? Secker.

9. Greater shall be the glory.—Notwithstanding the former temple had the Urim and Thummim, the ark containing the two tables of the law, the pot of manna, Aaron's rod that budded, and the cloud which overshadowed the mercy-seat, and was the symbol of the divine presence; yet the glory of this latter house shall be greater by the appearance, doctrines, and miracles of Christ. Some interpret this passage of the richer decorations in the latter temple; but it may well be doubted, whether the second temple could exceed that of Solomon in the splendour and costliness of its ornaments. See 1 Kings vi. 18, 20, 21, 22, 28, 30, 32, 35. vii. 13—50, compared with Ezra i. 7—11. vi. 5. See also 1 Chron. xxii. 14. 1 Kings x. 21, 27. The presumption is, that the former temple was more magnificent and sumptuous in its furniture than the latter; though inferior to it in point of magnitude. Prideaux values the gold with which the Holy of Holies alone was overlaid at £4,320,000 sterling. P. 1. B. iii. Ann. 534. Cyrus 3. However, Josephus says of the temple destroyed by Titus, that it was the most wonderful work which he had ever seen or heard of, in point of building, magnitude, costliness in every particular, and splendour in respect to its holy things. B. J. VI. iv. 8.

Μεγαλή εσταίῃ ἡ δόξα του οικου τουτου ἢ εσχάτη ὑπερ την πρωτην. ó. gloria domus istius novissimæ quam primæ. Vulg. But Chald. Syr. may mean either. Our translation follows the Vulgate. And indeed, Ezra iii. 12, הבית הראשון is opposed to הבית החדש. But ch. v. 11—13, the house that was built, destroyed, and rebuilt, is made the same house. Therefore this ninth verse should be understood, not of the glory of a former and latter house, but a former and latter glory of a house considered as the same house. And ó. have translated rightly. None of the Jews seem to have hit on this, unless perhaps R. Isaac, l. i. c. 34. And I think not even he. For he says, "Some think the second house had at last more wealth than the first, which doth not appear to be true; and it stood ten years longer."

Of this latter House than of the former,
 Saith Jehovah God of hosts :
 And in this place will I give peace,

But it had not the presence of God, nor peace. And therefore this is meant of a future temple delineated by Ezekiel xliii. &c., where v. 2, &c. the glory of the Lord entering into it is described particularly. But, as the prophet speaks not of two houses, but two glories, the latter glory may be yet to come, if עַד אֵחָד קֵעַס הוּא will permit it. But extending this to Christ's time is a great deal, and to a time yet future, quite too much.—Abarbanel, in Hulsii Theol. Jud. p. 517, interprets the passage of a third temple to be built hereafter. Secker.

Still it seems to me that the Vulgate and English versions give the natural sense of the Hebrew words. There are many such passages as Isa. ii. 13, 14 ; where the emphatic ה is prefixed to the substantive and its adjective. The translation of ה adopted by the Archbishop, seems to require בבִּיר [אֶת הַבִּיר] הָאֶחָד בֵּית הוּא.

— this latter House.—A question has arisen whether the words before us, and the expression this House, v. 7, can be applied to the temple which Herod rebuilt, Jos. Ant. XV. xi. 3. John ii. 20. It seems to me that, supposing the Messiah to be prophesied of, v. 7, 9, greater precision in the language would not have been used ; for this would have led the Jews to expect a demolition of the temple then building, and the erection of another in its stead. And, as Herod's rebuilding of the temple was a gradual work of forty-six years, John ii. 20, no nominal distinction between Zerubbabel's and Herod's temple seems to have been ever made by the Jews ; but, in popular language, these structures, though really different, were spoken of as the same. On one occasion, Josephus himself mentions only two buildings of the temple ; a former, in the time of Solomon, and a latter, in that of Cyrus. B. J. VI. iv. 8.

To illustrate this, I have extracted the quotations made by Constantine L'Empereur, Cod. Middoth. Præf. 4to. Lugd. Bat. 1630. In Gemara, fol. 32, R. Joseph speaks only of the first and second temple, both which were to be destroyed. R. Nathan adds, The third will remain for ever. Maimonides, when he recounts those things which were always wanted in the temple after the Babylonish captivity, makes mention of the second temple. In Chronicon Hebræum magnum et parvum, Vespasian is said to have destroyed the temple 440 years after it was rebuilt. Rabbi Alschech, in his commentary on Haggai, often inculcates this ; and calls the House which the Jews expect under the Messiah the third House. Agreeably to this Selden asserts, Non templum habebatur aliquod tertium, sed primum tantum et secundum, i. 1738. de Synedr. L. III. c. iii. Sec. 8. Fol. Lond.

— peace.—Temporal ; for some time, in a good degree, and compara-

Saith Jehovah God of hosts.

10 In the four and twentieth day of the ninth month, in the tively, see Zech. viii. 10; but the means of spiritual peace were to be given abundantly.

After I had finished these notes, as to their scope and substance, I received the following valuable communication from the learned and respectable Dr. Heberden; which will give the reader great assistance in determining the sense of the prophecy now under discussion.

“Haggai, ch. ii. v. 3, 7, 8, 9.—and in this place I will give peace [of mind for a possession, to every one who forwards the building for the sake of restoring this temple. So the Seventy add, having found it probably in their copy.]

“The prophet in these verses encourages the Jews just returned from captivity to rebuild their temple, and assures them that the splendour and riches of this new building should be very great, and that it should be far from being as nothing in the eyes of those who recollected the grandeur of the first temple. This is the obvious meaning of the words, and no other perhaps would ever have been thought of, if the Vulgate Latin had not translated חמדת כל הגוים, ‘Desideratus cunctis gentibus:’ ‘He that is desired of all nations,’ instead of, ‘the desirable,’ or ‘precious things of all nations;’ which is the true translation of these words; and this sense of them is to be found in all the old versions, the Vulgate excepted. But the Vulgate happened to be the only one which was understood and read for several ages; and hence arose the opinion that Christ must be the person desired of all nations, and that he would add glory to this temple by his presence.

“In deference to this opinion, the English translators of the bible have followed the Vulgate against the plain construction of the Hebrew text, and have differed from all the other old translations.

“The learned father Houbigant, who, as a Romanist, is ready to pay all due regard to the Vulgate, acknowledges that חמדת, being the nominative case to a plural verb יבאו, must be a plural noun, and ought to be translated ‘precious things;’ that it is limited to this meaning by the mention of silver and gold which follows, and that nothing more was intended by the prophet than the common richness of the building and its furniture.

“It appears from 1 Maccabees i. 21, 22, that the second temple was in fact very richly* ornamented; and, in the twenty-third verse of the same

* “The vessels of the first temple, which had been taken away by Nebuchadnezzar, were restored by Cyrus; presents, according to Ezra, ch. i., were made to the second temple by Artaxerxes and his courtiers, as well as by the Jews themselves; the yearly increase of gold, and silver, and precious stones, circulating in the hands of men, the constant improvement of arts, the increase of trade second year of Darius, came the word of Jehovah § by 11 Haggai the prophet : saying : Thus saith Jehovah God 12 of hosts, Ask now the law from the priests, saying : If a man carry holy flesh in the skirt of his garment ; and with his skirt touch bread, or pottage, or wine, or oil, or any food ; shall it be holy ? And the priests answered

§ Heb. by the hand of.

chapter, Antiochus is said to have taken away the silver and the gold, and the precious vessels ; which, if the book had been written in Hebrew, would probably have been the very words mentioned by Haggai.

“It is observable that this Hebrew word is found in Daniel xi. 43, joined with gold and silver, and is translated in the English bible, precious things. Isaiah likewise, lxiv. 11, mentions the destruction of the temple, and together with it נְחִמְתִּי, all our, or its, pleasant things, nearly the same word with that of Haggai. See also Joel iii. [Heb. iv.] 5, and Nahum ii. 9. [Heb. x.]

“Besides, according to Josephus, it is not true that the Messiah’s presence ever added to the glory of the temple which was building in the time of Haggai ; for the Jewish historian assures us, in the plainest words, that, before Christ was born, this temple was pulled down, and the foundations of it were taken away by Herod the Great, who built an entire new one in its room : his words are Ανελων δε τους αρχαιους θεμελιους, και καταβαλομενος ετερους, επ’ αυτων τον ναον ηγειρε. Joseph. Antiq. l. 15. 11. 3. ‘[Herod] after he had taken away the old foundations, and laid others, upon them erected the temple.’ Now, if there be any difference between rebuilding and repairing, if Haggai’s temple differed from Solomon’s, and was a second temple, then Herod’s was not the same with Haggai’s, but was truly a third temple. [The learned Mr. Peirce on the Heb. xii. 26, p. 189, 2d. edit, allows this to be a third temple.]

“The most plausible objections to the Christian religion have been made out of the weak arguments which have been advanced in its support ; and can there be a weaker argument than that which sets out with doing violence to the original text in order to form a prophecy, and then contradicts the express testimony of the best historian of those times, in order to show that it has been accomplished ?”

12. — shall it be holy ?—So the priest, by bringing oblations to my altar, ch. i. 9, did not sanctify you.

among the Jews during the time of the second temple, and their numerous settlements in various parts of the world, from which they could send all sorts of costly presents to Jerusalem ; all these considerations make it probable that the second temple was in no respect inferior to the first, except in the want of the ark and the shechinah.”

- 13 and said, No. Then said Haggai: If a man unclean by a dead body touch any of these things, shall it be unclean? And the priests answered and said, It shall be unclean. Then answered Haggai and said:
 So was this people,
 And so was this nation,
 In my sight, saith Jehovah:
 And so was all the work of their hands:
 And what they offered there was unclean.
- 15 And now, I beseech you, || consider:
 From this day and upward,
Even from the time before * one stone was laid on another
 In the temple of Jehovah, what were ye?
- 16 When one came to an heap of twenty measures, there were but ten.
When one came to the vat to draw out fifty vessels
 From the winepress, there were but twenty.
- 17 I smote you with blasting, and with mildew, and with hail;
Even all the works of your hands:

|| Heb. set your heart.

* Heb. a stone was laid on a stone.

14. — So was this people.—Your neglect of my temple made you unclean; as if you had contracted legal pollution by touching a dead body.

15. — upward. “Forward.” בן—ומעלה means a person of such an age and upward. But out of that phrase the word is used only, 1 Sam. xvi. 13, and xxx. 25, to signify time, besides here and v. 18: and in both the former places it means from such a time and afterwards. He had bid them look back, ch. i. 5, 7; and now he bids them look forwards, ch. ii. 15, 18. Seeker.

— Even from the time before.—Consider the interval between this day, and your ceasing to build on the foundations of the temple formerly laid, Ezra iii. 10.

— what were ye?—I read מיה הייתם, τινες ητε, with ó. Arab. Our translation very well renders מיהייתם, “Since those days were.” One MS. reads בהייתם, “while those days were.” Observe the addition in ó.

16. — an heap.—Of corn, which seemed likely to produce twenty measures; but which failed from the poverty of the ear.

Yet none among you turned unto me, saith Jehovah.

- 18 † Consider, I pray you,
From this day and upward,
Even from the four and twentieth day of the ninth month;

And from the day in which the foundation of Jehovah's
* temple was laid,

‡ Consider ye it.

- 19 Is there yet seed in the barn?
Yea, as yet the vine, and the figtree, and the pomegranate,
And the olivetree hath not borne.
But from this day will I bless.

- 20 And the word of Jehovah came the second time unto Haggai on the four and twentieth day of the month, say-21 ing: Speak unto Zerubbabel the governor of Judah,
saying:

I will shake the heavens and the earth;

- 22 And I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms;

† Heb. set your heart.

‡ Heb. set your heart.

17. — saith Jehovah.—ó. MS. Pachom. have  $\overline{\kappa\varsigma}$  παντοκρατωρ. This verse is capable of different punctuations:

“ I smote you with blasting, and with mildew ;
And with hail all the works of your hands :
Yet none of you turned unto me,
Saith Jehovah [God of hosts..]”

ראין אתכם. Επιστρεψατε. ó. Ch. Syr. Legebant שבחם, ut legendum patet ex Amos iv. 9. Videtur V. legisse ut in textu, et supplevisse verbum. Vertit enim, Et non fuit in vobis qui reverteretur. Secker.

18. — upward.—“ Forward.” Secker.

— And from the day.—In like manner ó. supply και. The Jews are again called on to consider the interval between the day when Haggai addressed them, see v. 10, and the day when the people shouted because the foundation of the temple was laid, Ezra iii. 11.

19. Inchoat hunc versum Syr. a duobus postremis verbis versus præcedentis: non male. Secker.

21. Addunt ó. in fine versus, και την θαλασσαν και την ξηραν. Secker.

And I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms § among the nations :

And I will overthrow the chariots, and those that ride therein :

And the horses shall come down, and those that ride thereon,

Every one by the sword of his fellow.

23 In that day, saith Jehovah God of hosts.

I will take thee, O Zerubbabel, son of || Shealtiel,

My servant, saith Jehovah ;

And I will make thee as a signet.

For thee have I chosen, saith Jehovah God of hosts.

§ Heb. of.

|| Otherwise, Salathiel.

22. — by the sword of his fellow.—We may well understand this and the foregoing verse of the calamity undergone by Babylon in the reign of Darius; of the Macedonian conquests in Persia; and of the wars which the successors of Alexander waged against each other.

23. In that day.—Some think that Zerubbabel is put for his people and posterity. But it may well be said, that the commotions foretold began in the rebellion of Babylon, which Darius besieged and took; and exercised great cruelties upon its inhabitants. Herod, iii. Sec. 220. Justin. i. 10. Prideaux places this event in the fifth year of Darius; others, with more probability, in his eighth year. Compare Zech. ii. 9. Vitranga calls this event, “secundum gradum interitus Babylonis.” See his imperfect comment on Zech. p. 259, and his comment on Isa. xiii. P. i. p. 420.

— signet.—See Jer. xxii. 24. Cantic. viii. 6. As one under my peculiar care.

THE BOOK

OF

Z E C H A R I A H.

---

CHAPTER I.

I IN the eighth month, in the second year of Darius, came the word of Jehovah unto Zechariah, the son

---

CHAP. I. 1. The six first verses of this chapter contain a separate and distinct revelation; but, at the same time, connected with the general purport and design of the visions that follow, to which it forms a suitable introduction. The people of the Jews were dispirited with the recollection of their past sufferings, and a sense of their present weak and dependent state. The divine wisdom thought meet to rally their courage, and animate them to the undertaking of what was necessary for the restoration of their affairs; and, particularly, to a vigorous prosecution of the building of the temple, already in hand, by holding forth to them a prospect of better times. Accordingly they are assured, that God was now ready to restore them to favour, and accumulate his blessings upon them, provided they would turn to him, and not provoke his judgments, as their fathers had done, by wilful disobedience. Blayney.

— the eighth month.—This month, according to the sacred reckoning, which begins the year with the month Abib or Nisan, Ex. xii. 2, falls in with the latter part of October, and the beginning of November. It is called Marchesvan, in the Syriac or Chaldee; in which language, it is observed, the names of the months are given in this book and that of Esther, differently from the usage in the other books of Scripture. The work in the house of God had been already resumed this same year on the twenty-fourth day of the sixth month, that is, the beginning of September, in pursuance of a divine message delivered by the prophet Haggai. Hag. i. 14, 15. Blayney.

— Darius.—The son of Hystaspes. Therefore this prophecy was delivered between the times mentioned, Haggai ii. 1, 10.

of Barachiah, the son of Iddo, the prophet, saying.

2 Jehovah hath been greatly * angry with your fathers :

3 But say thou unto them :

Thus saith Jehovah God of hosts :

Turn ye unto me, saith Jehovah God of hosts :

And I will turn unto you, saith Jehovah God of hosts.

4 Be not as your fathers,

Unto whom the former prophets called,

Saying :

Thus saith Jehovah God of hosts :

Turn ye now from your evil ways, and from your evil doings,

But they heard not, nor hearkened unto me, saith Jehovah.

5 Your fathers, where are they ?

* Heb. angry with anger.

— of Iddo.—Nineteen MSS. and two editions, read עירא, as v. 7 ; and, v. 7, eight MSS. read עיר, as here. Chald. v. 7, has עירא.

— saying.—"Speak unto all the people of the land, saying." There are no words in the Hebrew that answer to these ; but there are strong indications of a defect in this place. It is evident, from the tenor of the verses which follow, that the people of the Jews are addressed in them. But no previous mention is made of that people, nor is the word of Jehovah said to come to them, but to Zechariah ; nor is there any antecedent to which the pronoun in אמרת אלהם (or אליהם), "but say thou unto them," can properly be referred ; I say, properly, for in strictness of grammar it can be referred only to אבותיכם, "your fathers." The difficulty is obvious ; but neither the collated MSS., nor the ancient versions, help to remove it. Perhaps after אמר אל כל־עם הארץ לאמר (as ch. vii. 5,) may originally have followed (for some such words must needs be understood), and the word לאמר coming in at the end of two lines together, the transcriber into some earlier MS. may inadvertently have passed from the end of the first line to the beginning of a third, skipping over the second, which once lost, may never have been retrieved. Blayney.

3. — unto them.—For אלהם, twenty-eight MSS. and three editions read אליהם.

5. Your fathers.—Your fathers are dead, and the prophets who prophesied to them : but the testimony of facts to the truth of my predictions remains.

And the prophets do they live for ever?

- 6 But my words, and my statutes,
Which I commanded my servants the prophets,
Did they not overtake your fathers?
And did they not return and say;
Like as Jehovah God of hosts thought to do unto us,
According to our ways, and according to our doings,
So hath he done with us?

- 7 On the four and twentieth day of the eleventh month, this is the month Sebat, in the second year of Darius, came the word of Jehovah unto Zechariah, the son of Barachiah, the son of Iddo, the prophet; and

6. — overtake.—As an enemy does one whom he pursues. “Post צור addunt ὁ. ἐν πνεύματι μου.” Secker.

The second revelation, made to Zechariah, about three months after the first, contains eight distinct visions, following each other, in the same night. The first vision is of an angel in a human form, sitting on horseback, in a low valley, among myrtle-trees, attended by others, upon horses of different colours. The prophet asks the meaning, and is informed that they were the ministers of providence sent to examine into the state of the whole earth, which they report to be quiet and tranquil. The angel here-upon intercedes for Judah and Jerusalem, which he represents to have suffered under the divine indignation seventy years. He receives a consolatory answer. The prophet is directed to proclaim, that God’s wrath against Judah was at an end; that he would cause the temple and Jerusalem to be rebuilt; and would fill the country with good, as a token and consequence of his renewed favour, v. 7—17. Blayney.

7. — Sebat.—A Chaldee or a Syriac name. Mensis Syro-Græcorum, i. e. Februarius. Gol. Lex. “This month corresponded with the latter end of January and the beginning of February.” Blayney.

— and he said.—“In this wise.” So לאמר may be here translated. It is frequently used as the Latin adverbs, nempe, scilicet; or, as in English, to wit, namely, that is to say; so as to denote a specification in what follows, of what had before been mentioned in more general terms. “The word of Jehovah” is a revelation, of which the substance is here prefaced by לאמר in the sense above-mentioned. Vitranga translates it, in hunc modum. Blayney.

- 8 † he said: I saw in the night, and behold, a man riding on a red horse; and he stood between the myrtles which were in the ‡ valley; and after him were red, dun, and 9 white horses. Then I said, What are these, O my lord? And the angel, who talked with me, said unto me: I
 10 will show thee what these are. And the man who stood among the myrtles answered and said; These are they whom Jehovah hath sent to go to and fro through the 11 earth. And they answered the angel of Jehovah, who stood among the myrtles, and said: We have gone to and fro through the earth; and behold all the earth remaineth still, and is at rest.

† Heb. saying.

‡ Or, depth; or, bottom.

8. — a man.—An angel in the shape of a man. See v. 11 and Luke xxiv. 4.

— red horse.—So Rev. vi. 4, and Theocritus Ἀδωνιαζ. l. 53. Ορθος ανεστα ὁ πυρρός. The bay, chesnut, and sorrel, approach this colour.

— myrtles.—This was an emblem of peace.

— valley.—In depressa valle. Houb. Many MSS. and four editions read במצולה.

— dun.—Bochart prefers gilvus; i. e. subflavus, ad mellis colorem accedens. Hieroz. P. I. L. I. c. vii. Some translate, spotted. “Brown.” Blayney.

— horses.—With riders, who were angels, v. 11. They had horses to show their power and celerity, and horses of different colours, to intimate the difference of their ministries. See Cappellus.

9. — the angel.—Distinct from those represented, v. 8, he who talked with the prophet, v. 13. Angelus comes et interpre. Vitranga.

— I will show thee.—I will cause that it shall be explained to thee by the angel who stands first among the myrtles. This may have been done by a sign given to that angel, or by words omitted in the relation.

10. — hath sent.—They are messengers, or ministering spirits, of Jehovah.

11. — they answered.—The rest of the angels, implied at the end of v. 8, and who came after the first.

— all the earth.—Means the Persian empire, and the other nations connected with Judea, which enjoyed peace at that time. But the state of the Jews was unsettled, see v. 16, which circumstance gives occasion to the following intercession.

- 12 Then the angel of Jehovah answered and said: O Jehovah God of hosts, how long wilt thou not have mercy on Jerusalem, and on the cities of Judah, against which thou hast had indignation these seventy years?
- 13 And Jehovah answered the angel who talked with me good words and comfortable words.
- 14 And the angel, who talked with me, said unto me, Pro-— had indignation.—Thirteen MSS. read ועמה.

— seventy years.—See on Haggai ii. 3. According to Blair, if we compute from the destruction of the former temple, when Jerusalem was taken by Nebuchadnezzar, the seventy years were not completed till the sixth of Darius; and the angel must be supposed to speak with latitude, though with sufficient exactness for popular language. Others assert that the computation in this place is exact. Est pulcherrimum Petavii aliorumque observatum, periodum lxx. annorum, decretorum punitioni Judaicæ gentis, ad perfectum implementum prophetiæ his repræsentatum esse. A quarto Jehojachimi usque ad initia Babylonica Cyri, quando dimissi sunt Judæi ex exilio, effluerunt anni lxx. Rursus totidem anni effluerunt ab excidio templi et urbis, quod accidit octodecim post annis, usque ad secundum Darii Hystaspis: intersunt enim rursus inter initia Cyri Babylonica et Darii secundum anni octodecim. Camp. Vitringa in Zech. proleg. 17.

A primo anno Nebuchodonosori, quem scriptura copulat cum quarto Jehojachimi, xxii ad exeuntem Cyri, quo captivitas est soluta, anni sunt lxx. Adde Cyri viii, Cambysis et Magi viii, Darii ii, fiunt lxxxviii. Deductis annis xviii, restant lxx ab excidio urbis ad annum ii Darii, quo vaticinatus est Zacharias. Petav. doctr. temp. l. xii. c. xxv. See Prideaux ann. 518. Bishop Newton on Proph. i. diss. viii. p. 203, 8vo.

13. — Jehovah answered.—By a voice or by impulse. And the angel communicated the reply to Zechariah.

— who talked with me.—Chald. rightly explains 'ב, עמי, mecum. See 1 Sam. xxv. 39.

14. I have been jealous—It has been doubted, whether the jealousy spoken of here, and ch. viii. 2, be God's resentment against his people for their disloyalty towards him, or his concern for their honour and welfare, mixed with indignation towards those who had persecuted them. The latter is thought to be countenanced by Joel ii. 18. But even there, perhaps, may be some room for doubting. The former is the more usual acceptation of the word קנאה jealousy, which is defined to be "the rage of a man," or husband on account of his wife's infidelity, Prov. vi. 34. And with this rage God, speaking in the past tense, here says, he had been inflamed on account of the disloyalty of Jerusalem. This occasioned a claim, saying :

Thus saith Jehovah, God of hosts :

I have been jealous for Jerusalem and for Sion, with a great jealousy ;

15 And with great anger am I angry with the nations that are at ease.

Because I was but a little angry,

And they helped forward the affliction.

16 Therefore thus saith Jehovah :

I have returned to Jerusalem with mercies :

Mine house shall be built in it,

Saith Jehovah, God of hosts ;

And a line shall be stretched forth on Jerusalem.

17 Moreover proclaim, saying ;

Thus saith Jehovah, God of hosts :

temporary separation, during which the neighbours were forward to distress the unprotected wife, Ps. cxxxvii. 7. Obad. 10—14. But when God, like a pacified and relenting husband, was disposed to take her again, he would naturally be displeased with the nations for their malicious interference. Accordingly, it follows in the present tense, “ But now am I exceedingly angry with the nations,” &c. The different tenses mark the different affections at different times. Then follow the good and consolatory words, “ Therefore,” that is, in consequence of this change of sentiment, “ I am returned to Jerusalem, with great mercy ;” בְּרַחֲמִים, the plural number, serving to denote the intenseness of degree. Blayney.

15. — am I angry.—Six MSS. read קָרַץ irascens sum.

— the nations that are at ease.—The remnant of the Babylonians, Philistines, Edomites, &c.

— a little angry.—See Isa. liv. 7, 8. Mine anger did not rise so high as the punishment which the enemies of my people inflicted. God was displeased with the instruments of his vengeance, for their extreme cruelty to the Jews ; and with the nations who insulted over them in their distress.

— the affliction.—לְרָעָה. That the verb עָוַר is used with ל after it, see 1 Chron. xviii. 5. xxii. 17.

“ To her hurt.” The לְרָעָה הַזֶּה, I take to be the feminine affix. So לְרָעָה לוֹ, Eccles. viii. 9, to his hurt ; and לְרָעָה לָכֶם, to your hurt, Jer. vii. 6. xxv. 7. Blayney.

16. — with mercies.—This has a reference to the words of the angel, v. 12.

— a line.—“ i. e. The architect’s measuring line for laying out the building.” Blayney. Twelve MSS. one ed. and Keri read קָו.

My cities shall yet be spread abroad through prosperity;
And Jehovah will yet comfort Sion,
And will yet choose Jerusalem.

18 Then I lifted up mine eyes and looked; and behold, 19 four horns. And I said unto the angel, who talked with me, What are these? And he said unto me, These are the horns which have scattered Judah, Israel, and Jerusalem.

20 And Jehovah shewed me four workmen. Then said I,

17. — be spread abroad.—Over the face of Judea. See Gen. x. 18. Houbigant proposes תפוצתה, affluent bonis. Schultens gives this very signification to פָּצָה, from the Arab. Gen. ix. 19. See Animadv. Phil. "Videntur Vulg. Ch. תפוצתה, legisse. Recte." Secker. "עִיר. Non agnos-cunt ḥ. Syr." Secker. The word seems to have been written "עִיר" for עִירִים.

18. — four horns.—The emblems of power. See Amos vi. 13. Jer. xlviii. 25. Why four? To denote that these kingdoms had many enemies; enemies on every side, Ezra iv. 1. Neh. iv. 7. See on Micah v. 5.

In this second vision, under the emblem of four horns, is represented, that God, by such agents as he would appoint, would quell and bring down all those powers which had risen, or should rise, to oppress his people. Horns are an usual emblem of strength and power, and aptly denote conquering and oppressive princes and states. The most ancient and prevailing opinion among the Jews themselves, and the most probable of any, is that the four great empires, the Assyrian or Babylonian, the Persian, Grecian, and Roman, which most certainly were alluded to by the four beasts in the seventh chapter of Daniel, and, I think, are designed by the four chariots in the last of these eight visions, ch. vi., are here likewise intended; by each of which the Jewish nation hath been, in turns, oppressed; and all of them have been successively brought down and annihilated; although from the depression of the last, the Jews have not as yet apparently derived any considerable advantage. Blayney.

19. — Israel. And Israel. V. ḥ. Ar. Syr. Chald.

— and Jerusalem—This is wanting in ḥ. MS. A. "and in MS. Copt." Mr. Woide.

20. — four workmen.—Vitranga supposes that the horns were iron, and that these were, "fabri ferrarii malleis dolabrisque instructi."

"Four ploughmen." חֲרִישִׁים. Our translators have called them carpenters. But Michaelis is not satisfied that either smiths or carpenters have any thing to do with frightening horns, and, therefore, renders חֲרִישִׁים, aratores, ploughmen; and so far I agree with him; but not with the exposition he has given. Blayney.

- 21 What come these to do? And he § spake saying: 'These are the horns which scattered Judah, so that no man lifted up his head: and these are come || to make them afraid, to cast out the horns of the nations which lifted up their horn against the land of Judah, to scatter it.

§ Heb. said.

|| Or, fray; or affright.

21. And he spake [or said] saying.—For לאמר, saying, ó. MS. A. Arab. Syr. and one MS. read, אלי to me. One MS. omits לאמר, with ó. MS. Vat. ed. Ald. and Sixti Quinti. Two MSS. read אלי לאמר, "And he spake unto me, saying." But see ch. iii. 4. iv. 13.

—scattered Judah.—ó. add "and brake Israel." Instead of which addition Ar. has, "and destroyed Jerusalem." See v. 19.

להחריר. Forte להחרים Sed vid. Ezek. xxx. 9. Secker.

"And these are come sharpening their coulter, for to use upon the horns of the nations, which lifted up a horn against the land of Judah to scatter it." Parum placent fabri, cornua terrentes, says Michaelis, nor am I myself better satisfied with the idea of frightening horns; and, therefore, gladly accept an emendation offered by ó. who, instead of להחריר, appear to have read להחריר, του ὀξυῖναι. But it could not be meant that they came to sharpen the horns, which were sharp enough before, it should seem, to be offensive; ארם, therefore, is not to be rendered avra, them, but to be considered as a compound of the noun אר, a coulter, and the plural affix; and thus להחריר ארם will signify "sharpening their coulter," a cutting iron belonging to a plough, and which a ploughman might apply to the purpose of demolishing horns that were lifted up with a mischievous intent. Blayney.

"For to use upon the horns." ידה, does not any where, as far as I can perceive, bear the sense of deificare, given it by some of the versions, as suitable to the place. But, as Taylor in his Concordance observes, coming from יד, the hand, it may signify to exercise the hand vigorously in any way, according to the sense and scope of the place. A pertinent instance occurs Jer. l. 14, where ידו אלי, referring to "the bow" there spoken of, signifies "use, [or employ] it against her." In like manner לידת את קרנות may signify for to use or employ against the horns. Blayney.

CHAPTER II.

1 AND I lifted up mine eyes and looked; and behold a 2 man * in whose hand was a † measuring-line. Then said I, Whither goest thou? And he said unto me, To measure Jerusalem; to see what is the breadth thereof, 3 and what is the length thereof. And behold, the angel who talked with me went forth: and the other angel
 4 went forth to meet him, and said unto him: Run, speak unto that young man, saying;
 Jerusalem shall dwell in villages,

* Heb. and in his hand.

† Heb. a line of measuring.

---

CHAP. II. 1. This chapter contains the substance of a third vision. In conformity to what was said, ch. i. 16, a man or an angel appears with a measuring-line in his hand, going, as he says, to take the dimensions of Jerusalem, in order to its being rebuilt according to its former extent, which was afterwards done by Nehemiah. This is accompanied by a message delivered to the prophet, showing the great increase of her population and wealth, her perfect security under the Divine protection, the recall of her exiles from the north country, and the punishment of those that had oppressed them; the return of God's presence to dwell in her, and the conversion of many heathen nations; and, lastly, the re-instatement of Judah and Jerusalem in the full possession of all their ancient privileges. Blayney.

— a man.—An angel in the form of a man; who advanced forward, v. 3, to meet the angel that talked with the prophet

3. — unto him.—For אֵלֶי eleven MSS. five ed. and Keri have אֵלַי.

4. — young man.—See Jer. ii. 6; where we should translate youth, instead of child.

— in villages.—It shall overflow with inhabitants, who shall occupy spaces beyond the circuit of the walls. A city is then said to be inhabited, κατα κομης, vicatim. That this was fact with regard to Jerusalem, see Jos. B. J. V. iv. 2. p. 328; where we learn, that “the city, overflowing with its number of inhabitants, by degrees extended itself beyond its walls;” and that Herod Agrippa fortified the new part called Bezetha. Vitringa. “Or, shall inhabit villages. See Isa. xlix. 19, 20.” Secker.

Jerusalem is here personified under the symbol of a woman, by which cities and countries are often figuratively represented, as may be seen on ancient coins, and very frequently occurring in the other prophetic parts of

- For the multitude of men and of cattle within her.
- 5 And I will be unto her, saith Jehovah,
A wall of fire round about;
And ‡ glory will I be § within her.
- 6 Ho ! Ho ! || flee
From the land of the north, saith Jehovah.
For towards the four winds of the heavens
Have I spread you abroad, saith Jehovah.
- 7 Ho ! Sion ; escape,
O thou that dwellest with the daughter of Babylon.
- 8 For thus saith Jehovah God of hosts :
After the obtaining of glory hath he sent me

‡ Heb. for glory.

§ Or, in the midst of.

|| Heb. and flee.

Scripture. For want of attending to this symbolical representation, חשב has been frequently mistaken for the passive verb. Blayney.

5. — A wall of fire.—This most sublime image strongly expresses the protection of the Deity. It must have reminded the Jews of the pillar of fire, by which God directed and defended their ancestors.

— glory.—לכבוד. So לעם, a people, v. 11. See also ch. viii. 8. An allusion to the symbol of the divine presence in the Holy of Holies, Rom. ix. 4.

Vitringa refers the literal completion of this prophecy to the time of the Maccabees, but thinks that the protection and glory of the future Jerusalem may also be predicted. Apoc. xx. 9.

6. — towards the four winds.—Five MSS. and two ed. read בארבע ; and two more copies read so originally. Syr. has לארבע ; V. in quatuor ventos.

7. — flee—escape.—The Jews, who still remained in Persia, Chaldea, and Babylon, are called on to hasten into their own land. See Ezra vii. viii. “Prideaux thinks this exhortation relates to the siege of Babylon under Darius Hystaspis.” Secker.

8. — After the obtaining of glory.—Syr. renders the Hebrew literally post honorem. The Latin translator, in the London polyglot, gives his sense of this, ad prosequendum honorem. Chald. has post honorem quem vobis adducturum se dixit. The other versions represent the Hebrew as it now stands. Houbigant reads אהו כבוד, He who possesseth glory. For אהר Secker proposes אהיה, v. 5. “I will be glory. He hath sent, &c.” The best sense which I can make of this obscure place is, Jehovah hath sent me to follow after glory ; i. e. for the purpose of acquiring glory to his people, in restraining and humbling their enemies. A great calamity was

To the nations which spoiled you.

For he that toucheth you

Toucheth the apple of his eye.

9 For behold, I will shake mine hand * upon them,

And they shall be a spoil unto their † servants :

And ye shall know that Jehovah God of hosts hath sent me.

10 Sing and rejoice, O daughter of Sion :

For, behold, I will come,

And I will dwell ‡ within thee, saith Jehovah.

11 And many nations shall be joined

Unto Jehovah in that day,

And shall be § my people.

And I will dwell || within thee, and thou shalt know

That Jehovah God of hosts hath sent me unto thee.

12 And Jehovah will possess Judah, his portion,

In the * holy land ;

And will again choose Jerusalem.

* Or, over.

† Or, slaves.

‡ Or, in the midst of.

§ Heb. unto me for a people.

|| Or, in the midst of.

* Heb. land of holiness.

soon to befall Babylon, when Darius, the son of Hystaspes, besieged and took it.

— his eye.—" Mine eye : " Vulg. reading עֵינִי. " This has been sometimes misunderstood, as if God's eye was meant ; but the meaning certainly is, that he who meddled with the Jews to hurt them, would be doing himself the most essential hurt, wounding himself in the tenderest part." Blayney.

9. — unto their servants.—As the Babylonians to the Medes and Persians, who were subdued by Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon. See on Haggai ii. 23.

10. — dwell within thee.—As thy mighty defender. See v. 5.

11. — be joined unto Jehovah.—Many were made proselytes to Judaism. The Edomites were converted in the time of John Hyrcanus.

12. — will possess.—He will again be worshipped in his temple at Jerusalem ; and hereafter will gloriously display himself in his holy city, Rev. xxi. 3, 11, 23.

- 13 Be silent, O all flesh, before Jehovah :
For he is raised up from his † holy habitation.

---

CHAPTER III.

- 1 AND he shewed me Joshua the high priest standing before the angel of Jehovah: and * Satan standing at 2 his right hand to be his adversary. And [the angel of]
Jehovah said unto Satan,

† Heb. the habitation of his holiness.

* Heb. the adversary.

---

13. Be silent.—God's interposition in behalf of his people shall be manifest, strike their adversaries dumb, and impress all with awe and wonder.

CHAP. III. 1. Vision the fourth.—Zechariah sees Joshua, the high priest, standing before an angel of Jehovah, as it were soliciting to be admitted to the discharge of his sacred functions; and Satan, or the adversary, standing by in the act of opposing him. The adversary receives a rebuke from Jehovah himself, by whose special command Joshua is stripped of his filthy garments, and invested with the priestly robes of service, and a clean bonnet set upon his head. The angel delivers him a solemn charge. After this follows a clear and interesting prediction of the coming of the Messiah, and the establishment of his church, of which Joshua and his companions are ordained to be signs. Pardon and peace are held forth as the blessed effects of Christ's coming. Blayney.

— he shewed.—The angel mentioned in the former part of ch. ii. 3. But 6. Ar. V. render, "And the Lord showed me." This may be accounted for by supposing that the text stood "ויראני י", that is, ייראני יהוה, "And Jehovah showed me."

2. — the angel of.—Syr. adds the word angel, and I think that it ought to be admitted into the text. Compare Jude 9.

— said unto Satan.—It is at least uncertain whether Satan, the grand adversary of mankind, be here intended; or (which appears to me more probable), the adversaries of the Jewish nation in a body, or, perhaps, some leading person among them, Sanballat for instance, who strenuously opposed the rebuilding of the temple, and, of course, the restoration of the

Jehovah rebuke thee, O Satan ;
 Even Jehovah, who chooseth Jerusalem, rebuke thee,
Is not this man a firebrand plucked out of the fire ?

- 3 Now Joshua was clothed with filthy garments, and 4 standing before the angel. And he answered and spake unto those who stood before him, saying ; Take the filthy garments off him. Then he said unto him ; See,
 I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee, and will service of the sanctuary, and the re-establishment of Joshua in the exercise of his sacerdotal ministry. Blayney.

“ And Jehovah said.” By a voice from heaven, or from out of the sanctuary, supposing the transaction to be represented as passing before the temple. Blayney.

— rebuke thee.—“ Jehovah will rebuke thee, O adversary, even as Jehovah hath rebuked thee.” The imperative in the third person is, no doubt, often expressed by the future tense ; but it cannot be so here, because Jehovah is himself the speaker, who doth not command or exhort, but simply declareth, that he will rebuke or check the malevolence of the adversary in this instance, as he had done before in another, when he chose Jerusalem, or took her again into favour in spite of his opposition. Blayney.

— a firebrand.—May not Joshua, and those who returned with him from Babylon, be compared to firebrands with difficulty preserved from the fire ? And shall God permit a flame to be again kindled to devour them ?

3. — with filthy garments.—Appeared in the vision clothed with the squalid and polluted garments of a captive.

What is meant by the filthy garments, is evident from what is said by Jehovah in the next verse, “ See, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee.” It is no other than the stain of moral pollution, which is, in some degree, found in every man, though done away by the grace of Christ. And it is in this respect that it is said, Isa. lxiv. 6, “ We are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses as filthy rags.” This makes us unworthy in ourselves to appear in the presence of a God of purity, and this afforded the adversary his ground of objection against Joshua. Blayney.

— before the angel.—“ Ἀγγέλου. Addit Copt. του Κυριου, sicut Syr.” Mr. Woide. Arab. has the same addition.

4. — he answered.—The angel of Jehovah. See v. 2.

— those who stood before him.—Other attendant angels.

— thine iniquity.—The effect, or punishment, of national iniquity ; which partly consisted in the cessation of sacred rites. So v. 9.

- 5 clothe thee with goodly apparel. And he said: Let them set a † fair mitre on his head. And they set a † fair mitre on his head; and clothed him with garments. And the angel of Jehovah stood by.
- 6 And the angel of Jehovah testified unto Joshua, saying:
- 7 Thus saith Jehovah God of hosts:
 If thou wilt walk in my ways,
 And if thou wilt keep mine ordinance;
 Then thou shalt also judge mine house,
 And thou shalt also keep my courts;
 And I will give thee places to walk

† Or, pure.

† Or, pure.

— will clothe thee.—V. Syr. Chald. translate in the first person, and read with Houbigant יאליבש, which I prefer to יהלבישתיך, because nineteen MSS. and one ed. read אורך.

— goodly apparel.—Bishop Lowth translates the word “embroidered robes,” Isa. iii. 22. The Arabic root in Cast. lex. signifies, Bonus et exquisitus fuit, bene habuit.

“Clean garments.” מְחֻלָּצִים; this word properly signifies, “the garments that are put off,” from the verb חָלַץ, to put off. The holy garments of service are hereby meant, with which the priests were to be clothed, when they came into the inner court of the temple to minister before God; and these they were directed to put off, when they went into the outer court and conversed in common with the people. Blayney.

The vision imports, that the priestly office was to be resumed and exercised with decency and splendour.

5. And he said.—Sic. Syr. Vulg. Omittunt ó. et vau voci sequenti præfigunt. Sed Ch. dixi, licet versio habeat dixit. Secker.

— stood by.—As in waiting to receive and execute his Sovereign's commands, which he proceeds to do, as in the next verse. Blayney.

6. — testified.—Strongly affirmed, as a witness does an important truth.

7. — keep mine ordinance.—Discharging all the duties required of thee as high priest. See Deut. xi. 1. Lev. viii. 35.

— judge mine house.—Thou shalt be a judge, or ruler, over my family, or people.

— keep my courts.—Have the charge of the sacred courts; the temple being rebuilt.

— places to walk.—The original word may be a substantive, and may signify goings, paths, ways. Thus it may be understood either of Joshua's

Among those who stand by.

- 8 Hear now, O Joshua high priest,
Thou and thy companions who dwell before thee;
For they are men ‡ to be wondered at.
For behold, I will bring forth my servant, The Branch :

‡ Heb. of wonder, or, of a sign.

entrance into the Holy of Holies, where the Cherubim were, or of his future entrance into heaven, or of both, Or מַהֲלִיכִים may be a participle. "I will assign thee, as guardians and protectors, some of those that walk among the angels who stand near me." Chald. paraphrases in the former sense; and the rendering of V. 6. Ar. Syr. favours the latter sense. "And I will appoint thee ministers among these that stand by."

"Ministers." מַהֲלִיכִים. Literally walkers; persons ready to go and come under his direction, and be subservient to his will. By "these that stand by," I do not conceive are meant the angels attending upon God's throne, but some of the subordinate priests who attended upon Joshua. And as it is promised to him, that he should be reinstated in the honours of his high office, so it is also added, that he should be waited upon by those inferior priests whose business it was to officiate in the service of the temple under the authority of the high priest. And the same persons are presently after designed under the name of "the companions" of Joshua, "that sat before him." Blayney.

8. — thy companions.—Thy countrymen, who returned with thee from captivity.

— dwell before thee.—"That sit before thee." Possibly, these may have been some of those who were called chief priests; who, though subordinate to the high priest, were entitled by their rank to sit in his councils, Blayney.

— to be wondered at.—On account of their extraordinary deliverance from Babylon. See v. 2. Or, types of a great future restoration.

"These are men of sign." "These," רֵמָה, must be understood to include both Joshua and his companions; being equally intended to represent, as types, something more than what they in themselves were. See נִיפֶטֶת thus used, Isa. xx. 3. Ezek. xii. 6, 11. xxiv. 24, 27. The next line points out him of whom Joshua was meant to be a type; as the verse following does those of whom his companions were to be representatives or signs. Blayney.

— The Branch.—Zerubbabel, ch. vi. 12, 13; so called because he was the grandson of Jehoiakim, or Jechoniah, king of Judah, Matt. i. 12, and heir to the throne of Judah. "Neither here nor ch. vi. 12. is Zerubbabel named; nor is there any reasonable ground to conclude that he is designed

9 For behold, the stone
Which I have placed before Joshua;

in either place by the title of צמח, "The Branch." It is true he was a descendant from David, and appointed under the authority of the kings of Persia to be a subordinate governor of the Jews who returned from Babylon, and in that capacity he presided, and took an active part with Joshua the high priest, and with the chief of the fathers, in forwarding the building of the temple. But there surely does not appear, in what we know of his character and performances, any thing to merit the particular notice imagined to be here taken of him. The same person must needs be intended here as is spoken of under the same title, Jer. xxiii. 5; nor is it conceivable that terms so magnificent as those used in the latter place especially, can be applicable to one of so limited power and authority as Zerubbabel enjoyed. Besides, it is evident, that the Branch is promised as one that was to come or be brought forth, and not as one that had already enjoyed his estate, such as it was, for many years past. In short, for these and for many other reasons, it may be concluded against Zerubbabel, and, I think, against any other of less consequence than the great Messiah himself, through whom alone iniquity is put away, and the reign of perfect peace and righteousness is to be established. Compare Ps. cxxxii. 17. Isa. iv. 2. Jer. xxxiii. 15, 16. Blayney.

9. — the stone.—Stones, such as were used in rebuilding the temple, were represented before Joshua in this vision.

—Which I have placed before Joshua.—It seems as if the prophet saw in his vision a stone or rock set before Joshua, with seven עינים, fountains, springing out of it, which God says were opened by himself. The Hebrew עין, signifies a fountain, as well as an eye, and there seems to be a plain allusion here to the rock which Moses smote in the wilderness, and brought waters out of it for the refreshment of the people of God; and "that rock was Christ," 1 Cor. x. 4. In speaking of which transaction, the Psalmist says, "He opened, פתח, the rock, and the waters gushed out;" Ps. cv. 41. Observe the same verb is used as here הפתח פתחה, "Behold I open the opening, or door thereof;" that is, the hole or orifice through which the fountains shall flow. Again it is said, Isa. xli. 18, אפתח על שפיים נהרות, "I will open rivers in the high places," where not only the verb פתח is used, but is followed by the preposition על, as here before אבן. And it is said, ch. xiii. 1, "In that day shall there be opened a fountain," ביקר נפתח, "to the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem." For what purpose? "For sin and for uncleanness." This was spoken of the gospel times; and in like manner it is here said of the same, "And I will remove or take away the iniquity of the land in one day." There cannot surely remain a doubt of what is intended, nor that עינים must signify fountains of

On one stone are seven eyes :
Behold, I will engrave the engraving thereof,
Saith Jehovah God of hosts.
And I will remove the iniquity
Of this land in one day.

10 In that day, saith Jehovah God of hosts,
Shall ye invite every man his neighbour
§ Under the vine,
And || under the figtree.

§ Heb. To under.

|| Heb. to under.

living waters issuing from Christ. The living waters are the doctrines of the gospel, and the fountains the dispensers of them, the apostles and evangelists, who are said to be "fellow-workers with Christ," and therefore aptly represented by the companions of Joshua. The number seven is frequently used in scripture to denote multitudes, 1 Sam. ii. 5. Jer xv. 9. Blayney.

— one stone.—Perhaps the head-stone, ch. iv. 7.

— seven eyes.—The eyes of God's providence. See ch. iv. 10. The work will be conducted and completed under the divine superintendence.

— I will engrave.—Its engraving shall be wrought by my finger: its ornaments shall be my workmanship. By my co-operation the temple shall be erected and adorned. Or we may render, I engrave; the symbol of the seven eyes is my engraving.

— I will remove.—Schultens observes that the Arabic words حذف and يمحو, signify delere, abstergere. Animadv. Phil.

— the iniquity.—See on v. 4.

— in one day.—The day of dedicating the temple, Ezra vi. 16; or, of Artaxerxes's decree, Ezra vii. 11. "If what has preceded be rightly applied, then we must understand here that one day on which Christ died to put away sins by the offering of himself." Blayney.

10. — invite.—That ל is used after קרא, in the sense of calling to a feast, see 1 Kings i. 9.

— under the vine.—אֶל־תחת signifies simply under. See Sam. xxi. 4. Jer. iii. 6. The meaning of this passage is to show the peace and security that should prevail in those happy days when a man that had any thing to say to his neighbour, or, as we should express it, should call upon his neighbour, would be sure to find him sitting at his ease, without doors, unapprehensive of any danger. Blayney.

CHAPTER IV.

- 1 And the angel who talked with me returned, and awaked me as a man who is wakened out of his sleep : And said
 2 unto me, What seest thou? And I said; I have looked, and behold, a candlestick * all of gold : and a bowl upon the top thereof; and its seven lights upon it; and seven pipes to the seven lights which are upon the top thereof :

* Heb. of gold all of it.

CHAP. IV. 1. In this chapter the prophet is called upon to contemplate a fifth vision of the most sublime and mysterious import. He sees a candlestick of pure gold with its seven lamps communicating by seven pipes with a bowl at the top, which serves for a reservoir, and is constantly supplied with oil from two olive trees standing on each side of the candlestick. He inquires into the meaning, and receives an answer, which, though it may in some sort apply to the circumstances of the temple then in building, yet from the solemnity of the manner, and the terms in use, must be concluded to point to something far higher, no less than the final and complete establishment of Christ's holy catholic church, not by any human means, but by the power of the Holy Spirit, surmounting all obstacles thrown in the way. Annexed is a special prediction, that Zerubbabel, who had begun, should have the honour of finishing the material building of the temple; the accomplishment of which is made a sign, or proof, of the divine mission. The meaning of the seven lamps is then explained, and also of the two overhanging branches of the olive trees on each side of the candlestick. Blayney.

—returned.—I consider this vision as represented on the same night, ch. i. 8, with the preceding ones. See the latter part of v. 10, compared with ch. iii. 9. After some interval, the prophet, overpowered by the vision which had been presented to him, was awakened from his prophetic trance as from a sleep.

—awaked me.—It should seem as if the prophet was plunged into a deep reverie, musing on what he had already seen, when he was roused again by the angel to give his attention to what follows. Blayney.

2. And I said.—Very many MSS. Keri and six editions read ראמר.

—a bowl.—To supply the lamps with oil, by seven conduits issuing from it to the seven lamps ranged in its front.

—seven lights.—"Seven lamps." Blayney.

—and seven pipes to the seven lights.—I remove the word שבעה from

- 3 And two olive trees over it, one on the right side of the 4 bowl, and the other on the left side thereof. And I answered and spake unto the angel who talked with me 5 saying: What are these, my lord? Then the angel who talked with me answered, and said unto me; Knowest thou not what these are? And I said, No, my lord.
 6 Then he answered and spake unto me, saying; This is the word of Jehovah unto Zerubbabel, saying;
 Not by might, nor by power,
 But by my spirit;
 Saith Jehovah, God of hosts.
 7 What art thou, O great mountain?
 Before Zerubbabel, thou shalt become † a plain.

† Heb. for a plain.

the beginning of the clause, and read לשבעה נרות. Ar. V. and Houbigant omit שבעה entirely. "רשבעא שבעא. Syr.: recte, ut videtur." Secker.

3. — over it.—Calmet in his dictionary, article chandelier, represents the olive trees in the ground, hanging over the candlestick.

5. — Knowest thou not.—Cappellus observes that this is said, not to upbraid the dulness of the prophet, but to excite his attention.

I cannot help thinking, that by this question the angel meant to tax the prophet with dulness in not discerning what a reasoning and reflecting mind, versed in the allegories of prophecy, might, in some measure at least, have discovered. Our Saviour in this manner reproves the ignorance of Nicodemus, "Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things?" John iii. 10. Blayney.

6. — the word of Jehovah.—It may be observed, that the prophet's question, "What are these?" is answered, not by descending to an explanation of particulars, but by giving the general purport of the vision; the design being, not to gratify a partial curiosity, but to comfort and encourage an almost desponding people by the assurance that God would, not by those human means in which they were sensible of their own deficiency, but by his own Spirit, render his church triumphant over all opposition. Blayney.

7. What.—כִּי. See Deut. iv. 8. Houbigant conjectures כִּי; and one MS. reads so.

"For thou, O great mountain Before Zerubbabel shalt become a plain."

- And he shall bring forth the head-stone
With shoutings, crying, Favour, favour unto it.
- 8 Moreover, the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying;
 9 The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this house; and his hands shall also finish it. And ye shall know that Jehovah, God of hosts hath sent me unto 10 you. For who hath despised the day of small things?

— he shall bring forth.—ó. Ar. read וְאֶנִּי, And I will bring forth. “If in this prophecy not only the completion of the material temple is promised, but also, as we have supposed, the erection of a spiritual building, it is obvious, that, in this secondary sense by ‘the head,’ or ‘chief corner-stone, must be understood that person who is emphatically so called, Ps. cxviii. 22. Matt. xxi. 42. Eph. ii. 20. and whose coming was ushered in, as is here announced, by the joyful acclamations of the multitudes, Matt. xxi. 8—10. &c. In this latter sense, either the Spirit of God must be the nominative of the verb וְאֶנִּי, or it may be rendered passively, as with an indefinite nominative.”

“And the head-stone shall be brought forth,” &c.

Blayney.

— the head-stone.—הִרְאֵשׁ occurs only here. I think that we should read הִרְאֵשׁ הַרְשׂוּאָה, lapidem capitis, lapidem exclamatum.

“And he shall bring forth the head-stone,
 The stone of shoutings, crying, Favour, favour, unto it.”

See Ps. cxviii, 22.

— shoutings.—Of the people, imploring the divine blessing on the chief corner-stone of the temple.

8. — came unto me.—The voice of Jehovah was immediately addressed to the prophet, v. 9, 10.

9. — shall also finish it.—Cappellus observes that בָּצָעַת in Arab. signifies the sum total of numbers. Hence the Hebrew word may have the sense of consummare, perficere.

— ye shall know.—V. Syr. Chald. and three MSS. read וְיִדְעֶתֶם. But ó. Ar. read אֵלֶיךָ, to thee, for אֵלֵיכֶם.

10. — of small things.—דְּבָרֹת, is understood in the original. See Ezra iii. 11, 12, 13, for the small beginnings alluded to. “By ‘the day of small things,’ I suppose to be meant the time when the resources of the Jewish nation appeared in the eyes of many, even well-wishers, so small and inadequate to the building of the temple, against a powerful oppo-

They shall rejoice, and shall see the † plummet in the hand of Zerubbabel. These seven are the eyes of Jehovah: They run to and fro through the whole earth.

- 11 Then answered I, and said unto him: What are these two olive trees, upon the right side of the candlestick, 12 and upon the left side thereof? And I answered the second time, and said unto him: What are the two branches of the olive trees, which are by the side of the † Heb. the stone of tin.

sition, that they despaired of seeing it carried into effect. Such persons would, of course, rejoice, when the event turned out so contrary to their expectations." Blayney.

— plummet.—The use of the plummet is to try, after the stone is laid, whether it be in its just position. So that this implies the work drawing to a conclusion, and the last finishing hand about to be put to it. Blayney.

— These seven.—I follow the punctuation of the ancient versions. The clause contains the ground of the preceding assertion. The temple shall be rebuilt by Zerubbabel. For these seven, &c. Unless, as Houbigant thinks, something is wanting. [And I answered and said unto him, What are these seven eyes? And he spake unto me, saying:] These seven, &c. J. Mede, Disc. x. Epist. lxi., thinks that the seven eyes of Jehovah are the seven archangels, Tobit xii. 15. Rev. i. 4. iv. 5. v. 6. viii. 2. They may be symbols of the divine providence. See ch. iii. 9.

"These seven are the fountains of Jehovah, running to and fro through the whole earth." Here, again, as in Chron. iii. 9, עֵינַי, I conceive, should be translated "fountains." The lamps, considered as a part of the furniture belonging to the candlestick, that is, the church, can represent no other than the ministers and dispensers of evangelical light and knowledge; in which sense our Saviour says of them, "Ye are the light of the world," Matt. v. 14. In what sense these can be said to be "the eyes of Jehovah," I do not comprehend. But taken in conjunction with their pipes, they may not improperly be represented as fountains or conduits for conveying and communicating to others the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit, with which they are replenished themselves. And as fountains they are said to "run to and fro through the earth," which was, in an eminent degree, seen in the apostles, and the first preachers of the gospel, Romans x. 18. Blayney.

12. — branches.—Bearing much fruit, like an ear of corn. But the Arabic root signifies effluxit; and the word may be rendered ducts.

"Orderers." ܕܠܝܬ in Syriac has the sense of direxit, in via duxit. I am two § golden tubes which empty the oil out of them-13 selves? And he spake unto me, saying: Knowest thou 14 not what these are? And I said, No, my lord. Then said he; These are the two || anointed ones, who stand before the Lord of the whole earth.

§ Heb. tubes of gold.

|| Heb. sons of oil.

inclined, therefore, to suppose that by the שְׂבִלֵי הַיַּיִם, were meant two beings, probably in human shape, who were seen by the prophet, employed in arranging the fruit of the olive trees, and giving it a direction for its juice to flow into those channels, through which it might be conveyed into the body of the lamps, there to serve for food and nourishment of their light. Nor is it any objection to this more than to any other hypothesis, that they were not enumerated before among the objects of vision. They might not, perhaps, have presented themselves to the prophet's view till the very instant when he had asked the question concerning "the two olive trees;" and their sudden appearance may account for the immediate change of it to another, before he had received an answer to the first. This answer being thus superseded, we are left without any direct information as to the meaning of the olive trees; but we may fairly presume them to be no other than the two dispensations of the law and the gospel. Of course, the "orderers" and directers of these dispensations must be Moses and Jesus Christ, "the two sons of oil," or "anointed ones," that stand by, &c., foretelling his will and executing his commands. Of the latter of these it is expressly said, "The spirit of the Lord, &c.," Is. lxi. 1. Nor do I conceive that any other can be meant by the two witnesses appointed to prophesy for a certain time, clothed in sackcloth, Rev. xi. 3; the next verse plainly showing that an allusion is there made to this prophecy of Zechariah, concerning the candlestick and olive trees; though not with all that accuracy of citation, which we should look for at present. "These are the two olive trees, and the two candlesticks standing before the God of the earth, Rev. xi. 4. Blayney.

— tubes.—צִנּוֹר is a tube, or canal, in Hebrew. צִנּוֹר is used only here. In Arab. צִנּוֹר is cistula: which would lead to the sense of vessel, receptacle; and Symm. renders εἰσπύκτης, ampulla.

It is sufficiently clear what is meant, namely, open spouts laid inclining from the olive trees, to the bowl upon the top of the candlestick, so as to receive the fluid flowing from the trees, and pour it continually into the bowl to supply the waste. Some have supposed צִנּוֹר, may have been composed of two words, namely, צִנּוֹר, a pipe or canal, and נָר, which, in Chald. and Syr. signifies, decidit, defluxit. Blayney.

14. — the oil.—I read צִדְדֵי, the oil, for צִדְדֵי, the gold; the sense re-

CHAPTER V.

1 AND I lifted up mine eyes again, and looked; and 2 behold, a flying roll. And he said unto me, What seest thou? And I said, I see a flying roll: the length quiring it. Chald. has, "which pour from themselves the oil into the candlesticks of gold;" as if the words יצהר לנרות, had been omitted before זהב. "Potest reddi, evacuant ex se in aurum. Nam invenitur הריק absque acc. Eccl. xi. 3; sed f. הזהב legendum יצהר, quod sequitur v. 14." Secker.

In the Hebrew copies there is not the least vestige of such a reading, and all the ancient versions concur in expressing "gold" at the end of this verse. There is no doubt but that the liquor drawn from the olive trees must be oil; but it is here intended to represent what, for its precious quality, may be denominated "gold;" that being considered as the most valuable of all material substances, but yet of far less worth than the word of divine truth. "More to be desired," says the Psalmist, speaking of it, "than gold, yea than much fine gold," Ps. xix. 10. And again, "The law of thy mouth is better unto me than thousands of gold and silver," Ps. cxix. 72. In this sense then הזהב, may be used for gold, and, perhaps, from the resemblance between the appearance of gold in a state of fluidity and oil. Blayney.

— anointed ones.—Partakers of oil, οἱ τῆς πικτικῆς ὀ.

— before the Lord.—Thus Syr. renders by קדם; and in Noldius the participle על, signifies both ante and apud. Accordingly, ch. vi. 5, it is rendered by V. coram, by Syr. and Chald. קדם, and by our English translators before. Zerubbabel and Joshua may be meant; who presided over the temporal and spiritual affairs of the Jews; were the ministers, or vicegerents, of Jehovah; and acted, not by their own strength, but by the divine assistance, v. 6. Houbigant understands the passage of two angels, who watched over the Jewish state; "alter præses reipublicæ, alter religionis." It is plain that the golden candlestick is the Jewish state, both civil and religious: and that the oil, with which the lights are supplied, is the Spirit of God, in opposition to human efforts.

CHAP. V. 1. The visions represented in this chapter are of a very different kind from the preceding ones. Hitherto all has been consoling, and meant to cheer the heart of the Jewish people, by holding forth to them prospects of approaching prosperity. But lest they should grow presumptuous, it was thought proper to warn them, and to let them see, that thereof is twenty * cubits, and the breadth thereof ten † cubits.

3 And he said unto me :

This is the curse that goeth forth

Over the face of the whole land.

For every one who stealeth shall be cut off from hence,
according to it ;

And every one who sweareth shall be cut off from hence,
according to it,

* Heb. by the cubit.

† Heb. by the cubit.

however God was at present disposed to show them favour, his judgments would assuredly fall upon them with still greater weight than before, if they should again provoke him by repeated wickedness. Accordingly, in the first of these visions, which was the sixth in succession, the prophet is shown an immense roll or book, like that which Ezekiel describes, Ezek. ii. 9, 10, filled with curses, and in the act of flying, to denote the celerity and speed, as well as the certainty with which the thief and the false swearer, who might otherwise flatter themselves with hopes of impunity, would be visited to their utter destruction. The next vision presents the appearance of an ephah, or measure, in which sat a woman, representing a nation whose wickedness was arrived at such a height, as required an immediate check. Accordingly, a heavy cover is cast upon her, and she is carried into exile in a distant land, there to abide the full time allotted for her punishment. Blayney.

2. — twenty cubits.—The roll was very ample, to show what a number of curses should come upon the wicked.

3. — cut off.—Houbigant prefers נקם, puniatur, sive ultio de eo sumetur. נקם, vindicabitur, occurs in Pual ; or we may read נקם, ulciscens sum. Another conjecture is נכה, part. Niphal, percussus erit: the word read by the Chaldee paraphrast, according to Houbigant.

“Because on the one hand every one that stealeth, is as he that is guiltless; and on the other hand, every one that sweareth is as he that is guiltless.” For כמיה נקה read כמו הנקה. נקה signifies innocent, blameless. כמיה and כמיה signify, on one side, and on the other. And the reason assigned for “the curse going through the whole land,” is, that the good and the bad, the innocent and the guilty, were treated alike ; so that it was time for divine justice to interpose and make the proper distinction. Blayney.

— from hence.—From the land. But Houbigant understands מזה of time, and renders it deinceps.

— according to it.—According to its tenor. But 6. MS. A. read twice במות, or למות, to death.

4 I have brought it forth, saith Jehovah God of hosts ;
And it shall enter into the house of him who stealeth :
And into the house of him who sweareth ‡ falsely by my
name :

And it shall § abide in his house,
And shall consume it, || with the timber thereof, and the stones thereof.

5 Then the angel who talked with me went forth, and said unto me, Lift up now thine eyes, and see, what 6 this is which * goeth forth. And I said, What is it ?
And he said, This is an ephah, which † goeth forth.
7 And he said, This is their iniquity in all the land. And behold, a talent of lead was lifted up : and behold, a

‡ Heb. to a falsehood. § Or, shall abide the night. || Heb. and.

* Or, cometh.

† Or, cometh.

4 — abide.—And shall at length consume it. Or, according to Houbigant, it shall abide the night in his house, which shall be consumed suddenly, and in one night.

This vision may be considered as a republication of the curses contained in Deut. xxvii. xxvii. ; the thief and the false swearer, says Cappellus, are put for every kind of transgressor.

5 — went forth.—Advanced onward, to view the object which presented itself at a distance.

— goeth forth.—Approacheth us in vision.

6. — an ephah.—A vessel in the form of an ephah, but more capacious.

— their iniquity.—Read עֲוֹנוֹם, with 6. Ar. Syr. Houbigant, and one MS. The vau is on a rasure in two other MSS. This woman representeth their iniquity in all the land.

In this there is somewhat of a mistake. The case stands thus: four MSS. exhibit at present עֲוֹנוֹם, in one of which the whole word, in another v is upon a rasure. Hence it is inferred, that the original word have been עֲוֹנוֹם, in those two MSS. But it is clear, that, in the latter instance, the presumption can go no farther than עֲוֹנוֹם. And this, I am persuaded, was the true reading, and is confirmed by Syr, which renders in the plural. But, if we read עֲוֹנוֹם, “their iniquity,” I doubt it will be difficult to find a proper antecedent noun, to which the affix can be referred. Blayney.

7. — a talent.—This lid of the ephah weighed 3000 shekels, or 1500 ounces. It is called אֶבֶן, a stone, or, weight.

- 8 woman sat ‡ within the ephah. And he said This is wickedness. And he cast her § within the ephah; and he cast the weight of lead upon the mouth thereof.
- 9 Then I lifted up mine eyes, and looked; and behold, two women || went forth, and the wind was in their wings: for they had wings as the wings of a stork: and they lifted up the ephah between the earth and between
- 10 the heavens. Then said I to the angel who talked with
- 11 me, Whither do these bear the ephah? And he said unto me, To build it an house in the land of * Babylon: and it shall be established and set there upon its base.

‡ Heb. In the midst of. § Heb. in the midst of. || Or, came. * Heb. Shinar.

— And behold, a woman.—The true reading is ורעה. See V. 6. Ar. “Omittit Syr. et sane potuit a præcedenti שאת oriri.” Secker.

— wickedness.—“The wicked one.” That is, the wicked one representing the wicked nation. Her being driven back within the ephah denotes the check given to her farther progress; and the weight of lead, the weight of God’s judgments falling upon her. Blayney.

8. — he cast her within.—The angel caused her to contract herself within the compass of the vessel.

9. — two women.—Mere agents in the symbolical visions.

— was in their wings.—Their flight was promoted by the wind. Insolitos docuere nixus venti. Hor.

— lifted up.—Thirty-four MSS. and six ed. read ורעאתה.

These and other circumstances mentioned in this verse, seem to indicate nothing more particular, than that Providence would make use of quick and forcible means to effect its purpose. The stork, like other birds of passage, is provided with strong wings.

10. — bear.—Twenty-four MSS. and three ed. read מוליכיה.

11. — an house.—A mansion, an abiding-place, where, when the ephah is set on its base, the woman denoting iniquity shall be imprisoned.

The meaning of the vision seems to be, that the Babylonish captivity had happened on account of the wickedness committed by the Jews; and that a like dispersion would befall them, if they relapsed into like crimes. Thus the whole chapter will be an awful admonition that multiplied curses, and particularly dispersion and captivity, would be the punishment of national guilt.

But Cappellus’s interpretation well deserves our attention. He considers v. 8, as denoting that God treads on the neck of wickedness, and restrains it from expatiating; and v. 9, 10, 11, as signifying that God was propitious

CHAPTER VI.

1 AND again I lifted up mine eyes, and looked; and behold four chariots went forth from between two moun-to the Jews, and transferred the punishment of iniquity to the Babylonians, whom the weight of divine vengeance should ever depress. It may be added to the remark of this critic, that Babylon was soon to suffer a signal calamity from the reigning Persian monarch.

---

CHAP. VI. 1. The main design of this eighth and last vision, is to confirm the Jews in their faith and dependence upon God, by showing them, that, weak and defenceless as they seemed to be, they had nothing to fear from the greatest earthly powers, whilst they remained under the divine protection; since all those powers originally proceeded from the counsels of the Almighty, were the instruments of his providence, and could not subsist nor act but under his permission. Four chariots drawn by horses of different colours, represent the four great empires of the world in succession, the Assyrian or Babylonian, the Persian, Grecian, and Roman, distinguishable both by their order and attributes. The first, is only enumerated, and nothing more said of it, having already run its career. The second is characterized by going forth against the land of the earth. The third, by going forth against the posterity of the preceding. And the fourth, whose horses were spotted and strong, by their conquests in the south. These are also said to be ambitious, soliciting and obtaining permission to extend their dominion far and wide. The second are also said to have already executed God's judgments upon the land of the north. —After this the prophet is favoured with another revelation respecting a kingdom differing from all the preceding. By God's command, in the presence of witnesses, and for a memorial to them, he places a crown, or crowns, upon the head of Joshua the high priest, thereby constituting him a type of Christ, the Branch, whom he proclaims as about to come to build the spiritual temple of Jehovah, and to preside over it, both as king and priest, for the great purpose of peace. The accession of strangers to assist in building the temple is foretold, and given as a proof of the prophet's divine mission. Blayney.

—four chariots.—A chariot is in itself no unfit emblem of government. But a chariot of war very aptly represents a conquering nation, rushing furiously on, and overturning all before it. Such were the four formidable empires before-mentioned. But these four chariots are described as coming forth from between two mountains of brass, meaning

2 tains : and the mountains were mountains of brass. To the first chariot were red horses, and to the second 3 chariot black horses, and to the third chariot white horses, and to the fourth chariot spotted bay 4 horses. Then I answered and said unto the angel who 5 talked with me, What are these, my lord? And the angel answered and said unto me, These are four spirits probably the firm and unalterable decrees of the Almighty, by which they stood confined, as within the barriers of a course, till it pleased the great master of the race to give the signal for starting. Blayney.

2. — red horses.—"Bay horses." I question if the colours of the horses design any thing more than the diversity of the people of whom those empires respectively consisted; not any characteristic quality belonging to them. Blayney.

3. — spotted.—With white spots, like hail. Kimchi. Bochart Hieroz. P. I. L. II. c. vii. Sec. v. guttati, λευκοστικτοι.

— bay.—V. renders, et fortes; as if the reading was רַמְצִים. Bochart gives רַמְצִים the same sense with רַמְצִי, Isa. lxiii. 1; and thinks that it denotes a bright red, "ruborem, οξυςτρον, qui plus habet vigoris atque luminis;" and he shows that four horses of different colours were sometimes yoked together by the ancients. See Iphig. in Aul. 220—5. One MS. seems to read רַמְצִים, and fourteen MSS. and two editions read רַמְצִים. Now the vau is never elsewhere inserted between the second and third radicals of רַמְצִי, fortis, but רַמְצִי, tinctus rubro, occurs, Isa. lxiii. 1. רַמְצִים, tincti rubro, may, therefore, be the true reading in the place before us. My opinion is, that the words רַמְצִים בְּרִידִים signify party-coloured horses, whose two colours were white and red.

I join with the Vulgate in rendering רַמְצִים, according to the usual acception of the word, fortes, robusti, "strong;" and the rather because the Roman empire, which I suppose to be here designed, is characterized by Daniel, ch. vii. 7, 19, 23, as more strong and powerful than any of the preceding. בְּרִידִים, signifies, "spotted as with hail." And it is to be noted that when they, like the rest of the horses, are distinguished by their colour, v. 6, they are simply called הַבְּרִידִים. But when they afterwards, v. 7, as in confidence of their strength, petition to have the range of the whole earth, then they are styled רַמְצִים, "the strong ones." Vulg. robustissimi. Blayney.

5. — spirits.—Or angels, the ministers of God's will. See Dan. x. 13, 20, 21.

"Winds." So רוחות should be rendered, as it is in the margin of our bibles, and by δ. άνεμοι, Vulg. venti. The before-cited prophecy of Daniel also begins thus: "Behold, four winds of the heaven (in the Chald. שְׁמַיָּא

- of the heavens, who go forth from standing before the 6 Lord of all the earth. The black horses, which are thereto, go forth into the north country, and the white go forth after them: and the spotted go forth into the south country.
 7 And the bay went forth, and sought to go, even to move to and fro in the earth; and he said, Go:
 8 move ye to and fro in the earth. And they moved to and fro in the earth. Then he called me, and spake רוּחַ) strove upon the great sea," Dan. vii. 2. But how, it may be asked, could these chariots be said to be winds? Like strong winds, they rushed violently on, and produced great agitations and commotions in the earth, the effect of strong winds both by sea and land. And these winds are said to go forth from attending upon the lord of the whole earth; that is, they waited his pleasures, and went forth like ministers, "fulfilling his word." Ps. cxlviii. 8. Blayney.

6. The black horses.—As for that in which are the black horses, they &c. Secker.

— after them.—"Against their successors." אַחֲרֵיהֶם, the successors of the Persians, who were designed by the black horses. Blayney.

7. — sought to go.—They walked, sæm. referring to רוּחוֹת, or מְרַכְבּוֹת. Secker. The ambition of the Romans is here described, who, under the divine permission, extended their conquests to every quarter of the globe. Blayney.

8. — called me.—See וָקַע, thus used, Judges iv. 10, 13.

The black horses seem to denote the Persian empire, which, by subduing the Chaldeans, and being about to inflict a second heavy chastisement on Babylon, quieted God's spirit with respect to Chaldea; a country always spoken of as lying to the north of the Jews. See on Zeph. ii. 13. The white horses seem to be the Macedonian empire; which, like the Persian, overcame Chaldea. The spotted bay horses seem to be the Roman empire. Cappellus says, that this description suits it, because it was governed by kings, consuls, dictators, and emperors. It penetrated southward to Egypt and Africa, v. 6; and, as Houbigant observes, "stare loco nesciebat, aut cancellis coerceri," v. 7. Nothing is said of the bloody Assyrian empire, denoted by the red horses, v. 2; because it had passed away. The Roman empire is mentioned twice. v. 6 and v. 7; under each epithet given it, v. 3.

The two brazen mountains may be merely an ornamental part of the vision; or they may denote God's firm and immutable decrees, by which he governs the earth. "His righteousness is like great mountains," Ps.

unto me, saying : See, those that go forth into the north country have quieted my spirit in the north country.

9 And the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying :

10 Take from those of the captivity, from the family of Heldai, and from that of Tobijah, and from that of Jedaiah ; and thou shalt go on the same day, and shalt enter into the house of Josiah, the son of Zephaniah, xxxvii. 6. Vitringa in Apocalyps. vi. 1, 2, p. 247, thus interprets the passage, “ e medio veluti immutabilium Dei decretorum.”

— quieted my spirit.—“ See those that went forth against the north country have caused my wind to rest upon the north country.” The sense of this passage has been quite mistaken by those who read הניחו את רוחי, “ have quieted my spirit.” רוח, signifies wind here as well as verse 5, and denotes a judgment or calamity sent by God, as all the four winds likewise do. So רוח is used, Jer. iv. 11, 12. And הניח signifies to cause to rest or abide, that is, to inflict. See Isa. xxx. 32. Ezek. v. 13. xxiv. 13. And the same verb in Kal signifies to rest or settle upon, as a calamity doth, Exod. x. 14. Blayney.

9. — came unto me.—After the night on which the foregoing eight visions were represented to the prophet.

10. — the captivity.—After a busy night of visions, the prophet is commissioned to proceed, the next morning, we may suppose, to communicate by an external sign or memorial, another prophecy of a most important and interesting nature. מ is sometimes used partitively, or to express part of a whole, in which sense it may easily be understood, when placed before את הגולה, to denote some of those who had been in exile, and were returned home. But when afterwards it is found before the names of individuals as מחלדי, &c., it seems to be redundant or expletive, of which Noldius cites instances before accusatives. For it appears to me, that the prophet is not required to take the silver and gold from the persons named, but to take them as witnesses of what he was going about, and to go with them into the house of Josiah, the son of Zephaniah, and when there, to take silver and gold, and cause it to be made into a crown or crowns for the purposes specified. Blayney.

— from the family of Heldai.—One MS. reads מנחת חלדי.

— and from that of Tobijah.—Many MSS. and some editions read ומנחת. So V. 6. Ar. Syr. Chald.

— and thou shalt go.—For אתה, thou. Houbigant reads אִתָּם, with them.

— Josiah.—Probably a worker in gold and silver.

11 who * returned from Babylon. And thou shalt take silver and gold, and shalt make crowns; and shalt set one on the head of Joshua, the son of Josedeck, the 12 high priest. And thou shalt speak unto him, saying :

Thus speaketh Jehovah God of hosts ;

Saying :

Behold the man † whose name is The Branch ;

And he shall branch out from his place ;

* Heb. came.

† Heb. The Branch is his name.

— who returned.—One MS. reads בָּא, venit ; agreeably to 6. Ar. Syr. “What shall be taken is not said till the next verse, and the words, which are come from Babylon, stand at the end in Heb. and all old versions. 6. Syr. have, who is. It should be, whither they are come. So אָשׁר is used, Numb. xiii. 27. 1 Kings xii. 2.” Secker.

11. — make.—That is, cause to be made by the artist.

— crowns.—Syr. Chald one ed. two MSS. and 6 ed. Pachom. read עֲטָרָה, a crown.

עֲטָרָה, is singular. Silver and gold might be used in the same crown.—If the former וְיִזְכְּרוּ in וְיִזְכְּרוּ, were omitted, as Ch. omits it, and there is a ו immediately before it, or if it be superfluous, as often, but not naturally here ; the translation would be, Behold, the man, whose name is the Branch, shall branch up ; and so Joshua would not have the name given him, but only a prophecy made to him on putting this crown on him, just of the same nature with that which was made him when the mitre was put on him, ch. iii. 5, 8. Or if עֲבָדִי depended immediately on דָּבָר, it would not prove the presence of that servant, but only assert the certainty of his coming. See Isa. xlii. 1. קָצַף, signifies to receive, Ps. xxiv. 5. The counsel of peace between them both agrees excellently to Zerubbabel and Joshua.

12. — The Branch.—Zerubbabel.

There cannot be a doubt that the same person is meant by The Branch here who is so called, ch. iii. 8, and this has already been shown to be, not Zerubbabel, but the Messiah himself ; of whom Joshua is made a type, by the crown placed on his head. But to what end should he have been called in to represent Zerubbabel, who was his contemporary, and altogether as ready at hand as himself ? Nor will this passage, strictly and literally translated, answer to any other but him, who was at once both king and priest, and, by uniting both characters in himself, was completely qualified to bring about the counsel of peace or reconciliation between God and man. Blayney.

- And he shall build the temple of Jehovah ;
 13 And he shall receive glory,
 And shall sit and rule upon his throne.
 And a priest shall also be upon his throne :
 And the counsel of peace shall be between these two.
 14 And there shall be a crown for Heldai, and for Tobijah, and for Jedaiah, and for Josiah the son of Zephaniah ;

— And he shall build.—After this hemistich follows another of the same import,

“ Even he shall build the temple of Jehovah.”

But ô. Ar. Syr. omit the repetition. I consider the present Hebrew text as giving us two different readings of the same clause, one of which should be expunged. “ In my opinion, this clause is not superfluous, but highly emphatic, implying that ‘ Even He,’ the self same person, who should build the temple of Jehovah, even he, יהוה, should have the honour of governing and presiding in it both as king and priest, in both capacities advancing the peace and prosperity of his people.” Blayney.

— temple of Jehovah.—The church of Christ, which is expressly called, “ the temple of God,” 1 Cor. iii. 16. 2 Cor. vi. 16 ; “ a spiritual house,” 1 Pet. ii. 5, &c. Blayney.

13. — shall receive glory.—הדר, signifies the glory, the honour, and authority belonging to a sovereign or chief ruler. So when Moses was directed to give up his command and authority to Joshua, it is said, ונתת מהדרך עליו. “ And thou shalt put of thine honour upon him,” Numb. xxvii. 20. And in this sense Christ was to receive glory, ישא הדר, Ps. xxi. 5. Dan. vii. 14. Acts iii. 13. v. 31. Phil. ii. 9—11. Heb. ii. 9. He was to be exalted to the right hand of God, there to sit upon his throne, as a king, governing his church, and, as a priest, making intercession continually for it. It is impossible not to see that this prophecy was completed in Christ, so as it never could be in any other ; and, therefore, it must be understood of him. Blayney.

— be upon his throne.—ô. Ar. read על ימינו, on his right hand.

— counsel of peace.—Zerubbabel and Joshua shall firmly unite in promoting the public good.

14. — crown.—So ô. Ar. Syr.

— for Heldai.—So Syr. and Houbigant. הלב is plainly a corrupt reading.

— and for Josiah the son.—So Syr. And Houbigant observes that we must read thus, or ילבן צפניה, and for the son of Zephaniah.

15 for a memorial in the temple of Jehovah. And they that are far off shall come and build in the temple of Jehovah: and ye shall know that Jehovah God of hosts hath sent me unto you: and this shall come to pass, if ye will diligently hearken unto the voice of Jehovah your God.

---

CHAPTER VII.

I AND it came to pass, in the fourth year of Darius the king, that the word of Jehovah came unto Zechariah on

---

— memorial.—Of the pious zeal of these persons; when, after having been publicly worn by them, they are hung up in the temple.

— far off.—As in the building of Solomon's temple, at which the Tyrians assisted.

“This is a plain prediction of the coming in of the Gentiles, whom St. Paul expressly calls οἱ μακρὰν ὄντες, Eph. ii. 13, to build or constitute a part of the Christian church. Blayney.

— ye shall know.—As the foregoing words respect the conversion of the Gentiles, so do these both the unbelief and conversion of the Jews, of whom it is said, that they would then be assured of the truth of the prophet's mission, when they should be disposed to hearken to the divine call. Blayney.

— and this shall come to pass.—Syr. omits וזה. Houbigant places the whole clause at the beginning of the verse. “And it shall come to pass, if ye will diligently hearken unto the voice of Jehovah your God, that they who are far off,” &c.

CHAP. VII. 1. In these two chapters (vii. viii.) is contained a third and distinct revelation made to Zechariah, about two years after the former, of which the occasion and matter are as follows: A considerable progress having, by this time, been made in the rebuilding of the temple, and affairs going on pretty smoothly, the hopes of the Jewish nation began to revive, and a deputation was sent to inquire of the priests and the prophets, whether it was God's will that they should continue to observe the fast, which had been instituted on account of the city and temple having

- the fourth day of the ninth month, even in Chisleu:
 2 (Now Sharezer, and Regem-melech and his men, had been sent to the House of God, to entreat the face of
-

been burned by the Chaldeans. To this the prophet is directed to reply. That this, and another fast of the like kind, being of their own appointment, regarded themselves only, and not God; that which he required of them was the practice of moral righteousness, like as he had enjoined it to their fathers, who, disregarding his injunctions, had brought upon themselves and upon their country, all the evil which they had recently experienced. Having thus accounted for God's past severity, the prophet goes on to inform them, that the anger of Jehovah was now appeased, and he was again disposed to be gracious unto his people and to restore Jerusalem. He exhorts them, therefore, to proceed vigorously with the building of the temple; and assures them that they would, from that instant, experience a happy revolution in their affairs. He renews his exhortation to the practice of moral goodness; and promises, that on that condition, their fasts should be turned into joyful feasts, and they should be so distinguished by the divine favour, that many nations should be eager to embrace their religion and sue for their alliance. Blayney.

— Chisleu.—This month corresponded with the latter part of November and the beginning of December. Blayney.

2. — had been sent.—One had sent. See on Jon. iii. 7. Et miserunt, V. It is plain, says Houbigant, that all the people and the priests had sent. See v. 5. However, the construction may be, Now Sharezer, and Regem-melech and his men, had sent, &c. See Numb. xvi. 1. And a reply, addressed to all, may have been given to the doubt of a few leading men. “ó. Vulg. translate—that Sharezer &c. sent. And so Ch. is most naturally understood. And it is the easiest construction.” Secker.

I do not think that בית-אל is any where used in Scripture for the temple or tabernacle of Jehovah, but simply denotes the city or district of Bethel. If it be so understood here, then every grammatical difficulty will vanish, and it will be only necessary to conceive, that the community of Bethel had sent a deputation of its citizens, אנשי, with Sharezer and Regem-melech at their head, to inquire of the Lord by means of the priests who officiated in the house of Jehovah of hosts (so the temple is distinguished), whether they should or should not continue the fast specified, the reason of it having in a manner ceased. It may, however, be remarked, that the answer dictated to Zechariah is addressed to all the people of the land generally, and not to the inquirers only, because the matter was of universal concernment. All the ancient versions, except the Vulgate, consider Bethel here as the proper name; and in eight MSS. of the best note,

- 3 Jehovah : Speaking unto the priests who were in the House of Jehovah God of hosts, and unto the prophets, saying; Shall I weep in the fifth month, separating
 4 myself, as I have done these so many years?) Even the word of Jehovah God of hosts came unto me, saying:
 5 Speak unto all the people of the land, and unto the priests, saying; When ye fasted and mourned in the fifth month and in the seventh month, even those seventy 6 years, did ye * indeed fast unto me, even unto me? And when ye ate, and when ye drank, did ye not eat unto
 7 yourselves, and did ye not drink unto yourselves? Are not these the words which Jehovah proclaimed by † the * Heb. fast fasting.

† Heb. by the hand of.

collected by Dr. Kennicott, and two of the most ancient editions, בִּיתָאֵל is described as a single word without the Makkaph. Blayney.

3. — the fifth month.—The temple, and the houses and walls of Jerusalem, were destroyed in this month, 2 Kings xxv. 8—10.

5. — and mourned.—The versions, Chald., and our translators render, as if in the original they read וְסִפְּרָתָם; or, as Houbigant proposes, יִתְסַפְּרוּ. We may read סִפְּרָה, cum jejunaretis plangendo. So הִנָּצַר, separando me, v. 3. See on Haggai i. 4.

— the seventh month.—Gedaliah, whom Nebuchadnezzar had appointed ruler of the Jews, was murdered in that month, which was a source of new calamities, 2 Kings xxv. 25, 26. Jer. xli. 1, 10. xliv. 12.

— even those seventy years.—Nine MSS. and one ed. read וְהָיָה without the vau.

— fast unto me.—Twenty-five MSS. read צִמְמוֹתֵי; which is the regular form with the affix, and equivalent to צִמְמוֹת לִי. See Numb. xx. 5. Buxt. Thes. Gramm. p. 510.

— even unto me.—For a like form, see 1 Kings xxi. 19. Prov. xxii. 19. xxiii. 15. Ps. ix. 7. Affixi et integri ejusdem repetitio emphasin elegantem notat. Buxt. Thes. Gramm. p. 413. Schultens Animadv. Phil. refers to 1 Sam. xxv. 24.

6. — eat unto yourselves.—Here the construction may be conformable to that of אָכַל; or לָכֶם, vobis, may be understood. When ye offered sacrifices, after which ye feasted, did ye not, in this religious act, regard yourselves more than me?

7. — the words.—That אַתָּה is often used before the nominative case, see Noldius. “ó. Ch. Vulg. quasi legissent אַתָּה אֱלֹהִים pro אַתָּה.” Secker. This v. may refer to v. 5, 6: Did not the former prophets make like declarations

- former prophets, when Jerusalem remained still and prospered: and her cities round about her, and the 8 south, and the plain, were inhabited? Then the word of Jehovah came unto Zechariah, saying:
 9 Thus spake Jehovah God of hosts, saying;
 Judge true ‡ judgment,
 And shew mercy and § compassion
 Every man to his brother:
 10 And the widow, and the orphan,
 And the stranger, and the poor, oppress not:
 Neither imagine in your heart
 Every man evil against his brother.
 11 But they refused to hearken,

‡ Heb. the judgment of truth.

§ Heb. compassions.

concerning the inefficacy of your external observances? See Isa. lviii. 6, &c. &c. It may also refer to v. 9. And did not the former prophets insist on the superior excellence of moral duties? Amos v. 24. Micah vi. 8, &c. &c.

— remained still and prospered.—Sedens erat et tranquilla. See ch. i. 11.

Heb. “was sitting.” יָשָׁב. To sit denotes a state of permanent order and security, Ps. cxxv. Hence, a female figure, sitting in a chair of state, is the ordinary symbol, or the ancient one, to represent a city or nation whose constitution is entire and unmolested. But when it is overturned and ruined, the woman is seen cast from her seat, and lying or sitting on the ground. Blayney.

— the south, and the plain.—See on Obadiah 19.

— were inhabited.—We should read יָשָׁב, which agrees with יָנִיב, and is converted into the past tense by the distant vau. The vau is omitted in ch. ix. 5. xii. 6, but thirteen MSS. and two ed. insert it.

9. — spake.—Dixerat. Houbigant. Speaketh. Spoke. Secker.

10. — And the stranger.—Ten MSS. and four ed. read יָנִיב, with the ancient versions and Chald. The order of the next clause in the Hebrew is,

“And evil every man against his brother
 Imagine not in your heart.” See ch. viii. 17.

11. But they.—That is, they to whom God had spoken by the former prophets, and who, for their disobedience, were punished as follows. Blayney.

- And || withdrew the shoulder,
 And made their ears dull that they might not hear :
- 12 Yea, they made their heart as an adamant-stone,
 That they might not hear the law, and the words,
 Which Jehovah God of hosts sent by his Spirit,
 By * the former prophets.
 Therefore came great anger
 From Jehovah God of hosts.
- 13 And it came to pass that, as I called and they hearkened not,
 So they called and I hearkened not,
 Saith Jehovah God of hosts.
- 14 But I scattered them as with a whirlwind among all the nations
 Whom they knew not :
 And the land was desolate after them, so that no man passed through nor returned ;
 And they made a † pleasant land a ‡ desolation.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 AND the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying ;

|| Heb. gave a withdrawing shoulder.

* Heb. the hand of.

† Heb. a land of desire.

‡ Heb. for a desolation.

— And withdrew.—This line occurs Neh. ix. 29. The metaphor is taken from beasts that decline the yoke. See Hos. iv. 16.

12. — an adamant-stone.—Bochart shows that שֹׁמֵר means a hard stone, used to polish gems. Hieroz. P. II. 842.

13. — I called.—We may read קרא participle.

14. — I scattered them as with a whirlwind.—This sublime metaphor is expressed by a single word in the original.

— they knew not.—"Quas nesciebant eas," the ׁ being elegantly redundant, as Isa. liii. 4.

— after them.—After their departure. Bochart. Hieroz. P. II. L. IV. c. iv. p. 474.

CHAP. VIII. 1. — came unto me.—Twenty-one MSS. and four ed.

- 2 Thus saith Jehovah God of hosts :
 I have been jealous for Sion with a great jealousy,
 And with great wrath have I been jealous for her.
- 3 Thus saith Jehovah God of hosts :
 I have returned unto Sion,
 And I will dwell * in Jerusalem :
 And Jerusalem shall be called a city of truth ;
 And the mountain of Jehovah God of hosts, an † holy mountain.
- 4 Thus saith Jehovah God of hosts :
 Old men and old women shall yet dwell

* Heb. in the midst of.

† Heb. a mountain of holiness.

read אֵלֵי לֹאֲמֹר, and three other MSS. read so originally. This is also the reading of Syr. Chald. and of 6. MS. Pachom. προς με λεγων.

Addit Syr. וְיָרִיד עָלַי post. Ch. צְבֹאוֹת עָמִי post. Secker.

2. — jealousy—wrath.—Exercised against her oppressors “ Was jealous. Have been, or am, zealous. Jealousy. Zeal. See Lowth.” Secker. “ In the note, ch. i. 14, I gave it as my opinion, that the jealousy there spoken of, was God’s resentment against his people for their disloyalty and misbehaviour towards him, and was totally distinct from the anger with which he is said, in the following verse, to have been angry with the nations that oppressed them, whilst labouring under the divine displeasure. In this opinion I am confirmed by the present passage, where not the least mention is made of the persecuting nations ; but God’s former wrath, the effect of his jealousy, which had led him to punish his offending people with great severity, is contrasted with his present pacific and benign disposition, which would engage him, like a relenting husband, to go home again to his wife, and to treat her with all the marks of renewed regard and affection. That God’s jealousy bespeaks wrath towards the objects of it, needs no other proof than his own words, Numb. xxv. 11.” Blayney.

3. — God of hosts.—V. and eight MSS. add צְבֹאוֹת, agreeably to the other places throughout the chapter where this solemn exordium occurs.

— a city of truth. — See Zeph. iii. 13.

“ The city of the truth.” The article ה before אֱמֶת, denotes the truth by way of eminence, or the true religion ; so that Jerusalem was to be celebrated in future, as the city in which the true religion was particularly professed ; as the mountain of hosts (meaning the mountain of the temple) was to be for the residence of the most holy one. Blayney.

— an holy mountain.—On the restoration of the temple.

In the streets of Jerusalem :

Even the man that hath his staff in his hand for the number of his years.

5 And the streets of the city shall be filled
With boys and with girls playing in the streets thereof.

6 Thus saith Jehovah God of hosts :
Though it be ‡ wonderful in the eyes
Of the residue of this people in those days ;
Shall it also be § wonderful in mine eyes,
Saith Jehovah God of hosts :

7 Thus saith Jehovah God of hosts :
Behold, I will save my people
From the east-country, and from the country of sun-setting :

8 And I will bring them, and they shall dwell || in Jerusalem ;
And they shall be * my people,
And I will be † their God
In truth and in righteousness.

9 Thus saith Jehovah God of hosts :
Let your hands be strong,

‡ Or, difficult.      § Or, difficult.      || Heb. in the midst of.

* Heb. to me for a people.      † Heb. to them for a God.

4. — Jerusalem.—The walls of this city were not dedicated, Neh. xii. 27, till above sixty years after this prophecy.

6. — be wonderful.—"Shall it also be hard." So Gen. xviii. 14. יהפלא מיהרה דבר. "Is any thing too hard for the Lord?" Blayney.

8. And I will bring them.—Arab. and ó. MS. Pachom. add into their land, אל ארצם, which the place seems to require,

"And I will bring them into their land,
And they shall dwell in Jerusalem."

— my people.—Comp. Jer. xxxi. 33.

— In truth and in righteousness.—With faithfulness as to my promises ; and with favour and kindness towards those who obey me. "These words apply equally to God and his people ; and imply that they shall on both sides truly and faithfully perform all the conditions of the covenant once more renewed between them." Blayney.

- Ye that hear, in these days,
 These words from the mouth of the prophets
 Who live in the time when the foundation of the House of Jehovah God of hosts is laid,
Even the temple, that it may be built.
- 10 For before those days
There was no recompence to men,
 Neither was there any recompence to beasts :
 And to him that went out, or came in, there was no peace,
 because of distress :
 For I set all men, every one against his neighbour.
- 11 But now I will not be, as in former days,
 To the residue of this people,
 Saith Jehovah God of hosts.
- 12 For the seed shall be ‡ prosperous ;
 ‡ Heb. peace, or, of peace.

9. — in these days.—"These days," stands opposed to "the day in which the foundation of the temple was laid," which was two years before. And the people are exhorted to proceed vigorously with the building, inasmuch as they now heard the same things repeated to them by the mouth of the prophets, which had prevailed on them first to engage in it. The ellipsis of the verb after אשר is supplied from the preceding participle השמיעים. Comp. this passage with Haggai ii. 15—19. Blayney.

— Who live in the time.—ó. Syr. Vulg. quasi legissent ביום אשר : nec male. Secker.

— Even the temple.—Omittit Syr. Secker.

10. — no recompence.—No fruit of their labours, from my curse on the produce of their ground. See Haggai i. 6, 9, 10, 11. We should read איננו for איננו.

— distress.—Ezra iv. 1—4.

11. — former days.—When I was displeased with my people

12 — the seed.—We may render, For the seed-time shall be a time of peace. See Gen. viii. 22. Syr. reads בשלום, in, or with, peace; as Houbigant observes. ó. Ar. read אראה, I will show peace. "ó. quasi legissent אריע, sic enim ter vertunt מוטאעא." Secker.

"I will sow peace." זרע is the participle present, and being so taken, needs no alteration. In the preceding verse, God says, "I will not be to the residue of this people such as I was in former days," that is, a sower of discord, as ver. 10, but זרע השלום, "a sower of peace." To sow peace, or prosperity is to provide for its springing up in due time. Blayney.

The vine shall yield its fruit,
 And the ground shall yield its increase,
 And the heavens shall yield their dew :
 And I will cause the residue of this people to possess
 All these things.

- 13 And it shall come to pass that, as ye have been a curse among the nations,
 O house of Judah, and O house of Israel,
 I will so save you that ye shall be a blessing.
 Fear ye not : let your hands be strong.
- 14 For thus saith Jehovah God of hosts :
 As I thought to do you evil,
 When your fathers provoked me to anger,
 Saith Jehovah God of hosts,
 And I repented not ;
- 15 So § have I again thought, in these days,
 To do good unto Jerusalem,
 And unto the house of Judah. Fear ye not.
- 16 These are the things which ye shall do :
 Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbour :
 || Determine the truth, and the judgment of peace, in your gates.
- 17 Neither imagine in your heart

§ Heb. I have returned I have thought,

|| Heb. judge.

13. — of Israel.—Many of the ten tribes may be supposed to have returned from captivity in consequence of Cyrus's decree.

15 — again thought—ô. Ar. Syr. read וּמַחֲשֵׁב. But see Dan. iv. 25.

16. — Determine.—Pronounce true, or righteous, judgment; and such as tends to produce peace among men, by deterring the litigious and punishing the evil doer. Syr. and three MSS. read וְשִׁלֹּם: Determine truth, and judgment, and peace, &c. See v. 19. But Ar. and ô. MS. Pachom. omit אֱמֶת, the truth.

“ And determine the judgment of peace in your gates.”

17. Neither.—The order in the Hebrew is,

“ And every man evil against his neighbour Imagine not in your heart.”

See ch. vii. 10.

Every man evil against his neighbour :

And love not a * false oath,

For all these are things

Which I hate, saith Jehovah.

18 And the word of Jehovah God of hosts came unto me, saying ;

19 Thus saith Jehovah God of hosts :

The fast of the fourth month, and the fast of the fifth month,

And the fast of the seventh month, and the fast of the tenth month,

Shall be unto the house of Judah for joy and for gladness, And for cheerful seasons.

But love ye the truth and peace.

20 Thus saith Jehovah God of hosts :

It shall yet come to pass that [many] † people shall come, And the inhabitants of many cities :

21 And the inhabitants of one city shall go

* Heb. an oath of falsehood.

† Heb. peoples.

Mr. Lowth has an important remark on these two verses ; that the promises made to the Jews after the captivity were conditional.

19. — fourth month.—In which Jerusalem was taken, Jer. lii. 6.

— tenth month.—In which the siege of Jerusalem was begun, Jer. lii. 4. For the two other months, see on ch. vii. 3, 5.

— But love.—"Therefore love ye truth and peace." Blayney.

20. — It shall yet.—Nine MSS. and three ed. read ער, and Noldius agrees with the versions and Chald. in rendering ער אשר, adhuc. But if we read ער אשר, until, we must supply at the beginning of the verse, Do this, until, &c.

The design of these four verses is evidently to show the high degree of estimation in which Jerusalem and the Jews would hereafter be held by foreign nations, when those among them who were piously disposed to worship the true God, would come to worship him at Jerusalem as a place of peculiar sanctity ; and those who wanted protection would humbly sue to a Jew for it, convinced that the men of that nation were especial objects of divine favour. See ch. ii. 11. Blayney.

— many people.—Many of the gentiles. 6. Ar. and one MS. add רבים, many. See v. 22.

Unto another, saying;
 Let us surely go to entreat the face of Jehovah,
 And to seek Jehovah God of hosts :
 I will go also.

22 And many ‡ people and mighty nations shall come
 To seek Jehovah God of hosts in Jerusalem,
 And to entreat the face of Jehovah.

23 Thus saith Jehovah God of hosts :
 That in those days ten men shall take hold,
 From among all the languages of the nations,
 They shall even take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew,
 Saying ; We will go with you :
 For we have heard that God is with you.

CHAPTER IX.

1 THE prophecy of the word of Jehovah :

‡ Heb. peoples.

21. — to entreat the face.—"To supplicate the favour." Blayney. So v. 22.

— And to seek.—"And to seek Jehovah of hosts will I go also." Blayney.

23. — ten men.—That is, many men. See on Micah v. 5.

— take hold of the skirt.—See Isa. iii. 6 ; iv. 1 ; 1 Sam. xv. 27 ; Bishop Lowth's note on the first passage, and Harmer ii. 32. It is a gesture naturally used to entreat assistance and protection. This and the three foregoing verses refer to the great accession of converts which the Jewish church received between the captivity and the coming of Christ, to the number of Christian disciples which the Jewish preachers made, and to the future conversions of which the restoration of the Jews will be an eminent cause.

— go with you.—6. Ar. Syr. read נָךְ, with thee.

CHAP. IX. 1. The prophecy.—J. Mede, in his remarks on Matt. xxvii. 9, 10. Epist. xxxi., says : "It may seem the Evangelist would inform us that those latter chapters ascribed to Zachary, namely, the ninth, tenth, eleventh, &c., are indeed the prophecies of Jeremy, and that the Jews had not rightly attributed them. Certainly, if a man weigh the contents of some of them, they should in likelihood be of an elder date than the time of Zachary ; namely, before the captivity : for the subjects of some of them were scarce in being after that time. And the chapter out of which St. Matthew quotes, ch. xi, may seem to have somewhat much unsuitable with Zachary's time ; as a prophecy of the destruction of the temple, than when he was to encourage them to build it. And how doth the sixth verse of that chapter suit with his time ? There is no scripture saith they are Zachary's, but there is a scripture saith they are Jeremy's, as this of the evangelist. As for there being joined to the prophecies of Zachary, that proves no more they are his, than the like adjoining of Agur's proverbs to Solomon's proves they are therefore Solomon's ; or that all the psalms are David's because joined in one volume with David's psalms." See more, Epist. lxi. "As for the titles in the tops of every page, it matters not ; it is a later device. The Jews wrote in rolls or volumes, and the title was but once. If ought were added to the roll, ob similitudinem argumenti, or for some other reason, it had a new title, as that of Agur ; or perhaps none, but was αρωρυμον."—"It is certain, that Jeremy's prophecies are digested in no order, but only as it seems they came to light in the scribe's hands. Hence sometimes all is ended with Zedekiah ; then we are brought back to Jehoiakim, then to Zedekiah again, &c. Whereby it seems they came not to light to be enrolled secundum ordinem temporis, nor all together, but as it happened in so distracted a time. And why might not some not be found till the return from captivity, and be approved by Zachary, and so put to his volume according to the time of their finding and approbation by him, and after that some other prophecies yet added of his ?" See Wolf. Cur. Phil. Matt. xxvii. 8. Hammond on Heb. viii. 9. Kidder, Dem. Mess. Part II. c. iii. p. 75. 2d. ed. fol. Dr. Owen on the Septuagint Version, p. 57. Randolph's texts cited in the N. T. n. 28. Kidder's words are, "This is certain, that such things are contained in these chapters as agree well with the time of Jeremiah, but by no means with that of Zechariah." He quotes ch. ix. 5. x. 11, and he supposes that, ch. xiv. 5, there is a reference to a recent fact.

On the land of Hadrach, and on Damascus, * shall it rest :

* Heb. shall be the resting thereof.

In MS. 195, Bibl. Kenn. this chapter is divided from ch. viii. by the breadth of one line ; but between the preceding chapters there is not so great a distance.

In the English bibles, the chronological date to ch. viii. is, Before Christ 518 ; but to ch. ix. Before Christ cir. 587 ; which latter is the year in which

(For the eye of Jehovah is over man.

---

Jerusalem was taken by the Babylonians. But, ch. ii. 4, Zechariah is called נער, a young man.

The eight first chapters appear by the introductory parts, to be the prophecies of Zechariah, stand in connection with each other, are pertinent to the time when they were delivered, are uniform in style and manner, and constitute a regular whole. But the last six chapters are not expressly assigned to Zechariah; are unconnected with those which precede; the three first of them are unsuitable in many parts to the time when Zechariah lived; all of them have a more adorned and poetical turn of composition than the eight first chapters, see præf. Heb. 282, and they manifestly break the unity of the prophetical book.

I conclude from internal marks in ch. ix. x. xi. that these three chapters were written much earlier than the time of Jeremiah, and before the captivity of the ten tribes. Israel is mentioned, ch. ix. 1. xi. 14; [but that this argument is inconclusive, see Mal. ii. 11.] Ephraim, ch. ix. 10, 13. x. 7. and Assyria, ch. x. 10, 11. Other remarks will be made in the notes. They seem to suit Hosea's age and manner. But whoever wrote them, their divine authority is established by the two quotations from them in the New Testament, ch. ix. 9. xi. 12, 13.

The twelfth, thirteenth, and fourteenth chapters form a distinct prophecy, and were written after the death of Josiah, ch. xii. 11; but whether before or after the captivity, and by what prophet, is uncertain. Though I incline to think, that the author lived before the destruction of Jerusalem by the Babylonians. See on ch. xiii. 2—6. They are twice quoted in the New Testament, ch. xii. 10. xiii. 7.

“Before we proceed further, it may not be amiss to take into consideration the conclusiveness of certain arguments which have been brought to prove that Zechariah could not have been the author of the six chapters that follow.

“First, it is alleged, that the Evangelist St. Matthew, ch. xxvii. 9, cites a passage found in Zech. xi. 13, as spoken, not by Zechariah, but by the prophet Jeremiah, δια Ιερεμου του προφητου. But is it not possible, nay, is it not much more probable, that the word Ιερεμου may have been written by mistake, by some transcribers of Matthew's gospel, than that those of the Jewish church who settled the canon of scripture, of whom Zechariah himself is supposed to have been one, should have been so grossly ignorant of the right author of these chapters as to place them under a wrong name? It is not, I think, pretended that these chapters have been found in any copy of the Old Testament otherwise placed than as they now stand. But in the New Testament there are not wanting authorities for omitting the word Ιερεμου. Nor is it impossible to account plausibly for the wrong insertion of Ιερεμιου, Matt. xxvii. 9, by observing that exactly the same words occur Matt. ii. 17, where we read Τότε ἐπληρώθη τὸ ῥηθὲν ὑπο (in some copies δια ; see Wetstein.) Ιερεμιου τοῦ προφήτου, λεγοντος. Now, supposing the transcriber to have had in his copy either δια τοῦ προφήτου only, or δια Ζαχαρίου τοῦ προφήτου, yet carrying in his mind what he had written a little before, he might inadvertently and without intention have written the same over again, as will easily be granted by those who are at all used to transcribe.

And over all the tribes of Israel :)

---

“Secondly, it is urged, that many things are mentioned in these chapters which by no means correspond with Zechariah’s time, as when events are foretold which had actually taken place. But it may be questioned whether those subjects of prophecy have been rightly understood; and whether that which has been construed as having a reference to past transactions, may not in reality terminate in others of a later period, and some perhaps which are yet to come.

“Thirdly, another argument is drawn from ch. xi., which contains a prophecy of the destruction of the temple and people of the Jews; ‘a prophecy,’ it is said, ‘not agreeable to the scope of Zechariah’s commission, who, together with Haggai, was sent to encourage the people lately returned from captivity to build their temple, and to inaugurate their commonwealth.’ J. Mede. Epist. lxi. I grant that this was the general scope of Zechariah’s commission in the eight first chapters; and that it would not have been ‘a fit time to foretell the destruction of both the temple and commonwealth, while they were but yet a building.’ But, between the date of those first chapters, and that of the succeeding ones, many circumstances might have occurred, and certainly did occur, to give rise to a commission of a very different complexion from the foregoing. The former are expressly dated in the second and fourth years of the reign of Darius; to the latter no date at all is annexed. Darius is supposed to have reigned thirty-six years; and the Jews have a tradition, that the three prophets, Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi, did not die before the last year of that king’s reign. Admitting then, that Zechariah prophesied again toward the close of his life, he may well be supposed to have published, without any incongruity after such an interval what would not altogether have accorded with the period and purport of his first commission. And, as there is good reason to believe this was the case, so upon this ground we may not improbably conclude him to have been that very Zechariah of whom our Saviour spake as slain between the temple and the altar, Matt. xxiii. 35. For he was, according to our Saviour’s description, the son of Barachiah; and comes in, where, from what is said of him, he might naturally be expected, at the close of that series of prophets who were put to death in the faithful discharge of their duty. That he was become obnoxious to his countrymen may be collected from ch. xi. 8. And if the records of the Old Testament are silent concerning his death, let it be remembered, that it was a very small part of them, if any, that was written after that event.

2 And also on Hamath, which bordereth thereby;

“Lastly, upon the same supposition, the allowed difference of style and manner may be accounted for, not only as arising from the diversity of the subject, but from the different age of the author, who may well be credited to have written with more dignity in his advanced years, than when he was but a youth as he is said to be, ch. ii. 4. Upon the whole, this conclusion may be drawn, that, setting aside the doubtful authority of St. Matthew’s text, there is nothing else to be found sufficient to invalidate the title of Zechariah to the chapters in question.

“Though it may be doubted whether any more than a small part of the foregoing chapters be metrical, it is very evident that all that follow are so altogether.

“This chapter begins with announcing the fate of the Syrians, Sidonians, and Philistines, contrasted with the better prospects of the Jewish nation. It foretells the coming of the Messiah to Jerusalem, and the peace of his kingdom. The restoration of Israel and Judah is afterwards predicted, together with a series of glorious victories and great prosperity, which are set forth at large in this and the following chapter.” Blayney.

— Hadrach.—A name for the valley of Damascus. Boch. Geogr. L. II. c. vi. The name of a place near Damascus, according to some Jewish Rabbies. Calmet’s Comm.

No such name as Hadrach occurs in scripture; but a Syrian king, who is called Rehob, 2 Sam. viii. 3, is by Josephus named Αραος or Αραχος, which probably was his proper and real name; that of Rehob, or the Charioteer, having been added characteristically on account of the number of his chariots, 2 Sam. viii. 4. This prince reigned over that part of Syria which was called Zobah: so that, if by the land of Hadrach, or Arach, he meant the kingdom of Zobah, the three capital kingdoms of Syria, Zobah, Damascus, and Hamath, will then be cited for the whole. Blayney.

— shall it rest.—God’s anger rests on those whom he punishes, Ezek. v. 13. xvi. 42. xxiv. 13. And his rod, or his arm, rests on his enemies, Ps. cxxv. 3. Isa. xxx. 32. The punctuation and rendering are suggested by Taylor, Conc. Voc. חָמָה.

— Damascus.—“The prophecies against Damascus and the Philistines would better befit Jeremy’s time, of their destruction by Nebuchadnezzar, than (if of Zachary’s time) by Alexander. See the prophecy against Damascus, Jer. xlix. 23; against the Philistines, xlvii. 2, and Ezek. xxv. 15. For where do we find Damascus destroyed from Zachary's to our Saviour's time? For to come under the hands of new masters, or suffer some direption or pillaging, doth not seem to satisfy the intent of the prophecy. And for the Philistines, though it be true that Alexander destroyed Gaza, (because it held out long against him, and he was wounded there,) yet it appears not that any such desolation befel Askelon whereby it should not be inhabited, or Ashdod; nor should they seem in Zachary's time to have so well recovered that clades by Nebuchadnezzar, as to be a subject ripe for a new prophecy to that purpose.

On Tyre, and on Sidon, though she be very wise.

"That of Tyre, v. 3, I doubt whether it so well befits her that had so lately been destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar; sure not so well as it would the time of Jeremy. See Ezekiel's prophecies thereabout, ch. xxvi. xxvii. xxviii." J. Mede Epist. lxi.

Damascus was betrayed by a Persian governor into the hands of Parmenio, one of Alexander's generals; but, it seems, without bloodshed. Prideaux, P. I. Anno 333. Curt. III. c. 13. Arrian. L. ii. 15.

Nor could Zechariah prophesy of the Syrian conquests by Pharaoh Necho or Nebuchadnezzar; because in the second year of Darius Hystaspis he is called a youth, see ch. i. 7. ii. 4; that is, according to Blair, 42 years after the death of Nebuchadnezzar; and probably fifty after his invasion of Syria.

—is over man.—Houbigant supplies על before ארם. Or ב may be supplied, or perhaps understood; as the preposition very often is. Thus the sense is agreeable to the ancient versions, where we find, "For the Lord seeth men," &c. "For the sons of man are manifest to the Lord," &c. "Or, For the eye over man, &c., belongs to the Lord. So 6. Ch. Syr." Secker.

עין אדם, oculus hominem respiciens. Casus secundus apud Hebræos sæpe objectum denotat, Matt. x. 1. Act. iv. 3. Gal. iii. 22. Bahrdr in Joelem iii. 19.

"When toward Jehovah shall be the eyes of men, and of all the tribes of Israel." I cannot conceive how these words can be made to signify, "the eyes of Jehovah over man," as represented by Houbigant and the ancient versions. The order of the words leads plainly to our present English translation. And this implies that a time would come when men, and the tribes of Israel in particular, should turn their eyes towards Jehovah, either in hope of deriving some blessings from him, or in gratitude for mercies received from him. But the scope of the prophecy goes to show, that even at that time those devoted nations had no chance of emerging; the burden would still rest or settle upon them. Blayney.

2. — on Hamath.—ο have ἐν Ημαθ, ed. Vat. probably supplying the

- 3 Though Tyre hath built her a fortress,
And hath heaped up silver as dust,
And fine gold as the mire of the streets ;
4 Behold, Jehovah will † cast her out,
And will smite her strength in the sea,

† Or, dispossess her.

preposition from the exigentia loci. I suppose that Hamath, on the river Orontes, is meant.

— which *bordere*th.—“ Or, which borders. Michaelis.” Secker.

“ And Hamath also shall be bordered by the enemy.” That is, the enemy shall come and possess himself of her coasts. This sense, which corresponds with what is said of the two other Syrian kingdoms, on which the burden should rest, is produced by simply reading כהצר for צר. הצר is used for a foreign invader, ch. viii. 10, and the proposed combination will be found to obviate many difficulties which follow the present reading of the text. It is easy to see how צר came to be detached, and considered as meant for Tyre ; Tyre and Sidon being frequently named together in scripture. But Sidon is referred to singly in the following context as will appear from the translation. Blayney.

— and Sidon.—Sidon was the capital of Phœnicia, and mother of Tyre ; for Justin informs us, Lib. XVIII. c. 3, that the Sidonians, when their city was taken by the king of Ascalon, betook themselves to their ships and built Tyre. Hence Tyre is called the daughter of Sidon, Isa. xxiii. 12.

“ And Sidon, though she be very wise ;
And hath built Tyre a fortress for herself ;
And hath heaped up silver as dust.”

Blayney.

— very wise.—See Ezek. xxviii. 3, 4, 5. Acutissimam gentem Prænos dixisse convenit, Imbecilliozem agrum, quam agricolam, esse debere. Columella.

3. — Tyre.—We have a paronomasia in צר and כהצר.

— fine gold.—Gold cut into ingots, or into coins ; from חרץ concidere.

4. — strength in the sea.—See Ezek. xxvi. 17.

The Sidonians (according to Diodorus Siculus), on the approach of an army, sent against them by Ochus, king of Persia, first of all destroyed their shipping at sea, and then retiring within the walls of the city, when they found they could hold out no longer, set fire to their houses, and burned themselves and their effects together. Thus their power in the sea was effectually smitten, when, by burning their ships, their commerce, the source of their riches, was annihilated ; and their last act of desperation completely verified the remaining part of the prophecy. No wonder if

- And she shall be devoured by fire.
- 5 Ashkelon shall see it, and shall fear ;
 Gaza shall also see it, and shall be greatly pained :
 And Ekron shall be pained, because her expectation is put to shame :
 And the king shall perish from Gaza ;
 And Ashkelon shall not be inhabited :
 6 And ‡ strangers shall dwell in Ashdod :

‡ Heb. a stranger.

their neighbours, the Philistines, were struck with consternation, at seeing the fate of those on whose assistance they depended. Blayney.

5. — see—fear.—The words in the original have a similar sound, חירא, וחרא. “Rather, and tremble greatly, or, be greatly afraid. For so the word signifies, 1 Chron. xvi. 30. Ps. ii. 11. xevii. 4. cix. 8. Jer. v. 22 ; and elsewhere, to be in pain as of childbirth. But I know not that it is used of grief ; and understanding it of fear suits best with what precedes.” Secker.

— put to shame.—Confusa est spes ejus, V. I propose חירב in Hophal ; though the verb does not occur in that form. Perhaps אירש, or אחר, may be understood ; “because one hath put to shame her expectation ;” which form is often rendered passively. See on Jon. iii. 7. See parallel prophecies, Amos i. 6, 7, 8. Zeph. ii. 4, 7. Jer. xlvii. “Or, it shall be ashamed of its expectation.” Secker.

It is true that Alexander the Great took Sidon, Tyre, and Gaza. Jos. Ant. XI. viii. 3. But see on Amos i. 8, that the prophecy was fulfilled by Nebuchadnezzar.

— the king.—By the title of king any chief ruler may be designed ; so that the plain purport of the passage is, that Gaza should cease to enjoy the benefit of civil government. Accordingly Gaza, having suffered severely upon being taken by Alexander the Great, was at length totally destroyed by Alexander Jannæus, one of the Asmonean kings of Judea ; so that we find it spoken of Acts viii. 26. by the name of “Gaza which is desert.” Blayney.

— inhabited.—Read חירש, in Niphal.

6. — strangers.—A strange and spurious race ; a despicable race ; born of harlots. The root is זר, and כמזר may literally signify ab alieno. The word imports nothus, Deut. xxiii. 2 ; because זרה, the strange woman, (the woman of a different country from the Israelites, whose law restrained their women from impurity,) is used for a harlot, Prov. v. 3, &c. But here זר. Ar. Syr. J. H. Michaelis and Houbigant translate simply stranger.

And I will cut off the pride of the Philistines.

7 And I will take away his blood out of his mouth,

נִכְזָר. This word, in our English bibles, is translated “a bastard.” But נִכְזָר does not imply an illegitimate offspring, but simply one of foreign extraction, alienigena, ex alieno ortus. For נִכְזָר, Ps. lxi. 8, means only one of another family or kindred, alienus. And נִכְזָר is one descended from נִכְזָר, so that when it is said “נִכְזָר shall dwell in Ashdod” it is meant, that the city shall be peopled with strangers, not descended from its present possessors. The word occurs only in this place and Deut. xxiii. 2; and by considering both passages together, light may be thrown on both. In the latter we find persons of certain descriptions excluded from the privilege of entering into קהל יְהוָה, which, there is reason to believe, was a public assembly of God’s people, the great congregation, convened for the purpose of deliberating and deciding on national business. The first were eunuchs, persons deprived of the power of generation, and the reason of their exclusion is obvious, that being incapable of having posterity, they had not the same permanent interest in the state, as those who were bound to it by family ties and respects. Next follow those to whom the name of נִכְזָר belongs, and these were excluded to the tenth generation. But if the law had meant a bastard, properly so called, one born out of lawful wedlock, it must have gone to the exclusion of many who, we know for certain, were not excluded. The whole tribe of Judah were in this predicament at the very time the law was made, being all, with Nahshon their prince, the head of their אֲלֵפִים, descended in the fifth, or in the sixth generation at farthest, from not only the illegitimate, but incestuous commerce of Judah with Tamar, his daughter-in-law. But if by נִכְזָר we understand an alien, or foreigner, both the reason of the thing and the scope of the context, as well as etymology, will bear us out; for in many countries it is deemed wise policy to restrain foreigners, though allowed to settle and reside in the land, from a participation of equal privileges with the natural-born citizens; nor would it be safe, perhaps, to admit them, or their descendants, too hastily into the public councils. They were, therefore, excluded, by the Mosaic law, to the tenth generation, but with an exception in favour of two nations, the Edomites and Egyptians; the latter because the Israelites had been strangers in the land of Egypt, the former on account of consanguinity. Blayney.

— in Ashdod.—Ashdod, or Azotus, was burned and destroyed by Jonathan, brother of Judas Maccabeus, and eight thousand of its men burned or slain, Macc. x. 84, 85. These were, probably, what was meant by “the pride of the Philistines,” the prime or excellency of the ancient inhabitants, in whose room the strangers were introduced. Blayney.

7. — his blood.—The idolatrous and abominable practices of the

And his abominations from between his teeth :
 And he also shall be left for our God,
 And shall be as a Ruler in Judah : and Ekron shall be
 as a Jebusite,

Philistines shall cease. The metaphor is taken from beasts of prey, who gorge themselves with blood.

At what time, or from whence, the new colony was brought to dwell in Ashdod, we are not informed. But some years after, in the reign of Alexander Jannæus, Azotus is enumerated by Josephus among the cities of the Phœnicians, which the Jews had been some time possessed of, and is well known that that people exacted, of all that were under their dominion, a conformity, to a certain degree at least, to their religious rites and its usages. This will serve to explain what is meant by taking his blood, &c. The stranger was required to abstain from eating blood, and from such things as were held in abomination by the Jewish law. Blayney.

— as a Ruler.—Shall be regarded and honoured.

“A citizen in Judah.” If כִּנּוּר be a stranger, one who on account of his foreign descent was excluded from entering into “the congregation of the Lord,” קהל יהוה, or, to use St. Paul’s expression, “alien from the commonwealth of Israel,” ἀπηλλοτριωμένος της πολιτειας του Ισραηλ, Eph. ii. 12. כִּנּוּר will, on the contrary, signify one who being a true Israelite by descent or adoption stood in the foremost rank of citizens, and was entitled to the highest privileges, civil and religious, in the Jewish commonwealth. Hence, I conceive, the princes of the tribes are styled ראשי אלפי ישראל, Numb. i. 16. And בְּאֶלְפֵי בִיהוּדָה, Mic. v. 1, may be rendered not improperly, as it is, Matt. ii. 6, ἐν τοις ἡγεμοσιν Ἰουδα, because the אלפים, and they only, being privileged to assist and vote in the public assemblies, had an actual share in the government. See also ch. xii. 5, 6, where I have used the term citizens, as none more proper occurred to answer the Hebrew אלפים. Here then it is foretold, that the stranger, כִּנּוּר, who should come to dwell in Ashdod, would, after renouncing all his heathenish practices, become לְאֵלֹהֵינוּ, a convert to the true God, and כְּאֵלֶּף בִּיהוּדָה, entitled to all the same privileges in that city as a prime citizen enjoyed in Judah. And, it may be observed, that these terms seem exactly to correspond with those used by St. Paul, who, having called the unconverted Gentiles, ξένοι και παροικοι, “strangers and foreigners,” entitles them after their conversion, συμπολιται των ἁγιων και οικαιοι του Θεου, “fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God.” Eph. ii. 19. Blayney.

— as a Jebusite.—An inhabitant of Jerusalem, Judges i. 21.

That many of the Philistines became proselytes to Judaism, and particularly the cities of Gaza and Ashdod, see Jos. Ant. XIII. xv. 4.

8 And I will encamp about mine House with an army, so that none shall pass through, or return ;
Neither shall the oppressor pass through them any more.

For now have I seen with mine eyes.

9 Exult greatly, O daughter of Sion ;
Shout, O daughter of Jerusalem :

What this means may be collected from what is said before of the stranger being in Ashdod on the same footing as a privileged citizen in Judah. On the contrary the Ekronite, or natural born Philistine, should rank in Ashdod, as a Jebusite did in Judah, that is, should no longer enjoy the same privileges, which he was once entitled to in a country that was his own, but be reduced to the condition of an alien, one sojourning in it. Blayney.

8. — with an army.—See מצבה, 1 Sam. xiv. 12. Ib. xiii. 23, the word מצב is rendered in the margin of our Bibles standing camp.

“As a garrison.” מצבה is used for a military guard set to keep watch and ward against any hostile approach, 1 Sam. xiv. 12. The particle of similitude is to be supplied. The purport of this passage is, that whilst these revolutions were taking place in the neighbouring states, God promises that he would act as a guard in favour of his household or family against the armies that were marching forward and backward, so as not to suffer any enemy to come near to molest them ; for which purpose his eyes, he says, were now, that is, at the time he was speaking of, continually upon the watch. Blayney.

— none shall pass through.—See the phrase ch. vii. 14. I will exclude all hostile approach to the city in which my Temple is placed. See a parallel passage, ch. ii. 5, and the note there.

— seen with mine eyes.—See v. 1. Mine eye has pervaded future events, and I have thus determined.

9. Exult.—“Rejoice greatly.” The next instance of God’s special kindness to his people, which is here announced, and in its proper order, is the coming of their Messiah or King ; with reference to which this passage is cited in two places of the New Testament, Matt. xxi. 5. John xii. 15, so that we can have no doubt of the application. But from comparing these three texts together we may perceive, that the evangelical writers were not overscrupulous of adhering to the exact words of their original, whether they cited from the Hebrew or from the Greek ; but were satisfied with giving the true sense of the passage, though somewhat differing in terms, and taking more or less of it, as circumstances seemed to require. Blayney.

Behold, thy king cometh unto thee :

He is righteous, and a Saviour :

Humble, and sitting on an ass,

Even on a colt the foal of asses.

10 And I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim,

9. — king.—This appellation does not belong to Zerubbabel, who is called נָחֵם, governor. But the prophet, after having foretold in v. 8. some of the blessings which God had in store for Jerusalem, passes on to that most eminent instance of God's goodness, the sending of the Messiah.

— righteous.—צַדִּיק, δικαιος, righteous, are frequently used in Scripture to signify good, gracious, merciful, &c. So let it be understood here. Blayney.

— a Saviour.—So the ancient versions and paraphrase. If we read נִשְׁעָ, i. e. נִשְׁעָ; this word differs very little from the ducts of the letters in נִשְׁעָ. Grotius and Houbigant propose נִשְׁעָ.

נִשְׁעָ is the particle passive, and is no where to be found in the active sense. It is not expressed in either of the New Testament citations, but all the ancient versions concur in rendering "a Saviour."—Blayney.

— Humble.—If עָנִי has not this sense, we may read עָנִי.

"Lowly." This term, as perhaps עָנִי, in the original, may denote either the humility of his temper, or the meanness of his external appearance. Blayney.

— the foal of asses.—Aquila and ed. E in Montfaucon have νίου οναδων, and νίου ονωον. V. Syr. Chald. read אֶרְנָן, in the singular. ו. translate πῶλον νεον. "אֶרְנָן. Forte ortum est וָהֵא עָנִי ex וָהֵא sequenti. Et haud scio an pro νεον legendum sit ονον." Secker.

As horses are used in war, Christ may be supposed by this action to have shown the humble and peaceable nature of his kingdom.

This prophecy is referred to, Matt. xxi. 5; in which passage part of Isa. lxii. 11. is supposed to be interwoven, "Tell ye the daughter of Sion." It is also referred to, John xii. 15; where, says Dr. Randolph, the evangelist either followed some other translation, or chose to express in short the sense, but not the words, of the prophet.

10. — I will cut off.—ו. Ar. Syr. read וַיִּכְרֹת, And he shall cut off; which better suits the rest of the verse. But see v. 12, 13.

By cutting off the chariot, and horse, and weapons of war from Ephraim and Judah, I apprehend is meant, that they should no more be molested by them, but should be left to enjoy quietly that peace, which is made characteristic of the Messiah's kingdom, Isa. iii. 4. Micah iv. 3, 4. Ps. lxxii. 3, &c. Blayney.

Ephraim and Judah shall not engage in war, to spread the Messiah's

And the horse from Jerusalem ;
 And the battle bow shall be cut off :
 And he shall speak peace unto the nations :
 And his dominion shall be from sea to sea,
 And from the river to the uttermost parts of the land.

11 As for thee also, by the blood of thy covenant,
 I have sent forth thy prisoners from the pit kingdom ; but their spiritual King shall peaceably convert Gentiles, and shall extend his dominion every where.

It is more than probable that the remaining part of this prophecy to the end of the next chapter, relates to matters of which the time is not yet come. It is but reasonable to presume, that as the prediction follows that of the Messiah's coming, the accomplishment was meant to take place in the same order of succession. But since the time of our Saviour's appearance on earth nothing has happened to the Jewish nation in any degree answerable to what is here predicted ; no return from captivity, no victories, no successes, but an uninterrupted series of misfortunes and calamities. This has been thought to favour the notion of Jeremiah being the author of these chapters, and of his foretelling the return of the Jews from Babylon, and their successes under the Maccabees. But let it be noted, that the promise of restoration is here made not to Judah only, but also to Ephraim, that is, the ten tribes, who are still, we know, in their dispersions, and have never yet, in a national capacity at least, experienced any favourable change in their affairs since their first abduction. There is, however, good ground to expect from the writings of other prophets, as well as that before us, that the time will come when "all Israel shall be saved," as well as Judah, and hereafter be brought back to dwell in their own land in the full enjoyment of the like national prosperity. Blayney.

11. As for thee also.—"Even as." See the like use of נִסִּים in Noldius, Sec. 14.

— by the blood of thy covenant.—By the covenant which I have made with thee, to be merciful to my people. The words allude to the Jewish custom of ratifying covenants by the blood of victims.

"When thou wast in the blood of thy covenant." That is, when thou wast yet wet with the blood that was sprinkled on thee, in confirmation of the covenant which God made with thee.

— I have sent forth.—V. 6. Ar. Syr. read אָתָּה and שְׁלַחְתָּ. One MS. has אָתָּה. "Thou also—hast sent forth, &c. But see r. 12, 13.

— the pit.—Deep dry pits, says Cappellus, were frequently prisons in the east. The restoration from the Babylonish captivity, and the great Wherein was no water.

- 12 Return ye to the fortress, O prisoners of hope :
 Even this day do I declare it,
 I will restore double blessings unto thee.
- 13 For I have bent Judah for myself ;
 I have filled the bow with Ephraim :

future restoration, may be both foretold in this passage. "Anciently in great houses, and particularly in the east, deep dry pits, called dungeons, were appropriated to the confinement of prisoners. Into one of this kind Jeremiah was cast, Jer. xxxviii. 6. Here I presume, the land of Egypt is metaphorically intended, in which the children of Israel were detained as in a prison, until God delivered them out of it, and entered into covenant with them. To this deliverance he compares that which was destined for them in future." Blayney.

12. — to the fortress.—To Jerusalem, rebuilt and fortified, or, to the new Jerusalem, after the dispersion by the Romans. See Rev. xxi. 12.

— O prisoners of hope.—A beautiful address; as God, when he doomed his people to banishment, by no means totally rejected them.

— this day.—"At this day also." The  $\text{ו}$  here answers to the same particle at the beginning of v. 11, where it introduced the parallel, which is here completed. "As in early days I brought thy prisoners (the address is to the daughter of Sion) out of Egypt, so return ye, &c." Blayney.

13. — bent Judah.—A strong and sublime manner of expressing that God would use Judah and Ephraim as his instruments of destruction.

Michaelis calls in question the explanation usually given of  $\text{קשׁו}$  when used with  $\text{קשׁו}$ , that of bending the bow by treading it down with the foot. It is certain, however, that the strong bow was thus prepared for action; it was bent down by the foot or knee, and the bow-string held fast by a peg; so that the bow might be carried in the hand ready bent, like a gun cocked, and by pulling out the peg, the bow was instantly discharged, as the gun by pulling back the trigger. Hence  $\text{קשׁו}$  might come to be used by catachresis for bending with the hand as well as the foot. Blayney.

— filled the bow.—"As a bow have I filled Ephraim." This appears to me the best mode of construction with an ellipsis of the particle of similitude. Both Judah and Ephraim are considered as bows in the hand of God ready prepared for action, the one ready bent, the other furnished or filled with the arrow. But if it be thought better to make Ephraim the arrow, and to supply the preposition before it, rendering, "I have filled the bow with Ephraim," the sense will be still the same in the main; for Ephraim will then be an instrument of destruction in God's hand. Blayney.

- And I will raise up thy sons, O Sion,
 Against thy sons, O § Greece :
 And I will make thee as the sword of a mighty man.
- 14 And Jehovah shall be seen over them,
 And his arrow shall go forth as the lightning:
 And the Lord Jehovah shall blow the trumpet,
 And shall go forth with whirlwinds of the south.
- 15 Jehovah God of hosts shall defend them ;
 And they shall devour, and shall subdue with slingstones ;
 And they shall drink, and shall shout as with wine ;

§ Heb. Javan.

— O Greece.—Alexander the Great is described as a king of Javan or Greece, Dan. viii. 21. And that the barbarians called all the Greeks Ιαυεγ, see Boch. Geog. L. III. c. iii.

“ I will animate the Jews against the troops of Antiochus, who was of Macedonian descent.” Grot. It is true that Judas Maccabeus gained some advantages over the Syrians. But the language of this prophecy seems too strong for these events ; and may remain to be fulfilled against the present possessors of the countries called Javan, which were Greece, Macedonia, and part of Asia Minor.

14. — shall be seen over them.—Leading them on and protecting them, as when they came out of Egypt, Ex. xiii. 21. Blayney.

— the lightning.—The lightnings are represented as the arrows of the Almighty, Ps. xviii. 14. lxxvii. 17, and he is here said to go forth like lightning, scattering and discomfiting all before him. Blayney.

— of the south.—The word is used for the south wind, Ps. lxxviii. 26. With violent tempests, according to the nature of the south wind in the east. See Job xxxvii. 9. Isa. xxi. 1. The images in this v. are very sublime.

15. — they shall devour.—Houbigant conjectures ירלו, And they shall go. But the word is used figuratively for destroying.

— they shall drink.—They shall plentifully shed the blood of their enemies ; and, as it were, drench themselves with it. These metaphors are taken from beasts of prey. See Numb. xxiii. 24.

— and shall shout.—Twenty-one MSS. and four ed. read ירחו, ó. MS. V. read וישתו, And they shall drink them up as wine. But MS. A. has το αιμα αυτων, ירם, And they shall drink their blood as wine. Houbigant proposes ירם, blood ; or ירם, their blood, as ó. MS. A.

And they shall be filled as a bowl, as the corners of the altar.

16 And Jehovah their God shall save them ;

In that day shall he save his people as sheep :

For || crowned trophies shall be set up on the land.

17 For how great is their prosperity, and how great is their comeliness !

The * harvest gladdeneth the young men, and the † vintage the maidens.

|| Heb. stones of a crown.

* Heb. corn.

† Heb. choice wine.

The bowl or basin, and the corners of the altar all seem to bespeak blood ; for the blood of the sacrificed beasts was part of it received in bowls for the purpose of sprinkling, and the rest poured out at the foot of the altar, Lev. iv. 5—7. Blayney.

— as a bowl.—Used in sacrifice, to contain the blood sprinkled on the altar.

— corners.—At the base of the altar, where the blood was poured out, Lev. iv. 25.

16. — shall save them.—MS. 30 reads וְיִשְׁעוּ, and in another MS. the ם is on a rasure. Perhaps the word was written וְיִשְׁעוּהוּ, as it sometimes is ; and the ה might easily pass into ם. According to this reading we may translate :

“ And Jehovah their God shall save,
In that day, his people as sheep.”

“ As the flock of his people. So Vulg. But ó. Syr. even his people as a flock.” Secker.

— crowned trophies.—“Victoriæ monumenta, lapides corona redimiti.” Houbigant, after Cappellus.

“Consecrated stones.” The notion of stones crowned with garlands in token of victory is unauthorized by scripture at least. But both single stones, and heaps of stones, set up by way of memorial, are frequently spoken of ; and these might well be called אבני נזר as being separated, set apart, or consecrated to a particular use, Gen. xxviii. 18. Josh. iv. 5, 20. Accordingly ó. Syr. V. Ar. render here λιθοι ἁγιοι, lapides sancti. Blayney.

17. — their prosperity.—I refer the affixes to עַם, people, in the foregoing verse. Perhaps we may render “the prosperity bestowed by him,” as, Vulnere tardus Ulyssi.

— gladdeneth.—Lætificat. Cast. lex. But for this rendering I do not find sufficient authority. יִיב, Prov. x. 31, is used metaphorically for

CHAPTER X.

- 1 Ask ye of Jehovah rain in the time of the latter rain :
 Jehovah will make ready the * lightning,
 And will give you † abundance of rain,
Even to every man the herb in the field.
- 2 For the images have spoken vanity ;

* Heb. lightning

† Heb. rain of showers.

uttering wisdom ; and hence a question may arise whether the word in Pihel can mean loqui facit, vel, exhilarat. The margin of the English version has, shall make to speak. נב is also used in the sense of abounding, Ps. lxii. 10 ; and therefore we may possibly render, “The corn aboundeth for the young men [to gather it ;] and the choice wine for the maidens [to prepare it.]” See ó. Micah vii. 1 עללית signifies racemantes fæminæ. Victory is promised in the preceding verse, and fruitful seasons in this.

“Make the young men thrive.” נב properly signifies to grow, bloom, or thrive. The sense here will be, that by divine blessing the young men who reaped the corn, and the maidens who gathered in the vintage, should both thrive in their respective operations. Blayney.

CHAP. X .1. This chapter is a continuation of the prophecy begun in the preceding one, and goes on with a representation of the future prosperities of Judah and Israel in consequence of the recovery of God's favour ; their military strength and victories ; their complete and safe return into their own land, and their flourishing re-establishment in it. Blayney.

Ask ye of Jehovah rain.—The promise of future plenty suggests mention of the means by which it might then be procured ; supplication to Jehovah and not to idols.

“They have asked.” שאלו must be taken as the third person plural of the preter tense, and not, as it is generally rendered, in the imperative. Blayney.

— give you.—So Syr. five MSS. and a sixth at present, and Talm. Hierosol.

“Give unto them.” The alteration of לכם for להם, undoubtedly proceeded from the misapprehension of שאלו. Blayney.

— abundance of rain.—גשם, Pluvia fortior. Cast lex. and the word in Arab. signifies gravitas ponderis ac oneris.

2. — the images—This does not agree to the times after the captivity, when the Jews were no longer idolatrous.

And the diviners have seen a lie,
And have told false ‡ dreams; they have comforted in vain.

Therefore have they gone away, as a flock;
They have been afflicted, because there was no shepherd.

3 Against the shepherds mine anger hath been kindled,
And I will § punish the || chief ones.

But Jehovah God of hosts will visit

His flock, the house of Judah;

And will make them as his * goodly horse in war.

4 From him shall be the corner-stone, from him the nail,

‡ Heb. dreams of falsehood.

§ Heb. visit upon.

|| Heb. he-goats.

* Heb. the horse of this glory.

— as a flock.—Which changes its pasture in the wide places of the desert.

— no shepherd.—No king, or ruler, over them.

The Babylonish captivity seems to be foretold. A determined future event is frequently spoken of by the prophets as past.

3. — the shepherds.—The word is beautifully taken up from the preceding clause.

— chief ones.—See Isa. xiv. 9, and Chald. has a word equivalent to principes.

— will visit.—With mercy. The original word should be pointed as a participle. So Syr. and ó. MS. A. have επισκεπτεται, and MS V. επισκεψεται; either of which is a translation of בִּיקֵר visitans est, vel, erit.

4. From him.—Judah.

— the corner-stone.—See Judges xx. 2. 1 Sam. xiv. 38. Isa. xix. 13; where Bishop Lowth renders פִּיּוֹר, chief pillars, and Chald. has a word denoting principes.

"A corner." Or, "chief." A community is often represented as an edifice or building; and the corresponding parts expressed by the same name. Hence as the largest stones or timbers are used in the angles to bind together and strengthen the sides of the building which meet therein as in a common centre, so the angle or corner metaphorically denotes the chief personage in a community, on whom its strength and security principally depends, Judg. xx. 2. 1 Sam. xiv. 38. Isa. xix. 13. Blayney.

— the nail.—That these nails were not only of general and necessary use in the eastern houses, but even ornamental and strengthening, and from the first building of the walls wrought into them, see Bishop Lowth on Isa. xxii. 23, and Harmer i. 191; where Ezek. xv. 3. Ezra. ix. 8, and

From him the battle bow :

From him shall go forth every ruler together.

- 5 And they shall be as men who tread down
The mire of the streets in war.

And they shall fight, for Jehovah shall be with them :

And the riders on horses shall be confounded.

- 6 And I will strengthen the house of Judah,

And the house of Joseph will I save :

And I will bring them back, for I have loved them ;

And they shall be as though I had not removed them afar
off :

Eccles. xiv. 24, are quoted. It is also probable that the "hooked wooden pins which kept tents firm and steady," and "the hooks on the pillars of tents, on which the Arabs hang their clothes, baskets, saddles, and accoutrements of war, and on which Holofernes hung his faulchion, Judith xiii. 6," may be alluded to. See Shaw's Travels, 4to. 221. fol. 287. "Clavorum geminus usus ; vel ut supellectilia, quæ ad ornatum vel usum domus parata sunt, ab iis suspendantur ; vel ut tabulis, asseribus, trabibus, compingendis inserviant." Vitring. in Isa. xxii. 23.

יֵרֵךְ is properly a nail or pin used to fasten the timbers, or parts of a building together ; and may therefore serve to denote the officers next in command under the chief, by whose means the common soldiers are united, kept steady, and in regular order. Blayney.

— the battle bow.—Both soldier and commander.

— every ruler together.—The word נִינֵשׁ is also used in a good sense, Isa. lx. 17. Judah shall furnish both civil and military governors. After the captivity, Judah again became a well regulated state. "Oppressor. See Michaelis." Secker.

"All that draw near together." In the house or building these words would denote the stones of common use placed contiguous or in close order one by another. Correspondently in the army must be meant the close embodied phalanx, or main body of men of war advancing on together in regular order to meet the enemy. Accordingly נִישׁ frequently signifies to draw nigh towards an enemy for the purpose of giving him battle, and this both with and without לְמִלְחָמָה following it. See Josh. viii. 11. 1 Sam. viii. 10. xvii. 16, 40. 2 Sam. x. 13. Jer. xlvi. 3. Joel iii. 9, 14. Blayney.

5. — the riders on horses.—The descendants of the Macedonians who opposed the Maccabees. Grot. Houbigant.

6. — bring them back.—We may read וְהִשְׁבִּיתֵם with V. Syr. Chald. See v. 10. Many MSS. and four ed. read וְהִשְׁבַּתֵם, And I will settle them.

— I have loved them.—I have adopted them as my people.

For I am Jehovah their God, and I will hear them.

- 7 And Ephraim shall be as a mighty man ;
And their heart shall rejoice, as through wine ;
And their sons shall see it, and shall rejoice ;
Their heart shall exult in Jehovah.
- 8 I will hiss for them, and will gather them ; for I have redeemed them :
And they shall multiply, even as they have multiplied.
- 9 For I will sow them among the people ; and they shall remember me in far countries :
And they shall preserve their children, and shall return.
- 10 And I will bring them back from the land of Egypt, and from Assyria will I assemble them :
And I will bring them back into the land of Gilead and of Lebanon ;
And there shall not be found sufficient place for them.

7. — shall be.—Two MSS. and one ed. read יורה. But Ephraim, as a noun of multitude, may be used plurally. “And they shall be as the mighty men of Ephraim. 6. Ch. Syr.” Secker.

— their sons shall see.—“They shall see their children.” So the words may be rendered, and, I think, more suitably to the context. “They shall see their children, and rejoice ; their heart shall exult in Jehovah,” who hath bestowed that blessing upon them. See Ps. cxxvii. 6. cxxxii. 3—5. Blayney.

8. — hiss for them.—Or, hist them ; make a signal for them by an inarticulate sound. See Bishop Lowth on Isa. v. 26. And see Isa. vii. 18.

“Whistle.” It is very certain that שרק has a very different sense, both here and Isa. v. 26. vii. 18, from what it has in several other places, where it is rightly translated to hiss ; which is an inarticulate sound expressive of contempt or reproach. But no such idea is implied here or in the two above-cited passages. The sound here intended is one which may be heard at a considerable distance (which hissing cannot), and is commonly used for a summoning signal or call. Blayney.

9. — preserve.—The Hebrew word in Pihel signifies to save alive. See 6. Ar. Syr. “Live with, or, bring up.” Secker.

10. — Assyria.—Whither the ten tribes were led into captivity ; many of whom returned in consequence of Cyrus's decree.

— sufficient.—See נצח, Numb. xi. 22. Josh. xvii. 16. Judg. xxi. 14.

- 11 And he shall pass through the sea, with distress unto it,
 And shall smite the waves in the sea :
 And all the depths of the River shall be dried up :
 And the pride of Assyria shall be brought down,
 And the sceptre of Egypt shall depart.
- 12 And I will strengthen them through Jehovah [their God;]
 And in his name shall they walk, saith Jehovah.

CHAPTER XI.

- 1 OPEN thy doors, O Lebanon,
 That the fire may devour thy cedars.

11. — he shall pass.—"And some shall pass." ó. and Ar. seem to have read יעברו and יורכו in the plural. But the Hebrew idiom will justify the use of the singular verb indefinitely, as applied to those that could not find room in their own country, and would therefore be obliged to seek a settlement in the neighbourhood. Blayney.

— with distress.—"F. pro צרה legendum מצרים, ut Isa. xi. 15; vel saltem pro genitivis habendi צרה et גלים." Secker. "And some shall pass over the sea to Tyre." Blayney.

— the River.—Nile. God will restore his people in a manner resembling the miraculous passage of the Red Sea and of the river Jordan.

— the pride of Assyria.—Hence we are led to think that the Assyrian empire subsisted when this prophecy was uttered.

This by no means justifies the conclusion that the Assyrian empire subsisted when this prophecy was uttered. It were sufficient if, after the monarchy were dissolved, some part of its ancient splendour remained. Blayney.

— of Egypt.—"Nulla versio legit ממצרים, ut מיהרה, Gen. xlix. 10. Et reperitur סר sine termino a quo vel ad quem, 1 Sam. xv. 32." Secker.

12. — their God.—ó. Ar. supply אלהיהם, which the hemistich seems to want.

— shall they walk.—ó. Ar. and one MS. read יחללו, shall they glory.

CHAP. XI. 1. That which moveth me more than the rest is in ch. xi., which contains a prophecy of the destruction of Jerusalem, and a description of the wickedness of the inhabitants, for which God would give them

- 2 Howl, O fir tree, because the cedar is fallen ;
 For that the goodly ones are destroyed.
 Howl, O ye oaks of Bashan ;
 Because the fenced wood is felled.

to the sword, and have no more pity on them. It is expounded of the destruction by Titus ; but methinks such a prophecy was nothing seasonable for Zachary's time (when the city yet, for a great part, lay in her ruins, and the temple had not yet recovered her's), nor agreeable to the scope of Zachary's commission, who, together with his colleague Haggai, was sent to encourage the people lately returned from captivity, to build their temple, and to instaure their commonwealth. Was this a fit time to foretell the destruction of both while they were but yet a building ; and by Zachary too, who was to encourage them ? would this not better befit the desolation by Nebuchadnezzar ? J. Mede, Epist. LXI.

This chapter contains a prophecy of a very different cast from the foregoing. The people would not always behave as they ought, and therefore would not always be prosperous. Before their final glorious restoration, an event of a most calamitous nature was doomed to take place, the destruction of the city and temple of Jerusalem, which is here plainly foretold, and ascribed to its proper cause, punishment for notorious wickedness. The flock, meaning God's people, were under the guidance of corrupt and unprincipled pastors, who sacrificed them to their own lucrative and ambitious views. The prophet, by God's command, assumes for a while the direction of them, therein becoming a type of Christ the good shepherd ; but is soon obliged to resign his charge, with mutual dissatisfaction on both sides. He receives thirty pieces of silver as the reward for his services, and casts them by divine direction to the potter. After this the prophet is held forth as the type of a worthless shepherd, or a succession of evil governors, who, heedless of the flock, or seeking only to oppress it, at once ruin the flock, and bring destruction on themselves. Blayney.

Open thy doors.—If Zechariah be the author of this chapter, as most probably he was (see prefatory note to ch. ix.) the three first verses can relate only to the destruction of the city and temple of Jerusalem by the Romans. And such was the application made by Rabbi Johanan, when the doors of the temple opened of their own accord, a little before the temple was burned, which circumstance is attested by Josephus. And the same Rabbi expressly cites this as the prophecy of Zechariah. Blayney.

2. — the goodly ones.—Trees. The original word is applied to cedars and vines, Ezek. xvii. 8, 23. Under these images the fall of mighty men, and the subversion of the Jewish polity, are represented.

— the fenced wood.—“Forest of the vintage ; or, defended forests.” Secker.

- 3 There is a voice of the howling of the shepherds,
Because their goodliness is destroyed:
There is a voice of the roaring of young lions,
Because the pride of Jordan is destroyed.
- 4 Thus saith Jehovah my God:
Feed thou the flock of slaughter;
- 5 Whose possessors slay them, and hold not themselves guilty;

“A forest—the fenced one.” As the inhabitants are represented under the image of trees, the city is aptly denoted by יער, a forest, to which is added, by way of distinction, הבצר, the fenced one; the article ה being emphatic, and marking the extraordinary strength of its fortifications or fence, which however proved insufficient for its security. Blayney.

3. — shepherds.—“Shepherds—magnificence.” By shepherds are to be understood the rulers of the people; and “their magnificence,” denotes their stately habitations. Blayney.

— the pride of Jordan.—The woods on its banks, the receptacles of lions, Jer. xlix. 19. “There translated, swelling of. Michaelis understands the lofty banks.” Secker.

By “the pride of Jordan,” those woods and thickets are primarily intended, that rise proudly above the banks of that river, and greatly decorate the scene. But, here, in a secondary and metaphorical sense, they are put for the residences of those princes and grandees, who, too often like lions, devour and oppress the people under them.

4. — Feed thou.—This is an address to the prophet, who was to instruct and admonish a people over whom destruction impended.

5. — possessors.—Their governors and false prophets, who expose them to the sword of their enemies by encouraging them in idolatry, the guilt of which they know not.

“Those that buy them.” קניה and מכריהן are reciprocal terms, the former denoting those into whose hands the latter sell or deliver up the flock. By the former, the Romans may be understood; who, having bought, or by right of conquest acquired, a legal title of property in, or dominion over, the Jewish nation, were justified in respect of the slaughter that was made of them on their rebellion and revolt; the blame wholly resting with their wicked leaders, who, to gratify their own avarice and ambition, cared not for the mischiefs which they brought on their wretched people, whom they instigated to those violences and excesses which terminated in their ruin. Blayney.

— slay them.—Twenty-five MSS. and two ed. read יכרתו.

— sell them.—Those who in effect sell them to their conquerors, regard

And those who sell them say, Blessed be Jehovah, for I am rich :

And their shepherds spare them not.

6 For I will no longer spare

The inhabitants of the land, saith Jehovah :

But, behold, I will deliver men,

Every one into the hand of his fellow, and into the hand of his king :

And they shall crush the land to pieces ;

And I will not deliver out of their hand.

7 So I fed the flock of slaughter, because of the * poor of

* Or, afflicted.

nothing but their own immediate advantage, and bless Jehovah with whose worship they mix that of idols, for their shortlived prosperity.

— say.—Read יאמרו with the versions and Chald.

— Blessed be Jehovah.—That is, they hypocritically and impiously pretend to return God thanks for having put it in their power to acquire riches by such ungodly means. Blayney.

— And their shepherds.—Eight MSS. and three ed. read with the feminine affix, הן. The word may denote kings, prophets, and priests.

— spare them not.—Read with the versions and Chald. יחמלו.

6. For.—I call them the flock of slaughter: For, &c.

“For I will no longer spare.” This verse assigns the reason for calling the people “the flock of slaughter.” Nor can words more aptly describe the calamities which befel the Jews in the war which ended in the taking of Jerusalem by the Romans; when the people, having first by their intestine broils destroyed one another, at length fell into the hand of him whom they had owned for their sovereign (“We have no king but Cæsar,” John xix. 15), and who completely desolated the land for their rebellion against him. Blayney.

— saith Jehovah.—ó. MS. A. add παντοκρατωρ; and therefore read יהוה צבאות, “Jehovah God of hosts.”

— deliver.—“Παραδιδωμι, ó. Syr. Vulg. Ch. Recte. Vid. 2 Sam. iii. 8.” Secker.

— of his fellow—of his king.—These seem to be the times described Hosea iv. 2. vi. 9. vii. 1, 5. viii. 4.

7. — I fed.—Here the prophet speaks in his own person. I obeyed the command of Jehovah, given, v. 4.

— because of.—Houbigant proposes to read להבין, to establish, for לבן. One MS. read originally להבין, “Because of the poor, or the afflicted, of the flock;” which reading agrees with Syr.

the flock. And I took unto me two crooks; the one I called Beauty, and the other I called Bands: and I fed 8 the flock. And I cut off three shepherds in one month; and my soul was grieved at them; and their soul also — two crooks.—I assumed the appearance of a shepherd in the eyes of the people.

— Beauty.—Eight MSS. and four ed. read נָעִם, beauty, pleasantness, or delight. This was to denote how beautiful and pleasant the land would have been, if its inhabitants had kept their covenant with God.

— Bands.—To signify the union which ought to have subsisted between Judah and Israel. See v. 14.

8. And I cut off.—Twenty one MSS. and three ed. read וַאֲכַדִּיר. The prophet may be said to do what God did; either in the punishment of certain false prophets, which I suppose to be the preferable sense, or of certain wicked governors. See Hos. vii. 7. 2 Kings xv. xxiii. 34. &c. Secker proposes to point שלשת, as if it signified a third part; and refers to ch. xiii. 7, 8, 9. Rev. viii. 7—12. ix. 15—18. xii. 4.

“And I set aside the authority of the shepherds.” “And cut off three shepherds,” is the translation of our English Bible, and indeed is conformable to most of the ancient versions. But it is encumbered with insuperable difficulties. It is questionable whether אֶת־שְׁלֹשֶׁת־הָרֹעִים could be rendered properly “three shepherds,” at least without prefixing the definite article the; and if it could, who the three shepherds were, and how cut off.

The translation I have given (“And I set aside the authority of the shepherds”) rests on a supposition that שלשת has no relation, or at least but a very distant one, to the numeral שלש, but is to be derived from שליט, a captain, one possessed of a degree of power over others; and has the abstract signification of power and authority. כָּהֵן primarily signifies to hide or conceal; and may denote a withdrawing or setting aside what a person was seen before to possess. Let us now see what happened to him of whom Zechariah is evidently set forth as the type. Our Saviour’s teaching was in a style so far superior to that of the professed guides of his day, that stung with jealousy they exclaimed, “Perceive ye how ye prevail nothing?” οὐδὲν ὠφέλειτε, ye have lost all your boasted influence; “behold, the world is gone after him,” John xii. 19. Even so, it may be presumed, the purity and disinterestedness of Zechariah’s instructions may have gained so far upon the minds of the people, as to deprive the corrupt and selfish teachers of that ascendancy which they once possessed. Blayney.

— my soul.—That is, I; and their soul is equivalent to they.

- 9 loathed me. Then I said, I will not feed you: that which dieth, let it die; and that which is cut off, let it be cut off: and let those sheep, which remain, eat every one the flesh of her fellow.
- 10 And I took my crook, even Beauty, and cut it asunder, to break my covenant which I had made with all the
- 11 † people. And it was broken in that day: and thus the

† Heb. peoples.

— at them.—At the sheep of slaughter.

— loathed.—בחל has this sense in the Syriac.

9. — which dieth.—A natural death.

“Missing.” Or “hidden.” כהר must be construed in a sense short of total excision; for in v. 16, it is imputed as a fault in the foolish shepherd, that he did not visit הכבוד. But to visit implies looking after what was still in a state capable of recovery, otherwise it could no longer be an object of attention and concern. That which is missing must mean sheep that are strayed, or stolen, from the fold, and consequently in danger of being totally lost, if not looked after in time. Blayney.

— which is cut off.—By violence.

— eat—the flesh.—Become a prey to famine.

10. — covenant, ḥ.c.—Some make כל עמים to be all the tribes of the Jews; but these two words are never used of them, but the Gentiles are opposed to them by these words. See Michaelis. And this surely should have been the last thing done, not the first. Others: covenant with other nations not to destroy them. See Hos. ii. 18. Job. v. 23. Ezek. xxxiv. 25. Michaelis. Secker.

— with all the people.—If the heathen nations are meant, the sense may be, that God broke his covenant with them; which originally was to this effect, that they should not subdue and lead captive his people, Deut. xxviii. 7. If עמים refers to the people of Judah and Israel, as Joel, ii. 6. 1 Kings xxii. 28, the prophet may be understood as declaring by this act that his covenant of feeding the flock was broken.

“Before all the peoples.” The points of distinction, in this verse, have been usually misplaced so as to have led to a wrong interpretation of it. The covenant, which he had entered into, was not a covenant with all the peoples or nations of the earth, as כל העמים, would properly signify, but with one people only, the Jewish nation; therefore, when he broke the crook, he did it as a matter of public notoriety, את כל העמים, coram omnibus populis, in the presence of all the neighbouring nations, who were called upon, as it were, to take notice that he had no longer any thing to do with poor of the flock, who observed me, knew that this was the word of Jehovah.

- 12 Then I said unto them, If it be good in your eyes, give me my price; but if not, forbear. So they weighed 13 me my price, thirty pieces of silver. And Jehovah said unto me, Cast it unto the potter: a goodly † price at the charge, which he thus solemnly abdicated. A comma, therefore, is to be placed after the word, “the covenant which I made,” in order to connect אברע אמו with את כל העמים. Blayney.

† Heb. a magnificence of price.

11. — knew.—The manner of instructing by action being agreeable to that of the ancient prophets.

12. — give me my price.—Rate my labours as a true shepherd. And they rated it contemptuously; thirty pieces of silver being the price of a slave, Ex. xxi. 32. “שכר, never signifies the price of any person or corporeal thing sold, or a consideration given for delivering up or taking away the life of any one, but merely a reward for service done: it is μισθος, not τιμη, which last word is usually נדור; and I believe the two Greek words are never confounded in Old or N. T. And when a suffix is added to שכר, it signifies usually the person to whom the consideration is paid, once at least the person by whom, but never for whom a consideration is paid to another. And plainly, here the person’s שכר was paid to himself, and should be translated, my wages, στον μισθον μου, as ὁ. have rightly translated it. Seeker.

13. — unto the potter.—It is not likely that the potter was at work within the sacred precincts of the temple, as has been conjectured; because the potter’s field, the place where his business was carried on, was, as we are told, Matt. xxvii. 7, afterwards bought to bury strangers in. But who can suppose that the Jews would have suffered such a defilement of the holy place? It must, therefore, have been a field adjacent to, but without the walls, which, the potters having by digging out the earth for their manufacture rendered it useless for any other purpose, was bought for a trifling sum, and appropriated as before mentioned. Blayney.

— I have been prized.—Jehovah calls the price of his prophet his own price; and commands that it should not be accepted, but given to another; and to the potter, to foreshadow the transaction related Matt. xxvii. 7.

It must be observed, that earthen vessels were useful in the temple, to receive the oil and wine brought there. See Dent. xii. 17. xviii. 4 and the note on ch. xiv. 20. We may, therefore, suppose that some Levites were employed within the sacred precincts to furnish them. To these, the which I have been prized by them. Then I took the thirty pieces of silver; and cast § them in the house of Jehovah, unto the potter.

§ Heb. it.

humblest of his ministers in the temple, God commanded that the degrading price should be cast. “השליכו. This word is commonly used in contempt. See Michaelis. Potter’s vessels were proverbial things of small price.” See Lam. iv. 2. Throwing the money to him therefore was throwing it to one of a mean trade, as suiting him better than the person it was given to. It is not hinted that it was to purchase any of his vessels: if it was, it might mean the price was more proper for them; or might imply that the people should be broken in pieces like such vessels.” Secker.

אֶרֶךְ, is only here and in a very obscure place, Mic. ii. 8. And יָקָר is not the price of any thing, but the preciousness of a valuable thing; and יָקָר, the verb, is not to value or appraise, but to be precious or valuable. So that strictly it would be, the magnificence of the preciousness with which I was held precious. But who is I? Is it God speaking to the prophet, or the Messiah, whom he personates? Or is the sentence partly direct, partly oblique, as in some other places? Or should it be translated, God spoke to me to cast it, &c. In each of the latter cases it will be the prophet as Messiah.

— by them.—Sic. Syr. Vulg. Aq. Non video מֵעַל hoc notare. Melius conveniret cum usu verbi יָקָר, בְּעֵינֵיהֶם; quod exhibet Ch. Secker.

— I took the thirty pieces of silver.—There can be no doubt but this is the passage referred to, Matt. xxvii. 9. But another question arises how the transaction related by the evangelist can be considered as a fulfilment of that which was spoken by the prophet, considering the striking difference in some of the circumstances. In the one case thirty pieces of silver were given as wages for service; in the other, they were paid as the price of a man’s blood; in the one, they were thrown with contempt to the potter; in the other, they were cast down in the temple in a fit of remorse, and taken up by others who employed them in the purchase of the potter’s field. But notwithstanding these differences, considering that all passed under the special direction of divine providence, it is impossible not to conclude, from a review of both transactions, that there was a designed allusion of one to the other, and not a mere accidental resemblance between them. But the quotation, it is said, is not just; for no such words are to be found in the prophet, which the evangelist has pretended to cite from him. To this it may be answered, that though not the precise words, the substance of them was given, so that the passages are equivalent at least, as the following quotation will show.

14 And I cut asunder my second crook, even bands; to

“And I took the thirty pieces of silver.” Heb.

“And they [or I] took the thirty pieces of silver.” Matt.

ελαβον may be either I took or they took.

“Goodly the price at which I was valued by them.” Zech,

“The price of him that was valued [whom they valued] by the children of Israel.” Matt.

“The words ὃν τιμήσαντο, “whom they valued” carry all the appearance of an interpolation from some marginal explanation, for they do but overload and obscure the text; and when they are removed, the two passages sufficiently harmonize. None of the ancient versions notice them at all. But the most considerable difference seems to lie in the part which follows :

“And I cast [יִשְׁלִיךְ] them into the house of Jehovah to the potter.”

Heb.

“And they gave [εἰδωκαν] them for the potter’s field, as the Lord appointed me.” Matt.

“But widely as the two texts appear to differ, it may not be impossible to bring them to a nearer accord by the aid of corrections founded on the authority of various readings.

“For, first, in the text of St. Matthew, one MS. for εἰδωκαν reads εβαλον, and some versions read εἰδωκα, which may be either the first person singular, or the third plural. And one MS. together with Evang. 24, and Vers. Syr. probante Beza, read εἰδωκα. Wetstein. Add what is suggested by Dr. Randolph, that εἰδωκα is the most probable reading in regard of what follows Καθα συνεταξε μοι Κυριος. Secondly, in the Hebrew, אל הויצר, one MS. of the first reputation for age and excellence, with the probable concurrence of four others reads, אל בית הויצר. But בית is in one instance, rendered αγρος by δ. Ruth ii. 17, and possibly may have been so here, supposing the evangelist to have cited from them; for it is almost certain, that the Greek version, which now passes for that of the Seventy, is in this place not theirs. So that אל בית הויצר will be found in perfect correspondency with εις τον αγρον του κεραμεως. Lastly, for בית ירה, one MS. reads בבית ירה and another בבי. Now, because of the similarity of the letters ב, כ, and פ, especially if the stroke in the body of the last should by chance have been obliterated, it is not impossible that בבי may have been substituted at first in the place of כפי, or at least of כפי. This once done, the rest would follow of course. For it being impossible break the brotherhood between Judah || and Israel.

15 And Jehovah said unto me again :

|| Heb. and between.

to make any sense with בבִּי, it would naturally be considered as a mistake for בבֵּית, and thence pass into בֵּית יְהוָה. But כִּפִּי יְהוָה, secundum mandatum Jehovae, or כִּפִּי יְהוָה, which would come to the same, virtually at least corresponds with καθά συνταξε μοι Κύριος. The Hebrew text, thus corrected, would run thus, ואשליך אתו כפי יהוה אל בית הירוצר. No emendation into which conjecture is at all admitted, can be less liable to objection than this. Blayney.

— in the house of Jehovah.—So Judas threw down the thirty pieces of silver in the temple. “Christi vetera omnia imaginem gerunt.” Grot. in loc.

On Matt. xxvii. 9, it must be observed, that one MS. the Syriac and Persic versions, and Cod. Veron. in Blanchini Evang. Quadr. read δια του προφητου. Origen also reads thus. H. 35. And August. de Cons. Ev. iii. 7, says, “Primo noverit non omnes codices evangeliorum habere, quod per Hieremiam dictum sit, sed tantummodo prophetam.” See Wetstein. Griesbach prefixes to Ιερεμιον his mark, that it should probably be omitted; and adds to the authorities for omitting it Vers. Neogræca, and Cod. Lat. apud Lucam Brugensem. Kidder refers to R. Isaac, and Gloss. ordinar. as reading “per prophetam.” Dem. Mess. p. ii. 75. Again; for εδωκαν, one MS. has εβαλον, and Evang. 24. and Syr. Pers. read εδωκα. Randolph suggests that this reading is probable from what follows, καθα συνταξε μοι κυριος, which clause occurs in Arab. It must be further observed, that the passage in St. Matthew is rather a reference than a quotation. The words, την τιμην του τετιμημενου, ον ετιμησαντο απο υιων Ισραηλ, are inserted to remind the reader of the transaction as recorded by the prophet. The words בֵּית יְהוָה, in the house of Jehovah, are omitted; though they were apposite to the evangelist’s purpose. And the words, אל הירוצר, unto the potter, are accommodated to the particular fact mentioned in the evangelical history. Matthæus sensum magis, quod in allegationibus frequenter fieri solet, quam verborum habitum respexit. See Owen on the Sept. Vers. Sec. vii. Randolph, and Kenn. Diss. Gen. Sec. 49.

14. — the brotherhood.—I cannot explain this passage without supposing that the kingdom of Israel subsisted when the prophet wrote it; and that either the wars between Judah and Israel are referred to, see 2 Kings xvi. 5, or the captivity of the ten tribes, when the brotherly connection between these kingdoms ceased. “Surely, בֵּין-יְבִין, must denote the two parties, as Exod. xi. 7. Josh. xxii. 25, and I suppose every where.

Take unto thee the instruments of an unwise shepherd.

- 16 For, behold, I will raise up a shepherd in the land :
 Of that which is cut off he shall not take account ;
 That which is young he shall not seek ;
 And that which is hurt he shall not heal :
 That which standeth firm he shall not sustain :
 But he shall eat the flesh of that which is fat, and break their hoofs.
- 17 Woe unto the * worthless shepherd who forsaketh the
 flock :

* Heb. shepherd of nought.

If so, either the reading of וְאֵת אֶרֶץ, possession, must be right, and may mean taking away from both Judah and Israel the land which had been divided between them : or if it be the brotherhood, this must relate to early times, and what precedes to yet earlier. Secker.

15. — instruments of an unwise shepherd.—Houbigant reads אֵיל. Such instruments, says Grotius, are an iron crook, a scrip containing nothing useful to the sheep, and such like.

16. — a shepherd. Some wicked king, and most probably Hoshea, 2 Kings xvii. 1, 2.

There is no occasion to search for an individual to whom this may be applied. It may as well regard a number of persons, who either conjointly or in succession, would misuse the powers entrusted to them. Blayney.

— which is cut off.—Five MSS. and one ed. read הַנִּכְחָרִית.

— which is young.—One MS. reads הַנֶּעֱרָה. The word in Chald. signifies de loco in locum transtulit ; and in Arab. qui nullo loco quiescit. See Buxt. lex. Chald. and Cast. lex. The ancient versions, the Chaldee, and Schultens Animadv. Phil. p. 540, lead us to render, that which wandereth. “Videtur legendum הַנֶּעֱרָה, nam his reddunt הַנֶּעֱרָה διασκορπιζω οἱ ὁ.” Secker.

Compare Ezek. xxxiv. 4, 16. Jer. xxiii. 1—4.

“That which crieth.” הַנֶּעֱרָה may here be understood of a strayed sheep that crieth or bleateth ; but, though the shepherd heareth its voice, he will not be at the trouble to seek it and bring it home. Blayney.

— break their hoofs.—By an ὑστερολογία. When he catches them with his armed crook, for slaughter.

17. — shepherd.—V. Syr. Chald. read in the singular, רֹעֶה, shepherd, and עָבַד, forsaketh. One MS. reads רֹעֶה, and a second read so originally.

Destruction shall be on his arm,
 And on his right eye :
 His arm shall surely be † withered,
 And his right eye shall surely be ‡ darkened.

---

CHAPTER XII.

1 THE prophecy of the word of Jehovah.

† Heb. in withering shall be withered.

‡ Heb. in darkening shall be darkened.

---

— on.—"Because of." So by may properly be rendered. The purport of the passage is, that since through the misapplication of his power, and his negligence in watching over the flock, they are subjected to desolation or the sword ; therefore, as of strict justice, he shall be punished with a deprivation at least of those faculties which he so fatally misused. Blayney.

— His arm—his right eye.—The wicked governor, or governors, spoken of, v. 16, may have been thus judicially punished by the hand of God ; or may have suffered these specific evils from victorious enemies. Or the meaning is, that the punishment of such shall be signal.

CHAP. XII. 1. It is not difficult to perceive, that the prophecies in this and the two following chapters relate to future times, and most probably to those predicted of by Ezekiel in the xxxviii. and xxxix. chapters ; where it is said, that Israel after their restoration and return to their own country would be assailed by a combination of nations. Such an invasion is also here foretold ; but it is not to be expected, that all the particulars of a distant prophecy should be clearly understood before the time of its accomplishment. It is at least likely, that when the time shall come for the establishment of the Jews (of which sufficient intimation is given in the prophecies both of the Old and New Testament), and they shall begin to collect themselves, and attempt a settlement in their ancient possessions ; such a measure would create jealousies and uneasiness in those powers more especially, who are interested in the dominion over those countries. Without pretending to determine precisely concerning the invaders, the substance of the prophecy in this, and on to the seventh verse of the next chapter, will be found to amount to this, that Jerusalem will be besieged by a multitude of hostile nations, to the great terror of the people in its vicinity, as

Concerning Israel saith Jehovah,
Who stretcheth out the heavens, and layeth the foundations of the earth,

And formeth the spirit of man within him :

2 Behold I will make Jerusalem

A * cup of trembling to all the † people round about :

And for Judah also shall it be,

In the siege against Jerusalem.

* Heb. a bowl.

† Heb. peoples.

well as of Judah itself: but that the attempts of those nations will be frustrated through the special interposition of the Deity, and will terminate in their total discomfiture and ruin, and in the permanent peace and prosperity of the victorious Jews. After which the Jews will be brought at length to see and lament the sin of their forefathers in putting their Messiah to death; and, therefore, will have the means of purification and atonement afforded them; and being thus cleansed from past guilt, will renounce all their former offensive practices, and carefully abstain from a future repetition of them. Blayney.

—prophecy.—Burden, sentence; for, concerning. See Vit. on Isa. xiii. 1. Literally this belongs to the Maccabees; mystically to the apostles. Secker.

—Israel.—Under this term all the tribes are here comprehended. See Ezek. xxxvii. 15—22. Mal. i. 1. “Stretched out—formed the spirit of man, &c.” Blayney.

2. —A cup of trembling.—An inebriating and stupefying potion of the strongest liquors and drugs. Jerusalem shall strike the nations with dread and astonishment.

—shall it be.—I suppose כּף, the cup, to be understood. Eleven MSS. and three ed. read כּוּרִיחַ, MS. 251 read so originally, and three others read so now. The gender of כּף is not determined; it makes כּפּוּת in the plural, and may perhaps be joined with a feminine verb. Syr. renders, “And also against Judah shall be distress [מַצָּר] together with [עִם] Jerusalem.” Two MSS. in Houbigant, and 6. MS. A. read כּוּרִיחַ. Houbigant renders, Ascendetque [עֵל] ipse Judah, ut sit [יִרְחַח] eum eis qui Jerusalem obsidebunt; which is inconsistent with v. 4—7. If I were allowed a conjecture, I would read אֲדִירָא “will I [Jehovah] be.” See v. 6, 7.

The noun implied in the pronoun it may be either כּף the cup, or רָעַל trembling, and both afford the same sense, namely, that not only the neighbouring nations shall be seized with terror and astonishment, but Judah also shall partake of the alarm; and with good reason, because her

- 3 And it shall come to pass, in that day,
That I will make Jerusalem
A ‡ burdensome stone to all the § people :
All who burden themselves with it shall be deeply
|| wounded.
And all the nations of the earth shall be gathered together against her.
- 4 In that day, saith Jehovah,
I will strike every horse with astonishment, and his rider with madness ;
And upon the house of Judah will I open mine eyes,
And every horse of the * people will I strike with blindness.
- 5 And the leaders of Judah shall say in their heart :
There is strength to the inhabitants of Jerusalem

‡ Heb. a stone of burden.

§ Heb. peoples.

|| Heb. in cutting shall be cut.

* Heb. peoples.

capital city Jerusalem shall be besieged by a powerful enemy. By "the nations round about" I do not conceive the invading nations to be meant, but the nations in the vicinage of the land of Judah, who would have reason to be alarmed at the approach of such mighty forces. Blayney.

— the siege.—A future siege, after the final restoration of the Jews. See on ch. xiv. 3, and Rev. xx. 9. "Jews and Christians interpret the latter part so, as to make the inhabitants of Judah be forced to join in the siege against Jerusalem ; but these to fall on the common enemy." Secker.

3. — A burdensome stone.—Which will bruise, if not crush, those who attempt to move it.

Jerusalem is here compared to a stone of great weight, which being too heavy for those who attempt to lift it up or remove it, falls back upon them and crushes them to pieces. Blayney.

— all the nations.—Many nations, as ch. xiv. 2 ; the nations round about, as v. 6, and ch. xiv. 14.

4. In that day.—This prophecy remains to be accomplished. The language here and v. 6—9 is much too strong to denote the successes of the Maccabees against the Seleucidæ.

5. — to the inhabitants.—For לִי יִשְׂרָאֵל, "The inhabitants of Jerusalem are a strength unto me." Houbigant proposes to read לִי יִשְׂרָאֵל ; and one MS. reads לִי יִשְׂרָאֵל, and perhaps another. "Recte videtur Ch. legisse לִי יִשְׂרָאֵל. Vid.

Through Jehovah Lord of hosts their God.

- 6 In that day will I make the leaders of Judah
As an hearth of fire among wood,
And as a lamp of fire in a sheaf:
And they shall devour, on the right hand and on the left,
All the † people round about.
And Jerusalem shall again be inhabited in her own place in peace.
- 7 Jehovah will also save the tents of Judah, as in old time:
That the glory of the house of David should not magnify itself,
Neither the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem against Judah.

† Heb. peoples.

v. 2, et xiv. 14." Secker. Syr. reads very well, אָמַצוּ לָנוּ, have prevailed unto us, a nobis.

The text here has been supposed corrupt, and many attempts have been made to amend it. But without any alteration it well expresses the sentiments of the men of Judah, concerning the interest they had in the safety of Jerusalem and its inhabitants, on which their own strength and security depended in a great degree; so that they would of course be influenced to bring that assistance, the efficacy of which is set forth in the verse that follows. Blayney.

6. — an hearth.—The word may be rendered a pot. "The Arabs make a fire in a great stone pitcher, and, when it is heated, spread paste upon it, which is baked in an instant." Harmer i. 233.

— be inhabited.—The true reading is יִישְׁבָהּ.

— in peace.—Houbigant ingeniously conjectures that we should read בְּשָׁלוֹם, for בִּירִשְׁלוֹם. 6. MSS. A. Pachom. Arab. and one MS. omit בִּירִשְׁלוֹם; without which word the sense is complete.

7. — as in old time.—Four MSS. the Jerusalem Talmud and V. 6. Ar. Syr. have the particle of similitude כִּי, before רִאשֹׁנָה or רִאשִׁיטָה. See the same alteration, Joel ii. 23.

— of the inhabitants.—Six MSS. read יֹשְׁבֵי or יֹשְׁבֵי, with the versions and Chald. In v. 8 four MSS. the versions and Chald. read the same participle plurally; and in v. 10 we find the plural reading of this word in fifteen MSS. two ed. the versions, and Chald. agreeably to ch. xiii. 1.

- 8 In that day Jehovah will defend
The inhabitants of Jerusalem :
And he that is feeble among them shall be,
In that day, as David ;
And the house of David shall be as God,
As the angel of Jehovah before them.
- 9 That it shall come to pass, in that day,
That I will seek to destroy all the nations
Which come against Jerusalem.
- 10 And I will pour upon the house of David,
And upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem,
A spirit of favour and of supplications :
And they shall look on him whom they pierced :

8. — defend.—The verb גָּן is here used with בָּעֵר, pro, circa, super ; as בָּנָן, a shield, is used, Ps. iii. 3.

— he that is feeble.—"And he that is fallen to decay among them." The word דִּבְכָּשָׁל properly signifies the man that is overthrown and ruined in his fortunes. The intent is there to mark the progressive improvement that would take place at Jerusalem under the divine countenance and protection ; when the man who had gone to decay should revive and flourish again like David, who himself from a state of exile and distress was suddenly advanced to the kingdom ; and the house of David also would rise in proportion to the rank of gods, or, as the term אֱלֹהִים seems explained, of guardian angels marching before the people, see Gen. iii. 5. Ps. viii. 6, and lxxxii. 6. Blayney.

10. And I will pour.—God's signal interposition in behalf of Judah and Jerusalem, after their future restoration, having been foretold, the prophet proceeds to foretel their conversion to Christianity.

— of favour.—Which shall conciliate favour. See Tayl. Conc. voc. דָּחַן.

— on him.—Thirty-six MSS. and two ed. read אֵלָיו ; three other MSS. read so originally ; six perhaps read so ; six read so now ; and eleven have אֵלָיו in the margin, as Keri. And yet אֵלֵי, on me, may be traced in the ancient versions and Chald. אֵלֵי was also noted as a various lection by R. Saadiah, who lived about the year 900. See Kenn. Diss. Gen. Sec. 43. "Citant אֵלֵי Talmud et R. Saadiah Haggaon. Poc. Append. in Mal." Secker. Dr. Owen shows that Ignatius, Justin Martyr, Irenæus, Tertullian, and Barnabas favour the reading of אֵלֵי. Inquiry—Sept. version. Sect. iv. The present reading of ó. in the

And they shall mourn for him, as with the mourning for an only son;

And the bitterness for him shall be as the bitterness for a first-born.

English polyglot is, και επιβλεψονται προς με, ανθ' ων κατωρχησαντο. The last word arises from transposing דקרר into דקר, as Dr. Owen observes, and Kenn. Diss. Gen. Sec. 70. But Ignatius and Justin Martyr read, οφονται εις ον εξεκεντησαν. See Owen and Kennicott ubi supra. And it is very observable that in the Aldine edition of the Septuagint we read, και επιβλεψονται προς με, εις ον εξεκεντησαν, ανθ' ων κατωρχησαντο. Here two renderings are inserted; and εις ον εξεκεντησαν is made of equal authority with the other. The very valuable Pachomian MS. of δ. reads εις ον εξεκεντησαν, instead of ανθ' ων κατωρχησαντο.

Potest אר אר notare eo quod, ut vertunt δ. Ch. vel quem. Vid. Nold. Et sic post dativum adhibetur, Jer. xxxviii. 9. Quin et אר dativi vicem explet. Vid. Nold. Secker.

See this text, John xix. 37. Apoc. i. 7. and דקר, to pierce, ch. xiii. 3.

רובט is an object looked on with dependence on it and confidence in it, Isa. xx. 5, 6. and here ch. ix. 5. Vit. אל רובט often denotes such looking, as Numb. xxi. 9. Ps. xxxiv. 6, &c. דקר is used eleven times besides; almost always of mortal wounds, particularly here, ch. xiii. 3, and never of one clearly not so. Secker.

This passage is undoubtedly cited in St. John's Gospel, ch. xix. 37. οφονται εις ον εξεκεντησαν. The present Hebrew text is, רובט אל אר דקר. In order to maintain an uniformity between the evangelist and the Hebrew, an error has been supposed to exist in the latter, and אל has been substituted instead of אר. In support of this emendation, between forty and fifty MSS. are produced. But were the matter to be decided by the number and weight of authorities, I am of opinion with De Rossi, that the scale would turn in favour of אר. But what if it should appear, that there is no error at all in the present Hebrew text, and yet a perfect uniformity between it and the words of the evangelist? It will be granted, that אר דקר, taken by itself, would be rightly translated ον εξεκεντησαν, אר being simply the sign of the accusative case. But אל may not be the compound of אל, and the affix pronoun י, as it is now pointed; but the preposition אל, of the same use and signification as אל, and so answering to εις, ad, versus. Nor is it any objection that אל is followed by אר, which some have proposed to expunge; such a concurrence of prepositions being allowed by the idiom of the Hebrew language, see ch. iii. 10. xiv. 5. 2 Chron. xxiii. 14. Blayney.

— the bitterness.—Altering the points in דקר twice, will remove all grammatical difficulty from this passage.

- 11 In that day the mourning shall be great in Jerusalem,
As the mourning of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddo.
- 12 And the land shall mourn, every * family apart :
The family of the house of David apart, and their wives
apart ;
The family of the house of Nathan apart, and their wives
apart ;
- 13 The family of the house of Levi apart, and their wives
apart ;

‡ Heb. families families.

11. — Hadadrimmon.—Jerom says, that this was a place near Jezreel, called, in his time, Maximaniopolis. De Lisle places it near Megiddo, where Josiah was slain, over whom great lamentation was made, 2 Chron. xxxv. 22—25. “ Pro הררנין habet Syr. בר אמן i. e. Josiæ, 2 Kings xxi. 24, quem et nominat Ch. sed post Achabium ab Hadadrim-mone occisum.” Secker.

— Megiddo.—Eight MSS. and Syr. read thus for Megiddon.

This mourning of the Jews will take place on the re-appearance of their Messiah from heaven, Apoc. i. 7. xx. 4 ; when the restored descendants of those Jews who slew him shall be touched with the deepest compunction for the guilt of their forefathers.

12. — Nathan.—A son of David, Luke iii. 31.

If Nathan be a descendant of David, his house is part of David's.—If families literally be meant, why these? And if a time yet to come, who shall know these? If it relate to a thing near the prophet's time, there might be known families of the name of Nathan and Shimei, as well as David and Levi, who had joined in some bad and fatal action ; and if the family of the patriarch Levi be too large, some other of the name may be meant. Secker.

It is possible that, at the final restoration of the Jews, the genealogies of some tribes may be preserved, and that the family of David may be traced up to more than one of its collateral branches, each of which, on account of its distinguished eminence, is to mourn apart. Observe that, after the mention of four particulars, there is a general clause, v. 14, to complete the induction. Or, as facts of this nature are very important in the estimation of the Jews, they may be supernaturally ascertained. See Rev. vii. 4—8.

— their wives apart.—On account of the season of humiliation, 1 Cor. vii. 5.

The family [of the house] of † Simeon apart, and their wives apart :

- 14 All the families which remain,
Every family apart, and their wives apart.

---

CHAPTER XIII.

- 1 IN that day shall a fountain be opened
To the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

§ Heb. Simei.

---

13. — [of the house] of Simeon.—Three MSS. and Syr. (chald. supply ביה, which I suppose to be the true reading. For Simei ó. Ar. Syr. have Simeon. In the margin of the English version we have, “Or, of Simeon, as ó.” Our translators therefore thought, that the Hebrew text might sometimes be corrected by the Greek version “As David, Nathan, Simeon, and Levi, are all reckoned among the progenitors of Christ, Luke iii. 29, may not their families be mentioned by name, as more particularly concerned in the guilt to be lamented? John vii. 5.” Blayney.

CHAP. XIII. 1. — a fountain opened.—The blood of Christ, which cleanseth from all sin, 1 John i. 7, is manifestly here intended, the Jews being, upon their repentance and conversion, to be admitted to all the privileges of the Christian covenant. חטאת and נדה are legal terms: the former denotes sin generally, or any transgression of the law which required atonement, and is sometimes put for the means of purification from it, Num. xix. 9, 17; the latter נדה is used for that uncleanness, or legal defilement, which secluded man from all intercourse with God and holy things. Now, whatever efficacy the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of an heifer, sprinkled on the unclean had to purify from legal sin and defilement, the same is ascribed to the blood of Christ in the Christian dispensation, for purging the conscience of a sinner from the guilt of dead works, or moral pollution. Blayney.

Scaturiet, crumpet. Schult. Animadv. Phil. 549. “An allusion to the one great spring at Jerusalem, which served the uses of king and people. See Vit. on Isa. vii. 3.” Secker.

Both here and ch. xii. 10, only the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem are named, and the latter are distinguished from Judah, ch. xii. 2, 5; and both from Judah, ch. xii. 7; and the mourning is confined to

For sin, and for defilement.

- 2 And it shall come to pass in that day,
 Saith Jehovah God of hosts,
That I will cut off the names of the idols out of the land;
 And they shall no more be remembered;
 And the prophets also,
 And the impure spirit,
 Will I cause to pass out of the land.

Jerusalem, ch. xii. 11. Can it therefore relate to a time yet future, when for so long no Jews had been inhabitants of Jerusalem? And if the descendants of those who were so be meant, where is the authority for such meaning? how shall they be known? and what so particular cause of mourning have they, above others, for what was done long ago? Secker.

We may suppose a future national mourning at Jerusalem; as general as the solemn rejoicings at the festivals appointed by the law, in the times of its former prosperity. See on ch. xii. 11.

— defilement.—Here is an allusion to the water of separation or of purification for sin, Num. xix. 9. Means of purification from moral pollution shall be afforded to the Jews by the terms of the Christian covenant.

2. — idols.—This prediction, that idols and false prophets should cease at the final restoration of the Jews, seems to have been uttered when idolatry, and groundless pretensions to the spirit of prophecy, were common among the Jews, and therefore before the Babylonish captivity.

It has been urged in proof that this prophecy was uttered before the Babylonish captivity, that idolatry and groundless pretensions to prophecy were common among the Jews at that time, which has not been the case since. But this argument proves nothing; for there is no assurance that a thing may not take place hereafter which does not exist at present. Admitting the Jews not to have been addicted to idolatry or false prophesying at any particular period, who can say that they will not fall into these transgressions at some future time? It is probable they will do so; for Ezekiel, confessedly prophesying of the latter times, when Israel and Judah, incorporated again into one nation, shall return into their own land, speaks to the same effect as Zechariah, ch. xxxvii. 23. But, besides supposing the Jews themselves to remain untainted with those corruptions, it surely will not be denied, that they do and may still prevail among other nations, who may be included in the term הארץ, taken in its most general sense, “the earth;” and so I conceive it should be; for we are taught to expect that the conversion of the Jews will be followed by a further reformation of the world, Rom. xi. 15; and that the time will come when “the kingdoms

- 3 And it shall come to pass, when any shall yet prophesy,
That his father and his mother shall say unto him,
Even those who begat him : Thou shalt not live,
Because thou hast spoken falsehood in the name of
Jehovah.

And his father, and his mother, who begat him shall pierce him through when he prophesieth.

- 4 And it shall come to pass, in that day, that the prophets shall be ashamed

Every one of his vision, when he prophesieth ;
Neither shall they wear a * rough garment to deceive.

- 5 But each shall say, I am not a prophet :

I am a man that tilleth the ground :

For another man hath possessed me from my youth,

* Heb. garment of hair.

of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ ;” Rev. xi. 15 ; and “ the heart,” the emblem of idolatry, and with him the false prophet, shall be cast into a lake of fire, &c. Rev. xix. 20. Blayney.

— the prophets.—The false prophets. “ The prophets and the unclean spirit,” perhaps a Hendyadis for those who prophesy by means of an impure spirit. See Acts xvi. 16. Rev. xvi. 13. And what is said in the next verse, “ of any one that shall prophesy,” must be understood of those that undertake to prophesy by means of an unclean spirit, or other false pretences.” Blayney.

— the impure spirit.—Of divination by evoking the dead, or by any means which caused legal impurity.

3. — yet prophesy.—That is, falsely. So v. 4.

— pierce him through.—Fifteen MSS. read דקרוהו.

4. — of his vision.—That is, of the extraordinary communication which he pretended to have received, when he uttered a prophecy which he knew to be false. Blayney.

— when he prophesieth.—One MS. reads בהתנבאו. And four MSS. read thus, 1 Sam. x. 13.

— wear a rough garment.—This seems to have been the practice of false prophets, in imitation of some eminent ones among the true. See 2 Kings. i. 1.

5. — possessed me.—הקניי hath been the buyer of me. “ Emit enim me herus jam inde ab adolescentia mea.” Houb.

“ Hath had the property of me.” הקניי is Hiphil, from whence comes ביקנה,

- 6 And one shall say unto him;
 What are these strokes within thine hands?
 And he shall say,
Those with which I have been stricken in the house of my friends.
- 7 Awake, O sword, against my shepherd,

a possession. Disclaiming all pretensions to the character of a prophet, he shall profess himself to be no other than a plain labouring man, employed in husbandry business by those whose property he had been, quasi adstrictus glebæ, from his youth." Blayney.

6. — strokes.—Marks, or punctures, sometimes received in honour of idols.

"Those wounds." Two ancient usages are clearly alluded to here; the one, that of the idolatrous priests and prophets, who sought to engage the attention and favour of their deity, by cutting and slashing themselves, as the priests of Baal did, 1 Kings xviii. 28; the other that of those who cut themselves as a token of their grief and mourning for their deceased relations and friends, Jer. xvi. 6. It appears also, from Jer. xlviii. 37, that these cuttings were performed on the hands in particular. When, therefore, the man, now ashamed of his pretensions to prophesy, came to be challenged for those scars that were visible on his hands, he would deny them to have proceeded from any idolatrous cause, and would have them thought to be marks left by those wounds which he gave himself in the house of his relations and friends, in the paroxysms of his grief for the loss of them. הכרי is to be taken actively in Hiphil, and not passively in Hophal. Blayney.

— of my friends.—These are not idolatrous marks, but those of the master to whom I belong. See Bishop Lowth on Isa. xlv. 5. "מֵאֲרָבִי always has an impure meaning, literal or metaphorical: and so must mean false gods, or their worshippers here." Secker.

— within.—"Vid. Prov. xxvi. 13. ubi בִּין idem sonat quod בָּרוּךְ, Prov. xxii. 13. Vid. et Nold. sign. 2, 3." Secker.

7. Awake, O sword.—A new section commences here, but not, I think, a new subject of prophecy. For as far as we can judge of a prophecy before its accomplishment, it appears to be a continuation of the same subject, which was entered upon at the beginning of ch. xii. namely the alarming invasion of Judah, and siege of Jerusalem, by a numerous body of heathen nations. This however was soon broken off, in order to relate the means by which God would compass the deliverance of his people, and the blessed consequences that would afterwards ensue. But now the prophet reverts back again to the time of the invasion, and proceeds to show some fatal circumstances that would attend it at the beginning; the first of which is

And against the man who is near unto me,
Saith Jehovah God of hosts.

[I will] smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered ; specified in the remaining verses of this chapter ; by which we find that the war would at first prove extremely destructive to its prince and people, of whom two-thirds would be immediately cut off ; but the remaining third, after struggling through various difficulties, would at length become converts to the Christian faith, and be again taken into covenant with God. Blayney.

— my shepherd.—Ten MSS. and one ed. read רעי, agreeably to the versions and the masoretical punctuation. רעי may signify my friend, which sense better answers עמית, socium proximum meum, in the next hemistich. “עמית, or עמיר, is eleven times used with ם or ך suffixum in Lev., and no where else but here in O. T. nor is the root, I think, in Ch. or Syr. at all, or in any like meaning in Arab. nor any other word from it in Heb. but לעמית, juxta. It is equivalent in Lev. to רע, neighbour : but hath no other noun joined with it, as here. It seems to mean a person standing on the same level in society. Grot. understands Judas Macc. Calvin, pastors in general. Secker.

— the man who is near unto me.—This passage has been usually understood to predict the sufferings and death of Christ. I have no conception that it has the most distant relation thereto. Yet some have gone so far as to find in the word עמית a proof of the divinity of Christ's person, Cocceii. Lex. in voce עמית. But all that can be made of עמית is, that it may signify a neighbour, one that is near, or next to another, or that bears some kind of correspondency or resemblance to him, but exclusive of the idea of parity. נבר is no doubt often used for a man simply, but its proper sense is, one superior to others, in strength, power, or authority. I conceive therefore עמית נבר might properly be rendered, “him that is next unto me in power and authority ;” which exactly corresponds with “my shepherd” in the parallel line ; one that rules his flock, or people, under me, or by virtue of my commission. See Calv. in loc. Blayney.

— smite.—Houbigant observes, that Arab. reads אך, I will smite ; which is agreeable to what follows, And I will turn, &c. and appears from the exigentia loci to be the true reading. See Matt. xxvi. 31. Mark xiv. 27, “MS. n. 1 bibliothecæ, S. Marci, Venetiis, et MS. n. 4, San-Germanensis, Parisiis, habent παραξω τον ποιμενα.” Kenn. Diss. Gen. Sec. 44. ô. ed. Ald. and MS. Pachom. read παραξον τον ποιμενα. “MS. Copt. potest esse percute vel percutite.” Mr. Woide.

The two letters א and ה are so frequently found to be written by mistake for each other, that I could easily believe that אך may have been the

- And I will turn mine hand against the little ones.
- 8 And it shall come to pass in all the land, saith Jehovah,
That two parts therein shall be cut off and shall die,
And the third part shall be left therein.
- 9 And I will bring the third part through the fire, original reading of the Hebrew, instead of  $\eta$ .—But a question of more consequence arises here, whether the words of the prophet in their original intention had any direct reference to the death of Christ. For my part I am persuaded they had not; nor do the words  $\text{Ὅτι γεγραπται}$ , or  $\text{Γεγραπται γαρ}$ , with which the quotation is introduced by the evangelists, necessarily imply more, than that our Saviour forewarning his disciples “that all of them would be offended because of him, and would forsake him” that night, refers to this passage as to a proverbial saying (just as we might do, if we had met with one to our purpose in any profane author), laying it down as a matter of course, for the followers to disperse when their leader was taken off. It is, I trust, already apparent, that the other events spoken of in the context are not yet come to pass; and perhaps the passage in question might never have been considered differently from the rest, had not our Saviour thought fit to make use of it for the purpose of illustration.—As little reason is there to suppose that in the following sentence, “And I will turn,” &c., those are meant whom Christ calls his “little flock,” Luke xii. 32. Nothing else is surely intended than that not only the great ones, the shepherds and leaders, as before mentioned, but those that are usually held of less account, the common people, would come in for a share of the calamity. For it follows, that throughout all the land two thirds of the people would be cut off, and only one third survive after undergoing severe trials.—Blayney.

— shall be scattered.—Nineteen MSS. add the  $\eta$  at the end of the original word. Two read  $\text{וְהַפְּצָה}$ . “ $\text{Διασκορπισθησαν}$ , MS. Copt. et Ald.” Mr. Woide.  $\text{Διασκορπισθησονται}$ ,  $\delta$ . MS. A.

This verse relates to the Messiah and his little flock, Luke xii. 32. The prophet goes back to this great subject of prophecy, after having told some events posterior to Christ’s appearance, and then proceeds to other events subsequent to that grand epocha in the history of the Jews and of mankind; some near it, and some remote.

8. — and shall die.—“Præponunt vau, δ. Syr. Vulg. Præcedit vau.” Secker.

— the third part.—One reads  $\text{וְהַשְׁלִישִׁי}$ . I incline to interpret this verse of the destruction brought on the Jews by Titus.

9. — through the fire.—The allusion here is to persons, who being in an house on fire, are dragged out through the flames, scorched and burned

And will refine them as silver is refined,
 And will try them as gold is tried.
 They shall call on my name, and I will answer them;
 And I will say, They are my people:
 And they shall say, Jehovah is my God.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 BEHOLD, the day of Jehovah * cometh,
That thy spoil shall be divided within thee.

* Heb. cometh to Jehovah.

by the way, and perhaps with the loss of all their effects. See δια πυρός, 1 Cor. iii. 15. Jude 23. Blayney.

— as gold is tried.—Ut fulvum spectatur in ignibus aurum. Ov.

— call on my name.—As disciples of the Messiah.

— And I will say.—ו. Ar. Syr. read ראמרתי. Observe that ו precedes.

This verse may be understood of those Jewish Christians who survived the calamities which their country suffered from the Romans.

CHAP. XIV. 1. — the day of Jehovah.—"Behold a day cometh by the appointment of Jehovah." So I think ליהרה must be rendered according to the use of the preposition ל, see Jer. iv. 12. For whatever may be said of ל as the sign of the genitive case, I question whether it can be so admitted, unless in immediate apposition to the constructing noun. Nor is the day of the Lord ever so expressed, but always יום יהרה.

This chapter goes on to foretel a siege, in which Jerusalem will be taken and sacked, and half of its inhabitants carried into captivity, whilst the rest will be enabled to stand their ground. In this critical situation they will be relieved by the arm of divine power, exerting itself wonderfully in their behalf, and attended with the most beneficial consequences; such as living waters going forth out of Jerusalem; the name and majesty of the true God acknowledged through the whole earth; and the entire re-establishment of Jerusalem in security. In the mean time the hostile invaders, debilitated by sickness, thrown into confusion, and falling foul upon each other, will yield themselves and their wealth an easy conquest to the assailing Jews. After this a conformity in religious worship will be

- 2 For I will gather all the nations
 Against Jerusalem to war :
 And the city shall be taken, and the houses plundered,
 And the women defiled.
 And † half of the city shall go into captivity ;
 And the ‡ residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city.

† Or, a portion.

‡ Or, a residue.

required of all the nations under a severe penalty ; and all things in Judah and Jerusalem, from the least to the greatest, shall thenceforward be accounted holy. Such are the great outlines of this extraordinary prophecy ; to fill up which with any tolerable certainty, it will be necessary perhaps to wait the times of its accomplishment. Blayney.

2. — all the nations.—Many nations served under the Romans.

— defiled.—So Lam. v. 11.

— half.—That the Hebrew word may be rendered a portion, see Judges ix. 43. Dan. xi. 4. Here the city is spoken of ; but ch. xiii. 8 refers to the whole land.

— the residue.—The Romans spared the young and useful part of the Jews. Jos. B. J. VI. ix. 2. However these were either condemned to the mines in Egypt, or exposed to the sword and to the wild beasts in the provincial theatres, or sold for slaves, ib. It must be observed that the forty thousand, who were permitted to go where they pleased, were Idumeans. B. J. VI. viii. 2.

— shall not be cut off from the city.—"Si illi, qui post urbem expugnatam superstites erunt, non delebuntur ex urbe, ergo ipsa urbs non deletur.—Ergo hæc relinquenda sunt ad tempora reditus Judæorum."—Houbigant. Judæi hæc sub Gog dicunt esse complenda. Hieron.

If the reader should think that these words cannot be interpreted of excision before the destruction of the city by the Romans, we may suppose that the unconverted Jews will rebuild Jerusalem ; that this city will be taken, ch. xiv. 1, 2 ; that the Jews will be converted by a glorious appearance of their Messiah, and will express great humiliation at the conduct of their ancestors towards him, ch. xii. 10—14 ; that Jehovah will then interpose in their behalf, ch. xii. 2—9 ; that at this period the Jews will be pure from moral pollution, and will abhor the idolatry and false prophesying which were so prevalent when this prediction was uttered, ch. xiii. 1—6 ; that ch. xiii. 7—9 refer to Christ, to the destruction by the Romans, and to the partial conversion of the Jews, and serve as an introduction to another calamity, ch. xiv. 3, 4, 5 ; and that the glories of

- 3 And Jehovah shall go forth, and shall fight against those nations,
As when he fighteth in the day of battle.
- 4 And his feet shall stand in that day
Upon the mount of Olives,
Which is before Jerusalem on the east.
And the mount of Olives shall be rent
From the § midst thereof, eastward and westward ;
So that there shall be a very great valley :
And half of the mountain shall remove northward, and half thereof southward.
- 5 And ye shall flee by the valley of the mountains :
For the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal :

§ Heb. half.

the future Jerusalem, and God's vengeance on her enemies, are the subject of ch. xiv. 6—21.

From its being said, that "a residue shall not be cut off from the city," together with what follows, the course of proceeding it should seem will be this: upon the city being taken, the most warlike part of the inhabitants will retire in a body to some strong post near at hand, and stand upon their defence; till being encouraged by manifest tokens of God's declaring himself in their favour, and perhaps reinforced by their brethren of Judah at large, they shall sally forth, and with the divine assistance completely defeat their enemies and effect their own deliverance; so that it is said, "Jerusalem shall again sit in her own place at Jerusalem." Compare ch. xii. 5—7. Blayney.

3. —those nations.—If, as I am disposed to think, the Romans are meant in the foregoing verse, we may here understand the descendants of the many people who warred under the Roman standard, and who will be confederates with Gog and Magog, or with the Turks who were originally Scythians. See Boch. Geogr. L. III. c. xii. xiii. I consider this prophecy as coinciding with Ezek. xxxviii. xxxix. See also Rev. xx. 8, 9.

—in the day of battle.—"על ימא דסער, at the Red Sea. Chald. Videtur latere nomen aliquod proprium." Secker.

5. —ye shall flee.—Even you who are to be preserved shall be struck with terror at this event; much more the enemies of God.

—of the mountains.—Read הרים with ó. MS. A. Syr. Chald. and one MS. The mem final has probably been omitted by the abbreviated way of writing, "הרי".

—Azal.—Probably a place so called because it was near Jerusalem.

Ye shall even flee, as ye fled before the earthquake
 In the days of Uzziah king of Judah.
 And Jehovah my God shall come,
 And all his saints with him.

— earthquake.—See Amos i. 1.

— And all.—So the versions and Chald. many MSS. and one ed.

“ And the valley of the mountains shall be choked up :

(For the valley of the mountains will reach near)

And it shall be choked up, as it was choked up by the earthquake
 In the days of Uzziah King of Judah.”

6. Chald. and Arab. by a different punctuation, make נסחם the preter in Niphal of the verb נסח, και φραχθησεται, et obthurabitur, instead of deriving it from נסח, so as to signify et fugietis. A sufficient proof, at least, among others, that the vowel points were not in use when those versions were made, or, at least, were not the same as those affixed by the Masoretes. If, in order to determine which of the two interpretations is best, we consider the context, and the history of the earthquake referred to, as well as the age of the interpreters, all will concur in deciding in favour of the former. Scripture is altogether silent in respect to the earthquake in the days of Uzziah, except that it is just mentioned as an era, or date, Amos i. 1. But Josephus describes it as having taken place at the time when Uzziah invaded the priestly office, and was smitten with leprosy, and adds, “ Before the city, at a place called the Cleft, one half of the mountain, on the western side, was broken off, and having rolled four furlongs towards the eastern mountain stopped, so that the roads were choked up, and the king’s gardens.” What then can be more apposite than to render, “ And the valley of the mountains shall be choked up, as it was choked up by the earthquake in the days of Uzziah?” The valley of the mountains was probably that valley which lay between the hills on which Jerusalem was built, one of which was to the south, the other to the north; of course the valley extended itself east and west; and the eastern entrance of it, being opposite to the Mount of Olives, would be filled up by the loose earth and rubbish rolling and tumbling into it, as the mountain parted to the north and south, not far from it. And this seems to be expressed by the words בי יגיע נגא הרים אל אצל, which seem to come in by way of parenthesis. For אל is not a proper name, as it has generally been taken to be, but a preposition or adverb, signifying hard by, near at hand, and is considered by the Vulg. as used for a noun, governed by אל, and translated, usque ad proximum. There is no doubt but we should read נגא הרים (הרי) in the first instance as well as the second. Blayney.

— his saints.—So Syr. Ar. Chald.

- 6 And it shall come to pass, in that day,
That there shall not be a || bright light and darkness;
 7 But there shall be one day :
 This is known unto Jehovah :
There shall not be day, and there shall not be night:
 But it shall come to pass that at even-tide there shall be light.
 8 And it shall come to pass, in that day,

|| Heb. a light of clearnesses.

“The God of all holy ones with thee.” This is a literal translation of the Hebrew text, as it stands at present, and affords a sense beyond exception or improvement. The same Jehovah, of whom it is said, v. 3, that he would go forth and fight against the unsanctified nations; he, as the God, the patron, and protector of all holy ones, all true believers, it is here said, will march with thee, O Jerusalem, as thine ally and auxiliary. So the preposition, ע, properly imports. The address is here to Jerusalem in the second person, as it evidently is also, v. 1. Blayney.

— with him.—So the versions and Chald. and many MSS.

6. — a bright light.—See יקר, Job xxxi. 26. Lux claritatum, gloriarum.

— and darkness.—Read with Keri, very many MSS. and nine ed. קפאון, from קפא, coagulare, condensare; whence, says Cappellus, the substantive signifies densa caligo, atra nox.

“There shall not be light, but cold and a thick fog.” All the ancient versions appear uniformly to have read וקרירות וקפאון. Nothing is more common than to find darkness introduced among the adjuncts of God’s coming to execute judgment or wrath. See Ps. xviii. 11. Isa. xiii. 10. Joel ii. 31. iii. 15. Amos. viii. 9. Matt. xxiv. 29, and many other places. But particularly it is said, Ezek. xxxii. 7, “I will cover the sun with a cloud,” which exactly answers to קפאון, “a thick fog,” necessarily occasioning both cold and darkness by intercepting the genial warmth and light of the sun’s rays. Blayney.

7. — one day.—That is, for one whole day, from morning until evening, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon and stars shall not give their light, therefore it will, with respect to light, be “neither day nor night;” but, it is added, “at eventide there shall be light,” the thick fog, קפאון, being then withdrawn. Blayney.

— This is known.—When this glorious period shall arrive, is known to God only. See Rev. xxi. 23. xxii. 5.

That living waters shall go out from Jerusalem ;
 Half of them toward the * eastern sea,
 And half of them toward the † western sea :
 In summer and in winter shall it be.

- 9 And Jehovah shall be ‡ King over all the earth :
 In that day there shall be one Jehovah, and his name one.
 10 And he shall encompass the whole land as a plain,
 From Geba to Rimmon south of Jerusalem :
 And she shall be exalted, and shall be inhabited in her place,

* Heb. former.

† Heb. hinder.

‡ Heb. for King.

8. — living waters.—That is, running waters. The passage refers to the wide effusion of divine knowledge from Jerusalem when restored.

By living waters, there is good reason to believe, are meant the gifts and graces of the gospel dispensation. See Isa. xii. 3. xlv. 3. lv. 1. Jer. ii. 13. Ezek. xlvii. 1, and Joel iii. 18. John iv. 10. and vii. 38, 39. That these benefits will be diffused more extensively by the restoration of the Jews is not obscurely intimated, Rom. xi. 15. Blayney.

— eastern—western sea.—See the note on Joel ii. 20.

It is probable, that the eastern quarter of the heavens may have been called הַקִּדְמוֹנִי, because the sun visits it first every day ; if so, the western should be denominated הַאַחֲרֹן, for a contrary reason. Blayney.

— In summer.—In those countries most springs failed during that season.

9. — one Jehovah.—"Jehovah shall be one, and his name one." He shall be one and the same God alike to all the earth, and not confined, as heretofore, to one people. Compare Rom. iii. 29, 30. x. 12, and Eph. iv. 5, 6. By the name of Jehovah I conceive to be meant, the profession of his true religion, which, it is here foretold, should compass or pervade the whole earth, as it had done the country of Judea, included within the plain extending from Geba north to Rimmon south of Jerusalem. Blayney.

10. And he shall encompass.—I suppose the true reading to be וְיִסָּב, or יִסָּב. V. and Syr. have the conjunction and. Jehovah shall encompass the whole land for the purpose of protection, as a plain is encompassed by mountains.

— Geba—In Benjamin, north of Jerusalem, Josh. xxi. 17.

— Rimmon.—In Judah, to the south of Jerusalem, Josh. xv. 32.

— shall be exalted.—One MS. reads וְרִמָּה. See on Amos ii. 7.

"And she shall be raised up." That is, Jerusalem, which is here as

From the gate of Benjamin to the place of the former gate,

And unto the corner-gate;

And from the tower of Hananeel unto the king's § wine-presses :

11 And men shall dwell therein, and there shall be no more || curse ;

And Jerusalem shall be inhabited in security.

12 And this shall be the calamity

With which Jehovah will smite all the * people

Who warred against Jerusalem.

Their flesh shall consume away while they stand on their feet ;

And their eyes shall consume away in their sockets ;

And their tongue shall consume away in their mouths.

§ Heb. vats,

|| Or, utter destruction.

* Heb. peoples.

elsewhere represented as a female figure, raised from the ground and sitting tranquil on her ancient seat. See ch. xii. 6. Blayney.

— the gate of Benjamin.—That this gate was probably to the north of Jerusalem. See Jer. xxxvii. 12, 13.

— the former gate.—Supposed to be that called the old gate, Neh. iii. 6. xii. 39 ; placed by Lightfoot towards the southwest, V. ii. p. 28.

— And unto.—Five MSS. read וְעַד. So V. Syr.

— the corner-gate.—See 2 Kings xiv. 13. 2 Chron. xxv. 23. Jer. xxxi. 38.

— tower of Hananeel.—Placed by Cocceius eastward ; who observes that the tower and the corner-gate seem mentioned as the two extremities of the city. Syr. Vulg. read וְהַמִּגְדָּל.

— winepresses.—Near the king's garden, southward. Cocceius.

“The king's vats.” What the king's vats were, or where they were to be found, we have not, as far as I know, any scriptural information. But, from a passage in Josephus (Bell. Jud. L. v. c. 4. ed. Haverc.), I am led to think, they were what are there called, σπηλαια βασιλικά, certain caves or hollows, to which from a resemblance in figure the name of vats or wine-tubs was given, with the addition of βασιλικά, “the king's,” because of their size, being too vast for common use. Blayney.

12. — shall consume away.—The versions and Chald. read in the future יִכָּח. A description of famine or of consumption. Mr. Lowth.

- 13 And it shall come to pass, in that day,
That there shall be a great † tumult among them from
 Jehovah;
 And they shall lay hold every one on the hand of his neighbour,
 But his hand shall rise up against the hand of his neighbour.
- 14 And Judah also shall fight in Jerusalem:
 And the wealth of all the nations round about shall be gathered together,
 Gold, and silver, and apparel, in great abundance.
- 15 And in like manner shall be the calamity
 Of the horse, of the mule, of the camel, and of the ass,
 And of ‡ every beast which shall be
 In those camps; even according to this calamity.
- 16 And it shall come to pass that every one who is left among all the nations,
 Which came against Jerusalem,
 Shall go up from year to year
 To worship the King Jehovah God of hosts,

† Or, destruction.

‡ Heb. all the cattle.

13. — they shall lay hold.—That is, they shall seek help from one another, but instead of helping, they shall turn their arms against one another. See Judg. vii. 22. 1 Sam. xiv. 20. 2 Chron. xx. 23. Blayney.

— his hand shall rise up.—Intestine divisions and hostilities, where friendship was expected, shall be added to the foregoing divine judgments.

14. — in Jerusalem.—So 6.

15. — beast which shall be.—Fourteen MSS. read יהיה “But יהיה is also regular, being in agreement with each of the masculine nouns, החמור, הגמל, הפרר, הסוס. Convenit verbum cum digniore.” Blayney.

— this calamity.—“As this plague.” It is very evident that this verse should regularly have followed immediately after v. 12. But it is very much in the style of this writer to digress, and after a while to return to his subject, as if nothing had intervened. The two preceding verses, 13, and 14, would properly connect with v. 7, and should have come in there, but that the prophet seemed in haste to tell of the blessings in store for his country. Blayney.

And to keep the feast of tabernacles.

17 And it shall come to pass that whoever will not go up,
Of the families of the earth, unto Jerusalem,
To worship the King Jehovah God of hosts,
Upon them shall be no rain.

18 But if the family of Egypt

16. — feast of tabernacles.—Shall abide for some days in Jerusalem, to behold the day of God's glory. The prophet speaks according to Jewish ideas, here and v. 20, 21. "A feast of joy, at the end of the year after harvest, to commemorate their former unsettled state. How this may suit the Christian times, and especially the latter times. see Michaelis." Secker.

"Non quidem Levitice, sed in spiritu et veritate, perinde ac festum Paschatos et Pentecostes, 1 Cor. v. 7, 8:—sub exitum anni gratiæ, seu finem mundi—uberrimam tunc habituri messem donorum gratiæ et Spiritus Sancti," Michaelis, Bib. Halæ. 1720.

Whether what is said in this verse is to be understood in any degree of literal acceptance, or whether Jewish usages and expressions are here accommodated only to the purpose of indicating that the heathen nations would be expected to conform to the established worship of the true church of God, which should exist in those latter days, is a matter which it will be safer to leave to future discovery, than to take upon us peremptorily and prematurely to decide upon at present. The feast of tabernacles, it may be observed, was designed both for a joyful and thankful commemoration of past mercies, and also for the acknowledgment of God's sovereignty in the disposal of future good among his creatures. Of course, the whole race of human beings are interested in the observance of it. Blayney.

17. — Of the families of the earth.—There is a restriction, v. 16. to such nations as warred against Jerusalem. But if, according to the opinion of many learned commentators, by going up to Jerusalem to worship, and to keep the feast of tabernacles, be only meant a conformity to the established worship of the one true God, or, which is the same thing, to the Christian religion, there can be no objection to understanding a strict universality of the nations. For it is repeatedly foretold, that a time would come when all the ends of the world shall remember and return unto the Lord, and all the families of the nations shall worship before him. Ps. xxii. 27. Compare Ps. lxxii. 11. lxxxvi. 9. Rev. xi. 15. Blayney.

— rain.—Spiritual. Vit. on Isa. xlv. 3. where see. Secker.

18. — Egypt.—Where, by the situation of the country, there is no rain.

- Go not up, and come not ;
 Upon them shall be the calamity
 With which Jehovah shall smite the nations
 Who go not up
 To keep the feast of tabernacles.
- 19 This shall be the punishment of Egypt ;
 And the punishment of all the nations
 Who go not up
 To keep the feast of tabernacles.
- 20 In that day shall there be
 On the bells of the horses, HOLINESS TO JEHOVAH.
 And it shall come to pass that the pots in the House of
 Jehovah
Shall be as the bowls before the altar.

“Ægyptus sine nube ferax.”

Claud.

“Terra suis contenta bonis, non indiga mercis, Aut Jovis.”

Luc.

Vid. et Plin. l. v. c. ix.

Mr. Greaves, in his MS. works, p. 444, speaking of the rains of Alexandria says ; media præcipue hyeme, contra receptam opinionem, et crebras et violentas esse sensi. Ward. Gresham Coll. p. 141. Whilst I was at Arsinoe, it hailed and rained almost all one morning, and rained very hard the night following ; which is not looked on as an advantage, and often doth harm, and, as they told me, causes a scarcity, the Nile being sufficient to water the country. Pocock's Obs. on Egypt, p. 59. [Ου γαρ δη υεται τα ανω της Αιγυπτου το παραπαν. Herod. l. iii. c. 19. Rari sunt imbres. Col. de re rust. l. ii. c. 12. Chandler against Morgan : p. 374.] See also Arnold. Wisd. xvi. 16. But also Ps. cv. 32. Yet again, Deut. xi. 10, 11. ‘Υσε γαρ ειθα μη εψεκασε ποτε. Dion. Cass. l. li. p. 455, speaking of Egypt. Εν Αιγυπτω και Βαβυλωνι και Βακτροις, όπου μη υεται ή χωρα η σπανιως, αι εροσοι το ολον εκτρεφουσι. Theophrast. Hist. Plant. 6. Granger says, in lower Egypt it rains much and often, in middle seldom, in upper not at all. See 2. 375. At Payta in Peru it rains not for many years. Anson's Voyage. [Book II. c. vi. p. 189. 4to.] Secker.

—Upon them shall be.—Four MSS. and ó. Syr. omit the second κβ.

—the calamity.—Famine ; which would be the consequence, if the rains did not fall in Ethiopia so as to cause an overflowing of the Nile.

20. On the bells.—God's name shall be honoured in every circumstance.

21 And it shall come to pass that every pot, in Jerusalem and in Judah,
Shall be § holy to Jehovah God of hosts :
And all who sacrifice shall come,
And shall take of them, and prepare food therein :
And there shall be no more a trafficker
In the House of Jehovah God of hosts, in that day.

§ Heb. holiness.

---

“ War horses not being wanted, their ornaments shall be converted to sacred uses. Vit. in Isa. lx. 21.” Secker.

The horses and bells I understand here to be such as the Jews would take from their vanquished enemies, who are characterized as “riding upon horses,” ch. x. 5. xii. 4. These they would consecrate to God as trophies of victory and peace obtained through his assistance and favour. Blayney.

— the pots.—The meanest utensil in the House of God, see Neh. x. 39, shall be as the vessels of silver and gold used in solemn sacrifice.

21. And it shall come to pass.—The utensils of the Jews shall be treated as holy, and the worshippers shall use them reverently. (The idea of preparing food in them is taken from the custom of feasting after a sacrifice.) And no trafficker, see Ezek. xvii. 4, shall pollute the House of God, as was the custom when the Messiah cleansed the temple. “Every thing shall be equally holy, and therefore the ceremonial law abolished. Michaelis. There shall be no tradesman to sell vessels; the liberality of all nations shall make them so plentiful. Grot.” Secker.

THE BOOK
OF MALACHI.

---

CHAPTER I.

- 1 THE Prophecy of the word of Jehovah to Israel, by * Malachi.
- 2 I have loved you, saith Jehovah,
But ye have said, Wherein hast thou loved us?
Was not Esau Jacob's brother, saith Jehovah?
Yet I loved Jacob,
- 3 And Esau I hated;
And have made his mountains a desolation,

* Heb. by the hand of.

---

CHAP. I. 1. — by Malachi.—He lived after Zechariah, because in his time the temple was built, ch. iii. 10. It is probable that he was contemporary with Nehemiah. Comp. ch. ii. 11. Neh. xiii. 23—27. ch. iii. 8. Neh. xiii. 10. We may also conclude, from ch. iv. 4, 5, 6, that he was the last of the Hebrew prophets till John the Baptist appeared. Usher places him before Christ, 416; and Blair, 436.

In v. 2—5, the prophet shows how much Jacob and the Israelites were favoured by Jehovah beyond Esau and the Edomites.

2. — Jacob.—In giving him great external privileges.

3. — Esau I hated.—I showed him less love, Gen. xxix. 30, 31. I comparatively hated him, by giving him an inferior lot. And now I have not only laid waste the dwelling-place of the Edomites, by the incursions of their enemies; but v. 4, they shall remain the perpetual monument of my vengeance.

- And his inheritance to be for the serpents of the desert.
- 4 Although Edom say, We are impoverished,
But we will † build again the waste places;
Thus saith Jehovah God of hosts,
They shall build, but I will throw down,
And men ‡ shall call them, The border of wickedness,
And, The people against whom Jehovah hath indignation for ever.
- 5 And your eyes shall see it; and ye shall say,
Jehovah is magnified beyond the border of Israel.
- 6 A son honoureth a father, and a servant his master.
If then I be a father, where is mine honour?
And if I be a master, where is my fear?
Saith Jehovah God of hosts unto you,
O priests, that despise my name.
But ye say, Wherein have we despised thy name?
- 7 Ye bring polluted food to mine altar.

† Heb. return and build.

‡ Or, they shall be called.

— serpents.—Serpentes fœminæ. From the Hebrew שָׂנָא, or the Arab. سَنَاء, to double, to fold.

4. — throw down.—By Judas Maccabeus, 1 Macc. v. 65; and by John Hyrcanus, Jos. Ant. XIII. ix. 1.

5. — your eyes.—The eyes of the Jews in succeeding ages.

— beyond the border.—Εμεγαλυνθη ὑπερανω, ó. He sheweth his great power in other countries besides Israel.

6. — honoureth a father.—Syr. Ar. read אבִי, his father. ó. MS. Pachom. render και δουλός τον Κυριον αυτου φοβηθησεται; and ου φοβηθησεται is found in ed. Ald., as if the clause were to be read interrogatively, and אִבִּי לֹא had stood in the text. The reading of the Pachomian MS. occurs in Chald. and is confirmed by the context:

“ A son honoureth a father,
And a servant feareth his master.
If then, &c.
And if, &c.”

From this v. to ch. ii. 9, the prophet reproves the priests and the people for sacrificing the refuse of beasts; and denounces punishment against the priests for not teaching the people their duty in this respect.

Yet ye say, Wherein have we polluted thee?

In that ye say, The table of Jehovah, it is despicable.

8 Now if ye bring the blind § for sacrifice, is it not evil?

And if ye bring the lame and the sick, is it not evil?

Present it, I pray you, unto thy Governor; will he be pleased with thee,

Or will he || favourably accept thee?

Saith Jehovah God of hosts.

9 And now, I pray you, entreat the face of Jehovah that he would be gracious unto us.

From your hand hath this been;

Shall I favourably accept any of you?

Would Jehovah God of hosts say.

10 Surely the doors shall be closed against you:

Neither shall ye kindle the fire of mine altar in vain.

I have no pleasure in you,

Saith Jehovah God of hosts;

Neither will I accept an * offering at your hand.

§ Or, to sacrifice it.

|| Heb. accept thy face.

* Heb. an offering of flour.

7. — The table.—The altar, Ezek. xli. 22. xliv. 15, 16. They said in effect that the altar of Jehovah was vile and contemptible, by offering on it torn, blind, lame, and sick victims.

8. Now if.—Two MSS. read כִּי, to which יָכִי is equivalent. Comp. Isa. xxxvi. 19. 2 Kings xviii. 34.

“Mactant lectas de more bidentes.” Virg.

See Lev. xxii. 20.

— unto thy governor.—Gifts of this nature were customarily made in the east: and are to this day. Harmer, ii. 25.

9. — Shall I.—ó. Ar. Syr. read הֲאֵשָׁא; and the present reading is on a rasure in two MSS.

— Would—say—See Judges viii. 8.

10. Surely.—ó. and one MS. read כִּי for כִּי; which Houbigant approves of.

— shall be closed.—ó. and Houbigant read יִסְתָּר. One MS. reads יִסְתָּר, claudet quis, i. e. claudentur.

— in vain.—To no purpose as to propitiating me. See יָחַם, Prov. i. 17.

- 11 For, from the rising of the sun even unto the going down thereof,
 My name shall be great among the nations;
 And in every place shall incense be brought unto my name,
 And a pure offering:
 For great shall my name be among the nations,
 Saith Jehovah God of hosts.
- 12 But ye profane it, in that ye say,
 The table of Jehovah, it is polluted:
 And what is offered thereon even its food, is despicable:
- 13 Ye say also, Behold, it is of weariness:
 And ye snuff at it:
 Saith Jehovah God of hosts.
 And ye have brought that which was torn, and the lame,
 and the sick:
 And ye have also brought an offering of flour:

11. — incense. Seven MSS. read מוקטֹר, suffumigatum. We have here a prophecy of the conversion of the Gentiles; and as usual, under Jewish images, Zech. xiv. 16.

12. — polluted.—Ye treat it as if it were impure, and unworthy of the choicest offerings.

— what is offered thereon.—Called נֶיֶב, proventus, because the priest had a portion of it. We may render this verse:

“And as to what is offered thereon, its food is despicable.”

13. — ye snuff at it.—See Haggai i. 2. Ye say, Attendance on the altar, and partaking of its sacrifices, are a burdensome task: and ye turn from them with disgust. Two MSS. read אִירִי; and Jarchi says (see Cappellus), that this is one of the eleven places which the scribes have corrected. According to this various lection we must render, “And ye snuff at me.” The ו and י are often confounded. Great beauty would be restored to Ps. xcv. if, at v. 7, we read בקוֹלִי for בקוֹל; and suppose that God speaks from these words, “To day if ye shall hear my voice.”

— torn.—By wild beasts. What had been violently taken by them as their prey, and rescued from them, or left by them.

— And ye have also brought.—The rendering in ó. MS. Pachom. is προσεφερετε αὐτὰ εἰς θυσίαν, which leads us to read אִתָּהּ מִנְחָה, “Ye have even brought it for a sacrifice.”

Shall I accept it from your hand,
Saith Jehovah God of hosts ?

- 14 But cursed be the deceiver, who hath a male in his flock,
And voweth and sacrificeth unto Jehovah that which is marred.

For I am a great King,
Saith Jehovah God of hosts :

And my name shall be † had in reverence among the nations.

CHAPTER II.

- 1 AND now to you is this commandment, O ye priests.
2 If ye will not hearken,
If ye will not lay it to heart,
To give glory unto my name,
Saith Jehovah God of hosts ;
I will send a curse upon you,
And I will curse your blessing :
And moreover I have cursed it already.
Because ye lay it not to heart.
3 Behold, I will take away from you the shoulder,

† Or, dreadful, or, fearful.

14. — a male.—See Lev. xxii. 19.

— unto Jehovah.—Chald. many MSS. and six ed. read לאירי ליהוה for לאירי.

— God of hosts.—V. 6. Ar. Syr. and three MSS. supply אלהי.

CHAP. II. 2. — your blessing.—Read ברכתכם with 6. Ar. Chald. one MS. and Doctor Durell. The van is omitted in eighteen MSS., which brings us nearer to the true reading. By blessing is meant the portion of the priests, which a dearth would lessen. See ch. iii. 10, 11. The word is sometimes used for a present. See Joel ii. 14.

— I have cursed it.—By sending you unfruitful seasons.

3. — take away—the shoulder.—Houbigant reads גרע with 6. Ar.

- And I will scatter dung in your faces,
Even the dung of your solemn sacrifices.
 And one * shall carry you to the same place therewith.
- 4 And ye shall know that I have sent unto you
 This commandment,
 That my covenant may remain with Levi;
 Saith Jehovah God of hosts.
- 5 My covenant was with him, even that of life and peace;
 And I gave them unto him, for the fear wherewith he feared me,
 And was dismayed before my face.
- 6 The law of truth was in his mouth,
 And unrighteousness was not found in his lips:
 In peace and uprightness he walked with me,
 And he turned away many from iniquity.
- 7 For the lips of the priest should † keep knowledge,
 And men should seek the law from his mouth:
 For he is the messenger of Jehovah God of hosts.
- 8 But Ye have departed out of the way;

* Or, And ye shall be carried.

† Or, retain.

The shoulder, וְרֵךְ, which is also the reading of ó. Ar. Houbigant, was the part which belonged to the priest. See Lev. vii. 32. Deut. xviii. 3. "Perhaps the true reading is, נִדָּע, will cut off." Secker.

— dung.—The maw was also the priest's. See Deut. xviii. 3. But such priests deserved only the dung which it contained.

— solemn sacrifices.—Or victims. See the Hebrew word, Ex. xxiii. 18. Ps. cxviii. 27.

— And one shall carry.—Or, as ó. And I will carry: et auferens ero. Ye shall be destroyed, and cast on a dunghill.

4. — my covenant may remain.—That you may reform, and not be cast of.

5. — gave them.—Life and peace. One MS. reads וְרֵךְ, and this, or וְרֵךְ, with the π paragogic, which might easily pass into the Mem final, is the reading of V. ó. Ar. Chald.

"And I gave him reverence that he might fear me;
 And he was dismayed," &c.

7. — should keep.—Preserve, store up, so as to distribute it.

- Ye have caused many to stumble at the law ;
 Ye have made † void the covenant with Levi ;
 Saith Jehovah God of hosts.
- 9 Therefore have I also made you
 Despicable and base before all the people ;
 According as ye keep not my ways,
 But have respect to persons in the law.
- 10 Have we not all one Father ?
 Hath not one God created us ?
 Why do we deal unfaithfully, every man against his brother,
 By breaking the covenant § made with our fathers ?
- 11 Judah hath dealt unfaithfully.
 And abomination is committed in Israel and in Jerusalem :
 For Judah hath profaned the holiness of Jehovah which he loveth,
 And hath married the daughter of a strange god.

† Heb. corrupted.

§ Heb. of our fathers.

8. — caused many to stumble.—To sin by offering blemished sacrifices.

9. — have respect to persons.—Having one decision for the poor, and another for the rich. See Lev. xix. 15.

10. From this v. to v. 16. the prophet censures intermarriages of Israelites with women of another country, which Moses had forbidden, Deut. vii. 3 ; and also divorces, which seem to have been multiplied for the purpose of contracting these prohibited marriages.

— deal unfaithfully.—Act an unjust and inhuman part by putting away the daughter of a brother Jew.

— breaking the covenant.—See Deut. vii. 3. חלל signifies to perforate ; and as one ancient way of cancelling bonds was by striking a nail through them, see Col. ii. 14, hence the word signifies to make void. See Tayl. Conc. in voc.

11. — hath dealt unfaithfully.—Heb. So Ephraim is used in the feminine, Hos. iv. 18, 19. v. 9. ix. 13.

— which he loveth.—Which Jehovah hath always loved, Or, rather, by a change of the points, which he [Jehovah] loveth, אורב.

— the daughter of a strange god.—That is, the worshipper of a different god from Jehovah. See Deut. xxxii. 19.

- 12 Jehovah will cut off the man that doeth this,
 Him that || teacheth and him that answereth, from the tents of Jacob:
 And him that bringeth an * offering to Jehovah, God of hosts.
- 13 And this also ye do:
 Ye cover with tears the altar of Jehovah,
With weeping and with crying out.
 Insomuch that he regardeth not an offering any more.
 Nor receiveth it with good-will from your hand.
- 14 Yet ye say, Wherefore?

|| Or, wakeneth.

* Heb. an offering of flour.

12. — the man.—לאִישׁ may be equivalent to אִישׁ אֶחָד, or may be rendered to the man.

— Him that teacheth.—We have here a proverbial expression for the whole family, as עַצְר וְעוֹבֵב, 1 Kings xiv. 10, vinctus et liber; that is, all. Bahrdt. So Ezek. xxxv. 7.

“I will cut off him that passeth out and him that returneth:” that is, all. See also 2 Chron. xv. 5. Possibly עַר, &c. may be a substantive signifying the waker; that is, the speaker, or the caller. To waken the ear, Isa. l. 4, is to pour instruction into it. Hence Vulg. may translate magistrum et discipulum, and the words may mean “the priest and the people.” That some of the priests married strange wives, see Neh. xiii. 23–30.

— And him that bringeth.—Notwithstanding his oblations. But Honbigant observes that Syr. and Chald. read מְבִיֵּשׁ: “So that there shall be none to bring near, &c.” This reading would oblige us to interpret עַר in a sense applicable to the priest.

“Jehovah will cut off the man that doeth this,
 Even him that teacheth,” &c.

13. — also.—וְ. Ar. read שְׂנֵאתִי.

“And this which I hate ye do.”

This furnishes a very good sense.

— Ye cover.—Or, overwhelm. The infinitive is here used as in Latin. See Ezek. i. 14. Isa. xxi. 5. The passage refers to the tears and groans of wives, divorced by priests, or referring to them for decisions.

— Nor receiveth it with good-will.—See Chald. We may render, “Nor receiveth an acceptable sacrifice,” or, “what is acceptable.” Placabile quid. V. δέκτον, ὁ. The natural cause of good-will. See Prov. x. 32.

- Because Jehovah was a witness
 Between thee † and the wife of thy youth,
 Against whom thou hast dealt unfaithfully :
 Yet she was thy companion, and thy ‡ covenanted wife.
 15 And did not he make one flesh ?
 And is there not one spirit thereto ?
 And what doth he seek ? A § godly seed.
 Therefore take heed to your spirit,
 And deal not thou unfaithfully to the wife of thy youth.
 16 For I hate him that putteth away,
 Saith Jehovah [Lord of hosts] the God of Israel :

† Heb. and between.

‡ Heb. the wife of thy covenant.

§ Heb. a seed of God.

14. — was a witness.—He having been solemnly appealed to as a witness of the contract.

— dealt unfaithfully.—בגדת is found in twelve MSS. and four ed.

15. And did not.—I much question whether sense can be made of the text, as it now stands. “And did he not make one?” Did not God make man and wife one flesh. Here the ellipses are harsh. “And hath he the residue of the spirit?” No, he hath its fulness; and can do what he pleaseth. “And wherefore one?” Wherefore did he make two one? “He sought a goodly seed,” as opposed to a sensual one.

Or thus:

“And did not One make us?”

See v. 10.

“And hath he the residue of the spirit?

And what doth the One God seek? An holy seed.”

See Thelyphthora, i. 136. ed. 2.

But I prefer transposing thus,

ולא אחד עשה שאר :

So one MS.

ורוח לו האחד :

וכיה מבקש וגו’

The allusion is to Gen. ii. 24. Man and wife are one flesh and one soul.

— to your spirit.—To your mind, or disposition.

— dealt not thou unfaithfully.—V. ó. Houbigant, and ten or eleven MSS. read תבגד or תבגדו.

16. — I hate.—Both שנא and שלח are participles.

— Jehovah.—After this word ó. MS. A. and Syr. read צבאות of hosts.

And him that covereth violence with his garment ;
Saith Jehovah God of hosts.

Therefore take heed unto your spirit, and deal thou not unfaithfully.

17 Ye have wearied Jehovah by your words.

Yet ye say, Wherein have we wearied him ?

In that ye say, Every one that doeth evil

Is || good in the eyes of Jehovah ;

And in them he delighteth :

Or, Where is the God of judgment ?

CHAPTER III.

1 BEHOLD I will send my Messenger,

|| Or, acceptable.

— And him.—As I do him that endeavoureth to conceal under his garment what he hath taken by violence : sub vestimento suo. See Syr. Chald. Nold. על. Sec. 30. But כסה is often construed with על before its transitive case. See on Hab. ii. 14. This led De Dieu to render thus,

“ For violence covereth his garment : ”

That is, overspreadeth or defileth it. Jude 23. Nocturnam maculat violentia vestem. His second marriage is an act of injustice and violence to his former wife.

ó. Ar. Chald. read לבושך, thy garment : and ó. MS. Pachom. read לבושכם, your garment.

17. From this v. to the end of ch. iii. 6, the prophet reproves the Jews for their immoralities : and reminds them of Him who was to erect a pure religion among them.

— wearied him.—One MS. reads והעמך, and another at present. “Wearied thee.”

— Or.—Three MSS. omit ואי ; and ó. Ar. read ואיה, “And where,” &c.

CHAP. III. 1. — my Messenger.—John the Baptist.

— prepare.—Like pioneers on the march of an eastern monarch. See Bp. Lowth on Isa. xl. 2.

And he shall prepare the way before me :
 And the Lord whom ye seek Shall suddenly come to his temple,
 Even the Messenger of the covenant in whom ye delight:

Behold he shall come, saith Jehovah God of hosts.

2 But who shall abide the day of his coming ?

And who shall stand when he appeareth ?

For he is like the fire of a refiner,

And like the soap of fullers.

— the way.—In N. T. Matt. xi. 10. Mark i. 2. Luke vii. 27. we read την ὁδὸν σου, as if the Hebrew had been דרכך.

— before me.—Before the Messiah who shall act in my name. In the three places of the gospels we find εμπροσθεν σου, לפניך. But in Luke these two words are wanting in the Cambridge MS.; and there is much better authority for omitting them, Mark i. 2.

I suspect that, in the gospels, πρὸ προσώπου σου, and εμπροσθεν σου, are different renderings of the same Hebrew word. The Hebrew text furnishes a very good sense as it now stands; and probably the Greek text, which the evangelists copied, was corrupt, though in substance sufficiently faithful.

— suddenly.—After the messenger; or unawares, as Christ's first coming was, and second will be. Poc. Secker.

— Even.—All the old versions, and. But most of the Jews say it is the same person. May it not be understood of God acting by his angel, as Gen. xlviii. 15, 16? Where God which fed me—the Angel which redeemed me, are joined without ו. Secker.

— the Messenger of the covenant.—He who shall establish a new covenant between me and mankind. "The Messenger or Angel of the covenant is a phrase no where else in scripture. It may mean the person by whose intervention a covenant is made, or by whom a covenant proposed by one party is sent to the other. Now the voice of the angel in whom God's name was, the Israelites were to obey, and to do all that God spoke, Exod. xxiii. 20—23; and this angel was with them before the covenant was made with them, Ex. xiv. 19; and the law was ordained by angels, Gal. iii. 19; so that this angel, of whom see the note on Isa. lxiii. 9, may be the angel of the covenant here.—God, and an, or the angel, are joined close together, Zec. xii. 8. Gen. xlviii. 16." Secker.

2. — who shall abide.—He shall show that I delight in him that doeth good, and that I execute vengeance on the wicked. See ch. ii. 17.

- 3 And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver ;
 And he shall purify the sons of Levi,
 And shall * refine them as gold and as silver ;
 And they † shall bring near unto Jehovah an offering in righteousness.
- 4 Then shall the offering of Judah and of Jerusalem be pleasing unto Jehovah,
 As in the days of old, and as in former years.
- 5 And I will draw near unto you to judgment ;
 And I will be a swift witness Against sorcerers, and against adulterers, and against ‡ false swearers ;
 And against those who oppress the § hireling in his hire,
and the widow and the fatherless ;

* Or, cleanse.

† Heb. shall be unto Jehovah the bringers near of an offering of flour.

‡ Heb. those who swear to a falsehood. § Heb. the hire of the hireling.

3. — he shall sit as a refiner.—He shall be diligently employed in his office, in which he shall resemble a refiner.

ó. Ar. read, “And he shall sit a refiner and purifier as of silver and gold.” And Syr. transposes the particle of similitude in the same manner; but omits וְיִרְבֶּה, and gold.

— the sons of Levi.—Those who shall minister in their stead under the new covenant.

5. — sorcerers.—Those who pretend to foretel future events by rites which the law forbid. Arab. manifestavit, revelavit.

— false swearers.—ó. Ar. add בשמי, by my name, with fifteen MSS. three ed. and Talm. Babyl.

— who oppress.—Houbigant reads with ó. Ar. וְיִרְבֶּה; and again וְעִשְׂקֵי אֶלְמָנָה. But Bahrtdt justly observes, that the Hebrews often prefix a verb to many nouns, which suits only one. See on Hos. ii. 18.

— the hireling in his fire.—שִׂכָּר שֶׁכֵּר. Sie ó. V. Syr. Ch. Videtur tamen prius expungendum; nam de personis dicitur עֵשֶׂק, et speciatim de mercenario, Deut. xxiv. 14; de viduo et orphano, Jer. vii. 6; nusquam de rebus, nisi Job xl. 18, ubi videtur fluvio persona tribui. Addit Syr. peregrinum post שִׂכָּר. Inter וְיִרְבֶּה et נָר interponunt judicium Ch. ó. quod exhibet Deut. xxvii. 19. quo videtur hic propheta respicere. Secker.

— and the widow.—Observe that three MSS. read וְאֶלְמָנָה.

- And who turn aside the poor, and fear not me ;
 Saith Jehovah God of hosts.
- 6 For I am Jehovah [your God,] I change not :
 Therefore ye, the sons of Jacob, are not consumed.
- 7 From the days of your fathers ye have turned aside from my statutes, and have not kept them :
 Turn ye unto me, and I will turn unto you,
 Saith Jehovah God of hosts,
 But ye say, Wherein shall we turn ?
- 8 Shall a man rob God ?
 Yet ye rob me.
 But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee ?
In || tithes and * offerings.
- 9 Ye are cursed with a curse :
 For ye have robbed me ; even this † whole nation.
- 10 Bring ye all the ‡ tithes
 Into the storehouse,
 And let there be food in mine house :
 And prove me now herewith,
 Saith Jehovah God of hosts ;
 If I will not open unto you

|| Heb. the tithe.

* Heb. the heave-offering.

† Heb. the nation, all of it,

‡ Heb. tithe.

— And who turn aside.—See Amos v. 12. Houbigant observes, that 6. Chald. supply השפט, the judgment ; which is unnecessary. The Greek is rather an explanation of this and the foregoing line, than a verbal rendering.

6. — Jehovah [your God.]—6. Ar. supply אלהיכם.

— are not consumed.—Because of my everlasting covenant with your fathers, ye are not totally consumed.

7. From this ver. to the end of v. 12, the people are reprehended for withholding the legal tithes and oblations ; are assured that they are under a curse for this breach of the law, and that an opposite conduct will derive on them a blessing.

From the days.—See לֹא, Nold. Zech. xiv. 10. Some render, “ In like manner as from,” &c.

8. — tithes.—See Neh. xiii. 10.

— offerings.—See Numb. xviii. 19.

10. — food.—For the priests. See טֶרֶף, Prov. xxx. 8. xxxi. 15.

The windows of the heavens,
And pour out unto you a blessing, until there be not room enough to receive it.

- 11 And I will rebuke for you the devourer,
And he shall not destroy the fruit of your ground ;
Neither shall your vine § cast its fruit in the field ;
Saith Jehovah God of hosts.
- 12 And all the nations shall call you blessed :
For ye shall be || a pleasant land,
Saith Jehovah, God of hosts.
- 13 Your words have waxen bold against me,
Saith Jehovah [God of hosts.]
Yet ye say, What have we spoken against thee ?
- 14 Ye have said, “ It is * vain to serve Jehovah :
And what profit is there that we have kept his ordinance,
And that we have walked mournfully
Before Jehovah God of hosts ?
- 15 And now we call the proud happy :
Yea, the workers of wickedness are set † up :
Yea, they have proved God, and have escaped.”
- 16 Then they who feared Jehovah spake

§ Or, be barren.

|| Heb. a land of desire.

* Heb. vanity.

† Heb. built.

— not room enough.—Immensæ ruperunt horrea messes. Virg.

11. — the devourer.—The locust, caterpillar, cankerworm, &c.

13. From this verse to the end of ch. iv. v. 3, the prophet expostulates with the wicked for their hard speeches, and declares that God will make a fearful distinction between them and the righteous.

— God of hosts.—צבאות is supplied by Chald. and ὁ. Pachom.

14. — walked mournfully.—With prayer and fasting, in sackcloth and ashes.

15. — the proud.—Those who behave themselves arrogantly against God.

— are set up.—Are raised to prosperity, as buildings are to their height.

These who spake thus seem to have expected an exact distribution of temporal rewards and punishments to good and bad men.

Every one to his neighbour.

And Jehovah ‡ gave ear and heard :

And a book of remembrance was written before him,

For them who feared Jehovah, and for them who thought on his name.

- 17 They shall be unto me, said Jehovah God of hosts,
In the day which I shall appoint, a peculiar treasure.
And I will spare them, as a man spareth
His son who serveth him,

- 18 And ye shall § again discern
Between the righteous and the wicked ;
Between him who serveth God,
And him who serveth him not.

CHAPTER IV.

- 1 FOR behold, the day cometh which shall burn as a furnace ;

And all the proud,

And all that do wickedness, shall be stubble.

And the day which cometh shall burn them up,

‡ Or, hearkened.

§ Heb. return and discern.

16. — gave ear and heard.—Heard attentively.

— a book of remembrance.—A beautiful allusion to the records kept by kings, Esth. vi. 1.

17. They shall be.—Erunt, V. the vau being merely conversive.

— appoint.—See c. iv. 3. So V. 6. Ps. cxviii. 24. The period referred to may be the Roman war under Titus.

— a peculiar treasure.—סֵכֶל, Chald. lucratus est, collegit.

18. — again discern.—As your fathers did, when chastised by the Assyrians and Babylonians.

— and the wicked.—For the Hebrew form, see on Joel ii. 17.

CHAP. IV. 1. — root or branch.—It shall totally consume them. A proverbial expression.

- Saith Jehovah God of hosts:
 For it shall not leave them root or branch.
- 2 But unto you that fear my name,
 Shall the sun of righteousness arise, * with healing in his wings,
 And ye shall go forth, and thrive, as bullocks of the stall.
- 3 And ye shall tread down the wicked: for they shall be as dust
 Under the soles of your feet,
 In the day which I shall appoint;
 Saith Jehovah God of hosts.
- 4 Remember ye the law of Moses my servant,
 Which I commanded him in Horeb
 Concerning all Israel: even the statutes and the judgments.
- 5 Behold, I will send unto you
 Elijah the prophet,
 Before the great and terrible day of Jehovah come:

* Heb. and.

2. — that fear.—Or, O ye that fear. Arab. Bahrdt.

— wings.—Metaphorically, for rays. The disciples of the Messiah shall be preserved from the destruction by the Romans.

— go forth.—To the pasture.

— and thrive.—Some render the original word exiliit. See ó.

3. — ye shall tread down.—Ye shall know that they are wholly subdued.

— as dust.—Some say that here is an allusion to the treading of mortar, made one part of sand and two of ashes. Harmer I. 179.

4. Remember.—This precept well suits the last of the prophets. ó. Ar. place this v. after v. 5, 6, and it forms as apt a conclusion as repeating the prophecy of Christ's harbinger. See ch. iii. 1. "MS. Copt. also places this verse last." Mr. Woide.

5. — Elijah.—John the Baptist, who should come in the spirit and power of Elijah, Luke i. 17.

— day of Jehovah.—When he shall take vengeance on the Jews by the Roman armies.

- 6 That he may convert the heart of the fathers together with the children,
And the heart of the children together with their fathers :
Lest I come and smite the land with a † curse.

† Or, utter destruction.

6. — together with.—See כַּךְ, in the sense of una cum, Gen. xxxii. 11. Amos iii. 15, where הו. have עַל הַבַּיִת, which answers to עַל הַבָּנִים, Luke i. 17. Hos. x. 14, where הו. have עַל הַבָּנִים. Exod. xxx. 22. Mic. v. 3, where הו. have עַל הַבָּנִים. See Nold. כַּךְ, Sec. 9. That he may convert many. See Matt. iii. 5.

— the land.—Three MSS. and one in the margin add כָּל, all the land; which is the reading of Chald.

INDEX OF PERSONS

OCCASIONALLY REFERRED TO.

- ABARBINEL, 94. 119. 231.
 Abuwalid, 133.
 Adanson, 212. 214.
 Addison, xxxviii.
 Aeschylus, 158.
 Ainsworth, xxii.
 Alscheeh, R., 281.
 Ammianus Marcellinus, 18.
 Amos, 14.
 Aquila, 9. 48. 93. 99. 112. 115. 119. 123.
     132. 147. 157. 161. 193. 233. 240. 252.
     274.
 Arrian, 205.
 Augustin, 358.
 Bahrdt, 94. 111. 118. 121. 122. 125. 129.
     133. 134. 140. 146. 147. 149. 217. 220.
     224. 225. 244. 247. 248. 255. 257. 261.
     274. 278. 279.
 Barrington, Bishop, 94.
 Beza, xxix. 27.
 Blair, John, xlv. 125. 206. 267. 273. 276.
     291.
 Blanchini, 358.
 Blayney, xxi. xxii. xxv. xxxiv. xxxvi.
     xxxvii. xl. and notes on Zeehariah.
 Bochart, 2, and frequently.
 Borromeo, Cardinal, xi.
 Bryant, 16.
 Butler, Bishop, 180.
 Buxtorf, xiii. 3. 28. 45. 61. 82. 201. 321.
 Calasio, xiv.
 Calmet, 54. 126. 305. 333.
 Cappellus, 3. 54. 83. 172. 197. 204. 230.
     235. 243. 252. 260. 263. 267. 271. 290.
     305. 306. 311. 312. 315.
 Castell, xiii.
 Catullus, 278.
 Celsius, 11. 48. 86. 236.
 Chandler, Bishop, 173. 190. 278. 279. 262.
 Chandler, Doctör, 211. 217.
 Cicero, 116. 143. 278.
 Claudian, 107. 216.
 Cocceius, 2. 173.
 Columella, 134.
 Constantine L'Empereur, 281.
 Cornelius a Lapide, 83.
 Ctesias, 206.
 Curtius, 13. 17.
 Cyril, 130. 215. 221.
 Dathius, 16. 89. 133. 243. 273.
 David, a future king of the Jews, 79.
 De Dieu, 393.
 Delaney, xxiv.
 De Lisle, 160. 366.
 Demetrius Phalereus, xiv.
 Dimock, 96. 118. 123. 148.
 Diodorus Siculus, 8. 38. 193. 204. 205.
 Dion Cassius, 382.
 Dionysius, 8.
 Doddridge, xxxvii.
 Dow, 70.
 Drusius, 14. 39. 84. 99. 190. 206. 207.
     219.
 Durell, xvii. 34. 180. 183. 257.
 Ennius, 54.
 Erasmus, xxvii.
 Euripides, 74. 158.
 Eusebius, xi. 56. 160.
 Eustathius, 8. 246.
 Forsayeth, 8. 27. 39. 40. 42. 95. 116.
     123. 124. 131. 134. 140. 158. 164. 190.
     194. 196. 209. 231. 239. 249.
 Fuller, 254.
 Golius, 169. 211.
 Grabe, xii. 253.
 Greaves, 382.
 Green, 6. 8. 245. 247. 253. 262. 263. 264.
 Griesbach, 358.
 Grotius, 38. 89. 119. 130. 224.
 Gussetius, 50. 260.
 Habakkuk, 244.
 Hammond, 39.
 Harmer, 11. 26. 27. 30. 38. 42. 45. 54.
     57. 77. 107. 197. 208. 220. 223. 246.
     262.
 Heberden, xviii. 282.
 Herodotus, 9. 191. 201. 205. 286.
 Hiller, 11.
 Hirtius, 54.
 Homer, 22. 27. 33. 36. 73. 158. 196. 199.
     200. 203. 224.
 Horace, 4. 22. 27. 34. 36. 37. 42. 65. 76.
     87. 107. 139.
 Horsley, Bishop, and notes and renderings through Hosea.
 Hosea, 59.

- Houbigant on all the Minor Prophets frequently occurs.
- Hulsius, 281.
- Hutchinson, 246.
- Hyde, 34.
- Hyrcanus, 18. 272.
- Jackson, 206.
- Jarchi, 94.
- Jerom, 9. 130. 134. 191. 219. 230. 258.
- Joel, 207.
- Jonah 1, 11.
- Joseph, R., 281.
- Josephus, vi. 15. 17. 18. 42. 199. 205. 214. 267. 272. 276. 279. 281. 283. 295.
- Isaac, R., 358.
- Isaiah, 238. 283.
- Judas Maccabeus, 18.
- Justin, 205. 286.
- Justin Martyr, 40.
- Juvenal, xv. 34. 76. 255.
- Kennicott, ix. x. xli. 3. 8. 57. 88. 100. 146. 147. 172. 185. 258.
- Kidder, 330. 358.
- Kimchi, 14. 127. 134. 314.
- Kuster, 222.
- La Roque, 151.
- Le Clerc, 150. 269. 271. 272.
- Lewis, xxxix.
- Lightfoot, 272.
- Lilienthal, 133. 264.
- Longinus, 96.
- Lowth, Mr., 230. 272.
- Lowth, Bishop, frequently.
- Lucan, 246.
- Lucas, Brugensis, 358.
- Lucian, 193.
- Lucilius, 36.
- Lucretius, 151. 155.
- Ludolphus, 213. 214.
- Macrobius, 126.
- Maddan, 393.
- Maimonides, 35. 281.
- Manger, 94. 128. 134. 151.
- Marcellus Virgilius, 213.
- Masius, xii.
- Maundrell, 26.
- Mead, 219.
- Mede, 50. 149. 307. 334.
- Menander, 99.
- Mercer, 198.
- Merrick, 194.
- Micah, 154.
- Michaelis, I. D., xlii. 27. 41. 55. 57. 94. 99. 105. 109. 132. 134. 136. 137. 144. 146. 150. 234. 269. 278. 280.
- Michaelis, I. H., 29. 48.
- Moerlius, 3. 79. 82. 102. 269.
- Molyneux, 214.
- Montfaucon, 99. 112. 126. 134.
- Muretus, 116.
- Nahum, 188.
- Nathan, R., 281.
- Newton, Sir Isaac, 236.
- Newton, Bishop, 291.
- Nimrod, 190.
- Noldius, 3. 10. 31. 44. 53. 70. 76. 97. 106. 155. 162. 174. 218. 232. 276. 277. 309.
- Obadiah, 267.
- Oppian, 246.
- Origen, xi. 358.
- Orpheus, 3. 208.
- Ovid, 51. 157. 158. 184. 200. 226.
- Owen, 172. 365.
- Pachomius, x.
- Pamphilus, xi.
- Peritsol, 12.
- Petavius, 291.
- Peters, 38. 180. 247.
- Peirce, 283.
- Pliny, 11. 114. 145. 211. 212. 215.
- Plutarch, 10.
- Pocock, 16. 48. 70. 76. 80. 82. 83. 86. 93. 94. 97. 98. 102. 107. 109. 112. 114. 122. 124. 125. 126. 134. 135. 147. 148. 157. 158. 164. 172. 174. 189. 223.
- Prideaux, 202. 280. 286. 291. 296.
- Priestley, xxxvii.
- Propertius, 107.
- Pul, 9.
- Randolph, 330. 357. 358.
- Ray, 208. 214.
- Remigius, 214.
- Robertson, 146.
- Saadias, R., 364.
- Sallust, xxxviii. 151.
- Sappho, 51.
- Schroeder, 264.
- Schultens, 34. 87. 113. 147. 179. 204. 232. 246. 293. 303.
- Scott, xxiv.
- Secker's critical notes on all the Minor Prophets frequently occur.
- Selden, 35. 39. 122. 126. 231.
- Seneca, 25. 38. 143.
- Servius, 69. 126. 270.
- Shaw, 156. 212.
- Sixtus Quintus, xi.
- Sloane, 213.
- Sophocles, 52.
- Spencer, 22. 29. 37. 38. 39. 77. 119. 122.
- Statius, 145.
- Stephanus de Urbibus, 1.
- Stephens, Rob., 100.
- Stephens, Hen., xxix.
- Strabo, 8. 118. 201. 205.

- Symmachus, 4. 7. 9. 12. 76. 88. 98. 99. 101. 102. 115. 123. 127. 132. 134. 157. 233. 240. 248. 252. 255. 256.
 Swift, xxxv.
 Tacitus, 67. 196.
 Tanehum, R., 97. 124. 133.
 Taylor, ix. xiv. xxix. xlii. 2. 4. 37. 77. 88. 94. 98. 124. 190. 258. 294.
 Terence, 99. 116.
 Theocritus, 290.
 Theodotion, 9. 18. 70. 76. 99. 112. 132. 143. 193. 231. 240. 252. 255.
 Theophrastus, 382.
 Thevenot, 219.
 Thuanus, 212.
 Tibullus, 51. 74.
 Tobit, 206.
 Usher, 125. 267.
 Velleius Paterculus, 205.
 Virgil, xv. xvi. 10. 19. 22. 34. 46. 53. 57. 70. 74. 76. 85. 120. 136. 142. 192. 202. 208. 209. 217. 225. 226. 228. 238.
 Vitringa, 39. 191. 268. 286. 289. 290. 291. 293. 295. 296. 316.
 Wesseling, 39.
 Westerhovius, 116.
 Wetstein, 222. 252.
 Wheeler, frequently.
 White, xii. xiii.
 Wintle, 220. 253. 255. 257.
 Woide, xviii. xlii. 26. 27. 35. 57. 65. 79. 127. 130. 132. 134. 136. 150. 172. 177. 229. 245. 257. 263. 299.
 Xenophon, 9. 203. 246.
 Zeehariah, whether the author of chap. ix.—xiv. 329. 383.
 Zephaniah beautiful, 232.

INDEX OF THINGS.

- Abbreviations in writing Hebrew words, 3. 15. 34. 57. 298.
- Achor, 71.
- Additions to the Hebrew text in ó, 19. 27. 82. 116. 143. 183. 211. 278. 285. 289.
- Adulteress, how punished, 67.
- Affixes signify passively, 116.
- in the oblique case repeated in the nominative, 321.
- Ammonites, 18.
- Angel of the covenant, 395.
- Arabism, aleph for vau, 21. 130; beth, 146.
- Ashdod, 17.
- Ashes, custom of sitting on, 9.
- Ashkelon, 17.
- Ass, wild, 114.
- Baal, 70. 72.
- Baalim, 70.
- Baal Peor, 122.
- Baldness in mourning, 51. 160.
- Bashan, 28.
- Bear, 145.
- Beersheba, 33.
- Belial, 193.
- Besor, 45.
- Bethaven, 87.
- Betheden, 16.
- Bethel, 27.
- Beth-Ezel, 158.
- Bozrah, 18.
- Calf, why worshipped, 113.
- Calneh, 41.
- Cakes, how prepared in the East, 107.
- Camillus, whence derived, 126.
- Caphtor, 55.
- Carmel, 15.
- Caverns, 53. 268.
- Chaffer, 214.
- Chaldeans, 246.
- Cherethites, 55. 235.
- Chiun, 39.
- Cici, a plant so called, 11.
- City Remembrancer, 219.
- Comparison, implied, 182.
- Concordance, xiii.
- Conjectural criticism, xiv. xlii. xliii.
- Conjectural readings, Am. iii. 11, iv. 3, v. *7, viii. 4, 12, ix. 1; Hos. i. *9, v. 7, vii. *16, viii. 12, x. *5, 11, 14, xii. *4; Mic. i. *12; Nah. i. 12, iii. 16; Zeph. iii. 9; Hab. i. *12, iii. 7, *14; Zech. iv. *12.
- Corner-stone, 346.
- Chus, 54.
- Chusites, ib.
- Darkness, for calamity, 37, 181.
- attends earthquakes, 32.
- David, what meant by this in the prophets, 79.
- Divinations, by rods or staves, 86.
- Dower, anciently paid by the husband, 76.
- Drop, to drop a word, 48.
- Dust, grief shown by rolling in it, 157.
- Eagle, 160.
- Earthquake, 15. 32. 50.
- East wind, 12. 138.
- Ebn Awi, 156.
- Eder, 169.
- Edom, 17. 20. 270. 272.
- Egypt, its diseases, 31.
- its reverence for kings, 110.
- whether rain there, 381. 382.
- Ekron, 17.
- Encyclopedie, 32, 215.
- Ephraim, of the feminine gender, 89.
- used plurally, 348.
- Ethiopia, 54. 241.
- Family, for people, 24.
- Fasting, how practised in the East, 10.
- Feast, on a sacrifice, 29.
- Figs, early, 112.
- Fig-tree, 265.
- Forty days, a solemn period of time, 9.
- Foxes, 156.
- Frequentative substantive, 67.
- Future tense, has the force of the present, 3.
- frequentative, 25. 44.
- converted by the distant vau, 22.
- not always converted by vau, 7.
- Garments, torn in grief, 217.

Those marked * seem most worthy of attention.

- Gate, the place of judgment, 35.
 Gath, 41.
 Gaza, 16.
 Gibeah, 93.
 Gilgal, 29.
 God, great unto God for very great, 9.
 Grape, for wine, 76.
 Hadrach, 333.
 Hamath, 41. 45.
 Harvest, for time of destruction, or rather for time of mercy, 102.
 Hebraisms, xxxvii. xxxviii.
 Hebrew language, viii.
 Hieroglyphics, 44.
 Horn, the symbol of strength, 44.
 Horns of the altar, 27.
 Horses, not shod anciently, 44.
 Hosts, God of hosts, 27.
 Housetops, places of worship, 229.
 Jakale, 156.
 Jareb, 95. 127.
 Jezreel, 61. 62. 64. 74.
 Infinitive mood, Amos v. 11; Mal. ii. 13.
 Journey of one day, 9.
 Islands, 55. 236.
 Judah, feminine, Mal. ii. 11.
 Judge, chief magistrate, 20.
 Ivory, houses of, 27.
 Kir, 16. 55.
 Kiriath, 20.
 Kiss, bestowed on statues, 143.
 Lakes called seas, 202.
 Lamentation, women skilled in it, 36.
 ——— used for elegy, 32.
 Lebanon, its wine, 152.
 Leopard, 145.
 Libya, whence derived, 144.
 Light, for prosperity, 37.
 Lion, 24. 198.
 Locust, 31. 45. 93. 203. 204. 208. and through Joel.
 Lots cast for captives, 202.
 Malehom, 38.
 Manuscript, Ambrosian, xi.
 ——— Coptic, xviii.
 Manuscripts furnish variations in letters:
 Jon. iii. 2; Am. iv. 7, *13. v. 8, vi. 10, vii. 2, viii. 8, ix. 14; Hos. ii. 3, iv. 4. 6. *8. 18, v. 3, vi. 4, vii. 1, *6. viii. *10. ix. *2. 8. 12. x. *10. 14. 15. xiii. 8. 10. 13. 15, xiv. 1. 3; Mic. i. 5. 8, ii. *2, iv. 9. *11, v. 6. 8. 12, vi. 5. *9. *10. 14, vii. 5. *12; Nah. i. *2, ii. *3. *4, iii. *15; Joel i. 20, ii. *1. *12. *23; Zeph. i. 4, ii. 10, iii. *15; Hab. i. 9. *15, ii. *3. *6, iii. *13; Zeck. i. 3, ii. *6, iv. *9, v. *6, vii. 7. *10, viii. 16, ix. 16, x. *1. *12, xii. *7, xiv. *5. 10. *15. *18; Mal. ii. 5. 14. 15.
 ——— in words: Am. ii. 15, iii. 1, v. *6. 8. 16, vi. 1, vii. *7; Hos. ii. 16, iv. *18, ix. *6. 9, xii. *9, xiii. *4; Mic. i. *5, v. *6. *7. 12; Joel i. 8. 13, ii. *20; Zeph. i. 8, iii. 6; Hab. i. *8, ii. 2; Obad. *16; Hagg. ii. 2; Zeck. ii. 21, vi. 10, viii. *1. *3. *20, xii. *6. *13; Mal. i. 14, iii. *5, iv. 6. One MS. omits a clause Am. vi. 8. with ô. Ar.
 Memphis, 119.
 Metre, Hebrew, xv. xxxviii.
 Mizpah, 90.
 Moab, 19.
 Moloch, 38.
 Mood, the indicative form in Hebrew verbs has the force of the potential, 12. 349.
 Mountains, gods denominated from them, 121.
 Mowing, 45.
 Nail, 316.
 Naked, its extended signification, 156.
 ———, captives made so, 69. 201.
 Nile, eminently The river, 50.
 Nineveh, 1. 8. 13. 188. 189. 205. 206.
 No Ammon, 189. 201.
 Nominative absolute, 121.
 North, applied to Assyria and Babylon, 237.
 Nose-jewel, 70.
 Number, definite for indefinite, 97. 174.
 Omer, 76.
 Omission in the Hebrew text, 144.
 On, valley of, 16.
 Ophel, 169.
 Ostrich, 157.
 Parallelism, synonymous, xiv. xv. xvi. xvii.
 Paran, 259.
 Paronomasia, 29. 49. 158. 159. 211. 234.
 Participle, change from it to the preter tense, 21.
 Pelican, 237.
 Person, transition from the second to the third, Am. v. 12; Zeph. ii. 3.
 Philistine, meaning of the word, 55.
 Pits, prisons in the East, 313.
 Plural termination masculine, written contractedly, 45. 204. 210. 222.

The various lections marked * will serve to illustrate the great importance of the late Dr. Kennicott's collations.

- Plural termination, omitted wholly or partly, at the end of a line 121.
- Preposition, often omitted in Hebrew, 7. 28. 182. 262.
- Preter tense, its form has the force of the preterpluperfect, 11.
- Pronoun redundant, 23.
- repeated in the nominative case, after being used as an affix, 273.
- placed at the end of a sentence, 183.
- Prophets, why sent to the Hebrews, v.
- authors of the Hebrew Scriptures, v. vi.
- their writings of divine authority, vi.
- their writings useful, vii.
- the Twelve Minor, obscure, viii.
- their conduct sometimes morally wrong, 1. 11.
- Punctuation, a different one of the sentence, 30. 35. 107. 110. 112. 116. 118.
- Put, 202.
- Rain, 30. 98. 220.
- in Egypt, 381.
- Repentance, on God's part, 46. 148.
- Repetitions, Jon. ii. 3, l. 3; Ps. xlii. 7; Am. i. 2, l. 1. 2; Joel iii. 16. iv. 13; l. 4; Mic. i. 3. v. 13, l. 2, Mic. ii. 3. v. 13, l. 4; Joel iii. 18.
- Hos. iv. 10, l. 1. Mic. vi. 10. v. 3, l. 3. 4, vi. 10. v. 5, l. 1, vii. 10. vi. 4, l. 3. 4, xiii. 3. viii. 13, l. 3, ix. 9; Jer. xiv. 10. Mic. iii. 12; Jer. xxvi. 18. iv. 1. 2. 3; Isai. ii. 2. 3. 4. iv. 6, l. 2; Zeph. iii. 19.
- Nah. i. 15, l. 1. 2; Isai. lii. 7. ii. 10, l. 4; Joel ii. 6.
- Joel i. 15, l. 2. 3; Isai. xiii. 6.
- Zeph. ii. 15, l. 1. 2; Isai. xlvii. 8. iii. 4, l. 2; Ezek. xxii. 26.
- Hab. ii. 13, l. 2. 3; Jer. li. 58. ii. 14; Isai. xi. 9. iii. 19, l. 2. 3; Ps. xviii. 33.
- Obad. 1. Jer. xlix. 14. 2. 15. 3. 4. 16.
- Zech. i. 3, l. 3. 4; Mal. iii. 7. vii. 10, l. 3. 4, viii. 17. 11. l. 2; Neh. ix. 29.
- Ricinus, 11.
- Rods, divination by them, 86.
- Roofs, flat in the East, 25.
- Rooms, upper ones the chief, 54.
- Samaria, 26. 40.
- Saying, why omitted, 91.
- Sea, eastern and western, 219.
- Selah, 259.
- Sepharad, 272.
- Septuagint, proofs that its MSS. and editions should be collated, frequently occur.
- Serpents, some live in water, 53.
- Seventy years, from the destruction of the temple to its restoration, 276.
- captivity, 291.
- Shechem, 101.
- Shepherds used for Rulers, 204.
- Shields, coloured, 196.
- Shittim, 226.
- Sibylla, its derivation, 190.
- Similitude, particle of, omitted, 107.
- Sin, the Hebrew words denoting it, why used for the punishment of sin, 130.
- Songs, accompanied sacrifice, 38.
- Staff, divination by it, 86.
- Star, symbol of a deity, 39.
- Storehouses, subterraneous, 54.
- Suffetes, 20.
- Superlative, how expressed in Hebrew, 8.
- Sycamore, 48.
- Tabor, 86.
- Tarshish, 1.
- Temen, 18. 259.
- Teraphim, 77.
- Thrashing-wain 15.
- Translation, rules for a new one, xviii.— xlv.
- Trumpet, danger proclaimed by it, 212.
- Tyre, 17.
- Vargi, 200.
- Vau, not always conversive, 7.
- removed from the beginning of a sentence to join the verb, 131.
- its omission, 261.
- Verb, not applicable to all the substantives governed by it, 72. 73.
- the nominative case often to be supplied, 9.
- Viol, accompanied sacrifice, 38.
- Vineyards, scenes of joy, 37.
- Way, for worship, 52.
- Wine, grape used for it, 76.
- Winter-house, 27.
- Yoke, custom of raising it, 133. 134.
- Zanah, 158.

INDEX OF HEBREW WORDS AND PHRASES

TREATED OF IN THE NOTES.

- אגרה STOREHOUSE, 54.
 ארני Lord, often a gloss on Jehovah, 36.
 ארר magnificence, 356.
 אחד one, often understood before a verb active, 9.
 אחרון hinder. Why the Mediterranean is called the hinder sea, 219.
 אי whether an island, 54. 55. 236.
 איפה where now, 146.
 איש some one, often understood before a verb active, 9.
 אל sometimes transitive, 80.
 אלה green-oak, 86.
 אלון oak, why, 86.
 אלהים unto God, for great, 8.
 אלפים heads of thousands, 172.
 אם if, sometimes omitted, 10.
 אם mother city, 83.
 אמונה faithfulness, 252.
 אני repeated in the nominative after affix, 321.
 אש with ב prefixed, 73.
 אשם the punishment of guilt, 130.
 את before the nominative case, 321.
 sign of the genitive case, 263.
 ב used after transitive verbs, 21.
 Arabism, as בעורב thine helper, 146.
 בהמה beast, its etymology, 9.
 בליעל Belial, explained, 192.
 בלם to gather, sc. sycamore fruit, 48.
 בקק to cast, to empty, 124.
 ברכה a blessing, or abundance, 217.
 בתולה a virgin, a bride. Its etymology, 209.
 נאיה its import, 92.
 נוב locust, 45.
 ניל to exult, 117.
 נזם locust, 31. 208.
 נללים idols, why so called, 94.
 נשם great rain, 98.
 נרבה or some feminine substantive, understood, 46. 94. 207.
 נרמה to destroy, 131.
 נדק to pierce, used of mortal wounds, 365.
 ה emphatic, whether used before a word which has a pronoun suffixed, 167. 197.
 הוא he, at the end of a sentence, 183.
 היא she, at the end of a sentence, 197.
 הטיב doing well, beneficiendo, explained 11. to do a thing earnestly, effectually, 183.
 היכל palace, its etymology, 197.
 הלך with another verb, to go on increasing or decreasing, 3.
 הנה of their own accord, 114.
 הם irregularly formed to express silence, 44.
 הרבות very much, multiplicando, 31.
 הרד to hasten, 137.
 ו See Vau.
 ונה followed by an infinitive, 60.
 הנ a sacrifice, 37.
 חול to fear greatly, 336.
 חטאה the punishment of sin, 130.
 חמדה desire, 278.
 חצב followed by ב 99.
 חרוץ fine gold, 335.
 חריש still, applied to wind. Another sense, 12.
 חרץ to cut, to cut off, 335.
 י paragoric, 129. 268.
 יאר the river Nile, 50.
 ינע what is acquired by labour, 140.
 יד border, 161.
 ירה written contractedly " 9. 56. 298.
 יכל to endure, with an accusative case, 112.
 ילק locust, 208.
 ימים years, 29.
 יסף to add, how the verb is used after it, 64. Hos. i. 6.
 יצא transitively, to send forth, 33.
 to be born, 173.
 יורה springing rain, 97.
 ירב See Jareb.
 ישועה salvation, 7.
 ישראל written, אל יעל 34.

- כ the particle of similitude often omitted
 100. its force in connexion, 96.
 כימה the Hyades, 34.
 כימר a sacrificer, 116.
 כיסה to cover, used with ל 256
 כיסל Arcturus, 34.
 ל its sense when prefixed to the infinitive mood, 44.
 transitive, 191. 232.
 for בין between, 218.
 לב with prefix ב and ל 97.
 לחם flesh, 232.
 flesh-sacrifices, ibid.
 לקח to take away, 86.
 לקש the second growth of corn mowed, 45.
 מלקוש crop rain, 97.
 מי used of things, 2.
 מיבט an object looked on with confidence in it, 365.
 מרבק a stall, its true sense, 42.
 מוצא to suffice, 139.
 מושא a prophecy, 189.
 מושבר the place of breaking forth, its meaning, 147.
 מושל may be rendered to taunt, not to rule, 218; a proverb, 161.
 משפט judgment, its latitude, 234.
 מורב to utter, to make to speak, 344.
 מרש a lie, a failure, 103.
 מוס nose-jewel, 70.
 מוטל to weigh, 231.
 מוטף to drop, in the sense of prophesying, 48.
 מטר to reserve, sc. anger; or, to observe, sc. with anger, 191.
 מנח to snuff at, to blow upon, reject, 275.
 מנש soul, for self, 12.
 to refresh, 119.
 נקר why shepherd, 14.
 נר does not mean for ever, 33.
 עון the punishment of iniquity, 130.
 עורה a solemn assembly, why so called, 37.
 על together with, Hos. x. 14, 130.
 על כן its force, 86.
 עלל and its derivatives explained, 91.
 עמים used of God's people, 354.
 עמית near, its sense, 371.
 ענה what its import, 92.
 עסיס sweet wine, 58.
 עוב its construction, 85.
 עזב why an idol, 84.
 פעל explained, 103.
 פרר its signification, 87.
 פלו a village, why, 264.
 פרח to shoot, 265.
 פרט to sing, why, 42.
 צבא host, 27.
 צא or צאה dung, perhaps an idol, 94.
 צדקה abundance, 220.
 צלח to rush, how used, 34.
 צלע lame, 169.
 צנע to be humble, 179.
 צרח to cry out, 232.
 קאם to rise, for קום, why so written, 21.
 קבר to bury, 215.
 קדם why the east, 219.
 קדיש why to prepare, 165.
 קינה an elegy, 33.
 קרן a ray, 259.
 רבק see מרבק a stall, 42.
 רחם to cherish with tenderness, 63.
 רפת why a stall, 265.
 ש for ס, 123.
 שאף to bruise, for שוף, why so written, 21.
 שוא vanity, idols, 94.
 שחל for שחר, a black lion, 96.
 שחקים why clouds, 191.
 שחר the dusk, 322.
 שטר wages, 355.
 שם then, its peculiar signification, 100.
 תחת place, 23.
 with כ, from under the dominion, 86.
 תירש choice wine, 69.
 תנים Jakales, 156.
 תנתי serpents, 385.
 תרפים Teraphim, 77.

